Fullbacks John LaCava and Mark Birmett performed brilliantly in their final appearances as Scots. Goalkeeper Eric Deziel had another fine day, thwarting the scoring attempts that Tech was able to launch.

Fernando capped off a fine day and a fine season when he took a crossing pass from brother Eddie, faked the Tech goalkeeper out of position, and lofted the ball into the net. The visitors notched their only score with twenty-six seconds left, on what many thought was an offsides pass missed by the officials.

Fernando's 11 goals leaves him ranked among the top scorers in the ODAC. The Scots finished with a record of 3-8.

Ladies Fight Well

The Lady Scots Volleyball team traveled to Milligan, Tenn. this past weekend to play in the Milligan Invitational tournament. The Lady Scots first match was against Concord College. They won the first game 16-14. Concord won the second game 6-15, but the Lady Scots came back to win a tough third game 17-15.

The next match was against North Georgia. The Ladies won the match by scores of 15-7 and 15-7.

Their last match on Friday was against Mars Hill. The Lady Scots lost the first game 11-15, but came back to win the second and third games by scores of 15-3 and 15-6.

The Lady Scots didn't get off to a very good start Saturday morning. They lost their first match to Bryan College by scores of 15-7 and 15-1.

The Lady Scots faced Milligan in their next match. They lost the first game 3-15, but came back to win the match by scores of 15-11 and 15-10.

Their last match of the day was against West Georgia. The Lady Scots lost both games by scores of 12-15 and 8-15. They had a hard time blocking the strong hitters of W. Georgia. The Lady Scots record is now 25-10.

MC Soccer Club Ties Up UT

By Mary Hughes

The Women's Soccer Club shocked UT Women's Soccer Team with a 1-1 finale last Wednesday. Beth Neil scored in the second half, slipping past UT's tight defense.

MC played passively during the first quarter, but came alive after UT scored. The game remained tied even though both teams attempted several shots. The game went into double overtime, finally ending because of darkness. MC's Women's Club felt particularly enthusiastic about this game after previously losing to UT 7-2. UT is Maryville's most aggressive opponent, so the tie score shows much MC improvement.

343 Sanderson Street Alcoa, TN 37701 frame up
Phone 983-3758
We offer custom framing
Do-it-yourself framing
(15 percent discount)

Get in on the latest campus craze!

Student Day at Pizza Hut®

What's better than the Beach Boys, button down shirts, or ice cold beer? It's Wednesday at Pizza Hut®! Because every Wednesday is Student Day at the Midland Center Pizza Hut® restaurant. And when you buy any size pizza you can get as many of your favorite toppings as you want, free. You pay only for the cost of a cheese pizza.

So get a taste of the latest fad on campus. And get more pizza for less bucks. Because Wednesday is Student Day at the Midland Center Pizza Hut® restaurant.

Pizza Hut®

The Highland Echo

Vol. 71 No.8 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, November 8, 1981

The Pearsons Project

Ideal In Practice

By Bill Warren, Jr.

In the spring of the 1980-81 school year, a plan was proposed to change Pearsons into an all female dormitory and make Lloyd coed. The "Pearsons Project" was formed as a reaction to this and the apathy of dorm life on campus.

Pearsons' constitution says that the Pearsons Hall Community's aim is to be "...an exemplary body of students to the rest of the campus conveying an attitude of 'pride in where we live.'"

The dorm officers include President Debbie Hall, Vice-President Brad Goar, Treasurer George Ralston, an elected judicial board, and George Cassutto as representative to the social committee.

President Debbie Hall says "The idea functioning within Pearsons is that the dorm should not be satisfied with being 'stable,' but that a positive atmosphere be created above and beyond that stability which will be conducive to satisfy the multiple needs of its residents."

The success of the Pearsons Project largely depends on the test of time. Currently, the plan is on its formative stages. Hall says, "Right now, it's too new to get any kind of critique other than a comparison with what it was last year—I don't think that's fair publicity of the project for only time will be able to create the perspective needed."

One aspect of the Pearsons Project was to allow room personalization. Aside from general decorating, many residents have built lofts and plan to paint their rooms. Also, Pearsons has helped sponsor both the Rocktoberfest and the Shadow Party.

So what is the update on Pearsons? Thus far, residents are moving in a positive direction striving to establish the full amount of goals presented in their project, and dedication plus diligent work is being displayed and applied.

Parking Violations Accelerate

By Jeff Hayes

On November 4, the Traffic Committee finalized an increase in traffic fines.

MC regards a student's possesion of a motor vehicle as a privilege, no a student's right. To ensure that this privilege continues,. a student must obey the traffic regulations set down by the school. According to George Ralston, the student chairman of the Traffic Committee, "The only people who will be hurt by the new fines will be those who commit offenses."

Prior to this increase, the College lost money on each ticket it gave a student. It previously cost the college $3 for every $1 fine. The ticketing officer, the business office, and the Student Affairs office must be paid for processing the ticket.

The fine increase is an attempt to thwart increasing tuition cost. Each student that paid tuition before this increase paid for the traffic offenses of that minority of students that committed the offenses.

The basic changes in the regulations are in the amounts of the fines. Parking violations are now $5 for the first offense, $10 for the second, $15 for the third, and $20 for the fourth, as compared to $1 for the first, $2 for the second and third, and $10 for the fourth before the fine increases.

While the first moving violation previously cost $5, it now costs $15. The second moving violation re-

cont. on page 4.

What's Going On

Thursday, November 12
8:15 WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? In the theater.

Friday, November 13
8:00 Bonfire and Pep Rally between gym and football field.
8:15 WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? In the theater.
9:30 Make your own PIZZA in lounge and kitchen on second floor of Pearsons.

Saturday, November 14
1:30 Football game against West Georgia—last home game.
8:15 WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? In the theater.
9:00-1:00 Orange and Garnet dance in Alumni Gym.

Sunday, November 15
3:00 MESSIAH Performance in the Chapel.
7:00 Vespers in the little Chapel.

Wednesday, November 18
9:20 CIV with Jeff Christian of Oak Ridge National Laboratories speaking on Energy research and national goals.
10:00-11:00 Study Break in Dorm Lobby.

WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY?

By George Cassutto .

I have been graciously asked to offer my opinions on the currently running MC Playhouse fall production WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? so here goes...

Director Don Thomas has chosen a script that explores the issues of suicide, but not just any kind of suicide. The serious subject of rational suicide has been tackled by playwright Brian Clark, who uses powerful dialogue, wit and humor, and enlightening insights to show how rational suicide can be beneficial and humane. The play delves into the emotions and feelings of the severly disabled, and it also looks into the reactions of family members, friends, and hospital personnel. Clark has made important statements about the legal, medical, and interpersonal problems involved with physical disabilities and benevolent suicide.

I dropped in on the opening night performance (which as theater lore goes, is usually not the best night of the run). It will be interesting to watch this talented cast top themselves. All the elements were there for a memorable night of theater.

Kathy Long has been assigned the difficult role of Claire Harrison the quadraplegic car accident victim who is paralyzed from the neck down. Claire's intelligence is her worst enemy as she fights to be permitted to die with dignity and respect. Even though Miss Long does all her lines reclined in a hospital bed, she handles them all well.(she has little "blocking" to worry about.) Miss Long excelled in the lead role with the vibrant emotion that is hers. The antagonist is played by Copeland's resident director Trevor Nelson. His character, Dr. Emerson, represents the orthodox surgeon determined to save life at all costs. Trevor's Maryville debut deserves praise, because he so clearly communicates the official, conformist view on the issue of suicide to escape the hospital bed. Trevor really brings Dr. Emerson to life by adding much to the play's dramatic tension. Angela Murphy's rendition of the completely detached, stone-hearted nurse is an excellent example of getting into a character and staying there. Nurse Anderson's emotionally divorced attitude can appear both humorous and serious. Tim Fitzgerald plays the concerned, sympathetic doctor with ample skill and firm voice projection. The junior nurse and the orderly, portrayed by Theresa Lawson and Tommy Brown repectively, are two roles that also deserve mention because they add comic relief just before you think you are going to cry. Needless to say, the other supporting roles also contibute to the play's potent statement by representing the varied aspects of the controversial, bioethical issue of suicide.

So there it is : my opinion. If you like good theatre, then go and see WHOSE LIFE IS IT ANYWAY? one may come away a little more educated, and also have enjoyed learning in the process.

Editorials

A Penny For Your Thoughts

"You think too much." "You think too hard." These are statements which flow freely between people, but what exactly do they mean? Is it possible to think too much or too hard? Are there detrimental consequences attached to these "excesses"? Most problems have two sides and so too does this one. The opposite of too much thinking is too little thinking. Not often does one hear "you don't think enough" or "you don't put enough effort into thinking", and yet, if engaged in, these practices lead to the same end result - a very narrow lifestyle.

The first of these can be compared to a closed door. In this instance, the person confronts every new situation with an old, already formed opinion. The door is closed to any other view, be this in the realm of religion, politics, morals, humor, songs, and finally life itself. In this option, the person knows beforehand what he or she feels and, thus does not give anything else a chance.

The other alternative can be described as an open door. The person who adopts this philosophy does not differentiate between opposing views; accepting anything he hears as truth. He follows whatever the popular trend may be regardless of the consequences.

Although these philosophies may seem to be far removed from each other, they are identical in one respect - neither requires much thinking. Accepting nothing and accepting everything leaves one with no choices to make. The person, if he were capable of realizing, which he is not, is then handicapped in many dealings with society.

Genuine living in today's world takes hard thinking and a lot of it. The strongest and most valuable decisions are those which have been debated from all angles, have withstood this test and can stand in the face of opposition. It is comparable to a door which stands ajar against a heavy wind. The wind threatens to either shut the door against all intruders or to fling the door open admitting all. The door which can hold its ground against this storm is indeed the strongest.

Everyday we are confronted with new experiences, crises, or choices. This week alone brought two opportunities to reflect and consider. Many students, faculty, and administration attended the CIV with Reagan's Director for Women's Affairs. The speaker talked for an hour, but did she say anything? Did she express original opinions or only those of Washington? The first playhouse production opened this week. Asked is the question of to whom life belongs.

Every part of the body has been given a function for keeping the person alive and facilitating his existence. The brain likewise has a function, and it should be used to the fullest extent.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photography Editor . . . . . Shelley Kingsbury

Layout Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Faculty Feature - A Fable For Our Time

By Sallie Schoen

Once upon a time there was a girl called Millicent, and there was a college called Emcee, and there was a place called youteekay.

Millicent had everything. She had brains, talent, good looks, ambition, energy, and a few extra pounds. Millicent had two teeny-weeny problems. She had difficulty making decisions. All her life other people told her what to do and when to do it. Her parents told her. Her teachers told her. She didn't have any friends to tell her, but if she had, her friends would have told her too. Millicent was also different. That's why she had no friends. She was often alone. No one wants to be around a person who isn't silly and immature and negative and insecure.

The college called Emcee had everything also. It must have had everything, because everyone said it did. All the college persons said the college called Emcee had everything, from the board-person to the president-person to the dean-person to the teacher-person, and even to the secretary-person. The college called Emcee had a thing called a PURPOSE, and this PURPOSE-thing also said the college had everything. The college was SO sure it had everything that whenever mention was made of a neighboring place called youteekay, all the college-persons at the college called Emcee were horrified. The Emcee college-persons would always say that they could do everything better than the place called youteekay.

Many people told Millicent that the college called Emcee was better than the place called youteekay. She believed these people and said that she would go to the college called Emcee because the college-persons told her it was perfect for her and had everthing. The Emcee college-persons wanted Millicent so badly that they gave her a lot of money called a scholarship. So Millicent brought all her differentness with her and came to the college called Emcee. She stayed one week, and then she left, vowing never to return. She left saying that she was going to the place called youteekay. SHE REALLY MADE A DECISION.

All the college-persons at the college called Emcee were puzzled. They though that a college that had everything and a girl who had everything shouldgo together to produce super-everything. They had depended on Millicent's being an Emcee student-person, and they tried to tell her what to do. The Emcee college-persons told the girl called Millicent that it was too late for her to go to the place called youteekay and that youteekay wouldn't admit her or give her any money. The place called youteekay was veryevil and perverse. It admitted her and gave her money. The Emcee college-persons told Millicent that she shouldn't go to the place called youteekay because she would have too much competition. They didn't know that because of Millicent's differentness, competition was exactly what she wanted. The place called youteekay had lots of competition. The teacher-persons at the college called Emcee told Millicent that they had lots of exciting courses for Millicent to take, but she tested out of many of them. The place called youteekay said they had lots of exciting courses for Millicent to take, and they really did. The Emcee college-persons told the girl called Millicent that there were evil people at the place called youteekay and that she would fall into bad company. Millicent liked the people at youteekay! The Emcee college-persons said to Millicent that their courses were more challenging than the courses at youteekay and that she would get more personal attention at the college called Emcee. Millicent was perverse and different. She didn't want or need personal attention, and she thought the courses at the college called Emcee were not very challenging.

So Millicent went to youteekay and the Emcee-persons were sad. Some of them were even angry. How could the girl called Millicent desert the place called emcee for the college called Youteekay?

Moral: Never belittle your neighbor to hide your own shortcomings.

CIV Tampers With Consumers

By Evelyn Sowell

This past week's CIV brought President Reagan's Director for Women's Affairs, Mary Quint, to Maryville College. Her speech included such topics as economics, ERA, inflation, the environment, her son's service to the country, and James Watt's thriftiness. What Mrs. Quint said, or did not say, caused some controversy and much program discussion.

"I thought Mrs. Quinn didn't know enough for P.R. work, and she didn't gear her speech towards a college audience. She also didn't speak much on women as was expected. However, she did get the adrenalin going, so it was a good CIV," said Debbie Hall.

Jimm Gritman called Mrs. Quinn "a Reagan pawn." He also felt her views were a definite minority of most people, including women.

"I GUESS THIS MEANS IT'S FINE FOR A WOMAN TO INTERPRET THE CONSTITUTION, JUST SO SHE'S NOT INCLUDED IN IT...."

Jina Radozgicki felt that "her attitude toward women was very low. I didn't feel she had answers for the questions posed by the audience. When I left the CIV I wasn't in the very best of moods."

"I enjoyed it and agreed with her on some points. However, I felt a lot of tension on the audience and I didn't feel it was her fault," said Shelley Kingsbury.

Dr. Johnston was surprised, "exactly what I expected from a politician. I didn't redo my office when I came to Maryville, why can't I be Secretary of State? Quinn was nothing but a Reagan cheerleader."

"I was personally angered by her stupidity. However, the fact that she was an idiot made students begin wondering about what kind of people are running our country," fired Dr. J. Pickens.

cont. on page 4.

HEY... There's a new place in town... Eager to serve you

CORNERSTONE SQUARE

home style LAUNDRY

Hours:
Mon-Sat.
7:00 am - 9:00 pm
Sun.
1:00 pm- 7:00 pm

Famous MAYTAG Performance & Dependability

SELF–SERVICE OR DROP IT OFF AND WE'LL DO IT FOR YOU

Conveniently located in Cornerstone Square Shopping Center - Next to Mr. Gatti's Pizza. West Broadway at the By-Pass.

INTODUCTORY OFFER

20% discount to all full-time students

(Bring this ad and I.D. card)

Offer good Nov. 1 - Nov. 30.

PHONE 977-0583
977-0582

Geno's PIZZA

409 CUSICK ST. MARYVILLE, TN. 37801

MARYVILLE COLLEGE NIGHT AT GENO'S!

Every Monday and Wednesday

$2.50 off any large pizza

Just $2.50 for a pitcher of beer.

$1.50 off any medium pizza

(not coupons)

Depauw Calls Maryville's Bluff

By Steve Arnold

Brrrrrrring, Brrrrrrring!! Good Morning. Depauw sports editor speaking.
S.A.: Joe, Steve Arnold here. How ya doing?
J: Fine, Steve. Haven't heard from you in a while. What's on your mind?
S.A.:Not much. Just thought you could fill me in on the game Saturday. Must have been a hard fought game.
J: Sure thing. Let me tell you something. Maryville came to play ball. The score really didn't have much indication of how close it really was.
S.A.: You must be reflecting back to when with only five minutes left in the third period we only trailed by three points.
J: Correct. But really you should have been ahead. Maryville was in scoring position three times during the time they trailed by only three. They failed to score after getting first and goal at our five yard line. They also drove down to our 27 yard line right before the half, but a penalty stopped that opportunity. With those chances Maryville could have possibly been up 14-3 at the half, but trailed only 3-0.
S.A.:When did your field goal come?
J: Funny you should ask. Maryville won the coin toss and on their second play from scrimmage fumbled the ball and we recovered at your 18 yard line.
S.A.:Guess our defense stood strong then, didn't they?
J: Sure did. They held us to only a 36 yard field goal.
S.A.:What about the other scores?
J: Well our first touchdown came after what I think must have been a real turn around in the third period. Maryville was called for a roughing the kicker and we got the ball back at the 50 yard line. Five plays later Doyle hit All American candidate Perkins for a 32 yard TD pass and we went up 10-0 with 5:06 left in the third period. Now before that though Maryville had the ball on our 27 after we fumbled, and Anagnostis recovered but again they couldn't score and were backed up with a holding penalty.
S.A.:Did Maryville come close again after that?
J: Sure did. Late in the game with the score 19-0 they moved to the 9 yard line but no score resulted.
S.A.:And your scoring in the fourth period?
J: We tackled Moyer in the end zone for a safety, had a 41 yard run, and a 19 yard interception return to close out the scoring at 26-0. Let me tell you, they gave us a scare
S.A.:They sure played a pretty good game. Coach Ogden stated afterward that "I'm very proud of what they did. The only thing I regret is the score." Also "the defense was out on the field a little longer than we wanted but also they contained Depauw's running game very well."
J: You also had some great defensive performances.
S.A.:Coach Ogden did state that Alex Albert had a great game. John Cockfield had 16 hits, Belfi had 14, Adair had 11, and Carbonneau had 11.
J: I do believe though that the offense is a lot better than the stats showed. only 7 out of 28 passes and only a net total of 168 yards with 4 interceptions.
S.A.:Well everyone may have a bad day at one time or another.
J: Well, what's next?
S.A.:Well, we end our season next Saturday here at home against West Georgia at 1:30.
J: What about the ODAC title?
S.A.:Still in the running. They'll know in about a week.
J: Well, I wish them luck.
S.A.:Thanks. I'm sure the team appreciates it. Guess I better go now. Coach Thompson is paying for this call, and I don't want to break him up, his wife would kill him.
J: Sure thing. Take care and keep in touch.
S.A.:Sure thing. Talk to you later.

V-ball season winds down

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots Volleyball team played their final home match of the regular season this past Saturday. The Lady Scots played a Division II opponent, Austin-Peay University. The Lady Scots came out strong and defeated Austin-Peay 15-2 in the first game of the match. Austin-Peay fought back in the second gam game to defeat the Lady Scots by a score of 10-15. In the third and final game of the match, Austin-Peay defeated the Lady Scots by a score of 6-15.

The Lady Scots were also scheduled to play Mars Hill on Saturday. Mars Hill did not show up due to other obligations. This will be recorded as a forfeit making the Lady Scots' record 26-11.

On Tuesday, the Lady Scots will travel to Murfreesboro to play MTSU. This will be the last regular season match for the Lady Scots. Good Luck Ladies!!

Parking Violations continued from Page 1

mains at $25.

Driving on the lawn will still cost you $25, but now you will also have to pay for the damage done to the campus.

Non-registration now costs $15, an increase of $10, with the $25 charge for not registering the vehicle after the first offense remaining from the previous regulations.

Perhaps the most significant change is in the ways you can lose your privilege of operating a vehicle on campus.

You now forfeit your operating privilege for the remainder of the academic year by having four parking violations. The fourth violation is an automatic appeal to the Traffic Committee, which may either sustain the penalty or reduce it.

Failure to settle tickets satisfactorily within forty-five days from the date of the ticket will forfeit the privilege of operating your vehicle.

The second moving violation could forfeit your privilege, depending on the severity of the offense. This too, is an automatic appeal to the Traffic Committee.

Violation tickets may be appealed in writing to the Traffic Committee within three days of the violation. After that time limit you are unable to appeal.

These increases may seem severe. I would, however, like to re-emphasize that now the only people paying for the offenses will be the offenders, not each student paying in the form of increased tuition costs.

CIV continued from Page 3

"She was a typical politician, but she was a good speaker and she knew what she was talking about," explained Lisa Vandivort.

Dr. Blair thought Mary Quinn under-estimated the Maryville College audience. "Was not one of the most memorable CIV's."

Mr. Gatti's
The Best Pizza In Town!
Honest.
Visit Casablanca with Humphrey Bogart
Gatti's plays it again
Saturday, Nov. 14 - - 10 pm on the Wide Screen
1616 West Broadway at the Maryville By-Pass

The Highland Echo

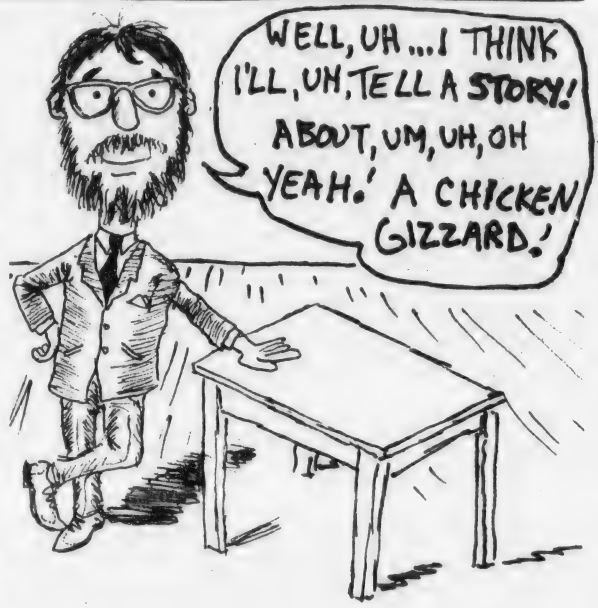
Vol. 67 No. 10 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, January 14, 1982

Poet, Storyteller Returns

By Jeff Hayes

On January 20th MC will host for CIV the poet and storyteller James Ashbrook Perkins, known for such sketches as "Chicken Gizzards", "Well boys, the Colonel's Dead" and "The Turkish Assassin in the Mirror". Dr. Perkins currently teaches at Westminister College in New Wilmington, Pennsylvania as a professor of English. He is the fiction editor of the magazine "Quadrangel". In addition, Dr. Perkins runs an advertising and public relations firm named "Editorial Associates".

Dr. Perkins received his B.A. from Center College in 1963, his M.A. from Miami University in 1965, and his PH. D. from the University of Tennessee. He has taught at Miami University, Memphis State, University of Tennessee, All Saints Episcopal School, and Westminister College



Dr. Perkins has published four books: The Amish: 2 Perceptions, 1976; Billy-The Kid, Chicken Gizzards, and Other Tales, 1977; The Woodcarver, 1978; and The Amish: 2 Perceptions 2, 1982. His poems and short stories have been published in more than a hundred journals and magazines.

He has been active in all forms of media, from radio to television to cinema as well as newspapers and magazines.

Dr. perkins has received several honors. In 1971, he was awarded the Mississippi Arts Festival Senior Poetry award. He was chosen as a Canaras Fellow in Poetry in 1976 and '77, and was chosen as a National Endowment for Humanities Fellow in 1978 and '81.

While most people know Dr. Perkins only as a poet or a storyteller, his students at Westminister College know him as an able teacher in all areas of English and linguistics. He is a fine poet; yet he is equally able to write technical information, to expound on the intricacies of the short story, or to explain the market value of the various obscure for of writing, such as legal writing or instructional writing for those annoying packages labled "some assembly required".

On January 19th and 21st he will address Dr. Fowler's Advanced Composition class on some of these areas. Her class meets during D period in Anderson 304. Dr. Perkins is a delightful man with a whimsical charm that is sure to entertain and enlighten us during the CIV program on Jan. 20th. I'm sure it's one you will enjoy

Mid-Week Worship Begins

By Tom Hudson

The MC Worship Committee has instituted a new weekly worship service to be held each Wednesday from 10:30 a.m. to 11:05 a.m. in the Center for Campus Ministry.

Named Mid-Week Worship, the services will be informal and geared for the entirety of the campus community.

The services will be led by teams comprised of a faculty member, a staff member, and a student, who will join with worshippers in songs, scripture readings and prayer.

The first Mid-Week Worship is slated for Wednesday, January 13.

Schedules concerning later services will be distributed in the near future.

What's Going On

Thursday, January 14

7:30 Women's Basketball game against Milligan College - here

Jeffery Solow in Davis Lobby

Friday, January 15

Midnight rollerskating sponsored by Chi Beta

Outdoor Club ski trip

Saturday, January 16

1:00 Oliver in the theater

3:30 South Pacific in the theater

8:00 Games Night in the FAC lounge sponsored by David Dorm

Sunday, January 17

2:00 Yellow Submarine in the theater

7:00 Vespers in the little chapel

Tuesday, January 19

6:00 Ladies Basketball game

8:00 Men's Basketball game

9:30 Speakeasy in Davis Lounge

Wednesday, January 20

9:30 am CIV with James Ashbrook Perkins

10:30 am Mid-Week Worship in the Center for Campus Ministry

7:30 J-V Basketball game

Flicks Fight Winter

By Jenny Fitzell

Tired of those weekend afternoons slowly creeping by? Well, between January 16th and February 7th the tempo will quicken.

Music and dance will sweep you off your feet and take you to a tropical island. Or you may find yourself running from the magistrate's clutch down England's cobble-stone avenues.

A whirlwind of drama and poetry will carry you off to Renaissance England, Italy, or Denmark where you can charge into battle with Lawrence Olivia in Henry V or watch Richard Burton tame Elizabeth Taylor in Taming of the Shrew.

A cloud of dust will rise on the horizon. Put on your boots and get ready to ride with the Duke in his first and perhaps finest film, Stage Coach.

If all this isn't enough excitement, then hold on to a friend and encounter Dracula in the original, German, silent Dracula movie, Nosferautu or, if you dare, experience the horror of real side show freaks in the film Freaks.

All these and more adventures begin at the first Maryville College Winter Film Festival, presented by the Maryville College Playhouse and the Student Program Committee in the theater. Two projectors, rented from Advanced Audio Visual Company in Knoxville, will be hooked up to the theater's sound system and will assure theater quality pictures. The charge, $2.00 general admission and $1.00 for all MC students, staff, and faculty, will be used to purchase projectors for next year and to pay the ticketors. "Winter Term," said Tommy Brown, Student Chairman of the Student Program Committee, "is a testing period to see if it's feasible to run movies the entire year on weekends and perhaps even on weekdays." So come have an adventure.

EDITORIAL

Maryville ready for new year

I happened to be walking across campus at a most opportune moment the other day. My travels had taken me close to the front entrance, and it was there that I witnessed a rather unique event - the changing of the year at Maryville College. I approached the two figures, but kept out of sight, not wanting to disturb the ensuing business.

They had met going in opposite directions, and now stood facing each other, talking. One was an aged man with a rumpled kilt, skin wrinkled and nearly transparent, and a white flowing beard. His feeble body labored under the weight of the bagpipes cradled in his left arm. The other was as yet a child, almost lost amid the flailing drones and the folds of his skirt. The conversation was mainly one-sided and fatherly in tone. As children often do, however, the young Scot could not resist interjecting a few questions.

"This is not an easy job you've been assigned to, my son. You must be aware of all that is happening for they demand your every spare moment. You can never rest. You must be strong for it is your responsibility to hold promises, happiness, crises, controversies, and even sadness."

"I have to do all that?", the boy asked in amazement. "But I'm not even one day old!"

"You will grow up quickly. There is little time for the innocence of youth."

"What is a promise?"

"A promise is many things to many people, but you can always be assured that it will either be kept or broken."

"Did you have any promises?"

"Oh yes, and fortunately some were kept," the old man reflected.

"A track team was finally formed and a long-searched -for chaplain was installed

"Is a 'crisis' good or bad?"

"It is usually an event of great importance which elicits some type of emotion. For example, the ending of the hostage situation was celebrated with a banner hanging from Davis Dorm. A peanut butter shortage was hailed as a true catastrophe for those who survive only through its nourishment. And then some crises don't exist in reality at all. For awhile there, some thought that Uncle Sam wanted them, but it turned out to be a false alarm."

"I think I could handle that," he said with growing confidence.

"Ah, sometimes it is not so easy. I was lucky. Now take controversy. This was one of my most wearing tasks."

"What Happened?"

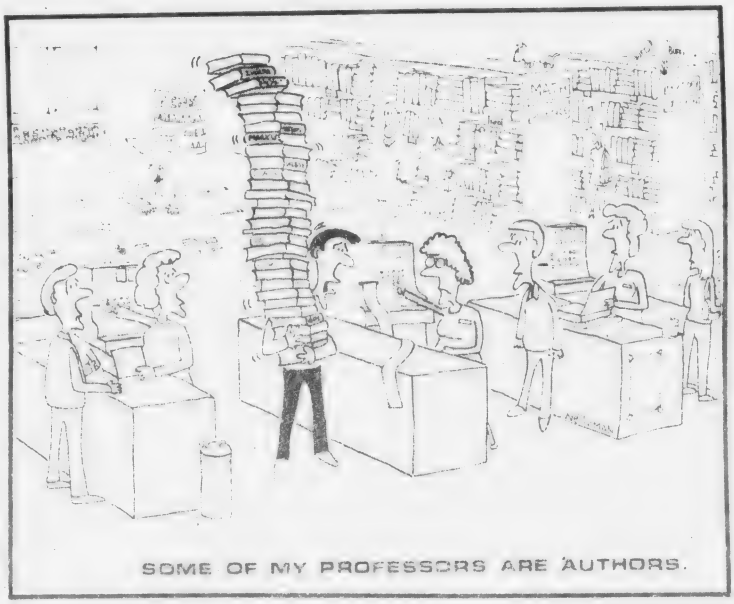
"Well, the administration and the students battled fiercely over a schedule change, and more recently a problem has arisen with the possibility of a highway cutting through your territory. This is something you may have to carry that is if people still care, and you'd better hope they do."

"Doesn't anything fun ever happen?"

"Of course. There are a lot of parties, and there are all kinds of athletics to watch. The men's basketball team even went to their first ODAC tournament, and the women's team came out fourth at the regional tournament. There's one weekend that I'd better warn you about. It's called May Madness. I even saw the administration sponsor a keg party."

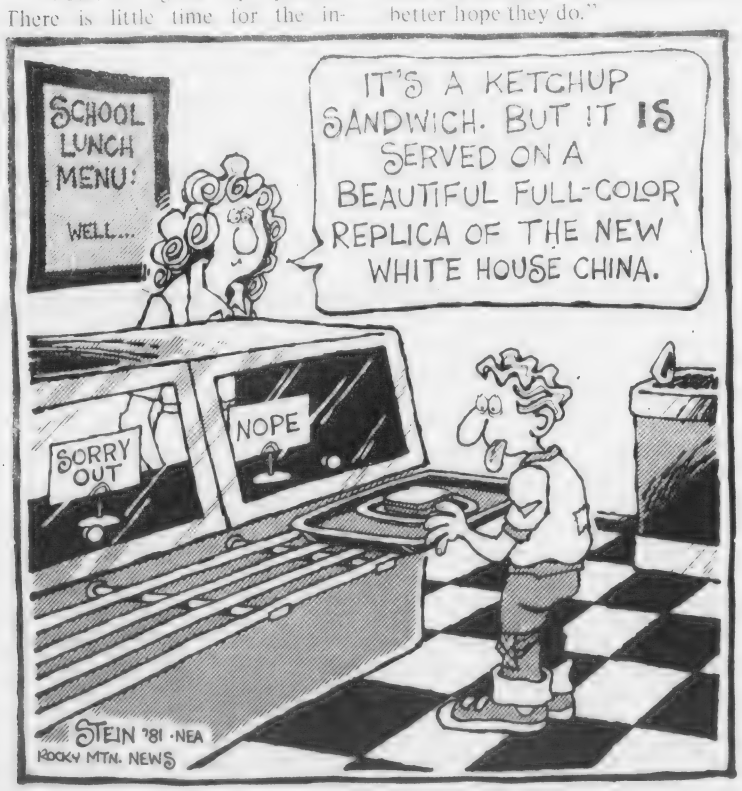
"How about sad times?"

"Yes, there are those too. We lost three friends, Brick Brahams, Lloyd Langston, and Ron Jeske."



"Do you always know what's going to happen?"

"No, and that's half the fun. If I'm not mistaken, I recall that the people at the All Sports Banquet were really in the dark even though it was well planned."



"Is there anything else I need to know?"

"No, things happen the way they do, All you can hope is that you accomplish everything you must, and that people remember you fondly when you're gone."

With this, the aged Scot turned and headed out the gate, while our new year continued on the path.

SOME OF MY PROFESSORS ARE AUTHORS.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photography Editor . . . . . Shelley Kingsbury

Artist . . . . . Walt Montgomery

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Exercise Your Right To Fitness

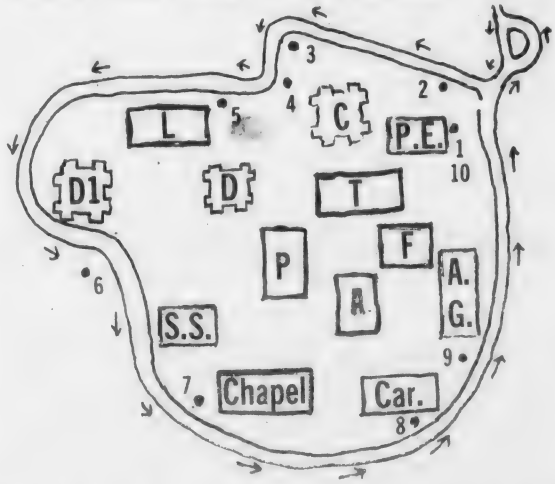
By Mary Hughes

In the beginning the Greeks created the Olympic obstacle course; then Jerry Ford, eliminating the day of rest, attacked America's fat by plunging into fitness. During interim Dr. Johnston's fitness trail class decided the Maryville College students and faculty should lodge their shapes somewhere between the emaculate Greeks and trim President Ford.

Twenty students spent interim planning and building the campus fitness course that begins and ends between the P.E. building and the football field. The trail spans two miles (almost three if the exerciser includes the extra loop to the house in the woods). MC student, Mike Rohan, designed a large map of the course located at the starting point that runners can examine before they venture into the woods. At every one-fourth mile is a marker, and each station is approximately one-fourth of a mile apart.

The interim students regulated guide markers for each station that explains how many exercises the beginner, intermediate and advanced persons should attempt. The markers display two numbers. The lesser number is the straight distance from the gym; the greater number includes the extra jog to the house in the woods. Ten stations among forest paths make up the trail. Arrows direct participants from station to station, but to avoid confusion one must remember to jog behind the FAC and behind Carnegie to the chin-up drill instead of taking the paved road in front.

Dr. Johnston and his students planned the loop after experiencing the Greenbelt fitness trail. They decided which exercises improved the cardiovascular system while toning body muscles. The students placed each drill farther apart than those at the Greenbelt to enhance stamina. They included the warm up(station one) and cool down (station ten) to ensure healthy muscles. After consulting trainer Mike Sabatelle and David Cooper about the effectiveness of the course, the class placed the equipment in scenic areas on campus. Tom Swager, who participated in the interim, said the group developed the trail because some students did not even know about the Greenbelt course. Dr. Johnston added that Health 101 needed an exercise outlet and that students like to know" what they're doing as far as progress."



Dr. Johnston ensures that the course supplies benefits for both untoned muscles and developed muscles. Experienced runers can jog the trail more than once while beginners should jog slowly. The trail runner should be able to carry on a conversation without being winded; Dr. Johnston recommends a slower pace for those who find breathing difficult.

Because of woods and hidden stations, women should not jog the trail alone or at night!

Students supplied about half the funds for the project; the other half came from money left over from a previous interim. They installed the equipment for an estimated $400 which saved more than $600 compared to the professional cost of installation. Dr. Johnston thanks Bill Slater for supplying the truck, posthole diggers and other needs.

Vandals tore some off the overhand walk and dirtied the guide markers during Christmas vacation. The map is fading but the class plans to replace these. The rope climb lacks a rope--Dr. Johnston and his students plan to make sure vandalism stops before hanging it.

Any suggestions or questions about the physical fitness course should see Dr. Johnson.

Students Traveled North South

By Traci Fraser

During Interim two classes left Maryville on trips that would take them as far north as New York City, and as far south as New Orleans. The "Cultural New York" interim spent a week taking in the sights of New York City, while the biking interim cycled down the Natchez Trace and on to New Orleans.

The "Cultural New York" students spent their first two week of interim at MC going to classes divided between art and music. Mr. Victor Schoen and Mr. Carroll Barger prepared them for their visit by having them do such things as research various points of interest in New York, listen to the opera "Madama Butterfly" which they were scheduled to see, and showing slides of art. The last week of interim they went to New York, staying in the Hotel Empire adjacent to Manhattan's Lincoln Center While there, students were on their own to decide where they would like to visit and how to get there. Some of their activities included touring various art museums and galleries, shopping, and seeing Broadway shows. The whole group had dinner one night in Chinatown, and on the last night saw 'Madama Butterfly' at the Metropolitan Opera House. One group of students even saw actors Dudley Moore and Mary-Tyler-Moore as they were filming a movie in the street.

The Biking interim, led by Dr. John Hardwig, left on Thanksgiving morning. From Knoxville to Nashville the trip was a bit uncomfortable because of bad weather and cold temperatures, but when they got to the Natchez Trace, the weather improved. They biked along the Trace, riding through places with names like Merriweather Lewis, Florence, Witch Dance, French Camp, and Houma. They saw Andrew Jackson's home "The Hermitage", took a tour through the swamp at Bayou Annie's and had real Cajun cooking. They saw the paddlewheeler "Missippippi Queen" leave the docks at Natchez and go up the Mississippi River. They put up with pits and potholes in road, but they finally reached New Orleans.

For both classes, Interim was an experience that will not soon be forgotten

CIV Visits Japan

By Allison Perry

Beginning Maryville College's winter CIV program was reknown Dr. Edward "Ted" Kidder, professor and chairman of the humanities division at the International Christian University in Tokyo, Japan.

Dr. Kidder is an expert in oriental art. While teaching and lecturing worldwide, he has published some twelve books and thirty-five articles on historical Japan. Some are on display in our library, including his work on Japanese Temples (a part of Time/Life series).

Topics such as: Archaeological sites, artifacts, customs and traditions of Japanese cultural progress throughout time were the gist of Dr. Kidder's slide presentation Wednesday morning.

After graduation from MC in 1943, Dr. Kidder was awarded with an honorary Doctorate of Literature (Litt.D.) from our alma mater in 1977. With no close runner-up, Dr. Kidder has more scholarly publications to his credit than any other graduate of Maryville College.

He is a member of the College Art Association, Association for Asian Studies, American Anthropological and Archaeological Associations, the Archaelogical and Anthropological Societies of Japan, the Tokyo Oriental Ceramics Society and the American Association of University Professors.

Our 1982 CIV program takes pride in having Dr. Kidder return to Maryville College, where he and his wife have earned degrees,

Geno's PIZZA
Buy 1 large pizza
get 4 salads $.59 each
with coupons, college ID
Good through Jan. 28th
Next to Family Fun Center

C-N Eagles defeat Scots

By Steve Arnold

If you happened to walk by the P.E. building Monday, you may have noticed the maintenance men on the roof strategically placing cinder blocks over the gym. Why would they be doing this, you may ask? No, it was not to hold the building down from being blown away in these cold winds. Carson Newman was coming to town. Yes, it was the crosstown Eagles against the Hometown Scots. This usually results in a roof raising, barn-burning ball game and tonight was no exception. Carson Newman, not winning for two years against the Scots pulled away at the end for a 71-84 victory. A victory one may argue they didn't deserve. CN loaded with talent could not pull far away from the Scots at all. With the game going nick and tuck through the first 14 minutes, including two always crowd pleasing slam dunks, CN eased ahead from a 19-17 lead to a 24-17 lead with five mintues left in the first half. If you may have happened to arrive at the game at the one minute mark left in the first half, you would not have been able to hear a sonic boom. Why? They had battled back to within one point and, on a steal, had a chance to lead at the half, but the shot failed and CN lead at the half by one, 30-29.

MC started the second half where they left off, as Baker tied the score at 30 with a free throw. The game, still not a pull away by either team, was tied again at 40 all with 14 min. remaining. CN then began taking the ball under and built up their biggest lead of 8 points, 48-40. Then the fireworks started No, I don't mean like a fourth of July party. What had been a good close physical game turned out to be more physical than the rule books allow. CN, who must have left their "class" back in Jefferson City, was handed two technical fouls and an ejection of one of their players for "misconduct". Let Mommy smack his little hand because that's a no-no.

Rimmer stepped to the line with a chance to put the Scots even closer but could only connect with one. He did add a field goal to pull within 5, 48-43. CN patiently pulled back out to a 10 point lead 53-43 with 12 minutes left in the game. But what do the Scots do? It's bang here and swish there, and at 9: 28 left Rimmer fires from 20 feet "bottom" 11 straight for the Scots and a 54-43 lead. CN comes right back though for a 63-56 lead only to find that the Scots cut it to 63-60. Carson Newman, then going to a stall, forces MC to foul. Unable to connect, but getting the ball back, CN found an open eagle under the goal for a 60-65 lead. MC, in a then "must hurryup" offense turned the ball over. CN scored three more to the Scots two for a 71-84 victory.

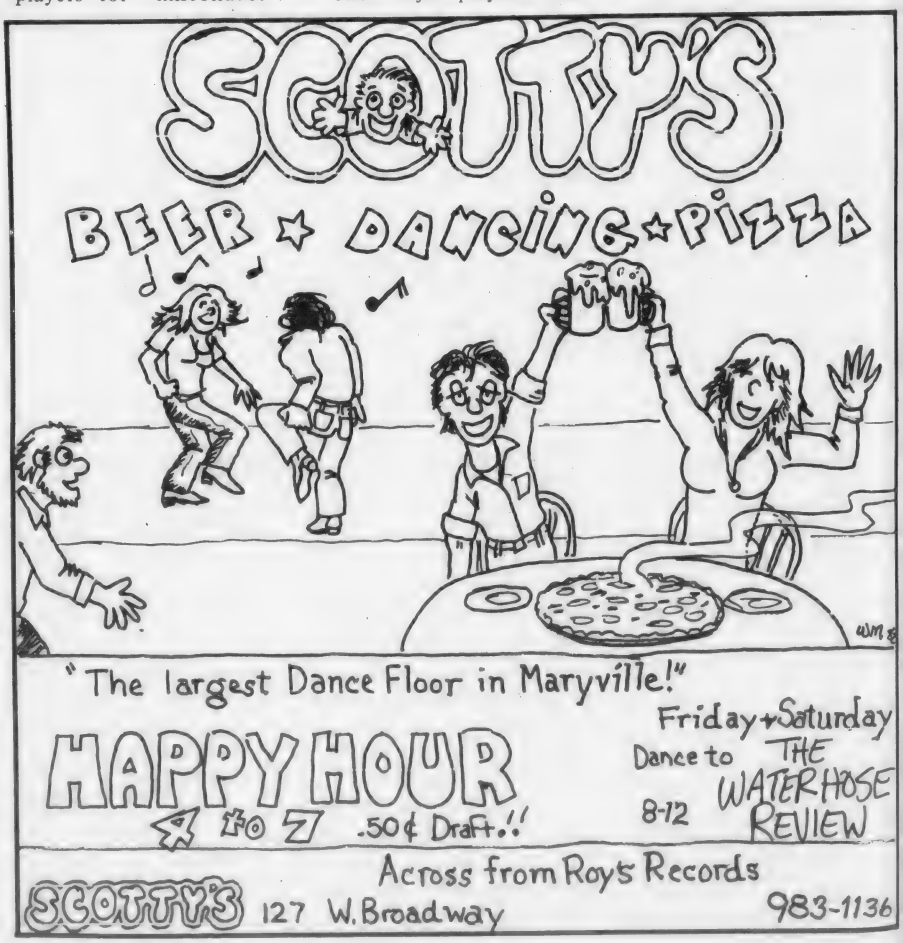
And how did Coach Lambert react to the game? "The boys played their hearts out and gave it their best shot. You couldn't have asked for very much more. We made it clear tonight that we have the talent. We proved that to the people and also that we have more class and more heart. And much more class makes a big difference."

"Was there a turning point in the game?" I asked Coach Lambert.

"I think the two breaks that CN got late hurt, because we were so emotionally and physically drained we may have run out of steam," stated Lambert. I would also like to comment on the fan support at the CN ballgame. It was the best it has been all season. Now just because they lost is no reason to stay away next time. The Scots are at home again the 19th against Centre.

Next week a recap of the start of the Scots season and a report on their 3-6 record and 2-1 in the ODAC.

Lady Scots triumph



By Robin Rimmer

Coach Sharon Brown and the Lady Scots basketball team returned from the holidays with a very positive and enthusiastic outlook for the reaminder of their 1981-82 season. The Lady Scots are a relatively young team. The team consists of one Senior, five Juniors, one Sophmore, and five Freshmen. Coach Brown feels that the adjustment and performance of the freshmen players has provided the team with more depth at each position.

After a week of very intense practice, the Lady Scots traveled to Dayton, Tennessee on Saturday to play Bryan College. Their hard work in practice was rewarded by a fine victory over Bryan College 86-41 The Lady Scots moved the ball well against Bryan, and the team shot 51.7% from the field. The lady Scots record is now 2-4.

The Lady Scots have a busy week ahead of them. On Wednesday the Lady Scots play Tennessee Wesleyn, a tough Division II opponent, here at Maryville. The Ladies will also play Milligan College here at Maryville on Thursday. On Saturday, they will Travel to Nashville to play Fisk. The Lady Scots are excited about the coming week and hope to improve their record with three victories. Good Luck Lady Scots!

Family Fun Center
5 tokens with coupon
Buy 5 tokens for $1.00 get 5 free
Latest video games
pool, pinball, and video games
Next to Geno's

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 11 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Friday, January 22, 1982

Perils And Virtues Of Snow

By Nancy Rojas

Frozen windshield wiperblades, Neyland Drive backed up with sliding cars bumper to bumper, and me stuck on an ice covered hill wondering what to do next. "Help," I yelped, because help was the only word I knew that indicated that I thought I was going to die.

What ever inspired me to drive to Knoxville on the day a snow storm started must have had a sense of humor, because a panicking Floridian, naive to the virtues and terrors of snow, was a funny sight to see.

Once I edged my way off of Neyland Drive and on to Alcoa Highway, part of the panic settled down. My blood pressure returned to a measurable level, and my brain started to grasp what had occurred.

"White stuff everywhere, " I commented to myself, "Ick!" When I finally arrived back at the college, I noticed others had realized too that the ground looked like it had just returned from a bleaching at Fantastic Sam's. Ignoring them I parked my car and because my knees still shook a little, I leaned against the door of the dorm a moment (My blood pressure was measurable, but it was by no means back to normal.) From where I stood, I have a view of the hill on the golf course. Sleds, dinner trays, and blue plastic saucers were speeding down the hill while screams of ecstasy and laughter echoed up the slope.

"Looks like fun," I thought to myself which startled me. Regaining my sanity, I entered the dorm.

The following evening I got to witness the same exhibition; sledders and people of all ages. Everyone looked like a little kid out there, laughing and playing and throwing snow about.

"How about a ride?" an enthusiastic voice called out

"Who me . . . ?" I didn't even have the chance to say "no". The next thing I knew, I was on a red piece of plastic sailing across a sea of white.

"AAH, Whee, - silly thoughts like that went through my mind.

The ride ended, and as I climbed the hill, I tried to wipe the smile off my face so people couldn't see the signs of enjoyment. I decided to keep my love of snow a secret.

Several days later, I started out for A hour Psychology (me and my secret). Most of the snow had melted, but, being a Floridian, I had forgotten about the ice; my high heeled shoes just didn't quite grasp a hold of the concrete hill leading to Sutton. There was only one thing I could do, "HELP", I yelped.

Taking Advantage of the Situation

With snow and ice practically calling out to everyone, who could blame Donna Whitley and Martin Paluga and many others for casting all books aside to go enjoy the ride.

ACC Action

A new major and two minors were approved by the All-College Council at the January 6 meeting.

Academic Dean Al Perkins introduced the proposed major in Pre-professional Physical Therapy and minors in Computer Science and International Studies. These proposals will become available in the 1982-83 academic year.

The major in Pre-professional Physical Therapy is created from courses that are presently available at Maryville College. Completion of this major's requirements will not be equivalent to certification. Post graduate work will be needed for certification.

The minors in Computer Science and International Studies are in areas where there are no majors offered. The International Studies minor combines both the Economic and Political Science disciplines.

In other action, the All-College Council voted to establish a Library Committe. The purpose of this committee is to advise the Library Director as to the problems and weaknesses within the library and its policies.

Check-Out Time Is Semester's End

By Traci Fraser

In case you haven't been to the library yet this term, there has been a change in the checkout policy. For the convenience of Maryville College students and library staff, books will be checked out for the entire term in which they are taken out, and will be due two days before the end of the term. No overdue notices will be sent - students will be responsible for returning the books on time. Overdue fines will be stiff $2 per day per book, and grades will be held until the materials are returned and the fines are paid.

Even though books may be kept for an entire term, students are encouraged to return them as soon as they are finished. The library also has the right to recall a book for someone else if a students has had it checked out for two weeks or longer. If materials that have been recalled are not returned promptly, the library may assess fines.

The new policy does not apply to Reserve materials and Periodicals. The checkout procedure and fine policy for them remains unchanged.

On the inside

Page 3

NCAAction - National Women's Volleyball Championship

Page 7

Echo exclusive - a conversation with Jeffery Solow

Page 8

Lady Scots basketball action

Scots basketball action

What's Going On

Friday, January 22
7:30 Lady Scots basketball game against Covenant College - here
8:15 Chamber music concert with Jeffery Solow, Robert Bonham and guests in the reception follows

Saturday, January 23
1:00 Film - Taming of The Shrew
3:30 Film - Hamlet

Sunday, January 24
2:00 Film - Henry VI
Super Bowl Sunday - wide screen TV in Lloyd Lobby
7:00 Vespers

Wednesday, January 27
11:10 Installation of Peter Vial
6:30 Lady Scots basketball game
8:00 Scots basketball game

EDITORIAL

All The World Is Not A Destruction Site

It has been said that the only things you can be sure of are death and taxes. These two things may not be too applicable for us at our age, so I will catagorize them under one synonym with which we are all familiar - vandalism. How you may ask, can vandalism be a synonym for death and taxes? Perhaps a definition for each term will clear up the confusion.

Death is the destruction or termination of life; life being seen as that which truely functions as a breathing, growing organism, or as that which exists as a result of imagination or manual creation.

Taxes are an excessive drain placed on a person's resources which may or may not be necessary.

Vandalism is the destruction of anything deemed valuable by anyone who may view or use the object in question, which causes a needless amount of money to come from innocent members of society in order to repair the damage.

They are synonymous, and, unfortunately, they carry the same assurance.

This most familiar occurance can be further qualified into two classifications according to the way in which they are performed. The first is malicious, intentional reuination of property. The second is unintentional. The fact that it is committed without meaning or even without awareness does not lessen its effects. Both of these described can be found almost at all times at Maryville College.

The new fitness course, instead of being able to serve its intended purpose, has become the victim of those who "exercise" by dismantling the stations along the trail. The cost of repairing these stations could be an endless expense until the vandals tire of this "fun" and move on to something else. And what could that "something else" be? The options are infinitely far-reaching, but there are always the all-time favorites. Graffiti could probably head the list as most popular. This year, as usual, the sidewalks have become unsightly canvases and even the Center for Campus Ministry was subjected to disrespectful abuse.

The other type of vandalism may seem unimportant or even humorous to those doing it, but it does result in damage - if not always physical then emotional.

Everyday we sit in the dining hall and view the painting which hang on the wall. Even though some may not consider them great art, someone did create them the school did buy them, and they deserve to be treated above the status of merely supports for the various sports banners. There are walls right next to the paintings that can do the job just as well. Revising an existing piece of work can also be considered in this manner. A picture of circles that once hung in Lloyd has suddenly become a crowd portrait.

I wonder how these people would feel if they walked into their rooms to flind black messages scrawled on the walls, their lofts in pieces on the floor, and anything they have made altered into a different state.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Artist . . . . . Walt Montgomery

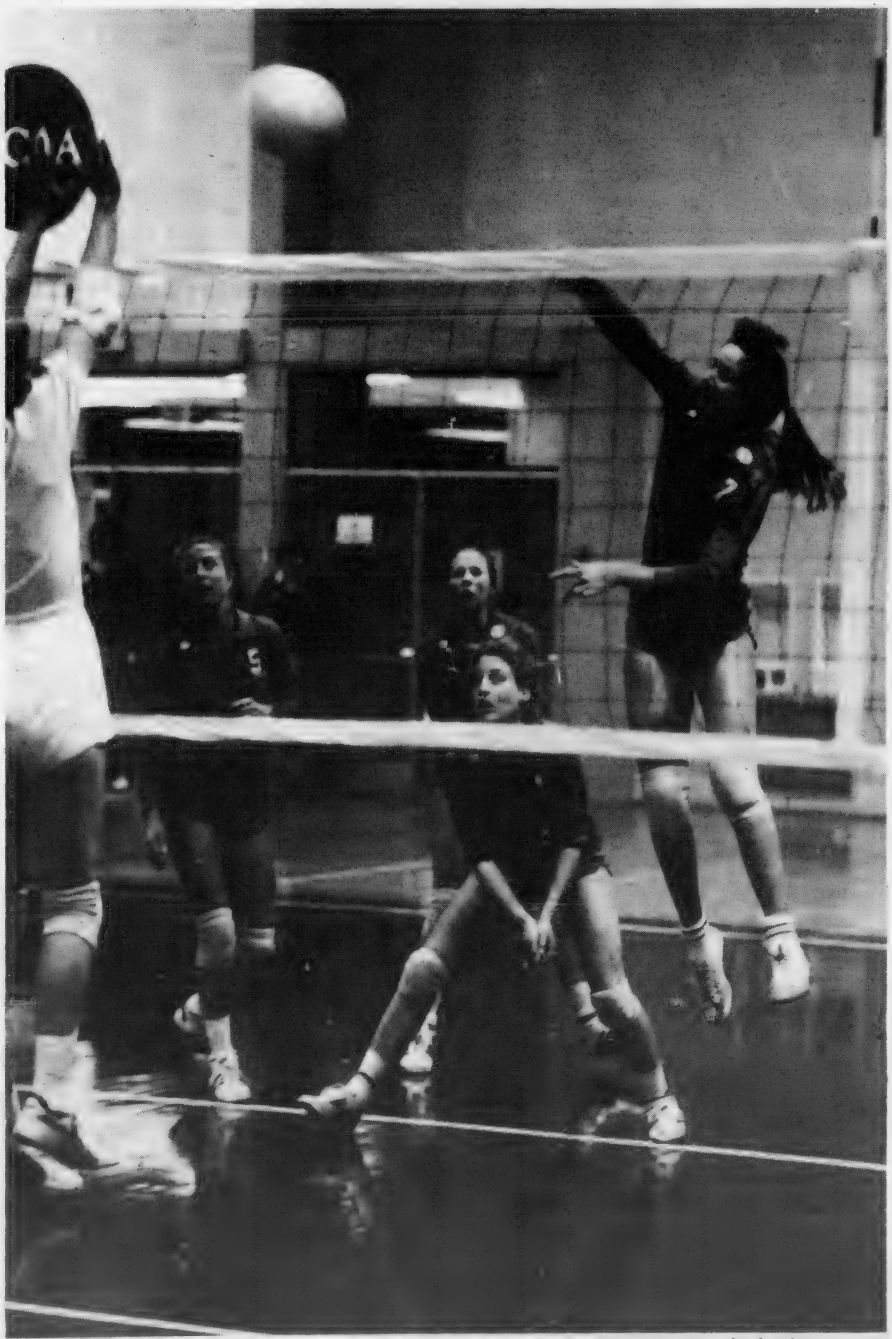
Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.



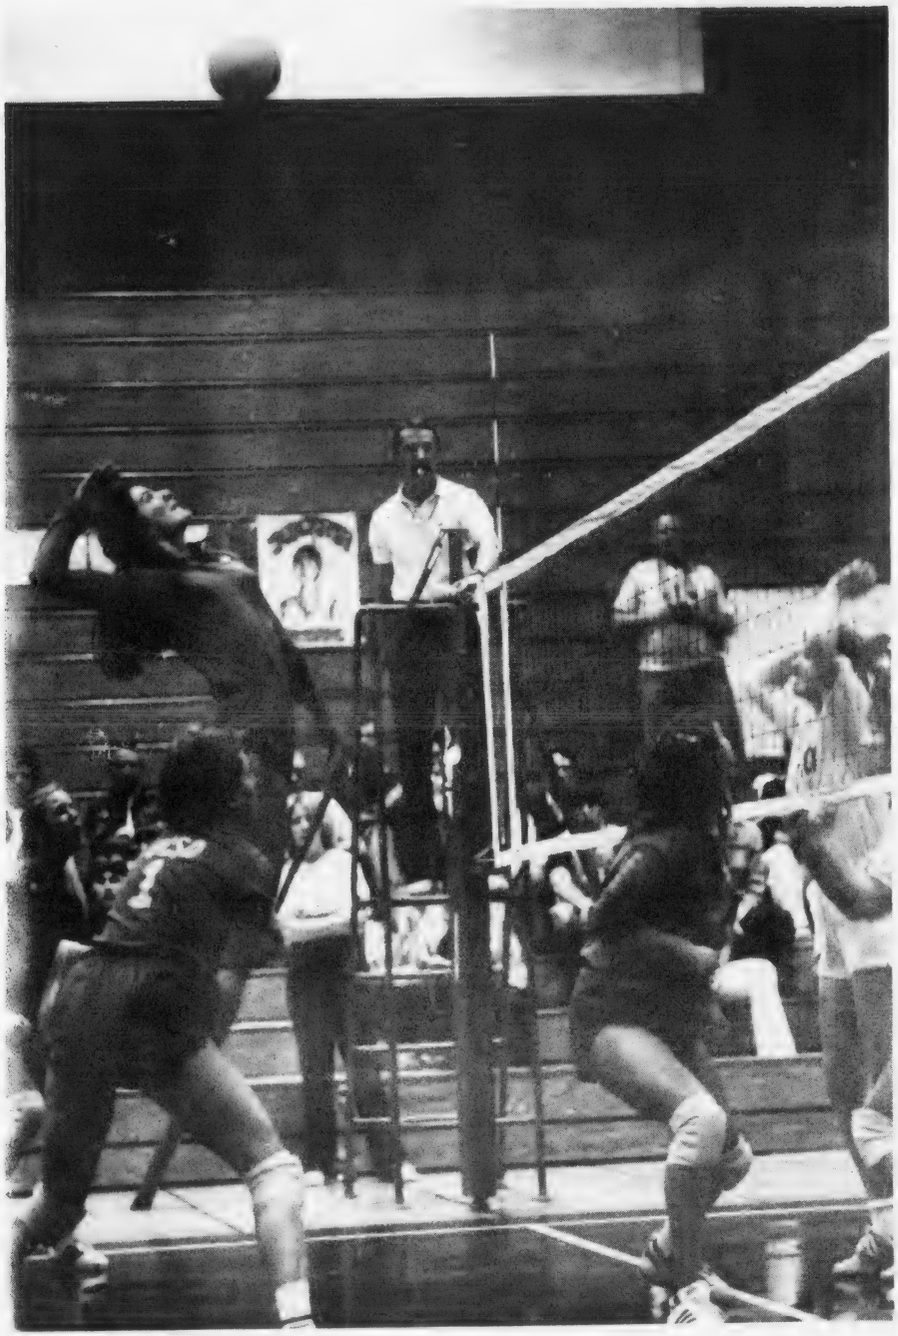
NCAAction! National Women's Volleyball Championship

By Steve Arnold

A baseball pitcher fires his fast ball at 100 mph. An Indy race driver steers his car at 200 mph. A tennis player may serve up to 100 mph, and Tammy Smit smacks the volleyball around 63 mph. Who is Tammy Smit, you may ask? Tammy is one of two All-American playing volleyball for the University of California - San Diego, the 1981 Division III National Champions. San Diego, along with Juniata College of Pennsylvania, Occidental College of California, and Benidictine College of Illinois, became the first final four teams to compete in the first ever, history-making tournament sponsored by the NCAA. Of the final four, only San Diego is affiliated with the NCAA and the AIAW.

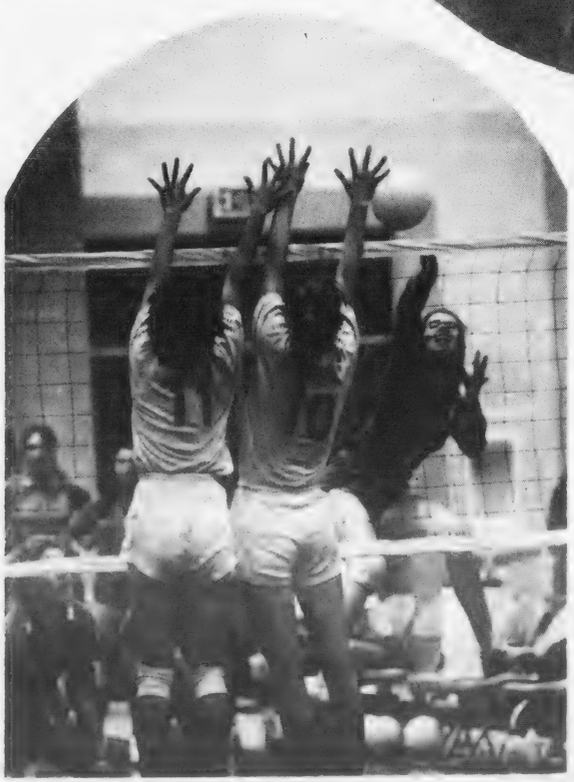
The tournament started off as the teams and guests were treated to a banquet at the airport Holiday Inn on December 17. It was there that the 1981 All-American team was announced by the program's Master of Ceremonies, Alan Williams, of WBIR-TV Knoxville. Of the final four teams, those named were Tammy Smit and teammate Louise "LuLu" Schwartz of UCSD, Jenny Townsend of Occidental, and Colleen Irelan of Juniata. These girls , along with their teammates and coaches, practiced and prepared for two days on the newly painted court at the cite of the history-making tournament, Maryville College. Maryville, a private institution with an enrollment of 600, provides plenty of action during the two day event in which the display of talent, determination, and excellence was very evident.

UCSD who obtained the number one ranking during the third week of seasonal play, never lost that ranking and will probably keep it for at least a year by winning the NCAA sponsored national championship, defeating Juniata College in the final 12-15, 15-5, 15-7, 15-17,15-1. The Tritons, coached by Doug Dannevik with assistant Mike Hipp, made it to the "final four" by defeating Smith College of Massachusetts in the regional tournament after receiving a bye in the first round. Upon arriving at Maryville, the "California girls" not only showed off their suntans but also their talent during their noticably "relaxed atmosphere" practices. "We run a very loose ship," Coach Dannevik stated. "Just because the girls don't chew nails during practice doesn't mean they don't know how to win."



Winning may have been or could be a habit as they entered the tournament with a record of 33-8 and without a senior on the team. For a team that did not even get through the regionals last year, I asked the coach what he thought the difference in one year made."In short, togetherness. These girls get along so well and stick together just great." "These girls" are made up of all freshmen and Sophmores with only two juniors.

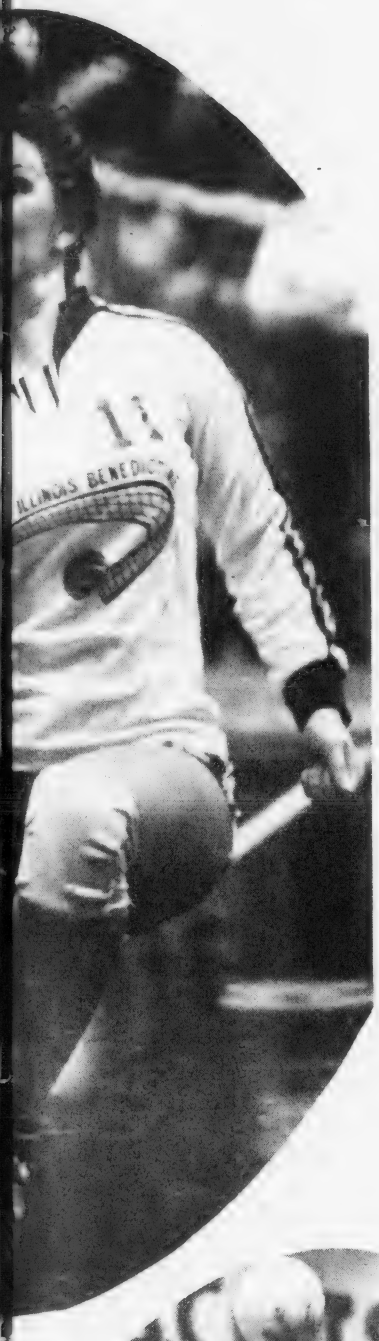
I asked Louise Schwartz, UCSD's other All-American about the tournaround. She also stated,"the girls have stuck together great.Maybe a little more than last year's team." I also talked to "Lu-Lu", a sophmore math major, about the pressure being more now or just getting into the final four. "Personally, I feel a little more pressure now since we are here, Because of what's on the line. Team-wise there does not seem to be so much, and we are staying very relaxed." These were also the words from Coach Dannevik. In talking to Tammy Smit, UCSD's other All-American for 1981, I asked her if being picked All-American would put more pressure on her performances. "I don't think it will change my style," she said,"but I would like to continue to play to the potential that helped me win the honor of All-American."



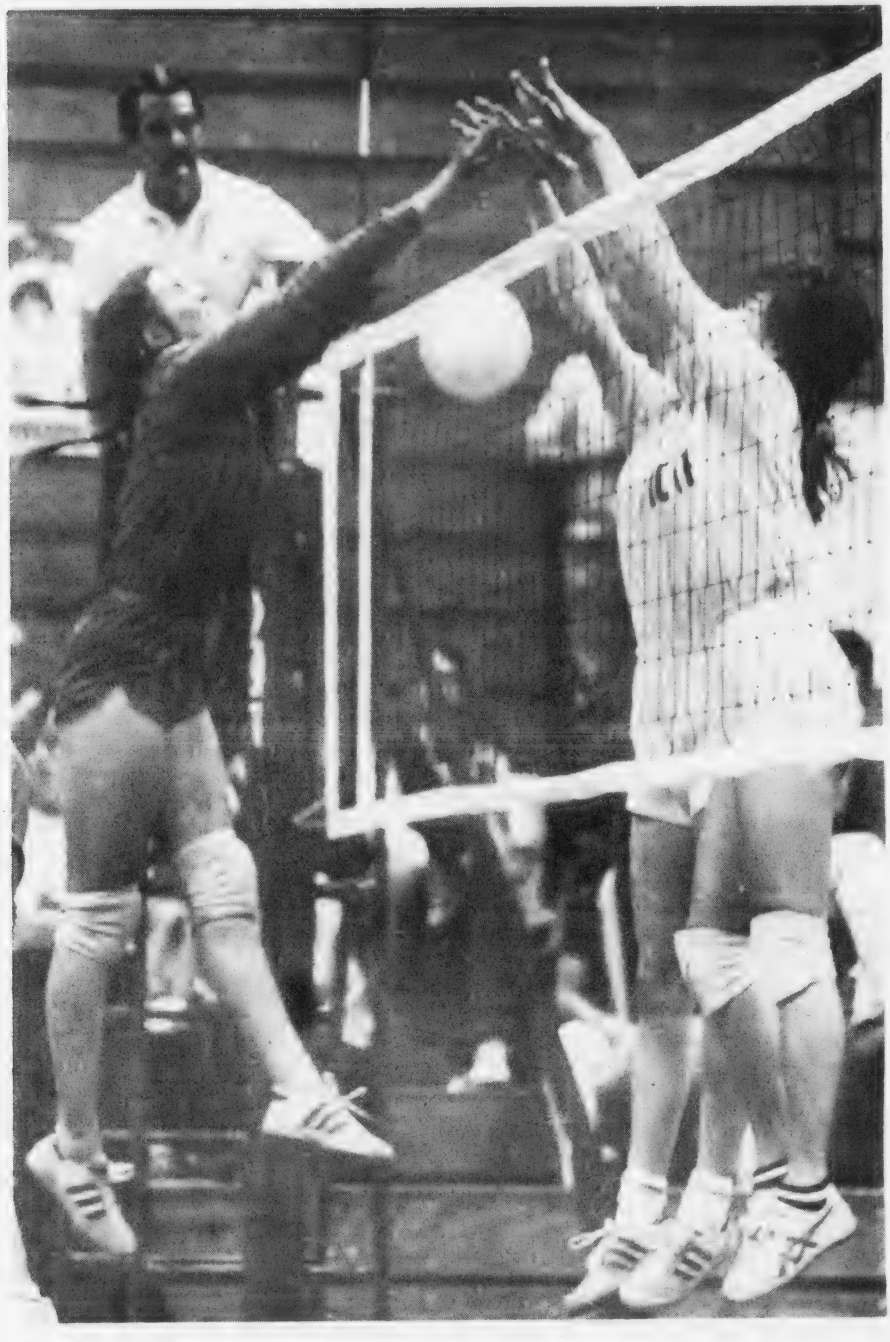
UCSD started the tournament by playing Occedental College. Earlier in the season, UCSD beat Occy pretty easily 15-6,15-3. Could it be that easy again? Could the UCSD team be overconfident? Coach Dannevik did not think so. "It won't be that easy again. They have improved a great deal. They have a fired-up coach, and I'm sure she will have them ready to go." UCSD jumped to a 4-0 lead with quickness and excellent net play. Holding off a rally by Occy, UCSD won the first game 15-7. Momentum changed though in the second game and with excellent spike placements and a blocked spike by Occy, the ball dropped back over the net, and Occy tood the second game 15-7. In the third game, UCSD jumped to a 10-0

continued on page 6

FINAL



Page 3 Photo
Tammy Smit proceeds to make opening paragraph reality.



Above
Smit prepares for another bombardment.

Bottom left
Wheatley launches into Juniata Wall of Opaniyakal and Twerady.

NATIONAL

FOUR

Center
Kuratko demonstrating concentration and determination for IBC.

Above
Wheatley's shot falls aimlessley to the floor.

Bottom right
Wheatley executing a "tap" over two desperate opponents.

CHAMPS

Photographs by Tillman Crane

lead with excellent hustle from their All-American and Michelle Whitmore. Michelle, making some excellent defensive saves, helped UCSD win the third game 15-4. UCSD had no trouble in the final game jumping to a 4-0 lead and advanced to the finals with a 15-3 win. In the championship game, UCSD defeated Juniata College in an action packed game 12-15, 15-5,15-7,17-15,15-1, for the national title. Juniata fell behind in the first game but struggled back to lead 9-5 and went on to win the first game 15-12. UCSD bounced right back winning 15-5, 15-7 to take a 2-1 lead. Trying to substitute to give all his players a taste of national competion, UCSD saw Juniata tie it up at two all with a 17-15 victory. UCSD though, literally blew them away in the final game by the score of 15-1.

Speaking of UCSD's subs, a great defensive hustler is Kim Whitmore. Because she is always on the floor, Coach Hipp named her the most aggressive player on the team. She stated, "I love defense. Defense is desire, I would do anything to dig the ball back up." Dannevik said he was never really worried about the match. "We don't go through peaks and valleys, so I wasn't too worried when Juniata got jacked up." This team is very even keeled and it was easy to put the fourth game out of our mind."

Juniata's coach stated that "his ladies played a classy final match. We made a lot of errors , but UCSD is an awesome team." Juniata, in taking second place did it with juniors and freshmen. As for pressure, head coach Larry Buck stated,"the pressure is higher here because the stakes have become higher.' We are very confident and realize that if we play as good as we can, the other teams will have to play very well to win." Juniata did win their first match by defeating Benidictine College of Illinois 15-11, 17-15, 11-15,10-15,15-13. Juniata started with a five point lead in the first game ,but Benidictine cut it to 11-12. In the second game, Benedictine led 12-9, but Juniata came back to take a 13-12 lead before winning 17-15 for a 2-0 lead. Cheryl Martino, for Benedictine served the final point as Benedictine took the third game 15-11. Benedictine jumped to a 10-4 lead in the fourth game and held on for a 15-10 win to tie the series at two all. In the final game Juniata concluded the 2½ hour match and advanced to the finals by defeating Benedictine 15-13. Benedictine trailed 14-10 before cutting it to 14-13. Juniata made it the "final four" by defeating Stanislaus State and entered the tournament with a 35-3 record. Juniata finished the season with a 36-4 record and a second place nationaly in Division III.

Occidental College from Los Angeles, California entered the tournament with a record of 17-8. Occy reached the "final four" by defeating Maryville College and the University of Wisconson - Steven Point. Occidental is coached by Lesley Alward and assisted by Karen Erickson. In talking with Coach Alward, I asked her about the pressure of getting to the "final four" or being at the "final four'. "The pressure seemed to be greater trying to get to the finals,"she said. "Being where we are is the best for any female sport in Occidental history." Occidental placed Jennifer Townsend on the All-American squad. As stated before, Occy lost to UCSD in the regular season, and UCSD was their opponent in the first round of the "final four". How did this affect the Occy team? "The girls are very relaxed and confident. They know they will have it tough playing UCSD " stated Coach Alward. She also stated that she felt that Occy and UCSD should be 1and 2,and that one of them will eliminate the other. Well, UCSD did just that by eliminating Occidental 15-7, 15-7,15-4,15-3.

Coach Alward stated after the game that "we played the best we've ever played. We just lost to a better team. In the third game we missed three straight serves which hurt." Coach also stated "Our girls have to be realistic. We didn't lose. They beat us. These girls are all winners, are great sports, and have a super attitude." These were the words Coach Alward used to describe her team after their lose to UCSD Those same girls proved themselves as winners as they came back to take third place by defeating Benedictine 15-11, 15-9, 15-9. In that first game, Benedictine jumped to a 4-1 lead only to give up the next 12 points and trail 13-4. Benedictine came back to 13-10 before losing 15-11. Occidental, not really being threatened in the final two games, won each by 6 points to finish in third place.

Taking fourth place in the tournament was Benedictine College of Illinois. Benedictine, who defeated Grove City and Sonoma State in the regionals, entered the tournament with a 33-3 record. They finished the season 33-5 by not winning a match in the "final four" tournament. That does not mean,though, that they did not have determination and hustle. After being down two games in the first round match to Juniata, they fought right back to tie the match at two games apiece with scores of 15-11, 15-10. The 2½ hour match ended with Juniata coming out on top with a 15-13 victory. Benedictine's head coach Deb Dimatteo talked about that Juniata match. "We played very poor. We played excellent during the regular season and also played very consistent throughout the season. We just did not do that today. We also had a few girls that have had much better games."

I asked her about the team's comeback from two games down. "We really did believe that after we made up those two games that we could really start rolling and playing to our potential. We are still happy to be in the final four and this is the best showing for any sport at Benedictine. The girls were disappointed and nervous. Being this far, they really wanted to prove themselves, especially after not having any of their members being named to the All-American team." There may have been a reason for this. "We did not receive an All-American nomination ballot," said Coach Dimatteo. "We could have possibly had an All-American." That possibility could have been Cheryl Martino, a freshman physical education major from Elmhurst, Illinois. Cheryl, a setter-hitter for the Eagles, does have All-American talent. I talked to her about the tournament and asked her what the team did different to come back from two games down. "We had a lot better communication among ourselves. The first two games we did not talk, and we were getting in each other's way. We just did not play to our potential tonight." Was she disappointed with the fourth place? "Yes, pretty much so to come this far and not win a match." And what about the All-American selection she may have received. She was not sure and had no comment. I also asked her about her contrasting emotions on the court. Does she ever get discouraged? "At times I get discouraged, but I try to hide it. I try to be a leader, and I can't let my teammates get down, so I try to encourage everyone and keep them going." Why did she choose Benedictine?

"The personality of Coach Dimatteo," Cheryl stated. "She cares not only about the students as athletes but also as people and their academic work." But for Cheryl, who also sends the spiked volleyball with some steam behind it, her teammates, which contain only one senior, and Coach Dimatteo, there is always next year which could turn out even brighter. Benedictine ended their season with a loss to Occidental in the consolation match by scores of 15-11, 15-9, 15-9.

In the All-Tournament team selections, UCSD placed LuLu Schwartz, Tammy Smit, and Molly Wheatley. Juniata placed Colleen Ireland and Sue Barker, while Occidental placed Jennifer Townsend.

For three days here at MC people were hard at work preparing for the tournament. From the teams that were participating to the tournament director Art Ogden.

" Was Coach Ogden pleased with the way the tournament went off?"Yes very pleased. We had numerous compliments from the community, the teams that participated, and the NCAA officials. We had excellent help from assistant directors Wayne Thompson, Sharon Brown, and Betsy Hunt." I asked Ogden about the importance of an event like this and how it effected MC "Anytime a school hosts a national event, you get national attention. This was a very big event for MC and ranks up there alongside the 1946 football team appearance in the Tangerine Bowl in which they lost 35-7 to Catawba." The NCAA does plan on moving the tournament date back next year and is very possible that MC could be the site again for the 1982 tournament," according to Ogden. But for now, congratulations to all the "final four" teams, and the 1981 tournament can be considered a great success.

Davis Dorm: Congratulations to all the Davis women involved in MC athletics. We are proud of you.

Copeland Dorm: Congratulations to all MC female athletes and to the final four. from the guys at Copeland.

Lloyd Ladies: Congratulations to the MC female athletes. Thanks for making women a winning tradition.

Pearsons:

Pearsons wishes luck to all Maryville College athletes and to those who keep the programs going.

As sports editor I would like to take this opportunity to thank the support given by the MC residence halls, and the extra work done by the entire Echo staff for making this article possible.

Dorm I:

Female athletics. Congratulations for a job well done. From the residents of Dorm I.

The Echo Talks With Jeffery Solow

By Mary Hughes

While contemplating life after highter education, students watch men and women who have found career satisfaction. Jeffrey Solow, MC's affiliate artist, provides students with an excellent show of talent, challenge, and enthusiasm. He is a man worthy of young people's remembrance; he is a world favored cellist.

Hughes: As a professional cellist, what lies ahead for you?

Solow: Goal-wise, I would like to strike a comfortable balance between teaching, chamber music, and solo concerts.

H: Chamber music?

S: That's three to eight people playing together. More people would be a chamber orchestra. There is an enormous amount of beautiful music written for chamber musicians. It was named chamber music because of musicians who played in small rooms or chambers long ago.

H: When does a musician become classified as a professional?

S: It's hard to decipher when you become professional. In athletics a person is considered professional when he plays for money, but this is not so with artists. I earned money while in school at UCLA. I planned to be protozoology major but switched over to philosophy. Most of my academics were sidelined to the cello.

H: How would you advise the music students at MC?

S: I was on the faculty at Cal State in Northridge, California where there is a good music department but the students really aren't going to make it as professionals. It would be self defeating for the teachers to tell them that though. Music students should get a clear view of the level of excellence he or she needs. If in an isolated area, they shouldn't judge their merits by only those around them. Examine the real world; see what's going on there. That's not to say the person necessarily has to go to New York– there are all sorts of things for musicians to do in all sorts of places.

H: Do you come from a musical family?

S: My father is in the film industry, and my mother is a violinist. I have a brother who is an auto mechanic in Santa Cruz. My sister is a stained glass artist and a mother as of a week ago. Her husband , Ron Grant, is a film composer; he's written on several episodes of "Knotts Landing." Ron composes music for the show. It's interesting-that's the kind of stuff I used to do in Los Angeles. The pay is good but there is not too much artistic satifaction.

H: Define artistic satisfaction.

S: Not boring, challenging, pleasurable. Doing those kind of Hollywood jobs gets boring after awhile. You have to be technically good and have a good command of playing beautiful phrases, but you don't need the intuitiveness it takes to put together beautiful music. You have to be fast in that business; the first time you see the music is in the studio. Very few key board musicians play in Hollywood because classical, jazz, and styles of popular music are all needed and the musician has to improvise from charts of keys.

H: What is your musical opinion of New York?

S: New York is the music center of the United States, the music center of the world. You can make a name for yourself in New York and have a good name all over the world, but a name in

H: Who taught you cello while you attended UCLA.

S: Gregor Piatigorsky. He was a famous cellist born in Russia. He wrote a book that might be in the college library called Cello--it's fascinating.

H: How often do you practice?

S: I try to practice three hours a day but my state of mind depends a lot on my playing. If I don't feel good about my playing, I get depressed but if I do feel good and confident then I practice more

H: Do you play other instrument?

S: No. I didn't plan on becoming a musician but a zoologist.

H: What does it feel like to play in front of an audience?

S: Sometimes satisfying and fulfilling and sometimes frightening. It's unpredictable. At times I expect to be comfortable but become petrified, while at other times the opposite happens.

H: Do you like college audiences?

S: Oh sure. They are the most fun to play for. Doing a performance in Davis was my idea; it took me awhile to meet everyone here. One of the first performances an affiliate artist should do is in the place he or she is living.

H: How do you like Maryville College?

S: Well I got my initial taste in October. I played at Sewanee five years ago. This is the first time I've lived in a women's dorm My first activities this visit were cancelled because of snow but it worked out fine.

H: Did you know anyone at MC before you came?

S: No, I didn't know anyone, but there are people I'll continue to know after I leave. I knew about David Irwin before I came because we have common friends in L.A.

H: Do you write any of your own music?

S: No. Because I studied philosophy, I never learned composition.

H: Were you involved in athletics in college?

S: I like swimming in the ocean and skin diving since I grew up in southern California. I want to scuba dive in Alaska sometime.

H: Where is your home?

S: I have an apartment in New York. After five years on the faculty at UCLA, I moved to New York where I can hold concerts and involve myself with different music.

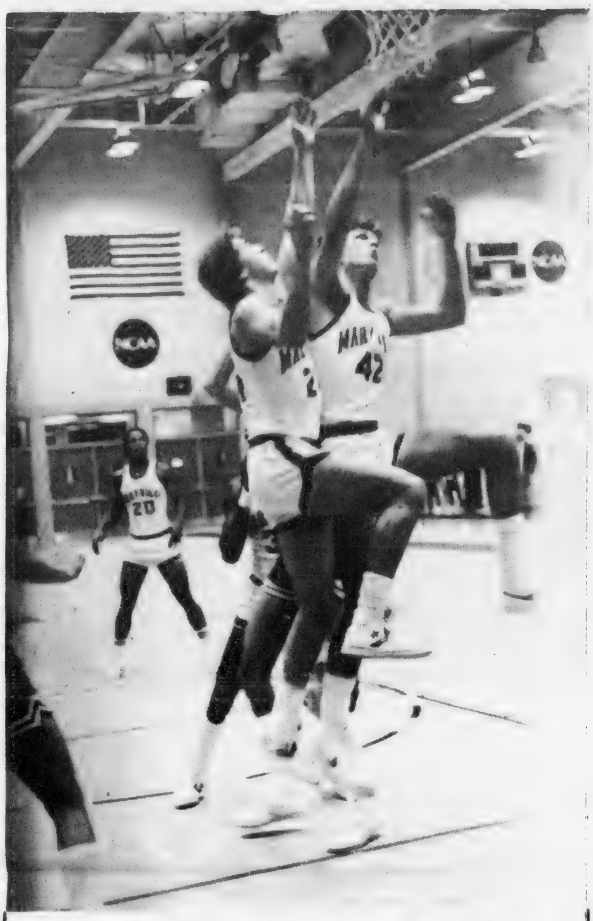
H: When do you tour?

S: Between visits here I go to New York, Mexico, L.A., and Alaska with the Anchorage Symphony.

H: Did you go to China after your first stay at MC

S: No, China is very unorganized. I was asked to play in New York which leads to other concerts. Concerts in China only lead to more concerts in China. One has to eat in the meantime! Idealism quickly changes into practicality.

H: What does Alaska hold for you?



S: A friends of mine, a violinist, started a music festival called Sitka about ten years ago. Every June the festival is put on. This year we're doing a spin off with violin Sonatas, cello sonatas, and trios of violin, cello and piano. After all the years of donating services, we' re beginning to get something back.

H: Is music your means of communication in foreign countries?

S: Music really isn't an international language unless everyone speaks the same culture. For instance, traditional Japanese culture is reserved, but the West trys to convey emotions. It is a barrier that needs to be overcome. The Eastern shrieking sound of opera is strange to a Westerner, but some people have overcome the barrier. Western music is popular in the Orient though, espcially in Tokyo. It used to be a monopoly of Russian Jews. People call the Juilliard School of music the Seoul Philharmonic because of all the Korean students in it.

Geno's PIZZA
Buy 1 large pizza
get 4 salads $.59 each
with coupons, college ID
Good through Jan. 28th
Next to Family Fun Center

Winning & Losing - The Season So Far

Rimmer and Williams shoot to score for the Scots.

By Steve Arnold

Since November 21, 1981, Coach Randy Lambert has put together some offense and defense, installed some motivation and determination, and even painted the floor where his team has been demonstrating the installments. As of January 18, 1982, this team stood in first place in the O.D.A.C. at 3-1 with an overall record of 4-7. Now, that record could easily be 7-3 had it not been for three close defeats the Scots have taken. The Scots have lost to Lee College 69-68, to Warren Wilson 78-74, and to Eastern Mennonite 53-52. In the loss to Lee, which resulted in second place for the Scots in the Rotary Classic Tourny in Lenoir City, the Scots placed four players in double figures. Rimmer (20), Matthews(13) Gheen (18), and Weston (10).

The Scots opened this season on a bad note losing at home to Centre 84-59. They traveled next to Atlanta, Georgia where they were handed their second straight loss. This time by Oglethorpe 59-43. Their first win came at the hands of Hampden-Sydney by the score of 55-49 with Rimmer leading all scorers with 23 points. The Scots then lost to Alice-Lloyd 58-50 but turned right around in the tournament to defeat Tusculum 73-64 before losing the one pointer to Lee in the finals. Back for another O.D.A.C. opponent, which this time was a 69-56 thrashing of Emory and Henry with Rimmer again leading all scorers with 23 points.

The Scots then took to the road again only to come home with a 78-74 loss to Warren Wilson, that being their last game until 1982. They returned on January 8th, but only to lose their first O.D.A.C. game, as Eastern Mennonite slipped out of town with a 54-53 win. Next came the Carson-Newman Eagles, and you know the rest of the story. Oh, wow! Thought for a moment there I was Paul Harvey.

The Scots ran their O.D.A.C. record to 3-1 last Saturday with a 61-59 victory over Lynchburg. The game was never a run away by either team, as halftime found the Scots leading by only one, 30-29. Tyrone Matthews lead the Scot attack with 20 points. Rimmer and Baker had 15 10 points respectively.

Statistic wise, Rimmer is the leading scorer with 183 points; an average of 18.6 per game. He is followed by Matthews with 136 point; an average of 12.3 and a F. G.% of .526 in the rebounding department. Greg Gheen has pulled down 76 for a game average of 6.9 and is second on the team in assist with 23 and leads the team in blocked shots with 8. The free throw department is lead by Rimmer with an amazing .847% (39-46). The team average in FT% is 75. The Scots are losing in the points per game (63-60) but have out rebounded opponents 324-268.

One quick football note. Back into the bag of tricks, and what do I pull out? Well, look here. A Super Bowl prediction. 49ers 27-Bengals 12.

SCOTS
MARYVILLE COLLEGE

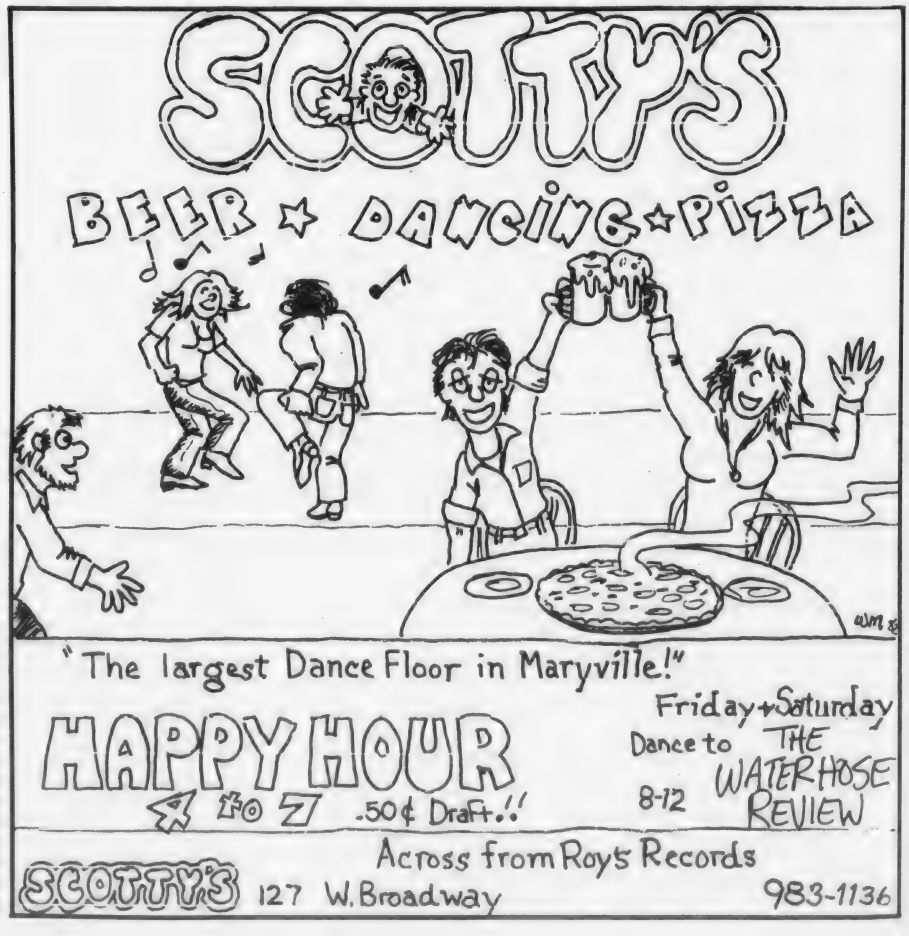
Ladies Drop Two

By Robin Rimmer

On Friday night the Lady Scots basketball team played their first home game of their 1982 season. The Lady Scots were defeated by a tough, undefeated Milligan team by the score of 61-54. Top scorers for the Lady Scots were Brenda Babb and Rachel Reese with 13 and 12 points apiece respectively.

On Saturday, they traveled to Nashville, Tennessee to play the Fisk Lady Bulldogs. The Lady Scots were defeated by the Lady Bulldogs in a close, physical game. The final score was 58-54. Brenda Babb was the leading scorer for the Lady Scots on Saturday night also.

The Lady Scots will be back in action here at Maryville on Tuesday night, when they play Sewanee College. On Wednesday evening, the Lady Scots will travel to Knoxville to play the Knoxville College Lady Bulldogs. The Lady Scots will finish off a busy week when they play Covenant College here at Maryville on Friday night. Good Luck this week, Lady Scots!



Family Fun Center

5 tokens with coupon
Buy 5 tokens for $1.00 get 5 free

Latest video games

pool, pinball, and video games

Next to Geno's

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 12 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, January 28, 1982

TCIII Receives Challenge Grant

Maryville College alumni have received a challenge which could result in a total of $1.5 million for the institution.

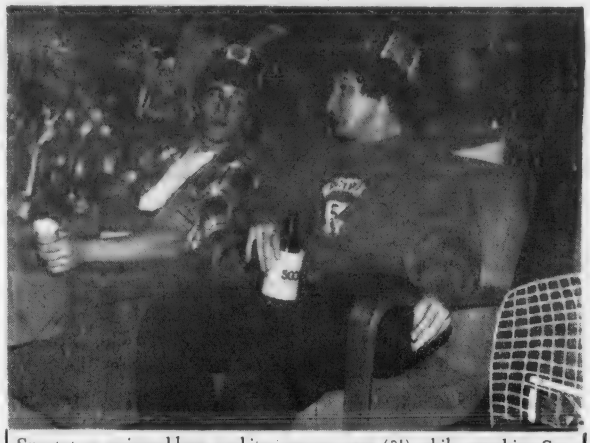
At Monday the 18th's meeting of the College's Blount County Alumni Association, MC President Dr. Wayne Anderson announced that an anonymous donor has awarded the College a challenge grant of $500-000.

For every $2 the College can raise from its alumni during the course of the second phase of the College's Toward Century III capital fund campaign , the donor will give $1, up to $500,000 This two-to-one challenge means that alumni will be asked to contribute $1 million to receive the $500,000 challenge grant.

This $500,000 commitment brings to $6,437,134 the amount raised in gifts and pledges to date in the Toward Century III campaign.

"This is a tremendous challenge to our alumni," Dr. Anderson said. "Based on previous alumni support, I feel confident they will respond favorably. They have always risen to meet challenges in the past."

"We are deeply grateful to the donor for this extraordinary vote of confidence in Maryville College and in its exciting plans for the future," Dr. Anderson added.



During Phase One of the Toward Century III campaign, the alumni responded favorably and were instrumental in helping the College top the $5 million goal ahead of schedule.

And in 1979, MC alumni were cited by the United States Steel Foundation's incentive awards program for outstanding increase in alumni giving. Out of a total of 7,000 alumni at that time, 29.6 percent made gifts to the College, a 7.6 percent increase over the previous fiscal year.

That citation put MC in the top 17 percent of all colleges, universities and independent schools in the nation for alumni giving. nation for alumni giving.

Dr. Anderson explained that alumni giving has always been extremely important to the existence of MC. Without such support, he added, MC would suffer both a financial setback and an institutional loss of credibility.

The Toward Century III campaign is the College's special advancement plan to raise $11.5 million for faculty salaries, student aid, building renovation, innovative academic programs and other college activities.

Spectators enjoyed beer and ice-cream cones (?!) while watching San Francisco dominate the Super Bowl, Sunday.

Counseling Center Lends An Ear To Problems

By Jenny Fitzell

Four Years ago a man saw and filled a need at Maryville College. The need was an organized counseling center. The man is Mr. Bruce Guillaume. Through hard work, he organized five classes-positive living, rational thinking, assertiveness training, stress management, and study skills. Three of these five classes are offered each term. As a result the counseling center has grown tremendously.

Now during this winter term,the busiest time of the year, a new counselor Susan Hastings has been added to the staff. Susan, filling her field placement requirement here at Maryville College will be with us until June when she graduates from the University of Tennessee with a masters in Social work.

Susan has worked with a spectrum of people in her previous social work experiences. At the Overlook Mental Health Center Susan taught adults and teens how to be assertive. She worked in the Girl's Group Home in Jefferson County and at Riverbend, a school for behavioral problems, dealing with adolescent boys.

Susan is not only a new member of Maryville College but is also a fairly new resident in the town of Maryville. Being a "country girl" as she calls herself, Susan thoroughly enjoys living so closely to the mountains where she can go hiking, camping and canoeing.

Mr. Guillaume is "enthused with the faculty's response, the residents' response, and the students' reponse" to the counseling center and is pleased with the increase of students who are seeking help before their problems develop into an uncontrolled situation. However, both Susan and Mr. Guillaume encourage all students to come to them as soon as a problem, whether it concerns school work or a personal conflict, becomes evident. Mr. Guillaume quoted, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Mr. Guillaume's hours are 8:00 - 4:00 on Mondays and Tuesdays and any other day by appointment. Susan is available from 8:00 - 4:00 on Thursdays by appointment. Appointments may be made in the office of Career Planning and Placement.

What's Going On

Friday, January 29

7:00 Lady Scots basketball game - here
8:15 MACCO Concert with the McLain Family Band.
10:00-1:00 Blue Jean formal in Pearsons.

Saturday, January 30

1:00 - Film High Noon
2:30 - Film Stage Coach.
4:00 - Film Wild Bunch;
9:00 - Coffee House in Lloyd Lobby.

Sunday, January 31

7:00 Vespers.

Tuesday, February 2

9:30 - Speakeasy in Lloyd Lobby

Wednesday, February 3

10:30 - Mid-Week Worship in the Center for Campus Ministry.

I know I haven't written lately, but...

Dear Mom,

The Super Bowl is about to begin, and I'm sitting down in the lobby surrounded by a cheering and jeering crowd. I may have been one of those cheerers or jeerers had the Dolphins pulled it out, but as it is, I really have no preference. I thought I'd watch anyway, though, and while doing so write you a letter.

Things have been rather interesting around here lately, but I guess it's mostly due to the weather. - Hang on someone wants to make a bet on the game. The loser is "slave for a day", and I got stuck with Cincinatti. The prognosis does not look good. Anyway back to what's been going on.

Last week started off normally enough, but by Monday night it was so icy that walking was virtually impossible. I woke up Tuesday morning to voices proclaiming that morning classes were cancelled. As I struggled to become fully awake, I thought, "could this be, or has someone played a cruel trick?" It turned out to be true, though. Afternoon classes were cancelled too, and you'll be happy to hear what I did with my spare time. I cleaned my room! Sounds incredible, doesn't it?!

A steaming, cavernous hole has opened up in front of Davis threatening to unleash the very content of the bowels of the earth, but they put a saw horse over it, so I guess that will deter any alien creature from terrorizing the campus.

The next day things were pretty much the same as they always are, and by Thursday, the temperature was 65 degrees. For a couple of days, I thought maybe I had been transported home until my feet went out from under me, and I found myself sitting in the Tennessee mud.

Great. There it is printed on the screen for all to see - no team that has been shut out in the first half has ever come back to win. I guess I'm doomed.

There's really not too much more to tell you. Oh yeah , thanks for the box you sent. It came just in the nick of time. Hey! Cincinatti just made a touchdown! Maybe they'll come back yet. Ah well, then, I guess I'll wrap this up on a hopeful note. I'll write again soon.

Love,

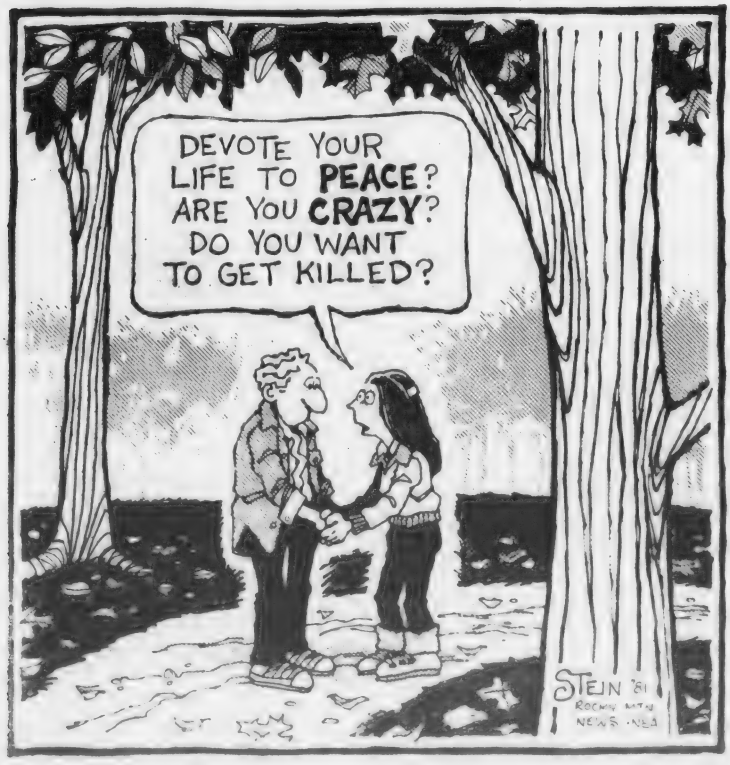
Kath

P.S. Any advice for a future slave?

Letters

The Maryville College Student Body received a memorandum on January 11th from William R. Strickland, Vice President for Student Affairs. The subject of this memo was "relationship with the larger Maryville Alcoa community."

From this piece of literature, MC students have been able to gather little. Are there specific charges made against the student body by the community? If so, could the student not be made further aware?



Various sources from MC's student body claim they feel the memorandum is an example of vague diplomacy. A few are alarmed by an implied attitude of harshness from municipal authorities. When asked, representatives of the police department claim there is no basis for complaints against MC students.

Many students are from communities of contrasting lifestyles from East Tennessee. If there are specific modes of behavior that should be followed in public the students can be made aware of them.

No MC student wants a bad relationship with the community. Few future alumni are shoplifters or drunks. This matter according to several students, can be cleared up by more definite wording concerning the relationship between MC students and the respected community.

ACP

Letters to the Editor may be addressed to the Highland Echo Box 2820.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Bluegrass, Classical Mix

The country mountaineer and the high-class city folk can toe tap together when the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra brings the McLain Family Band to Maryville College.

The two musical groups will offer a combined concert on Jan. 29 at 8:15 p.m. in the College's Wilson Chapel.

Classical and bluegrass music is an unlikely mixture but one that works surprisingly well. The McLain Family has performed with major symphony orchestras in cities like Atlanta, Cleveland, Cincinnnati, Rochester and Louisville.

The MACCO concert will feature a composition written expressly for the McLains by Phillip Rhodes. Entitled "Bluegrass Festival Suites," the piece was premiered in Louisville by the McLain Family Band and the city's symphony orchestra, then under the direction of George Mester.

The MACCO concert will begin with Aaron Copland's masterpiece, "Variations on a Shaker Medley," also popularly known as "Appalachian Spring."

The second half of the concert will be composed of six bluegrass tunes backed up by MACCO's orchestral accompaniment. Throughout the concert, the McLain Family Band will perform various bluegrass standards.

Coming from eastern Kentucky's Appalachian Mountains, the McLains have gained international appreciation after 13 years of performing. Their busy schedule has taken them to 62 foreign countries as musical ambassadors of the U.S. State Department and to 45 of the 50 states.

They have made six appearances at Washington's prestigious Kennedy Center for the performing Arts, performed on numerous occasions at the Grand Ole Opry and have been actively involved with arts festivals, fairs and jamboress nationwide.

The McLain Family's current season schedule includes appearances with the Baltimore, Phoenix and Flagstaff Symphonies, the Lexington Philharmonic and the Calgary Philharmonic under the direction of Richard Hayman. They will also appear on more than 100 college campuses, including MC, bluegrass festivals and concert series.

The McLain Family Band members are: Raymond K. McLain, father, who plays mandolin and bass; Raymond W. McLain, fiddle and banjo; Ruth McLain Riopel, mandolin and bass; Michael Riopel, guitar, mandolin and harmonica; Nancy Ann McLain, bass and mandolin; and Michael McLain, mandolin and banjo.

The McClain Family Band

Circle K Serves MC & Community

By Andrea Vousden

Circle K, a service organization sponsored by the Maryville and Alcoa Kiwanis clubs, has already been active this year.

During fall term, they helped to rejuvenate the campus picnic ground. The grounds were cleared and tables and a fireplace built. Circle K also helped clear out the Alumni Gym.

For Homecoming, they painted the endzones on the football field. Posters were made for the Admissions office and some members ushered for a MACCO concert. Last week, Circle K sponsored the blood drive and about 52 pints of blood were collected.

Every Saturday, two members help the Kiwanis clubs by working all day at the aluminin can recycling center.

The Big Brother/Big Sister program has been a favorite of Circle K members. Already, members have had numberous visits with their little brother or sister. Two parties were given for the kids. The first was reported on Action 10 News. At the Christmas party, each kid received a special t-shirt and a gift from their big brother or sister.

Circle K had a pizza party at Dr. Ramger's house and recognized Bill Slater for all his time and help in the club's many activities.

For the Christmas party, members went carolling at a rest home and returned for special readings by Dr. Blair and Dr. Fowler.

Membership to Circle K is open to anyone interested. Contact Ed Welch or Donald Xiques

Life Exposed With Wit

By Joe Wynne

Those who saw James Perkins at the CIV last Wednesday couldn't help but get the feeling that they know him very well. As the audience listened to an essay, short story, and some poetry, it was evident that he has a good eye and ear for people as well as a special sense of humor.

Most of the readings were of poetry, which might have been pretty hard to take at 9:30 in the morning, yet his poems were clear, apt, and ended abruptly much like punch lines. Suddenly they were over and the effect was as if you had been hit on the head with a club. While the response ranged from embarrassed silences to outright laughter, the cause was the same: Perkins had the ability to create a distinctly human image.

In his poem "Wisconsin Map" he wonders what it would be like if he had become trapped in his car on a snowbound highway, to slit open the back seat and warm his hands in its guts. he justifies the murder of Mozart by a jealous musician by saying, "infamy is better than being forgotten."

Although his characters are down, they are not out. There is something inside them that keeps on striving. He is not bitter or resentful, but sarcastic and ironic. This is his special sense of humor that he finds in others too.

The Amish are one of his favorite subjects. They appear to lead such a dull restricted life without many things(including Machines) and wear drab clothing, yet in "Amish Quilts" he wonders at their extremely bright hand-made quilts that they hang out to air in the spring. They become like everyone else possessing that element of hope.

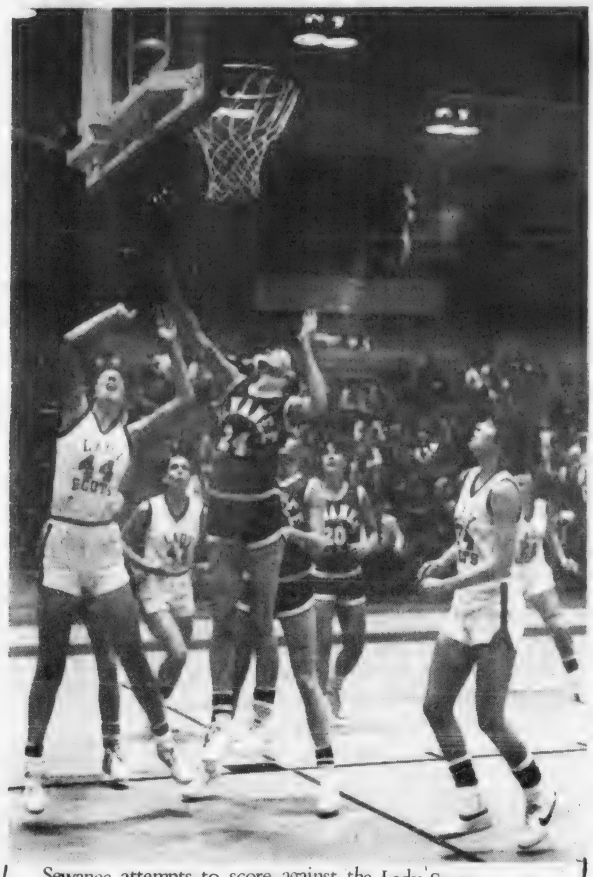
Perkins ended with a story entitled "The Death of the Colonel" which was a fierce battle between irony and sarcasm; each trying to top the other between the many long pauses for audience laughter. Citizens of a small town so typical they were funny, go through misadventure in their quest to bury a respected man. Halfway through the funeral procession, they use the coffin to break down a door to put out a fire. Finally they get him in the ground only to find out it is in the wrong place.

Perkins left the audience with the feeling that any loss can be overcome just because we are human, which is good since I had a test the next period.

Geno's PIZZA
Buy 1 large pizza
get 4 salads $.59 each
with coupons, college ID
Good through Jan. 28th
Next to Family Fun Center

SURPRISE A FRIEND OR SWEETHEART ON VALENTINE'S DAY!!

We will deliver a Valentine personalized with your own message of up to 20 words on Sunday, February 14.



Just fill out the order blank below and return it to Box 2009 along with $.25.

Additional orders may be made on 3 X 5 cards.

Deliver to: _____
(dorm and room number)

Message:

sponsored by Davis Dorm.

Sewance attempts to score against the Lady Scots.

Scots Shot For Three

By Steve Arnold

The MC Scots, coming off a 61-59 ODAC victory over Lynchburg, failed again to defeat a non-conferance opponent as they fell to Bryan 75-69. The Scots, who trailed by as many as 11 in the first half, rallied back to take the lead only to find themselves trailing at the half 35-33. Rimmer, the Sctos leading scorer, only had four points at the half, but Matthews had ten to help the Scots stay close. Had it not been for Landers of Bryan, the game could have easily belonged to the Scots. Landers smacked the net in the second half for 24 points as Bryan pulled away for a 75-69 victory. The Scots, who have won only two conference games, were led in scoring by Matthews (16), Rimmer (14), and Weston (11).

The Scots put one of their nonconference victories together on January 21 as they avenged an earilier loss to Alice-Lloyd by winning 61-52. The Scots lost that first meeting 58-50. Rimmer led the Scots' first half attack with 14 points as the Scots led at halftime 33-27. The Scots never lost that lead and went to the dressing room after the game with a 61-52 win. Rimmer led the scoring attack with 19 followed by Baker (13) and Matthews (11).

The Scots played a make-up game Monday at Center and came home with a defeat by the score of 69-48. What was a close game in the first half; Center led at the half 27-26, was no where near that as Center outscored the Scots 42-22 in the second half for a 21 point victory. The Scots, who played 80% of the time without Matthews who was injured, lacked scoring punch as only five Scots accounted for points with Rimmer leading all scorers with 20. Other Scots in double figures were Gheen (12) and Weston (10).

The Scots, as of January 26, have an ODAC record of 3-1 and overall of 5-9. The Scots' next home game is February 4 against Roanoke.

Not doing my job too well, I have gotten into some of the games and at times have forgotten to take notes for these stories as you can probably tell. So to fill in this space I talked with Coach Lambert about certain points in the season. I asked why the non-conferance victories are being so hard to come by compared to the ODAC wins. "Six out of the eight school we have faced non-conference give scholarships. Center and Oglethorpe always finish top in their conference and in short, the non-conference opponents have been tougher. The boys here also seem to get more emotionally involved when playing ODAC opponents." The Scots' test of all tests still lies ahead. The Scots' play away on Jan. 29th, 30th and Feb. 1. All of these are ODAC opponents. "We should get 2 of these 3," stated Coach, "and if we can come away with 2 victories next weekend, we'll be in pretty good shape."

That next weekend finds the Scots playing Feb. 13, and 15 and again on the road against ODAC opponents.

Lady Scots Net Wins

By Robin Rimmer

Last week was a busy week for the Lady Scots. On Wednesday, the Lady Scots travelled to Knoxville to play the Knoxville College Lady Bulldogs. Maryville was defeated by Knoxville College by a score of 68-59.

The Lady Scots came back on Friday night and defeated Covenant by a score of 82-58. Kim Allen lead Maryville with 21 points.

On Saturday afternoon, the Lady Scots were victorious again. They defeated Sewanee College by a score of 76-68. Kim Allen turned in another fine shooting performance. She hit 12-14 field goals to lead the Lady Scots scoring with 24 points. Candy Nutter and Brenda Babb also had fine shooting performances scoring 17 and 16 points respectively.

Miss Brown was pleased with the team's play this past week. She feels the team's play was much more consistant than in the past.

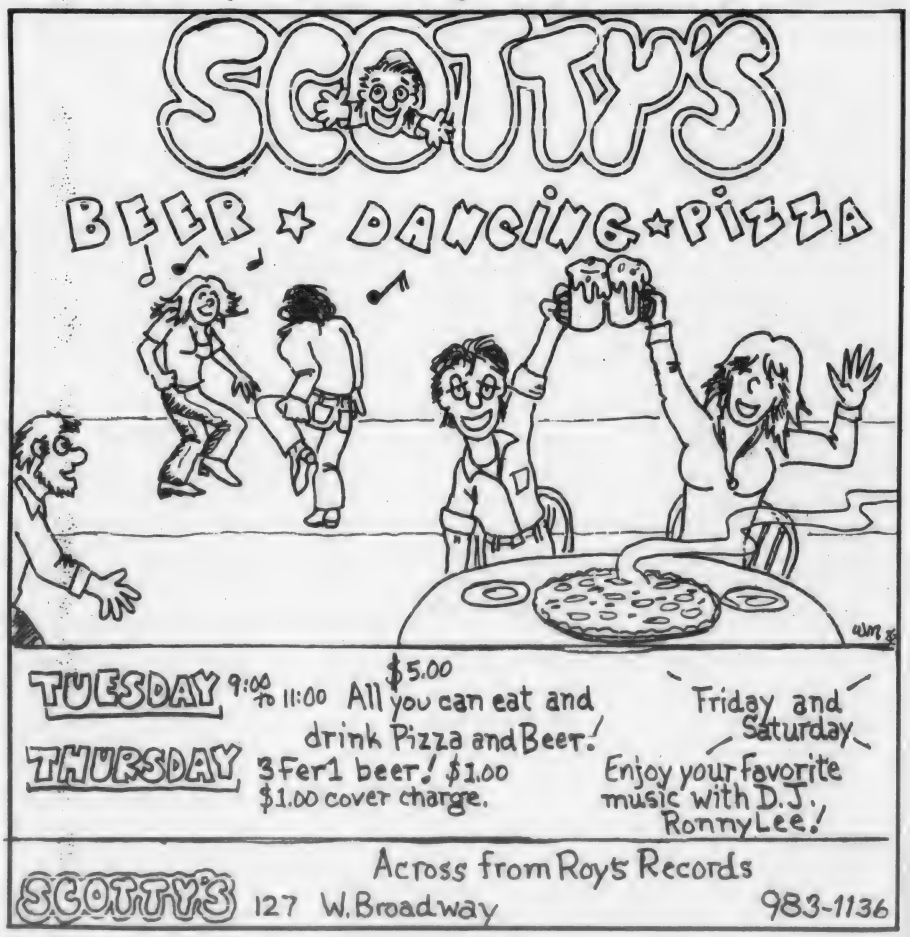
The Ladies have another busy week ahead of them as they play Morristown College, Georgetown College, and Tennessee Wesleyn College here at Maryville. The Lady Scots hope to improve and even their 4-7 record with three victories this week. Good Luck Lady Scots!

Family Fun Center

5 tokens with coupon
Buy 5 tokens for $1.00 get 5 free

Latest video games

pool, pinball, and video games

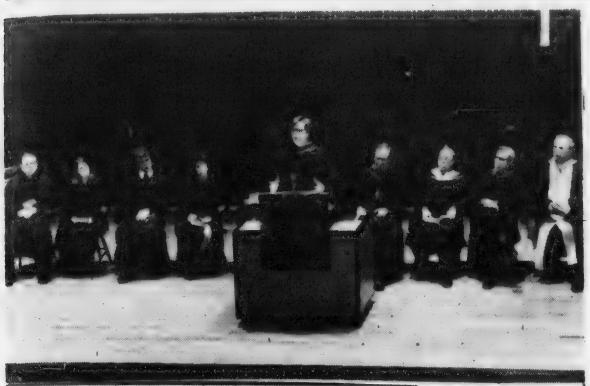


Next to Geno's

STUDENT ASSISTANT IN MUSIC NEEDED

New Providence Presbyterian Church is seeking a part time college student assistant in music.

Renumeration on a scholarship basis



Call church office 983-0182, Attention Don Brakebill.

The Highland Echo

Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee

Vol. 67 no. 13 Thursday, February 4, 1982

Peter Vial delivers sermon during his installation service. Participants included, from left to right, Rev. Lawrence Driskell, Carol Coffey, Steve Ford, Ellie Gillmore, Dr. Donal Grohman,Arthur Bushing, Rev. John Mathison and William Strickland.

Peter Vial Installed As Campus Minister

By Mary Hughes

Mr. Peter Vial accepted the position of campus minister during an installation service Wednesday in Wilson Chapel. Dr. Donald Grohman, moderator of the Presbytery of Union, chaired the service before Maryville College faculty and students

Vial delivered a sermon in which he applied the words "discipleship," "installation," and "Scottie Dog" to life in the Maryville community. He expanded upon the adventure the installation opened for the college, community and church by presenting his belief in following Jesus Christ. Vial noted that a community should be "keeping company with the master not shouting "Go get them, minister!" His message continued with a challenge to freedom through discipleship, an adventurous new meaning to the word installation, and a hopeful congruity to the cry 'How 'bout them Scottie Dogs!"

The MC choir, directed by Kent Skinner, performed "The Last Words of David," and "Glory to God On The Highest" by Randall Thomson. Participants in the service included Dr. Wayne Anderson, Ellie Gilmore, William Strickland, Rev. John Mathison, Rev. Lawrence Driskill, Mr. Authur Bushing, Stephen Ford, and Carol Coffey.

A luncheon for Vial and members of the Commission and member of the Presbytery was held in Proffitt Dining Room following the installation.

Lloyd Filled With Talent

The Winter Coffeehouse proceeded Saturday night even though Arda Walker could not officiate. Second choice Terry Bunde, however, held a captive audience with his wit and prodic threats of melodious outbursts.

The program opened with Donna Czegledi and Jean Plant signing the song "Short People". The so maligned short person was played by Donna Whitley who turned out to be not quite as diminutive as first suspected.

A line up of songs then followed beginning with Cathy Angell who performed "Saturday Love" and "A Royal Prison" which were written by her twin sister. Carol Cooper, Amy Grubbs, and Laurie Nelson, accompanied by Kama Cook, sang from the Second Chapter of Acts. Carol then took the stage for a solo. Next came Jean Plant, Sharon Pimm, and Lisa Yacks with "Annie's Song" and "Don't Cry Out Loud". Bryan McFarland sang two original compositions; "Midnight" and "Over Wonderland".

It was then time for an inbetween-acts dramatic reading from the Great Book: The Bruno Bear Bedtime Book. After this we were under the influence of Tom Hudson's reading. He then changed the pace and sang "The Impossible Dream" and "Thy Will Be Done." Tracy DePue entertained the audience with "The Way We Were" and gave voice to Kermit the Frog in "Being Green".

The Great Arnack, brother of Karnack-known to millions from the Tonight Show - graced the stage with his amazing powers. He divined such answers as Kumquot (How do you call your quat)? and Send In the Clowns (Name the Carson Newman fight song.) , and when enraged by a hostile crowd, cursed the audience with "may a swarm of desert car jockies gang chamois your sister, and "may Morrison's Food Service cater your sister's wedding."

Andrea Vousden on flute and Barb Booker on Oboe were instrumental in changing the mood with a selection from Gretrey and a humorous rendition of Haydn.

Lori Woodhull, accompanied by Kama Cook, sang "I Just Fall In Love Again." The 17th Century Madrigal was introduced by George Cassutto singing "Where Goeth Thou Fair Maiden " accompanied by Tim Fitzgerald's guitar, chirp chirps, and fa la las.

Attempting to help English students with their assigned reading, Bunde read an abbreviated verison of "Beowolf"and "Kuble Khan" while a band set up. When Julie Quinton, Mark Beyer, and Kevin Crother, David Denshaw, Jules Humbard, and Danny Cartledge were ready, new wave rocked the scene with "Suicide Bunny" and Danny "Rick James" Cartledge singing "Super Freak".

Laura Hart did a good job with Judy Garland's "Stormy Weather" and "Smile", and the Davis staff harmonized on.

The in-the-shower crooning talent of the Emcee was revealed when a shower-capped Bunde related the Social Security Aid To Be Affected

Under new federal guidelines, college students may contintue to receive Social Security benefits only if they:

*Are enrolled full time in an institution of higher education before May, 1982.

*Were on the Social Security rolls-either as a high-school or college student-before September, 1982. Children who became eligible for benefits after that date, even if they are now enrolled in college, will receive payment only until July, 1982.

Eligible students can continue to draw benefits until April, 1985, or their twenty-second birthday whichever comes first-as long as they are unmarried and enrolled full time.

However, those benefits will be subject to the following reductions:

*Students will receive 25 percent less in the academic year beginning September, 1982, 50 per cent less as of September, 1982, and 75 percent less as of September 1984. All payments will be eliminated after April,1985

*Annual cost of living increases will be eliminated.

*Benefits will no longer be paid for the months of May June, July, and August.

What's Going On

Thursday, February 4
- 7:30 - Scots' Basketball game
- 8:15 - Comic Operas

Friday, February 5
- Dorm I event

Saturday, February 6
- 1:00 - Film -'Nosferautu
- 2:00 - Film - Freaks
- 3:00 - Lady Scots' Basketball game
- 7:00 - International dinner sponsored by the International Club

Sunday, February 7
- 2:00 - Film - Repulsion
- 7:00 - Vespers

Tuesday, February 9
- 7:30 - Lady Scots' basketball game
- 9:30 - speakeasy in Davis lobbby with Dr. Dent

Wednesday, February 10
- 10:30 - Mid-Week Worship
- 7:30 - J-V Basketball game

Time Is Of The Essence

Once again it is time to write the editorial, and this week's topic is procrastination. Boy, I haven't seen the Addam'sFamily since I was a kid! Oh my, Thing is meeting Lady Fingers-how touching. A poptart would go perfectly right now. OK, I suppose I'm ready. Now where was I? Oh yes, about to write the editorial.

When practiced, procrastination can become quite an art, but . . . . . Oh no! I just spilled everything all over the floor! This desk is a mess. I've put off cleaning it far too long. Well there's no time like the present I guess I should do some laundry while I'm at it, and then get to the desk.

That's better, now I can really get some work done.

.....quite an art, but....hmmm... "Come in! Hi, Jen. You want to go to Kroger? Ok. No that's alright. I can finish this when we get back. I'll think about it while we're there."

"Back home and back to work. Are you looking at the magazine I just bought? anything good?"..... quite an art, but in the long run not too much is .... "What was that? Can you imagine wearing something like that?! Have you done any of your homework yet? neither have I, and I've got so much reading to do. Looks like it'll be a late night, or maybe I can do it between classes.

Oh, there's not enough time before dinner to get anything constructive done. I may as well look at that with you.

Time for dinner. Let's Go.

Letters

In the Highland Echo's last issue a student showed concern for his fellow students dealing with Dean Strickland's memorandum. Apparently there are a few students who "are alarmed by an implied attitude of harshness from municipal authorities." This shows a lack of communication between the Administration of the college and its students.

In the past, the Maryville Community has viewed Maryville College students through tinted glasses. MC students who have been caught shoplifting have received little or no penalty for their crime. A MC student who was caught was generally released on grounds that the Dean of Student Affairs would consult with the student.

The new "harshness" is merely the removal of the communities tinted glasses. Dean Strickland was merely trying to inform students that they will be treated as members of the community and not as privileged individuals because they go to Maryville College. This means that Maryville College students will be given no more free rides, but rather will be treated with the same "harshness" non-college people receive.

As for "contrasting lifestyles", I do not know of any lifestyle which tolerates theives.

This new policty is not meant to throw a dark cloud over the Maryville College Community. It is, however, meant to inform those few who do stoop to theivery that the Maryville Community will no longer tolerate them and neither should we!

If MC students feel that "vague diplomacy" has been employed, one of the best ways to clear it up is to visit the Dean of Student Affairs office in Fayerweather Hall, next to the Post Office, and ask a few questions.

JMH

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager. . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors. . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Artist. . . . . Walt Montgomery

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Benefits To Be Cut Back

With thousands of students facing a May 1 deadline for enrolling in college or losing their eligibility for Social Security education benefits, some high-school seniors are trying to get an early start on their college careers this spring.

Although such moves to beat the May 1 cutoff of benefits - and special efforts by colleges and universities to accommodate such students - have been seen only in scattered regions thus far, the numbers are expected to grow as high-school seniors and their families learn of the impending elimination of a $2.3 billion program by the Social Security Administration.

In its budget-cutting campaign last summer, Congress voted to phase out the Social Security student-benefit program, which aids students if one of their parents is dead, disabled, or retired. In 1981 the program provided benefits averaging $3,000 a year to about 700,000 students, according to the Social Security Administration.

Under the phase-out plan approved by Congress, students who have not enrolled full time at an institution of higher education by May 1 will no longer be eligible to draw benefits.

Most beneficiaries enrolled by May 1 will be able to continue receiving payments, but their benefits will be gradually reduced under provisions designed toend the program by 1985.

The cuts received little public attention at the time Congress approved its massive package of budget reduction. In recent weeks, educators and legislators have tried to spread the word of the impending cutoff to high-school officials and students, while criticizing the Social Security Administration for failing to do so.

Anxiety Prompts Inquiries

In some areas where the word has been spread, college officials have received inquiries from anxious parents and students hoping to avoid the May 1 cutoff by enrolling in college for the winter or spring term.

Such students have few options, officials say. Some colleges have already begun the second semester, and many students learned of the impending changes too late to accelerate their programs in time to enroll this spring.

Some institutions, however, have more flexible academic calendars, with well established programs for high-school students who graduate in January or provisions for the dual enrollment of students who are expected to complete the requirements for a school diploma.

The Social Security Administration has recently come under fire from school officials and education groups, including the American Association of State Colleges and Universities, for failing to notify students of the impending cutbacks or the elimination of eligibility for the benefits.

John Trollinger, a spokesman for the Social Security Administration, said pamphlets explaining the changes in student-benefit guidelines had been available in local Social Security offices since last fall, and that students now receiving benefits would be notified in late February or early March of the scheduled reductions in their benefits over the next three years.

The Social Security Administration plans to send no direct notice to school seniors about the elimination of benefits for those not enrolled in college by May 1. Instead, it will continue its past practice of sending notices to such students five months before their eighteenth birthdays, asking them to report their college plans. After those forms are returned, Mr. Trolinger said, students will be told of the cutoff of student benefits by local Social Security offices.

Warning from Congressmen

Under that procedure, he said, only students whose eighteenth birthdays fall before July, 1982, have been sent the forms so far.

Despite those efforts by a few members of Congress to alert students to the change many educators fear that students will learn of the new Social Security restriction too late to change their academic plans to avoid the cutofff, or, if they are already drawing benefits, to find other sources of aid to compensate for the reduced aid they will receive as the program is phased out.

Dallas Martin, executive director of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, said students who are not aware of the new Social Security guidelines might overstate the amount they expect to receive in such benefits when they apply for other sources of aid - which might mean they would receive less money than they are entitled to from other loan and grant programs.

One Social Security official emphasized that to qualify for benefits high-school seniors seeking admission to college before May 1 must be enrolled full-time according to the regular standards set by the institution for students. If an institution sets special standards of full-time attendance for students affected by the Social Security changes, the official said, "we won't recognize those standards."

Condensed from the Chronicle of Higher Education.

Students work for tuition money.

Have A Fantasy

On the evening of February 13 fantasies will be lived out in the Margaret Ware Dining Room of Maryville College. The greatest figures of history and fiction will gather for an evening of festivities.

The event at which these fantasies will come true is the February Fantasy Costume Ball which is sponsored by the Student Programming Committee. The fantasy will include a 13-piece dance band called the Cavaliers, hor d'ourves of every type imaginable, and two labeled bars with professional bartenders.

A labeled bar is a bar that provides mixers, setups, and glasses. The customer brings his own wine or liquor. The bottles brought to the event will be labeled with an identifying number. The person who brings the bottle will be given the same number so that he will be able to get his drinks prepared with his own liquor at the bar. Non-alcoholic beverages will also be provided.

A mask is all that is required for entry into the fantasy. However, more elaborate costuming will be available through the Playhouse Association and one's own creativity.

Tickets for the fantasy will be available beginning Tuesday, February 8 for $5.00 each. They will be sold in Pearsons during meals and Fayerweather during break.

WE'RE LOOKING FOR MARYVILLE COLLEGE'S FAVORITE SWEETHEARTS

Send the names of your candidates to Box 2820.

The winning Couple will be featured in next week's Valentine Issue.

Girl _____

Guy _____

Geno's PIZZA

Buffet Special

$2.89 with coupon

Good thru Feb. 11

PREPARE FOR

MCAT · LSAT · GMAT

SAT · DAT · GRE · CPA

Our 43rd Year

- Permanent Centers open days, evenings and weekends.
- Low hourly cost. Dedicated full-time staff.
- Complete TEST-n-TAPE™ facilities for review of class lessons and supplementary materials.
- Small classes taught by skilled instructors.
- Opportunity to make up missed lessons.
- Voluminous home-study materials constantly updated by researchers expert in their field.
- Opportunity to transfer to and continue study at any of our over 85 centers.

OTHER COURSES AVAILABLE

GRE PSYCH & BIO · MAT · PCAT · OCAT · VAT · TOEFL

MSKP · NMB · VQE · ECFMG · FLEX · NDB · NLE

Stanley H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER

TEST PREPARATION SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938

Call Days, Eves & Weekends

Call Collect: 584-0278

6421 Deane Hill Dr.

Knoxville, TN

For Information About Other Centers Outside NY State

CALL TOLL FREE: 800-223-1782

Trina Coggins snatches the ball in an attempt to lead the Lady Scots to victory.

Ladies Fought Hard

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots were defeated in three tough games this past week. On Wednesday they were defeated by the Lady Knights of Morristown College, a score of 75-69. The Lady Scots fought back within two, but lost it in the final seconds. Brenda Babb led the scoring for the Lady Scots with 24 points.

On Friday night before a home crowd, the Lady Scots lost to Georgetown College, a tough Division II opponent. Despite the Lady Scots' effort in the first half they fell to defeat by a score of 82-59. Once again, Brenda Babb led the Scots scoring with 20 points.

On Saturday afternoon, the Lady Scots travelled to Athens Tenn to play Tennessee Wesleyen College.

The Lady Scots jumped out to an early 11-2 lead, but the Lady Bulldogs came back and led 36-34 at halftime. Candy Nutter led the scoring with 24 points. Brenda Babb also chipped in 18 points.

On Thursday, they will travel to Chattanooga to play Covenant College. They will be back in action here at Maryville on Saturday when they play Fisk University.

Scots Drop In ODAC Record

By Steve Arnold

The Scots started the week off by, according to Coach Lambert," playing their best 20 minutes of basketball", as they rolled up a big lead, held off a late Wasps surge, and ran their ODAC record to 4-1 by defeating Emory and Henry 78-73. The Scots, who scored almost at will in the first half, led by as many as 18 points, and with 14:30 left in the first half took the lead for good. The Scots, coming close to making the game a first half blow out, found themselves up by 13 points; 46-33 at the intermission.

The second half started the same as the first had ended, as during the first seven minutes, the Scots lead never dropped below 12 points. As the six minute mark rolled around, Emory and Henry had pulled to 64-57 with six unanswered points. The three minute mark had the Scots leading by only three points, but that was as close as Emory and Henry could get. A fast break, led by Greg Gheen, resulted in a three point play for the Scots and a 75-69 lead with 34 seconds left.

Weston added a little icing to the cake with two freethrows and a Scot 77-71 lead. Bobby Rimmer led all scorers with 25 points. Gheen added 19 points and 13 rebounds, and according to Lambert, "he played one of his better inside games and rebounded exceptionally well." Lambert also stated, "Rimmer demonstrated the leadership qualities that he has to in order for us to win." Overall Lambert said, "the victory was a tremendous team effort."

The Scots took their 4-1 record off for the weekend for three ODAC games and ended up returning Tuesday morning with a record of 4-4. Yes, the Scots came up short all weekend. The Scots, in losing this weekend dropped to fourth place in the ODAC, but according to Coach, "we played good ball all weekend. We led in all games going down to the wire, but due to inexperience, lack of depth, and costly injuries, I feel like these all contributed to the outcomes." In other words according to Lambert, "a disasterous weekend."

One big key was injuries. The Scots weekend could be compared to Bobby Unser driving in the Indy 500 with only two tires. Greg Gheen and Tyrone Williams, both on crutches, still played but only at 75%. Rimmer hurt an ankle Friday and was not at full speed the rest of the trip. "We had to limit our defense, play zone, not much pressing, and no man to man to help us adjust to the injuries," stated Coach. "I was proud of the boys though." stated the Coach. "We have proven we can play with any ODAC team and on any given night could easily beat anyone of them."

Coffeehouse cont. from page 1

story of "They're Moving Father's Grave to Build a Sewer." Following, was an hilarious enactment of "Paradise by the Dashboard Light" by the Leftover Meatloaf: Brad Goar, Jackie Dye. Bonnie Dobson, and Joanne Ricci.

Jeff Hayes, accompanied by Bryan McFarland sang "Forever Autumn" and then accompanied by Mark Beyer on piano "Only the Good Die Young." Claire Roberts and Jean Plant kept the signing going with "Out There On My Own", Lisa VanDivort, accompanied by Amy Grubbs, performed "Let Me Be There" and "He's the Hand on My Shoulder". Linda Trostle with Debbie Hall on guitar and Bill Bender on piano sang "House at Pooh Corner." Debbie Hall then played and sang "Stay With Me". Bryan McFarland and Jina Radozycki wrapped up the showcase by singing and signing "She's A Doll."

A special thank-you needs to be expressed to Tommy Brown, Matt Cragle, Debbie Hall, Page Harris, Cahty Angell, and Beth Neal.

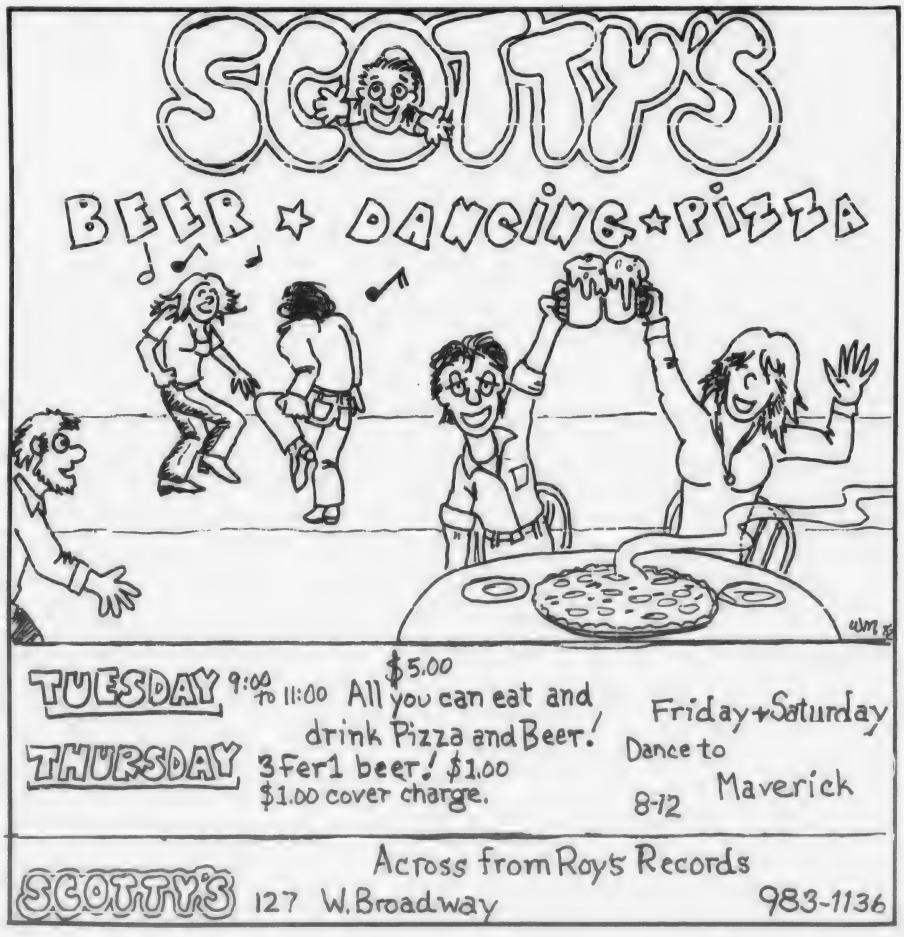
Family Fun Center

5 tokens with coupon
Buy 5 tokens for $1.00 get 5 free

Latest video games

pool, pinball, and video games

Next to Geno's



STUDENT ASSISTANT IN MUSIC NEEDED

New Providence Presbyterian Church is seeking a part time college student assistant in music.

Renumeration on a scholarship basis

Call church office 983-0182, or contact Steve Ford Box 2148

Application Deadline is Feb. 8.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 no. 14 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, February 11, 1982

Special Valentine's Issue

"Extra, Extra, I'm In Love"

By Nancy Rojas

Lately I've noticed something strange occurring and I was wondering if anyone else had noticed. It deals with the subject of "boy beats girl." Yes, I said "beats", not "meets". It's not strange that people wrestle and box, some even make a profession out of it, but the odd element in this form of boxing is the opponents are dating. (I don't think Ali ever asked Frazier to take a walk in the moonlight with him.) It's not a form of brutality; It's simply a different way to display affection. I witnessed an example of this the other night when my rommmate and her friend were going a couple of rounds. There were no bells, no ropes, and no rules. It goes without saying who won.

What was once thought of as horseplay has turned itself into love bird play. On my way to dinner one evening I saw a couple walking about ten paces ahead of me. He was affectionately bouncing a basketball on her head.

How long has this form of affection been going on? Remember back in grade school when Johnny used to pull Judy's pigtails until she'd cry and cry? (My mom used to tell me that meant he likes her.) Drift farther back into the days of Neanderthal man. One may envision a 220 lb. hairy creature of a man lugging a screaming woman off into his cave. I saw the same thing happen to a friend of mine. Without notice she was grabbed by the britches and dragged screaming out of the dorm by a similar creature. What happend to the days when the man rode up on a white horse and offered to whisk the maiden off to his castle in the sky? The last time I was asked to go anywhere, he asked if I'd take him to McDonalds in my car!

Valentine's Day is approaching, and to be truthful I can't wait. If there are more ways of expressing love and affection other than candy and flowers, and if Valentine's Day is the day when affection is expressed the most, I say, "Put up your dukes, guys, we're ready."

On the inside

MC's Favorite Sweethearts ..... Pages 4 & 5

February Meetings. Page 3

ACC Meeting .... Page 3

Fantasy Costume Ball ..... Page 3

Circle K..... Page 3

Midsummer Night's Dream ..... Page 6

Life Retreat ..... Page 6

Vandalism ..... Page 6

Fate of Love..... Page 7

Crossword Puzzle . Page 7

Booklist..... Page 7

SNEA..... Page 7

What's Going On?

Saturday, February 13

9:00 - February Fantasy Costume Ball in Pearsons Hall. Labeled Bar. Mask Required. Tickets $5.00

Sunday, February 14

6:15 - Vespers in FAC Lounge. Topic is Love

Tuesday, February 16

8:15 - Frank Wiens, pianist in the Music Hall

Wednesday, February 17

10:30 - Mid-Week Worship in the CCM.

Snack Bar will be open Friday, Feb. 19 and Feb. 26 until 10:00 p.m.

Peace To Be Pursued

By Jeff Hayes

Reflecting the current world-wide protest against nuclear weapons and armed aggression, February Meetings this year is entitled " In Pursuit of Peace." according to February Meetings student chairman Kim Morris. The theme is peacemaking" ". . . in the global community, the local community, and the self."

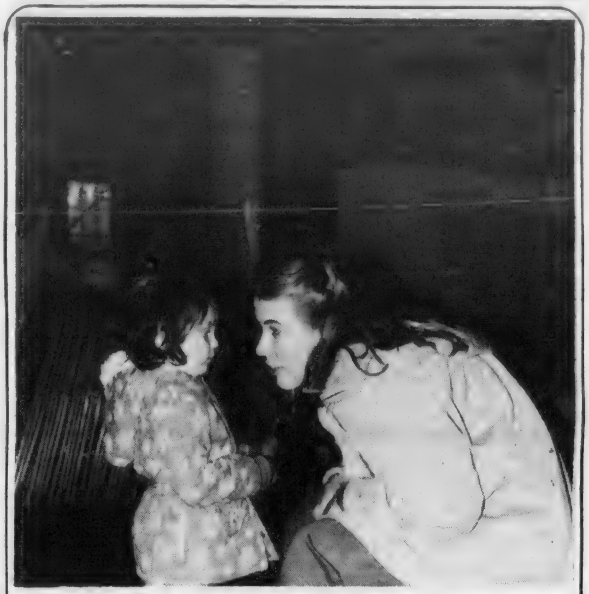
February Meetings will open Saturday, February 20 in the FAC Music Hall with the films Dr. Strangelove and On the Beach. During the meetings participants will also see Eight Minutes to Midnight and War Without Winners. All of these films deal with nuclear war.

Dr. Richard Watts, coordinator of the Swords into Plowhsares Project of the United Presbyterian Church in the Presbytery of the Western Reserve in Cleveland, Ohio, will give the opening worship on Sunday, Feb. 21 in the FAC Music Hall. His sermon is entitled "Can We Avoid Nuclear War?"

In his work with Swords into Plowhsares, Dr. Watts has preached, taught, and led workshops on the arms race and Christian responsibility throughout the country. He is a member of the National Peacemaking Advisory Committee of the United Presbyterian Church

On Monday, it is Reverand John Wright, Presbyterian Campus Minister at UT Knoxville, and the Peanuts Drama Troupe of UT will give a program called "Alienation and Peace."

Dr. Charles H. Reynolds, professor and head of Religious Studies at UT, will lead biblical seminars on peacemaking on Tuesday and Wednesday in the Center for Campus Ministry.



In Anderson 302 on Tuesday at 1:00 pm, Rev. Carl Liggin, Pastor of AME Zion Church in Aloca, will lead a seminar entiteld "Peacemaking in the Black Community." Simultaneously in Anderson 304, Rabbi Mark Greenspan , Rabbi at Heska Amuna Congregation in Knoxville will lead a seminar entitled "Peacemaking in its Jewish Tradition."

Jean Jolly, director of the city of Knoxville Office for the Handicapped Elderly, will lead a seminar called "Pursuing Peace in the Handicapped Community" on Tuesday in Anderson 304 at 3:45 pm. On Wednesday, for CIV in the FAC Music Hall, Dr. Beverly Harrison will speak on "Peace and the Violent Society: Why Gender Justice Matters to us All." Dr. Harrison is from Union Theological Seminary in New York

February Meetings will close at 7:00 pm Wednesday with a closing worship service led by Dr. David Cartlidge, MC's professor of Religion and Philosophy Department. His topic will be "Ecumenical Call to Commitment."

Special entertainment during the Meetings will be provided by Guy and Candi Carawan on Monday night at 7:00 pm. The Carawans are folk musicians who have performed concerts and festivals in the U.S. and abroad They have authored five books and eight documents and have consistantly been in the center of music movements all over the South trying to help people understand one another.

Over the past fifteen years, Guy Carawanhas appeared at several hundred colleges, concert halls, and major folk festivals in this country. He plays several instruments and is an excellent hammer dulcimer player He is also a fine singer of folk and contemporary songs.

Susan Jennings talks with her "little sister" at the party sponsored by Circle K.

Circle K threw a party Saturday for ten of their little brothers and sisters. Before the party the children were treated to a trip to the fire station after which they were brought here for the party in the Alumni Gym.

Fantasy Ball To Mask Maryville

By Tommy Brown

For the past week or so there have been posters and announcements in the cafeteria advertising the February Costume Ball this Saturday. However, sometimes it gets to the point where posters and announcements all look and sound the same Therefore this artical will try to spell out exactly what is involved in the fantasy.

Some people question why they should pay $5.00 for a Maryville College dance. This is no ordinary Pearson's dance. There will be a 13-piece orchestra which will provide dance music of all styles. The sound and styles they will provide will be similar to that of the Tonight Show Band. Another item that makes this event more than ordinary is the two labeled bars. the term "labeled bar" means that it is not a "cash bar" like the ones in Knoxville. You bring your own wines, beer, rum, whiskey, etc., and it is labeled at the door. You are also given an identifying ticket so that you can have your drink mixed from your bottle. The type of food that will be there will also be more than ordinary. Hor'dourves, fondues and other party foods will be provided. All non-alcoholic beverages will also be provided.

Concerning the costumes themselves, a mask is all that is required, but more elaborate costumes are available at the theater for a slight rental fee and a deposit which will be given back.

Make sure that you do not miss this extraordinary event. Get your ticket today or at the door. Remember that you would spend a whole lot more money for a similar evening in Knoxville.

ACC Action

By Mike Hester

A new major and two new minors were approved by the All-College Council at the February 2 meeting.

Academic Dean Al Perkins introduced the proposed major in management and minors in management and accounting.

The major in management is created from a cross -country need for management training. The major is made up of courses already available at Maryville College. It will become available in the 1982-83 academic year.

The two minors are created for those students wishing to gain some knowledge in either field. The minor in Accounting calls for the introduction of two new courses: intermediate accounting I and II to be taught on the 300 level. Both minors are available to students from any major and will become available in the 1982-83 academic year.

EDITORIAL Valentines Are For Best Friends Too

"I shot an arrow into the air and where it landed I know not where." Thus goes Cupid's game on Valentine's Day. With such invisible projectiles filling the air, there can't help but be an aura of stirred up emotions ranging from excited anticipation to dread.

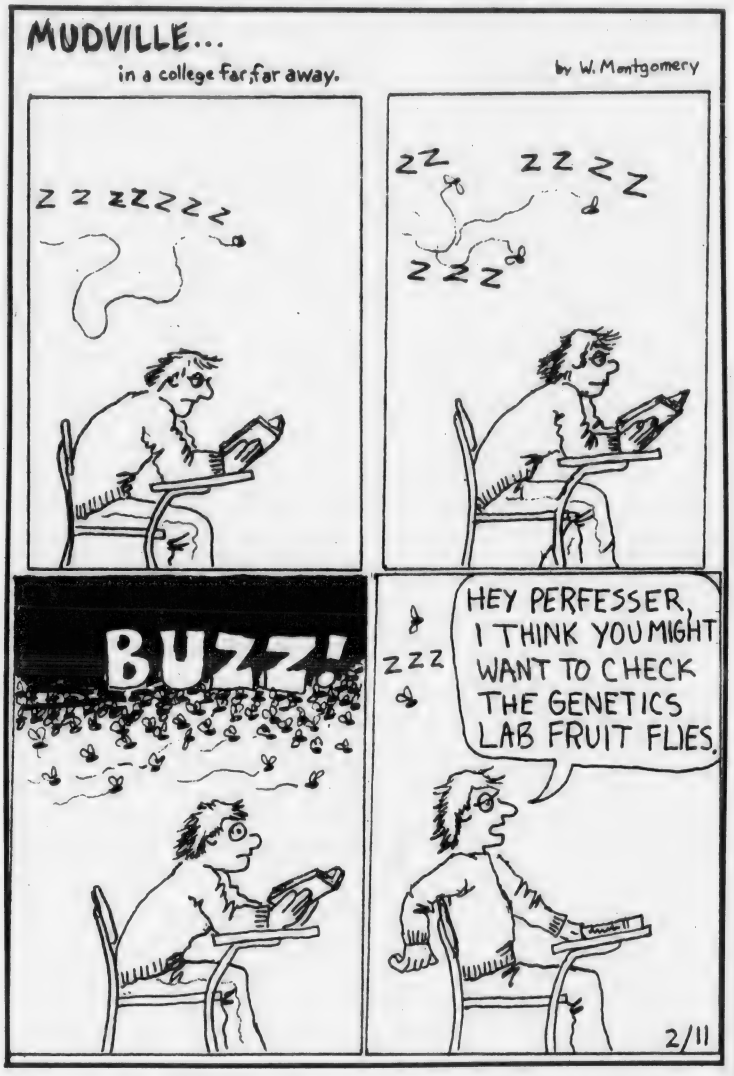
For many, the words Valentine's Day still conjurs up images of elementary school, when, with scissors and paste at the ready, they waited for the red and pink construction paper followed by a white doily to make its way down the row of chattering classmates. These things were then to take the form of whatever the imagination held - as long as this creation was made entirely of hearts. Then a few trips to the teacher's desk for new paper (lopsided hearts just wouldn't do), three runs to the sink to wash the crusting paste off sticky hands so the scissors wouldn't adhere to immovable fingers, and a lot of intense concentration later, the masterpiece emerged from the pile of debris and was proudly displayed by a small, beaming artist.

The next day time seemed to drag on unbearably until the contents of those carefully decorated bags taped to the sides of the desks could be discovered.

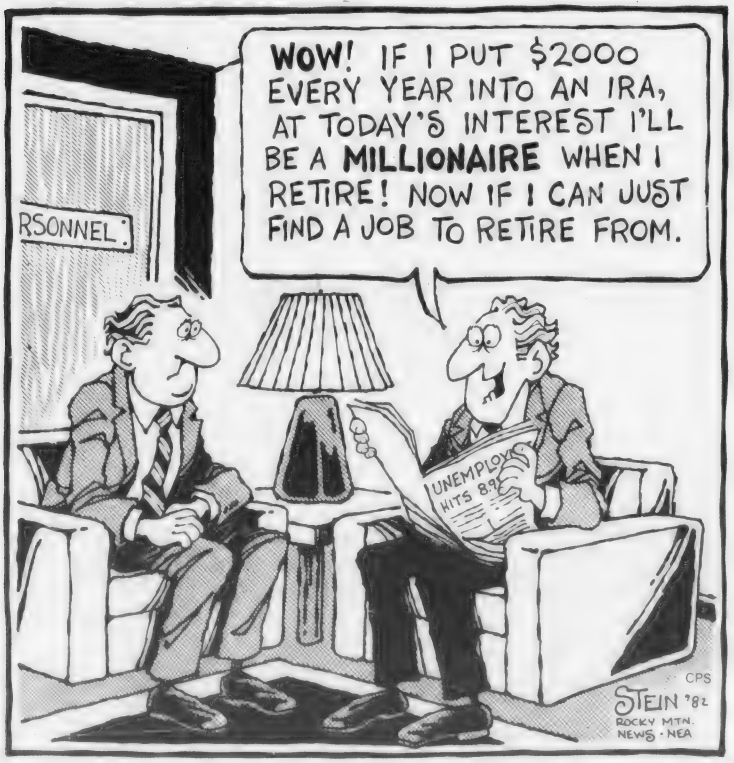
Would there be a card that would somehow show a little more care than the usual duck saying, "Knock, Knock."

"Who's there?"

"Wanda."



"Wanda who?"



"Wanda be my Valentine?" Perhaps just one? or what if - dread! - there was one of those and it was from the ikcy kid that sat in the back?!

All of this speculation was over pretty soon, though, and as usual most of the cards were from best friends - but that was OK.

In high school valentines took the shape of carnations. All during second period, classes were disrupted with flower bearers. Finally your name was called. Who would it be from?! Could it be the cutie in English class? Or, oh no, not that jerk of a lab partner! All of this speculation was over pretty soon, and, of course you couldn't rival those people toting a dozen carnations and a half dozen roses, and maybe most of yours were from best friends, but that was OK.

In college the colored paper bag is transformed into a post office box and the carnations, well they're still the same, and there's a whole campus full of people upon whom Cupid's arrow may land. Today's visit to the post office is no ordinary trip for there you see it through the little window - an envelope! Who is it from? Can it be that person at the party last week? Or-it better not be!- that creep who won't leave me alone. All of that speculation is over pretty soon, and so maybe it is from a best friend, but that's OK.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographers . . . . . Nancy Rojas, Barbara Hogan

Artists . . . . . Barbara Hogan, Walt Montgomery

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

The Awful Fate Of Love

By Joe Wynne

(A short biology lecture given before Valentine's Day)

"We're going to have a short lecture today, class, so listen up. As you know, Sunday is Valentine's Day - a day that usually makes everyone feel really nice inside. The story goes that St. Valentine was thrown into a Roman Prison where he fell in love with the jailer's blind daughter. On the day he was beheaded, he sent his love a farewell letter signed "From your Valentine", and this saying has remained for centuries.

"This story illustrates a very important point that pervades all love on earth. When you look at the facts it is the male who always gets the bad end of the deal.

"Take for instance, the Chinese praying mantis. When a female catches the eye of a male, he makes his move only to have his head bitten off by his betrothed. St. Valentine wasn't the only one to lose his head over a woman."

"Female virgin flies reject males who don't "blow in their ears" by creating a draft using their wings. Honeybee males think they have really made it when they get to mate with the queen. Unfortunately, they die immediately afterwards.

"Male spiders may be mistaken for prey when they go to court their woman, so some pitch out "Mating threds" and keep playing out the line while she runs on it. This continues until the female is too tired to attack, and it is safe to tie the knot."

"The most pitiful, however, is the bower bird. He spends days building a mating station out of twigs, cloth, stones, glass, flowers, and maybe even car keys. These structures may reach nine feet tall and be painted with plant juices. If this weren't enough to attract a female, he even has a song and dance routine. When a female finally arrives, it will only be for a "one night stand".

"So, class, scientifically speaking love isn't all its cracked up to be, especially for us guys. That is why we should have a "no love" society and use artificial insemination only. I'm going to end the lecture now so that I will have time to get to the florist and back during lunch. Test Tuesday. Dismissed."

JANUARY

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. The Simple Solution to Rubik's Cube, by James G. Nourse. (Bantam, $1.95) Puzzle solver.
2. Garfield Bigger Than Life, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Third book on the famous cartoon cat.
3. The French Lieutenant's Woman, by John Fowles. (Signet, $3.50) A novel of Victorian sensuality.
4. 101 Uses for a Dead Cat, by Simon Bond. (Clarkson N. Potter, $2.95) Cartoon humor.
5. Garfield Gains Weight, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Second book on the famous cartoon cat.
6. Garfield At Large, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Still more of the famous cartoon cat.
7. You Can Do the Cube, by Patrick Bossert. (Penguin, $1.95) 13-year-old schoolboy shows you how.
8. Shadowland, by Peter Straub. (Berkley, $3.50) A tale of horror from the author of "Ghost Story."
9. Mastering Rubik's Cube, by Don Taylor. (Holt, $1.95) Puzzle solver.
10. Congo, by Michael Crichton. (Avon, $2.95) Man and ape in Africa: fiction.

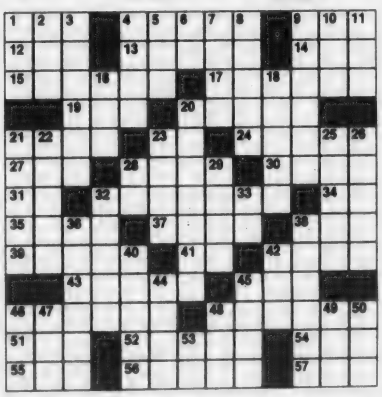
Compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education from information supplied by college stores throughout the country. January 13, 1982

New & Recommended

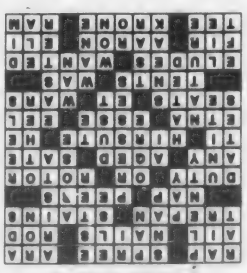
The Life & Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby, by Charles Dickens. (Signet, $4.50) A new edition of the Dickens classic.

The Company of Women, by Mary Gordon. (Ballantine, $2.95) A new novel by the author of "Final Payments."

Wealth & Poverty, by George Gilder. (Bantam, $3.95) The controversial bestseller that's shaping American economic policy.



ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS/NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES



CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Knock
4 Carousal
9 Macaw
12 Be ill
13 Brads
14 Land measure
15 Surgical saw
17 Dyes
19 Short sleep
20 Equals
21 Obligation
23 Conjunction
24 Motor part
27 Some
28 Matured
29 Surfeit
31 Scale note
32 Hairy
34 Pronoun
35 Sicilian volcano
37 Actual being
38 Lamprey
39 Chairs
41 Latin conjunction
42 Armed conflicts
43 Wigwams
45 Existed
46 Evades
48 Needed
51 Evergreen
52 Home-run king
54 Man's name
55 Golf mound
56 Danish coin
57 Batter

DOWN
1 Rodent
2 Ventilate
3 Abundance
4 Ginger —
5 Shallow vessel
6 State: Abbr.
7 Otherwise
8 Chemical compound
9 Awn
10 Man's nickname
11 Paid notices
16 Remuneration
18 Got up
20 Irons
21 Appointments
22 Combine
23 Monster
25 Different
26 Spools
28 Diphthong
29 Powder
32 Detested
33 Tellurium symbol
36 Essence
38 — egg
40 Slink
42 Pale
44 Despot
45 Diminish
46 Newt
47 Falsehood
48 Triumphed
49 Guido's high note
50 Obscure
53 Artificial language

Puzzle Answer

Geno's PIZZA
Steak Sandwich and French Fries - $1.99
Buffet - Soup, Salad, Pizza and Spaghetti
From 11 am - 2 pm - $2.99
From 5 pm - 8 pm - $3.99

SNEA aids students

By Mike Weiss

The MC chapter of the Student National Education Association (SNEA) will hold its next meeting on Tuesday, February 23 at 7:00 p.m. in Thaw 210. The topic for discussion will be "Public Laws Affecting Teachers." The featured guest speaker will be Dr. Dewey Stoller of the University of Tennessee.

SNEA will also meet on March 9, same time and location. MC mathematics instructor Barbara Handler will present her soon-to-be completed dissertation "Study to Reduce Anxiety and Increase Competence in Math." The data for Professor Handler's study came from this year's freshmen.

The MC chapter is actively involved in a recruiting drive for all students interested in an Education Major or Teacher Certification. SNEA also offers a means for such students to keep up on issues in education, and current trends in the field. It also provides necessary insurance coverage for student teachers.

Last term MC chapter officers Janet Helwig, Mary Jane Babich, Bill Warren and Linda McCall attended a workshop at UT to discuss educational issues and chapter improvement. SNEA Professional Day this spring is presently in the planning stages, and will be the groups's major event of the year.

All interested students should contact the club officers for membership information and are urged to attend the upcoming meetings.

PREPARE FOR
MCAT • LSAT • GMAT
SAT • DAT • GRE • CPA
Our 43rd Year

- Permanent Centers open days, evenings and weekends.
- Low hourly cost. Dedicated full-time staff.
- Complete TEST-n-TAPE™ facilities for review of class lessons and supplementary materials.
- Small classes taught by skilled instructors.
- Opportunity to make up missed lessons.
- Voluminous home-study materials constantly updated by researchers expert in their field.
- Opportunity to transfer to and continue study at any of our over 85 centers.

OTHER COURSES AVAILABLE
GRE PSYCH & BIO • MAT • PCAT • OCAT • VAT • TOEFL
MSKP • NMB • VQE • ECFMG • FLEX • NDB • NLE

Stanley H. KAPLAN
EDUCATIONAL CENTER
TEST PREPARATION
SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938

Call Collect: 584-0278
6421 Deane Hill Dr.
Knoxville, TN
For Information About Other Centers Outside NY State
CALL TOLL FREE: 800-223-1782

VANDALISM AGAIN!!

Joel Smith, born in 1979 died February 5, 1982. Joel was an upstanding figure in the Fine Arts Center at Maryville College. He moved to the Post Office in the Winter of 1982. He was destroyed by vandals between 6:00 and 6:45 Friday evening.

Orient Yourself With The East This Week

"Chinese and Americans in the 1980's" is the theme for the 1982 China Festival to be held Feb. 13-20 at Maryville College and in Knoxville.

The week-long event is sponsored by Maryville College, the University of Tennessee-Knoxville and the U.S.- China Peoples' Friendship Association. Programs will take place on both college campuses as well as at various sites in Knoxville.

Included in the program offerings are exhibits and lectures on Chinese art, films concerning life in China and several speeches on topics such as modern education in the People's Republic of China.

Two notable experts on Chinese life will speak during the festival. Dr. Francis Hsu will speak on Chinese education and will talk about the fundamental differences between the Chinese and American cultures. Dr. Michael Sullivan will examine Chinese art and archaeology, focusing on contemporary art.

Dr. Hsu is a professor of anthropology at the University of San Francisco. A former president of the American Anthrolpological Association, he was born 1909 in China and was educated there and in England. He has completed extensive research on China and other Eastern cultures and has written several books and articles concerning the Orient. The University of Tennessee Press will publish a collection of his essays in 1982.

Dr. Hsu will speak on "Passage to Differences" in room 109 of the UT Art and Architecture Building on Feb. 13 at 2:30 p.m. He will examine Chinese education in a lecture on Feb. 16 at 9:20 am in the Maryville College Music Hall. This speech will be a part of MC's Community Issues and Values series.

Dr. Sullivan has lived for six years in China and is now a professor of Chinese art at Stanford University. An expert on Eastern art, his book, "The Arts of China" is the only complete survey of Chinese art to take into account the exciting new discoveries made during the Cultural Revolution in the People's Republic of China. His book "Chinese Art in the Twentieth Century" is the only detailed survey of modern art in East Asia.

Dr. Sullivan will speak on "Chinese Art Since 1976: A New Beginning?" at Maryville College on Feb. 19 at 2:30 p.m. He will discuss "Concepts of Space in Chinese Art" in a long breakfast meeting at 9 a.m. on Feb. 20 at the Knoxville Sheraton Campus Inn.

As background to the speakers, China Festival will feature three exhibits in the area: "The Chinese of America 1785-1980," a photo exhibit of the Chinese-American experience displayed at UT's McClung Museum; "The Flavor of Chinese Art," an art exhibit displayed in the Maryville College Library; and "East Tennessee Collects Oriental Art," a collection of private pieces displayed in Knoxville's Dulin Art Gallery.

On Feb. 20, a subscription Chinese banquet will be held at the Golden Dragon Restaurant in west Knoxville. Dinner will begin at 6:30 p.m.

With the exception of the dinner banquet, all programs during China Festival are free and open to the public. For more information concerning programs and the banquet, contact: Dr. Young-bae Kim, Maryville College, at 546-6912 or 982-6412, ext. 261; Dr. Eric Gangloff, UT, at 974-5406; or Mary Evans, U.S. China Peoples' Friendship Association, at 573-6959.

Have A Midsummer Night's Dream In Winter

By Lisa Swisher

The Maryville College Playhouse has a cure for the winter doldrums. The Maryville College actors are deep into midsummer as they rehearse William Shakespear's A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM scheduled to appear at the college theatre February 19, 20, 24-27.

A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM, one of Shakespeare's most beloved comedies, inspired the music of Felix Mendelssohn which will also be used in this production. The play is a series of comic romances involving four different couples.

Set in Athens and a surrounding wood enchanted with moonbeams and faires, the plot concerns the approaching marriage of Theseus, Duke of Athens, and Hipploya, Queen of the Amazons. Yet not all Athenians are stirred to merriment on the eve of the marriage festivities. Lysander and Demetrius both love Hermia; she favors Lysander, but Hermia's father insists that she marry Demetrius or suffer the alternative of death, or life in a nunnery. To escape the Athenian law, Lysander and Hermia flee to the woods: where not all is harmonious Oberon and Titania, king and queen of the fairies, quarrel as they prepare for the royal wedding; a group of Athenian craftsmen rehearse a crude play to be presented in honor of the wedding couple; the jilted Demetrius, who is loved and followed by Helena, pursues the runaway lovers.

Once inside the moonlit woods the dreamlike world of fairytales begins. A love potion sprinkled into the eyes of the sleeping lovers and Queen Titania by the impish hobgoblin Puck at that command of King Oberon creates a circus-like atmosphere. The eyes of love have no reason as Titania falls in love with an ass and the two male lovers forsake Hermia for Helena. Yet, at Oberon's command the lovers are caused to sleep, and the enchantment is removed from Lysander's eyes. As the dawn approaches Oberon removes the spell from Titania's eyes and the lovers awaken from their sleep by the approaching train of the wedding couple. The play ends with the two couples, Lysander and Hermia, and Demetrius and Helena, reunited and invited to view the wedding play.

Encounter Life

By Leslie Boand

ENCUENTRO . . . a Spanish noun meaning "meeting, collision, or discovery." Its Portuguese equivalent is encontro which adds the images of "shock" and "impact". The English equivalent-encounter.

The Blount County Ecumenical Action Council is sponsoring a Spiritual Life Retreat which is aimed at finding the relationship of people with their God. It will be led by Dow and Marjorie Kirkpatrick along with Tricia and Phil Sidel - who have served in Latin America. The retreat promises to be a mind and heart-filling experience with the retreaters getting a new perspective on God, themselves, and others.

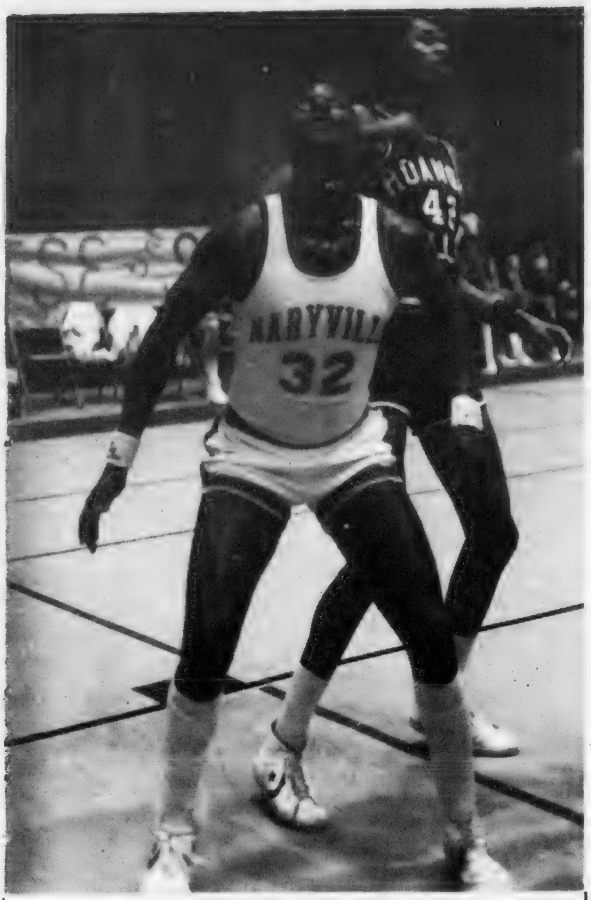
The retreat session will be held at Broadway United Methodist Church March 5-7. Times for the session are:

Friday 7:30 - 10:00 p.m.
Saturday 9:30 am-4:30pm
Sunday 12:15pm-3:30 pm

If you would like to come or want more information contact Dr. Bob Ramger, Marnie Evans, or Lesley Boand before February 23rd.

MC'S FAVORITE

SLUSHY



&

SWEETHEARTS

CAPOTE

for me there's romance
without music or dance,
or long moonlight walks,
or candlelight talks ...
for me there's romance
in each beautiful chance to be anywhere you are.

Jason Blake

Tyrone Matthews catches glimpse of cupid during Scots g... against Roanoke.

Maroons Speed Past Scots

By Steve Arnold

How would you expect a team to react after coming off three straight losses and then find themselves facing the no. 7 team in Division III? If you think they might fold or hang it up, don't come to see the MC Scots. If you're one to watch a team give it their best shot, then we have a place for you. That place is the Maryville College gymnasium, home of the fighting Scots. The Scots, entertaining Roanoke last Thursday, dropped an 85-70 decision to the highly talented Maroons The score looks as if Roanoke ran away with the game ,which they did, but it wasn't until there were only 13 minutes to go in the game. The game had plenty of lead changes throughout the first half as the Scots held close ground and trailed 31-27 at intermission. The Scots jumped off quickly in the second half scoring three straight for a 33-31 lead.

With 13 minutes left, Roanoke, holding a 47-43 lead scored 17 points to MC's 4 over the next four mintues to put the game out of reach for the Scots.

Roanoke, switching to man-to-man, cut off a lot of the Scots offense. The Maroons didn't hurt matters much as in the final ten minutes, they sank 18 of 20 free throws.

Lambert said of Roanoke that"their quickness, rebounding, and ability to protect the lead were very important keys to their victory." Both coaches agreed that Roanoke's speed played a big part in the game. One main speedster was Roanoke guard Donnie Morris. Roanoke coach described his quickness as "he can go into his bedroom at night, flip the light switch, and be in bed before the lights go out." That's quick alright, but I know a guy who can not only be in bed before the lights go out also be asleep.

The Scots' Andrew Baker in commenting about the quickness of Morris stated, "Put it his way, the maintenance men are still trying to retrieve my athletic supporter from the ceiling."

The scoring attack for MC had Rimmer (21) and Matthews (11). The Scots, 6-13 overall and 4-5 in the ODAC head off for another three game trip to ODAC opponents in Virginia on February 12, 13, and 15.

Lady Scots Beat Covenant College

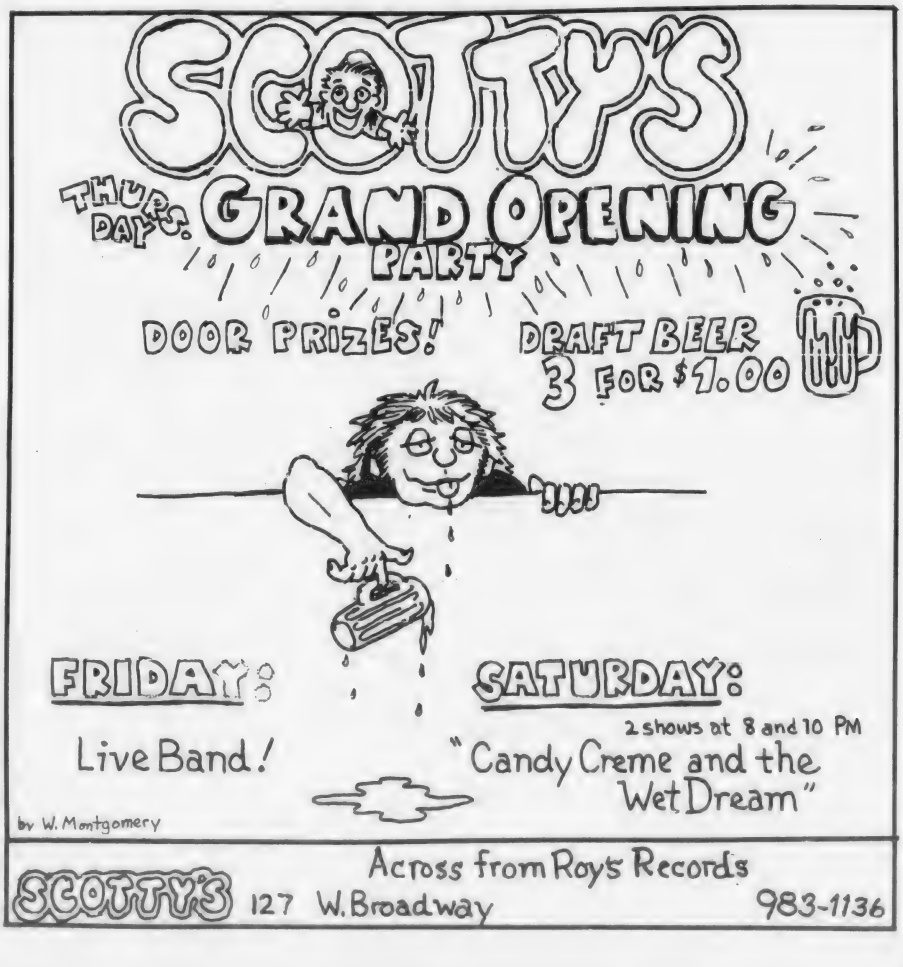
By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots basketball team added another victory to their record last Thursday night. They defeated the Lady Scots of Covenant College by a score of 68-59. Kim Allen led the Lady Scots scoring with 16 points. Rachel Reese came off the bench and added 14 points to the Lady Scots' scoring.

Earlier in the week, the Lady Scots were defeated by the Lady Bulldogs of Tennesee Weslyen College. The Lady Scots led at halftime by 1 point, but they were unable to hold onto their lead in the closing minutes of the game. The Lady Bulldogs went on to win by a score of 59-50.

The Lady Scots' game with Fisk College on Saturday was cancelled due to poor weather conditions. The game has been rescheduled for Tuesday night February 16.

This will be another busy week for the Lady Scots. On Tuesday they will play Bryan College here at Maryville. On Thursday, they will travel to Johnson City to play the Lady Buffalos of Milligan College. The Lady Scots will be on the road again on Satruday when they travel to Sewanee Tennessee to play the University of the South. Good Luck Lady Scots!



Family Fun Center

5 tokens with coupon
Buy 5 tokens for $1.00 get 5 free

Latest video games

pool, pinball, and video games

Next to Geno's

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 15 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, February 18, 1982

February Meetings

In Pursuit Of Peace

Maryville College's 106th annual February Meetings, set for Sunday through Wednesday (Feb. 21-24), will feature worship music, films, drama, discussions, seminars and lectures, all focusing on this year's theme, "In Pursuit of Peace"

"People from all perspectives are invited to come and discuss how we can pursue peace together," MC Campus Minister Rev. Peter Vial said. "We'll be covering peace from the global situation to the local community perspecitve."

Keynote speaker for the four-day meetings is Dr. Richard Watts, coordinator of the Swords into Plowshares Project, a peace education and action ministry of the United Presbyterian Church, in the Presbytery of the Western Reserve.

Dr. Watts will speak on the topic "Can We Avoid Nuclear War" at 7 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 21) in the College's Music Hall. This service will open the February Meetings and is part of the College's regular Community Issues and Values lecture series.

This year's keynote speaker will preach at Maryville's New Providence Presbyterian Church on Sunday (Feb. 21) at 8:45 and 11 a.m. Dr. Watts will be available for an informal breakfast at 7:30 on Monday (Feb. 22) in the College's Proffitt Dining Room.

Special music for February Meetings will be provided by highly-acclaimed folk musicians Guy and Candie Carawan. They will be in concert on Monday (Feb.22) at 7 p.m. in the College's Center for Campus Ministry.

The Peanuts Drama Troupe from UT-Knoxville Presbyterian Campus Ministry, will entertain on Monday (Feb. 22) at noon. Two films will be shown during the Meetings. "Eight Minutes To Midnight" will be presented on Monday (Feb. 2) at 9:15 in the College's Center for Campus Ministry "War Without Winners" will be shown in the College's Music Hall on Wednesday (Feb. 24) at 3:45 p.m.

February Meetings, an annual tradition at Maryville College for the past 106 years, are planned by a special committee of administrators, staff, faculty and students. Many of the programs will take place in the College's newly-renovated Center for Campus Ministry.

All events during February Meetings are free and open to the public.

Schedule of events

SATURDAY	2:00 p.m.	FAC Music Hall, Films- Dr. Strangelove and On the Beach.
SUNDAY	7:00 p.m. (CIV)	Music Hall, Opening worship service - Dr. Richard Watts, "Can We Avoid Nuclear War?" Reception following - FAC Lounge
MONDAY	7:30 a.m.	Proffitt Dining Room, Breakfast with Richard Watts.
	10:30 a.m.	Center for Campus MInistry, The Rev. John Wright, Presbyterian Campus Minister at UT, Knoxville, and the Peanuts
	12:00 p.m.	Drama Troups. "Alienation and Peace"
	7:00 p.m.	Center for Campus Ministry, Folk musicians, Guy and Candie Carawan.
	9:15 p.m.	Center for Campus Ministry, Film - Eight Minutes to Midnight.
TUESDAY	9:20 a.m.	Center for Campus Ministry, Biblical seminar on peacemaking, Dr. Charles H. Reynolds,
	11:00 a.m.	Professor and Head of Religious Stuides, UT, Knoxville. "Perspectives on Peace, Justice and Violence"
	1:00 p.m.	Anderson 302, Seminar I - "Pursuing Peace in the Black Community" The Rev. Carl
	2:30 p.m.	Liggin, Pastor of AME Zion Church.
		Anderson 304, Seminar II - "Peacemaking in the Jewish Tradition" Rabbi Mark Greenspan, Rabbi at Heska Amuna Congregation in Knoxville.
	3:45 p.m.	Anderson 302, Seminar III - "Pursuing Peace Among the Poor" The Rev. Don Steele,
	5:15 p.m.	Program Coordinator, Coalition for Appalachian Ministry.
		Anderson 304, Seminar IV - "Pursuing Peace in the Handicapped Community". Jean Jolly, Director of the City of Knoxville's Office for the Handicapped and Elderly.
WEDNESDAY	9:20 a.m. (CIV)	Music Hall, Dr. Beverly Harrison, Union Theological Seminary in New York - "Peace and The Violent Society: Why Gender Justice Matters to Us All"
	2:30 p.m.	Center for Campus Ministry, Biblical seminar on peacemaking, Dr. Charles H. Reynolds, Professor and Head of Religious Studies, UT, Knoxville.
	3:45 p.m.	Music Hall, Film - War Without Winners.
	7:00 p.m. (CIV)	Music Hall, Closing Worship service - "Ecumenical Call to Commitment" Leader: Dr. David Carlidge. Reception following - FAC Lounge.

EDITORIAL— Promises Kept, Traditions Broken

A few weeks ago I was looking back at some old Highland Echo's and I came across the "February Meetings" issue from two years ago. I opened it up, and my eye was caught by the headline of the editorial. It started off with "pb &j still staple of MC diet", and, in essence, it said that the food service was not living up to its promises.

The Meal situation, it seems, is a traditional subject to debate, if not complaint, from year to year. This year is no exception; a lot of people have been doing a lot of complaining. Granted, this may very well have been warrented since all of the meals began to resemble one another and the money we pay as part of room and board became only a supplement to the three of four dollars spent in search of palatable food per day.

It all seemed to culminate two weeks ago when there were discussions and notices advertising a boycott of the dining hall. This was postponed following action taken by the food committee. After an extensive meeting with a Morco representative, the committee promised immediate improvement in the taste, appearance, and variety of the menu.

The past two weeks have seen such improvements being made. It is hoped that this will be a continuous improvement and not only a temporary measure of appeasement. Maryville College is not the most forgiving of schools when it comes to food services - having had three different companies in the last four years.

Perhaps if what has been promised continues to be delivered, both traditions - those of complaints and turnover - can be ended.

Letters

Maryville College is noted for its small community like atmosphere, and like other communities, it has its deviants. Unlike many deviants, these have no real purpose, except destruction. These deviants are known as vandals.

Vandals are a group that likes to attack anything that cannot fight back. I am sure Joel Smith, the plaster man, said some snide remark or tripped someone maliciously; I mean, why else would someone pummel him? I am sure the exit signs in Dorm I flash so brightly as to hurt someone's eyes; I mean, why else would someone tear them down? I am sure the sidewalks offended someone terribly; I mean, why else would someone disfigure them with paint?

These are just a few instances when some students were offended by an inanimate object to the point of lunacy. At which time, the student(s) deemed it his/her responsibility to administer punishment upon the object.

In a college whose students are supposed to be repsonsible adults, childish and senseless destruction is not acceptable! It is not funny, nor is it desired!

The time has come to do something about this gross misuse of college property. Why should the majority be forced to observe the senseless and wanton destruction by a small group of deviants?

There is no reason why we should respect or tolerate anyone who cannot handle the insults of an inanimate object.

If you see vandalism being done, speak up and put a stop to it! And remember it is nothing to joke about!

JMH

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors. . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographers . . . . . Nancy Rojas, Barbara Hogan

Artist . . . . . Walt Montgomery

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

MC Makes Some "Great Decisions"

By Jeff Hayes

The Great Decisions program is currently in operation at MC and in the community. The program, now in its 28th year, provides impartial historical background for eight major U.S. foreign policy issues.

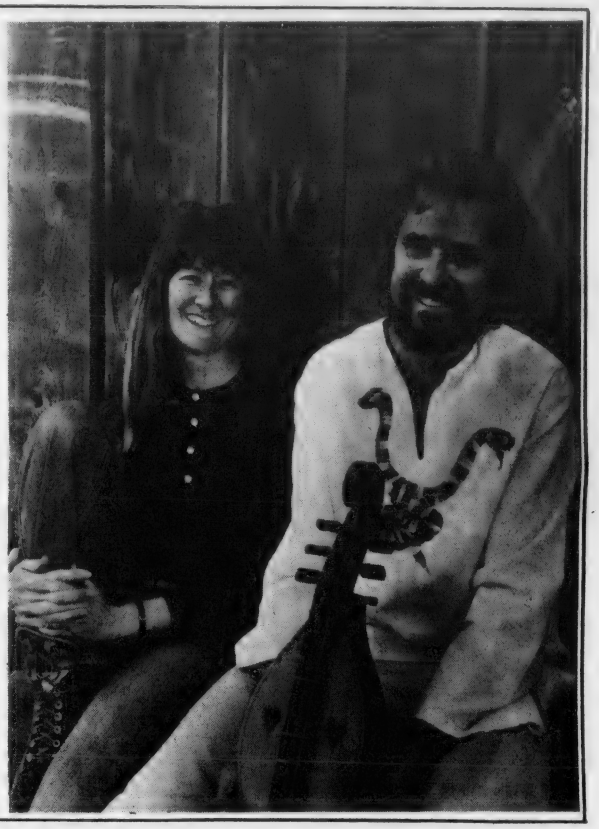
Great Decisions encourages individuals to participate in discussions of these issues and to send their opinions on ballots to Columbia University where they are tabulated and published in June. This publication is made available to our government leaders.

The discussion groups meet three times each week and are comprised of students, faculty, and people from the community.

The first meeting of each week is held at 12:20 on Wednesday in the Proffitt Dining Room. This discussion is usually lead by faculty members assisted by students.

The second meeting is held at Asbury Acres by Dr. Kim at 4:00 on Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Kim regularly takes a group of students with him to these meetings.

The third meeting is held by Dr. Bunde at Blount County Public Library. It is held on Thursday at 6:00 p.m. All of these meetings are open to students.



Great Decisions is now in its third week of operation. It has covered the topics American Defense and Western Europe and the U.S. This week the topic is Central America.

The program will meet two more times after this week, before recessing for Spring Break. The topic beginning February 23 is The Palestinians, and the topic beginning March 2 is Protecting the World's Resources.

The program will resume after Spring Break, finishing with the topics Japan, Global Inflation, and Poland and the U.S.S.R.

Participants are encouraged to read the materials provided by the Great Decisions program. These materials are on sale in the bookstore for $6.00. Four copies are also on reserve in the Library.

Over the past fifteen years Guy Carawan has appeared at several hundred colleges, concert halls and major folk festivals in the country. He has also traveled widely outside the United States to do concerts, festivals, TV and recordings. He has coauthored, with his wife Candie, four books and produced eight documentary records based on their experiences in Applachia and the South. Guy and Candie have consistently been in the center of music movements all over the South to help folks understand one another all over the world.

Improvements Cooked Up

By Debbie Hall

Once again the Dynamic Dining Hall Committee has come forth to report to you the latest in the Pearsons Cafeteria Futilely Fun Fiasco.

Improvements have abounded with the help of numerous meetings, the most successful of which occurred on the evening of February 1st with a Morco distributing representative. Menus have been rearranged to include more variety, better cooking processes, better color combinations, and more taste . . . hopefully this has become evident to many of you in the more recent past.

Surveys were designed and distributed by the Dining Hall Committee a few weeks ago on a small scale basis, and the results of these were consulted and analyzed during the revamping of the food program. The most frequently cited complaints included menu variation, preparation of vegetables, taste, and music (which, I fear, will be a perpetual problem).

All good news must be qualified (In other words, there's some bad news too). Despite good intentions and cooperative efforts on the parts of all involved, there are still the realities of an unalterably small budget and limited kitchen facilities. This will make impossible the total installation of what we all fondly think of as "real food". Also there is a concern about the cups (which are sometimes clean) that are disappearing at a replacement cost of $2.33 each, and the glasses that are $.40 apiece.

All in all we of the Daring and Dynamic Dining Hall Committee feel that progress is being made. We encourage any and all comments or suggestions is to be forwarded to any of our members at any time, and so that you know who you are looking for, we are: Sharon Brown, Bonnie Dobson, Debbie Hall, Joe Longo, Thomas Duckett, Robin Rimmer, Julie Quinton, Jane Richardson, Margaret Sherer, and Andrea Vousden.

Dream Along With Playhouse

Soon to be running at the Maryville College Playhouse Theatre is the Shakespearian comedy A MID–SUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM. The play will be opening with the traditional "opening night reception" which will allow the audience an extra special opportunity to talk with the actors and staff of the play afterwards, while enjoying refreshments provided by Sharon Crane and the MC Social Committee.

The first performance begins at 8:15 p.m. on Friday. February 19. Successive performances are scheduled for February 20, 25, 26, and 27, with a special $1.00 matinee on Wednesday, February 24, at 2:45 p.m. With the exception of the matinee, admission will be $4.00 for adults and $2.00 for students and senior citizens. For reservations or information please call Maryville College during regular business hours at (Maryville) 982-6412 or (Knoxville) 546-6912.

ANNOUNCING

Applications are now being accepted for next year's HIGHLAND ECHO Editor. Information and applications can be obtained from Kathy Fitzell, 3 ox 2820, or) r. Fowler in Anderson Hall.

Geno's PIZZA

Buffet - Soup, Salad, Pizza and Spaghetti

From 11 am - 2 pm - $2.99
From 5 pm - 8 pm - $3.09

PREPARE FOR
MCAT • LSAT • GMAT
SAT • DAT • GRE • CPA
Our 43rd Year

- Permanent Centers open days, evenings and weekends.
- Low hourly cost. Dedicated full-time staff.
- Complete TEST-n-TAPE℠ facilities for review of class lessons and supplementary materials.
- Small classes taught by skilled instructors.
- Opportunity to make up missed lessons.
- Voluminous home-study materials constantly updated by researchers expert in their field.
- Opportunity to transfer to and continue study at any of our over 85 centers.

OTHER COURSES AVAILABLE
GRE PSYCH & BIO • MAT • PCAT • OCAT • VAT • TOEFL
MSKP • NMB • VQE • ECFMG • FLEX • NDB • NLE

Stanley H. KAPLAN
EDUCATIONAL CENTER
TEST PREPARATION SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938

Call Days, Eves & Weekends
Call Collect: 584-0278
6421 Deane Hill Dr.
Knoxville, TN
For Information About Other Centers Outside NY State
CALL TOLL FREE: 800-223-1782

Scots Win One

The Scots took to the road again last weekend for another three day meeting of ODAC opponents and returned with losses to Hampden Sydney 93-76, and Roanoke 90-74. The Scots defeated Eastern Mennonite on Sat. 80-75. Comments from Coach Lambert about that Friday game against HS were "very poor play. We lacked intensity, had very bad shot selection, and those type fine it hard to fall in." The Scots were led in scoring by Rimmer (28), Matthews (11), and Gheen (10).

The Scots then had their rematch against EM; the team that gave the Scots their first ODAC loss. This time MC was the victor with a 80-75 win. "Total team effort " were the words of Lambert. "This was obvious," stated Coach when your five started all end up in double figures. Matthews led the attack of this victory with 23 points. Weston (14), Gheen (14), Rimmer (14), and Baker (13) were other scoring totals for the Scots.

MC then took on fourth rated Raonoke and finished their road trip with a 90-74 loss. Even though the score looks lopsided Lambert stated, "We were still in the game with two minutes left. We must be doing something right somewhere to be close at the closing minutes of the game and only shooting 41% from the field." We also Need to work on patience," stated Coach. "Our players need to realize their shooting range."

As of Monday the Scots stand at 5-7. They are right now fighting for the no. 4 spot in the ODAC due to the top four finishers will be on their home court to open the first round of the ODAC tournament which starts Feb. 25. The Scots are at home Feb. 19 and 20 against Washington & Lee and Bridgewater.

What's Going On

Thursday, February 18
Dinner in the Alumni Gym

Friday, February 19
5:30 - JV basketball against Tennessee Temple
7:30 - Scots basketball against Washington & Lee
8:15 - Midsummer Night Dream - reception following performance.

Saturday, February 20
1:30 - Movies - Dr. Strange Love and On The Beach
7:30 - Scots basketball against Bridgewater
8:15 - Midsummer Night Dream

Sunday, February 21
7:00 - Worship Service with Rev. Dick Watts in the Music Hall

Tuesday, February 23
7:00 - Student recital in the Music Hall

Wednesday, February 24
2:45 - Midsummer Night Dream

Ladies - Two Out Of Three

The Lady Scots started off the week with a big victory over Bryan College. The Lady Scots jumped out to an early lead as a result of a fine shooting performance by Brenda Babb. Brenda only needed to score 14 points to become the second Lady Scot in history to score 1000 points during her career. Brenda did not settle for just getting over the 1000 mark. She also set a new scoring record by scoring 33 points in a single game. Congratulations, Brenda! Sara Covington also came off the bench to provide the Lady Scots with 25 points.

On Thursday, the Lady Scots traveled to Johnson City to face a tough Division II opponent, Milligan College. The Lady Buffalos defeated Maryville by a score of 84-66 in a very physical game. Brenda Babb suffered a knee injury that will keep her from completing the rest of the season. Candy Nutter also misssed Saturday's game with Sewanee to a back injury she received during the Milligan game.

The Lady Scots traveled to Sewanee on Saturday with only 8 players. They defeated the Lady Tigers by a score of 60-55. The top scorers for the Lady Scots were Kim Allen (19), and Rachel Reese (16). Coach Brown said that the Lady Scots did not play well statistically against Sewanee, but they played with a lot of heart in their victory over Sewanee.

This week the Lady Scots face Fisk University and Morristown College. Their record is currently 7-12, but they hope to improve it with victories over Fisk and Morristown. Good Luck Ladies!

Family Fun Center

Ten Tokens for a Dollar.

Latest video games
pool, pinball, and video games
Next to Geno's

Foothills Travel
982-5700 Midland Center
—Spring Break Specials—
★Flights ★Cruises ★Tours ★Hotels
★ Scuba Packages ★Ski Packages
Call for details. Free travel services.
Spanish-speaking counselor.

SOME MORE GOOD TIMES FROM SCOTTY'S
BEER, PIZZA, DANCIN', and more!
TUESDAY: $5.00 Pizza and Beer
WEDNESDAY: ROCK 104 NITE! with 104 minutes of free BEER! ($2.00 cover charge)
THURSDAY: 3 Drafts for $1.00
SCOTTY'S 127 W. Broadway Across from Roy's Records 983-1136

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 16 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, February 25, 1982

For Social Life

Will MC Go Greek?

By Joe Wynne

A task force of members of the school Administration is looking into fraternity and sorority organizations as one of the many possibilities to generate a stronger social life on campus. This group was formed partly because of the fact that most of the transfers from Maryville College leave for what they feel is that bland atmosphere.

Fraternities and sororities were picked as one solution since there has been student interest expressed to Jane Richardson, Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, who is heading the task force. The other members were picked for their experiences in the matter. Dr. Robert Ramger of the Biology department taught at Maryville when special open "societies" performed service projects and organized certain social activites. Clair Roberts was president of her sorority at U.T. and also active in the Pan-hellenic organization.

These three have begun an assessment of fraternities and sororities by visiting Emory and Henry College to see how their Greek system works, as well as to evaluate its pros and cons as seen by the college leadership and students. They will pool their observations in a meeting that has not occured as of this writing.

The judgements of this committee will be by no means final. They are actually the tip of a bureaucratic iceburg that will probably include the consents of President Anderson, the Board of Directors, the ACC, and a committee of the Division of Student Life among others. Jane Richardson cautions that since this is such a big decision, it will not be taken lightly by the Administration. In the end, the students will have their say.

One of the characteristics of the type of fraternal system being assessed is what is known as the "local' fraternity or sorority. These are similar to the national organizations except they are smaller and are strongly regulated by a Pan-hellenic Council, consisting largely of the leadership of the organizations, which is the primary organizer and communication between the fraternities and the school administration. This characteristic, along with constitutional guidelines keep local Greek organizations to their purpose as generators of a stronger campus social life and leaders in college/community service projects.

Although there are other possibilities for enlarging the Maryville College social life, this system appears to have been successful at many small colleges and is to be the first evaluated. The meeting of the task force will put together the facts in a constructive manner so that the best decisions will be made on this significant resolution.

Atlanta's Gain Is Maryville's Loss

By Mike Weiss

On Wednesday, February 17, Scots' soccer coach and head trainer, Michael Sabatelle, announced his resignation at a soccer team meeting. He will leave MC to accept a position as head trainer for the Georgia Generals of the American Soccer League.

The announcement comes as a blow to the budding MC soccer program. Sabatelle took the helm of the Scots in their first full varsity season. Although the young team finished with a disappointing 3-8 mark, much improvement was evident in the season's final stretch.

MC closed with a stunning 4-1 victory over Tennessee Tech, a Division I school. It appeared that Sabatelle would mold the program into a winning one, given time to recruit adequately.

No replacement has been named to date. Sabatelle leaves for Atlanta at the end of this term. Until then, he will continue in recruiting efforts and assist in finding a successor.

American Chemical Society Honored

For the second consecutive year, Maryville College's student affiliate chapter of the American Chemical Society has been designated an outstanding chapter by the national ACS. This is the eighth time the MC chapter has received this commendation.

According to local chapter advisor Dr. Robert Naylor, associate professor of chemistry, the ACS committtee on chemical education reviews the activities of all its students' chapters each year and selects for special recognition those chapters which have compiled outstanding records.

Only 40 of the 761 chapters in the nation were chosen to receive the commendation this year.

Established in 1937, the ACS student affiliate program is designed to provide students interested in chemistry and chemical engineering with greater insights into these fields. Maryville joined the program in 1965.

MC President Dr. Wayne Anderson was gratified to learn of the MC chapter's selection. "It gives me great pleasure to know that the outstanding work being carried out here once again has achieved special national recognition."

What's Going On

Thursday, February 25

8:15 - Midsummer's Night Dream in the the-

Friday, February 26

8:15 Midsummer's the theater.

Saturday, February 27

8:15 - Midusmmer's Night Dream in the theter.

9:00 - 1:00 Pearson's Protest Party in the Alumni Gym.

Sunday, February 28

6:30 - Vespers

Wednesday, March 3

10:30 - Mid-Week Worship in the CCM.

Monday, March 1

8:15 - MACCO Concert with Christopher Rex.

World Of Societies Can Be Lonely

Every year a number of students citing a lack of social life choose to leave Maryville and transfer to othher schools. Many of these schools are supposedly more "socially alive" because they have fraternities and sororities. Now MC is considering installing the same type of system.

Many students attend Maryville because they do not accept the many "have to's" which such organizations impose upon their members. A community in which some of its members are branded with Greek letters and some are not reminds one of Dr. Seuss's Sneaches before the "star selling man" came on the scene. A person is then judged by whatever ensignia is embosed on his sweater, and not on his merits as an individual. Conversations such as this one can become prevelent.

"Are you in any of the societies?"

"Well, you don't want to be a_____."

"Why not?"

"Oh, com'on. They're all the same. A_____is a_____."

Of course this type of labeling is meaningless, but a blind "understanding" about the group in question becomes attached to the letters by those who are searching for acceptance. This can become the basis of friendships, as the "right" type of friend becomes important to a person's "brothers" or "sisters."

There are other considerations besides the conformity which many of these organizations bring about. One of the most important, espcially in these times of escalating cost of tuition and books, is the monetary demands which fraternities and sororities levy on their members. In addition to dues, there are also tee-shirts, mascots, and other articles which signify the group from all others, and which a "good brother or sister" must purchase. Perhaps these organizations do not begin with the idea of these "have to's" in mind, but as they become more specialized and selective with time, these requirements can evolve.

Will these societies increase the social life campus wide, or only for the individual organizations? Will each other by name not letters. One is able to be different and unique and still make friends, each of whom is, in turn, different and unique. And if a person does choose to dislike someone, this too is based on his or her individual personality, and not because he or she is lumped together with the rest of the____'s.

There are many matters to be considered, and it is well that they are each looked at seriously. A change of this magnitude wo certainly alter the face of Maryv College. The question is - for be or worse?"

student have to join one of the ternities or sororities in order participate in the activities?

Maryville has a comfortable mosphere in which people kn

Letters

Dear Editor,

We would like to express our appreciation for making our dogs MC's favorite sweethearts. Slushy and Capote are loving their fame. We thought that it was probabl first . . . the first time two ma had been voted "favorite swe hearts" . . . perhaps you're pron ting homosexuality?

Allison Pe
Janie Jafv

ANNOUNCING

Applications are now being accepted for next year's HIGHLAND ECHO Editor. Information and applications can be obtained from Kathy Fitzell, Box 2820, or Dr. Fowler in Anderson Hall.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Roja

Artist . . . . . Barbara Hogg

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Marvville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Concert Features Cellist

Christopher Rex, principal cellist with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, will appear in concert with the Maryville Alcoa College-Community Orchestra at Maryville College's Wilson Chapel on Monday (March 1) at 8:15 p.m.

Admission to the concert is $4. David Irwin, MC faculty member, conducts the orchestra.

Rex will bring to the MC stage an impressive talent. He was the first cellist ever to win the prestigious National Federation of Music Clubs' Young Artist Competition (1979).

He has played as the principal cellist of several noteworthy orchestras, including Pennsylvania's Lancaster Symphony, the Reading Symphony in Reading, Penn., the Trenton Symphony in Trenton, N.J., and the famous Eastern Music Festival of 1973-75 in Greensboro, N.C. Rex also performed with the Philadelphia Orchestra from 1973-1979.

His teachers have included Leonard Rose at the exclusive Julliard School in New York (1972-74), Orlando Cole at Philadelphia's Curtis Institute (1968-72) and Nelson Cooke at the London Symphony Institute in DeLand, Fla. (1966)

Rex received his Bachelor of Music degree in 1972 from the Curtis Institute of Music. He completed professional studies at both The Julliard School and the Brevard Music Center in the North Carolina mountains.

Solo experience includes the Beethoven "Triple Concerto" in 1980 with the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, the Dvorak "Cello Concerto" in 1977 with the Lancaster Symphony and, more recently, the Schumann "Cello Concerto" in 1981 with the Atlanta Symphony and in 1980 at both the Chatauqua Institute in New York and the Brevard Music Center.

Christopher Rex

An Echo Survey-
THE RA/SA System

By Mary Hughes

During a survey concerning student - RA/SA relations, a dorm resident quipped, "The only thing my RA cares about is getting my boyfriend out of the dorm on time." The ten questions in the survey aroused heated issues: Visitation-- are the rules too tight, or are the enforcers of the rules too strict? How closely should the RA's and SA's follow rules?

Some upperclass women remarked that their RA's and SA's are not especially helpful because they consider themselves a ranking official. Many women from Lloyd stressed that their floor managers needed to be more positive. Most freshman women liked their RA's ideas and said the staff welcomed the girls when they first arrived at college.

About three out of five freshman men did not know the names of their floor directors until the end of Fall term; many still cannot name them. But most of the freshman men think their staff members are fair, and that they definitely need them. The men of every dorm rendered their floor assistants reasonable, even if the assistants had penalized them for misdoings.

According to the survey results, the women in all of the dorms find it important to feel comfortable speaking to an RA or SA about personal or dorm problems. The women also placed emphasis on unity between residents on each floor - an issue they feel is the RA's and SA's responsibility. The majority of men feel comfortable knowing that the staff is at hand, but little more.

Many students, men and women, commented that they resented an RA or SA who stuck to closely to the rules.

"...So power hungry!" commented one woman. A Dorm I resident stated, "I hate it when they act powerful, but they usually just leave us alone." "I feel comfortable with my RA and SA; they are both easy to talk to," one Pearsonite added.

The survey pointed out that dorm assistants can be powerful, power hungry or powerless in the eyes of the residents. "Well," said one student, "it's them against us."

Team Is On The Right Track

By Jenny Fitzell

Last year was the first year Maryville College had a track team since 1978. Much of the equipment had been sold, so Coach Davis and the athletic department are still working on building up the equipment and the program. Coach Davis said that he has a small team this year but that they are "very talented, very talented."

This year's sprinters come from the football team and are led by Darius Fagin, Michael Surrency, Gene Wheatley, who is also the team captain, Jon Roberson, and Freshman Pat Foster.

The team should be "very competive" in the hurdles with Mike Scotti, an excellent hurdler, in front, and with Jim Jarrell and Michael Goode competing in the intermediate hurdles.

The team should be strong, as well, in the weight division with Vince Safatinos, Ed Belfi, and Brian Shea all putting their best arms forward in the shot put and with Brian Gunter and Darius Fagin leading the way in the discus.

"Depth in the distance running is thin," Coach Davis said with a tinge of disappointment."but, he added enthusiastically, "we have two fine 5000 meter runners in Charles Melton, a Junior and Joel Chesser, a Sophomore." Coach also believes the team is solid in the jumping event with the nucleus consisting of sprinters.

Coach Davis foresees the competition as being more stringent than the previous season. The Dual meet will be held on March 6th at the University of the South. Two meets will be held at Centre College, one of the tougher teams in Division III in the nation, and Taylor College of Indiana, which has an excellent track program, will come here for MC's first home meet. MC will also compete in the University of Tennessee Dogwood Relays and will meet Washington-Lee April 24th for the Old Dominion Athletic Conference.

Foothills Travel
982-5700 Midland Center
—Spring Break Specials—
★ Flights ★ Cruises ★ Tours ★ Hotels
★ Scuba Packages ★ Ski Packages
Call for details. Free travel services.
Spanish-speaking counselor.

Geno's PIZZA
Buffet - Soup, Salad, Pizza and Spaghetti
From 11 am - 2 pm - $2.99
From 5 pm - 8 pm - $3.09

PREPARE FOR
MCAT • LSAT • GMAT
SAT • DAT • GRE • CPA
Our 43rd Year
• Permanent Centers open days, evenings and weekends.
• Low hourly cost. Dedicated full-time staff.
• Complete TEST-n-TAPE™ facilities for review of class lessons and supplementary materials.
• Small classes taught by skilled instructors.
• Opportunity to make up missed lessons.
• Voluminous home-study materials constantly updated by researchers expert in their field.
• Opportunity to transfer to and continue study at any of our over 85 centers.
OTHER COURSES AVAILABLE
GRE PSYCH & BIO • MAT • PCAT • OCAT • VAT • TOEFL
MSKP • NMB • VQE • ECFMG • FLEX • NDB • NLE
Stanley H. KAPLAN
EDUCATIONAL CENTER
TEST PREPARATION
SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938
Call Collect: 584-0278
6421 Deane Hill Dr.
Knoxville, TN
For Information About Other Centers Outside NY State
CALL TOLL FREE 800-223-1782

Of Lost Ballgames And Earthworms

By Steve Arnold

Dear Mom,

Well, some bad news, Mom. The ball team here at school lost their two final home games this past weekend, and both losses were heartbreakers. You know, like the heartbreaking loss we suffered when my pet earthworm died last year. In both games, the Scots had one foot in the door but were unable to enter the house of victory with an overtime loss to Washington and Lee 66-61 and a one point loss to Bridgewater 62-61. No, Mom, Washington and Lee consists of more then two players.

In the Friday game, we had the ball with 11 seconds left, and our guard, Rimmer, worked the ball under for a shot which fell short. Washington and Lee had one last shot to win the game and missed their chance also, but Washington and Lee outscored us 13-9 in the overtime to win by five. That also blew our chances to gain a home site, first round tourney play. They gave it their best shot, though, as Gheen led the Scots in scoring with 20. Rimmer had 16, and Hardaway had 10.

The Saturday game started out to be a runaway. You know, like you and Dad wanted me to do at age five. We jumped to an 11 point lead at the half, 40-29 but for some reason ran out of gas in the last half scoring only 21 points. Speaking of gas, I need some medicine, so put some money in my checking account. Winters came off the bench to provide some spark for the Scots and ended up with 10 points. Rimmer had 12, and Gheen had 10.

It's been a really exciting season, Mom. We started off leading the conference at 4-1 and now have finished at 5-7. Hope they have better luck in the ODAC tournament February 25. Take care, and tell everyone hello. Gue$$ what I need. You got it!

Love, your $on,
$teve

P.S. Could we lend the team our van?

Ladies Finish Up Regular Season

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots started last week off with a big win over Fisk University. Maryville defeated the Lady Bulldogs by a score of 80-63. Kim Allen lead the Lady Scots with 26 points. Candy Nutter also chipped in 19 points.

On Thursday, the Lady Scots travelled to Morristown, Tennessee to play the Lady Knights of Morristown College. The score was close throughout the game, but Maryville fell short in the final seconds. Maryville was led by Rachel Reese with 19 points.

The Lady Scots finish out their regular season schedule this week. On Tuesday night they played Tennessee Temple in their last home game of the season. Tennessee Temple defeated Maryville by a wide margin in an earlier contest, but Coach Brown says the Lady Scots are definitely ready for the rematch. The Lady Scots will finish out their regular season schedule on Friday when they travel to Emory, Virginia to play Emory and Henry College.

Track, Con. from page 3

Coach Davis encourages anyone interested in track especially long distance runners, to join the team. His goals for this season are "to be competative in every meet and to make a very good showing at the Old Dominion Athletic Conference." "The only weakness he said," is just not having enough personel to add depth."

This year's home meets will be held at either William Blount High School or Heritage High School. Coach Davis enthusaistically invites the students to come and witness this year's "outstanding talent."

PERSONAL

Going to South Florida for Spring Break?
Watch around campus for the hottest spot in Broward County!!

Family Fun Center

Ten Tokens for a Dollar.

Latest video games
pool, pinball, and video games

Next to Geno's

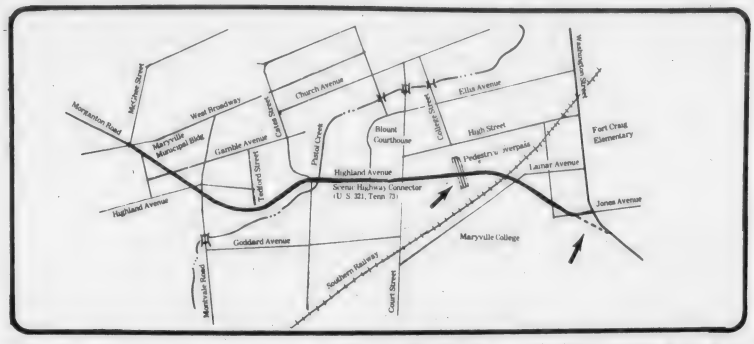
SOME MORE GOOD TIMES FROM SCOTTY'S

BEER, PIZZA, DANCIN', and more!

TUESDAY: $5.00 Pizza and Beer

WEDNESDAY: ROCK 104 NITE! with 104 minutes of free BEER! ($2.00 cover charge)

THURSDAY: 3 Drafts for $1.00



SCOTTY'S 127 W. Broadway Across from Roy's Records 983-1136

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 17 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, March 4, 1982

Highway Is On Its Way

This story is reprinted in part from the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, Tuesday, February 23, 1982.

By Dean Stone
Editor

Maryville City Fathers got a first look Tuesday morning at the state's completed corridor plans for the new Maryville Parkway route connecting Morganton Road at Circle Drive with Washington Street.

Tennessee Commissioner Robert Farris of the Department of Transportation (DOT) flew to McGhee Tyson Airport Tuesday morning from Nashville, bringing plans, photographs, and maps of the downtown connector route to show the City Fathers and other organizations involved the corridor it will follow.

Commissioner Farris brought the maps and sketches to Blount County to personally point out the manner in which the department has responded to criticism of the proposal at a public meeting and in subsequent correspondence from local residents.

In a letter to fellow Blount Countians, Gov. Alexander stated that state engineers have taken into account every single letter and suggestion which was received concerning the road.

The Governor urged local residents to visit the auditorium in the west end of the Maryville Municipal Building and inspect the maps and plans for the parkway. They will remain on exhibit there indefinitely.

A number of changes have been made in response to the criticism which will improve the structure and increase its cost by nearly half a million dollars. The changes will also require some additional land and removal of additional residences.

Instead of being a five-lane road with the center lane for turns as originally proposed, it will have four 11-foot lanes with a 16-foot median strip with left turn lanes at intersections. Commissioner Farris said the median strip will discourage development and help preserve the historic and open space appearance of the area.

A pedestrian bridge has been added at College Street between High Street and Lamar Avenue to provide access for Maryville College students and other residents to the downtown area.

The intersection of the Parkway and Washington Street - Tuckaleechee Pike has been straightened up for better alignment with Tuckaleechee Pike for the benefit of the heavy traffic headed toward the Smokies and to make that intersection safer. This was another suggestion at the public meeting.

Also the road layout and bridge at the present intersection of Highland Avenue and Cates Street near Maryville First Baptist Church has been redesigned to better handle possible flooding of Pistol Creek in the area. The creek channel will be widened above the bridge and the opening for the creek under the roadway will be enlarged.

In that same area Maryville's Greenbelt Park will be extended to the south side of Pistol Creek and Cates Street. Some of this cost will be paid for by the city of Maryville. Several remnants of property will be cleared and landscaped and developed as mini parks to further enhance the aesthetics.

The Parkway will have brick retainer walls and brick sidewalks and antique

Continued on page 3

Frats Studied Further

By Joe Wynne

The Task Force in charge of broadening campus social life has met to discuss the appropriateness of local fraternities and sororities at Maryville College. The meeting followed a visit by the three members (Jane Richardson, Clair Roberts, and Dr. Ramger) to Emory and Henry College in order to see how this enduring system worked. The result was a proposal sent to Mr. Strickland, Dean of Student Affairs in favor of a specially structured fraternity system.

The purpose of the fraternal system at this college would be two-fold, according to Dr. Ramger. First, it would boost the amount of "Student generated activities." Second, it would foster a "sense of belonging" for those inclined to join. The lack of these elements in the past have been the reason most of the transfers have left Maryville College.

In talking to the fraternity and sorority members of Emory and Henry, Dr. Ramger found that since they were members of an interest group they felt it was easier to make a rewarding investment in their college experience. Some students went so far as to say they were able to discover personal identity. Yet the system at E&H did not bring with it all gold jewels. Dr. Ramger notes the biggest weakness is the elitism that develops among members.

Lesley Boand, president of the Davis Dorm Hall council, agrees. She feels that "clique-ish types of activities" would be detrimental to a campus this small. However, she is the first to admit that the successes of Davis Dorm organized activities are sporadic. She enjoyed good cooperation in organizing study breaks and preparing a rec-room, but suffered through some apathy in the building of their homecoming float. Lesley advocates a "get tough" policy in getting volunteers, and believes that it would be just as tough to get fra-

Continued on page 3

What's Going On

Thursday, March 4
1:30 - Baseball game against Roane State in Harriman.

Friday, March 5
9:00 - 1:00 - Toga party in Davis. $.50 with toga, $1.00 without. BYOB

Saturday, March 6
1:30 - Baseball game against California State of Pennsylvania - here

9:00 - 1:00 - Quiet Evening

Sunday, March 7
6:30 - Vespers

Monday, March 8
1:00 (CST) - Baseball game against Tennesee Tech in Cookeville.

Wednesday, March 10
10:30 - Mid-Week Worship
11:00 pm - 1:00 am - Late Night Brunch in Pearsons.

Letters

Dear Editor,

I am responding on behalf of those staff members who took offense to the recent article on the "survey" concerning student-staff relations. Objections to this article are based on two points: the validity of the survey in question, and the manner in which student opinions were presented. Concerning the first point, even if the survey was distributed by a random sample no one that I spoke to even took a survey. This doesn't mean that no one did, but it seems that the number of people asked is so limited that the reliability and validity of the survey are jeopardized. Also, readers were not directly told what the survey questions were nor were they informed how many people took the survey. What were the questions, and were responses written or oral? How many people responded to the survey? These questions the reporter must be able to answer if he/she is to fully document the survey at hand. We, as staff members (the article was about the staff, wasn't it?), are asking these questions for a better understanding of the purpose of the article.

Personally, the article seemed to be hastily constructed, and its intention appeared to be no more than to increase student-staff friction already present. The lack of constructive criticism that might improve student-staff relations did not help the journalistic integrity of the article. Even though no personal names were used, generalizations about staff conduct should have avoided using dorm names because some dorms only have two RA's. Finally, how can an objective picture of student - staff interaction be painted when no staff members took any survey at all? What roles do the administrations and resident directors play in the issue? Questions like these, and many others, go unanswered.

These questions should not have even been asked. Their answers should have been intregral parts of the article. Then, and only then, will your readers get a clear, objective picture of the survey, and of student-staff problems on campus.

George Cassutto
RA, Pearsons Hall

Dear Editor,

This letter is written in regard to the article on RA/SA Dorm resident relations appearing on page 3 of the February 25 issue of this newspaper.

As an SA in Dorm I, I was a bit concerned with the tone and content of the article. However, the majority of my concern lies with the presentation of the survey data. Several key questions come to my mind:

1. How many people were surveyed?
2. How were these people selected?
3. What method was used to solicit responses?
4. What were the "ten questions in the survey?"

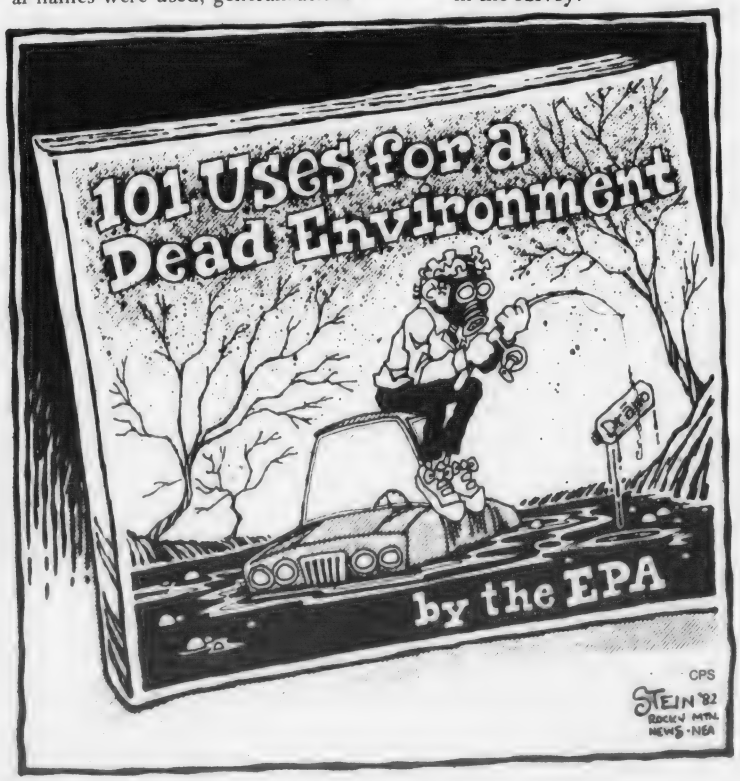
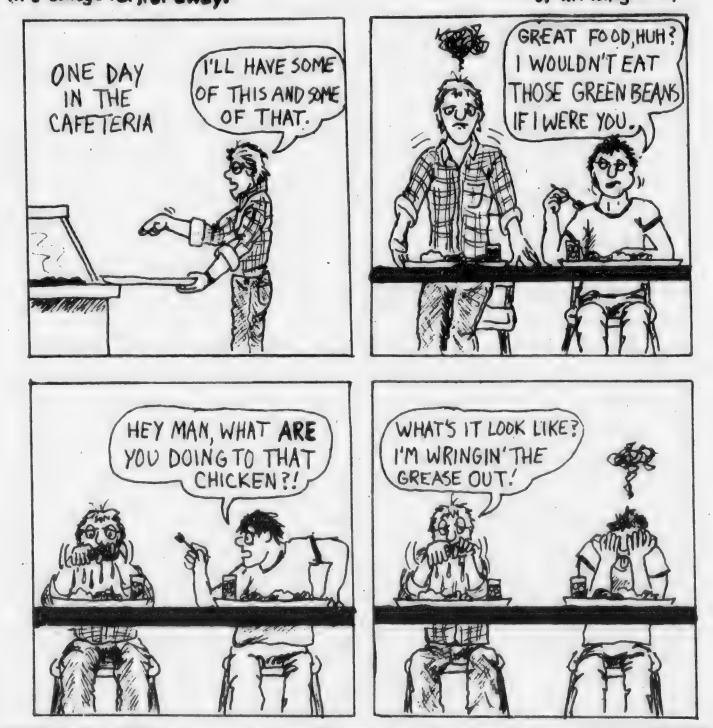
I believe in all reason, these points should have been presented in the article. The report of any survey must be well-documented if not, any conclusions drawn may be deemed ill-conceived and non-factual.

Several statements in the article (ie: "the men of every dorm . . . " graph 3, and ". . . the women in all dorms . . . ," graph 4) are misleading and may have left an impression with readers that all dorm residents had been questioned when they were not.

If change is to be enacted in a perceived "trouble-spot" (and that is how I wish to interpret the impetus of the article - to enact change, not to muckrake), then an investigation and proposal must be presented in a concrete documented fashion.



Should a problem(s) be present in residence hall relations, the Echo can be of help: by working with the Office of Student Affairs, with the dorm staffs (RD's, RA's, SA's), and with the dorm residents, to air issues, pose questions, and reach well-founded conclusions.



Tom Hudson

Dear Editor,

I would like to diverge from the usual letters of complaint to inject a bit of optimism. The school administration has acted "above and beyond the call of duty" in its effort to form a fund so that students will have financial aid in the future. Also, it is treating the fraternity - sorority concept with a great amount of responsiblity and creativity. I would like to give my congratulations, and add that I think it is actions such as these that keep the level of terrorism on campus at such a low level.

T.J.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker
Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber
Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold
Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Batters Up For Season

Coach Ledford, in his first year coaching Fighting Scots baseball, has one objective:to build back the fine tradition of baseball Maryville College once enjoyed in order to blend in well with the quality athletic program at the College.

"We have a long way to go but I don't think we necessarily have to have a couple of seasons to get there – we want to win big this year," Ledford said. "We are looking to win the ODAC championship."

Ledford said he is pleased with the overall team attitude. A good attitude, he said, is essential to meet head-on the tough schedule coming up.

The Season opener, March 5, is against the University of Tennessee on the UT home diamond – a tough SEC team. MC also faces such formidable opponents as OVC member Tennessee Tech. (March 8 and 29), California State of Pennsylvania (March 6), the University of the South (April 13 and 27) and the tough ODAC teams.

Ledford is optimistic about facing such teams. "We'll be thin on our pitching staff," he said. "But we have a well-rounded team with a lot of talent."

He is stressing defense in practice and emphasizing the need to tighten up the play, avoiding costly mistakes.

Ledford said the schedule may prove taxing on the Fighting Scots. In eight days, the team will play 14 games including several double-headers.

Some outstanding players are:

Rick Brand(junior) who pitches and "just about does it all," according to Ledford;

Bill Dent (senior), captain of the team, who possesses outstanding ability as an infielder;

Duran Williams (junior), a designated hitter who plays first base;

Mike Woodhull (sophomore) who will be the base of the MC pitching staff and who had a successful year with Maryville last season;

and Mike Wortman (junior) who is a talented pitcher.

Highway cont. from page 1

type street lighting. The city of Maryville will pay for the street lighting fixtures and the state will provide the underground conduit for them. As is always the case, the city will provide the traffic lights, subject to state specifications.

The Commissioner also reported on the noise level near the Maryville College Fine Arts Center. He said that noise measurements have been taken on Blakemore Drive which adjoins the Blair School of Music at Vanderbilt University in Nashville. The average daily traffic there is 12,000 cars and the level is about 51-52 decibels, compared to over 4,000 for jet planes. He added that the noise level was very acceptable at the Nashville school.

Farris said that engineers estimate the traffic will be 5,700 cars per day when the Maryville Parkway opens and will reach 11,000 by the year 2002 with the noise level not exceeding 64 decibels, a very acceptable level.

There will be traffic lights at Circle Drive, Montvale, Court Street, and at Washington Street - Tuckaleechee Pike intersection at the entrance to Maryville College.

The corridor adopted follows roughly the original proposal, going from Morganton Road at Circle Drive behind Maryville Municipal Building across Montvale Road, along Pistol Creek and Highland Avenue in front of Maryville First Baptist Church, across Court Street, and the block known as College Street which was once known as the "Maryville College Corridor," across the Southern Railway tracks and Lamar Avenue, entering Washington Street near the Maryville College entrance.

Frats cont. from page 1

ternity or sorority members into activities.

Many students who have not had experience with fraternities and some who have had, do not know that the affect is much different on small colleges than large ones. Anne Chick, now a student at UTK, was a transfer from a college of one thousand, also with a Greek system. "Fraternities and sororities do not have much social affect on the university. There is much more of an affect on a small school, " she explains. To Anne, no one in the school is really adversely effected except in the case of peer pressure. As an RA at the small college, she saw a few girls hurt who did not get into a sorority they wanted.

To see the problems and successes at a college similar to Maryville was the reason the Task Force went to E&H which has a student body of approximately 750. According to Clair Roberts their system "seemed to unite students and make them more visible to the administration, staff, etc." She cites the time the Greeks were able to raise enough money to bring Hall and Oates to their campus as an example.

The success of the E&H system is due to strict constitutions, academic standards, and other rules enforced by the Inter-fraternity council. These attitudes were incorporated in to the proposal which was sent by the Task Force to Mr. Strickland.

One of the most important of the rules, as seen by Clair Roberts, is one that keeps students from pledging until their sophomore year, so that they will know more about their relationship with the school environment. She has faith that the high caliber Maryville

Continued on page 4

ANNOUNCING

Please return your robe orders to the Bookstore as promptly as possible. Last year we received the orders so late that when we sumitted them we had to take the old leftover and damaged merchandise.

FEBRUARY

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. The Simple Solution to Rubik's Cube, by James G. Nourse. (Bantam, $1.95) Puzzle solver.
2. The Company of Women, by Mary Gordon. (Ballantine, $2.95) A new novel by the author of "Final Payments."
3. You Can Do the Cube, by Patrick Bossert. (Penguin, $1.95) 13-year-old schoolboy shows you how.
4. Garfield Bigger Than Life, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Third book on the famous cartoon cat.
5. Answer As A Man, by Taylor Caldwell. (Fawcett, $3.95) Struggles of a self-made man: fiction.
6. Brideshead Revisited, by Evelyn Waugh. (Little, Brown $4.95) Companion to the PBS television series.
7. Garfield At Large, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Still more of the famous cartoon cat.
8. What Color is Your Parachute? by Richard Nelson Bolles. (Ten Speed Press, $6.95) Career and job guide.
9. 101 Uses for a Dead Cat, by Simon Bond. (Clarkson N. Potter, $2.95) Cartoon humor.
10. Mastering Rubik's Cube, by Don Taylor. (Holt, $1.95) Puzzle solver.

Compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education from information supplied by college stores throughout the country. February 15, 1982

New & Recommended

Walt Whitman/A Life, by Justin Kaplan. (Bantam, $8.95) A sharply focused portrait of the American poet.

The Sixties, Gerald Howard, Editor. (Washington Square Press, $5.95) The art, attitudes, politics, and media of our most explosive decade.

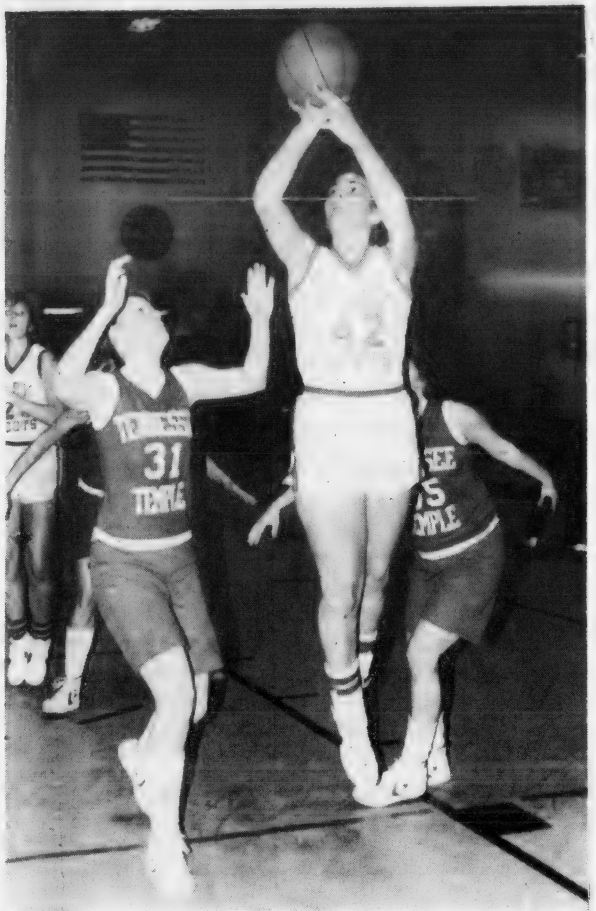
The Middle Ground, by Margaret Drabble. (Bantam, $3.50) A new novel by the author of "The Realms of Gold."

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS/NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

Women Pitch With Varsity Status

By Traci Fraser

The Maryville College Women's Softball team will begin its first season as a varsity sport March 27 at the Hiwassee Invitational. Five returning and twelve new players make up this year's team, which is being coached by Pat Ballard.



Coach Ballard remarked that he was "really pleased" with the turnout for the team. He said that the season outlook was "hard to predict because of the team's lack of game experience on the college level."

This year's team roster includes Kim Allen, Mimi Chesney, Beverly Evans, Nickie Frazier, Leah Gross, Charlotte Hamby, Ivy Hinton, Barbara Hogan, Kay Julian, Stacy Medlin, Candy Nutter, Rachel Reese, Kandy Schram, Sue Van Aken, Jenny Walker, Kathy Walker, and Tammy Williams.

Home game dates are April 1 against Lincoln Memorial University, April 17 against Tennessee Temple University, April 22 against Bryan College, April 26 against Milligan College, and April 28 against Hiwassee College.

Good luck ladies in your first varsity season!

Foothills Travel
982-5700 Midland Center
—Spring Break Specials—
★Flights ★Cruises ★Tours ★Hotels
★Scuba Packages ★Ski Packages
Call for details. Free travel services.
Spanish-speaking counselor.

Candy Nutter shoots for the Lady Scots in their game against Tennessee Temple.

Ladies Await Bid

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots finished out their 1981-82 season this past weekend. They traveled to Emory, Virginia on Friday to play the Lady Wasps of Emory & Henry. The Lady Scots went into the dressing room with a three point halftime lead, but they were unable to build onto this lead during the second half. They Lady Scots were defeated by a final score of 60-72. The Ladies' scoring was led by Sara Covington with 18 points.

The Lady Scots will not be participating in a State Tournament this year due to a lack of entries. The AIAW guidelines state that there must be at least three entries in the State Tournament for it to take place. Since Maryville had been defeated by Knoxville College, the only other team entered in the State Tournement, Knoxville College, automatically advances to the Regionals. The Lady Scots are currently waiting to find out whether or not they will advance to Regional competition through an at large bid. The Lady Scots should know by Sunday if they received an at large bid.

Best of Luck Ladies!

Short, Late, And Over

By Steve Arnold

Here I sit at tennis practice writing this basketball story which is two days late, and I'm 20 minutes late for practice. Go ahead, guys, stroke those forehands. The Scots finished out their 81-82 season with another game that could have gone either way. Another overtime loss for the Scots, this time to Bryan College 66-63. Trailing at the half 32-38, and 10 points later on, the Scots pressed and rallied back to tie it. They had a chance to win it with four seconds left but failed, putting the game into overtime at 58 all. "We played very good ball," stated Lambert, "it's just hard to win down at Bryan."

It was also hard getting to Bryan as the van broke down on the way, and they had to come back for a rent-a-car. Can you imagine 8 guy in coats and ties standing along the side of the road beside an empty van? And Andrew Baker did mention something about beans. Scoring for the Scots Rimmer with 18, Gheen with 24, and Hardaway off the bench for 8.

Entering the ODAC tourney, the Scots exited very quickly by the 90-62 defeat from Hampden-Sydney. "It's hard to win when you only shoot 38% from the field," said Lambert. "That probably sums up the whole game and maybe this interview," stated Coach. Scoring for the Scots had Rimmer and Matthews with 12 each, and Bells with 10. Next week, spring outlook for spring sports.

Frats cont. from page 3

student, having a variety of interests, will benefit from a Greek system, as do the students of Emory and Henry, who hold that the pros outweight the cons. She strongly defends fraternities and sororities when it comes to leadership training. Students told her that being a leader in such a group was a "definite part of their education." For many, the best memories of college come from their experiences in the fraternal system.

Of course, fraternities aren't for everyone (usually around 20% of the student body) and there is always the fear that non-members may have to suffer the consequences that have been associated with national fraternities. Mr. Strickland says he "wouldn't contemplate for a moment" the idea of having national fraternities. On the special system proposed for Maryville College by the three member Task Force he adds, "all the negatives and positives are being examined."

After consideration, he will pass on the proposal to the Student Life Commission. It appears that it may be a matter of weeks before action by this body is taken.

Family Fun Center

8 tokens for $1.00

High game for the week on each game wins 25 free tokens. Tokens can be picked up on Wednesday.

Next to Geno's

pool, pinball, and video games!

PREPARE FOR

MCAT · LSAT · GMAT

SAT · DAT · GRE · CPA

Our 43rd Year

- Permanent Centers open days, evenings and weekends.
- Low hourly cost. Dedicated full-time staff.
- Complete TEST-n-TAPE facilities for review of class lessons and supplementary materials.
- Small classes taught by skilled instructors.
- Opportunity to make up missed lessons.
- Voluminous home-study materials constantly updated by researchers expert in their field.
- Opportunity to transfer to and continue study at any of our over 85 centers.

OTHER COURSES AVAILABLE

GRE PSYCH & BIO • MAT • PCAT • OCAT • VAT • TOEFL

MSKP • NMB • VQE • ECFMG • FLEX • NDB • NLE

Stanley H. KAPLAN EDUCATIONAL CENTER

TEST PREPARATION SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938

Call Collect: 584-0278

6421 Deane Hill Dr.

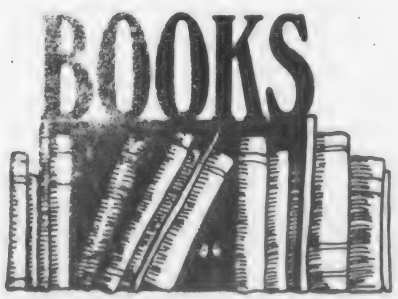
Knoxville, TN

CALL TOLL FREE 800-223-1782

AAUW

BOOK FAIR

March 12 and 13, 9:30 am - 5 pm



BLOUNT COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

(opposite Maryville Towers on McGhee Street)

Used paperbacks and hardbacks in many categories:

art, biography, cooking, history, psychology, religion, travel, adventure, mystery, romance, poetry, language, children's literature

Donations accepted Wednesday and Thursday, March 10 and 11, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., in the rear of the Blount County Public Library. Old textbooks and ancient magazines do NOT sell!

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 18 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, March 11, 1982

College Reps Angered By Campus Cuts

Washington, D.C. (CPS) -- In what one of them termed a "historic" gathering, representative of the largest and most important college groups in the land met last week to preview with alarm -- and to politically surprise -- President Ronald Reagan and the 1983 education budget he wants Congress to pass.

Representatives of state schools, private universities, community and junior colleges, students and faculty members bitterly predicted that as many as two million college students will be hurt by the cuts. Thousands of them may be driven from campus altogether.

"Deep cuts have already been made in appropriations for student financial aid," summarized Ed Hanley, lobbyist for the U.S. Student Associaton (USSA) "Further cuts are going to keep thousands of students from returning to college this fall, and others will never get to attend college at all."

The spokespeople, solemnly facing an audience of reporters and association staffers in a House committee hearing room, said the Reagan education budget would affect all federal student aid programs:

Pell Grants

According to numbers leaked to the press, the administration wants Congress to cut funding for Pell Grants by 40 percent. Only students from families earning less than $14,000 a year could get the grants, compared to a limit of $27,000 this year. The maximum grant, moreover, would be $1400, down from $1670 this year.

Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants

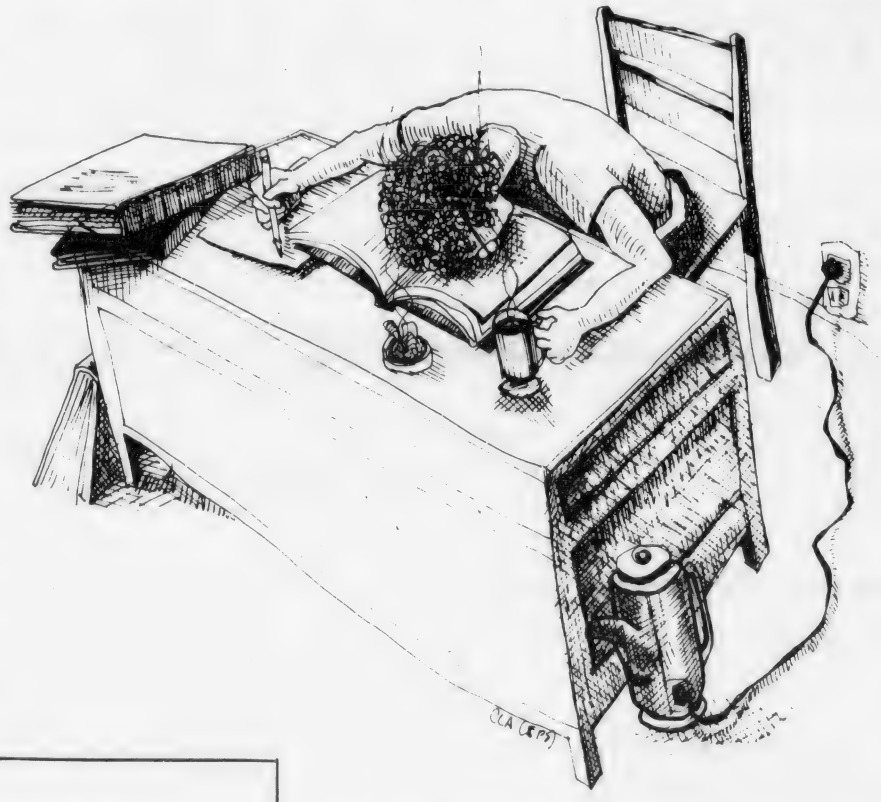
SEOGs, which currently serve some 615,000 college students, would be eliminated.

National Direct Student Loans

Under the NDSL program, created during the Eisenhower administration, 250,000 students now get low-cost loans to pay for school. The administration will ask Congress to end all funding for NDSLs.

College Work-Study Program

The Reagan budget calls for a 27 percent funding cut for this program, under which the federal government helps colleges pay students working their way through school. Observers estimate some 250,000 students will lose their jobs as a result of the cut.



State Student Incentive Grants

The SSIG fund matches grants made to students by the states. The administration wants to end the program entirely, which this year serves 300,000 students.

Guaranteed Student Loans

About 3.5 million students took out GSLs this year, but the administration

Continued on page 8

What's Inside

CIV Report . . . . . Page 3

Art Show . . . . . Page 3

Year's Best Money-making Film . . . . . Page 6

Dirge In Cafeteria . . . . . Page 6

Women's Tennis . . . . . Page 7

Men's Tennis . . . . . Page 7

Baksetball . . . . . Page 7

Crossword Puzzle . . . . . Page 8

MC Choir Gets A Break

By Traci Fraser

Through a unamimous decision of the Choir Council, the Maryville College Concert Choir will not make its spring tour this year. Choir director Kent Skinner cited prior commitments of members in important sections as one of the main reasons for the decision.

Some of the Choir's tenors cannot make the trip, and the remaining tenors would have to overexert their voices to make up for the loss. Mr. Skinner commented, "We have a relatively small choir anyway, and the tenor section is one of the strongest sections, so it hurts when all of them aren't there."

The choir has had a more demanding schedule this year, and the spring tour is the only event that they have had to miss. New concerts were added to the already busy schedule, such as the upcoming appearance this spring with the Brass Ensemble. The choir will go on tour next year.

When asked about freshmen recruiting, Mr. Skinner said he was encouraged by the results of his efforts so far. Both he and band director David Irwin have been trying to recruit music majors to build up the music programs.

So even though the choir isn't going on tour to Florida, the rest of their year will be quite busy, and next year at this time they will be digging out their suntan lotion like everyone else.

EDITORIAL—Spring (Break) Fever Hits Maryville

"Spring has sprung, the grass has riz, I wonder where the birdies is?" Some may contemplate more eloquent expressions of the changing season, but it is obvious around campus that the grass that's "riz" through the oozing mud and the "birdies" chirping songs have everyone contemplating one thing - Spring Break. Such intense concentration often results in symptoms which can only be linked to Spring Break Fever.

This particular illness is extremely contageous and prone to rapid infectation of large groups of people. There is evidence that Maryville College is the latest institution to be struck by this epidemic. If you have been feeling a little strange lately, you may want to check yourself against this list of symptoms.

1. Lack of concentration in class leading to non-participation, drooping eyelids and day-dreaming.
2. An uncontrollable urge to wear shorts. This is normal in 70 degree weather, but not when it snows the next day.
3. The desire to make a spectacle of oneself in the cafeteria. Recently documented cases include a group wearing togas, "happy birthday" monks, and a pair of table top strippers.
4. The tendency to eat the morning meal in the dead of night.
5. Desperate panic due to an attempt to finish an entire term's work in one week.

If you find that you display one or more of these symptoms, see your doctor immediately; the prognosis does not look good. There is no known cure for this seasonal malady except rest. A week at home or at the beach is the most common prescription, so if you fear that you are afflicted, you had better start packing.

Letters

Dear Editor,

I'd like to express my appreciation for the article on RA's and SA's. It's good for someone to get out into the student body as Mary did and find out how the students really feel. I personally agree with the article and am not surprised with the responses. I'm aware that there are some excellent staff members and I emphasize "some," but others stick to the rules as if their lives depended on it. What danger is it if an escorted guy is signed out 5 minutes late? What prolem will arise if a guy is watching t.v. in Davis lobby and visiting hours are up, but the t.v. special isn't - and he doesn't have an escort? Another problem with RA's and SA's is that they are our peers. Many students resent being told what to do by someone of their own age-range and if there's a personality conflict between staff member and civilian, the rules suddenly become stricter yet.

Again I thank you for "telling it like it is!"

Echo Reader

MUDVILLE...

in a college far,far away.

by W. Montgomery

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

MC Turned On To T.V.

By Jenny Fitzell

Richard Kelly, Professor and Director of Graduate Studies at UT, spoke at the March 3rd CIV meeting. Richard Kelly received his B.-A. from City College of New York and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Duke University. His fields of specialization lie in the The Victorian Period and creative writing. Richard Kelly's personal achievements as an author include The Night of Noah, Douglas Jerrold, The Best of Mr. Punch:The Humorous Writings of Douglas Jerrold, Lewis Carroll, Tennessee Studies in Literature, Great Cartoonists of Nineteenth-Century Punch, and The Andy Griffith Show. At the CIV meeting Richard Klly spoke about the development of "The Andy Griffith Show" and then treated the audience to the 1960 pilot.

Andy Griffith wanted to bring his acting skills to t.v., so General Foods, who liked Andy's style, bought the series. The pilot, which was introduced on the "Danny Thomas Show", presented the future "Andy Griffith Show" as a situational comedy. Andy's character,however, could not gain focus because he had to wear three hats; Andy was the Sherrif, the Justice of the Peace, and the newspaper editor. Andy, uncomfortable spouting structured jokes, turned the "joke comedy" into "character comedy" and realized that he was a straight man.

The pilot was, however, quite humorous. At one point a widow, Henrietta Perkins, played by Francis Bavier, is called into Andy's office. Henrietta has not paid her taxes and cannot pay them. You see when her husband, Charlie, died, she rented a dress suit in which to dress him. She forgot to tell the funeral director to take the suit off her husband before he was buried. So, Henrietta has been paying $.50 a day for two years to the rental agency. Henrietta tells Andy that if she doesn't pay, the man from whom she rented the suit will tell that her husband was buried in a rented suit. Andy then calls this man into his office and with infinite wisdom explains in his slow, relaxed drawl, "Well, now you could say that Charlie has this suit on the lay-away plan, and it's more than paid for by now."

The original commercials contained in the pilot, were almost as humorous as the show itself. The actors. at that time, were told to work the sponsor into the show, so at the end of the pilot Andy is brewing Instant Maxwell House coffee.

As the series progressed, the town of Mayberry developed. Don Knotts was introduced in the first episode as Barney Fife, Andy's cousin and deputy, and Francis Bavier came back as Aunt Bea. The rest of the permanent members of Mayberry including Howard McNear as Floyd, Hal Smith as Otis, Jim Nabors as Gomar, George Lindsey as Goober, Betty Lynn as Thelma Lou (Barney's girlfriend), and Aneta Corsaut as Helen Crump were gradually introduced. In 1965, however, Knotts and Nabors left the show. In 1968, while the show was number one, Andy Married Helen, and they and Opie moved away. General Foods, not interested in cancelling a number one show, replaced Andy and Opie with Ken Berry, who played Sam Jones, a gentleman farmer and leading citizen of Mayberry, and his son Mike. The last episode of the "Andy Griffith Show" was then the pilot for Mayberry R.F.D. Mayberry R.F.D. ran for three years.

Richard Kelly wrote his book The Andy Griffith Show because he feels the t.v. series was unique. "The Andy Griffith Show" was able to to create a "small, idealized but believable town in which the characters actually cared for each other." Kelly sees that the characters have a "strong sense of identity" and that they "remain true to themselves." The characters are made even more realistic by bringing the viewer to the realization that both the town and they have past histories. A strong morality is also special to the show. Morality was displayed by both Andy and Opie. In one episode Opie kills a bird with his sling shot after Andy told him not to hurt the birds. Andy doesn't give Opie a beating but makes Opie listen to the cries of the now motherless baby birds. On the other hand though, Andy learns from Opie when he tries to pawn something that isn't quite what it is supposed to be. "The Andy Griffith Show" made innocence interesting, and its success was thus found in the family relations.

As Richard Kelly concluded his speech, he reminded us that Mayberry lives in our imaginations. Indeed it does, for we were there last Wednesday.

"Blandy's House" by George Galloway shows beautiful technique and careful detail to shading and natural earth tones. This work can be seen in the FAC Art Gallery week days from 8:00 - 5:00 through March 29.

Watercolors Brighten FAC Art Gallery

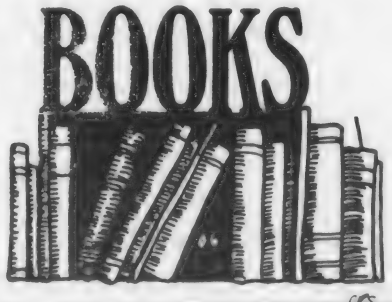
By Jenny Fitzell

The award-winning Knoxville Watercolor Society art show, which has toured throughout the area, now graces MC's art gallery in the Fine Arts Center. These watercolors display experiemntal and traditional techniques through landscapes, still lifes, and portraits. The realms of representational, abstract, and non objective art are explored.

This very good and interesting exhibit is open, free of charge, on the weekdays from 8 a.m. till 5 p.m. until March 29th.

AAUW

BOOK FAIR



March 12 and 13, 9:30 am - 5 pm
BLOUNT COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

(opposite Maryville Towers on McGhee Street)

Used paperbacks and hardbacks in many categories:

art biography cooking history psychology religion travel adventure mystery romance poetry language
children's literature

Donations accepted Wednesday and Thursday, March 10 and 11, 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., in the rear of the Blount County Public Library. Old textbooks and ancient magazines do NOT sell!

GOING TO FLORIDA FOR SPRING BREAK?

Don't Forget

To Pack

Beach Blanket
Frisbee
Zorries
Portable Cabana
Hawaiian Tropic Sun Oil
Spanish-English Dictionary
Bermudas (guys)
Double-knit Shorts (gals)
Pocket Instamatic
Blue Dot Flashbulbs
Shades
Zinc Oxide
AAA Tour Guide of the South
White Shoes, Black Socks, White Belt (as a set - guys)
Crocheted Bikini (gals)
Tennis Racquet
Love Bug Repellant

To Bring Back

Surfboard
OP Wardrobe
Photographs
Baggies
Stuffed Alligator With Florida Written On It
Boxed Baby Palm Tree
Aloe For The Burn
Crate of Oranges
Shells
Indian Head Carved From Coconuts
Hawaiian Shirt
Mickey Mouse Ears
Sunburn
Five New Swim Suits
Jar Of Sand
Gaudy Beach Postcards
Seaquarium Bumper Sticker

Will Debbie Do Maryville?

By David Gaede

(CPS) -- In the sixties it was "I am Curious Yellow." The seventies ushered in worthy successors like "The Story of O," "Deep Throat," and "The Devil in Miss Jones."

And now there's "Debbie Does Dallas."

As this year's top contender for the movie most often banned from colleges, this 1979 story of a high school cheerleader has stirred campuses as few others. One reason may be that "Debbie" is in many senses of the word a collegiate movie. It was produced by a company named School Days Films. It was partially (and surreptitiously) filmed on a college campus. It is aimed at college-aged audiences. It is most often shown on campuses. And its most ardent critics and steadiest customers are now college students.

"Probably next to 'Deep Throat,' 'Debbie Does Dallas' has the most notoriety of any film we carry," says Peter Senseney of SRO Entertainment, exclusive distributors of "Debbie" and other x-rated films.

It has in fact probably been responsible for more student protests and administrative headaches than any film in recent history. It is strative headaches than any film in recent history. It is also one of the most reliable money-makers on the college film circuit, Senseney asserts.

The film's tradition of kicking up trouble on campus started long before it was ever released.

In the summer of 1978, a group of filmmakers asked to use Pratt Institute's Brooklyn campus to film an instructional movie about libraries. Pratt adminstrators discovered only later the filmmakers were actually staging numerous sex scenes for "Debbie Does Dalls," using Pratt's turn-of-the century architecture as a backdrop.

The finished movie contains 13 minutes of explicit sexual encounters at Pratt's library and gym, including a group sex scene in the institute's sauna.

Needless to say, "Debbie" isn't very popular at Pratt. But the skin flick isn't exactly welcome at some other campuses, either On those campuses, unlike "Throat," "Curius Yellow" and other predecessors in controversy, administrators have banned "Debbie" only after vigorous student protest. In the past, administrators took the lead in censorship.

In 1980, "Debbie" was done in at the State University of New York-Stony Brook when the vice chancellor of students, responding to numerous student protests, banned it.

At Idaho State University, the student film board last fall abruptly changed its mind, and cancelled a showing of "Debbie" at the last minute.

"It was a rip-off," exclaims Jake Putnam, chairman of the film committee. Putnam, who originally ordered the movie, says that he and some fellow students were so outraged when they previewed the movie that they axed it immediately, waiving the $300 fee they had paid to reserve it.

Putnam claims the film presents " a very unfair and biased portrayal of women.'

"Debbie" sponsors at the University of California - Riverside managed to show the film, but there was so much unfavorable publicity around the showing that students forged a new university film policy to prevent any future screenings.

"As far as I'm concerned there's a big difference between a film that's erotic and one that's exploitative," remarks Barbara Gardener, one of the "Debbie" protestors.

"Films like that really don't have a place on campus." But since the showing, the campus has been "much more sensitive to films that exploit and degrade women," she says.

Yet "Debbie" seems to show at other campuses repeatedly without causing much comment at all.

"It all depends on the atmosphere of the campus," Senseney says. "For instance, Idaho State University is a very conservative campus anyway. They've cancelled a number of films before. But 'Debbie' has played at such schools as Johns Hopkins, the State University of New York at Albany and the University of Colorado at Boulder without any problems."

Senseney wasn't that lucky at the University of Maryland-Baltimore, where students are rarely characterized as "conservative."

"I wouldn't try to show it again," says Terry Nolan, UMBC student government president. "Everything was copesetic until "Debbie' arrived here."

"Happy Birthday, Happy Birthday. People dying everywhere, stress and strife in the air, but Happy Birthday." Monks Don Xiques and Andy Beavers perform a Birthday Dirge for Sharon Pimm.

UMBC adminstrators cancelled the film the day it was scheduled to play last fall, claiming it might violate Maryland anti-obscenity laws.

"There was a high risk that the film and projection equipment would be seized by the police," explains UMBC Vice Chancellor Scott Rickard.

"Maryland had just dissolved its film censorship board, which used to put its Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval on all films coming into the state. 'Debbie' was the first x-rated film we had scheduled since the board was disbanded, and I just didn't want to see headlines saying 'University Busted by Vice Squad for Showing Porno Film.' "

Student president Nolan reacted angrily, calling the ban a First Amendment issue and bringing in the American Civil Liberties Union to pursue it. Nolan filed a prior restraint suit. After many meetings, Nolan dropped the suit in return for permission to play the film.

But student officials had to accept full liability for showing "Debbie," and agree to refund the ticket price to anyone who objected to the goings-on during the movie's first 20 minutes.

Even as the film was shown, protestors picketed outside and distributed leaflets denouncing the "sexploitative" nature of "Debbie Does Dallas." The movie stay lasted one night. It hasn't been back since.

" 'Debbie' was the second most-successful film that we showed all season," Nolan says. "Over 1000 students attended the showing, and we netted over $800, better than anything except 'The Rocky Horror Picture Show.' But I wouldn't show 'Debbie' again because of all the objections."

"The film presented a dual problem for us," says Ruth Readon, one of the anti - 'Debbie' protestors. "We didn't want to deny students their First Amendment rights, but we didn't want to see an exploitative film shown on campus. We felt the film reinforced violence and abuse of women."

UMBC's Rickard was so dismayed at the commotion that he launched a study of film censorship and pornography, and now lectures at other colleges on "Pornography and First Amendment Rights."

To the ACLU, it's a question of official control over what the public can see or hear.

"Opposing groups can and should urge people not to go a movie that they feel is wrong or exploitative," contends Alan Reitman, the ACLU's national director. "Whether a film is intellectual or pornographic is a purely subjective decision. Once you set in motion a process to ban material of any kind, you set the machinery in motion to ban anything and everything."

Senseney agrees, claiming he simply distributes to groups for fundraisers.

" 'Debbie' is a big profit maker," he says. "At a major university, 'Debbie' should bring in about $2000 per showing. We take 50 percent of the profits, so the school would make $1000." Consequently, "Next to 'Insatiable,' 'Debbie' is our most requested film this year."

Tennis Hits Courts

Men's Outlook

Assistant Coach Steve Arnold commented on the outlook for the 1982 men's tennis season.

"Experience-wise, graduation last year killed us. We lost eight players and a lot of talent.

"But this year we face our schedule with a good amount of skill and knowledge. We return with Randy Shackelford and Dave Raulerson, our no. 1 and no. 6 players last year respectively. And newcomers Martin Paluga and Eric Greaser are exhibiting the best strokes I've seen in my four years of college tennis.

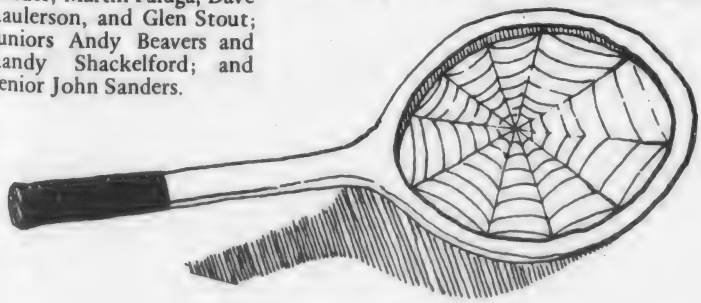
"Our schedule includes tough Tennessee Tech. (April 14 and 26). Last year we played MTSU which is comparable to Tech, in both skill and talent. We frankly got blown off the courts. So we have to work hard this year in anticipating this team."

"We will play six games before we meet Tech., and I hope we win at least five out of those six so we will be ready psychologically. Roane State Community College is the only tough team we must face before Tech.

"In ODAC play, we only meet Emory and Henry (April 17 and May 8) and Roanoke (April 17). We will play in the ODAC tournament on April 30 in Lexington Virginia, and the ODAC competition will be keen."

"Our outlook is promising. Our men have the knowledge and the strokes. We just need to build on experience."

This year's team roster includes Sophomores Kevin Crothers, Eric Greaser, Jim Kidder, Martin Paluga, Dave Raulerson, and Glen Stout; Juniors Andy Beavers and Randy Shackelford; and Senior John Sanders.



The Basketball Season: Lets End It Right

By Steve Arnold

This is a letter of apology to the Scots' Basketball team concerning the short, season ending articles. The Scots worked too hard during the season to have a rushed up story end their 81-82 season. The Scots finished their season with a 7-19 record and a 5-9 in the ODAC. Directing this year's team was assistant coach Rich Suttle and head coach Randy Lambert. In asking Suttle about his first year as a coach he replied, "I love to coach, and I love basketball, and I love this little orange leather sphere with which I can do anything with. It's my life blood. They used to interview me a lot when I was playing but not as a coach. It's really a different point of view." As far as coaching goes "I found it to be very hard to try to coach the guys you've played with." And what about your experience with Coach Lambert? "I learned a great deal from Coach. It's really a different view. When you're playing all you get used to is following directions, but working with him this year, I saw how much other work really goes into it."

And what about Lamberts evaluation of the season. "I hate to end it and go seven and a half months with a 7-19 record. I would have to say the season was encouraging. We right now need to set our priorities of staying in school, build those grades, and help ourselves improve skills. Hopefully next year we can add some depth in recruiting." That was one of the Scots drawbacks during the season, but according to Coach " considering our inexperience and youth, I have to be overall pleased with this year's season. Individual performers would include Rimmer who displayed excellent floor leadership. Baker improved a great deal in his outside shooting, Weston, Hardaway, and Bales improved steadily game by game. Our post people, Gheen, Matthews, and Winters playing their first year in a Scots uniform, improved a great deal on their inside offensive game, and defending their opponents' post men," stated Lambert. "It's very hard to end a season," stated Lambert, "and I wish we could start again tomorrow."

Women's Outlook

"With the return of three letter winners and the addition of several talented newcomers, the 1982 Maryville College women's tennis team anticipates what could be its best season ever," said Coach Cooper.

Returning members of the 1982 team are juniors Sharon Wood, Shelley Kingsbury and Sue Spence. Team captain, Sharon Wood, played both no. 1 singles and doubles and was chosen Most Valuable Player of the 1981 season. Sharon's skill, determination and winning attitude make her a valuable asset to this year's squad.

Shelley Kingsbury held down the no. 2 singles position and teamed with Wood in no. 1 doubles. Kingsbury is expected to turn in strong performances this season. Sue Spence saw action at both no. 4 and no. 5 singles and no. 2 doubles last season. Spence has worked hard in pre-season and is expected to improve greatly on last year's performances.

Freshman Maria Irwin, who played the no. 1 position at Elizabethton High School in Johnson City, Tenn., and sophomore Ellen Smith of Dallas, Texas, will add depth to this year's team. Other newcomers expected to see action this year are senior Donna Owens, sophomore transfer Mari Jennings, and sophomore Terri Roberts.

This season's opponents include Carson-Newman, a strong VSAC contender, and perennial junior college powerhouse, Roane State. Maryville will participate in the Division III AIAW State Tourney at Austin Peay University along with Byran College and Milligan College. MC is expected to be a strong contender for the state championship with a chance to advance to regional play.

Cuts, cont. from page 1

wants to cut drastically the number of students eligible for them in the future. Reagan proposes to eliminate all graduate and professional students from the program, double the loan origination fee to 10 percent of the loan value, make borrowers pay market interest rates (up from the current nine percent) starting two years after leaving school, and limit GSLs to students with "unmet needs."

But Dr. Edward Fox of the Student Loan Marketing Association, which helps arrange GSLs among banks around the country, says those changes might effectively mean the end of the GSL program.

"Any change in the (GSL) legislation is the forerunner of an incredible amount of expensive paperwork for the banks (who actually make the loans)," says Fox, who was not at the Washington press conference. "Banks could certainly be dropping out in the future."

That's just one consequence of the cuts if Congress approves them, according to the press conference participants.

More than 300,000 independent college students would probably be forced out of school, predicts John Phillips of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

"Assuming only half of those who drop out of independent colleges" go on to public colleges, Phillips estimated "states would have to increase their subsidies by more than $500 million."

Allan Ostar of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities then pointed out that many states themselves have been badly hurt by the recession, and were unable to make up the difference.

He pointed out that most states' allocations to their public colleges haven't increased as fast as inflation.

Still others worried about the ability of the 839-000 public college students who now get aid to hold on.

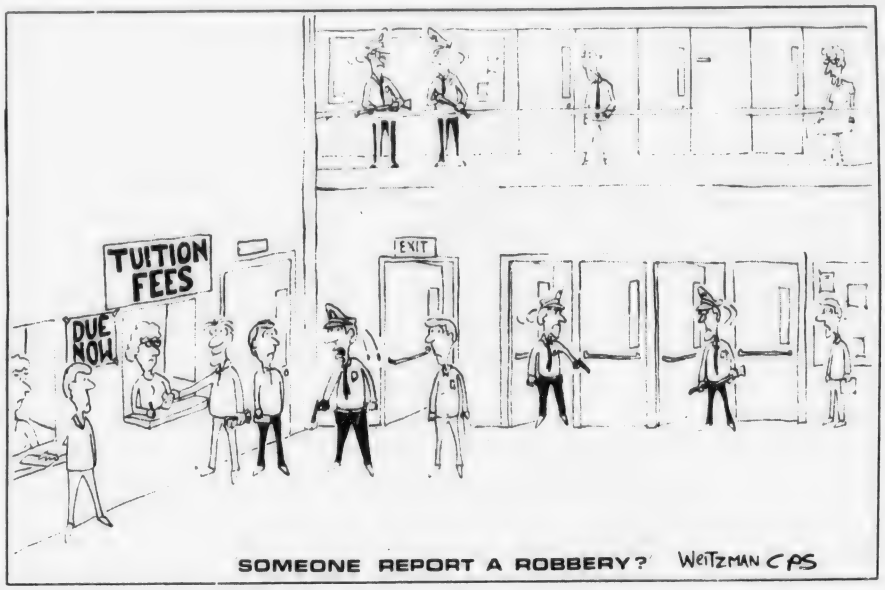
A southern Illinois University survey found that 61 percent of its students doubt they'll be able to continue in school full time next fall, when the first round of Reagan education cuts takes effect.

Those worries are echoed around the country:

Dr. William Pickens of the California Post-Secondary Education Commission frets about a "step-ladder effect" in which private college students will have to transfer to public colleges, where they will displace the poorest students on the public campuses. Those students, in turn, would be bumped down the ladder to two-year institutions. The less-well-endowed students in community colleges will then be displaced, he fears.

Shirley Ort of the Washington state higher education commission similarly worries about a "displacement" of students "on down the line" of institutions. "The question is what happens to the student at the end of the line."

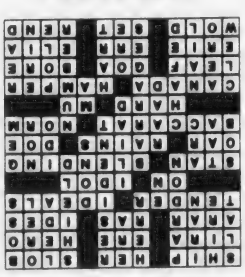
Ort estimates some 50-000 Washington students would be affected by the aid cut, and speculates that "maybe 20 percent of the aided population" would have to drop out.



Asked if the state's public college system could continue to function under those circumstances, Ort paused and said, "I don't see how."

Utah education official Dr. Steve Bennion speculates as many as "5000 to 7000 students may just have the doors closed on them" in that state if Congress approves the cuts.

Cautioning he didn't want to sound alarmist, Bennion explained that " a lot would depend on which campuses lost that many students. If the University of Utah or Utah State lost them, they could probably absorb the losses with cutbacks. But if one of the smaller schools like Weber State or Southern Utah lost them, then we possibly might have to think about closing a campus."

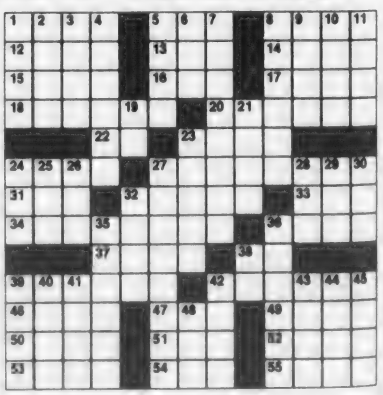


"It's kind of bleak," adds Amy Harshman of the Tennessee Higher Education Commission. "A relatively high proportion" of public college studnets in the state are "first generation college students. These are the kids who, faced with an increased financial burden, are most likely to give up and go find a job."

In Kansas, "the independent colleges are very fearful," reports Dr. John J. Conard of the state Board of Regents. "I don't see much hope. There just aren't any other sources (of aid money) to turn to."

HAPPY SPRING BREAK!

Puzzle Answer



CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Vessel
5 Pronoun
8 Slovenly one
12 Italian coin
13 Before
14 Leander's love
15 Sandarac tree
16 Ethiopian title
17 Roman date
18 Delicate
20 Paragons
22 Preposition
23 Sacred image
24 Man's nickname
27 Mixing
31 Paddle
32 Showers
33 Female deer
34 Card game
36 Standard
37 Difficult
38 Greek letter
39 North American country
42 Hinder
46 Page
47 Tibetan gazelle
49 Ream
50 Great Lake
51 Transgress
52 Lamb's pen name
53 Upland plain
54 Deposit
55 Tear

DOWN
1 Lath
2 Lease
3 Asian land
4 Forgive
5 German title
6 Time period
7 Occupant
8 Protect
9 Castor's mother
10 Russian city
11 Foreman
19 Printer's measure
21 Puts on 23 Homer epic
24 Cry
25 Chinese pagoda
26 Curve
27 Artillery screens
28 Artificial language
29 Conjunction
30 Jewel
32 Electric catfish
35 Irritated
36 Enumerate
38 College deg.
39 Hint
40 Danish island
41 Brad
42 Male deer
43 European
44 Emerald Isle
45 Peruse
48 Mineral

PREPARE FOR
MCAT • LSAT • GMAT
SAT • DAT • GRE • CPA
Our 43rd Year

- Permanent Centers open days, evenings and weekends.
- Low hourly cost. Dedicated full-time staff.
- Complete TEST-n-TAPE ™facilities for review of class lessons and supplementary materials.
- Small classes taught by skilled instructors.
- Opportunity to make up missed lessons.
- Voluminous home-study materials constantly updated by researchers expert in their field.
- Opportunity to transfer to and continue study at any of our over 85 centers.

OTHER COURSES AVAILABLE
GRE PSYCH & BIO • MAT • PCAT • OCAT • VAT • TOEFL
MSKP • NMB • VQE • ECFMG • FLEX • NDB • NLE

Stanley H. KAPLAN
EDUCATIONAL CENTER
TEST PREPARATION
SPECIALISTS SINCE 1938

Call Collect: 584-0278
6421 Deane Hill Dr.
Knoxville, TN
CALL TOLL FREE 800-223-1782

Family Fun Center
8 tokens for $1.00
High game for the week on each game wins 25 free tokens. Tokens can be picked up on Wednesday.
Next to Geno's
pool, pinball, and video games

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 19 Trial Edition | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, April 1, 1982

Aid Delayed, But On Its Way

The first portion condensed from an article by Janet Hook in "The Chronicle of Higher Education."

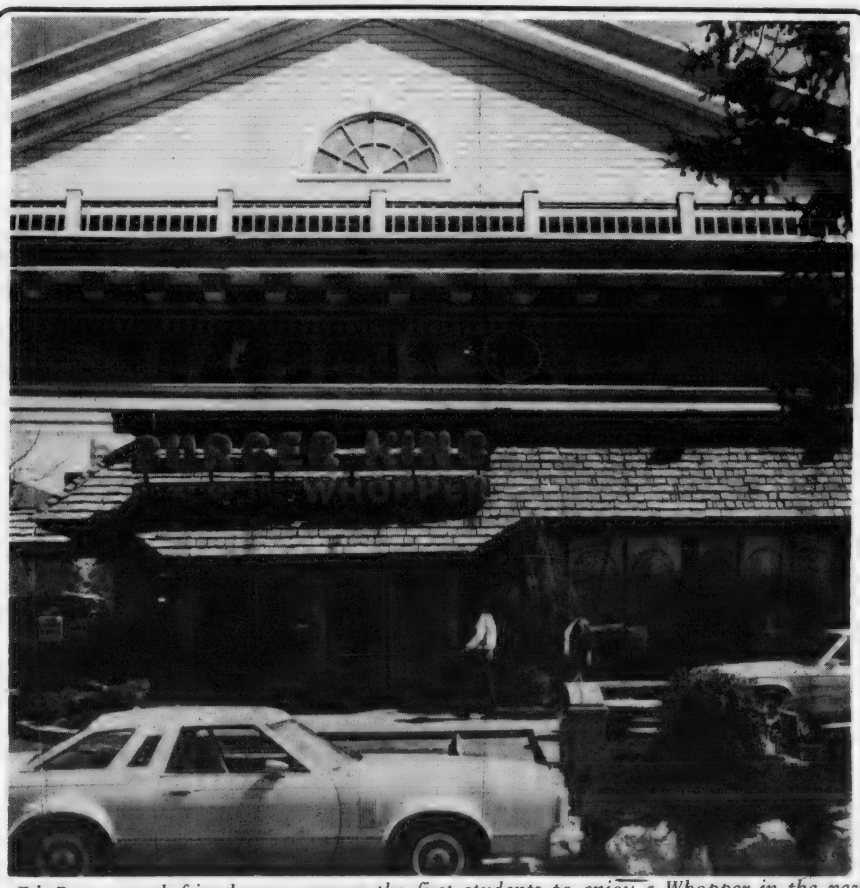
Administrative delays in the Department of Education are making it difficult for colleges to tell students how much federal aid they can count on next year.

Although the department began processing applications for Pell Grants for academic 1982-83 last week-several weeks behind schedule - officials are moving slowly to issue new regulations for Guaranteed Student Loans, the government's largest aid program. That is preventing banks and colleges from processing loan applications from students who need help this summer or next fall.

No Work Until April

It will be April - a month later than usual - before the department tells colleges how much money they will receive in 1982-83 under three "campus-based" aid programs - Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, College Work-Study and National Direct Student Loans.

The administrative tie-ups compound the uncertainty generated by Congressional debate about possible cuts in federal spending on student aid.



Although the drastic cutbacks proposed by President Reagan for fiscal 1983 would not affect students until academic 1983-84, the Administration has also asked Congress to make additional cuts in funds for the current fiscal year, which would affect awards to students in 1982-83.

In recent years, the operation of the government's complex student-aid programs has often been plagued by confusion and delays caused by budgetary uncertainties and by frequent revision of the rules for administering the programs. But, because they have affected virtually every aid program in the Department of Education, the delays are causing more trouble than usual this year. And they come just as colleges are making key decisions about whom to admit for the fall semester - and about who will receive financial aid.

HERE AT MARYVILLE

Financial Aid Director Dan Perkins explained how the delays would affect MC students. "We are cognizant of the fact students need to be informed of their aid early in order to plan for the upcoming year," he stated. "Therefore, in spite of delays in the Federal sector we anticipate to begin mailing award letters to prospective freshmen and upperclassmen in early April. Awards will be send first to those students receiving campus-based (NDSL, SEOG, CWS, Institutional) assistance only in light of the uncertainty, at this point, in the Pell Grant payment schedules."

"Any student who has not yet submitted the Financial Aid Form for 1982-83 is urged to do so as soon as possible," remarks Perkins. "I would also encourage students interested in applying for a Guaranteed Student Loan to secure an application from the bank and begin the process now."

Ed Brewer and friend were among the first students to enjoy a Whopper in the new Pearsons Dining Hall April 1. The Hall was renovated due to student demand for a change of surroundings. A pick up window for express dining was also installed for student convenience.

What's Going On

Thursday, April 1

3 p.m. - Softball against LMU, at Sandy Spring Park.

Friday, April 2

Scotty's Night

Saturday, April 3

1:00 p.m. - Women's Tennis against Tusculum

1:30 p.m. - Baseball against Eastern Mennonite

Films and other entertainment will be presented in Davis lobby by the Freshmen class. Details to be announced

Monday, April 5

2 p.m. - Men's Tennis against Roane State

2 p.m. - Women's Tennis against Brevard

3 p.m. - Track meet against Taylor University at Heritage High.

Tuesday, April 6

1 p.m. - Baseball against Emory & Henry

Students Stage Protest

Some 35,000 Americans rallied in front of the White House March 27 calling for "No U.S. economic and military aid for El Salvador!" Forty students and teachers from UTK attended the rally.

The demonstrators received encouragement from onlookers as they marched from Malcolm X Park to Lafayette Park in front of the White House, said MC economics instructor Ernie Goss. Joan Baez, The National Committee Against Registration and the Draft, Clergy and Laity Concerned, The American Indian Movement and other key protesters spoke out in Washington. The marchers held an ecumenical service Sunday remembering the second anniversary of the death of Oscar Romero, Archbishop in El Salvador.

In order to emphasize majority American concern over U.S. interference in El Salvador, the protesters de-

see MARCH, page 3

Editorials

Is Student Involvement Dead?

The story about Sunday's march in Washington, D.C. to protest U.S. intervention in El Salvador brings to mind faint memories of when student protesters were constantly making headlines. What has happened to student interest in such issues as El Salvador?

Years ago few days went by without mention of college students marching in protest of issues like Vietnam, ERA, and civil rights. Today we are concerned with Reagan's budget cuts, El Salvador, and nuclear war, but it doesn't seem to elicit very strong student response.

Students should be aware of what is going on in the world today and take a little bit more action expressing their views on these events. Although few have the time or money to actually participate in an event like the march Sunday, it only takes $.20 to write your congressman, and voting is free.

It is very easy to fall into the habit of non-involvement, but it also can be easy to get involved. Take notice of what is going on around you, and let the government know how you feel about it. If enough people get involved and take some action, it can make the difference.

Point/Counterpoint

SHOULD WE HAVE FRATS AT MC?

Pro Allison Perry

Fraternity: A student organization for scholastic, professional, or extracurricular activities.
(Webster's Dictionary)

Before expounding on the benefits of Greek societies, we need a clear understanding of what a fraternity/sorority is and how they relate to MC's campus life.

The definition that Webster gives concerns three activities. Maryville College has organizations based on two of those activities - professional and scholastic. The question concerning fraternities/sororities falls under extracurricular activities.

Yes, extracurricular activites are something every college student should be a part of. Social societies would broaden the limited activites now presented to our student body.

Fraternal organization give students a personal bond with classmates in an organized institution. Some say that this is not necessary in a school MC's size. If this is your feeling do not join. There are other ways of gaining from societies.

Greeks provide a diversity of social activities. These can range from parties, to fund-raising gatherings, into intra-fraternal competitions. The key word is diversity. You do not have to be a member to engage in most of these events. Most important is the availability of activities for those who are interested.

What about the influence of the individual? Exclusion, alienation, and segregation - are these products of fraternal organizations?

The individuals who are not interested in social organizations will be little affected by the affairs of fraternities/sororities. The student who seeks a more social lifestyle will enjoy these organized activities. (You won't have to pound your head against the wall on Saturday evenings, trying to figure out something to do with no car and little money).

What about the elite attitude often tagged to fraternal organizations?

If a MC student wants to alienate himself from his classmates due to dreams of grandeur, is that the fault of the organized social club or the disillusioned individual?

I see fraternities/sororities as benefitting the social diversity of MC's campus. Our size will prevent negative attitudes linked with Greek societies from emerging on this friendly, considerate campus.

Con Sidney Bright

Ideally, a fraternity or sorority is a group of men or women, respectively, who are joined together by common interests. This organization of men or women is usually referred to as a Greek-letter college organization and promotes group fellowship. In my opinion, fraternities and sororities are no more than social clubs.

When I first read about the possibility of "Maryville going Greek," I was very concerned. I do not think that Maryville is big enough to support a healthy fraternity/sorority program. As I see it, starting a fraternity/sorority program could initiate many problems. The first problem I foresee is possible destruction of Maryville's present club and organizational involvement. Why would a student become involved in a service organization when he or she could "rush" a fraternity or sorority? Another problem would include "proper" housing of fraternities and sororities. Where is Maryville going to locate frat houses? Furthermore, how would two fraternities survive in Dorm 1?

In my understanding, Maryville's plan for fraternities and sororities is going to be on a private scale - that means only campus recognition. As everyone knows, nation-wide recognition is almost a necessity for all fraternities and sororities. Will a private scale organization of "Maryville's Greek Organizations" be accepted by students?

The most influencial factor in my negative attitude against "Maryville going Greek" is the possible effect of campus wide social segregation. Maryville is small enough for all students to know each other. Maryville is well-known for its friendliness. Most students enjoy this relationship between their fellow students. Now, the big question: Does Maryville want to adopt the ideas of fraternities and sororities with the possibility of destroying all present campus wide unity?

The Highland Echo

Trial Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Consulting Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Sports Editors . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Kenny Martin
Photographers . . . . . Kathy Blair, Bill Argyle
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Dear Editor:

We are writing this letter in response to the letter to the Editor, which appeared in the March 11 issue of the ECHO and signed by "Echo Reader."

Although some people believe that rules are made to be bent or broken, some of us believe that rules should be followed. We believe this strongly enough that we became staff people. We aren't familiar with the visitation policies at Davis, but we can see some "danger" in having someone signed out "5 minutes late." If the rule is that visitation ends at 11:00, then it should end at 11:00, not 5 minutes after. If everyone brought down their guests 5 minutes late, then why should the rule say 11:00? As to the rest of the questions concerning the Davis T.V. lobby, we don't have the answers.

The staff people are the students' peers, we guess, because the student Affairs Office thought that the student might rather listen to a peer than have to listen to an "elder." The college rules are based on the fact that MC students are supposed to be "responsible adults." When we ask someone to do something, it is usually because one of the rules has been broken. We find that the people who complain about the rules are usually the ones who break them most often. We go out of our way to give at least one warning when we can. As for personality conflicts, if they arise between staff and "civilians?", we suggest a talk with the RD or Student Affairs staff.

This is not meant to carry on the "written war" between staff and "civilians?", but there are two sides to every story. We would like to point out that staff people are students first and must follow the same rules as the "civilians?"

Lastly, we would like to say that if a person believes in what they are saying enough to write a letter, they should not be afraid to sign their name.

Jeff Pierce, SA 2nd floor
Gene Wheatley, SA 3rd floor
Copeland Hall

P.S. We are pleased with the manner in which the majority of the Copeland residents have conducted themselves this year, and we are happy to report very few problems.

Fred Hope Fund to Benefit MC Students

By Allison Perry

Maryville College congratulates Don Xiques and Ed Welch, this year's recipients of the Fred Hope Fund.

Fred Hope, after graduating from Maryville College in 1906 worked as a missionary in Cameroon, West Africa. The Fred Hope Fund was established to support his work and is today continuing in raising money for missionary projects in several countries throughout the world.

In 1981 the Fred Hope Fund aided a Korean nursing school operated by an MC alumnus in bettering community conditions. The Fund currently is helping to alleviate a cycle of communicable diseases by supporting the construction of sanitary water wells.

Don and Ed through "Volunteers in Mission" will spend one year in Missionary service to Pakistan and India. Their assistance will free medical volunteers to do the work they are trained to do. Air fare alone will cost these students $4,000 apiece

MC's World Concerns Committee is sponsoring an auction on Parent's Weekend (April 17) in support of the Fred Hope Fund and its 1982 volunteers. A road race encouraging support for the Fund is tentatively planned for later in the spring.

Group To Discuss Wounded Healer

By Janet Helwig

The Committee on Religious Programs is sponsoring a spring Readings Group under the leadership of Chaplain Peter Vial. The group will read and discuss the book entitled The Wounded Healer-Ministry in Contemporary Society, by Henri J.M. Nouwen. Anyone interested is invited to participate in the group, which will meet informally at the home of Peter and Debby Vial at 7:30 p.m. each Wednesday evening in April, beginning April 7.

For further information and a copy of the paperback book, see Connie Vaught or Peter Vial in the Center for Campus Ministry by April 6.

MARCH, from page 1

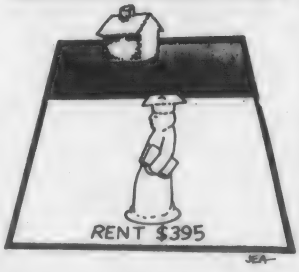
liberately held the rally during the Salvadorian election weekend. Demonstrators charged that the Salvadorian elections only represent a show of democracy to fool the U.S. Goss stated that the demonstrators wanted the Reagan Administration to react positively to the Americans who do not treasure U.S. power in El Salvador. The protestors hope for a negotiation between the U.S. and officials in Central America which involves probable U.S. power loss in Central America.

President Reagan labeled the demonstrators "radicals from unrelated groups." Goss argued that the rally determined a broad based coalition opposed to U.S. action in El Salvador.

Why should college students protest against American intervention in El Salvador? According to Robert White, a former U.S. Ambassador to El Salvador, 500-600 American families live in El Salvador. American interests abroad concern American students who will be drafted if needed in combat. The money used for El Salvadorian interest dip into the funds for government financial aid. Goss and fellow protestors nationwide say that students need to be concerned about inhumane governments and governments that support the violation of human rights in other countries.

Students can show concern by joining organizations that condemn U.S. policies in El Salvador, such as CISPES (U.S. Committee In Solidariy With The People of El Salvador). Individuals can also write to government representatives and educate each other by establishing discussion groups.

Knoxville protesters will hold a dance at The Place in Knoxville April 24. A reggae band will perform and all proceeds will go to educate Americans about U.S. policies in El Salvador.



Broadway Critic Speaks

Brendan Gill, the Broadway drama critic for the New Yorker will be speaking on the University of Tennessee/Knoxville campus on April 7, 1982 at 8:15 p.m. in the Ballroom of the University Center. Admission is free.

Mr. Gill will give theatre anecodotes about theatre life on Broadway. For more information, call 974-5455.

Engagement Announced

Jeff Hayes, class of '83, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Short of Valdosta, Georgia wishes to announce his engagement to marry Ms. Nancy Leisering, class of '81, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Leisering of Chicago Illinois.

by W. Montgomery

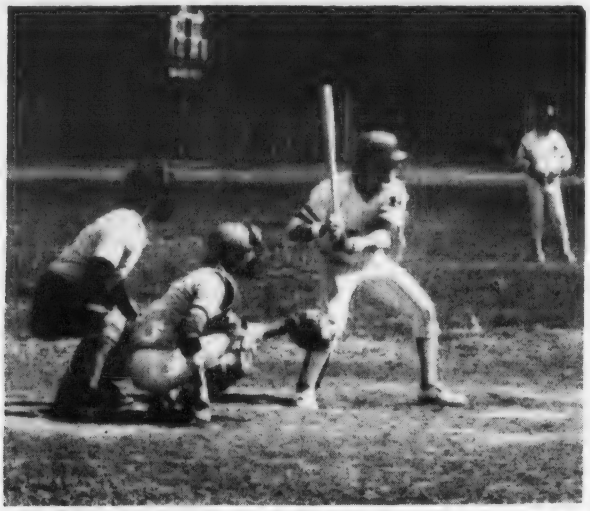
Track Team Run By New Coach

By Jenny Fitzell

When the students and the faculty returned to MC from Spring Break, someone was missing. Coach Davis has gone to UT to fill the position of part-time assistant football coach and is working with the Vol's offensive team.

After talking with Coach Ogden for two weeks, Coach Davis decided that he must pursue this career advancement. Coach Davis' departure is a loss to the track program, but Coach Ogden feels "the program is such that no person is greater than the program, and the program will survive." Coach Ogden sees Dr. Cooper as an "adequate replacement and has confidence in him."

Along with Coach Davis' departure came the departures of several team members. "These members," Coach Ogden assured me, "left for other reasons than Coach Davis' departure. There is not a personality problem." The team has not lost any spirit, for the members are a "great bunch of competitors," Ogden said. Coach Ogden is proud of this "super bunch of guys" who are working very hard and feels "everyone is fired up by the track team and will be pleased with the performances."



The football team, upon hearing of Coach Davis' move, also recognizes the loss but is determined to make the best of the situation. Although the timing was terrible, recruiting has not suffered, and new staff members will be utilized to fill out the football program.

Library Notice

WEEKEND SCHEDULE FOR MC LIBRARY WILL NOW BE

SATURDAY	11:00 a.m.	to	5:00 p.m.
SUNDAY	2:00 p.m.	to	10:00 p.m.

We are attempting to provide more convenience for our students, since we have had request for later Saturday openings and more Sunday hours.

Coach Ledford looks on as Todd Schlenker concentrates on the pitch in Friday's game against Bridgewater.

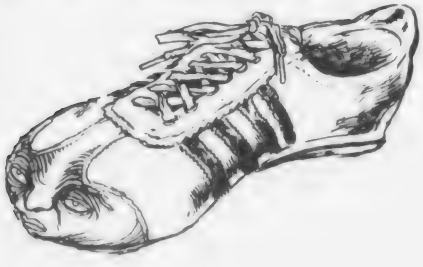
Lady Scots Open Tennis Season

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots Tennis team opened their 1982 season this past Tuesday, March 23. The team's opening match was against a tough Carson-Newman team. The Lady Scots were defeated by the score of 9-0 by the Lady Eagles.

On Thursday, the Lady Scots travelled to Brevard, North Carolina to challenge the ladies of Brevard. Maryville came up short in this match, losing by the score of 4-5. Donna Owens, Sue Spence, and Mari Jennings each won their singles match. Donna Owens and Mari Jennings were the team's only winning combination in doubles play.

The Lady Scots will travel to Dayton, Tennessee on Thursday to play the ladies of Bryan College. Good Luck Ladies!!



announcements

All classes that meet in Willard House, Bartlett Hall, the old Infirmary, Anderson Belfry, and the Alumni Gym have been cancelled in honor of April Fool's Day.

Pearson's Dining Hall will be serving Squeal Parmigiana for lunch, and Peasant under Glass with greased beans and burned toast for dinner.

The pool will be drained for midnight rollerskating.

Watch wise Wonderful Wayne whistle wistfully while washing Winnebagos with wet warm water.

Season Hits Slump

By Kenny Martin

The 1982 edition of the Fighting Scots Baseball team opened the season in a respectable fashion, but have since had their problems.

The Scots left for spring break with a record of 1-3. They lost their opening game of the season to the University of Tennessee, but came back to split a doubleheader with a tough Roane State team.

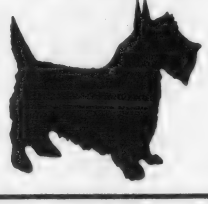
After one break, Maryville opened their ODAC schedule at home with a doubleheader against Hampden-Sydney. The Scots took the first game 6-5 behind some good pitching by Mark Woodhull and Mike Rohan. Chuck Angelus, Rick Brand, Pat Moyer, and Jim Rice all had key hits in the sixth inning to break a 4-4 tie and insure the victory. Unfortunately, the Scots dropped the second game by the lopsided score of 17-3.

Revenge was what Roane State was seeking when the Scots travelled to Harriman for a rematch, and that is exactly what they got. The Scots could only manage five hits in the doubleheader. They lost both games by the scores of 6-2 and 15-0.

The bats were silent again when Maryville took the field against Bridgewater. Maryville managed to get seven hits this time in dropping both games to the ODAC opponent by scores of 4-1 and 8-3.

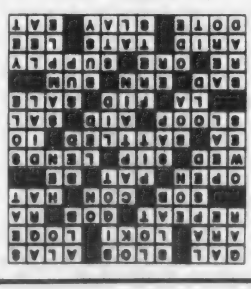
Randolph-Macon, another ODAC opponent, came to Maryville next, and took two games from the Scots. The Scots lost the first game 15-3. The bright spot in the game for the Scots was the hitting of Jeff "Slim" Pierce who went 2 for 2. The Scots also got good days at the plate from both Ken Bartuccio, who went 3 for 7, and Todd Schlenker, who went 2 for 3 in the doubleheader.

In spite of good hitting, the Scots dropped the second game 14-4.



Softball Fields Tourney Victories

By Brian Rigell



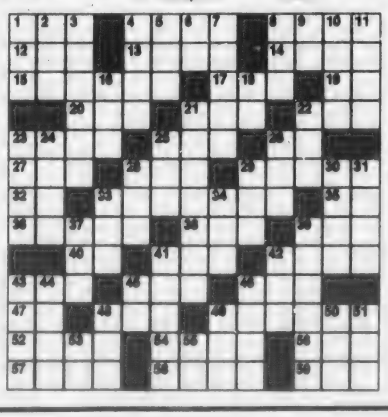
The Lady Scots softball team opened the 1982 season by showing much improvement over last year's squad. The ladies came away from Saturday's season opener at the Hiwassee Invitational Tournament with a record of 2-1. Maryville started the day on an up note by defeating Bryan College 16-12 in the first game, but then lost to the Lady Tigers of Hiwassee 11-1 in five innings due to "too many mental mistakes," according to Coach Ballard. After regrouping, the Lady Scots showed their talents by defeating Brevard College of N.C. in an afternoon game by the score of 16-6 in five innings.

The whole team is to be commended for their performance, with special acknowledgement going to Nickie Frazier for her outstanding pitching in all three games and a bases loaded single which produced the only Maryville run against Hiwassee.

The Lady Scots home opener is Thursday, April 1 against Lincoln Memorial University, 3 p.m. at Sandy Springs Park.

Puzzle Answer

WANTED



A 3 foot refrigerator to rent for the summer or to purchase.
Please call Mrs. Karen Kenst at 982-1127.

CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Liquid meas.
4 Small mass
8 Woe word
12 Macaw
13 Norse god
14 Theater box
15 Iterate
17 Sailor
19 Sun god
20 Cry
21 Study
22 Chapeau
23 Unlock
25 Stroke
26 Exist
27 Marry
28 Drink slowly
29 Grants use of 32 Diphthong
33 Fought
35 Zeus's beloved
36 Sailing vessel
38 Succor
39 Sodium chloride
40 State: Abbr.
41 Wooden pin
42 Vendition
43 Evil
45 Sea eagle
46 Tramp
47 Scale note
48 Mineral
49 Provide
52 Dry
54 Makes lace
56 Robert E. —
57 Lavish fondness on
58 Kill
59 Dine

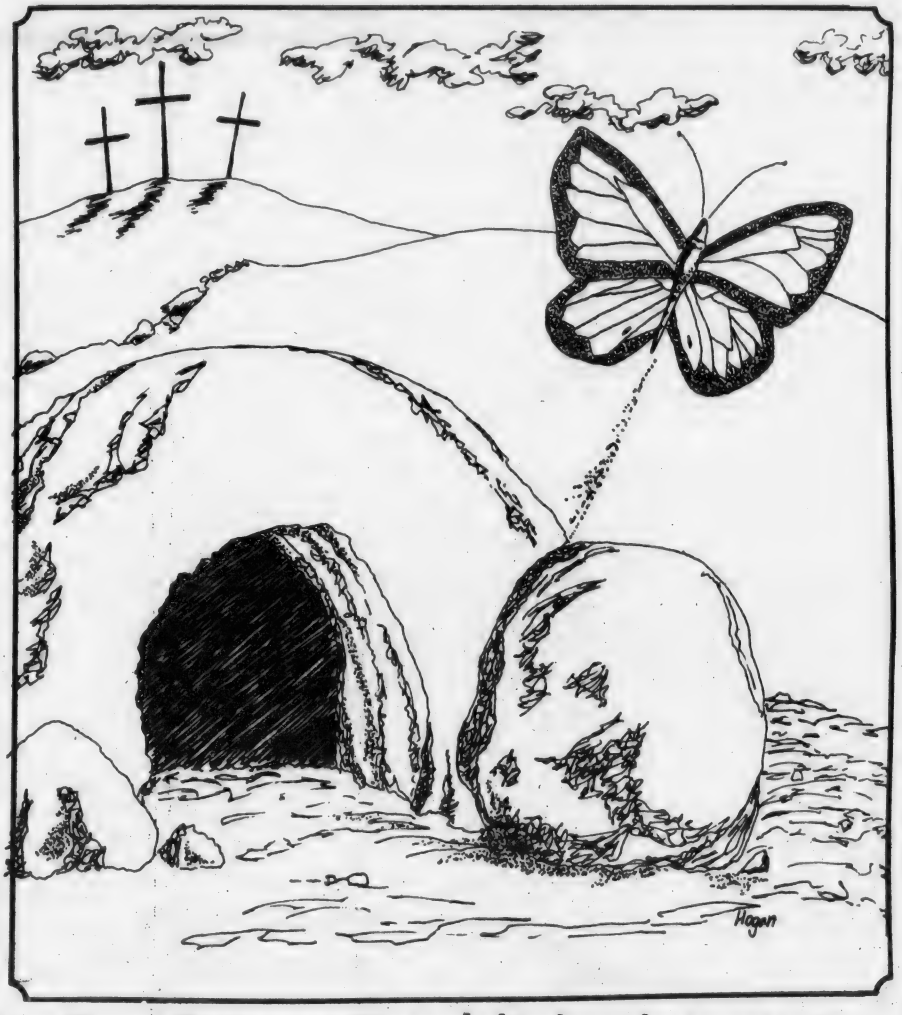
DOWN
1 Needlefish
2 Exist
3 Fell into disuse
4 Telltale
5 Land parcel
6 Stamp of approval
7 Zealot
8 Priest's vestment
9 Behold!
10 Taj Mahal site
11 Chair
16 Vast age
18 Preposition
21 Army officer
22 Layer
23 Is in debt
24 Toll
25 Fruit seed
26 Pallet
28 Weaken
29 Conducted
30 Watch face
31 Food fish
33 Neckpiece
34 Cover
37 Ancient
39 Specimen
41 Stews
42 Eat
43 Wire nail
44 Danish island
45 Interjection
46 Occupied
48 Poem
49 As written: Mus.
50 Meadow
51 Still
53 Pronoun
55 Man's nickname

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 20 Trial Edition | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, April 8, 1982

Students Meet An Annual Sunrise

By Mary Hughes



Maryville College will celebrate Easter morning with a Sunrise Service at 6:09 a.m. in the college woods amphitheater.

Rev. Peter Vial, MC campus minister, will lead in worship. Dr. William Dent, MC math instructor, and students Stephen Ford, Jim Kidder, and Beth Sieber will participate in the service.

MC Concert Choir, directed by Kent Skinner, will sing "With a Voice of Singing" by Ken Jennings, "Rise Up My Love, My Fair One" by Healey Willan and "Wondrous Love," arranged by Paul Christieansen.

The MC Brass Choir, directed by David Irwin, will play Beethoven's "Three Equali" and "Easter Anthem" by William Billings.

Following the Sunrise Service will be a complimentary breakfast of hot cross buns and coffee in the lobby of Lloyd Dormitory. All area residents are invited to share in the service and breakfast.

Fellowship For Peace Established At MC

By Traci Fraser

"Have you heard about the nuclear arms freeze amendments?" this was the first question of the survey sent out last week by the Peace Fellowship Committee. The four survey questions asked if students knew about the proposed nuclear arms freeze amendments, if they supported them, and if there was interest in a peace fellowship and a campus rally against nuclear arms.

The results of the survey show that 171 people responded to the questions. 81% percent had heard about the amendments, and 83% supported them. 62% showed interest in a peace fellowship, and 78% would attend a rally.

The survey was distributed by the Peace Fellowship Committee to poll student thought on the issue of nuclear arms. The Peace Fellowship Committee grew out of student and faculty interest in questions and issues that were raised during February Meetings. The group proposed that they should be chartered under the World Concern Committee.

The Peace Fellowship, according to Campus Minister Peter Vial, will be "a formal way of keeping on top of the peace issue." He said that the fellowship would include on going meetings and discussions that emphasize the topic.

Maryville College will participate in the national "Ground Zero Week" April 19-24. MC will be one of six Tennessee colleges including UTK and Vanderbilt to participate. Every night during the week informative meetings on issues dealing with nuclear arms and energy will be discussed. An open-mike rally will be held on the 24th, with speakers and band to be presented.

The Peace Fellowship and "Ground Zero Week" are not to push anti-nuclear thought, but rather to educate the community about nuclear weapons and energy. Beth Neil, coordinator of the Peace Fellowship Committee remarked, "hopefully, the programs will help students get involved."

What's Going On?

Thursday, April 8

3:00 - Softball game against Bryan College at Dayton

Track - Dogwood Relays at UT through Saturday

Friday, April 9

2:00 - Men's Tennis against Tennesee Wesleyan at Athens

Saturday, April10

1:00 - Women's Tennis against Milligan College at Milligan

1:30 - Baseball against Fisk University

2:00 - Men's Tennis against Milligan College

9:00 - Dance in the Alumni Gym sponsored by Chi Beta

Sunday, April 11

6:09 - Sunrise Service

Tuesday, April 13

1:00 - Baseball against Sewanee at Sewanee

1:00 - Women's Tennis against LMU

3:30 - Softball against Tennessee Temple at Chattanooga

7:00 - Fashion Show in the Chapel

Wednesday, April 14

10:30 - Mid-Week worship service in the CCM

2:00 - Men's Tennis against Tennessee Tech

8:00 - Dating Game in the Chapel

Editorial

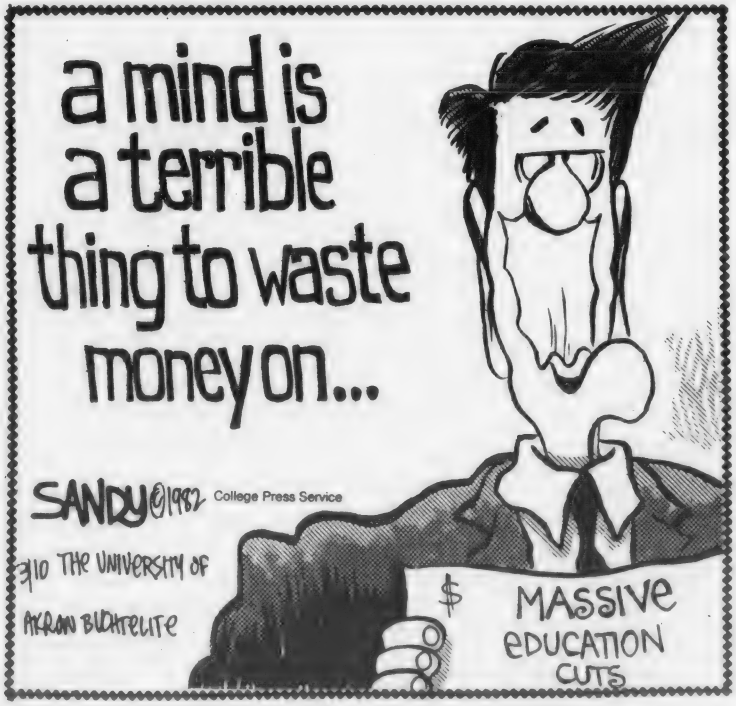
Keeping Up With The Beat

Life at Maryville College can be very fast-paced. In keeping up with the daily schedule of classes, homework, working, term-papers, quizzes and tests (not to mention choir rebersals, athletic practices, meetings, play rebersals, etc. . .), the days seem to rapidly drop off the calendar. It's already April! I even heard our faculty members utter, "without these committee meetings and chores, I'd get so much accomplished." And I'm always thinking, "If only I had another 24 hours."

Obviously, we wouldn't want to part with anything that's packed into our schedule, so what's the answer - how do we find relief from this cycle's rush? Quick trips to Knoxville, drives to the mountains, catching a movie, or eating out always find their way on the list of solutions. And, we are always planning the next Thanksgiving, Christmas, spring or summer break. Of course the ultimate is, "____many more days to graduation."

But are we really in such a rush? We're anxious for the future, but we're eager to remember the past - the unavoidable MC paradox. I'm not sure that we are in the rush which appears on the surface; I think we're only trying to make sense of this puzzling paradox.

Letters



Dear Editor,

This letter is in resonse to the very recent insensitivity displayed on this campus. Earlier this week a student was involved in a serious accident. By dinner time there were humorous rumors and jokes started about the incident. In regard to all of this ignorance I wish to raise the question: Do you know what it's like? Do you know what it's like to be from Atlanta and to hear white motivated jokes like, "What's the new name for the Chattahoochee River? The "Chuck-A-Nigger" River! Am I supposed to laugh? Do you know what it's like to have to take white-oriented standardization tests in order to be admitted into a pre-dominantly white college? Do you know what it's like to wake up every morning and look at yourself in the mirror and say "Put on your smile - they've allowed you to go to school with them"? Do you know what it's like to go to class day after day only to be reminded that you are a minority in this world? Do you know what it's like to feel uncomfortable when someone says something like ". . . it's not right to have all Black waiters at the Country Club" when you know that the only real reason that they said it was to make you feel like they were apologizing for not being one of you? But that's just my point - you are not one of us. Sure, we all have pressures to deal with, but can't we recognize that we don't have the same type pressures facing us. Before someone grabs a pencil and some paper in rebuttal saying "If you don't like it here leave!" It has not been my attempt to say that Maryville is not right for Black (or any other minority) students, I am merely saying that we should all remember the old Indian addage "It is wrong to criticize a fellow warrior until you've walked a mile in his moccasins." I walk in your world everyday, have you ever taken a step in my world.

I am not asking for any special favors, I only ask to be allowed an equal chance. I don't expect you to give me things because I'm black nor to fill your quota, I only expect respect for the accomplishments that I have made as well as those made by other people of color.

Lastly, getting back to the particular student, I am certain that with all of our prayers(thank God that prayers don't come in colors) he will once again be with us - all of us. The next time that an accident occurs, remember this question: Do you know what it's like?

Cynthia "Simp" Broughton

The Highland Echo

Trial Editor . . . . . Bill Warren, Jr.

Consulting Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor. . . . . Traci Frasier

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Sports Editors . . . . . Kenny Martin, Brian Rigell

Artists . . . . . Barbara Hogan, Cindy Cunningham

Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Solow Completes Affiliate Artist Program

Cellist Jeffrey Solow will present the fourth concert in Maryville College's 1981-82 Performing Artists Concert series on Tuesday, April 13, at 8:15 p.m. in the MC Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Solow, the 1981-82 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist presented locally by the College, will be assisted by Pianist Robert Bonham and Clarinetist David Irwin, both members of the MC music faculty.

The concert, one of over 40 events in the Blount County Chamber of Commerce's 1982 Dogwood Art Festival, is free and open to the public.

Program selections will include "Divertimento in D Major" by Haydn, "Solo Suite in D Major" by Bach, "Duo No. 1 for Clarinet and Cello in C Major" by Beethoven and Popper's "Hungarian Rhapsody in D Major, Opus 68."

Solow will also perform "Introduction, Theme & Variation Brilliante in B-flat Major, Opus 28, No. 2" by Schubert-Piatigorsky, "Adagio & Allergro in A-flat Major, Op. 70" by Schumann and "Apres un reve" by Faure.

The concert will mark the third of three visits to Maryville by Solow, a highly celebrated cellist who has toured throughout the United States, Latin America, Europe and the Far East. Since his second visit to MC in January, Solow has been busy on tour with trips to New York City and Alaska.

The former principal cellist with the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra has appeared in the past at the Spoleto Festival, the Marlboro Music Festival, the Sitka Festival in Alaska and the Newport Music Festival.

Dr. Bonham came to MC in 1965 as assistant professor of music. An award-winning pianist, he holds the Bachelor of Music degree from Phillips University and the Master of Music degree from the University of Kansas. Bonham received his doctoral degree last year from Ohio University.

Irwin serves as instructor of music at MC and coordinates and directs the Maryville - Alcoa - College-Community Orchestra. He received his Bachelor of Music degree from Florida State University and his Master of Music degree from Yale.

Bunny Delivers Message

By Joe Wynne

In a book near being published, the Easter Bunny speaks out against the growing pessimism towards the future of the American family.

It is likely that no one knows better about families than rabbits. The Easter Bunny himself was a member of a litter of six, and his mother was still having babies when he left the hole.

His interest in family life is seen most significantly in his establishment of the Easter egg hunt. This was done so that families would have something to do while the kids were on Easter break from school.

There may have been a little selfishness, he admits, taking the credit for starting the hunts, but he doesn't want to be known as "just another Santa" bringing goodies for the kids. He says that all that is needed is to give a chance for the family to do things together no matter what kind of family it is.

The pessimism results from new facts gained recently about the modern family. The traditional household with the husband working, the wife"remaining home," and children only makes up 13% of American families. Today, the wives are working, children are being kept at care centers, and divorces have led to many one-parent households. The reasoning goes that all this must lead to terrible consequences for people and society.

The Easter Bunny, however, questions this reasoning. Are people really letting this important social institution fall apart? Or is it

Continued on page 4

CIV Schedule

Continuing a theme on Japan, many of the CIV's scheduled this spring deal with various subjects concerning life in Japan. Some of the topics listed below are tentative, but the dates, speakers and times are firm.

April 13 - Jeffry Solow, Performing Artist Concert, 8:15 p.m. FAC Music Hall.

*April 14 - Dr. Fred Martinson, Art historian from UT-K. "Japanese Art." 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

April 21 - Dr. Blanshei, head of the UT-K History Department. This is the Alpha Gamma Sigma Recognition Program. Her topic will be "Criminal Justice in Medieval Florence." 9:20 a.m. in the Wilson Chapel.

*April 27 - Dr. Akira Iriye, Head of the University of Chicago History Department. His presentation will deal with some aspect of Japanese-American relations. 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall. N.B.! This is a Tuesday program!

May 5 - Dr. Yerker Anderson, Assistant to the Dean and Associate Professor of Sociology at Gallaudet College. Dr. Andersons's topic is not known yet, but he will be here as part of Deaf Awareness Week. 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

May 11- Judy Mancinelli, pianist. Peforming Artist Concert. 8:15 p.m., FAC Music Hall.

*May 12 - Dr. Martin Bronfenbrenner, Professor of Economics, Duke Universtiy. His topic will deal with Japanese business, espcially the issue of economic productivity. 9:20 a.m., FAC, MH.

*May 19 - Dr. Charles Hanbrick, Department of Religious Studies, Vanderbilt University. "The Role of Religion in Contemporary Japan." 9:20 a.m., FAC Music Hall.

*Denotes programs that are a part of the Japan Series.

Skinner Performs

Maryville College Music Instructor Kent Skinner, tenor, will give a faculty recital on Thursday, April 8, at 8:15 in the College's Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Skinner will be accompanied by Sallie Schoen, pianist, and William Bommeije on the French horn.

The program will feature "Canticle No. 3" by Benjamin Britten with the French horn and selection by Monteverdi, Schubert and Bernstein. Skinner will also perform contemporary songs in English by Charles Ives, Ralph Vaughan Williams and Frank Bridge, as well as a selection of French songs by Szulc, Hahn and de Falla.

A native of Colorado, Skinner came to Maryville College in September 1982 from Garden City Community College in Kansas where he served as voice and choral instructor. He has also served as assistant conductor and teaching assistant at the University of Northern Colorado.

He holds the Bachelor of Arts degree in music from the University of Northern Colorado and the Master of Music degree from both the University of Northern Colorado and the University of Texas-Austin.

At MC, Skinner conducts the College's Concert Choir. This marks his first faculty recital at MC.

Sallie Schoen, a registered accompanist, is on the music faculty at MC. She has won critical acclaim for her solo appearances at universities and churches in the eastern U.S., including performance at Carnegie Mellon Hall in Pittsburgh and at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City. Schoen has made numerous guest appearances with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra and in concerts at MC.

William Bommelje, French horn, is on the music faculty at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville.

The faculty recital is free and open to the public.

Softball Splits At Home

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots softball team opened its home season by splitting a doubleheader with Lincoln Memorial University at Sandy Springs Park last Thursday. LMU managed to take the first game 8-6. Coach Ballard attributed the defeat to "too many mental errors." He specifically mentioned "the throws to the cut-off" (or lack of them) as one of the problems.

At the plate in the first game, the ladies were led by Mimi Chesney (2-2); Rachel Reese(3-4); and Leah Gross, Kim Allen, and Kandy Schram (each 2-4). The rest of the team batted well with Nickie Frazier, Charlotte Hamby, and Stacy Medlin each going 1-3; Barbara Hogan 1-4; Sue Van Aken 1-2; and Kathy Walker 0-1. Overall, they batted 16-2 which is .470.

The second game was dominated by the Lady Scots as they handed LMU a 9-4 defeat. The Lady Scots batted a hot .582(21-36) to show that they too can hit the ball. The ladies were led by Frazier (3-3), Schram (3-4), Chesney (3-4) and Van Aken (2-3). Rounding out the rest of the lineup were: Hogan,Allen, Gross, and Reese (each 2-4); Medlin (1-2); Hamby (1-3); and Beverly Evans (0-1).

The ladies also showed some good glove work by putting out nine straight LMU batters between the third and sixth innings. After allowing a two-out homerun in the top of the sixth, the ladies were able to shut down the next batter to end the inning. The seventh inning went three up-three down to end the game and give the Lady Scots their win against two losses.

Once again the whole team is to be praised for their efforts with this week's special commendation going to Rachel Reese, Kim Allen, and Leah Gross for successfully completing the first double play of the season (4-6-3). That is second to shortstop covering second base to first for those who don't know.

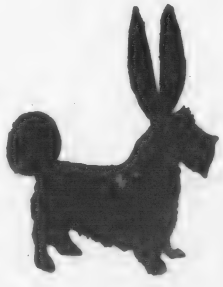
A special thanks goes to the spectators. The fan's support is always greatly appreciated by the team.

The ladies go on the road to play LMU at Harrogate (7th), Bryan at Dayton (8th), Tennessee Temple at Chattanooga (13th), and Milligan (15th) before their next home game against Bryan scheduled for the 16th. Good luck, Ladies!

Fighting Scots Swing A Victory

By Kenny Martin

The Fighting Scots' baseball team resumed their season March 29 by dropping both games of a doubleheader to Tennessee Tech. Tech came to Maryville ready to play, as they trounced the Scots 22-3 in the first game.



A five run seventh inning wasn't enough for the Scots to overcome an eight run Tech lead in the second game, as Maryville lost 8-5. The rally was led by Todd Schlenker, Domingo Castillo, Ken Bartuccio, Bill Dent, and Jeff Pierce who all singled in the inning.

In their next outing, against Tennessee Wesleyan, the Scots were disappointed again as they were defeated in both games. The lack of hitting was again the problem as Maryville lost by the scores of 16-2 and 10-0.

Eastern Mennonite came to Maryville April 3 for two key ODAC games. Pat Moyer led the Scots to a 4-1 victory, as he went two for three at the plate. Mike Wortman was the winning pitcher for the Scots.

In the second game, Moyer again had a hot bat as he homered in the first inning. Not to be outdone, Chuck Angelus hit a three run homer in the fourth inning to insure the Scots of a 7-2 victory. Mark Woodhull was the winning pitcher in the second game.

The Scots are now 3-5 in the conference with two important games against Emory & Henry coming up next.

Bunny, cont. from page 3

simply going through some changes?

Economics forces many wives to enter the job market, but the children do not necessarily have to suffer. In fact, more and more companies are realizing this and are implementing on-the premises childcare, paternity leaves, and flextime so that parents are now able to fulfill the needs of their children.

As a result, more fathers are beginning to devote more time to their children. Since they are not the only breadwinners, pressure to make more and more money is relieved. Employees refuse to be transferred to other cities because their spouses will not leave their own jobs. Thus, the children remain in a stable environment.

Day-care facilities within companies let parents see their kids during the day, so their job satisfaction increases.

Alimony is going to fathers who get custody of their children, because they are showing devotion that has not been possible before.

Of course, there are problems associated with these changes in society. His point is, though, that the families are not taking these choices lightly but are doing what they think is best in their cases. Many companies and communities have helped out. Society has changed but the needs are the same.

The "new families" (single parents, mother working/"househusband," father with custody, two-career families) are working hard to overcome their problems as always. What makes a family a family is this desire to work together, their love for each other. Love does not depend on the number of members in a family, but rather their relationship to one another.

He has done his part for the family, and now says that everyone else should pitch in.

Love is an undeniable force that is not destroyed by hardship but is strengthened by it. Moreover, it cannot be manufactured by forcing people to act in a certain way, but by letting them relate naturally.

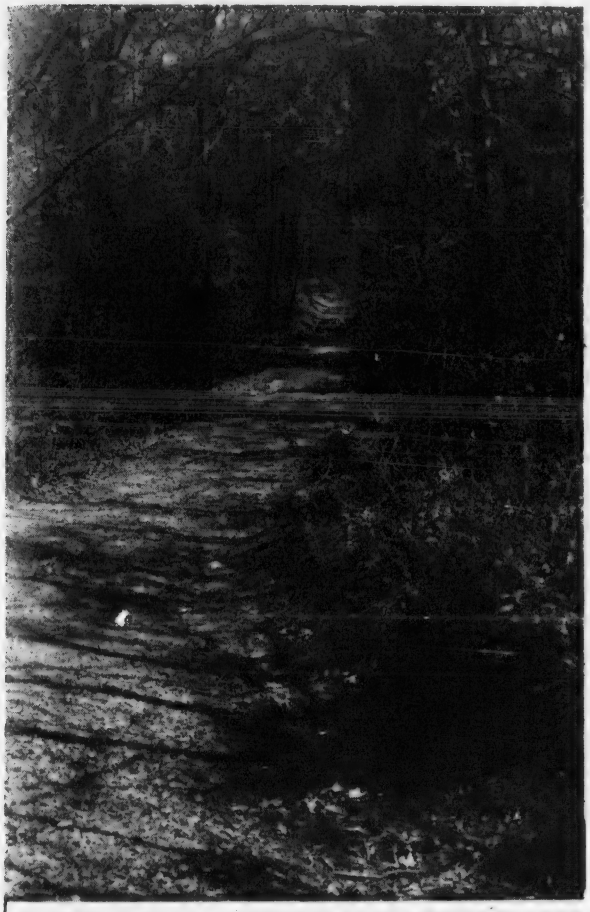
To those who do not think the future for the family as it is looks bright, the Easter Bunny has a message: The success of the family is just like the Easter egg. It is always out there, you just have to look for it.

Let us type your resume for you
Call 983-5952 or 982-7425 between 8:00 pm and 9:00 pm Monday - Friday

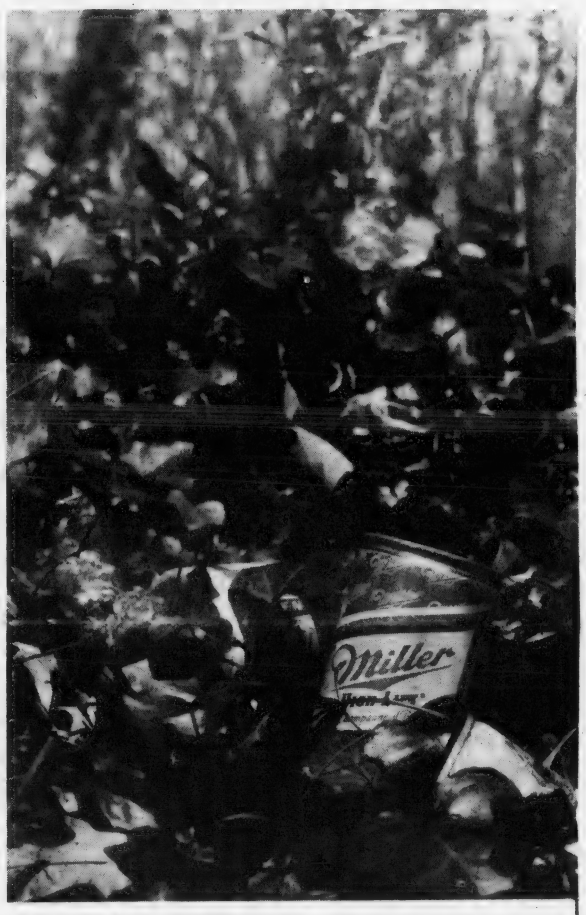
Delta Omicron Easter Baskets:

Orders - Monday - Friday (4/9) Lunch and Dinner

$2.00 You pick it up at Brunch Saturday 4/10



or



$2.25 The Easter Messenger will deliver it to the person's dorm room Saturday after 1:00

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 21 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, April 15, 1982

College Woods - College Dump?

The College Woods is one of Maryville College's many assets that provide a place for quiet meditation and inspiration. Lately, however, the beauty of the area has been marred by the dumping of non-biodegradable refuse along with the piles of leaves and natural trimmings. This inconsideration can be avoided by the separation of litter from leaves, and placing it in the appropriate trash recepticle.

Curriculum Cut To The Core

By Joe Wynne

In a recent meeting with some science majors, Dr. Naylor reviewed some of the changes that the Maryville College curriculum will undergo when a new core program will take effect next year. Some areas will be extensively changed, but, according to Naylor, students here now are not bound by the new program; what they signed up for under the MC catalogue is what they will continue with.

"The college is obliged to offer the programs as they are stated in the catalogue until you graduate," Naylor said.

However, there may be cases in which conflicts arise as when classes that will eventually be dropped will not have enough students to be economically feasible, so that a reasonable substitute may have to be made. No one will ever be asked to do more than expected from the beginning.

Also, Maryville is going on the "semester hour" system. Most classes will be worth three semester hours, while science courses with labs will be worth four semester hours. A full course load for a term, then, will be between eight and eleven semester hours per term.

How payments will be made according to semester hours has not yet been established.

Major changes have been made in a few areas. The humanities sequence is totally different from what we have now," he said.

Briefly, there will be three components - philosophical, literical, and historical - and the student is required to take something from each component. Students will have the option of specializing in a period of history (the Renaissance, for example) in all three aspects.

A math requirement of all students will take the form of elementary statistics, with some work on the computer that makes the course applicable to modern society.

Freshmen inquiry will

Continued on page 3

What's Going On

Thursday, April 15

2:00 - Women's Tennis against Carson Newman at Jefferson City

3:00 - Softball against Milligan College at Milligan

Friday, April 16

1:00 - Baseball against Lynchburg College at Lynchburg, VA.

Saturday, April 17

1:00 - Baseball against Washington and Lee in Lexington

1:30 - Softball against Tennessee Temple here

9:00 - Men's Tennis against Emory & Henry and Roanoke at Emory and Henry

9:00 - 11:00 am - Hole in one contest and registration

11:00 - Welcome on Pearsons Patio

2:00 - 3:00 - Building tour

6:00 - 7:00 - Dinner in Pearsons

9:00 - 12:00 - Coffee House in Fine Arts Patio

Sunday April 18

4:00 - Campus fellowship

Monday, April 19

2:00 - Women's Tennis against Milligan College here

Tuesday, April 20

2:00 - Men's Tennis against Roane State at Harriman

2:00 - Women's Tennis against Bryan College here

1:00 - Baseball against Tennessee Wesleyan here

Wednesday, April 21

3:00 - Softball against Hiwassee College at Madisonville

9:00 - 4:00 - rummage sale sponsored by the World Concerns Committee in the Alumni Gym.

EDITORIALS

It's A Crime

There is (perhaps) only one thing which I do not regret leaving behind at home-home being South Florida-when I return to Maryville. That is the rate of crime, and its day-to-day prevelence which no longer warrents page one exposure, but pushes such offenses to the back sections of a newspaper laden with atrocities.

And the situation is not improving: It is now legal for drivers to carry a gun on the front seat of the car (for quick access, I suppose). All is not lost, however, for posted signs will warn travelers to use the interstate at their own risk. The new line of spring fashions is now on the racks and, along with the incoming mini-skirts and balloon pants, are articles which will be a bit heavy in hot temperatures but perhaps necessary - bullet-proof clothing.

No, everything is not well in the Sunshine State. It's good to get back to Maryville, yet the same sun shines on Tennessee, and everything is not as well as it could be. Although there is no comparing Florida and Maryville, there are certain worries that pervade the campus. One that has become an increasing problem is the possibility threat that upon entering your room, you may find some of your belongings missing. The filching of personal articles has been seen, through the ages, as the typical college prank, but when every last piece has been taken and never returns, when the washers and dryers must be patrolled for the entire 90 minutes, and when the gym locker room needs a guard; it ceases to be a joke.

In one dorm, it has become virtually imperative that its residents lock their doors every time they step out of the room - even to take a shower.

The atmosphere of a small college, like that of a small town, is related in part to some measure of trust and is destroyed when people go from being neighbors to being suspects. Perhaps stricter enforcement of the laws dealing with those caught stealing would serve to deter an increase of this problem - after all it is a crime.

Letters

Dear Editor:

A recent editorial stated, "Take notice of what is going on around you, and let the government know how you feel about it. If enough people get involved and take some action, it can make the difference." I agree whole heartedly! However, I hear some students say that they really don't know how they feel about certain issues because they don't know what is involved and don't have time to read about them.

Next week, we will have a chance to become more educated about the psychological, sociological, and economic aspects in the Nuclear Arms Race. I urge all the students and faculty to plan ahead in order to be able to attend the scheduled seminars and rally. We simply cannot suppress this important issue any longer.

If you have any doubts or feel you definitely are in support of the build up of nuclear arms, by all means, come and discuss your feelings at the seminars. Also, the rally will be open mike, so we have not closed our minds to the other alternative. However, I do believe we can plan a realistic program to avoid nuclear conflict, with education about the issues as the key to unlocking the dilemmas. So "make a difference" and be more involved by taking advantage of this opportunity to learn more about an issue that effects us all.

Beth Neil.

Dear Editor,

I'm afraid I'm unable to sit back and watch what seems a never ending battle of words. I'm referring to the responses to the article "An Echo Survey - The RA/SA System" by Mary Hughes. It looks to me like a few RA's and SA's didn't appreciate her article too much - putting it mildly. I do understand that there are two sides to every story, but if that's true, have you looked from the reporter's side? Maybe if I were an RA or SA I might have taken it personally - if my name were mentioned. I really can't say though. I only read the paper and saw opinions given by students about their RA'S and SA's. I'm not anyone special, just a student trying to make sense out of all the commotion.

Laura Hart

P.S. In response to the April 1st article entitled "Dear Editor" well, I think it was rather unfair to imply a person a coward for not signing their name. I'm sure they believe in their words as much as you. Quite possibly, they were smarter than you think!

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor ..... Barbara Booker

Business Manager ..... Beth Sieber

Layout Editor ..... Barb Booker

Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas

Sports Editor ..... Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Resolution Spawns Hope

According to the ballot returns, some students are unaware of the present freeze resolution. This resolution grew out of concern by a U.N. conference on disarmament in 1978. Harold Willens states, "It became clear if we relied on governments to end the arms race, humanity would be obliterated . . . humanity's survival is the greatest moral issue of our time and . . . only a citizen's movement that reached past government's could pressure governments to put down nuclear weapons"

The proposed resolution is actually limited in form in that it doesn't discuss the aspects related to war, such as defense spending, weapons used, or disarmament. It is simply a call for the American public to petition the U.S. government for a bilateral, not unilateral, 'Freeze' on all nuclear weapons by the U.S. and USSR. It states that there exists "substantial and growing danger of nuclear war between U.S. and the Soviet Union which would result in millions of deaths . . . To reduce the threat of nuclear war, it asks both governments "to halt the testing, production and further deployment of all nuclear weapons in a way that can be checked and verified by both sides."

Mary Ellen Leary of Commonwealth states that this resolution has no legal status, but it is," . . . an expression of the public will or rather, of a public hope, at a time when hope is on the decline."

The Reagan administration will consider an agreement between the U.S. and USSR once parity is reached. Does this measure actually satisfy the requests of those favoring the freeze resolution? We, as the American public, must decide.

Rally For Peace

Due to growing concern about the posssibility of nuclear war, the Peace Fellowship Committee will sponsor educational seminars April 19th-23rd and a rally on campus, April 24th. The seminars will be held at 7:30 in the Campus Center for Ministry. The rally will be held on the frisbee field tentatively at 2:00 p.m. Please note the following tentative schedule of events.

Monday	Mr. John Weston, Jr.	"Nuts & Bolts Talk"
Tuesday	Dr. Doug Cox	(Slide Show) "The Last Epidemic"
Wednesday	Dr. Butzeiger	Morning Worship Service (10:30)
	Dr. Pickens	(Movie)"Decision to Drop the Bomb" and discussion of Sociological & Psychological Issues
Thursday	Dr. Ernie Goss	"Economic Aspects of Nuclear Arms"
Friday	Dr. Bunde	"Ground Zero" slides "War Without Winners" channel 26 2:30 p.m.
Saturday	Open Mike Rally	Singers
	Dr. David Cartlidge	Jim Grubbs
	Mr. Sam Franklin	Bryan McFarland
	Mr. Bill Dent	David Denshaw's Band.

Liberal Arts vs Technical

PRINCETON, N.J. (CPS)

Liberal arts grads may spend the coming summer competing for a slim selections of jobs, but students completing their four-year degree programs in high-technology fields - engineering, science and computer technology -- face the opposite dilemma, according to a new book on the subject.

"Students in technical fields don't have to worry about finding jobs," asserts Rea Christoffersson of Peterson's Guides, which has just released its 1982 Guide to Engineering, Science and Computer Jobs. "Rather, they face a bewildering array of companies and government agencies to choose from."

Peterson's, which also publishes a variety of campus directories, began the pus directories, began the job guide in 1979 in response to the mushrooming high-tech job market, she explains.

For the last few years engineering and computer science majors have had the most promising job prospects of all college graduates. Despite some softness in this spring's job market, the demand for high-tech majors is holding up well, the report suggests.

"The book has more companies listed in it every year," adds Sandra Grundfest, the guide's editor. "Our first editon had 950 firms listed, and this year there are over 1200. But I think that's as much a factor of more people being aware of us as it is growth in job opening."

In the guide's first edition, starting salaries averaged $20,000 for engineers , $16,000 for computer science majors, and around $14,000 for science grads, she recalls.

This year engineers are getting $24,000, computer science grads $18,000, and science grads $16,000, she says.

And while most of the job openings tend to be clustered around large cities especially in the West and Southwest, Grundfest notes that "every state has openings."

Grundfest and Christoffersson expect the demand for high-tech grads to continue "at least into the 1990s," although they point out that specialized categories within those fields may come in and out of vogue in the meantime.

Core, cont. from page 1

run through the first term in conjuntion with a one semester hour "orientation".

Also required in the new core will be social science 220, a class designed to introduce American institutions.

The four course language requirement will be lowered to two courses with more emphasis on the oral/aural aspects (communicating with others) rather than reading.

Science Fundamentals and Science Thought will be dropped. Instead, a 150 level science course which is "less disciplinary" than Science Fundamentals and entails more thinking about how science is performed from the perspective of the non-science major will be substituted. Also, Humanities 390 will take up values by discussions in politics, art, science, etc.

There will be in addition a requirement in comparative religions, while the past courses of non-western studies, English, and fine arts may be slightly restructured but will be basically the same.

The core curriculum is not the only academic program to be changed. Some new majors have been added, two of which Dr. Naylor said would be pre-professional programs in physical therapy and the health sciences.

If you would like to know about new majors you may be able to get into or have other questions concerning the phasing in of the new core, contact Dr. Bolden, Dr. Bonham, Dr. Walker, Dr. Dent, Dr. Perkins, Dr. Naylor, Miss Hess, Ed Welch, or Russ Gibson.

Brighter Outlook For Yearbook?

TORRANCE, CA (CPS)

In a trend that may soon find its way to college campuses, six California high schools are experimenting this year with video yearbooks to supplement their usual paper editions

"We're not trying to replace paper yearbooks at all," says Dan Farrom, producer/director of Video Yearbooks, Inc., the company which is producing the videotapes. "This is something students can add to their regular yearbooks as a supplement."

"We do highlights of major events, edit them, and blend them with music," he explains. "There are also interviews with students and a section where the kids can give their wishes for the future."

Everything is then packaged into a one-hour videotape, and sold to students for $60 a cassette.

As for the college market, Farrom says his production team is ready to take on any campus that's interested in chronicling this year's activities on tape.

But, he adds, "We've found that most colleges already have their own video departments or even their own tv studios, so they may choose to do it themselves if they find the idea attractive."

CHEERLEADER TRYOUTS

Cheerleader tryouts will be held on Thursday, April 29, at 7:00 p.m., in the P.E. building. Each candidate must interview and register with Mrs. Brennan, in the library, before Tuesday, April 20. A clinic for cheerleader candidates will be conducted prior to tryouts. Details will be announced in the dining hall and on posters.

Sanders sends sinister serve sailing

Two Drowned Two Down

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots softball team had a rough time this past week as they lost a double-header to the Lady Rail Splitters of LMU at Harrogate on Wednesday and then were rained out of Thursday's double-header against Bryan at Dayton. The washed out game has been rescheduled for April 20th.

Getting back to Wednesday, the Lady Scots seemed to have trouble from the words "play ball." LMU completely dominated the first game as they won 18-3, and although the second game was closer, it was still controlled by LMU as they won 8-2.

Coach Ballard commented that the cool weather, injuries, and a day off from practice were instrumental in both defeats. He feels that as soon as the weather improves, the team can resume the intense practices they had been engaged in before the cooler weather arrived.

However, all is not as bad as it seems, for the Ladies show definite signs of being a team that will have to be reckoned with. Those of you who say that with a 3-4 record the ladies are not doing well should stop and remember that last year's record was 3-12. It should soon dawn on you that the team has already won as many games as last year, and with their hustle and desire the only place the ladies can go is up.

This week, special recognition goes to a player and a fan. The player, Kim Allen, hammered a triple in the second game against LMU. Although Kim has not been struggling at the plate, she has not been hitting as well as expected. With Wednesday's triple she is showing signs of hitting to her potential . . . The fan, Tony Mitchell, traveled to Harrogate at his own expense to support the team.

This week is going to be tough with four doubleheaders in five days. The ladies play Tennessee Temple at Chattanooga (13th) and Milligan at Milligan (15th) before returning home to play Bryan and Tenn. Temple at Sandy Springs on Friday at 3:00 and Saturday at 1:30. Let's go Ladies!

Tennis Lobs Close Sets

By Steve Arnold

Well, it's back to the ol' writing saddle again and lets see what we've got. Inexperience took it's toll as the men's tennis team lost its opening match to Milligan by a score of 6-3. Being on the court for the first time can really be a nervous experience, and this was the exact comment from a few of the players. Randy Shackelford took the only singles victory for MC with a 6-1, 6-1 win. Shackelford and Paluga teamed up for a win at doubles 6-4, 6-4, and Raulerson and Kibbons took the final win for the Scots by a score of 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

Throwing that nervousness right out the door, the Scots came right back to take a rain delayed win over Tennessee Wesleyan 7-2. The Scots were leading the match 2-1 when Mother Nature arrived and asked them to move to the gym while she washed the court. As play continued, Shackleford brought the first win 6-6-1, 6-4 to move the Scots ahead 3-1. Wesleyan took the no. 2 spot 6-1, 6-3 over Paluga to close to 3-2. The number 5 spot, Marathon Kibbons, playing one of his four - three setters this year gave the Scots a 4-2 lead with a hard fought and needed win by a 7-6, 3-6, 6-6-4 score. Needing only one more match to clinch, Shackelford and Paluga wasted no time as the first doubles showdown proved to be the margin as they won 6-2, 6-1 giving the Scots a 5-2 lead as Wesleyan forfeited the remaining doubles for a 7-2 Scot victory.

The Scots last two Matches, both on the road, proved very heartbreaking as both were lost by the score of 5-4. Tusculum handed the Scots their first close loss as both teams were even in singles going into doubles. Shackelford and Raulerson (6-2,6-4) (6-2,6-0), Kidder (6-4,6-4), gave MC their singles wins while Raulerson/Kibbons (/-(6-2, 6-4) gave the Scots their only doubles wins.

As for Tennessee Wesleyan again, going into doubles each team had three wins in singles: Shackelford 6-2, 6-4, Kibbons 2-6, 7-6, 7-6, and Raulerson 6-1, 5-7, 7-6 gave the Scots their singles wins while Shackelford/Paluga 6-1, 2-6, 7-6 won the only doubles event. The Scots 1-3 take the road Friday for a weekend tri-match with Emory and Henry and Roanoke.

Scots Batter Fisk

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College baseball team began its week by watching two of its scheduled games washed away by the rain. The April 5 date with Fisk in Nashville and their April6 doubleheader with Emory & Henry were both called on account of rain. The week long absence from the diamond did not hinder the Scots, however, on their return engagement with Fisk in Maryville last Saturday. The Scots combined excellent hitting, fine pitching, and solid defense on their way to a 14-1 frogstrangle. Mike Wortman was the winning pitcher in the contest raising his record to 3-3. An eight run outburst in the sixth inning sealed the victory for the Scots who were behind 1-0 until the third inning. The eight run inning was the biggest run production so far this year for the Scots, and probably in the last four to five years.

On Tuesday, the Scots traveled to Sewanee, Tennssee for a doubleheader against the University of the South. The Scots thumped Sewanee 12-4 in the first game before dropping the nightcap 4-2 in a hard fought struggle. The Scots were led by the pitching of Mike Wortman in the first game, raising his record to 4-3. Pat Moyer led the Scots at the plate, going three for three. In the second game, the Scots fell behind early and never were able to catch up. Mark Woodhull was the hard-luck loser, his record dropping to 2-4. A late seventh inning rally fell short as the Scots' four game winning streak came to a close. Ric Brand and Ken Bartuccio had RBI's for the Scots, Brand's RBI comming in the seventh inning with a double with men on first and second. Bill Dent and Ric Brand had two hits for the Scots; Pat Moyer, Jim Rice, and Ken Batruccio one each.

The Scots' record now stands at 6-14 with two key ODAC doubleheaders coming up this weekend. The Scots travel to Lynchburg, Virginia on Friday to tackle Lynchburg College. On Saturday, the Scots travel to Lexington, Virginia to play the Generals from Washington &Lee. The Scots need to win at least three of the next four games to have a chance at qualifying for the ODAC Tournament, taking place April 24 in Salem, Virginia. The next Scots' home game takes place April 20 when the Scots tackle Tennessee Weslyan in a Tuesday afternoon doubleheader.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 22 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, April 22, 1982

Pam Nelson and Lori Kuchlbauer croon about "broad" Don Xiques in last Saturday's Coffee House.

Parents Entertained

Coffee House rocked Lloyd Saturday night with parents, students and faculty stomping their feet to the beat of talented MC students.

Emcee Tom Hudson, equipped with a trombone, tuxcedo, and tell-tale jokes, entertained the audience and introduced the acts. The 25 performances included jazz dancing by the Das and boogie rhythm to group rap by TNT Dynamite. Contraband drummed up three popular tunes before Johnny Radical and the Anarchist Regime took to the stage.

Comedy underscored the evening. Jean Plant read her original "Wonderful Wayne and the WC" only to be followed by Pam Nelson, Lori Kuchlbauer and covergirl Donald Xiques as their 101 pounds of fun. Dr. Pickens and Dr. Bunde advertised the Protest Music Interim with "Joe Hill" and "I Ain't Marchin' Any More."

Little Nemo brushed his teeth and bounced a basketball after Andy Steinbeck, Tommy Brown and Keith Martin admitted that they "Just couldn't live like that." Brian McFarland and Ruth Wilgus complimented East Tennessee Music with "Four Night Drunk." Beverly Fox and Teri Trotter also presented two Tennessee tunes.

Instrumentals adorned the stage. Andrea Vousden played the flute; Mr. Roger Schmidt charmed the audience with the electric piano; Debbie Hall strummed the guitar; Tom Hudson and Ed Brewer serenaded Ed's father with a trombone duet.

Connie Wheeler and Jina Radozycki signed "Flower are Red" before Linda Hasty and Jean Plant interpreted "Love Is The Answer". Talented students singers including Carol Carter, Cathy Angell, and Ruth Wilgus chimed along with a cow bell. Lori Nelson, Lisa Vandivort, and Carol Cooper formed a melodious trio. Jeff Hayes sang while Bill Bender and Mike Weiss accompanied him on the piano and harmonica.

Rebecca Cole, Cynthia Broughton, Laura Hart and Toko Masilo all sang solos.

The late night ended with a large crowd still in attendance.

Z E R O Spells Disaster

In the event of nuclear war evacuation, don't forget your shovel. The American government will advise you to pack all your valuables (except your pets) and drive to the countryside where you can dig a shelter.

While digging, don't panic. Before the explosion, government officials will predict the seriousness of the blast–an explosion 50 times the power of the Hiroshima bomb–in order to warn you in time. According to scientists, you might be safe if

1. the government is aware of the enemy blast four to five days in advance,
2. the weather allows millions of unpanicked people to flee large cities such as L.A.,
3. the U.S. can predict exactly where a bomb will hit and the exact megatonage of the bomb,
4. the war ends after a 30 minute exchange of bombs with both sides left disarmed,
5. neither side uses warheads that leave deadly radiation in the atmosphere for months and years.

FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) has published a booklet entitled "Protection in the Nuclear Age." The booklet advises the public to take shelter if "relocation should preceed a nationwide nuclear attack." It notes the early symptoms of radiation sickness and suggests, "If a patient has headaches or general discomfort, give him one or two aspirins every 3 or 4 hours (half a tablet for a child under 12)."

Physicians for Social Responsibility (PSR) explain the physical devistation with a more serious tone. Doctors reveal that some locales will reach 800 degrees centigrade.

The trauma and burns will induce vomiting, bleeding gums, diarrhea, and other forms of radiation sickness. With hospitals destroyed, doctors will not be able to attend third degree burns, compound fractures, or severe skull, thorax, and abdomen wounds.

Immense numbers of people will be deafened by the sounds of the explosion. Millions will be blinded from a quick glance at a fireball that is 35 miles away. Most of the population will develop malignant tumors. Dr. Jack Geiger at City College in New York explains that even a limited war will disrupt society. Without electricity, communication, and transportation, medical care will cease. Any sheltered survivors will have to emerge 30 days after the explosions prepared to suffer cancer and genetic disorders.

The government, situated among simplified booklets and tedious safety measures, admits that evacua-

Continued on page 4

What's Going On

Thursday, April 22

3:00 - Softball game against Bryan College here

6:45 - SNEA meeting Thaw 210

Earth Day

Friday, April 23

8:00 - 12:00 - Carnegie Party

Saturday, April 24

9:00 - Circle K Dance In Alumni Gym

Sunday, April 25

Choir sings at New Providence Church

4:00 - Campus Fellowship Group in the CCM

Monday, April 26

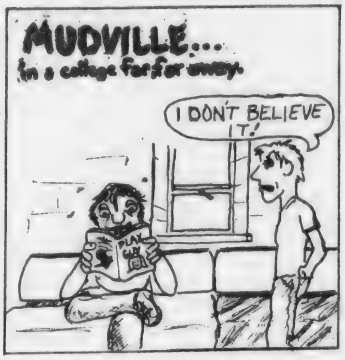
3:00 Softball against Milligan College here

Tuesday, April 27

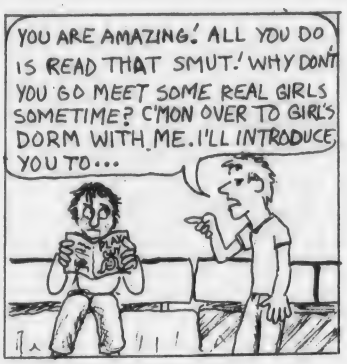
1:00 - Baseball game against Sewanee- here

7:00 - Student Recital in FAC Music Hall

Editorials

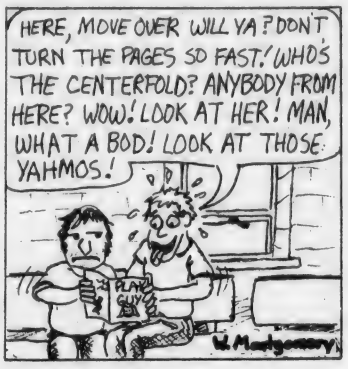


Be Impressed



It has been said that a mind is a terrible thing to waste, and in an attempt to ensure that potential does not go undiscovered, institutions of higher education have been established. Their aim is either to prepare a person for a specific field or to give him a broad background in enough areas to fit him for some preferred job. This is the goal of the college or university on the surface, but there is also an underlying and perhaps more important ideal interwoven into this fabric of study. The unleashing of the creative consciousness. This is the indispensable energy which is responsible for the great achievements of the centuries and even for that which we study. It is also one of the most diverse and demanding disciplines that the college student knows; diverse in that expressions of creativity range from writing to acting, and demanding in that they require practice and, once given life, attention. Recognition is often what the arts find wanting, usually some more than others, and this is the state of the situation at Maryville College.

Plays and recitals are presented intermitantly throughout the year and are attended by a good number of patrons. Coffee houses are part each term, and there is never adequate seating but standing room only. These, the performing arts, are eagerly supported and their singers, actors, and mucisians are immediately aware of their successes by the reaction of the audience. There are, however, other groups which contribute to the culture of the campus but do not have such numerous means of exposure. These are those involved in writing and the visual arts.



Impressions, Maryville's literary magazine, is published only once a year and is a compilation of some of the best poetry, short stories, art, and photography that Maryville's imaginative minds have produced during the year. These works deserve the same amount of recognition that the performing arts receive. Through the purchase of Impressions, which will be on sale soon, this can be accomplished. So support your fellow students and artists.

Letters

Dear Editor,

Once again The Highland Echo has proved irresponsible and unfair in its coverage of sports at Maryville. Track has two meets left this season. I haven't yet seen any coverage of a track meet. Will the last two meets get coverage? Surely a responsible paper would give track at least one story on actual meet results. After all, the other spring sports have had many articles all ready. Equality in all aspects of student life will never be acieved it biased coverage continues. Please report on at least one track meet if at all possible.

Samuel C. Hill III

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Layout Editor . . . . . Barb Booker

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Say Hi To Bachelorette Number One

By Nancy Rojas

Maryville College relived a little television nostalgia when the class of 1983 sponsored The Dating Game: master of ceromonied by Cynthia Broughton. The night's events took place in the college chapel. (An appropriate place for a dating game ???) Participants included Kathy Walker, Brenda Gillespie, Rebecca Cole, Rick Brand, Tom Hudson, Shannon O'Brien, Teresa Welch, Kandy Schram, Wilma Coleman, Martin Paluga, Nancy Rojas, and Donald Xiques.

Questions asked compared with the following: "What is the most exciting thing you've done with a fish?""What stage of Freud's psycho sexual development to you consider yourself in oral, anal, phallic, latent, or genital?" "In your most sexy voice would you please say 'Would you like a peanut butter and jelly sandwich?"

They came out of the woodwork that night (Names will be excluded to protect the innocent). One person's introduction went as follows: "Number____is from your Town, USA. Her ambition is to be a head librarian, espcially in a prestigious university such as Maryville College, Her hobbies include reading and checking magazines to see if the pages are numbered correctly." Another contestant was the epitome of high fashion. She wore a lovely white skirt, gold earrings, the ugliest belt you ever saw and army boots. This person, when asked how often she shaved her legs replied, "When the hair starts to come through my blue jeans." Squiggy took time away from Laverne and Shirley (disguised as someone named Les.) and brought out the shy side of two contestants by asking them if they go dutch on kissing and if they use their tongue. The audience also learned the following information about the contestants: Bachlor no. 2 has a minor in comparitive anatomy and recreational chemicals; Nancy's ambition is to disprove Frued's theory that everything is sexually related and to prove that only the fun things are; our students hobbies include good clean fun, stealing one cookie per package at 3:00 a.m. in Kroger's, making a life out of the beach, wheel chair racing and lint collecting.

By now probably everyone already knows who's going out with whom, but for the purposes of good reporting, Martin Paluga and Kathy Walker, Donald Xiques and Kandy Schram, and Shannon O'Brien and Nancy Rojas. I've always wondered what dating game couples do on their dates, no more wondering for me! (Oh by the way, Bachlor number 2, no, I would not like for you to show me your sceptor.)

Schedule Reminder

Nuclear Awareness continues with

Thursday: Mr. Ernie Goss - - "Economic Aspects of Nuclear Arms"

Friday: "The Last Epidemic" and Signing letters to Congressmen

Television Special: Nuclear War Channel 2, 10:00

Saturday: OPEN MIKE RALLY: 2:30 near Anderson

Speakers	Singers
Dr. Dave Cartlidge	Mr. Tim Grubbs Lowly
Mr. Sam Franklin	Mr. Brian McFarland
Mr. Bill Dent	David Denshaw's Band

Sunday: Ms. Sharon Youngs Morning Worship 9:00

Pirates Bound For Maryville

By Linda Trostle

The Maryville College Playhouse is currently in rehearsal for the Maryville College spring musical - Gilbert and Sullivan's Pirates of Penzance - to be produced April 30, May 1, 6, 7, and 8 at 8:15 p.m. in the Maryville College Theatre. A matinee at 2:45 will be on May 5.

Donald Thomas (director) has cast John Morton (MC graduate) as the Pirate King, as well as students Bryan McFarland as Frederick Jean Plant as Ruth, Karen Kotz as Mabel, David Cartlidge (MC Faculty) as Major General Stanely. Frank Fiore has been cast as Sergant of Police, Jeff Hayes as Samuel, Helen Smith as Isabel, Diane McDaniel as Edith, and Ruth Wilgus as Kate.

The Chorus consists of Pirates, police and Major General Stanley's Wards (daughters): Gloria Anaple, Andy Bevers, Mark Beyer, Tommy Brown, Kathy Custer, Todd Dickson, Brad Goar, Lore Kuchlbauer, Lee Lord, Keith Martin, Melissa Moore, Don Rufus, and Susan Taylor.

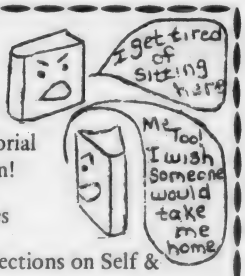
Ken Skinner (MC music department) is the Musical Director. David Irwin (MACCO) is the Orchestra Director. Heidi Warner is the Assistant Director and Stage Manager. Pamela Nelson is costume coordinator. Tillman Crane is the Technical Director and Sharon Crane is the Lighting Designer.

STUDENTS ARE INVITED

Meeting with the Student Affairs Committee of the Board of Directors as a part of the regular spring meeting is open to students.

The meeting will be from 4:00 - 5:00 Thursday, April 22 in Fayerweather 201.

Apparently it was a rainy weekend as this parent takes refuge in Lloyd lobby and reads the newspaper.



SNEA Meets Today

The Student National Education Association (SNEA) will meet Thursday April 22, from 6:45 - 7:30 in Thaw 210. Part of the program will include a narrative filmstrip entitled "Teachers and Public Policy", which was produced by the National Education Association.

Also, MaryJane Babich and Sherry Laipply will speak briefly about their recent trip to the TEA headquarters in Nashville where they attended a seminar/discussion concerning the strengths, weaknesses, and possible changes in the current National Teacher's Examination. This is a national standardized test which is currently required of anyone seeking teacher certification in Tennessee.

The meeting will be very informative, and all education majors are encouraged to attend.

Library books new materials

Just look what titles Lamar Memorial Library has added to its collection!

Rebel Angels by Robertson Davies

The Mind's Eye: Fantasies & Reflections on Self & Soul edited by Douglas Hofstadter

Russia in the Age of Catherine the Great by Isabel De Madariage

Creative Dressing: the Unique Collection of Top Designer Looks that You Can Make Yourself by Kaori O'Connor

Hotel New Hampshire by John Irving

Scots Slug It Out

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Baseball Team suffered through a dismal week, dropping six games in a row to Lynchburg, Washington & Lee, and Tennessee Weslyan. Heading into the final week of the season, the Scots now own a 6-20 record, with a total of four games left on the schedule.

Last Friday in Lynchburg, the Scots' bats fell silent as the Hornets' pitcher tossed a perfect game at the Scots. The Scots never in the game as Lynchburg romped to a 13-0 victory. Mike Wortman was the losing pitcher; his record dropping to 4-5. The second game saw the Hornets romp to an 11-1 victory. The Scots' run came on a RBI single by Todd Schlender scoring Ken Bartuccio. Todd Schlenker was the losing pitcher; his record now stands at 0-2.

On Saturday, the Scots traveled to Lexington, Virginia for a double-header with the Generals of Washington & Lee. In the first game, the Scots jumped out to an early 2-0 lead on RBI singles by Matt Allison and John Riffle but could not hold onto it. The Generals scored three times in the third and eventually won the game 5-3. Mike Wortman had a home run in a losing cause. Mark Woodhull was the losing pitcher for the Scots and is now 2-5 on the year.

The second game saw a furious Maryville rally to tie the game at 3-3 before the rains came. The Generals jumped ahead 3-1 in the first before Maryville started their rally. Bill Dent had the tying RBI for the Scots. Pat Moyer started the game pitching and was replaced by Ken Bartuccio. The game was completed the following Sunday. The score remained 3-3 until the eighth, when Jim Rice's RBI single put the Scots on top 4-3. The Generals were not to be outdone, however, as a bases loaded single in the bottom of the eighth scored two runs and defeated the Scots 5-4. It was a heartbreaking loss for the Scots and Ken Bartuccio, who pitched effectively.

On Tuesday, Tennessee Weslyan rolled into town for a doubleheader with the Scots. The Scots had a score to settle with Weslyan, who earlier defeated the Scots 16-0 and 12-2. The first game saw the Scots jump out to an early 2-1 lead on RBI singles by Bill Dent and Todd Schlenker took the loss, but piched very well in a spot start.

The second game saw Weslyan wear down the Scots on their way to an 8-1 victory. Jim Rice had the lone RBI for the Scots. Mark Woodhull again was the hard luck loser, his record dropping to 2-6.

Maryville has four games remaining, one a Saturday doubleheader against the Wasps of Emory & Henry, and the other on Tuesday against the University of the South. With four victories, the Scots can end the season winning ten games, something which has not been done here since 1976. Come out Saturday and Tuesday and support the Scots as they strive for that ten game mark.

Mother Nature4-0 Lady Scots 2-2:

By Brian Rigell

Once again the weather has played the role of a spoiler as far as the Lady Scots softball team is concerned. However, it was not the cooler temperature of previous weeks, but the spring showers of this past week that disrupted the schedule. Both doubleheaders against Tennessee Temple were rained out and have not as yet been rescheduled.

The Lady Scots managed to split the remaining four games that were scheduled by defeating Milligan at Milligan on Thursday in the first game 7-5 before dropping the second one 6-5. On Friday, the Lady Lions of Bryan came to town to play at Sandy Springs. They took the first game 9-6 but lost the second one to a determined Lady Scots squad 9-5.

Coach Ballard said that he was pleased with the team's performance, and that it is possible for the Lady Scots to be seeded number one in the state tournament. The tournament will be held on Saturday April 24th at Bryan in Dayton with Bryan, Maryville and Milligan participating. The winner advances to regional play on April and May 1st at a site to be announced.

Kim Allen (4-4 in the first game at Milligan, 5-6 overall, and a three run home run against Bryan in their first game); Sue Van Aken (three run home run in the second game at Milligan for the first one of the year, and 3-3 against Bryan in the first game); and Barbara Hogan (4-4 in the second game against Bryan, and two outstanding catches in the outfield with one at Milligan and one at Sandy Springs) are to be commended for their efforts. Also aiding the cause were Rachel Reese (5-7 against Bryan) and Leah Gross (2-4 against Milligan in the first game 3-4 against Bryan in the second game).

The team would like to thank Coach Ledford and the baseball team for the use of their sweats, Dr. Cooper and the intramural program for trading some new bats for old ones, and Shannon O'Brien for helping to prepare the field and announcing at Friday's games.

The team now 5-6 travel to Dayton to play Bryan on Tuesday and Madisonville to play Hiawassee on Wednesday before returning to Dayton to play in the state tournament on Saturday.

Tennis Swings Into Action

Men's

By Steve Arnold

I'm sure you've heard the expression, "you can't win for losing." If not you may want to talk to one of the players on the men's tennis team and let them give you an account of this rebuilding year. Two losses by a 5-4 margin, a 9-0 loss to Tennessee Tech that could have easily been close to 5-4 again, and remember Tech is Division I. You may be asking how a 9-0 score could get to 5-4. MC had 3 players that lost by very close margins, 2 of those 3 went 3 sets and one of those was a tiebreaker. The whole team played by far their best matches all season and had it been another team other than Tech the results could have been turned toward the Scots. After a weekend trip, the Scots returned with a ½ win - 1 loss record. "How's that?" you may ask. The Scots took their worst defeat of the season in the first part of a tri-match as Emory & Henry defeated the Scots in singles 5-1. The lone victor for MC was Shackleford as he won 4-6, 6-0, 6-3. The final five players for the Scots won only a total of 17 games. With the five wins for Emory the match had already been officially won, so MC took on Roanoke in singles with the attempt to declare a winner before the rains came. Now leading 2-1 with the Scots already winner (Sanders, 6-6-4, 6-1 and Raulerson 6-0, 6-0) the rains came. Kibbons was again in a tiebreaker and Shackleford serving at 5 all. But not to be denied, Mother Nature took this victory and the Scots were again short of a possible win.

Women's

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots Tennis Team defeated Milligan College (5-4) on Monday of this week. Sharon Wood, Shelley Kingsbury, and Donna Owens each won their singles. In double's play, the Lady Scots were victorious in two out of three of the matches. Sharon Wood and Shelley Kingsbury combined their talents for an impressive victory at the number one position. Donna Owens' and Mari Jennings' victory at the number three position was the deciding factor in the overall team score. The Lady Scots were very pleased with their victory over Milligan.

Track Fields Win

Maryville's track and field soundly defeated Milligan College by a score of 88-49 on April 14. This victory marked the first Maryville College track win in four years. The Scots were led to victory by first place finishes from Darius Fagin in the discus, long jump, and triple jump. Other first place results came from Jim Jarrell in the 440, Robert Loray in the 100, Pat Foster in the 220, Frank Fish in the 3 mile, Larry Winter in the shot-put, Archie Poepell in the javelin, Mike Good in the pole vault, and the mile relay team.

The Scots travel to Clarksville today to compete in the T.I.A.C. meet and finish out the season May 1 with the ODAC meet in Lexington, VA.

cont. from page 1

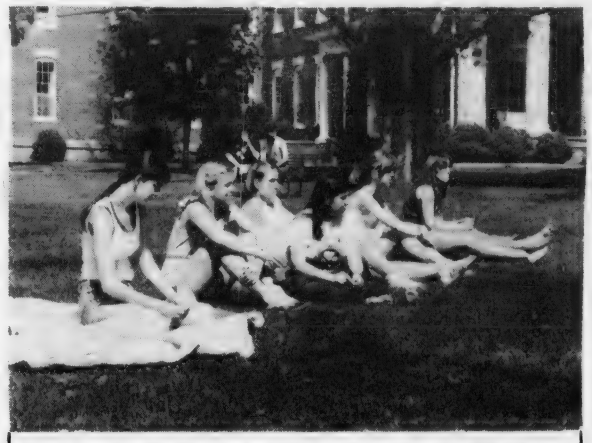
tions from "high risk" areas will not necessarily enhance survival. The administration's advice to the American public only gives the people something to do with their time before world mutilation occurs. (The Knoxville News-Sentinel defines this in the April 4, 1982 issue).

8 tokens for 1.00 with this coupon!!
C'mon you video warriors! We've got an offer you can't refuse! Get it at
Family Fun Center

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 23 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, April 29, 1982

Students Rally To The Sound Of Peace



By Mary Hughes

Nuclear education seminars during Ground Zero Week (April 19-25) allowed students, faculty, and townpeople to hear speakers and watch films dealing with different aspects of nuclear weaponry.

An approximation of 70-75 people shared their concerns about nuclear build-up. Mr. John Weston, Doug Cox, Dr. Bunde, Dr. Pickens, Bob Butzeiger, and Mr. Ernie Goss dealt with the nuclear economic situation, physical and spychological effects of nuclear war, spiritual ideals in the nuclear debate, and US--USSR political views.

The Open-Mike Rally on Saturday motivated a large student response. Students voiced their opinions in an educated fashion, expressing the importance of nuclear awareness.

Singers included Tim Grubbs Lowly, and Danny Cartlidge with Johnny Radical and the Stereo Anarchist Regime.

Concerned students gather at the open mike rally to protest Nuclear Arms, Saturday. The rally was held as a part of Ground Zero Week.

What's Going On

Thursday, April 29

4:00 - Wayne Anderson Inauguration Memorial gathering in the CCM.

7:00 - Cheerleader Try-outs.

Friday, April 30

8:15 - Pirates of Penzance in the theatre.

Saturday, May 1

8:15 - Pirates of Penzance in the theatre

Sunday, May 2

6:00 - Dinner Theater

Monday, May 3

2:00 - Men's Tennis against Tusculum - here

Wednesday, May 5

9:20 - CIV - Dr. Yerker Anderson will be speaking as a part of Deaf Awareness Week.

Senior Study Break.

Read And Reap Benefits

New Morality or No Morality edited by Robert Campbell

Playboy Interview edited by G. Barry Bolson

Violent Home: A Study of Physical Aggression Between Husband and Wives by Richard J. Gelles

Joy In the Mountains by Lou & Alice Winokur

Ten Women of Mystery edited by Earl F. Bargainnier

Life of Roscoe Pond by Paul L. Sayre

Board Conducts Business

The Maryville College Board of Directors, meeting on campus Friday and Saturday, adopted a 1982-83 budget of $5,581,000, which is an increase of $326,000 over last year's budget.

The approved budget for 1982-83 includes a 10 percent increase in the faculty salary budget.

Also included in the budget is a 12½ percent tuition increase for next year, which is less than the 15 to 20 percent increases many institutions are implementing, MC President Wayne Anderson noted.

The increase will bring the total fees for students living on campus to $5,995, which is "well below the average charge for highly qualified, private institutions," Dr. Anderson said.

To offset the tuition increase, next year's budget includes more then $300-000 in College funds earmarked for student financial aid. This is an 82.4 percent increase in student financial aid over last year.

To complement this increase, the College is undertaking a vigorous effort to raise $500,000 for the Emergency Student Aid Fund by June 30, Dr. Anderson told board members.

A breakdown of the tuition for next year includes $1,130 for board and $80 for the activity fee. The standard double-room rate will be $865. That rate may vary depending on dormitory assignment. The full-time course load tuition charge will be $3,920. This brings the total charges for a typical, full-time student to $5,994 for 1982-83.

Twenty-five directors were present during the three days of committee and board meetings.

In other budget news reported Friday, the 1981-82 Blount County Community Campaign for Maryville College raised $267,211, exceeding the goal of $250-000 by 9.4 percent, according to Robert A. "Archie" Ellis Jr., vice president for development of the College.

This year's total is $24-751 more than the $242-460 raised in last year's Community Campaign.

The Community Campaign is part of the College's overall Toward Century III fund drive with a goal of $11.5 million by 1985. Ellis told the Board that $6.9 million in gifts and pledges has been raised to date.

The Community Campaign was held to offer community members an opportunity to participate in the TCIII drive. Dan Lawson, a Maryville insurance executive, chaired this year's campaign.

Ellis also told the Board that one of the most significant gifts made to the College over the past six months is the $150,000 grant from The Pew Memorial Trust. The funds will go toward the installation of a wood energy system at MC.

The Board of Directors also promoted four faculty members and granted tenure status to one faculty member at their semi-annual meeting last Friday and Saturday.

Promoted to the rank of associate professor were Drs. Robert Bonham, Harry Howard and Judith Sumner. Dr. David Cooper was promoted to assistant professor.

Dr. Sumner was also granted tenure status at the College.

Editorials

Search For Peace

When future generations look back at the era in which we are living, they may characterize it as the age of the search for peace. This search is something which almost everyone is engaged in at some time during their existance and, admitting the paradox, is something which often embodies violence. Pursuit of this ideal has many connotations from the personal to the world view.

The 1970's and 1980's have seen a virtual explosion of interest in self-help books, and such materials have sold millions of copies to those struggling to find peace of mind. In order that one should need to find something, it follows that he has lost it. There is much which occassions this loss such as a lack of confidence in one's own abilities and a lack of confidence in the world's abilities.

The restoration of personal confidence can only be achieved through individual meditation and confrontation of self. This type of peace is necessary for each person to live by himself and for himself. The regaining of confidence in the world, however, requires a trust in the many other people with which we must live.

The pursuit of international peace has been the concern of much of the past century. First perhaps, was World War I - the war to end all wars. Peace would be supreme. This dream, however, was not to follow as history so well spells out. World War II occassioned a new and most horrible form of violence with the dropping of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima and Nagisaki. The enthusiasm with which soldiers marched "over there" and the glamore attached to it faded quickly with the onset of the Vietnam War. Cheers were replaced by chants, and the peace movement swept up thousands in its protest.

The all - too - real attrocities which modern, nuclear warfare would commit are subjects of intense debate and emotional outcry. Ground Zero Week is one form of opposition to the nuclear threat which is observed throughout the nation and was so observed on our campus.

A new awareness of what consequences may occur if, the world goes on the way it is, seems to be awakening at Maryville with demonstrations of concern such as the peace seminars, peace rally, and intention of some to write thier congressmen.

Much work went into last week's events, and the furthering of peace is something for which enough gratitude cannot be shown. There is also much to do, and the question remains to be answered whether our legacy will be left as victims of our own technology or as free peoples.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Layout Editor . . . . . Barb Booker

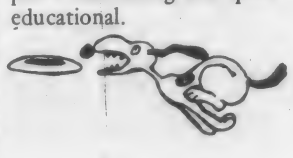
Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Listen To Hearing Impaired

By Jenny Fitzell

In the hustle and bustle of everyday life, it often seems that whoever speaks the loudest gains our attention and achieves the most. However, if you would stop and think about the many people who have never heard those shouts of persuasion or who never spoke vociferously to the masses themselves, you would remember many achievements that were accomplished quietly.

May 2nd - May 8th is Hearing Impaired Awareness Week. This event, recognized state wide, is designed to promote awareness throughout society to the concerns and qualities of hearing impaired individuals. Maryville College will also contribute to this year's theme of "Can You Hear Me Working?" with the aid of guest speakers and workshops.



Maryville's program begins at the Sunday Vesper Service. On Tuesday, May 4 a workshop, designed for teachers and education majors, entitled "How to Use an Interpreter", will be led by Irma Young, the advisor for the interpreting department, and Cindy Cunningham.

May 5th, Dr. Yerker Anderson, Professor of Sociology at Galludet College will be MC's guest CIV speaker in the FAC. His topic is "The Social Aspects of Deafness." During lunch on May 5th the student can look forward to some entertainment entitled, "A Bit of Awareness." That evening at 7:30 at the FAC Music Hall a show patterned after the Phil Donahue Show will explore some myths and facts about deafness. The panel will consists of nine deaf people from different environments such as a deaf person being raised by hearing parents opposed to a deaf person being raised by deaf parents and the differences between being deaf from birth and becoming deaf with old age. Bill Woodrich, Professor of Special Education at U.T. will sit in for Phil.

On Thursday, May 6th, Dr. Yerker Anderson will again meet with students and will conduct a workshop concerned with the sociology of deafness. This workshop will meet from 2:00 - 4:00 in the lecture room of Sutton Science.

To make this week an even greater success, 70 year old Nick Kiwesky, an English major at Trenton State College, will be on campus from May 1st - 8th. Mr. Kowesky writes poetry and has recently learned to play the drums.

Don't let this week slip by, for, through interacting with our guests, it could prove fascinating and quite educational.

Pirates Play MC's Theater

Gilbert and Sullivan's PIRATES OF PENZANCE opens Friday evening, April 30, for a six performance run at the Maryville College Playhouse. In association with the Maryville College Opera Workshop under the direction of Kent Skinner and the school theatre orchestra conducted by David Irwin, the Playhouse produced by Donald Thomas promises to be the largest production on the College campus in a number of years.

PIRATES OF PENZANCE is one of Gilbert and Sullivan's most popular operettas. The 102 year old musical has just recently enjoyed a new popularity on Broadway under the guiding hand of Joseph Papp, producer of such hits as CHORUS LINE, THE CHAMIONSHIP SEASON, HAIR, and NO PLACE TO BE SOMEBODY. Working with such stars as Linda Rondstadt, Rex Smith, Kevin Kline, Robbie Benson, Estelle Parsons, Treat Williams, and George Rose, PIRATES opened at the Delacourte Theatre in Central Park in 1980. The show's great success in the summer caused PIRATES to reopen on Broadway that Fall. The production won a number of Tony awards that Spring and is still playing to full houses. The movei starring the original cast is due for release later movie starring the original cast is due for release later this year.

Director Donald Thomas emphasizes that the MC PIRATES is somewhat different from its New York counterpart. The MC Playhouse production employ more of the original musical scoring combined with a unique staging and set which placed the orchestra in the middle of the stage with the actors moving and singing around it on a multilevel set designed by Tilman Crane.The Playhouse PIRATES hopes to create an atmosphere of zestful joy and comedy.

Opening night, Friday, April 20 at 8:15, will include a special reception for April 30 at 8:15, will include a special reception for play goers and cast and crew catered by the Student Programming office. Additional evening performances are scheduled for Saturday, May 1 and Thursday through Saturday, May 6,7, and 8. Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. A Dollar Matinee will be presented on Wednesday, May 5, at 2:45.

MARCH

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. The Covenant, by James A. Michener. (Fawcett, $4.95) Epic novel of South African history: fiction.
2. The Simple Solution to Rubik's Cube, by James G. Nourse. (Bantam, $1.95) Puzzle solver.
3. The Cardinal Sins, by Andrew M. Greeley. (Warner/Geis, $3.95) The paths of two boys who grow to priesthood.
4. Brideshead Revisited, by Evelyn Waugh. (Little, Brown $4.95) Companion to the PBS television series.
5. Garfield Bigger Than Life, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Third book on the famous cartoon cat.
6. Theory Z, by William G. Ouchi. (Avon, $2.95) How American business can meet the Japanese challenge.
7. Gorky Park, by Martin Cruz Smith. (Ballantine, $3.95) The bestselling suspense thriller set in Moscow.
8. A Perfect Stranger, by Danielle Steel. (Dell, $3.50) The latest romantic novel by Ms. Steel..
9. Never-Say-Diet Book, by Richard Simmons. (Warner, $7.95) Shaping up with the Hollywood TV star.
10. Goodbye, Jeanette, by Harold Robbins. (Pocket, $3.95) From occupied France to international high fashion.

Compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education from information supplied by college stores throughout the country. March 15, 1982

New & Recommended

Expanded Universe, by Robert A. Heinlein. (Ace, $3.50) A look at the mind of the most influential sci-fi writer of all time.

The Thirties, by Edmund Wilson. (Washington Square Press, $6.95) A volume of his diaries kept during this turbulent decade.

Gorky Park, by Martin Cruz Smith. (Ballantine, $3.95) The bestselling suspense thriller set in Moscow.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS/NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

Annual Banquet Honors Sports

Roy Kramer, former football standout at Maryville College and currently the athletic director at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, will be the guest speaker at Maryville College's annual All Sports Banquet.

The event is set for 7 p.m. on Thursday, May 13, in the College's Margaret Ware Dining Room in Pearsons Hall. Tickets are $5 per person and are available through the College's athletic department

Bob Kesling, sportscaster at WBIR-TV in Knoxville, will serve as master of ceremonies. MC's Honaker Club will also announce its 1982 inductees to the Maryville College Wall of Fame.

Kramer received his degree from MC in 1953 and later earned his master's from the University of Michigan, he earned a record 58-14-3 in eight years. His teams won two state titles.

In 11 seasons at Central Michigan University as head football coach, Kramer and his teams amassed an 83-32-2 mark, including winning the 1974 national NCAA Division II championship.

He was named the NCAA Division II Coach of the Year in 1974. He won the Willie Heston Award from the Detroit Chapter of the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame in 1975.

That same year, Kramer was presented the Minuteman Award by the governor of Michigan on behalf of his contributions to the state. He was also selected to coach in the Coaches' American Game in Texas.

Since joining the Vanderbilt staff as athletic director in 1978, Kramer has made several significant advances in that institution's athletic program. The two most notable are the $11 million renovation of the school's Dudley Field football stadium and the luring of Coach C.M. Newton out of retirement to lead in Commodores' basketball fortunes.

Scots Win In Weeklong Streak

by Bill Dent

The Maryville College Baseball team experienced a rarity last week, a winning week of baseball without a loss. The Scots dumped Fisk in Nashville 10-6 and then disposed of Emory & Henry in a twin-bill sweep 8-7 and 7-0. The week was the first winning week for the Scots since their five game winning streak earlier this year.

In Nashville last Wednesday, the Scots were a beaten team for seven innings in a nine inning contest Fisk had built up a 6-2 advantage on several Scots miscues and blunders. Going into the eight inning, the Scots had mustered only four hits and only two runs. In one of the classic comebacks of all time, the Scots scored seven runs on seven hits to take the lead 9-6. Key hits on the inning came from Ken Bartuccio and Jim Rice, RBI singles, and Pat Moyer and Bill Dent, RBI doubles. The inning was the second most productive inning this year for the Scots, the first coming against Fisk earlier this year, when the Scots toppled the scoreboard with eight runs. The Scots added an insurance run in the ninth to seal the victory. John Riffle gained the win in relief, the win being his first victory against no defeats.

On Saturday, the Scots swept a twin-bill against the Wasps of Emory & Henry, winning the first game in an 8-7 thriller and then swamping the Wasps 7-0 in the nightcap. The first game saw the Scots jump out to an early 7-2 lead on a couple of Wasps errors. The Wasps battled back, however, to tie the game in the fifth inning, 7-7. The score remained tied until the home half of the seventh inning, when the Scots put together some heroics, with one out, Rick Brand was hit by a pitch. Brand then stole second. Todd Schlenker then lined a fastball into left field scoring Brand with the winning run. Mike Wortman was the winning pitcher, going the distance. Wortman's record now stands at 5-4. The second game saw Mark Woodhull mow down Emory & Henry hitters en route to a 7-1 shutout. It was the first shutout of the year for the Scots and the first for Woodhull since last year. Mark Woodhull looked impressive as one Wasp player reached third base. A five run first inning, paced by John Riffle's bases loaded RBI double, was all Woody needed to gain his third victory against five losses. Todd Schlenker added insurance runs in the sixth with two RBI doubles.

Track Sprints In TIAC Meet

The Scots traveled to Austin Peay State University in Clarksville to compete in the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Championships (TIAC) on April 22. The competion was topflight as Maryville competed against Tennessee State University, Austin Peay, Southwestern, Carson Newman, Vanderbilt, David Lipscomb, and Sewanee. In the final scoring Maryville came out on top of both Vanderbilt and Southwestern.

Good performances were seen from many of the Scots, but the competition was turning in times that were worthy of NCAA national qualifying times. The best results of the day and night came from Archie Poeppel who recieved third place in the javelin. A forth place finish came from Robert Loray in the 110 high hurdles with a time of 16.7 seconds. a forth place finish was also given by the 440 relay team of Darius Fagin, Mike Surrency, Pat Foster, and Robert Loray. Running the event in 44.56 seconds, the team was only .46 seconds slower than the best time in the ODAC this year. Other excellent performances which did not place included Darius Fagin in the 100 meters. Fagin's time was only .04 seconds slower than this year's ODAC best. Fagin currently holds the best performances in both the triple jump and discus in the ODAC for 1982.

The TIAC meet was the fourth meet of the season The Scots began the season with a tough all-comers meet at Centre College on March 27. Competition was fierce from teams such as The University of Louisville, and Carson Newman. Team scores were not tallied but good individual performances were seen by Larry Winter and Ed Belfi, who took third and fourth places, respectively, in the shot-put.

The second meet of the season was a dual meet with Taylor University of Indiana. The sheer size of the Taylor team overpowered the Scots as Maryville fell to a 79-53 defeat. Once again excellent performances were turned in by many individuals, and once again Darius Fagin paced the Scots. Fagin took first place honors in the 100, long jump, and discus, Additional first place finishes came from Mike Surrency in the 440, Jim Jarrell in the 330 hurdles, Larry Winter in the shot-put, Archie Poeppel in the javelin, and the 440 relay team.

In a schedule that originally included ten meets, the Scots will conclude the season with five meets. The final meet is Saturday at Washington & Lee for the 1982 ODAC track and field championships. Competition will be tough as the Scots face Lynchburg (9-1), Washington & Lee, Bridgewater, Emory & Henry, Roanoke, and Eastern Mennonite.

Tennis Swings

Women's

By Robin Rimmer

The Lady Scots tennis team won two out of three matches this past week. On Monday, they slipped by Milligan College by a score of 5-4. Then on Tuesday, the Lady Scots defeated Bryan College 6-2. Sharon Wood, Shelley Kingsbury, Donna Owens, and Ellen Smith each won their singles matches. The doubles combinations of Wood-Kingsbury and Owens-Jennings were the victors in doubles play.

Last Thursday, the Lady Scots traveled to Harrogate, Tennessee for a second shot at the LMU Lady Railsplitters. The Lady Scots fought gallantly, but the Lady Railsplitters came out on top 7-2. Donna Owen's and Sue Spence's victories in singles play were Maryville's only wins.

Men's

By Steve Arnold

The MC Scots took it love-2 this past week losing to Roane State 9-0 and to Milligan 7-2. Roane State had very little trouble putting away the inexperienced Scots, allowing them only twenty-two games total in singles competition. The Scots' number two doubles came the closest to victory with a margin of defeat being (6-4,7-5). Roane State, being the most talented team the Scots will play all season unless the U.S. Davis Cup team comes to town was here yesterday for the rematch.

The Scots were out for revenge last Saturday as Milligan, who handed the Scots their first loss, came to town. With the rearranging of the line-up, the Scots still came up short in a match where coming up short should never had existed. Shackleford had no trouble putting away Moore (6-2,6-0) and Raulerson followed right behind for MC by defeating Shaw (6-3,6-2).

How did the match slip through the hands again? A very impressive performance by Paluga fell short as he, leading in the final set 4-1, fell victim to losing five games and the third set 6-4. He had won the second (6-1) after losing the first (6-2). Another backboard performance by Kibbons fell short to the closest of limits and a defeat by a 6-4, 7-5 score. Milligan swept all three doubles to take the match victory 7-2. The Scots leave today for the ODAC championships at Washington & Lee with the exception of Kibbons, who left yesterday in order for his match to be finished by Saturday.

Ladies Catch Win

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots softball team chalked up its first victory in state tournament play this past week, but was unable to win any other games beside that one. However, three of the six games lost this week could have gone either way as the Ladies lost by two runs or less.

A brief account of this week's action includes dropping two to Bryan on Tuesday (1-0 in elevan innings and 3-0), losing twice to Hiwassee (13-12 in a cliff hanger and 11-0), beating Bryan 1-0 in the first game at the state tournament, losing to Milligan 7-3, and losing to Bryan 4-2. Coach Ballard said that the team played well, and except for a few bad breaks, the Ladies could have won more than one.

On an upnote, the Lady Scots' defense has played especially well. The combination of Kim Allen, Rachel Reese and Leah Gross was able to turn four double plays this past week, and Kandy Schram and Stacy Medlin teamed up to turn another on F8-8-2, which means Kandy caught the fly ball in left center field and threw to Stacy, who was covering home, to gun down the player trying to score from third.

This week the Ladies play three doubleheaders at home. On Monday it's Milligan, on Tuesday it's Tennessee Temple, and on Wednesday it's Hiwassee. All games are at 3:00 p.m. at Sandy Springs. Next week the Ladies travel to Chattanooga to play Temple and then participate in a tournament at Sandy Springs with Hiwassee, Temple, and LMU.

P.S. Congratulations to Rachel Reese and Kim Allen for being selected to the All-Tournament team!

MUDVILLE EXPO-SAY

MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE

Vol. 1 No. 1 — All the news going on in this crazy Expo town! — Thursday, May 6, 1982

MC Fair Opens With Fizzle

WE HAVE TO BE THERE - This phrase kicks off the Maryville College Fair slated to run May 7 through May 9. The fair which has received little thought and less acclaim will include participation from three departments will be highlighted by the Waynesphere - the fair's symbolic tower. The Waynesphere, perched atop scenic Anderson Hall, has been the subject of debate. TIME Magazine found the Waynesphere to be a lumpy gold ball atop a clumsy building, while Mrs. Anderson thinks it is the most beautiful structure she has ever seen.

The structure, not in the original plans was designed by Robert Bonham and was constructed by the illustrious firm of Bartlett and Bartlett Maintainance Engineers.

Visitors will experience an exhilarating ten minute climb up a twenty story ladder to the top of the Waynesphere where they will face a two hour wait to register with Martha Hess for entrance into the confused sphere which will encompass:

Observation decks with a view of Maryville College - a small, private liberal arts college nestled in the foothills of the Great Smokey Mountains.

Margrett B. Ware dining Hall hopefully catered by Martin's Drug Store which will feature such delicacies as chicken, sawdust burgers, chicken, mystery meat, and chicken. (chicken will be available in lieu of toast).

No Proffitt dining room, which will feature the same menu as the Margrett B. Ware dining hall with the exception of sawdust burgers and mystery meat.

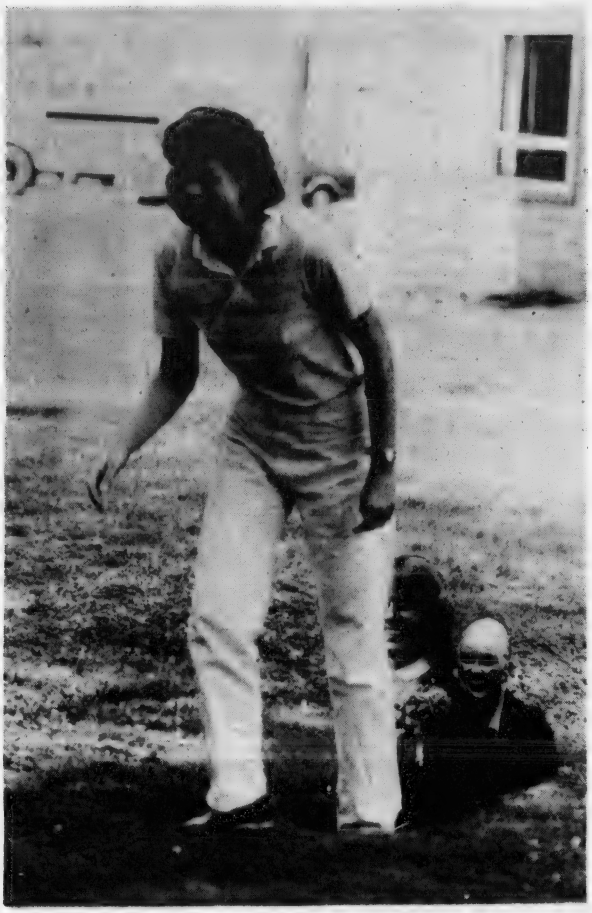
After an uneventful trip through the Waynesphere, tourists will make a rapid descent to the base. Upon impact, souvenier mongers will be delighted by the large selection of tacky, useless memorabelia emblazoned with the official logo of the fair - the smoldering fire. Such souveniers will include official Maryville Fair

Pot holders
Power tools
Stereos
Formal wear
Bed spreads
Wallpaper
Toliet seats and matching paper
Tatoos

Once all of your money is wasted, it will be time to catch the M-Trans or the provided balloons to join the rest of the world at the MARYVILLE COLLEGE FAIR!

Official MC Fair Officials Head Up Fair

It's almost here. Two weeks in the making, the Maryville College World's fair projects to be huge success. The Fair will open on Friday May seventh. and will involve many hours of planning and hard work. Who is behind all of this? We asked fair president Andy "Babe" Roberts who the master minds were. After not getting an answer from him, we were able to find out from undisclosed sources that Andy didn't even know we were having a fair. It seems as if it's been pretty well concealed . . . until now. Echo reporter me, has learned the following administrative design:



Alfred Perkins - pavillion coordinator
Dan Perkins - budget director
Sharon Crane - food coordinator
Larry West - Advertising and Promotion
Jane Richardson - housing director
Bill Strickland - Crime Maintainance.
Helen Williams - personel director
Ed Brewer - head of vip's in cooperation with Bud E. Bear
Bill Slater - transportation director
Jennifer Hart - uniform design

Indeed! a very well qualified staff heads the Maryvillle College World's Fair.

Some new innovations will go into effect during the fair. For example transportation director Bill Slater plans to use balloons to shuttle people from pavillion to pavillion. He plans to start operation at 8:30 am. Crime Consultant, Bill Strickland has decided to use a high ratio of security on the fair grounds. With an estimated visitation of 100 persons a day, there will be a security force of 80,000 to police the fair site.

An unsuspected problem has appeared in housing. Di-

Continued on page 2

An obviously jovial, or is it pained, Ellen Smith emerges from one of the underground sections of the Sutton Science Pavillion followed by Mary Jane Babich and one of the displays.

1982 MC Fair Or Bussed

Just before opening day of the MC Fair, the press was given a sneak preview tour of the site. And let me tell you,the world is in for some surprises when it arrives.

As we all waited for the M-Trans bus, we got a free case of MC Fair beer. Irving R. Levine gave me his. The bus driver was taking the leftover cases since he had already finished his. You can imagine the excitement when we finally got started. There was some commotion when Geraldo Rivera got his scarf caught in the door. I think the driver closed the door too fast on purpose.

The first stop was the Sutton Science Pavillion. The first exhibit here was by the Psychology Department. Dr. Waters gave us an explanation.

"The purpose of this exhibit is to show that his department is doing its part to find out how students learn better. The world will benefit from our findings. We took surveys of what students had drawn or written on the desks in all the classrooms of the school, we then found out what percent were sports oriented, musically oriented, insult oriented, love/sex oriented, or acedemically oriented. Assuming that those who are writing on the desks are not paying attention, we can get an insight into what students are really interested in. Then classes can be made more meaningful."

"So what did you find out?", Rivera smelled a rat.

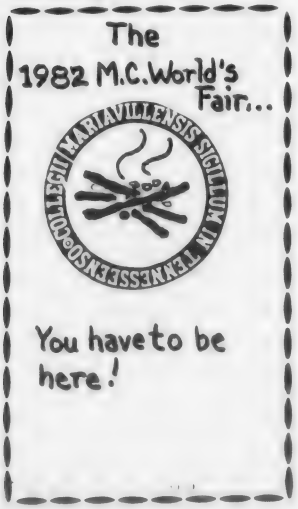
"We concluded that there should be more emphasis in the school on sports, music, insulting, and love/sex."

The next exhibit at the Sutton Science Pavillion was the Biology departments. There was a table full of large capsules. Dr. Johnston explained what they were all about.

"We've seen a need for vitamin supplements for those active people who feel their vitamin and mineral pills are not enough."

We all got free samples. The label on the bottles said "So many vitamins and minerals you'll never use them all." Irving R. Levine gave his to David Brinkley with some snide remark about his looking like he needed it more. Brinkley countered saying that the remark was cute and maybe he'd let Levine on his Sunday morning show sometime.

The last exhibit at the Sutton Science Pavillion is a joint effort by the Chemistry and Physics Departments. They have created robots that, according to Dr. Naylor, "can do many things as good as students can." For example, these mechanical marvels have been programmed to lose Bic pen caps, have their calculator batteries run out during tests, and type papers for seven hours straight beginning at midnight. Moreover, they have a whole memory bank filled with reasons not to study. Robots are becoming more like people everyday. Geraldo Rivera seemed unimpressed. He said they would never be able to dress well.



After that we got to take in one of the many amusements at the fair site - the Riding Lawnmowers. Zipping about in one of these is sure to be a hit with youngsters of all ages.

Then it was immediately on to the Wilson Pavillion

Continued on page 3

Administration, con.t from page 1

rector Jane Richardson remarked that no one showed up for on campus housing pick. Meanwhile area residents and hotel owners are being swamped with calls for reservations and are jacking up their prices. No one, it seems, wants to stay at the fair site. Mrs. Richardson feels ti is because the scenery on the way to the fair grounds is so lovely chardson feels it is because the scenery on the way to the fair grounds is so lovely that people would much rather walk from an out-of-the-way place.

Particular interest in clothing has Jennifer Hart working hard. It's essential that people see a well designed, well suited group of employees. When asked what plans were in the making, Jennifer remarked, "Oh everything will be Aigner, of course!"

Morrisons was asked to cater the fair, but they were so booked that food coordinator, Sharon Crane, has asked Martin's Drug Store to do it. There hasn't been any response from Martin's yet, so Sharon has the clown at Donna's Florists lined up in case Martin's says no.

It's on it's way, so move out of the way. Here comes the Maryville College World's Fair! YOU'VE GOT TO BE THERE.

Two modest munks wait in the woods outside the fair gounds to catch the rural line of the M-Trans. M-Trans busses have been donated through the cooperation of Bill Slater (transportation director) and Dorm I village.

The monks have been provided by the Mary St. Christopher Holy Order.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 24 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, May 6, 1982

May Madness Hits MC

Comps - the very word can strike fear into the heart of the bravest senior. This week seniors are taking comprehensive examinations, or "comps" over what they have learned in their major during their four years at Maryville College. To give the senior a well-earned break after this trying week (and to give everyone else some fun, too), the annual May Madness weekend begins.

This year's May Madness with the theme "You've Got to be Here" gets underway Friday, May 7 at 4:00 p.m. with the "Parade of Fools." Then at 5:30 behind the Gym on the soccer field "Oink & Ale" begins, with plenty of barbequed pork and all the fixings, and beer and cold drinks to wash it down. Following "Oink & Ale" there will be a block party between Fayerweather and the Center for Campus Ministry.

Saturday morning at 10:00 a.m. a One-on-One basketball tournament is scheduled. Then from 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m. bewteen Pearson's and Thaw New Games, frisbee, and booths will be set up. At 5:00 p.m. a picnic will be served on Pearson's Patio, with a live band and a "super banana split" stretching from Pearson's to Fayerweather following.

Sunday wraps up the weekend of madness with intramural softball games at 1:00 p.m. Team games begin at 3:00 p.m., and to wrap up May Madness there will be a campus fellowship at 4:00 p.m.

It's going to be a great weekend, so "You've Got to be Here" for May Madness 1982!

What's Going On

World's Fair Participation — A Long Tradition

This article is reprinted from the Maryville College Commencement papers. With many students working for the 1982 Knoxville Worlds Fair, Maryville College participation in Worlds Fairs seems to be a long standing tradition. MC was also represented at the Chicago Worlds Fair.

Among the multitudes that were attracted to the Great Exposition in Chicago there was a host of college boys from all parts of the United States.

They were not visitors, except for a short time, but were employed on the grounds, and thereby had many opportunities to see the wonders of the White City, which they otherwise would not have had.

When the World's Fair buildings were under construction and the newspapers pictured their beauty and grandeau, and told of the many exhibits to be seen from all nations of the globe, the college boys over the land began contemplating how they might see the great wonders of the Fair.

But fortunately for them it was found that there was need of a class of young men better educated, more intelligent and more generally informed than could be picked up in Chicago.

The idea came to one of the great men of the Fair that college students were the class of men needed, and the need of these men was not the only object in view, but that they might see the Fair. With this two-fold object in view, circulars were sent to almost every college and university in the United States, and many college boys embraced this opportunity, their professors and instructors telling them that it would be of more advantage to them than a year in college would be.

The college boys at the Fair were divided into two classes; first, the Columbian Guards, or as they were more commonly called "tin soldiers."

Secondly, the Columbian Chair Rollers, but they also had several other names as "chair shover," "baby pushers," "salvation army," and so on.

Over one hundred institutions were represented, as Yale, Harvard, Ann Arbor, Oberlin, Monmouth, Pur-

Continued on page 2

Real Teachers Stand Up

"WILL THE REAL TEACHER PLEASE STAND UP?" is the theme for SNEA's seventh annual Professional Day to be held Tuesday, May 11, in Proffitt Dining Hall. Professional Day involves a special workshop/seminar for education majors designed to promote better understanding of the education profession.

The Keynote speaker this year will be Mr. Fred Crosson, an officer of the Tennessee Education Association. Mr. Crosson will be speaking about the major issues beyond the classroom the future teacher will be facing. He will also be sharing the rewards and concerns involved with working for the Tennessee Education Association.

Also on the agenda is Mel Luttrell, an East Tennessee representative of the Tennessee Education Association. Mr. Luttrell will be focusing on teacher stress and burnout and how to cope with the day-to-day ups and downs that all teachers experience. In addition, there will be a question and answer period followed by small discussion groups led by our guest speakers.

As contact and interaction with professionals in the field is a vital part of being a teacher, all education majors are highly recommended to attend. The program is being sponsored jointly by the M.C. Education Department and the Student National Education Association. The meetings will begin with lunch at noon and will conclude around 3:30.

Fair, cont. from page 1

due, Northwestern University, University of Chicago, and many others. The University of Tennessee had one representative, U.S. Grant Memorial University, three,and our own Alma Mater eight, which about completed the list from Tennessee.

The Columbian Guards were under the command of Col. Rice, and numbered about two thousand. They were divided into companies under their respective sergeants. It was the duty of the guards to protect the exhibits, give information to visitors and preserve order.

The Chair Rollers had not only to wheel the chairs but also to act as guides, giving information as to the location of the buildings and exhibits. The Chair Rollers were not busily engaged all the time, and so you could see them in their chairs reading the newspapers or studying their text books. As a great many of them had to leave school before its close, and remain after it began in the fall, they took this opportunity to keep up with their classes. Rolling chairs was pleasant work excepting when there was a very corpulent occupant to transport from one place to another. Generally, those who would take chairs were among the very best of people, intelligent, well educated, and able to explain many exhibits to their attendants, in whom they seemedto become very much interested.

One of the many beautiful young ladies, that visited the Fair, became so much interested in one of the so-called chair shovers and he so much in return, that as a result, after he had shown her the numerous beauties of the world-renowned White City, he left chair pushing and all of the indescribable scenes behind and fled with his bride to enjoy the beautiful home and the vast fortune he had acquired in the transaction.

It seemed very difficult at times to get the occupants to understand the signs and inscriptions in many places. As two of the shovers were conveying a young lady and gentleman over the grounds they chanced to pass a small building with the sign on the outside, "Dark Room," (used of course in photographing); as the gentlemen spied the sign, said he, "Come, Mabel, that is the very place for engaged folks."

And again, when one of the chair rollers passed by one of the large turnstiles leading out of the grounds the occupant, happening to see the sign, "Exit above," said, "What does that mean, guide? I am going to see that exhibit," and before the guide could explain the turnstile had landed him on the outside of the grounds.

These are a few of the many experiences which happened every day. And yet our experiences did not consist altogether in such as have just been related.

Many of the exhibits, and the manners and customs of the people of different nationalities as displayed on Midway Plaisance, would require many years of travel, and a great amount of money to be seen. And so six months of the grandest exposition ever held passed away, and six months of very valuable experience was gained by the college boys. And as the White City is gradually vanishing, and the beautiful edifices are being torn away, we cannot think that these buildings with their exhibits have been constructed in vain.

Get The Book Bug Bite

War: 4 Christain Views by Robert Clouse

One on One: Win the Interview, Win the Job by Theodore Pettus

Our Father Who Art in Hell by James Reston (A story about Jim Jones & his religious cult.)

Japan: Profile of a Post - industrial Power by Ardath Burks

Witness to the Holocaust edited by Azriel Eisenberg

RECORDS: PLATTER CHATTER

Long Distance Voyager by Moody Blues

Breakin' Away by Al Jarreau

Hard Promises by Tom Petty

Black & White by Pointer Sisters

Tatoo You by Rolling Stones

CIV: Books related to CIV topics

Chilren of Hiroshima (Children of that era recall atomic bomb experience)

Power & Culture: the Japanese - American War 1941 - 1945 by Akira Iriya

Hiroshima & Nagasaki: the Physical, Medical & Social Effects of the Atomic Bombings

Mutual Images: Essays in American - Japanese Relations by Akira Iriye

Go Martin Go

Let's see, you play at 8:45, you play at 9:15, and when you're finished dash up to the hill because doubles start at 11:00. That's what it was like as a tennis filled weekend had the Scots competing in the 1982 ODAC championship Not fairing too well, only two Scots finished fairly well, as Raulerson at number four singles took fifth place by downing Hall of Roanoke 6-1,6-2. Shackelford at number one took fifth, also, after defeating Ward of Ronoake 6-1,6-2. Other Scots and their finishes included Paluga in eighth place at number two singles; Kibbons at eighth place at number three singles; Kidder in seventh place at number five; and Sanders in seventh place at number six. In doubles, Sanders and Gibson took seventh at number three, while the remaining two doubles for the Scots took eight. A very good experience for the inexperienced Scots who have the whole next year to look forward to.

The Scots took right back to the courts on Monday, and for the third time this year lost 5-4. The Scots did have a bright spot as Martin Paluga won his first match, yes, that's with a "P" and an "A", by the score of 1-6, 6-2, 6-4. Not a bad comeback at all after the long struggle through the season and losing the first set here 6-1. May 3 has been declared Martin Paluga Day at MC. He also teamed with Shackleford at number one doubles for a 4-6,6-3,7-6 victory, while Raulerson and Kibbons won at number two doulbes 7-6, 7-4, 7-6.

The other victor in singles was Shackleford who defeated Dahill 6-0,6-0. Tusculum also won the first meeting of the year with the Scots by a 5-4 score. The Scots close out at home Saturday against Emory & Henry. For those who want to donate some mustard for the team, please see Coach Dyer or Jim Kidder. John Sanders, a senior, will be playing his last match as a Scot Saturday. You can also meet his parents who will also be here for the match.

We May Survive

Private Colleges--which are supposed to suffer the worst effects of the decade's enrollment declines and federal budget cuts--may be able to cope with federal cuts much better than public schools, according to a new study of financing for independent campuses.

Researchers James Henson and Pamela Tolbert, both of UCLA, found that private college and university administrators are typically more efficient in raising money. Because the private colleges rely less on federal money, the researchers reasoned that they could survive the loss of funding better than the public colleges.

Private schools can hike tuition and fees with less difficulty than public colleges, and are better prepared to compensate for losses incurred by lower federal funding, the report--called "Patterns of Funding in Public and Private Higher Education" --asserts.

But in releasing the most recent study, UCLA Dean Eugene Weber observed the private colleges and universities have a "tradition in raising private money" that could offset some of the federal cuts.

"I don't want to give the impression I'm criticizing," Weber told reporters in Los Angeles. "I'm envious."

Look At 1982 Football Squad

The Maryville College Scots football squad should benefit from a great deal of youthful experience despite the loss of key people in key positions, according to Head Coach Art Ogden.

"Trying to find replacements for these key players will be extremely difficult," Ogden said. "But I believe we have a great deal of team pride, unity and determination, all of which should help us through the toughest schedule we've had since we've been NCAA III."

That tough schedule includes opponents such as the University of Dayton (Ohio), Millsaps College and West Georgia College.

Ogden said hopeful returnees include two quarterbacks, Pat O'Brien and Pat Moyer, who have outstanding passing records. Receivers Mike Scotti, Gene Wheatley, and Mark Araujo. The running of Glenn Katz, Mike Surrency, and Chuck Angelus should be bolstered by linemen Doug Knight, Brian Gunter, Steve Monday, and Mike Krtausch.

Defensively, linebackers Ed Belfi, an All-American Candiate from New Jersey, and Darius Fagin will back up linemen Alex Albert and John Cockfield.

Ogden added that the team will have several weaknesses. The losses of All-American punter Jeff Skipper and All-Conference DE Jeff Carbonneau will hurt the overall game plan, he said. And the graduation of All-Conference center Dave Evans and All-American DB Jon Watson will leave big holes to fill.

On offense, the overall youth of the entire unit will be a major factor in team performance, Ogden added. The loss of Mike Evangelisti at fullback will make the ground game suspect, the coach said.

Weaknesses also exist in the team's defense, especially in the lack of depth. Ogden said there are big question marks at end and it may be that freshman must fill in right away.

Despite these weaknesses Ogden is optimistic the Fighting Scots will prove tough contenders when football season rolls around this fall.

The Library is sponsoring two contest for May Madness Week.

The first contest is a photo contest featuring MC's faculty and staff members during their infancy and childhood. The contest will run from Tuesday, May 4th through noon on Friday, May 7th. PERSON WITH THE MOST CORRECT GUESSES WINS A PRIZE!

The second contest that the library is sponsoring is a limerick contest. The entries have to be turned in by 5 pm Thursday, May 6th. PERSON WITH THE BEST LIMERICK WINS A PRIZE!

Editors bemoan fact that baseball story didn't make deadline. Sports Editor (top left) in quandry over what to turn in instead. Editor-in-chief (center) sees whole paper disintergrating before eyes. Average page 2 and 3 readers or non-athletes (bottom left) bored with the whole affair.

Track Season Runs Out

The track and field team ended up the 1982 season on Saturday. The Scots met up against strong competition in the ODAC track and field championships at Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Virginia. The spirit of the team was dampened by questionable methods and procedures in the qualifying heats of the morning. Rather than runners with the best times qualifying for the finals in the afternoon, the top two finishers in each heat were the finalists. Several Maryville runners, who did not qualify for the finals, had better qualifying times. Runners were seeded by times that were not verified. This caused many participants to be in the incorrect heat. Morale continued to fall when the head coach from Washinton and Lee attempted to disqualify Maryville hurdler Jim Jarrell. Jarrell was accused of intentionally false-starting in the 400 meter run. The accusation had no basis and was characteristic of the poorly run meet. After reviewing the situation it was decided that there was no way to prove an intentional false-start and Jarrell was allowed to continue. By this time, however, Jarrell had missed his heat and had to run in a much faster heat, thus not qualifying for the finals. The incompetence prevailed into the afternoon as Ed Belfi was required to throw the shot put three times consecutively. These events and the attitude towards Maryville made it rather difficult for the Scots.

In spite of these problems Maryville did have some good performances. Darius Fagin once again led the Scots in scoring with a second place in the discus and a third place in the triple jump. The 440 relay team of Mike Surrency, Darius Fagin, Pat Foster, and Robert Loray claimed a fifth place finish. Fifth place finishes were also registered by Robert Loray in the 100 meter high hurdles and Archie Poeppel in the javelin throw.

Women's tennis

The Lady Scots Tennis team defeated Milligan College this past weekend for the State title. Earlier in the season Maryville slipped by Milligan (5-4), but this past weekend they posted an impressive victory by defeating the Lady Buffaloes (7-2).

On Wednesday, the Lady Scots will leave for Fredericksburg, VA to compete in the Regionals. Regional play will begin at 9:00 a.m. on Thursday morning at Mary Washington College. Good Luck Lady Scots!

PIZZA VILLA

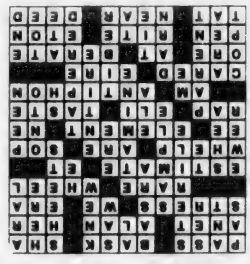
End-of-Spring Special!

Everything ½ Price for MC students!

Ladies Nip Tigers

The Lady Scots softball team played only one of the three doubleheaders scheduled for this past week as a result of the rains that were here on Monday and Tuesday. Monday's game against Milligan has been rescheduled for Thursday, May 6, and Tuesday's game against Tennessee Temple has been cancelled.

On Wednesday, the Lady Tigers of Hiwassee came to town with a record of 31-2. Hiwassee was able to take the first game 12-2 before dropping the second to the Lady Scots 7-4. Coach Ballard said that this wins proved the the Lady Scots are a team to be reckoned with, and that is also could served as a boost to next year's schedule and recruiting.



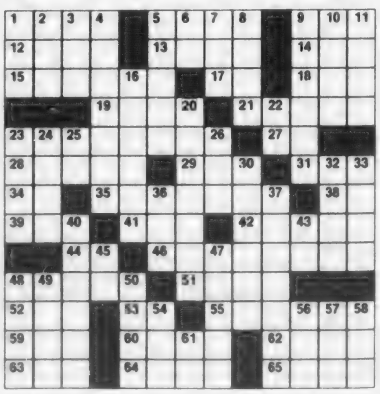
Kim Allen led the Ladies going 5-6 at the plate with four singles and a triple for the day. Charlotte Hamby also batted well going 3-6 with two singles and a triple. Barbara Hogan gets this week's all-around player award as she went 3-5 at the plate and made an outstanding catch in the second game that resulted in Maryville's only double play of the day.

The team ends the season this week with a double header against Milligan at Sandy Springs on Thursday at 3:30, and a tournament at Sandy Springs on Saturday staring at 10:00 with Hiwassee, Tennessee Temday starting at 10:00 with Hiwassee, Tennessee Temple, and Tusculum.

Many thanks to head groundskeeper Shannon O'Brien for all his help. His efforts are greatly appreciated by the team.

SCOTS
MARYVILLE COLLEGE

Puzzle Answer



CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Free ticket
5 Luxuriate
9 The urial
12 Dillseed
13 Wolfhound
14 Pronoun
15 Emphasis
17 Pronoun
18 Time period
19 Unusual
21 — and deal
23 Appraisal
27 Latin conjunction
28 Puppy
29 Exist
31 Soak up
34 Want ad abbr.
35 Ingredient
38 Compass pt.
39 Knock
41 Man's name
42 Experience
44 Part of "to be"
46 Musical response
48 Was concerned
51 European country
52 Mineral
53 Near
55 Chastise
59 Write
60 Ceremony
62 Short jacket
63 Make lace
64 Close
65 Act

DOWN
1 Dance step
2 Emmet
3 Weight of India
4 Unproductive
5 Iraqui port
6 Man's nickname
7 Witnessed
8 Was aware of 9 Sails
10 At this place
11 Asian sea
16 Specimen
20 Loosely woven cotton
22 Pronoun
23 Pitcher
24 N.Y. Mets stadium
25 Tellurium symbol
26 Before
30 All
32 Preposition
33 Hammer part
36 Guido's high note
37 Diminished gradually
40 Father or mother
43 Quiet!
45 Pronoun
47 Italian river
48 Egyptian
49 Region
50 Mend
54 Stalemate
56 Devoured
57 Pedal digit
58 Goal
61 Tantalum symbol

Psycholand Pavillion

Upon arriving at the 1982 Maryville College Fair, be sure that you head directly to the Psycholand pavillion. The directors of this pavillion were unaware of the exact opening day (due to failures in the Fair's communication center) and are hard to find at any specific time. You may, after many tries, find one of the exhibits open.

Once inside, you will find many interesting facts about modern psychology and the lack of energy involved with it currently. After pulling many strings to find out which exhibits are a must, and which ones are not, you will find the good ones worth your time. If you like mathematics and interesting labs (which do not work but are fun for the kiddies) stop in the learning exhibit. There is a lot of action in this display, which is very interesting, but the underlying implications are nill. While in this exhibit, be sure to stop and see the solar powered Oedipal complex robot. This robot walks, talks, and can even smoke a pipe. The robot has some problems with grasping chalk and ideas, but overall it is pretty interesting for the kiddies.

At the other end of the pavillion, you can see many demonstrations of the marvelous physiopen by the Wizard of Psychology. This wizard also doubles as the incredible shrinking man in charge of spectator relations. This wizard does not have much action, but the information conveyed is quite interesting. There is also an exhibit on sleep and the conservation of energy. The vastly unexplored area of sleep is studied along with other uselesss, complicated experiments.

The directors expect everyone to see the pavillion as soon as possible but they admit that they do not expect any of the exhibits to be completed, until the last fifteen minutes of the fair.

Many Winnebagos have been transported direct from Michigan to the gold course in front of Dorm I to form Dorm I village. Because of a lack of interest in housing at the fair site, the Winnebagos remain empty. Due to the efforts of the Athletic Department, however, they sure are clean!!

The History Pavillion seems to have been through the wars but remains in satisfactory condition for the beginning of the 1982 MC Fair. Undisclosed sources have revealed that the Coordinators of the pavillion have gone to bring Stone Henge to the fair.

I HAVE to be here!

English Pavillion

The English Pavillion is auspiciously honored by residing in Anderson Hall, site of the Waynesphere. Upon entering this revered institution, each visitor will be handed a Maryville College outline that will chart his course along the many connector routes.

156 laborious steps take the now physically weakened fair-goers to the third and only floor where displays are located. Here they will be ushered into small vehicles operated by The Frogs, who will ferry passengers to each exhibit. Step quickly, the conveyor belt is moving at the same speed as the cars. Do not pull down the safety bar, it will close automatically.

A special inovation of this pavillion is the introduction of a newly created energy source. Fused sentences will provide all of the energy used in the English pavillion.

Special guides are provided by Harbrace Corporation. Guide 18 will leave guests spellbound as he treats them to an Odessy of attractions which will include scenes of the atrocious dangling participles and the delicate procedure of repairing them.

The Sacred Bushing Manual will be on display in a specially constructed, hermetically sealed, temperature controlled case. Security forces uniformed in plaid jackets and striped ties will guard the display.

The quality of presenters for every exhibit may be startling. Each has been versed in the use of introductory comments, but may lapse into fragmented sentences. Visitors are cautioned to listen carefully.

A special feature is the participation booth in which tourists will have many opportunities to pit their skills against the grammar and punctuation tests.

Before leaving each person will be required to satisfactorially complete the Pavillion proficiency exam

Press, cont. from page 2

(no dilly-dallying at this fair) where we saw a theatrical performance of the Pirates of Pepperonni. This is a powerful, but subtle drama about the tremendous dependency on pizza our students of higher education suffer from today. A real modern tragedy. One of those plays that leaves you really ready to get out there and do something about world problems. George Cassutto plays a particularly stirring role as The Beaver.

We then hurried to Pearsons Pavillion, on foot because the bus driver refused to let us in, and we feared he might chase us as he did a group of nuns earlier. At this pavillion, you can choose from the cuisine of Japan, Bulgaria, France, China, India, Germany, and Toledo. Unfortunately the flavor of the meals deteriorated on the ships bringing them over.

Entertainment

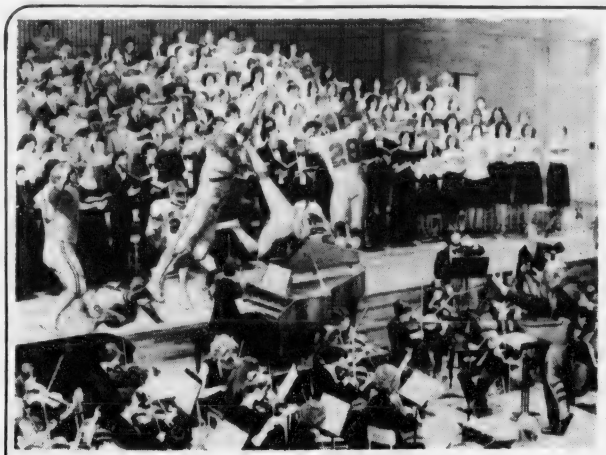
You Call This Entertainment?

The 1982 MC Fair is jam-pakced with exciting and titillating entertainment for everyone, regardless of age. Due to the hard work and monstrous booking done by Exir Brennen, Entertainment Director, the fair promises to be a grand extravaganza of entertainment. Arranging performance times and cites and explaining just where Maryvill is seemed to take up most of Exir Brennen's time. All that work has paid off, however, and the stage is set for some very fine entertainment.

Kicking off the 1982 MC Fair is the parade of Fools. This is led by the Fighting Terrier Band. The Grand Marshall for the parade will be Wonderful Wayne. Bystanders may be able to catch one of the few remaining Wonderful Wayne T-shirts that will be tossed from the car by driver, Daring Donna Davis. Included in the parade are other dignitaries which head up the separate pavillions here on the fair site. The official cheerleading squad of the 1982 MC Fair will be there to cheer the pavillion coordinators into action.

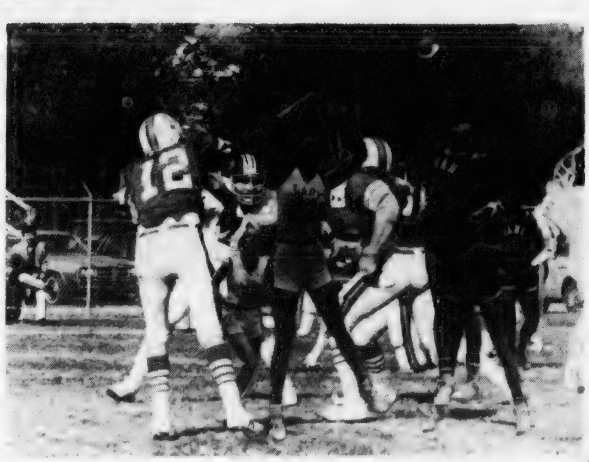
At the end of the parade route will be the official wild beast and wine feast of the 1982 MC Fair. Food is supplied by the Sutton Science Pavillion Experimental Expedition Team. All of the food served is indicative of the East Tennessee area and consists of anything that once moved and was big enough to catch with primative lab equipment. The wine will be supplied by Morrisons, who have purchased several hundred six-packs of the canned sweet nectar.

Immediately following the feast will be a block party. This is a chance to wear off all the calories gained at the feast. The band will be ChoppingBlock and they promise to execute an evening of entertainment that will make your head roll. Admission is $.50 with a block and $1.00 without.



Throughout the fair site will be booths full of varying degrees of entertainment and propaganda. Several of the pavillions have set up such booths to attract people to their separate sites. The largest booth is dedicated to educating people as to where Maryville is located and what the MC liberal arts atmosphere can offer.

Protestors have taken advantage of the exposure offered by the MC Fair to make their voices heard. Slogans on protest signs included: You Cut Out Aid And Brought The Fair, You Won't Get Paid Cause We Won't Be There, and Morrisons Cramps Our Style And Stomachs.

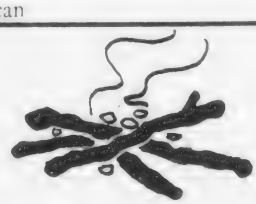


Later in the fair, there will be the Super Banana Split event. There will be five giant bananas at this contest measuring 63 feet long and 5 feet wide and weighing a half ton each. Five teams of ten people will then attempt to "split" the banana by eating their way through from tip to tip. It is really an appealing sight to see that bunch of people eating their way to glory.

Several other events are planned for the fair but have not been scheduled as of yet. If you wish to secure your place in the 1982 MC Fair, contact the appropriate pavillion advisor for information on how to fill out your official 1982 MC Fair scheduling card. Remember, you must have the pavillion advisor's signature for it to be official.

Meanwhile enjoy the entertainment and festivities offered by the liberal arts atmosphere of the 1982 MC Fair.

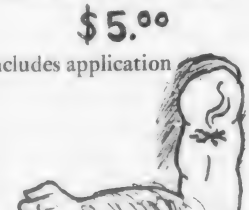
The football team, out to prove they are not "dumb jocks", exhibit a well-choreographed dance interpretation with the Joffery Ballet. Accompaniment is provided by the Messiah performers. This entertainment can be seen at the Wilson Pavillion Friday and Saturday nights at 8:15 p.m.



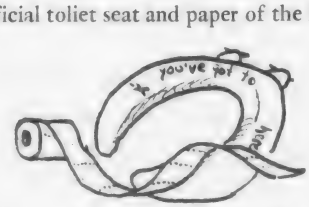
Coach Ogden caused a stir when he brought in women to football spring training. He does not regret the decision, however, saying spring practice has improved. "I've never seen such moves," he said. A specially trained for football/basketball game will be played in the PE pavillion on Friday night.

M.C. WORLD'S FAIR

SOUVENIER COUPONS!



.12¢ OFF
Official MC Fair power tools



$30.00 OFF
Official MC Fair pot holders

Official MC Fair tatoos -
$5.00
includes application

Official toliet seat and paper of the MC Fair

Buy the seat, get one roll paper free

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 25 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, May 13, 1982

"Kiss me, you fool!" says Kim Hatfield to unknown bystander, while Evenlyn Sowell dreams of the Oink and Ale to come during May Madness Weekend.

ACC Conducts Major Business

By Mike Hester

Two new majors will become available beginning in the Fall of 1983. These majors are the result of action taken by the All-College Council during the April 7 and May 5 meetings.

Academic Dean Al Perkins introduced a Pre-professional Health Sciences Major. This major is designed for students wishing to continue their education in either medical, vetrinarian, or dental school. It was approved by the ACC at the April 7 meeting.

At the May 5 meeting, Dean Perkins presented a new Music Major. This Music Major, to be added to the other three Music Majors, is in the field of opera and musical theater. The ACC approved the new major which will be available in September of 1982.

The ACC, under the new curriculum, passed proposals for Psychology Majors to waive the Natural Science courses (150,250) and the political Science, Economics, Management and Business Majors to Waive the Social Science (220) requirement.

The All-College Council also approved of two Cross-disciplinary Majors at the April 7 meeting. The Cross-disciplinary Majors are in American Studies and Midieval Studies. They will be introduced to students in September, 1982.

In other action, the All-College Council approved a proposal to install two courses in Latin beginning next year. These courses will be taught alternately with Greek.

On Monday, May 10, elections were held to determine the 1982-83 All-College Council. Representatives were chosen from students, staff, administration, and faculty. Student Representatives are Mike Hester (Senior) who served on the ACC this year; Sara Jane Lindsay (Junior), who represented her freshman class and is a current chairperson of an ACC committee; and Susan Jennings who will be the Sophomore representative.

Leslie Nier, who works in admissions, was voted staff representative. while Bill Slater, Director of the Physical Plant, and Peter Vial, MC Chaplain, were chosen from the Administrative Officers.

Faculty representatives were nominated according to the number of years they have been at MC. In the one to five years catagory, Exir Breenan, Associate Professor and Director of the Library, was elected. James Pickens, Assistant Professor of Psychology, was chosen from the six to fifteen years catagory, and Charlotte Beck, Assistant Professor of English, will represent the faculty from the over fifteen years catagory.

What's Going On

Thursday, May 13

7:00 - All Sports Banquet held in Margaret Ware Dining Room.

Friday, May 14

4:30 - Walk-A-Thon with Governor Lamar Alexander to raise funds for Haven House, Blount County shelter for abused persons.

Saturday, May 15

9:00 - 1:00 - Spring Formal at the Green Meadow Country Club.

Sunday, May 16

4:00 - Campus Fellowship

Monday, May 17

Sophomore Class Elections

Wednesday, May 19

9:20 - CIV with Dr. Charles Hanbrick, Department of Religious Studies at Vanderbilt University.

3:00 - 6:00 - Rummage Sale in Lloyd Lobby

4:00 - Beached Whale Party behind Lloyd cookout and games.

Junior Class Elections

Thursday, May 20

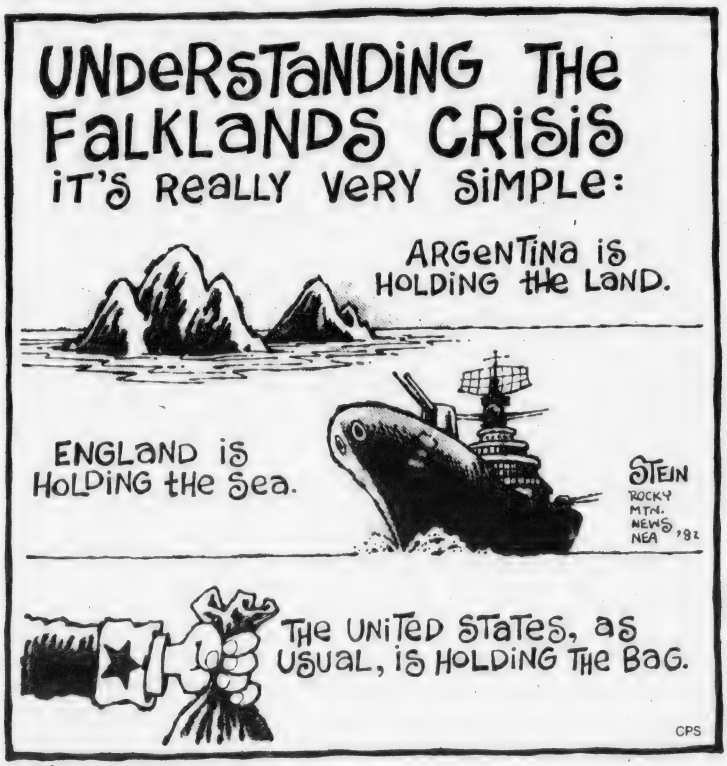
3:00 - 6:00 - Rummage Sale in Lloyd Lobby

Friday, May 21

Senior Class Elections

It's A Consideration

When a group of people form a society, it most usually follows that these people create a system of rules to govern themselves. Some of the rules are in the mode of laws, while some come from common courtesy shown between members of the community. There are always those questions which arise out of the various preferences shown by such diversified personalities. Smoking happens to be one of these questions.



Two subjects most often cited in conjunction with cigarettes are the problems of safety and smoke, both usually dealt with through the use of posted "No Smoking" signs. The former is backed by the law, the latter is backed by consideration.

While these problems are debated fiercely in residential and business communities and have become a major issue in recent elections, they also apply to the college society. When the Alumni Gym was first opened to functions such as dinners and parties, students were cautioned that there was to be absolutely no smoking because of the wooden structure of the building and the gasoline tanks behind it. At recent events, however, smoking has been observed and overlooked by those very people who forbade it.

In days gone by, the toaster used to spew forth billows of smoke to the objection of our eyes and noses. Now that this no longer occurs, however, we are still subjected to the fumes swirling from cigarettes. Last year "No Smoking" signs were hung in the main dining room, while the back room was open to smoking. This satisfied those who are bothered by the smell of smoke during meals, and also those who wish to smoke. The reintroduction of this system would be welcomed.

There is another matter which follows and this is the habit of dropping cigarette butts wherever one happens to be. It may be easiest to use Pearsons steps and the sidewalks as ashtrays, but it is also unsightly.

Smoking is a right of choice, and both those who do and do not smoke have the right to safety, unlittered grounds, and avoidence of smoke if they wish.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Layout Editor . . . . . Barb Booker

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

New Editors Publicized

The new editors of the three campus publications were selected Wednesday, April 28.

Traci Fraser will assume the editorship of the Highland Echo next fall. Traci, a rising junior from Fort Myers, Florida is majoring in political science and minoring in English. She comments, "I am excited about editing the paper next year. It's an opportunity I've always wanted and I plan to make the most of it. I have a lot of ideas and hope everyone will find something they enjoy. There will be something for everyone!"

Traci competed for her position by publishing a trial edition and presenting a portfolio to the Publications Committee.

Bill Warren, graduating in 1983, edited Impressions last year and will continue through the spring of 1983. Bill is from Columbus, Ohio, and his major is English. He finds work with Impressions exciting and "an excellent way to gain experience in the publishing field." He notes, "The abundance of campus creativity is very inspiring."

Bill has worked on the literary magazine since his freshman year, advancing to assistant editor his sophomore year. He applied for the editor's position in 1981 and attended an interview with the Publications Committee before becoming the Impressions editor.

Sarah Jane Lindsay, of Chattanooga, Tennessee is the new editor of the Chilhowean. She is a political science major who will graduate in 1984. Even though the Chilhowean will suffer a substantial budget cut next year, Sarah Jane hopes to include the spring of 1982 and fall and winter of the next school year."

Assistant editor, Kay Lippincott (who will be

Continued on page 4

Band Drums Up 1982-83 Officers

By Bill Warren, Jr.

New Band officers for next year's Marching Band, and Jazz Ensemble, and Symphonic Band were elected Wednesday, April 28, 1982. The new officers include: President, David Edington; Vice-President, Paula Walton; and Secretary Treasurer, Don Gilliland. The Drum Major will be elected during the fall term.

These officers tentatively plan to establish a Symphonic Band next vear. The aim of this wind ensemble is to provide a more diverse range of music–expanding from Marching and Jazz tunes to classics. This new group will meet once a week during the Fall term and prepare for a concert to be performed during the Winter term.

Those members of the 1982 Marching Band who can return to MC early will arrive Thursday, September 9th, 1982, in order to prepare music for the first Scot's Football game at Home on the 11th. Students interested in the Band are welcome to participate and should contact David Edington for details. David Edington hopes for ". . . a larger band including all the MC students who have had musical experience."

Students Milk Dairies

(CPS)

College students are milking the dairy industry for millions of dollars a year according to industry spokesmen, who claim that the colorful plastic cases used to ship milk cartons are constantly lost to students, who use them for everything from record racks to bookshelf supports to moving crates.

The nation's dairies allege they are losing a fortune in stolen cases, especially around college campuses. The problem is so severe in some areas that local dairies are pleading with campus police departments to help them crack down on the student theives.

"It's a nationwide problem," says David Beren, executive assistant and economist for the Milk Industry Foundation in Washington, D.C. "In total, there are about $100 million worth of milk cases lost per year. And that loss eventually works its way back to the consumer."

"The cases are typically stolen from grocery store loading docks and dairy buildings," Beren says.

"And it's theft just like any other kind of theft," he asserts. "Even though you're not walking out of the store with it, you're still stealing."

While students aren't the only pilferers of the plastic novelties, Beren says that "It is really a problem around campuses."

Dairies near the University of Oklahoma at Norman, for instance, in early April got a state law passed that makes carton theft punishable by fine and imprisonment.

"We've had to replace 25,000 to 30,000 cases a year," complained Don Davis, president of Gilt Edge Farm Dairy in Norman. "Many people don't realize the expense," he explained, adding that the cases cost his dairy $3 to $3.50 each.

Davis' dairy, along with others in the OU area, has even made special arrangements with campus police to go through student dorms at the end of the school year to search for abandoned cases.

Penn State is experiencing similar complaints from local dairies, according to Officer Mark Kinley of the campus police department.

"One of our local dairy companies has sent personnel over several times to complain about it," says Kinley. "They said they had noticed the cases in students' windows and around campus, and they expressed an interest in getting them returned."

But Kinley says short of entering and searching students' rooms, there's not much the campus police can do except notify the appropriate dairy when a case is found.

Similarly, at the University of Misssouri at Columbia, milk case theft "has certainly been a problem," according to Chief Ron Mason of the MU police department.

"A lot of students use them for carrying cases by strapping them on the backs of their bicycles or motorcycles," says Mason. Students also use them in their dorm rooms as endtables, footrests, shelves, and storage containers.

But "it's something that's very difficult to prevent," Mason emphasizes. He says his department will recover as many of the cases as they can when students move out of the dorms this spring.

Books Are A Know Know

Inner Nazi: A Critical Analysis of Hitler's Mein Kampf by Hans Staudinger

Going for Broke: the Chrysler Story by Michael Moritz & Barnett Seaman

Vietnam Experience: v.1: Setting the Stage. v.2: Passing the Torch

Americans & Chinese: Passage to Differences by Francis Hsu

Unloving Care, the Nursing Home Tragedy by Bruce Vladeck

PLATTER CHATTER

Step by Step by Eddie Rabbit

Everlasting Love by Rex Smith

Love All the Hurt Away by Aretha Franklin

Pachelbel Canon by James Galway

Best of the Oak Ridge Boys

Annie

Ladies End Successful Year

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots softball team ended its first year as a varsity team with a record of 7-17. Last week's action saw the Ladies lose to Tennessee Temple on Tuesday by scores of 10-0 and 7-2. On Saturday the team participated in the first East Tennessee Classic at Everett Field. The Lady Scots lost a close game to Hiwassee 4-2 before being eliminated by Tennessee Temple 4-0. Other scores from the tournament were Tusculum over Temple 8-1, Hiwassee over Tusculum 21-1, Tusculum over Temple 10-2 and Hiwassee over Tusculum 16-10.

Coach Ballard, when asked about the season, said "Our record is not indicative of how we played." He went on to say that about nine of the games lost were by two or less runs. When asked about next year, Ballard seemed to agree with the idea of "letting next year take care of itself."

Taking a glance at next year, it seems that it will take care of itself. The team will only lose two seniors to graduation, Charlotte Hamby and Ivy Hinton. Expected back for next year are Nickie Frazier, Stacy Medlin, Leah Gross, Rachel Reese, Kim Allen, Mimi Chesney, Sue Van Aken, Kandy Schram, Barbara Hogan, Jenny Walker, and Kathy Walker. Also expected back are a few players who were unable to play this year.

People to be thanked for their efforts and contributions are Bonnie Dobson (scorekeeper) and Shannon O'Brien (groundskeeper and announcer). A special thanks also goes to T.C.

To wrap things up, it can be said that the first year as a varsity sport has been successful for the Ladies even though their record might not show it.

Give Them A "Rah"

Tryouts for the 1982-83 MC Cheerleaders were held on Thursday, April 29, at the MC Gym. There was a panel of 14 judges, consisting of faculty, staff, 1981-82 senior cheerleaders, members of the senior class, and former MC cheerleaders. Each contestant was judged on personal appearance and personality, performance of cheer, pep and enthusiasm, jumps, and pom pom routine.

The six members chosen were, Amy Blanc, Susan Cardwell, Ginger Harris, Kim Hatfield, Mary Jo Irwin and Kim Sperry with an additional two members to be selected in the fall.

Mrs. Exir Brennan, sponsor for the cheerleaders would like to express her appreciation to each contestant for their participation in the tryouts.

A.I.W.A. Loses To NCAA

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)

The nine-year-old Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) is effectively throwing in the towel, association officials report, and will probably disband this summer following its spring championships.

The organization's demise comes on the heels of a self-imposed March 1 deadline, by which date AIAW officials earlier declared they would disband if they failed to attain a temporary injunction against the efforts of the powerful National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) to take over women's intercollegiate sports.

That injunction was denied in mid-February by U. S. District Court Judge Charles Richey, who said the AIAW failed to demonstrate a significant need for such action.

AIAW lawyers insisted the injunction, which would have halted the NCAA's expansion into women's sports, was necessary to prevent the NCAA from monopolizing women's sports in the same manner as it has men's athletics. AIAW claims it has lost 32 percent of its membership and a $200,000 NBC television contract since the NCAA expanded into women's programs last year.

The injunction is part of a larger anti-trust suit that the 753-member AIAW filed against the rival last year. The suit charges the 76-year-old NCAA is unfairly using its power and wealth from its men's programs to intimidate and lure AIAW members into defecting.

But even with the anti-trust suit still pending, AIAW officials fear the battle is lost. With the NCAA women's program soon to enter its second year, it will be so firmly entrenched that it irreparably harms the once-dominant AIAW, they say. Even if the AIAW wins its case, representatives say, it will exist only as a shadow of its former self, too small to carry on effectively

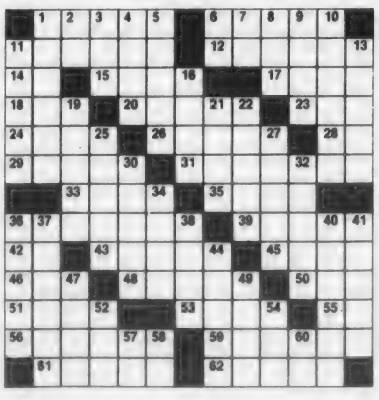
AIAW delegates already voted at their annual convention in January to stop accepting members for the 1982-83 academic year, pending the outcome of the lawsuit.

But suspending the recruitment rules, which differ significantly from the NCAA policies, may not be much comfort to AIAW members who will be left without a parent association this summer. In response, the NCAA has announced that any institution wishing to switch from AIAW to NCAA must finish out the rest of the academic year under the AIAW's guidelines, despite the suspension.

Some of the difference in recuirtment policies are quite significant. For instance, under certain circumstances, the NCAA allows institutions to pay for the costs of bringing a wanted athlete to campus. The AIAW strictly forbids any paid visits. The NCAA also allows coaches to contact prospective recruits, while AIAW policy forbids it.

Meanwhile, the AIAW says it will convene a meeting of delegates to decide on the final plans for dissolving the organization, pending the outcome of the anti-trust legislation, schedules for this spring.

Editors, cont. from page 3



Chilhowean editor during the 1983-84 school year) and Sarh Jane are already working on next year's yearbook. Kay, also a junior, is from Fort Myers, Florida. She will graduate with a degree in psychology. Kay is "very enthusiastic about the quality of next year's yearbook."

CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Recipient of gift
6 Clever
11 Harbinger
12 Engines
14 Guido's low note
15 Jokes
17 Landed
18 Rodent
20 Approaches
23 Girl's name
24 Weary
26 Declare
28 — Paso
29 Slumber
31 Raise
33 God of love
35 Man's name
36 Wounds
39 Evade
42 Preposition
43 Gladden
45 Stalk
46 Moslem leader
48 Masts
50 Slender finial
51 One of Columbus's ships
53 Festive
55 Oral pause
56 Positive poles
59 Drawing rooms
61 Growing out
62 Correct

DOWN
1 Minor item
2 Conjunction
3 Scold
4 Verve
5 Rims
6 Part of "to be"
7 Suffice
8 Greek letter
9 European
10 Spider
11 Damages
13 Gravestone
16 Surfeit
19 Elms, e.g.
21 Death rattle
22 Cubic meter
25 Weird
27 Ills
30 Bodies of water
32 Sharp
34 Ginger —
36 Climbing plant
37 Motor
38 Hart
40 Rely on
41 Arab chiefs
44 Expunge
47 Later
49 Bridge term
52 Girl's name
54 Beverage
57 Latin conjunction
58 Compass pt.
60 Preposition

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 26 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, May 20, 1982

What Must We Do To Pack Up And Leave?

By Traci Fraser

Before you pack up and leave MC for the summer, take a minute to go over this list and make sure you've remembered everything. It may save you some hassles, and maybe even some time.

GRADUATING SENIORS: Graduation check-out forms must be picked up in the Student Affairs Office and filled out before Commencement.

ROOM DRAW: Room draw for next year will be held at 3:45 in Fayerweather 201. Seniors will begin at this time, with Juniors then Sophomores following. The $40 room deposit fee must have ben paid to the Business Office before room draw, and students should bring their receipt to the draw.

REFRIGERATORS: Refrigerators rented from Student Affairs will be collected Tuesday, May 25 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., and again on Wednesday the 26th from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. Refrigerators should be returned clean and defrosted with all parts and accessories intact to the basement of Thaw Hall. Cleaning supplies will be available at Thaw if you have not already cleaned the unit. Failure to return a refrigerator on time will result in the loss of the deposit, and students failing to return the refrigerator at all will be held responsible for the cost of replacing the unit.

SUMMER STORAGE: Before items to be stored for the summer can be placed in the storage rooms, Housekeeping must first clean out the room. This general cleaning will take place Thursday, May 20 in Davis and Copeland, Friday, May 21 in Lloyd and Dorm I, and Monday, May 24 in Pearson's. Items presently being stored must be removed before Housekeeping cleans, or they will be taken to the basement storage rooms.

Items to be stored for the summer must have a storage sticker on them. The stickers cost $.50 and may be bought from Student Affairs or from the Resident Directors after the storage rooms have been cleaned. The Bookstore will be selling storage boxes for $1.75 each. If you want to use you own boxes, size specifications and storage directions may be found on page 21 of the MC Student Handbook.

TRASH AND CLEANING: Residence Director will have garbage bags available for student use. Trash and empty boxes should be left in the following places: The townside lounges of Davis and Dorm I, the mountainside lounges of Copeland, by the trash chutes and in the lobby on mountainside in Lloyd, and in the dumpster on the Court Street side in Carnegie. Check to make sure that trash and personal items are cleaned out of rooms as you leave. Trash

Continued on page 4

What's Going On

Thursday, May 20

8:15 - Recital with Kent Skinner and Skinner and Bonham in the Music Hall. A reception will follow in the FAC Lounge.

Saturday, May 22

9:00 - Coffeehouse on the FAC Terrace

Sunday, May 23

Davis All-Campus B.B.Q
4:00-Campus Fellowship

Monday, May 24

Awards Banquet

Tuesday, May 25

7:00 - Student Recital in the Music Hall

Wednesday, May 26

9:20 - Senior CIV
10:30- Mid-Week Worship
3:45 - Room Draw
11:00 p.m. Late Night Brunch

The Senior Art Show of Cindy Cunningham is shown daily in the FAC Gallery.

A Feat For Haven House

By Jenny Fitzell

One definition of the verb "to walk" is "to pursue a course of action or way of life. The walk-a-thon on Friday the 14th was designed to enable people in Blount County to do just that - to pursue a new way of life. The walk was organized to raise funds for Haven House, the Blount County shelter for abused persons, which hopefully will be opened in November.

Abuse centers can be found in Nashville and even closer in Knoxville. However, the center in Knoxville only services Knox County. Thus, a group of Blount County women, along with the support of Governor Lamar Alexander, saw a strong need for such a house in Blount County.

The council of Church Women United, which represents all denominations, developed the idea of the walk-a-thon. They then sought aid from the Junior Chilhowea League and the Junior Service League to put the council's plans into action. These young women, along with Govenor Lamar Alexander's staff and Bruce Guillaume, chairman, organized the three mile walk which, according to the pledges, raised $18,000.

Servicing both abused women and abused men, the key concept of Haven House will be to reunite the family. If reconciliation between husband and wife proves impossible, the center will supply transportation for medical needs and will help the abused person find housing and employment. Single abused adults may also find shelter here. The goal of the people at Haven House is to counsel both the abuser and the abused so that they may develop more meaningful relationships. The center will also try to help the abuser understand that his actions are not socially acceptable. The people seeking help from Haven, which is reserved for Blount County residents and Maryville College students, will be admitted only upon referral from a pastor, a district attorney, a physician, or from the Department of Human Services.

Since Haven House will not receive federal or state aid, the people working on the Haven House program look to the walk-a-thon, which will become an annual event, as their main means of support. The people of Haven House will enthusiastically accept MC students majoring in counseling as volunteer workers and will also gratefully accept donations, such as furniture and other articles, for the house.

A large portion of this year's walkers were comprised of school children from various Blount County schools. Also intermingling in the group were Govenor Lamar Alexander and his family and, from MC, Beth Seiber, Ellen Smith, and Brenda Gillespie. Beth Seiber, explaining how fun the walk was, commented that she enjoyed "Alexander's Washboard Band" which played country tunes as it led the walkers on their walk toward a better life.

A Toast Is Given

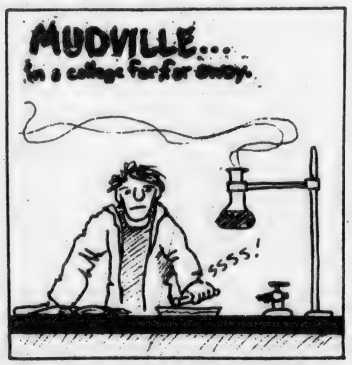
The year is winding down, and there is yet one tribute which remians to be made. It is for this reason, Ladies and Gentlemen, that you have been invited to this toast to the Weekend. These twin days, stalwarts against the other five, have kept them from collapsing on each other in a pile from which we would no longer be able to see our way clear. These generous hours do not skim-sometimes even being called to the task early, as students thunder out of Thaw and Anderson on Friday with a flood of relief that our honored guest finally has arrived. But I have said enough. I will now introduce to you a number of speakers who will give testament to the Weekend.

"Mr. Meadows, what would you like to say?"

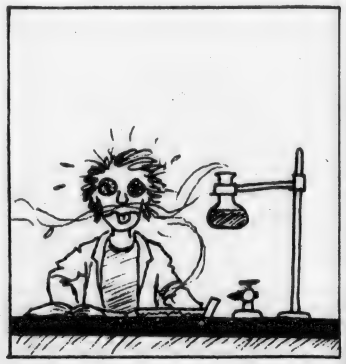
"Thank you. I wish to express my deepest gratitude for the time that the Weekend has given me to get away from town life to drive through Cades Cove, hike to Abrams Falls, tube down the rushing streams, and go camping. And during the winter, I had some time for solitude to spend with my guitar and good friends.'

"That was very nice, Mr. Meadows. Ms. Bookman would you like to speak next?"

"Yes. Thank you. Mr. Honored guest, Ladies, Gentlemen, and Friends. I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the many extra hours which I have utilized to the fullest in extensive study and research. Without your aid, Weekend, it would have been quite a formidable undertaking to complete my many assignments. I can assure you, also, that my esteemed professors are equally gratuitous for my being able to prepare for my next class. Thank you."



"Miss Parnap, Miss Parnap, we would like for you to speak next."



"huh? Oh, yawn, thanks. I really haven't seen that much of weekends but still I'm glad we have them. I usually zonk out Friday after classes and don't come out of hibernation until Sunday night. I suppose my professors like it that I don't fall asleep during class. It really does disrupt things when you hear somebody's head clunk on the desk. So, thanks, Weekend, for giving me two days in . . . which . . . to . . . sleep . . . ZZzzz."

"Could somebody help me here? Yes, just sit her up in that chair. That's good. Now Mr. Funston, would you like to take the podium?"

"Sure, yea, where do you want it? Just a little joke there. I rather agree with the last person. There have been many weekends that I haven't seen, heh, heh, at least not too well! For me it's a nonstop party. Have to unwind from all that reading and sitting in desks all week. Yea, no doubt about it, weekends are a blast. I'd never survive without you, so thanks a lot."

"Um. thank you, Mr. Funston. As you all can see, everyone has their own reasons for wishing to honor our guest. Only one remains in this calendar school year, and it is fitting that we pay a tribute to you on this auspicious occassion."

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Layout Editor . . . . . Barb Booker

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

What Do They Do Now?

With graduation quickly approaching, many seniors are looking forward to either entering the job market or continuing on to Graduate School. Some may wonder exactly where the past four years of hard work and study will lead them, and what others who have graduated with their same major have found once they left Maryville College.

The class of 1981 are disbursed throughout the country and are engaged in a variety of endeavors. This list, catagorized by major, includes where the graduate is presently living and his or her career choice.

BIOLOGY

Bryan Beegle, Maryville, TN; UT Hospital Birth Defects Center Evaluation Lab, Cytogenetics.

Peggy Smith, Chattanooga TN; S.W. Laboratory-Lab Technician.

BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Bill Clarke, Bridgewater, NJ; Science Management Corp. - Computer Programmer

Kim Demaat (Mrs. Les Baron), Maryville, TN; Adlan Investment Corp - Administrative Assistant

Scott Jones, Sarasota, FL; Soccer Line Manager.

Mitsuko Kuwabara, Japan Foreign Investment Company - Marketing

CHEMISTRY

Larry Durand, Charleston, SC; University of South Carolina - Dentistry

Randy Massey, Knoxville, TN; Massey Electric Partner

ECONOMICS

Ed Davalos, Johnson City, TN; East Tennessee State University - MBA, Resident Director, and Wrestling Coach.

Jim Engel, Boston, MA; Suffolk Universtiy Law School

ELEMENTARY EDUCATION

Bruce Wilson, Bayshore, NY; Substitute Teacher, Elementary Schools

Michelle Jones, Washington, D.C.; Day Care Center Teacher

ENGLISH

Shelley Ballenger (Mrs. Bob Bishop), Columbus, OH; Columbus Dispatch Advertising Department.

Lois Boney, NY; Circle in the Square Herbert Berghoff School of Theater.

Tim Sasscer, Puerto Rico; Teacher 7th Grade English.

HEALTH/PE

Jill Flickinger, Maryville, TN; Knoxville City Schools Physical Education Teacher.

HISTORY

Patti Berkau, Oak Ridge, TN, Webb School - Teacher.

Rodney Nelson, Maryville TN; Maryville High School Economics Teacher and Head Basketball Coach.

INTERPRETING FOR THE DEAF

Liz Barrie, Miami Shores, FL; Southeast Bank Marketing/Public Relations and Church Interpreter.

Nancy Frudenthal, Leesburg, FL; Free-Lance Interpreter - UPS.

MATH

Yoji Ogino, Maryville, TN East Tennessee State University - Math Fall 1982

MUSIC

Bryan Ashley, Wichita, KS; Wichita State University - Applied Music

Debra Campbell (Mrs. Allan Walker), Maryville, TN; Blount County Schools Music Teacher for five area schools

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Mari Ann Masch, Knoxville, TN; Assistant to Attorney

Bill Thomas, Maryville, TN; Actor - West Side Dinner Theater.

PSYCHOLOGY

Cathy Culpepper, Princeton, NJ; Princeton Seminary.

John Lacava, Maryville, TN; Knoxville Adaptive Education Center - Instructor.

RECREATION

Sheri Trotter, Knoxville, TN; Tennessee School for the Deaf - Dorm Counselor.

RELIGION

Allen Evitts, Jacksonville, FL; Actor - Professional Theatre.

Bob Ostrowski, Queens, NY; Doubleday Publishing Company.

This information has been gathered from students, faculty, alumni files, and personal calls. For a complete listing of the study of the class of 1981, contact Jean Jones, Director of Career Planning And Placement.

APRIL

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. Gorky Park, by Martin Cruz Smith. (Ballantine, $3.95) The bestselling suspense thriller set in Moscow.
2. Garfield Weighs In, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Fourth book on the famous cartoon cat.
3. The Covenant, by James A. Michener. (Fawcett, $4.95) Epic novel of South African history: Fiction.
4. The White Hotel, by D.M. Thomas. (Pocket, $3.50) The bestselling novel which travels the landscape of histeria.
5. Garfield Bigger Than Life, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95) Third book on the famous cartoon cat.
6. Brideshead Revisited, by Evelyn Waugh. (Little, Brown $4.95) Companion to the PBS television series.
7. Never-Say-Diet Book, by Richard Simmons. (Warner, $7.95) Shaping up with the Hollywood TV star.
8. A Perfect Stranger, by Danielle Steel. (Dell, $3.50) The latest romantic novel by Ms. Steel.
9. The Cardinal Sins, by Andrew M. Greeley. (Warner/Geis, $3.95) The paths of two boys who grow to priesthood.
10. Goodbye, Jeanette, by Harold Robbins. (Pocket, $3.95) From occupied France to international high fashion.

Compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education from information supplied by college stores throughout the country. April 26, 1982

New & Recommended

Waiting for the Barbarians, by J.M. Coetzee. (Penguin, $3.95) One man's crisis of conscience in a remote outpost of the Empire.

Night, by Elie Wiesel. (Bantam, $2.95) His memoirs as a teenager in Auschwitz and Buchenwald.

The Random Review 1982, edited by Gary Fisketjon and Jonathan Galassi. (Ballantine, $3.95) The year's best fiction, poetry and essays.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

Song Benefits Scholarship

Three noted artists will present a recital to benefit the Maryville College Music Scholarship Fund on Thursday, May 20, at 8:15 p.m. in the College's Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

The three will also present a recital Sunday, May 16, at 4:30 p.m. at Second Presbyterian Church in Knxoville.

Kent Skinner, tenor, Diana Skinner, mezzo-soprano, and Robert Bonham, pianist, will each perform in the benefit recitals. The brother-sister team of Kent and Diana Skinner will perform both duets and solos featuring primarily sacred music. Bonham will present two Schubert impromptu selections.

Admission charge is a $5 donation to the MC Music Schoalrship Fund.

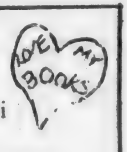
Kent Skinner most recently was a featured performer for Maryville College's "It's Another Grand Night for Singing" gala at the Lamar House-Bijou Theater to benefit the Affiliate Artist program.

A graduate of the University of Northern Colorado, he has sung at the Little Theater of the Rockies in Greeley, Colo., and appeared in popular productions in Denver and Austin, Texas.

His sister also studied voice at the University of Northern Colorado and the University of Texas. She appeared at the Little Theatre of the Rockies and with the Greeley Philharmonic before moving to New York City where she is completting her second year as a member of the New York City Opera Chorus.

An accomplished pianist and frequent performer in this area, Bonham most recently played with ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist Jeffrey Solow, cellist, and was accompanist for the MC gala at the Lamar House-Bijou Theater.

On the MC faculty since 1965, he was recntly promoted to the rank of associate professor of music. He earned his doctoral degree in comparative arts from Ohio University in 1981.



Winners Announced

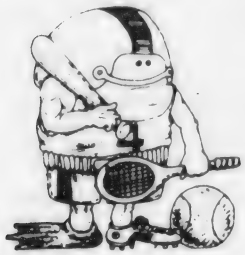
It was a tie between Robin Rimmer and Karen Spence in the Photo Contest. Each of them received a paper clip necklace and a Giant chocolate chip cookie. SEE WHAT YOU MISSED BY NOT PARTICIPATING Bill Warren is the winner of the Limerick Contest. His Grand Prize was 2 GIANT chocolate chip cookies!

The library staff and Dr. Naylor wishes to thank all who participated in the photo contest and the limerick contest. It was great fun doing it. Also Dr. Naylor is anxious for the time when the library will sponsor a "bona fide limerick contest."

The library staff wishes to thank Dr. Naylor for taking time from his busy schedule and judging the limerick contest, for his constructive comments, and for his good sportsmanship.

Love My Books!

Understanding Movies by Louis Giannetti



Which Way Out of the Men's Room? by Gordon Johnston

Cut of Cloth: Quick Classics to Sew & Wear by Ann Wiseman

Billy the Kid, Chicken Gizzards, & Other Tales by James Perkins

Collapsing Universe: The Story of Black Holes by Isaac Asimov

MC Sports End With Recognition

By Steve Arnold

Once again a year of sports has ended at Maryville College. The fans are gone, the sweat has dried and silence has taken over the fields of play. Memories held by athletes will linger on and preparation will soon begin again. Through all of the pain, conditioning, and practice came the results of timing, the ability the thrill of victory and the ever so noticed agony of defeat. Recapping the 1981-82 year starts with the winningest sport; women's volley ball - coach Sharon Brown - nationally ranked top ten all season - participated in post season championships - finished with a 25-12 record. Donna Owens received "MVP" and Dee Dee Chapman Received the "Coaches Award".

Womens Basketball - coach Sharon Brown - finished 8-15 - very talented with injuries throughout the season - one player graduating - very promising outlook for next year. Brenda Babb and Kim Allen, great all around players, tied for "MVP" with Robin Rimmer receiving the "Coaches Award".

Mens Tennis - Lady Luck not with the Scots with three losses by 5-4 score - extreme lack of experience and mental ability - graduation takes only one - Pat Dyer as head coach. Randy Shackleford took the "MVP" award while Dave Raulerson was awarded "Most Improved".

Womens Tennis - coach Brenda Cooper - finished 5-8 won Division III AIAW Tennessee State Championships - record in Division III 4-0 - Sharon Wood team captain - graduation takes only one - good outlook for 1983. Donna Owens was awarded "MVP" and Sue Spence received "Most Improved."

Football - head coach Art Ogden - started fourteen freshman and provided a winning season - Ogden states "very pleased about last year's performance of the athletes but not pleased with the records," 5-4-1- laid a solid foundation for MC's future in football. Pat O'Brien was named "Offensive MVP," Ed Belfi was named "Defensive MVP" and "Player of the Year." "Iron Man Of The Year" was awarded to Vernon Golden.

Mens Basketball - finished 7-19 - disappointing but encouraging year - everyone returns next year to provide a very solid nucleus including "MVP" Bobby Rimmer, Andrew Baker winner of the "Coaches Award," "Most Improved" Tyrone Matthews, and "JV Player Of the Year Sterling Bales. The Head Coach is Randy Lambert.

Track - good year for small team - finished 1-1 under head coach David Cooper - guys represented themselves very well in both meets. Darius Fagin was awarded "MVP" and Mike Surrency and Pat Foster received the "Coaches Award."

Softball - head coach Pat Ballard - 7-17 record not indicative of how they played with eight of the losses coming from powerhouses Hiwassee and LMU - stopped LMU winning streak of eleven with a 9-4 victory - stopped sixteen game streak of Hiwassee with a 7-4 victory - built strong foundation for next year. Kim Allen was named "MVP" and Charlotte Hamby "Most Improved".

Baseball - coach Mike Ledford - finished 9-22 - young team that should get better and better and re-establish its tradition of winning - graduation takes one. Pat Moyer was named both "MVP" and "Best Hitter". Jim Rice received the "Golden Glove" award, with the "Super Scot" award going to Jeff Pierce. The "Ken Stinnet Leadership Award" was received by Bill Dent.

Dave Evans, co-captain of the 1981 Scots football team was named recipient of the fourth annual J.D. Davis Outstanding Athlete of the Year Award.

These few short words could not come close to fully describing the year of work put in by everyone who is a part of the Maryville College Athletic Program. Many will return next year to take part in the attempt to provide MC with another successful year in sports.

Outstanding Honored

Maryville College May 13 inducted six new members into the MC Wall of Fame in recognition of their contribution to athletics at the College.

Honorees at the All Sports Banquet on campus included William M. "Billy" Crawford Jr., Chattanooga; Marvin "Mitch" Mitchell, Maryville; Tom Morris, Frankfort, Ind.; and Guy Wilson "Shorty" Sneed, Madisonville.

Miss Jessie Heron and Clarence Shepard, both Maryvillians now deceased were inducted posthumously into the Wall of Fame.

Crawford, a 1929 graduage who retired from the Dupont Company in 1971, was an outstanding athlete in three sports during his four years at Maryville. A four-year letterman in track and winner of the campus Pentathlon his junior year, he served as captain of the 1929 squad which won the state college championship.

In football he played halfback on the varsity team his last two years and scored three touchdowns in a single game against Tusculum in 1927.

When the College recognized wrestling as a varsity sport in 1929, Crawford advanced to regional and national competition, winning the Southern Championship in Louisville, Ky., and advancing to the finals before losing in the tryouts for the 1930 United States Olympic team.

Mitchell, a 1947 MC graduate, first entered the College in 1940 after graduating from Everett High in Blount County. He earned three letters in football and was elected to serve as team captain at the end of the 1942 season before World War II interrupted his football career.

In the fall of 1946 he returned to MC and was again selected as captain of the 1946 football team, regarded as one of the best in Maryville's history. Under Mitchell's leadership, the team was undefeated, untied, allowed only 21 total points to be scored against them, and participated in the first Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla.

For his outstanding offensive and defensive line play, Mitchell was elected to the Little All-American team.

Tom Morris is best remembered for his accomplishments in basketball. In 1960 during his senior year, Morris established school records for the highest career points total (1611), highest single year(497) and highest total in one game(57). He hit 26 of 27 field goal attempts against the University of Chattanooga to set the game record. His records were established under three different head coaches, Lombe Honaker, J.D. Davis, and Boydson Baird.

Morris was named honorable mention, Small College All-American and became the first MC basketball player to have his jersey number (35) retired.

Another three-sport athlete, Shorty Sneed excelled in all three, earning a total of nine letters in football, basketball and baseball in his four years at Maryville during the early coaching days of Lombe Honaker.

Although small in size (5'5" and 140 lbs.), Sneed played in the backfield and earned three letters in football as well as two letters in basketball.

The other four letters were awarded for his baseball skills as an outstanding defensive infielder who also led the team in batting.

Miss Jessie Heron, associate professor of English at the College from 1919 until 1957, never participated as an athlete at MC, but she may have been responsible for keeping more athletes on the field than any other person -- with the exception of the coaches themselves.

Not having any sons of her own, Miss Heron each year adopted the football squad as her responsibility and tutored them carefully to make sure they remained aligible to play.

An ever-present spectator on the practice field, she never missed a home game either. If out of town games were too far away, she sent the team a telegram, exhorting them to play fairly and bring home a victory.

Because of her extraordinary devotion to the football team, the College is honoring her posthumously by inducting her as a special member of the Wall of Fame.

Also being honored posthumously is Clarence Shepard, 1955 MC graduate.

Shepard entered Maryville as a freshman in 1949 following a successful career at MHS. His football career at MC was interrupted by two years of military service during the Korean conflict, but his playing experience was widened since he was allowed to play two seasons while in the service.

Returning to Maryville in 1952, Shepard became a regular tailback on Coach Honaker's single wing offense and displayed his skills as a passer, runner and punter.

His ability was recognized nationally both his junior and senior years when he was named to the honorable mention Little All-American squad.

Shepard also was a third baseman and a threat at the plate for the baseball team.

cont. from page 1

left in the hallways will be charged as dorm damage.

CHECK-OUT: Before leaving you must check out with you R.D. At this time you must turn in your keys. If keys are not returned, then key deposit and room damage deposit will not be refunded to you.

TRADEAFRA

Congratulations! I'm behind you all the way . . . that includes running!

Love, EBENEZER

The Highland Echo

Vol. 67 No. 27 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, May 27, 1982

MC Graduates Class Of 1982

By Jenny Fitzell

"We will walk on our own feet; we will work with our own hands; we will speak with our own minds . . . " Although Ralph Waldo Emerson's words are meant to inspire independence among the Americans as they broke from European influence, his message of success through independence is still well heeded today. Each graduate of Maryville's 163rd Commencement, in order to claim success as a person and as a part of the world, must, as he leaves Maryville College strive for this Independence.

Commencement weekend, a time to reflect upon the years at Maryville College and to look forward to the future, begins with the Alumni festivites. The Alumni, reminiscing the "good 'ole days" at Maryville, will first attend their class reunions at twelve noon on Saturday and then proceed to the Annual Alumni Association Banquet that evening.

The Baccalaureate Service, held Sunday morning at eight o'clock, will take place in the Chapel and will be led by members of the Senior class, the faculty and the staff. This service, enhanced by the custom of Academic Regalia, proves very colorful and inspiring. The faculty, wearing robes and hoods, display, through the colors on their hoods, the colleges from which they graduated and their disciplines, and, through the length of the hoods, the degrees they have received.

After this beautiful procession, Thomas Hudson will call all to worship. The other graduating seniors conducting the worship program include Edward Brewer, delivering the invocation, Angela Murphy, leading the responsive reading, Sidney Bright, reading the Old Testment Lesson, and Kimberly Morris, reading the New Testament Lesson.

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler of the English department, selected by the students to preach the sermon, which she has titled "What Do You See?", promises to be very captivating. Reverend Peter Vial, the Campus Minister, will give the Benediction.

The college Choir, under the direction of Kent Skinner will beautify the service with their performances of "With a Voice of Singing" by Kenneth Jennings, and with William L. Dawson's composition "There is a Balm in Gilead."

Following the service the President's Reception will be held in the Chapel's courtyard;

Commencement, to be held Monday, May 31, at 10:30 a.m., will begin with the performance by the Brass Choir, under the direction of David Irwin, of "Allegro and Air" by Henry Purnell and with a special arrangement of the Alma Mater, sung by the Choir under the direction of Kent Skinner. The school Choir, then, heading the procession of graduates lined up outside Thaw Hall and of faculty lined up inside Thaw Hall, will, with the accompaniment of the Brass Choir playing "The March" by George Frederick Handel from Julius Caesar, walk down the sidewalk around Pearson's dining Hall, toward the Sutton Science Center, and then turn toward Anderson Hall. The stage's background scenery of the majestic Anderson tower extending above the Holly tree, will afford a very picturesque setting. Adding to this setting will be Kerry Week's playing of traditional Scottish airs on the bagpipes and the Choir's performances of "Pater Noster" by Igor Stravinsky and of "Cry Out and Shout" by Knut Nystedt during the service.

Cathy Angell, Senior class President, will welcome the parents, relatives, and friends to the Commencement. The Reverend John T. Mathison of New Providence Presbyterian Church, giving the prayer of Invocation, will be followed by the Reverend Stome Carr of Rest Haven Baptist Church in Alcoa, who will read the Scripture.

The Honorary Degrees will then be awarded. This year's recipients are Harlan Cleveland and Dr. Dan M. McGill. Harlan Cleveland, who will be delivering the Commencement Address entitled, " 'I am a leader,' Voltaire wrote; 'therefore I must follow.", is director of the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs and professor of public affairs at the University of Minnesota. Dr. Cleveland, a former NATO ambassador under President Lyndon Johnson and assistant secretary of state for international organization affairs under President John F. Kennedy, is receiving his honorary Doctor of Law degree.

A political scientist and public executive, Harlen Cleveland assumed his present position in August 1980.

A Princeton University graduate, he was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University in the late 1930s; and economic warfare specialist and United Nations relief administrator (in Italy and China) in the 1940s; and a foreign aid manager in the Marshall Plan, magazine editor and publisher of The Reporter and graduate school dean at Syracuse University in the 1950s.

Dr. Cleveland held his governmental positions under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson during the 1960's. From 1969-1974 he was president of the University of Hawaii.

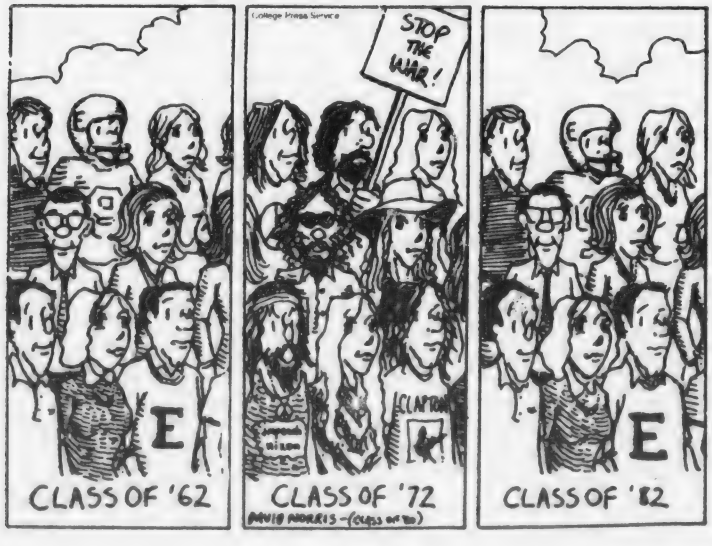
From 1974-1980 he was director of the Program in International Affairs of the Aspen Institute for Human-

Continued on page 4

Thanks Is Not Enough

The last of anything is often hardest to express, as so much is and has been involved in what is ending. This is especially true of this, the last issue of the Highland Echo for the 1981-82 school year. Any endeavor of this kind only survives through the contributions of a staff who deserves the utmost thanks. Enough cannot be said to those of you who wrote on assignments week after week. Steve Arnold and Mike Weiss who have been more than sports in covering every athletic event in which the Fighting Scots have participated, and Allison Perry, who has brought more than a few new articles to light, will be graduating and leaving vacancies that will be hard to fill.

Mary Hughes and Traci Fraser, contracted into the staff on the second floor landing of Lloyd Hall, have written faithfully every week and will go on to take over editorship next year. Robin Rimmer followed the Lady Scots from Basketball through tennis and Jenny Fitzell who transferred into a new school and into immediate employment have been of invaluable help.



A paper does not communicate through words alone, and so appreciation is extended to Barbara Hogan for her much acclaimed drawings and to Nancy Rojas who has been a creative inspiration with her photographs. It is also Nancy, along with Joe Wynne, who has lent many stories a unique and humorous slant.

We have also seen the last of Mudville (now where could that be?!), but I'm sure Walt Montgomery has discovered some other characters lurking around the halls of MC that will come under scrutiny next year.

The articles and pictures are not the paper in its entirety, however . The crazy Tuesday night layout sessions are where it all comes together, and these could not have occurred with such efficiency (?!) without the nimble fingers and mind of Barb Booker, my Assistant Editor and Layout Editor who knew "exacto" how to make those stories fit, our ombudsman who many times filled in wherever needed, and even those dreaded visits from Walt who helped fix up the office "pretty as a picture."

The business end and mechanics are also fundamental working of any paper. Beth Seiber and the Seiber System must be commended and given a medal of honor for persistance for getting advertisors and keepin the Echo pretty much self sufficient. Terri Roberts who, by stepping into one of the most important positions as type setter, helped up keep our sanity and probably wondered what in the world we tions as type setter, helped us keep our sanity and probably wondered what in the world we were doing.

It is now time to turn all of this, along with another post office box and the assurance of daily mail even if it is a picture or some new piece of machinery or a Cuban newspaper, over to a new editor, Traci Fraser, and to turn my sights to next year and independent study and trying, finally, to keep my room clean, and studying, and Senior Comps, and . . .

WELL FOLKS, THAT'S IT! THANKS FOR THE COMMENTS AND COMPLIMENTS! Walt Montgomery

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Barbara Booker

Business Manager . . . . . Beth Sieber

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer, Steve Arnold

Layout Editor . . . . . Barb Booker

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Student Honored

Janet Helwig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Helwig of Flintstone, Ga., has been named Maryville College's Outstanding Senior for 1982 by the MC alumni association.

The $100 cash award is given annually by the alumni association to a graduating senior who has had an outstanding college career, Ellie Gilmore, director of alumni relations, explained.

Miss Helwig's name will be inscribed on a plaque displayed on campus.

This Year's outstanding senior, a mathematics major, currently holds a nearly perfect grade point average. President of the MC chapter of the Tennessee Education Association, Miss Helwig has been named a Presidential Scholar all four years at MC.

A homecoming queen candidate last fall, her senior activites have also included membership on the worship committee, Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities and Alpha Gamma Sigma, a senior scholastic honorary society.

Miss Helwig has also served as a math department assistant, a varsity cheerleader, a member of the women's tennis team and a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, a freshman scholastic honor society.

Her awards include the George Knapp Math Award, the Alpha Gamma Sigma and the Alpha Delta Kappa scholarship awards and the Most Outstanding Student in Education Award for 1981. Miss Helwig has been the recipient of numerous scholarships, including the Robert McClellan Scholarship, the American Association of University Women Scholarhsip, the Ellen Gillespie Scholarship and the ALCOA Foundation Scholarship.

Runner-up students for the Outstanding Senior for 1982 award included: Brad Allison, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Allison of East Palestine, Ohio; Cathy Angell, daughter of Dorothy Angell of Columbia, Mo.; Edward Brewer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Brewer of Cincinnati, Ohio; Cynthia Cunningham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cunningham of Houston, Texas; Beth Neil, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Neil of Decatur, Ga.; and Michael Weiss, son of Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Weiss of Atlanta, Ga.

Free For All Perks In FAC

By Mary Hughes

Everyone on campus, including faculty and staff, enjoys Coffee House. The student entertainment makes for an exciting and energy-filled evening.

Coffee House was unheard of at MC before Cathy Angell developed the idea. During her freshman year four years ago, Cathy organized the first Coffee House; she has coordinated each one since. Cathy has appointed the emcees, lined up the acts, found ideal places for the entertainment advertised on campus, set up and cleaned up, and performed her own acts.

Through Coffee House, Cathy has contributed greatly to the social aspects of MC. Hopefully, the smoothly run events will continue with great success after Cathy graduates.

Saturday night's Coffee House was scheduled to be outdoors, but was moved into the music hall so that "By the grace of God, no one would get electrocuted in the rain," according to emcee Tim Fitzgerald.

Music dominated the evening, featuring instrumentals, interpreting, and vocal solos. Andy Bevers took off his glasses to play a piano piece that he calls "Untitled and Unfinished". Angela Murphy strummed the guitar as she sang "Oh My, What a Shame," and Tracy DePue quited the audience with an impressionistic piano solo. Tim Fitzgerald picked the guitar to Ed Brewer's theme song, "Looking for A Lady."

George Cassutto, alias Jethro Tull, exhibited his talent for the electric air piano, air guitar, and air flute while Sherry Laipley and Rebecca Cole accompanied him spontaneously on the air-chair bongos and air drums.

Jean Plant and Donna Czgledi interpreted Streisand and Sommer's "Enough Is Enough" before Linda Hasty and Jean Plant signed Diana Ross' "Mirror, Mirror." Linda Hasty contin-

Continued on page 4

I.S. Release Revised

Responding to a petition from the Senior Class, the Independent Study Committee last March revised the rule by which Independent Studies have been held for a two-year period following completion.

Although most studies are handed in with a sigh of relief mingled with pride when the project is completed, Editor Vera Gilmore reports that many student later express satisfaction and gratitude for their participation in this unique feature of the Maryville College curriculum. Student also become aware of other values; two recent examples within the past month: an '81 graduate reclaimed his study to use as one evidence of his ability to qualify for graduate school at U.T.; a member of this year's graduating class took her study to a job interview and feels sure it was one important reason that she was hired "on the spot" for an exciting position in her field.

Because of all the personal interest and effort involved in carrying out an Independent Study, most graduates have requested return of their studies at the end of the two-year retention. Now a student may claim the study any time after it has been completed and the grade awarded, by presenting a written request to the Committee, Dr. Charlotte Beck, Chairperson.

Students Clean Up And Clear Out

It's that time of the year when the anxiety of exams is over-shadowed by another fear - that of cleaning my room, packing my junk and putting it into the car. The worst part is probably deciding what is worth keeping and what has to be abandoned. Luckily my liberal arts education has helped me set priorities. For example, the Steinbrau cans will have to go, but the Heineken cans can stay. Dilemmas, however, occur. What about the World's Fair Beer cans? Collectors' items yes, but will my grandchildren really want to know how bad it tasted?

I'm too exhausted to take exams because I spent so much time cleaning the refrigerator. I went through a whole box of Brillo pads. Inside I found a knob off the T.V., a container of some blue dip with an age-worn label, an old tennis shoe (not mine or my roommate's), a Gideon Bible (not mine or my roommate's), and a bra (not mine or my roommate's either).

While cleaning, I started thinking about getting a summer job. Something easy for a quick buck would be perfect, maybe selling photo albums to the Japanese at the World's Fair.

The desk was next. The bottom drawer had mushrooms growing in it. The Middle drawer had notes from classes I don't remember taking. After the green mist had cleared I looked into the two top drawers to see potato chips, tortilla chips, banana peels, popcorn, peanut butter, crackers, and other assorted molding munchies.

The news was on. After this week, there won't be any more Lance Sansted, the man who is introducing hand gestures into the anchorman's repertoire. There won't be any more Marie Michelini misnaming states and nobody noticing.

Then it was time to clean under the bed. I jabbed around with a broom handle to kill anything alive. A festering amorphous mass klunked out. I couldn't make out anything in particular except for seven pieces of paper with Pizza Hut's number on them (where were they when I needed them?), so I threw the whole blob onto my roommate's side of the room.

It's going to be good-bye to my spots on the carpet; good-bye to my marks and stains on the wall; good-bye to the roaches.

I had to wait on my closet because the UT archealogist were still excavating.

Taking all my stuff to the car has to wait until night because I carry things in those milk crates. When I took a load out last night I found that the car was already full of stuff from the weekends. It never ends.

All this on top of exams. The last week of the school year is so hectic that it's not until you're on vacation that you start to miss what went on before it.

RA's /SA's Named

The RA/SA staff for the 1982-83 school year has been named. The RA position in Carnegie will be filled by Debbi Hall. RA's in Copeland consist of John Cockfield, Frank Fisch, Jeff Pierce, and Gene Wheatley. Their SA's will be Dave Sanchez, Kevin O'Reilley, and Pat Foster.

Davis staff will be made up of Susan Jennings, Beth Seiber and Allen Smith as RA's and Gail Wheatley, Seiber and Ellen Smith as RA's and Gail Wheatley, Adrienne Ramsey, and Carol Cooper as SA's.

Dorm I RA's will be Alex Albert, Glen Katz, and Mark Woodhull with SA's Bryan McFarland, Ben Hornsby, and Steve Sipple.

RA's named to Lloyd are Barbara Booker and Sheryl Moore while Kathy Blair and Beckie Haynes have been named SA's.

Pearson's staff includes

RA's Andrew Baker and Wilma Coleman and SA's Jeff Hayes and Mari Jennings.

Steve Has Parting Word

By Steve Arnold

Oh well! My last article. I'm really going to miss writing for the paper. I hope that during this past year you have found at least some of the stories interesting even though the style in which they were written may have been different.

I know Coach Lambert has comments about my letter to Mom, telling about one of the basketball games, but he had just lost a tennis match to Jim Kidder, and I guess he was still upset. Even though the Fat Lady may not sing for another year, if you need a song just contact Martin Paluga. For the person that takes this job next year, prepare a radar system so that you can track down the football coaches. If you need an interview you could find them anywhere from Oklahoma to Timbuktu.

No more brainstorming at 10:00 on Sunday night to meet the deadline that was at 8:00. No more interviewing Lambert over the phone and having a different girl answer every time. And when you interview Ogden, don't mess anything up. His office is straight and neat. I guess with Patton looking over your shoulder all the time you have to be in order.

I would like to thank all the coaches, though, for helping me at any time in getting interviews and comments. Also a special thanks to Kathy Fitzell for giving me the opportunity to help with the paper. To all, a wish for an excellent fun loving summer, and I'll leave you with some baseball scores from last night: 2-1, 3-0, 7-4, 3-2, 4-1, and 6-4.

MC To Raise Bread For World

Bread for the World is a national lobbyist group of concerned citizens focusing on hunger issues. Members work to obtain government policies in favorable land and hunger legislation. Dealing with foreign and domestic issues, the members aim to enable people to work their way out of hunger and poverty.

Unlike hunger groups such as CARE or the Hunger Project, BFW does not distribute food. It seeks national policy reform. Working by writing and calling members of Congress or other government officials at the time when such legislation is being considered, members take an active and vital role in BFW's endeavor.

At a recent BFW seminar weekend in Ozone, Tennessee, six students from MC, along with many members of the Blount County Chapter (along with our campus minister Peter Vial), took part in numerous informative discussions. Topics included Domestic Hunger and the New Federalism, Organizing a Local Group, Women in Development, Making the Polictical Process Work for Hungry People, and Understanding Foreign Assistance. Finally, there was a goalsetting time period. It was then that the group from MC decided to form a BFW chapter here on campus next Fall. Last week saw the group's first letter writing session, where members wrote congressmen and committee members about such timely issues as the Caribbean Basin Initiative, African Appropriations, and Food Stamp Appropriations.

Bread for the World's executive director and founder, Arthur Simon, is author of the book, Bread for the World, this book is offered along with the BFW monthly newsletter when you become a member of BFW (membership for students is $10 per year). If you are interested in membership, write BREAD for the WORLD, 32 Union Square East, New York, NY 10003, and contact Carol Coffey about taking part in Maryville College's own chapter.

Graduation, cont. from page 1

istic Studies, headquartered in Princeton, N.J., and continues to serve as a special advisor to this Institute.

In 1979 he was a visiting professor of world peace at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs, University of Texas-Austin, and is a past president of the American Society for Public Administration.

Among numerous board memberships, he serves as vice chairman of The Atlantic Council and of Global Perspectives in Education, Inc. He is the receipient of 16 honorary degrees, Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson Award, and the U.S. Medal of Freedom, and was the 1981 co-winner of the Prix de Talloires, a Switzerland-based international award for "accomplished generalist."

Dr. Cleveland has written extensively. Three recently published books he has edited are Bioresources for Development (1980), Energy Futures of Developing Countries (1980), and The Management of Sustainable Growth (1981).

Dr. McGill graduated from Maryville College in 1940 Magna Cum Laude. He received his M.A. degree from Vanderbilt in 1941 and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1947 following four years of military service.

Dr. McGill taught at the Universities of Tennessee and North Carolina before resuming active military service with the Air Force during the Korean conflict.

Following his second tour of military duty, Dr. McGill joined the faculty of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and has taught there ever since. He was promoted to a full professorship in 1956 and was appointed Frederick H. Ecker Professor of Life Insurance in 1959, a position he still holds.

In addition to teaching, he has held numerous administrative posts at UPenn, including chairman of the insurance department of the Wharton School since 1965. He is also chairman of the Pension Research Council, an organization he founded in 1952.

Dr. McGill is the author of seven books and the co-author or editor of many others. Two of his books won awards as outstanding publications of the year from the American Risk and Insurance Association of which he is a past president.

Dr. McGill was a consultant in employee benefit matters to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System for almost 20 years and was appointed by President Gerald Ford to serve as the first chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. He continues to serve on the Advisory Committee, having been reappointed by Presidents Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan.

In addition to serving as trustee or director of numerous insurance companies and associations, Dr. McGill served as a director of Maryville College from 1971-79, the last five years as chairman of the board. He was honored with the College's distinguished alumni award in 1962.

He is a ruling elder in the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian Church and has been a member of the Board of Pensions of the United Presbyterian Church since 1975, serving as its chairman since 1977.

President Wayne Anderson will then award several other honors such as outstanding teacher, outstanding administrator and outstanding staff member and, after delivering a charge to the graduating class, will, with Carle M. Davis and with the aid of Dr. Alfred Perkins, Academic Vice President and Martha Hess, Registrar award the diplomas.

Reverend Peter Vial, offering the Commencement prayer, will, after all join in singing the Alma Mater, deliver the Benediction.

The Graduates, carrying a piece of Maryville in their hearts, then recess and enter into new experiences.

Coffee House, from page 3

ued alone with a interpretation of Barry Manilow's "Somewhere Down the Road," dedicated to Ed Welch. Jina Radozycki let her emotions show as she signed a Dan Fogelberg song and Boogyin' mamas, Janie Jafvert and Laura Woolard, followed Linda with some soul signing. Beckie Haynes and Stacy Medlin enacted a mirror-image pantomime. Vocal solos included "Her Father's Eyes" and "Surround Me With Love" by Carol Cooper and three inspirational songs by Jeff Hayes.

1982 - 1983

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 1 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Friday, October 1, 1982

New Year, New Faces at MC

by Jenny Fitzell
Echo Staff Writer

Four new faculty members have been appointed to Maryville College. Scott Brunger has been named assistant professor of economics, David C. Hoffecker has been named assistant professor of music, Charles F. Hughes will lecture in business administration, and Ruth Sandefur has been appointed an instructor in the College's interpreting for the deaf program.

Scott Brunger received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Yale University and his masters degree from the New School for Social Research, which maintaining that economics could not be separated from the social sciences, originated as a revolt against Columbia University. In Janaury, his Doctorate degree from the New School for Social Research will be conferred.

Brunger has taught at the New School for Social Research, Brooklyn College, the Porto-Novo Theological Seminary in Benin, West Africa, and was most recently a visiting economics instructor at Vassar College in Poughkeepsie. Scott Brunger's life so far has included a variety of experiences in foreign countries. His father's career with the International Division of the YMCA brought one year old Brunger to China where he learned Cantonese as his first language. Two years later he moved to Hong Kong and then to Beruit, Lebanon.

After graduating from Yale, through a Presbyterian Frontier Internship, he went to Benin, Africa for 5 years. The first three years Brunger worked as advisor to the Student Christian Movement. He then was appointed director of the Christian Conference and Lay Training Center in Benin where he organized conferences for the youth, women, and the Christian teachers until a native African felt confident enough to assume Mr. Brunger's responsibilities. Last September he returned to Africa for a month and researched the economic development of Africa for his Doctoral Dissertation.

Mr. Brunger appreciates MC's avid interest in Africa and hopes to continue this tradition. Several years ago a professor from Fourah Bay College in Sierra Leone taught at MC and, through the Fred Hope Fund, MC maintains ties with Africa.

Scott Brunger and his wife have three boys. Mrs. Brunger is a Presbyterian minister and is especially interested in Hospital Chaplaincy. Mr. Brunger's outside interests lie in programming calculators, in exploring the uses of home computers, and in writing his own programs. He sees in the future an invitation to return to Africa as an economic advisor or as a professor when the African people feel they have achieved political control of their countries and no longer wish to feel separated from the Western World.

David Hoffecker received both his Bachelor's and Master's degrees in music from the Eastman School of Music and completed his degree at the Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary.

Mr. Hoffecker has held teaching positions at Goshen College in Indiana, at the Colegio Nueva Granada in Bogota, Columbia, South America, at Gordon College in Massachusettes, at Monroe Community College in New York, and at the Brighton Public School System in New York.

Now, coming from Viterbo College in LaCrosse, Wisconsin, where he served also as assistant professor of music, David Hoffecker has been appointed director of the Maryville College Band and conductor of the Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra. The "fantastic" location in which Maryville is situated together with Mrs. Hoffecker's appointment to play violin with the Knoxville Symphony, and the position of conductor of the college - community orchestra, brought him to MC.

Mr. Hoffecker seees the band as principally a concert organization and is interested in re-establishing at

see FACES, p. 5

Even Faculty members have bad days, and so did the Echo photographer. Due to photographic problems, new faculty pictures will be printed next week.

Campus Calendar

Friday, October 1
Orange & Garnet Block Party, 9:00
Volleyball - Juniata Classic, Huntingdon, PA

Saturday, October 2
Football vs. Emory & Henry at Heritage High, 7:30 p.m.
Car Caravan to the game, leaves from behind Pearsons at 6:00 p.m.
Soccer, at Washington & Lee
Volleyball - Juniata Classic

Sunday, October 3
Campus Fellowship, CCM, 4:00 p.m.

"People Awareness" Week

Tuesday, October 5
CIV, 9:20 a.m., Music Hall; Vicky Black, "Rape"
Performing Artist concert, Music Hall, 8:15 p.m.
Last day to sign up for hayride to Cades Cove.

Wednesday, October 6
Mid-Week Worship, CCM, 10:30 a.m.
Soccer vs. King College, 3:30

DON'T FORGET

Sign up now for the bus trip to Dayton, Ohio for the football game against the University of Dayton on October 16. Cost is $16 per person, which includes bus fare and admission into the game. Sign up in Student Affairs now!

Editorials

This one's for you...

The Highland Echo needs you.

What we need is a campus that will read the newspaper, and hopefully react to what they read one way or another. Throwing the Echo in the Post Office trash is a definite statement, but we need more than that.

This year the Echo is going to try some new and different ideas. Some will work and some won't, but what we want is for you to let us know what you like.

The editorial page is open to anyone who would like to make an editorial comment, whether it be in the form of a cartoon, letter to the editor, or a guest editorial. This week the Echo is featuring Dr. Howard as Guest Editorialist. Every month, we will try to feature a faculty member or member of the administration writing about a current topic. We also need topic ideas for Point/Counterpoint, which will also be a regular monthly feature.

Even if you don't write for the Echo, you can still turn in story ideas. Some of our best features are suggested to the staff by other individuals from the college.

Above all, we need your comments and criticism. A short note turned into the Echo box can do more than the paper thrown in the trash. So next time you're just about to ditch that Echo for whatever reason, take a minute and drop us a note instead. Remember, this paper's for you.

"NOW KIDS, LET'S SING ABOUT THE INDETERMINACY OF THE VELOCITY OF SUB-ATOMIC PARTICLES..."

AND CIV?

Guest Editorial
by Dr. Harry Howard

Fall term has hit the ground running and we all are trying to keep pace with it. Evidence that things are moving quickly lies in the fact that three Community Issues and Values (CIV) programs have already taken place. First was Dr. Winfred Godwin, the main speaker for Academic Convocation. Then on Wednesday, September 15, Lee Crotinger shared her experiences as a child and youth in Nazi Germany. Wednesday, September 29 Mira Kimmelman's topic was "The Holocaust." Mrs. Kimmelman is a survivor of Auschwitz and today is a close friend of Lee Crotinger.

Perhaps some of you missed these programs, but do not dispair! There is more to come this term. The remaining CIV schedule this fall is as follows.

Tuesday, October 5, at 9:20 a.m. in the Music Hall, Vicki Black's topic will be "Rape." This is one of several events scheduled for "People Awareness Week."

Tuesday, October 5, at 8:15 p.m., there will be a Performing Artist Concert in the Music Hall featuring Lev and Galina Belenky in a violin and piano presentation.

The next CIV program will pay homage to MC roots as the College celebrates Founders' Day on October 19. Specific plans are not complete at this time.

The second Performing Artist Concert and seventh CIV program of the year will be Jane Abbott on the piano.

The final CIV program of the term is scheduled for Wednesday, November 10, in the Wilson Chapel, and will feature the Sidewalk Dance Theatre.

Please be aware of two things, especially the new students. First, there are additional programs under consideration for which plans have not been concluded. If any of these materialize, they will be publicized in On Campus Today and with posters. Second, for every thirty certified CIV attendances, a student may elect to earn three semester hours of credit, and up to six credits may be used toward graduation.

Well, there it is. Hope to see you at CIV this fall.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Photographers . . . . . Bill Argyle, Kathy Blair, Ed Davila
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

New Pearsons Person

by Marta Wittig
Echo Staff Writer

She's single, 5ft. 6 in., has blue eyes and brown wavy hair, is slim and prefers Almaden Mountain Chablis. She drives a 1971 gold and brown Dodge Swinger. Give up? Well, she lives in Pearsons. Furthermore, she's a mother -- a dorm-mom! Her name is Kathy Custer.

Kathy came to Maryville College in 1970. She graduated in 1974 with a degree in Sociology. She couldn't leave the area (loving it too much), so she worked in the Citizens Bank for nearly five years. In 1980, Kathy returned to Maryville College to work in the Business Office and Financial Aid offices. It was while she was in the Financial Aid Office that she found out about an opening for a Resident Director in Pearsons Hall.

This is Kathy's first year as a dorm-mom, and she really enjoys being on the job. The accomodations are wonderful. In fact, in 1972, Kahty lived in Pearsons when the blazes of "The Fire of '72" struck. So, it's sort of like "coming home".

If you'd like to know Kathy better, she's in room 204. Tell her you're into reading, watching T.V., and hiking, and you'll get along fine!

Pearsons' Resident Director, Kathy Custer

WHEN YOU CARE ENOUGH TO SEND THE CLASSIEST

Want to say Happy Birthday, Happy Anniversary, Cheer Up, Let's Be Friends, I like you, I'm Sorry or Congratulations?

The Senior Class will deliver your surprise messages at lunch, at dinner, in class, in: the dorm, or a place of your suggestion. For $4.00 we will deliver a large card and a cake and sing a song (original ditties accepted) or read a poem. Costumed persons are available or other options can be arranged. For more information, contact Box 2790 or see Andrew Baker, Jean Plant, or Beth Sieber

New Talent Staged

by Tom Hudson

The 1982-83 Maryville College Playmakers are off and rolling on another year of theatrical extravaganzas at the college.

Though several of last year's members are no longer performing with the company, the slots have been filled with up and coming talent.

So far this academic year, the Playmakers have performed twice in public. During Orientation Week, the troupe aided in the Mid-Week Worship service by supplying music from "Godspell" while in the guise of clowns. They also performed several short fairytales as after dinner entertainment at the Freshmen Orientation dinner.

What's up for the near future? According to Director Sharon Crane, the Playmakers will take part in the college Halloween festivities by providing ghost stories and ghoulish get-ups to "get people into the spirit of things."

Also on the agenda, the troupe is gearing up for the second annual Boar's Head Dinner during Interim, and will provide music and theatrics for an Interim madrigal Vespers service.

The members of the 1982-83 MC Playmakers are Tracey Depue, Jean Plant, Beckie Haynes, Kelly Fitzgerald, Gloria Anaple, Diane McDaniel, Frank Fiore, Tom Hudson, Jeff Hayes, Tommy Brown, Mark Beyer, John Pritchard, and Matt Cragle.

More New Faces

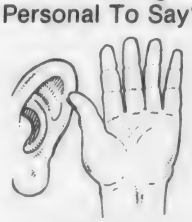
by Jeana M. Webb
Echo Staff Writer

The upperclassmen here at Maryville might be noticing a lot of new faces around this term. And no, they are not all freshman. Maryville College has added several new people to the faculty and staff this year. Three of those new people are found in the Admissions office.

When you walk through the door of the Admissions Office on the second floor of Anderson Hall, the first person you will probably see is Annabell Libby. She is the Director of the Alumni Admissions Program. Her job is to contact alumni and organize them to talk to prospective students. This job consists partly of training the alumns to know how to talk to the students and how to answer their questions. In short,she is the liason between the admissions office and alumni relations. Miss Libby is originally from Shaker Heights, Ohio, which is a small town outside Cleveland. She graduated from Maryville College in 1952. She just recently retired from the public education system as a high school librarian. Miss Libby's hobbies include antiques and singing in the "Sweet Adellines" -- a barbershop style music ensemble. She also enjoys walking, hiking, biking and anything that allows her to be outdoors.

Also found in the admission office are two new counselors, Alan McTier and Terry Whittum. McTier, 22, is a native of Albany, Georgia. He graduated in 1982 from Emory University in Atlanta, where he double-majored in psychology and religion. He will work with prospective students from North Carolina and East Florida. He is also in charge of foreign students. He lives in Dorm I and enjoys jogging, raquetball and fishing. When asked how he felt about Maryville College, he said that he feels it is a very positive situation for students to receive an education. He says that he is very impressed with the positive ideas and directions of the administration and the staff, and this is one of the reasons he accepted the job. He is sold on the people.

Terry Whittum, 27, and his wife Donna also live on campus. Donna is the head resident of Davis. Whittum is originally from East Prov. Rhode Island. He attended Plymouth State College, where he received his bachelor of Science degree in music education. After graduation, he taught for 3 years as director of music at Profile High School in New Hampshire. Then he moved to Florida where he was a band director for two years. He is currently working on his master's degree in student services and music education. It was while he was in Florida that he saw an ad about Maryville and met Leslie Nier. This is his first opportunity to spend time in Tennessee, and he says that he likes it. He says Maryville has a really friendly atmosphere, something he did not have at his own college. Whittum has met another member of the MC faculty who much to his surprise attended the same college at the same time and lived on the same floor of the same dorm only a few doors apart. Whittum's hobbies include playing 26 different musical instruments and watching movies. If you are wondering what kind of movies, Whittum admits that he liked Blade Runner. He also enjoys reading. His long range goal is to be wealthy.



If you get a chance, you will find it worth you while to go and meet these new people.

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK

Member FDIC

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In

THE ECHO EAR

DUI Means J-A-I-L

by Jeana M. Webb
Echo Staff Writer

You're cruising down the road minding your own business. Suddenly you see blue lights flashing in your rearview mirror. Your first thought is "Is he after me?" If you are on your way back from Knoxville after a night on the town, you really panic. Especially after you realize that he is indeed after you.

Since April 8, 1982, getting stopped in Tennessee while under the influence of alcohol is a real reason for panic. Tennessee is one of several states that has passed new, STRICTER alcohol laws.

In a recent interview Maryville Deputy Bill Garner and Sheriff Don Hobbs informed the Echo what happens when a person is picked up for DUI (Driving under the Influence).

First the subject is stopped, but not necessarily because the police suspect that the driver is DUI. In one recent case in Blount county, a man was stopped because his taillights were out on his car. After talking to the subject, the officer judged whether or not the subject was intoxicated. Officer Steve Key explained that one way of determining this is by using field sobriety tests. There are several of these tests. One is the "Finger to Nose test." In this test the subject stands with his feet slightly apart, his arms extended from the shoulders with palms outward, and eyes closed. Then the subject has to touch the TIP of his nose with his index finger. If the subject fails these sobriety tests, the officer reads him his rights stated in the Miranda vs. Arizona, 86 Sup. Ct. 1602, 384 U.S. 436:

1. You have the right to remain silent.

2. Anything you say can be used against you in a court of law.

3. You have the right to talk to a lawyer and have him present with you while you are being questioned.

4. If you cannot afford to hire a lawyer, one will be appointed to represent you before any questioning, if you wish.

5. You have the right to stop talking at any time and talk to a lawyer.

Then, under the Tennessee Implied Consent Law, the subject is requested to consent to a Blood Alcohol Test. This test is given at Blount Memorial Hospital. The test is then sent to the UT toxicology lab. The results are received back in Blount county anywhere from 10 days to several weeks later. The Blood Alcohol Test is not given to prove guilt or innocence, but to determine the amount of alcohol in the blood. Chief Deputy Garner explained what the results of this test mean:

.01 - .05 This is a low amount.

.06 - .09 This is a gray area. If the officer has good proof, a conviction is possible.

.10 - Up This is a high amount and usually leads to a conviction.

Then the subject is booked and allowed to make bond.

That's not so bad you might be saying. And you're right. That's the easy part. Next comes your trial. Judge Terry Denton allowed this staff writer to sit in on several court cases and submitted to an interview after court was over. Here is a recount of an actual case.

Tennessee vs. 20 yr. old Male Driver - Officer Steve Key noticed a speeding car. He turned on his blue lights and siren and began pursuit. After following the subject for some time, while blinking his headlights, Officer Key and his partner pulled up beside the car and motioned for the driver to stop.

When Officer Key walked up to the car, he noticed the odor of marijuana and alcohol. Noticing the subjects eyes, which were bloodshot with the pupils dilated, they put him through the field sobriety tests. Upon investigating the car they found several partial joints of marijuana in the ashtray. They followed the procedure mentioned above except instead of the blood alcohol test, they used a breath analyzer test. The subject registered .11 on the test.

At the trial, several of the defendant's friends who had been with him that night testified that the young man had not been drinking or using drugs that night. The court still found him guilty. His sentence was:

1. Fine of $250.00 plus court costs.

2. 30 days in the workhouse (All suspended except for 4 days upon payment of fine and costs).

3. 1 year unsupervised good behavior probation.

4. Successful completion of DUI school . . . . . .

5. Loss of driving for 1 year.

And this was only his first offense. The new law states that he could have been fined up to $1,000.00 and put in jail for 11 months and 29 days with none suspended.

Earlier in the day a second time offender had been found guilty. His sentence was:

1. $500.00 plus court costs.

2. 90 days with all but 45 days suspended.

3. Loss of driving for two years.

4. Successful completion of DUI school for second offenders.

The new law states that he could have been fined up to $2500.00 and put in jail for 11 months and 29 days with none suspended.

For a third time offender the sentence can range from $1000.00 to $5000.00, 120 days to 11 months and 29 days, and loss of driving from 3 to 10 years. Sheriff Hobbs informed us that after the third offense the subject can be classified under the habitual criminal act and be sentenced to LIFE IMPRISONMENT!

Judge Denton said that the sentence is based partially on the circumstances. If the subject goes along peacefully with no trouble, his sentence will probably be lighter than someone who attacks the police and resists arrest. Judge Denton also said that if a police officer is harrassed he will be glad to find the offender guilty because it is not part of a police officer's job to have to take abuse like that.

When asked if he had the authority to revoke an out of state driver's license (like a college student's) he replied, "Yes". We take the license and send it to the Department of safety which prohibits them from driving in Tennessee. Then the Dept. Of Safety sends it to the person's home state for the authorities of that state to take whatever action they take in that state."

All persons found guilty of driving under the influence have to successfully complete the DUI school, an alcohol safety program. This class is taught by Don Mitchell at the Blount County courthouse. The tuition for this class is $40. Failure of this class or failure to attend at all results in the subject being picked back up and having to serve the rest of his sentence. Visitors are welcome to attend these classes free of charge. Don Mitchell is available at 1-475-2367 if anyone would like to ask him any questions.

When questioned about the benefits of these new laws, Sheriff Hobbs said "It helps some, but now the jails are overcrowded." In the jail at the time of this interview there were 11 persons serving on the work release program and several more not on that program in the jail.

Sheriff Hobbs explained that they have been lenient with MC students because most of the students are from out of state and are not familiar with the laws of Tennessee. But now this leniency has got to be stopped. With the new laws, the police have to crack down on drunk drivers (and people picked up for public drunkenness). Sheriff Hobbs described the situation as a lack of communication between the city and MC students. He said that when Down Yonder was open students would walk past the courthouse and Sheriff's office yelling and making a lot of noise without realizing that they were breaking the law and could have been arrested for public drunkenness. But now that has changed. There will be no more favoritism shown because of ignorance. Sheriff Hobbs said that he would be glad to talk with any student that wanted to learn more about the new laws.

He also said that if enough interest was shown he would also be glad to come on campus and talk informally with any group of students that so wished. He ended the interview by saying that even though the new laws were good, "it is really pitiful for the problem drinkers and alcoholics."

So now when you are cruising down the road on your way back from Knoxville or anywhere where there is drinking, and you see those familiar blue lights you have a great cause for panic. Also, just for the record, MC is not responsible for posting your bond if you are picked up, so it would do no good to call your dorm parents. The simplest solution to avoid getting in trouble is to remember this: IF YOU DRINK DON'T DRIVE!

Featuring . . .

Linda Carroll

at the

HOUSE OF HAIR

THE SALON FOR FAMILY HAIR STYLING

Jack Coker and Kenneth Melton, owners

321 High Street Dial 982-4584

FACES, from p. 1

MC an ensemble that plays "good concert music." His hopes for this year also include giving a faculty concert. He would like, in a couple of years, to resume touring with the band, for he feels this provides a necessary part of a good education.

An accomplished French horn player, Mr. Hoffecker has performed with La Crosse, Wisconsin Sympony Orchestra, the Orquesta Sinfonica Nacional de Columbia in South America, the Orquesta Nacional de Costa Rica and other ensembles and groups. The opportunity to play in Costa Rica arose when he was there learning Spanish. Hoffecker then went to Columbia to do missionary work, which included playing in the symphony. One of the most interesting aspects of playing in Columbia, he remembers, was the diversity of nationalities represented in the orchestra.

Mr. Hoffecker, confessing to being a baseball fanatic and Philadelphia Phillies fan, is originally from Philadelphia. He doesn't foresee any moving in the future, but wants to "stay for awhile and develop continuity in the band."

Charles Hughes was born in Maryville and earned his Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. He completed his Master's degree in Business Administration also at UTK, and while fulfilling his part-time appointment at MC, will resume work toward his Doctorate degree at UT.

Hughes' teaching experience includes positions at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, N.C., Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, and Glenville State College in West Virginia. The most important feature that attracted Mr. Hughes to MC is the long term reputation as a high quality Liberal Arts school that MC enjoys. Mr. Hughes said that he placed "a high value" on a liberal arts education as opposed to vocational training. The management program, beginning this year, excites him because it is a "generic type of program" and "will be of high value to students regardless of their vocations."

Hughes' greatest avocation is regional history, which encompasses the Great Smoky Mountains and the people who live there. He also enjoys free lance writing and focuses on the wilderness and outdoor living.

Mr. Hughes lives in Maryville with his wife Betty and their five-year-old daughter Jessica.

Ms. Sandefur received her Bachelor's degree in Deaf Education from UTK and her Master's degree in Special Education from Converse College in Spartanburg, S.C. She recently moved to Blount County from Spartanburg where she was an instructor in interpreting arts communication for the deaf at Spartanburg Methodist College. Ms. Sandefur has also taught at UTK through the National Interpreter Training Consortium and at Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, N.C. as lead tutor.

Impressed that MC is one of only two schools in the U.S. with a four year as opposed to two year interpreting program, Ms. Sandefur accepted the appointment at MC. She strongly believes that the knowledge that interpreters must gain can be more fully developed spread out over four years.

Ms. Sandefur would like to see interpreting recognized as a profession. Said Ms. Sandefur, "People think that signers can be interpreters, but there is a special skill involved."

Ruth Sandefur feels her educational background is unique in that she attended both public school and residential school. These experiences showed her how valuable interpreters would be in the public school system. Without interpreters in the public schools, students whose hearing is impaired find it difficult to keep up in an atmosphere that requires student participation. Thus, these students are sent to residential schools. This alternative leaves the student separated from his family.

Besides seeing interpreters appointed to public schools, Ms. Sandefur would like to see people develop a more realistic view toward hearing loss so that the hearing impaired would not feel so different. She also feels that public awareness within the community could improve. Maryville, for example, does not provide a meeting place for the hearing impaired. Ms. Sandefur would like to see one established.

Her professional activities presently include being chairperson, treasurer, and board member of the National Review Board of the National Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf.

Ms. Sandefur recently married and has two daughters and three grandchildren. She likes to cook, read, and in the future would enjoy writing or studying a language and working toward her PhD.

Just a reminder to the new students on campus that you can get better-acquainted and save money too when you redeem the Campus Welcome coupons. The businesses are looking forward to meeting you and helping you feel "At Home" in the community.

They're redeeming coupons now, so get your share of the special savings. Visit Campus Welcome sponsors today.

CAMPUS WELCOME

CAN YOU DRAW JESUS?

If your answer to this question is "yes," you may have the makings of a famous artist. The world renowned Bianco School of Art can help hone your talents to the fine edge they so justly deserve. In just 19 simple to follow mail-order courses, you too can be headed for a career in Art!! Simply send $25.00, a self-addressed stamped envelope, and $17.50 to cover postage and handling charges to: The Bianco School of Art, 1966 Matisse Dr., Van Gogh, North Carolina, 27801. Begin your career today!!

Echo Ear

Hey S.W.–the Echo Ear wants to know which B.A. you're working on!

Has J.T. taken up residence in Lloyd Hall?

S.O. -- We heard the number is 202. Watch out D.K.!

Congratulations to T.D. and F.F.!

Hey S.S. -- what's this with K.D. or did you forget?

Show us how you get down E.B.!

Did A.O. pull that hair out or did he spill his Nair in the locker room? Who loves you baby!

S.C. -- think that door will hold?

Do you have any juicy gossip or a special message for someone? Tell it to the Echo Ear outside the Echo office in Fayerweather. Remember -- your name is kept confidential but must be with your gossip in order to be published.

Affiliate Artist Named

by Joe Wynne
Echo Staff Writer

An exceptional baritone, John Cimino, has been selected as the Maryville College 1982-83 Affiliate Artist. His achievements extend beyond skill in singing to skills in writing, speaking and science. He truly represents the type of personality that liberal arts colleges try to promote.

Cimino, a native of north New Jersey, graduated from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to become a science researcher. He sang only at restaurants. His musical interest growing, he went to the Julliard School of Music. He told Ms. Sallie Schoen that when he sang for the teachers at the school, they told him "you don't need us" because he already sang so well, Subsequently, he studied voice with Daniel Ferro at both the Julliard and Manhattan Schools of Music and with renowned Maestro Ettore Campogalliani in Italy.

Cimino has won over a dozen national and international vocal awards including the International Verdi Competition of Busseto, Italy, and the Pavarotti International Voice Competition of Philadelphia. The latter award gained him the honor of playing Marcello opposite Pavarotti in a gala performance of "La Boheme."

Not satisfied with such a "narrow" operatic career, he is also a songwriter, play wright, and lecturer in the arts and sciences. His Stephen Crane songs were acclaimed by the Crane Society ciety so that he was commissioned to do more compositions based on Crane's works. Being able to speak also on "The Physics of Music" and the "Acoustics of the Concert Hall", and to write plays that explore perspectives, values and creativity in the arts and sciences such as "Winged Man-Everyman" have won him yearly grants from the New York State Council on the Arts.

MC's associate professor of music, Ms. Sallie Schoen, who will be accompanying Cimino, describes him as a "very knowledgeable man, interested in people, friendly. . . it is a rarity to find a natural instrument like that." These traits are especially fortunate considering the "informance" (combination information and performance) given by the Affiliate Artist. Everyone gets to know the person behind the artist.

See ARTIST, p. 7

"Grit Down"on it!

by Jenny Fitzell
Echo Staff Writer

Are you ready to join in some "boisterous" action? The student Programming Committee is ready for you. The committee , comprised of James Bloy, Bob Ramger, Beth Manire, Andrea Vausden, Dave Edington, Alex Albert, Lora Williams, Donna Whittum, Kathy Custer, Jim Stettner, Joe Wynne, Gloria Anaple, Tommy Brown, Jean Plant, and the hall representatives, gather weekly to plan such drollery.

Riotous dancing will ensue in front of the Center for Campus Ministry at the Orange and Garnet Night Block Party, October 1 at 9:00 p.m.

A car caravan will travel to Heritage High for a bit of sport October 2; the Maryville Scots play Emory & Henry College at 7:30 p.m. The Caravan leaves from behind Pearsons at 6:00 p.m., and the best decorated car wins a prize.

On October 8 let out a holler, "Grit Down Weekend" has begun. For two dollars per person you can take an old fashioned hay ride through Cades Cove. After the ride, return to the FAC for a warm-up party. The Sadie Hawkins Lil' Abner Dog Patch Dance, October 9 at 9:00 p.m. in the Alumni Gym, will add some foot stomping and more whooping and hollering to "Grit Down Weekend".

The Programming Committee encourages students to try this thing called joviality and reminds students that working together and having a good attitude are important. They jest you not.

Messiah Coming

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

It's fall term! Leaves change color, cooler weather is on the way, and soon voices will sound the Hallelujah chorus of the "Messiah."

Dr. Harry Harter will be the guest conductor of Maryville College's 50th annual performance of Handel's "Messiah" this November. This annual presentation of the 240-year-old "Messiah" is noted as one of the most enduring and meaningful traditions at Maryville College.

Together, the MC Concert Choir and The Maryville Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO) will perform the "Messiah." College alumni, faculty, staff, students, and community members also constitute the choir. Special accompaniment is provided by Dr. James Bloy, organist, and Sallie Warth Schoen, harpischordist.

This year, two presentations of the "Messiah" are scheduled. The performances are set for 8 p.m. on November 20 and 3 p.m. on November 21 in Wilson Chapel. Free admission is offered.

Preparations for this MC tradition are already underway. Kent Skinner is currently conducting weekly rehearsals which began Monday night, September 20, and will continue until November 15. Rehearsals meet from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Fine Arts Music Hall, and no rehearsal is scheduled for October 18. All students interested in participating should begin attending rehearsals immediately.

The guest alumni soloists include Soprano Sarah Tompkins Beatty of Chicago, Tenor Don Brakebill of New Providence United Presbyterian Church, Baritone John Ribble ot Knoxville, and Bass Wyatt Parker of Sevierville. This will be Dr. Harter's 34th year with the "Messiah."

"People" Week Slated

by Debbie Hall

PEOPLE is for everyone, PEOPLE is for anyone, PEOPLE is a new on-campus organization this fall. Taken from the concept of a "woman's center," PEOPLE focuses on men's issues, women's issues, and the relationships between them.

The committee of four: Dean Boldon, Sherry Bonham, Debbie Hall, and Ben Hornsby, will be responsible for the programming of PEOPLE for the 1982-83 school year. The first event planned for this year is PEOPLE Awareness Week, October 4-9. The topic for this week will be Male/Female Relationships, and the schedule is as follows:

Monday, October 4: 5:30-8:00 p.m., Proffitt Dining Room. Informal Discussion on the issue of Male/Female Relations. Skit peformances by the Playmakers.

Tuesday, October 5: 9:20 a.m., FAC Music Hall. CIV on Rape, by Vicky Black, an MC student who has been involved in Rape Crisis work for several years both in Florida and in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Wednesday, October 6: 10:30 a.m. CCM Mid-Week Worship, led by Debra Shevlink, the new Associate Pastor at New Providence Presbyterian Church.

Thursday, October 7: 4:00 p.m., CCM Presentation on Androgeny by Worley Fain, who has a private mental health counseling practice in both Maryville and Knoxville, and works with alcohol and drug rehabilitation at St. Mary's.

Saturday, October 9: 9:00 p.m., Pearsons Cafeteria Sadie Hawkins & Li'l Abner Dogpatch USA Dance.

Also, Thursday, October 14 8:30 p.m., Lloyd Lobby-Film and presentation on Rape, by Cornelia Strickland, Director of the UT Women's Center.

Any and all are welcome to attend the programs. . . it promises to be a very enlightening week!

For the latest cuts and styles for men and women . . .
See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
separate Men's salon
Ear piercing and eyebrow waxing

CALL TODAY 982-4502

Critic's Corner

THE SIRLOINED LETTER
A Restaurant Review

by H. Fortes Twombley

While perusing the margianlly congested business district of the "Twin Cities," the Maryville Collegian may take notice of the abundance of eating establishments in close proximity to the campus environs.

Upon my arrival to this area from my hamlet of heraldry in England, Eau de Cologne-on-Avon, I too noticed the vast selection of dining spots.

Having been raised by a maiden aunt of questionable culinary expertise, palate-tickling delights have always been a rarity for me to enjoy. Aunt Matilda was the constabulary cook for the Eau de Cologne-on-Avon jail, displaying negligible skill, and using few kitchen tools other than a "crook pot" (which has been bastardized by you Americans into nomenclature for a slow-cooking device that one generally receives for Christmas).

My buxom, wayward Cousin Joy is the only member of the family who can really cook - her award-winning perserves are as yet unsurpassed in Eau de Cologne. Mouths as far away as Devonshire palpitate for a mere taste of her "Joy Jelly."

The other evening, Aunt Matilda, Cousin Joy, and I opted to go out for a late night snack. Tossing caution to the wind, we clambered aboard Winston, our reliably unreliable Land Rover, and traversed Maryville to Gilbert's, located on Church Ave., diagonally across from the rear of Citizen's Bank.

At first appearance, Gilbert's does not strike one as being a bastian of culinary ecstacy. But beneath that orange roof beats the heart of a dining experience to rival even Howard Johnson's.

We made our way to the formica counter, perched ourselves atop well-worn Naugahyde stools, and boldly gave the waitress/chef our order. Cousin Joy refused to eat, seemingly desiring only to play with the jukebox in the corner.

Soon my two eggs, two strips of crisp bacon, toast, and coffee greeted me, Aunt Matilda stared at her fried Country Ham, eggs, toast, and coffee and muttered something under her breath about wanting to go to Krystal's.

The food was very good- I must say that I was pleasantly surprised. The eggs weren't crunchy like Aunt Matilda's. Two slices of fresh tomato stared up at me invitingly as I eagerly chewed my generously buttered toast.

As Aunt Matilda grudgingly tugged at her ham and knocked over her water (the water was outstanding, with a detectable, yet not overpowering aroma of chlorine), Cousin Joy bounced over and snatched up our little packages of mixed fruit jelly, retreating again to the jukebox where she played "Waltz Across Texas" for the fifth time, batted the plastic fruit suspended above the restroom door, and licked the jelly out of the little packages.

Aunt Matilda and I finished our meals (I took a taste of her ham - it was good, though a tad salty), had two more cups of the deliciously strong coffee, retrieved Cousin Joy from her repose in the corner, paid our bill (which was under $5.00), and left.

I returned shortly however to ask a flannel-bedecked gentleman with a Vols cap and an unbecoming growth in his left cheek if he could give our Rover a battery boost. He obligingly did so, and after fifteen minutes of not turning over, much cussing on his part, and many chants of "Turn over, Rover!" on my part, Winston roared to life.

The man jumped for Joy, but she ducked, dove into the Rover, and we returned to our residence.

In my final estimation, Gilbert's is a good dining spot, particularly for a late night meal or a study break. It is close to the MC campus (within easy walking distance), reasonably inexpensive for a non-fast food establishment, the service is good, the atmosphere is friendly, and the place is a-lot cleaner than one would imagine.

Do not hesitate to partake of Gilbert's. B+

ARTIST, From p. 6

Cimino has performed leading roles with the New Jersey State Opera, the New York City Opera's touring company, Julliard's American Opera Center, and the Opera Company of Philadelphia.

More recently he has left his farm in upstate New York for engagements with the Savannah, Baltimore and Jackson, Mich. symphonies, as well as a live public radio broadcast of his concert "Great Music for Tenor and Baritone." At the American Opera Center in New York he performed the principal baritone roles in "Lucia de Lammermoor" and "La Traviata".

He has entertained audiences through performances in North Carolina, Iowa, and Michigan. He was enjoyed so well in Michigan he was invited back to perform the title role of "Man of La Mancha."

Before he finishes the year at Maryville College, he will have played the title role in "Rigoletto" with the San Francisco Opera Center returned to Michigan and the Jackson Symphony, performed as Marcello in "La Boheme" in North Carolina, and made another live public broadcast.

Cimino will visit the area three times during the coming academic year and will be able to perform at churches, club meetings, civic organizations, concerts, schools and other events. The first visit will be September 29 - October 6. The two additional visits are scheduled for January 31 - February 13 and March 31- April 19. Local organizations interested in scheduling an appearance by Cimino should contact Mrs. Libby Rankin at the college, 982-6412 or 546-69-12.

Joint Column

by Chris Porter
and Nick Venditti

As several of us returning students have noticed, many major changes have taken place over the summer months here at MC, most notably, the curriculum change, the closing of Carnegie forcing a co-ed Lloyd, and the construction of new steam pipes assuring sufficient heat by early Spring term. For the benefit of newer or less observant students, we would like to point out some of the more subtle changes we have noticed.

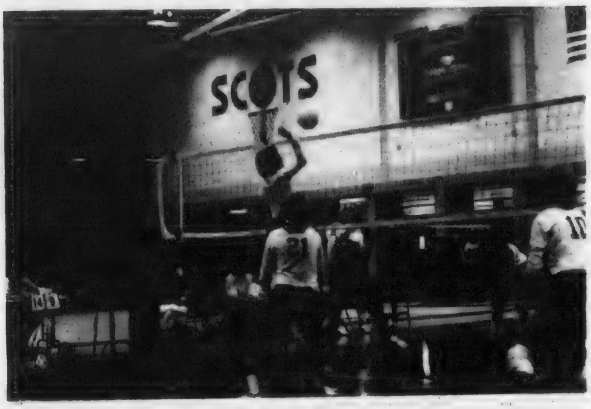
One may have already noticed the ascent of culinary standards due to our new cafeteria director (MORCO is showing that they are sensitive and responsive to our needs). On the other end, maintenance has assured us of an endless supply of paper products with new Roll-master dispensers.

On the more personal level, many students have battled monotony by altering their hairstyles (in some cases drastically), their wardrobes, and even their mealtime seating habits (not to mention Joe Longo's contact lenses).

These changes, whether minute or great, are welcome in a college so small. In closing, we would like to wish Capote a speedy recovery from whatever he ran into during the summer.

Club El Dorado

PROUDLY PRESENTS



CHARADE

Oct. 1 & 2
8-12 p.m.

For booking call
Don Lindquist 983-6025
Roger Schmidt 982-0780

Open 10 a.m. - Midnight
Happy Hour 4 p.m. - 7 p.m.
$3 Single
$5 Couple (Reg. Prices)

Bring in this ad and receive $1 off regular admissions price with MC I.D.

Kandy Schram and Rachel Reese watch as Kay Julian goes for the ball.

Bridgewater Drowns Fighting Scots

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

For the second time in three years the Eagles of Bridgewater have beaten the Maryville Scots. Three years ago Maryville traveled to Bridgewater and suffered a 24-0 loss. Again this year the Scots went to Bridgewater and lost. This time the game was closer with the Scots suffering a 14-13 loss dropping them to 0-2 in the O.D.A.C. and 1-2 for the season.

The game opened on a positive note for the Scots as they gained good field position after the kick-off and held the Bridgewater defense. But the first touchdown of the game came in the second quarter when the Eagles drove 80 yards on 14 plays with 25 of those yards coming on a pass-interference call. Then, with seven seconds left in the first half, the Eagles continued their offensive domination coming out of a time-out to throw a 55-yard touchdown pass as time ran out. The Eagles made the extra point and went in at half-time with a 14-0 lead.

Late in the third quarter the Scots started to move the ball. Wtih 12:06 left in the fourth quarter the Scots finally scored on a one-yard lead play with Mike Surrency following Glen Katz over Brian Shea. McLeod hit the extra point and the Scots were down 14-7 with 12 minutes left in the game. Surrency's touchdown capped a 10-play, 90 yard drive.

Later in the fourth quarter the Scots came rumbling back and moved the ball down the field with Pat O'Brien sneaking it up the middle on a one-yard plunge. With 1:53 left in the game the Scots decided to go for the two-point conversion and the win. The Pat O'Brien to Glen Katz pass was broken up by a hard hit at the goal line, leaving the final score 14-13.

"Welcome Home Scots"
This ad worth 10% discount
on any single item purchase - with MC I.D.
Good until October 10
Giff's Sporting Goods
983-2166 W. Broadway at Morganton Road 983-2188

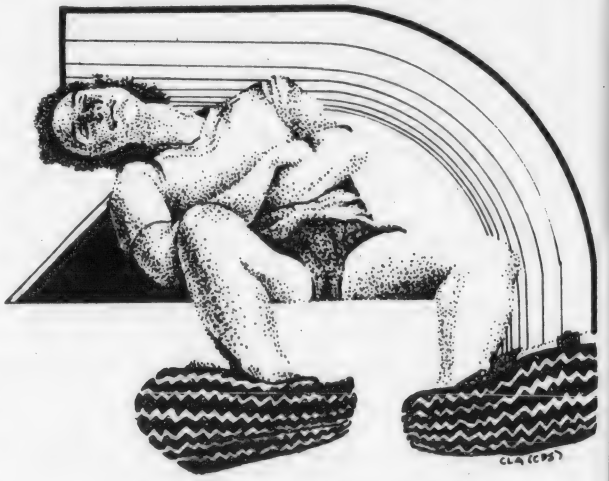
Ladies Triumphant

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

To say the least, this past week has been a pretty productive one for the Lady Scots Volleyball team. Going into the week 1-1 and coming out 8-2 should be evidence enough of the team's successes.

Tennessee Tech and Covenant came to town Tuesday night, and to sum it up, Tech went away the winner, Maryville split, and Covenant went home after losing two. Maryville and Tech opened up the night with Tech winning 15-5, 11-15, and 15-4. Although the team lost, Coach Brown seemed not to be too dispirited. She was pleased that the Lady Scots played as well as they did, and added that it was the first time that the Ladies had taken a game from Tech. The next match had Tech and Covenant facing each other. Tech disposed of Covenant 15-7, 15-5 to win both of their matches scheduled for the night. The third match had the Lady Scots playing the Lady Scots. That's right folks, the Maryville Lady Scots against the Covenant Lady Scots. Fortunately, the hometown team was able to defeat the visitors 12-15, 15-11, and 15-3. The Maryville team had a few problems in the first game against Covenant, but rallied strongly and shut the door on Covenant's hopes.

Friday arrived and brought Milligan, Southwestern, Emory and Henry, Carson-Newman, and Bryan to town for the Maryville Invitational. As expected, Maryville was in the finals as a result of victories over Southwestern 15-3, 15-5; Bryan 15-5, 15-13; and Milligan 15-11, 15-10 on Friday night. They continued their winning ways on Saturday by defeating Carson-Newman 15-4, 15-0; and Emory and Henry 15-7, 15-7 to set up the championship match between Maryville and Bryan. This match was a sports writer's dream, because to put it mildly, there is no love lost between the Lady Lions of Bryan and the Lady Scots. Well, when all was said and done and the smoke had cleared, the Lady Scots had gunned the Lady Lions, 15-9, 15-9, and 15-7. Chalk another one up for the good guy (or should it be gals)! Anyway, if you're over in the P.E. building sometime, take the time to stop by the trophy case and check out the first place trophy for the 1982 Maryville Invitational. Overall, the results of the tournament were as follows: Southwestern 0-5, Milligan 1-4, Carson-Newman 2-3, Emory and Henry 3-2, Bryan 4-2, and Maryville 6-0. Way to go, Ladies!



By the time you read this, the team will have traveled to ETSU on Tuesday night and left for a trip to Pennsylvania to play Wilkes College in Wilkes on Thursday and to participate in the Juniata Classic in Huntingdon on Friday and Saturday. In case you've forgotten (or didn't know) Juniata was one of the four teams to participate in the NCAA Final Four Championship held at Maryville last year. The Lady Scots will probably face their toughest competition in Division III in this tournament. So, while you're reading this article send a good thought towards the north and hopefully the Lady Scots will play their best and in doing so win.

★★

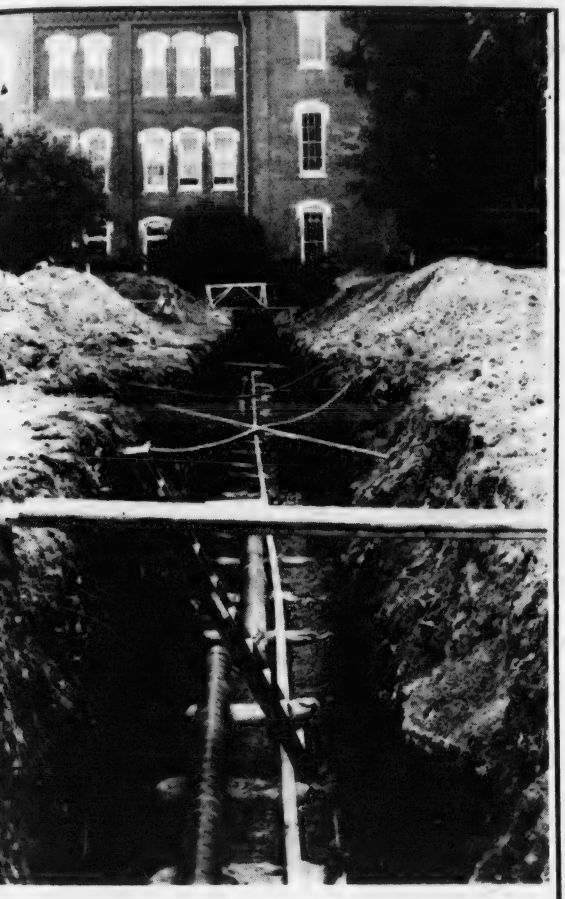
SPORTS FLASH

It was announced today that the Lady Scots Volleyball team was ranked #11 in the nation for the week in Division III schools.

★★

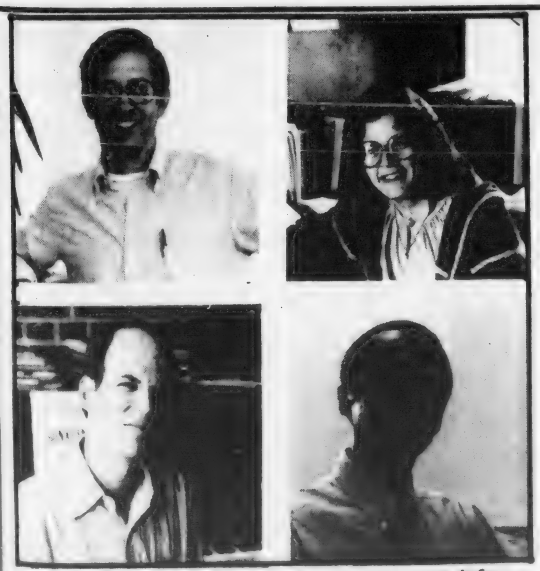
New Coach

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Editor



Jeff Fancher has joined the Marvville College Staff as men's Assistant Basketball Coach. Fancher is a native of Newport, Tennessee. He attended Cocke County High School where he was a member of the basketball and baseball teams.

While attending U.T. from 1976 to 1979, Fancher served as a manager to the Volunteers basketball squad. Fancher gained valuable coaching experience while completing his undergraduate studies at Austin Peay University where he served as a student assistant Coach to Head Basketball Coach Ron Bargatze.



Fancher's coaching responsibilities will include organizing and managing the junior varsity basketball squad. He will also serve as assistant coach for the varsity basketball team.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 2 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, October 7, 1982

Construction on steam lines outside Anderson Hall

New faculty members clockwise from upper left: Scott Brunger, Ruth Sandefur, Charles Hughes, David Hoffecker.

MC's Steam Lines

A Heated Issue

by Mary Hughes
Echo Asst. Editor

What ARE those HOLES? Sharon Crane's Student Programming Committee has scraped the surface of MC earth in an effort to catch the attention of the professors who offices face the muddy site. President Anderson will entertain the professors this week as he sets sail in the Wonderful Wayne Gondola after crane operators fill MC's canals with real Venice water.

Affiliate artist, John Cimino, will ride the stern of the small craft as he and Wayne salute the flag outside Anderson and sing the Alma Mater. The two will hold their note until November 15 when the new heating system, laid in pipes at the bottom of the canal is completed.

Until the heating pipeline is finished, Engert Mechanical Construction will provide temporary heat for most of the buildings, including the dorms. The new pipes, leading to every building, are insulated to protect against heat leakage and moisture interference. The insulation forces 30 percent more energy into the pipes, instead of into the ground. The engineers designed the piping so that its sturdiness relies on periodical anchors (located at designated manholes) with expansion points fastened to the tubes to control movement and prevent breakage.

The new boiler system is a "pilot project for things to come," according to Bill Slater. It will convey over 50 percent savings on fuel costs per year as it burns wood instead of gas and oil. TVA supported the idea, and Maryville could be the first school to install such a simple, yet innovative heating system.

The project involves environmental protection. The new woodfire boiler, operational since June, 1982, inhales 4,000 tons of wood chips per year. The chips a form of factory waste--are replaceable indefinitely (as long as trees are replanted) at a substantially lower cost than oil or gas. The boiler has a dust collector and monitor that checks environmental impact.

A dairy silo and an older fire tube design allow the boiler to create energy that is easily moved through the pipeline. The pipes carry heat into buildings through a black tube and return the heat through a white tube. Because the physical components that make up the boiler and basic tubing are not complex, future generations can expand the system easily.

Though the idea is simple, planning and digging is complicated. Engineers preplanned the fabrication, producing scores of blue prints and digging criteria. Les Teffeteller, who has worked at MC for almost 40 years, is overseeing the pipe route. He must make sure that the line avoids trees, telephone poles, courtyards, and other pipes. Two main lines run horizontally through campus with branches leading to out-of-the-way dorms and buildings.

The tunnels have produced archeological finds, like "Bones," the biology skeleton, and remnants of Baldwin Hall's cistern. As recalled by the Maryville

See Heat, p. 3

Campus Calendar

Thursday, October 7

JV Football vs. Knoxville College, 1:30 p.m.

Friday, October 8

Grit Down Weekend
Cades Cove Hayride

Saturday, October 9

Football vs. Washinton & Lee Honaker Field, 1:30 p.m.
Volleyball vs. Mars Hill College, 11:30 a.m.
Men's soccer at Johnson Bible College
Sadie Hawkins/Li'l Abner Dogpatch U.S.A. Dance, 9:00-1:00 a.m., Alumni Gym.

Sunday, October 10

Campus Fellowship, CCM, 4:00

Monday, October 11

Men's soccer at Covenant College

Tuesday, October 11

Men's soccer at Covenant College

Wednesday, October 13

Mid-Week Worship, CCM, 10:30 a.m.
Volleyball vs. ETSU and Bryan College, 6:30 p.m.

EDITORIALS

As we rapidly approach November, it is evident that this is an election year. Every other commercial on the radio and T.V. is denouncing some candidate. It seems this year's election tactics are "what's wrong with their candidate" instead of "what's right with ours."

So here we are at MC, complaining about these commercials littering the airwaves and not really caring about the election at all. I hear students complaining about student aid budget cuts, Social Security cuts and other important issues, but when asked if they are going to vote they answer "why bother?"

That seems to be a national problem. How can the U.S. be called a self-governing nation if close to half the eligible electorate doesn't vote? Americans of college age have one of the worst track records for voting. When the vote was given to 18-20 year olds, it was feared that their influence would "ruin" the nation. After looking at the statistics of student voting, it is clear that those prophets of doom were just having a bad dream.

If there's an issue that's bugging you, why don't you do something about it? All those "why bothers" get nothing accomplished. Be a part of this society. Register to vote if you haven't already, and then exercise your power - vote.

Letters

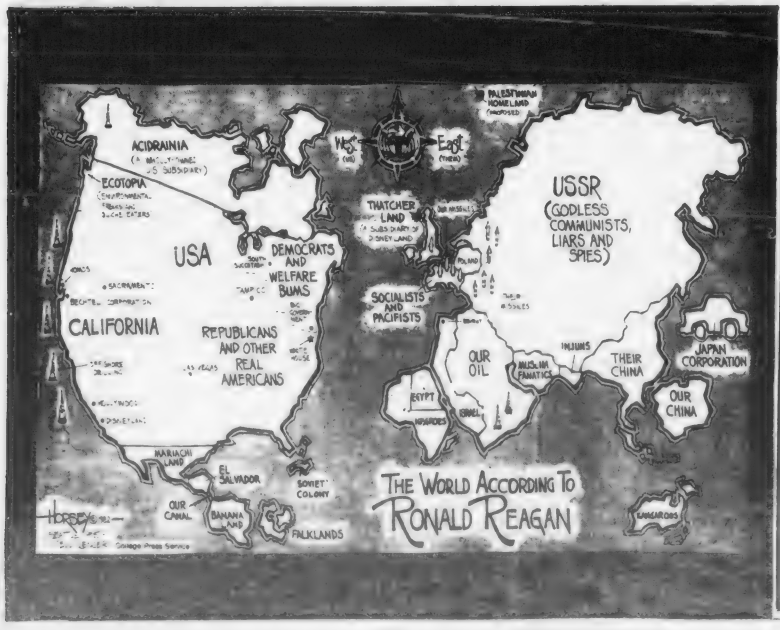
Dear Editor,

In response to the DUI article in the Oct. 1, 1982 issue of the Echo, I find it necessary to bring some other issues involved to light.

I must agree that the drunk driver (10 or above) must be punished. The danger this person creates behind the wheel of a car is too great to pass off lightly. However, in the search for drunk drivers, the Tenn. law enforcement agencies and their officers must avoid coersion of drivers and passengers who are within legal limits.

A case in point: On Tuesday, Sept. 28, in the city of Knoxville, a driver was pulled over for no apparent reason. Upon leaving his vehicle to speak to the officer, the driver was accused of being legally intoxicated and was forced to take the field sobriety test already described in this newspaper. Now readers, you may be much more coordinated than I am, yet when you are thinking about 48 hours in jail and a $600 fine, you too might not pass this easy test.

After the test had been administered to the driver, all the occupants of the vehicle were forced to submit to the same. Immediately following this quiz the driver was asked to take the "Breath Test," which he passed without even registering on the machine. I'll bet those officers were mad. In fact I know they were mad -- you see, I was the one blowing my brains out into the little tube.



Well, when they couldn't get me, they verbally harassed the passengers in the vehicle and selected one to accompany them to jail. When asked how he knew the lucky passenger was legally intoxicated, the officer responded by saying that in his professional opinion, this person was publicly drunk. Upon arrival in jail, the prisoner was not given any type of test to determine whether or not he was intoxicated at all. $75 bond was posted (around 3:00 a.m.) and the now defendent (or should I say the drunken slob?) was told to appear in court at 8:29 that same morning.

Upon hearing the case, the judge dismissed the case and told the passenger (or should I say defendant, or slob?) to pay his court cost and go home. This amounted to $36 and change. I must say that this appears to me to be the most expensive 2 beers ever consumed in the fine city of Knoxville.

Not only was this case a blatant showing of police harassment, but also a waste of my time, the passenger's time, the police's time, the jail's time, the judge's time, and the court's time We, as residents of this state cannot allow this type of action to reoccur.

Finally a piece of advice. Say nothing, do nothing, be nothing– if you're lucky you won't be subjected to this kind of treatment.

Jeff Kahn

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Photographers . . . . . Bill Argyle, Kathy Blair, Ed Davila
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Davis' Donna and Terry Whittum

Davis Debuts Duo

by Marta Wittig
Echo Staff Writer

She is 5'9", has blue-gray eyes, is slim and wears her blonde hair in an "American Med. Woman of Borneo" hairstyle. He is 6'2", has "very blue eyes," dark brown hair which is in an "extremely conservative hairstyle," and sports a moustache.

Donna Whittum is originally from New Hampshire. Terry is from Rhode Island. How did they get here? Well, "Terry found out about it through The Chronicle of Higher Education that there was an admissions counselor job opening at Maryville College. While he was here he heard through Larry West that there was a Resident Directors post open. It sounded like a good challenge and I thought I'd enjoy it." Another reason Donna liked the idea of MC was that she needed to see young, healthy people; she has worked for the past seven years as a registered nurse in intensive care hospitals and the like.

Donna has loads of interests. Guitar, oil painting, pencil sketching, swimming, skiing, any kind of music, singing, backstage theater work, and poetry writing. Terry is also a person of many interests. He received his B.M. from Plymouth State. Trumpet was his major instrument, but he also plays 25 others! He is busy with assisting the Playmakers and he enjoys watching all kinds of sports (football, baseball, basketball). He plays raquetball and is a good cook–"he makes a mean beef stew."

When asked of impressions of Maryville, Donna had this to say, "I would like to thank everybody for making this transition as easy as possible and for being so friendly to us."

A final word from Donna.

To give love is to share your soul.

To receive love is to become your soul.

HEAT, from p. 1

Alcoa Daily Times, the Baldwin Hall cistern supplied water to faculty and students when the form stood as MC's second building, constructed in 1871. Old steam lines that led from Anderson to Baldwin will connect into the new pipes at an intersection near Anderson. Maryville's history proves the school an old but flexible institution.

Food For Thought

by Mary Hughes

You can nourish your brother's hunger. But dry, empty mouths and bodies echo the parched soil and rows of dusty, shallow harvest beds in Third World countries. Here in the U.S., thousands of penniless parents can do little to feed their children–America's future.

Bread for the World (BFW) is a national lobbying organization which seeks to help the hungry here and abroad. Members of BFW learn how they can help remedy starvation through letters, calls, and visits to congressmen who can vote for bills that provide lasting efforts to feed the hungry.

Maryville College offers a BFW chapter here on campus, led by Carol Coffey and Peter Vial. The group invites all interested people to hear Dixie Petry on Oct. 12 at 7:30 in the CCM. She will speak on Domestic Hunger and what YOU can do about it.

Ms. Petry directs the Community Food and Nutrition Program in Knox County. This program seeks to supply home gardens and organize community gardens and food-buying clubs. According to Carol Coffey, the group does advocacy and outreach for federal food programs and regulates emergency food sources in Knox County.

The world today knows missiles, computers, and robots, yet ignorance prevails while people go hungry. Able-minded people's disregard starves the poor; your voice could feed a friend.

Check the Campus Calendar for future BFW events.

Russian Artists Begin Series

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The first program of the 1982-83 Performing Artist Concert series was presented in the FAC Music Hall Tuesday, October 5, at 8:15 p.m. The concert featured Russian musicians Lev Belenky, violinist, and Galina Belenky, pianist.

Among the 10 classical compositions performed by the wedded musicians were Mozart's "Sonata in F Major," Rimsky-Korsakov's "The Flight of the Bumblebee," Bartok's "Six Rumanian Dances," and Ravel's "Rhapsody."

Both Russian-born, the Belenkys came to the United States in 1978 along with hundreds of other Jewish musicians who left the U.S.S.R. under government supported anti-Semitism. In America, Lev played in the American Symphony Orchestra, the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra and the Brooklyn and Queens Symphonies while teaching violin at the Mannes College of Music in New York City. Galina taught piano at the Hebrew Art School in New York, and their daughter Lena enrolled in the Julliard School of Music.

Lev began playing violin when 13 under the direction of Lev Zeitlin. Both Lev and Galina graduated with honors from the Gnesynikh Music Institute in Russia. Lev was a member of the first violin section of the U.S.S.R. State Symphony and was principal and soloist of the Chamber Ensemble of that orchestra while Galina taught piano at the Prokofiev School for gifted children.

General Admission tickets sold for three dollars, and students were admitted free as they worked toward their CIV credits. The concert was one of four in the performing Artist Concert series.

For the latest cuts and styles for men and women . . .
See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
separate Men's salon
Ear piercing and eyebrow waxing
CALL TODAY 982-4502

WANT TO LOSE WEIGHT BEFORE THE HOLIDAYS?
START NOW AT
nutri/system
weight loss medical centers
CALL TODAY FOR A FREE, NO-OBLIGATION CONSULTATION.
1616 WEST BROADWAY # C
CORNERSTONE SHOPPING CENTER
MARYVILLE DIAL 977-1212
AS PEOPLE VARY, SO DOES THEIR WEIGHT LOSS.

Scots Sting Wasps

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

The Scots came out Saturday night with a new look in their eyes. It was a look of determination brought about by two close losses in two weeks tallying our losing margin for the season to four points. But that's the way the ball bounces.

The game opened Saturday night at Heritage High Field with Maryville kicking the ball to Emory and Henry and the Scot's defense stopping them on three plays. The Wasps punted to MC, giving the Scots good field position. The first quarter continued in this manner with Maryville gaining better field position. Then late in the quarter the Scots started a drive that ended with Tony Mitchell kicking a 42 yard field goal. The kick came in the opening seconds of the second quarter after a questionable offensive pass interference call. Emory and Henry then took the kickoff and drove down the field to score the first touchdown of the game.

Later in the second quarter, the Scots were once again driving down the field when another pass-interference call was made. This time it was against Emory and Henry giving the Scots the ball on the opponent's one yard line. After two good goal-line plays, the Scots lost a fumble on the quarterback-center exchange. This set up the safety by Tony Mitchell. The Wasps tried to run out of the end zone, but on the second play from scrimmage Mitchell led a host of Scots in tackling the ball carrier in the end zone.

The Scots came out in the second half with offensive trouble. The problem was that they were stopping themselves with mistakes, but the defense came out and put up a brick wall that Emory and Henry couldn't break through. The defense was lead by some fantastic line plays from seniors Alex Albert (5 tackles, 7 assists) and John Cockfield (7 tackles, 9 assists) and sophomore Tony Mitchell (9 tackles, 7 assists). The front line was backed by Ed Belfi (5 tackles, 8 assists) and Rick Roam (2 tackles, 7 assists). Bob McQuade and Jeff Briggs led the secondary with McQuade having six tackles and Briggs' making two interceptions.

While the defense was stopping the Wasps, the offense started to move the ball better. The offense scored on a pass from Pat O'Brien to Glen Katz. This play was set up by some good plays from key people. The Scots started the drive after Mike Smicklas' punt return. The drive was also aided by a reverse by Jose Feliu that took the ball inside the twenty. After the touchdown pass from O'Brien to Katz, McLeod kicked the extra point to put the Scots ahead 12-7. The Wasps then came back with a gallant effort. With only seconds remaining in the game, the Wasps threw a desperation pass that was completed, but the receiver was ruled out of the end zone.

The Scots are now 2-2 for the season and 1-2 in the O.D.A.C. This week the Scots will play Washington and Lee University from Virginia in another tough O.D.A.C. match-up.

LadiesPlaceinTourney

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The team left Wednesday morning for Pennsylvania and competition with Wilkes College and King's College on Thursday night and the teams in the Juniata Classic on the weekend. The Ladies had little trouble against their Thursday competition as they won both matches. The Juniata Classic, however, proved to be exactly what was expected (tough competition) in that the team went 3-3 on their way to the third trophy. A very tired Lady Scots team arrived back in Maryville early Sunday morning, and it is almost certain that everyone was glad to be back "home" again.

Now, before you think that this past week's action was dull and uneventful, let me stop you. In the match against ETSU, the second game stands out as a very exciting one. Both Leah Gross and Kandy Schram unleashed shots that have them in the running for the football team's Hardest Hit Award. From Leah such an awesome display of power is expected, but when Kandy drilled (I mean absolutely demolished) a shot against ETSU, it was an unexpected but very welcome pleasure.

Two other players that had a good week were the co-captains Rachel Reese and Masumi Mitsutomi. Rachel served 29 straight points on Thursday night. When asked what she thought after she served the first fifteen to win the game, she said, "I wondered if I could do it again."Well, she missed by only one point. Masumi was named to the Juniata Classic All-Tournament team which is no small accomplishment considering that only six players were picked.

On the whole, the team's record of 13-7 is not that bad considering four of the losses were to Division 1 schools and the other three were to Division III schools ranked within the top ten in the nation. The Ladies are back in action this Saturday the 9th at 11:30 a.m. against Mars Hill here at Maryville. Come cheer the team on to victory.

P.S. A personal note to the whole team - "Thanks for the t-shirt Ladies. It is an honor to be affiliated with such a quality group of people."

Soccer Stats

Women's

by Kathy Walker
Echo Sports Writer

Soccer at its best? You better believe it! Maryville College Women's Soccer Club opened their season against Warren Wilson on Saturday, September 25. Although the MC women didn't finish ahead on the scoreboard, they were still winners on the field. After two weeks of hard work and confusion, the MC ladies rallied together to become a team. In addition to time spent on the practice field, the team also sponsors an aluminum can drive to raise money to purchase uniforms and to cover travelling expenses. However, it's not fair to say that the team does not get any support. Although they don't receive financial assistance the moral support they have received from people around the college really boosts the team's spirit. The Women's Soccer Club would like to thank everyone for their support and to extend a special thank-you to Warren Wilson for their hospitality and kindness.

Men's

by Rethabile Masilo
Echo Sports Writer

The soccer team has played and lost all six games to date, but there is much more to it than that. First on the schedule were away games against Longwood and Eastern Mennonite Colleges, and each of them claimed a 9-0 victory. Both these teams played better soccer than the Scots because in both colleges, the sport is older than MC's three year old program. Next MC hosted Roanoke and Hampden-Sydney, and lost 3-0 and 8-1 respectively, making a bad impression on the home crowd in the process. If it was not for the experience the other teams have compared to the Scots, it could be said that MC had the better looking team.

In the last two games, which were away, Tusculum won 4-0 and Washington and Lee topped MC 7-1. It needs to be mentioned also that the longer time a coach spends with a team, the better it is for that team, but the Scots have had three different coaches for the past three years.

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK

Member FDIC

SPECIAL SALE

One day only, Friday, October 8

MC Bookstore

Sweat Pants and matching tops

in aqua, blue, mauve

Now $12.00 EACH

Reg. $16.95 & 14.95

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 3 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, October 14, 1982

Carter Speaks at World's Fair

by Traci Fraser
Echo Editor

Former President Jimmy Carter and nearly 102,000 others attended the World's Fair Saturday, marking Jimmy Carter Appreciation Day at the Fair. Carter took the opportunity to criticize Reagan's economic policies, and blast the Clinch River Breeder Reactor.

The rainy East Tennessee weather did not put a damper on the festivities, as thousands of well-wishers turned out to see Carter despite the weather.

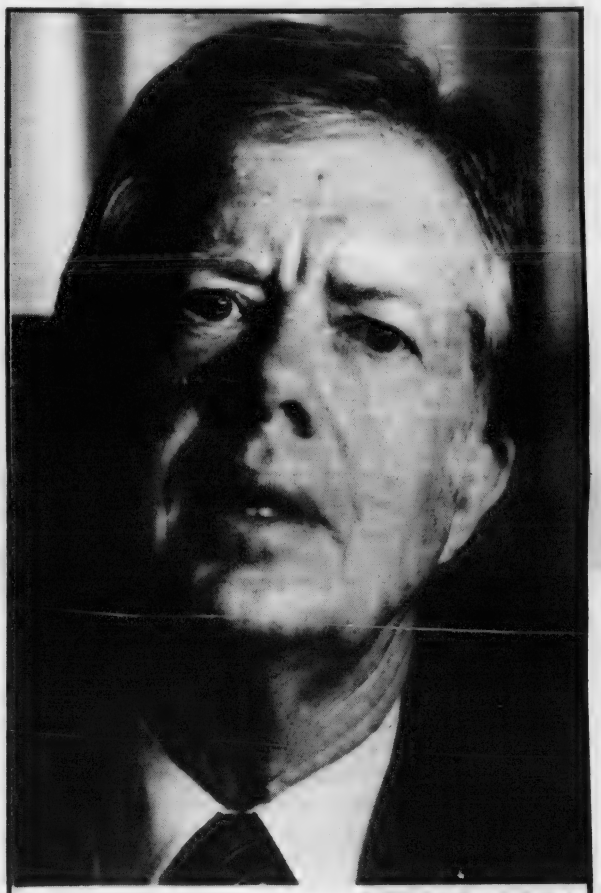
Carter, with wife Roslyn, daughter Amy, and grandsons Jason and James Earl III, toured the Fair site in the afternoon, visiting the pavilions of China, Egypt, Peru, Australia, Saudi Arabia, Japan, and the U.S. Pavilion.

Carter made a public appearance at noon at the Court of Flags, praising those who made the Fair a reality including Sen. Jim Sasser and Jake Butcher, who were in attendance.

Sen. Sasser lauded the efforts of Carter, citing his influence as the driving force behind the Fair. Carter "took the bull by the horns" in Washington according to Sasser, who commented that without Carter's help the Fair would have never been.

Following the speeches, Carter held a press conference at the L&N Station Building. Carter used the press conference to promote his forthcoming memoirs, Keeping Faith. He announced the publication date, November 2, and joked that many of the press' questions could be looked up in his book.

"Since I am no longer in politics, I am going to speak freely" Carter quipped at the beginning of the press conference. He held to that statement, making plain his views on the issues put to him.



Carter disputed the claim that the unemployment rate rose during his administration. He said he saw the statistics as a responsibility of the government and the nation to put those people back to work.

Carter was asked who he thought was the Democratic frontrunner for the 1984 election. He replied that he personally would like to see former Vice-President Walter Mondale nominated, as he "admires his philosophy." He also thought that former Florida Governor Reubin Askew and U.S. Senators Gary Hart and John Glenn were good prospects for 1984. Ted Kennedy was never mentioned.

Carter would not speculate as to whether the Republicans would maintain their offices in the upcoming elections, but commented that it would be "interesting to see" what turned out.

The subject of a nuclear freeze prompted Carter to comment that he had presented freeze proposals to Soviet Premier Brezhnev during his administration. He said all his proposals were rejected.

Carter's statement about speaking freely came into play when he answered a question on the Clinch River Breeder Reactor. He attacked the project, calling it one of the "worst possible wastes of private and public funds that I have ever seen." He said that it will cost an estimated $9 billion dollars, and that the country "will not get two cents of energy from it." Carter has been opposed to the project all along. The prototype reactor would use plutonium fuel to generate electricity. President Reagan is currently backing the project.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

Former President Jimmy Carter, addressing the press Saturday at the World's Fair.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, October 14

"You, Me, Us" film series presentation, Rape Culture, Lloyd Lobby, 8:30 p.m.

Friday, October 15

October-Rocktoberfest, 6:00 - 12:00. Senior class members will serve dinner to those who wish for a $.50 gratuity.

Saturday, October 16

Football at University of Dayton

Men's Soccer vs. Samford Univ., 2 p.m.

Women's Soccer at U.T., 9 am.

HOMECOMING WEEK!

Sunday, October 17

Women's Soccer vs. Vanderbilt 11 a.m.

Campus Fellowship, 4 p.m., CCM

Tuesday, October 19

Opera Workshop Productions, 8:15 p.m., Theater

"You, Me, Us" series movie - "Taking Our Bodies Back" Davis Lobby, 7:00 p.m.

Wednesday, October 20

Volleyball vs. Mars Hill and North Greenville Jr. College, at Mars Hill

Mid-Week Worship service, 10:30 a.m., CCM

EDITORIALS

Assignment: Shoot the President.

Sound like an episode of "Mission Impossible" or the latest Clint Eastwood movie? Not quite. This past weekend the Echo and Chilhowean, in cooperation with the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, held a photography workshop led by Times chief photographer Tillman Crane. (You probably saw a few participants of the workshop at the football game Saturday running around the field and through the stands). As part of the workshop, Echo chief photographer Kathy Blair and I were assigned to accompany Tillman to cover Jimmy Carter's visit to the World's Fair.

Kathy and I were both excited - actually, excited does not describe it. It still seems as if we were never there. But we were, and we have the prints to prove it.

The experience was a valuable lesson, both in journalism and in human nature. Put 40-odd reporters, photographers, and cameramen in one small conference room, and you've got chaos. That amiable photographer you talked to in another part of the park probably wouldn't think twice about beating you over the head to get a better view. And this isn't even the Washington press corps - this is just Knoxville.

Carter was scheduled to appear publicly at the Court of Flags at noon. When we went to find a spot in the press area, a large crowd had already gathered behind the ropes marking off the restricted area. It's an eerie feeling to break through the crowd and walk past them to the press area. You can almost feel the daggers being hurled at your back.

Kathy and I got a spot in front of the platform next to the TV-6 camera. The woman operating the camera look as if she was bored to tears. She checked and rechecked her equipment, and then sighed as though she was saying, "Let's get this show on the road!"

Kathy and I were busy scanning the area with our cameras when Tillman suddenly appeared behind us and hissed, "Did you get a picture of Amy?" I had not even noticed that the VIP section behind us had begun to fill, and there stood Amy Carter and Carter's two grandsons, Jason and James. As I put the camera to my eye and focused, Amy looked right at me. I wish I could adequately describe the look that shadowed her face for a moment. It was sort of a mixture of anger and resignation - like she had forgotten for a minute who she was, and suddenly realized again. In a second she turned to her friend, her face assuming a mask of "I know you're there but I'm pretending not to notice".

The outside appearance went off without a hitch. Thankfully, a small shower kept the windy remarks by visiting dignitaries to a minimum. Carter made a short speech, gave a final wave to the crowd, and left the podium. He had barely even left the platform before Tillman had Kathy and me scrambling toward the L&N Building where a press conference was scheduled. Tillman advised us, "Get there fast - but don't get there first." We weren't quite sure that Kathy and I would be admitted, but we were going to try anyway.

As it turned out, we had no problems. Except, of course, a few bruises acquired on the elevator as we found out how many reporters, photographers, and cameras would fit in one very small space.

During the elevator ride, which was spent smashed up against what I thought was the back wall, I tried to stretch out my knees. Kneeling on asphalt for long periods of time is not one of my favorite activites, and that's what we did at the Court of Flags - my kneecaps were painfully attesting to that fact. When we arrived at our floor, the back wall of the elevator turned out to be the door for that particular floor. Needless to say, I practically fell out.

We managed to get a good position inside the tiny conference room. I learned that if you have claustrophobia, you'd better not get into this line of work. I also learned that TV cameramen can be rather testy people. You don't get in their way, because their camera is a whole lot bigger than yours, and they just might use it on you. They obviously think bigger is better, but I'm not one to argue that point.

Again, I found myself kneeling, surrounded by people, cameras, and microphone wires. When Carter appeared, he sat at a long smoked glass table, flanked by Sen. Jim Sasser and Gov. Lamar Alexander, among others.

To keep up and take notes at a press conference is difficult. This was the first real press conference I'd ever attended, and to have a former president as the main attraction to boot - I was a little overwhlemed by it all. Especially since Carter sat less than 10 feet away from us, and looked right at me a couple of times. Still, I did manage to take down most of what was said, trying very hard to look like I knew exactly what I was doing.

After the press conference, Kathy and I chased after Tillman again, since we had to get back to MC to cover the football game. Trying to keep up with Tillman was another experience - like trying to keep up with a whirlwind.

Now it doesn't seem as if it all happened, but my sore knees remind me that it did. I think neither Kathy nor I will ever forget our experiences when we were assigned to "shoot the President."

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

"People" Week Informative

y Jenny Fitzell
cho Staff Writer

PEOPLE, a new branch of ne Student Affairs Committee, sponsored "People wareness Week" October th-9th.

The week began with an nformal discussion on the ssue of male/female rela-ions. The Playmakers read elections dealing with rela-ionships or emotions from ne last three "Impressions" ublications and then dis-ussed these readings. Al-hough the group in atten-ance was small, Debbie Iall felt the discussions ere very productive.

On October 5th Vicky Black, a member of the Board of Directors at the Rape Crisis Center in Knoxville, was the guest speaker for CIV. Vicky illuminated the many functions of the center, which originated at UT. The center offers such services as accompanying victims to the hospital or to court, counseling beyond the initial call, providing a 24 hour hotline, and giving lectures. Vicky will again be discussing the issue of rape when she presents the film "Rape Culture" on October 14 at 8:30 in Lloyd Lobby.

For the Mid-Week Worship service, PEOPLE invited Debra Shevlink, Associate Pastor at New Providence Presbyterian Church, to preach. Pastor Shevlink spoke about male "machoism" and the narrow stereotypes placed upon both men and women.

On October 7th Worley Fain discussed the meaning of androgeny--possessing both male and female characteristics- the male/female stereotypes, and relationships between the sexes. According to Mr. Fain, no great distinction between feminine and masculine qualities exists; instead, all people possess human qualities. Mr. Fain feels, therefore, that relationships are more successful when the people involved are androgenistic.

"People Awareness Week" ended with the Sadie Hawkins and Li'l Abner Dogpatch USA Dance which Student Affairs and PEOPLE co-sponsored.

In the future, Debbie Hall would like to see PEOPLE, working under the direction of the Student Affairs Committee, sponsor one major event each term. Debbie also hopes to invite speakers to MC to talk about subjects not usually explored on this campus.

Best Wishes

ED BELFI

For a Speedy Recovery

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

Former President Jimmy Carter, photographed here after a tour of the Clinch River Breeder Reactor site this weekend. Members of the Carter party reported that Jimmy "positively glowed" with excitement after his visit, and may reverse his stand on the reactor.

Joint Column

by Chris Porter
and Nick Venditti

There have been many complaints of late regarding the quality of the food served in the cafeteria. This week we would like to set the record straight on this subject. To do this, we have chosen the point-counterpoint method. The following is an actual conversation between two persons who have survived three years of "Morco Monstrosities."

Nick - Chris, many people aren't happy with the food in the cafeteria this year, and I just don't know why. I mean, the manager is doing all he can to keep his job, and it shows. Just take some time before your next meal to notice all the nice colors on your plate.

Chris - Why, that's ridiculous, Nick, MORCO.s system of rotating directors keeps anyone from being familiar with the caf. And,

Chris - Why, that's ridiculous, Nick, MORCO's system of rotating directors keeps anyone from being familiar with the caf. And, of course, the color of the food is important. How would one tell white rice from yellow rice? I further believe that breaded chicken, veal and pork should be dyed different colors to discourage arguments over the identity of the main course.

Nick- You heathen, you just don't realize the advancements that have been made. This year we have white lettuce with brown spots instead of the other way around, and I've heard that Morco has even been kind enough to supply us with fifty more rheumatic chickens to provide us with powdered eggs for breakfast. Heck, Chris, they even cut the fruit for us, so that it will be dry. What more can you ask for?

Chris - Maybe someone should chew it for us like the barbecue they serve. And heck, everyone knows that all the poultry products come from the Oak Ridge Experimental farm; that way you get up to six legs from one chicken. How could one enjoy eating anything while such thoughts weigh upon the mind (like the food weighs upon the stomach)?

Nick - I disagree bar rag breath. Just the other day I ate a WHOLE tuna salad sandwich; or was it chicken salad. . . or ham salad? Well at least I'm sure it wasn't dog food! Golly! The people in the cafeteria go through soooo much trouble for us by being creative day after day. Just look at how many things they can do with "Third Rate" beef and fake mashed potatoes.

Chris - But the dog food, you pseudo-conformist, was infinitely better than the conventional "gruel on spaghetti", and it's better for teeth and bones, too. I have to agree with you on the degree of creativity. Who else could come up with mysteriously hollow corn dogs, fuzzy beans, and the many disguises for the perennial leftover. But this is where their creativity ends and yours begins. There are as many different tastes for meatloaf as there are combinations of condiments from the salad bar . . .

The arguments continue, of course, but the questions still remain: Does the food service satisfy its pre-paid patrons need? Are you ever enthused about eating? Think about it . . .

WHEN YOU CARE ENOUGH TO SEND THE CLASSIEST

Let the Senior Class do it!

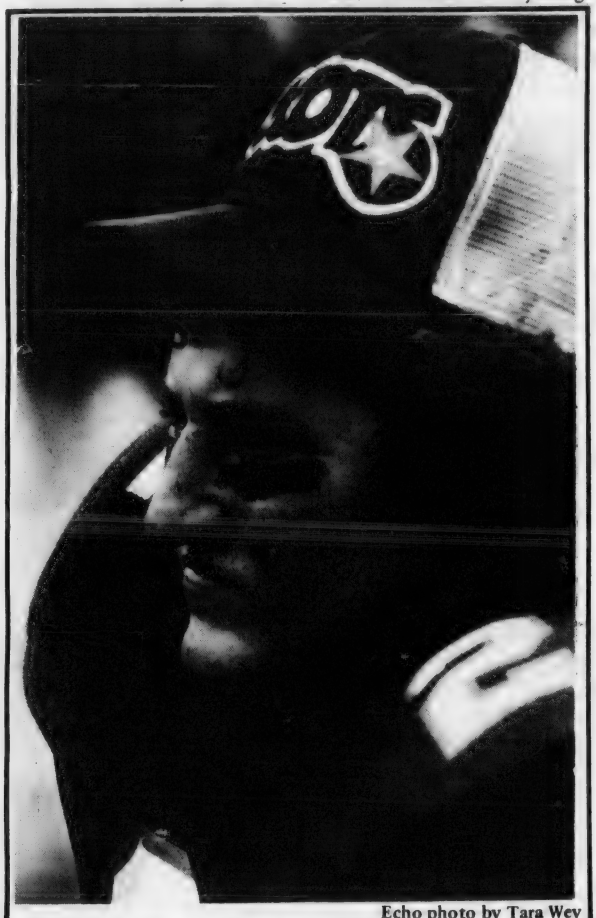
Now available: Tap dancers, belly dancers, clowns.
For more info. contact box 2790 or see Andrew Baker, Beth Sieber, or Jean Plant.

Featuring . . .
Linda Carroll
at the
HOUSE OF HAIR
THE SALON FOR FAMILY HAIR STYLING
Jack Coker and Kenneth Melton, owners
321 High Street Dial 982-4584

Generals Outmaneuver Scots

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

The score was 28-14. The teams were Maryville College and Washington and Lee University. The place was Honaker Field in Maryville, Tennessee. Everything was right except the outcome. Saturday afternoon the Generals of W&L defeated the Scots 28-14.



The game was one of the hardest fought games for the Scots this year. The difference was that the Generals put the ball into the end zone two more times than the Scots. Offensively, the Scots had little problems until they were inside the Generals' 20-yard line. Then the Generals' secondary would rise to the occasion and prevent the Scots from scoring by knocking down passes and supporting the line on outside running plays. Defensively, the Scots were hurt by the loss of senior Ed Belfi and several big plays from scrimmage. Freshman Bob Aucker stepped in when Belfi was hurt and played a good game, but the Scots missed their All-American candidate.

The game opened with Maryville kicking and the defense holding W&L on three plays. The offense then came out and scored on a pass from Pat O'Brien to Gene Wheatley. The pass covered 27 yards, and after McLeod's kick, the Scots led 7-0. Washington & Lee came back in the second quarter and scored two touchdowns on two passes. The first was a one-yard toss to Chris Cavalline and the second a two-yard from Thompson to Frank Surface and the Generals went in 14-7 at the half.

In the second half, the Scots came out and scored the equalizer on a 38 yard touchdown pass from Pat O'Brien to Glen Katz. Washington & Lee came back and scored again when Cavalline went 57 yards on a little swing-type pass. The Generals put the final score on the board in the fourth quarter when Cavalline scored on a one-yard pass from Thompson.

The Scots and the Generals were even statistically with 326 yards total offense. The Scots had the passing advantage with Pat O'Brien completing 12 of 21 passes for 191 yards. Freshman Brian McClellan from Knoxville completed 3 of 5 passes late in the game when W&L was in a prevent defense. Cavalline for W&L had 117 yards on 24 carries for the best performance by an opposing back against the Scots in five games.

This week the Scots travel to Dayton, Ohio to take on the Flyers of the University of Dayton. The Flyers have been in the playoffs the last couple of years.

Echo photo by Tara Wey

Shannon O'Brien's expression relfects the mood of the Fighting Scots as they lose 28-14 to the Washington and Lee Generals Saturday at Honaker Field.

Ladies Seek Top 10 Ranking

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots Volleyball team had a relatively light schedule last week as their only match was against Mars Hill College on Saturday. The Lady Scots, now 14-7, won the match 15-11, 7-15, 15-8, 15-5. This match could be the most important one the ladies have played with regard to the team being nationally ranked. The situation is as follows: Last week the Lady Scots were ranked third in the region behind Western Maryland and UNC -Greensboro; however, Maryville did not make it into the top ten in the nation whereas both Western Maryland and UNC-Greensboro did. The ranking committee looks at the team's overall record and head-to-head competition when making its decision. Maryville is 14-7 while UNC-G is 20-7, but here comes the good part. Maryville defeated Mars Hill and Mars Hill defeated UNC-G. so it follows that the Lady Scots should move up in the region rankings and break into the top ten in the nation for this week.

Coach Brown's comments for the match went along the line of, "I didn't think we were going to get out of there alive." The team had some trouble in the first two games, but rallied in the last two to win. Outstanding performances were turned in by Kay Julian and Leah Gross (service); Rachel Reese, Kandy Schram, Julian, and Gross (defensive saves); and the whole team on the block. Coach Brown said that Leah "came alive" and "took up the slack" which enabled the team to win.

The Lady Scots' schedule for the week is Carson-Newman away on the 12th, ETSU & Bryan home on the 13th, Mars Hill & Greenville at Mars Hill on the 20th. and King away on the 21st. Let's go Ladies, and we'll be looking for you in the top ten.

Soccer Successful

by Kathy Walker
Echo Sports Writer

The Women's Soccer Club hosted their first home game this season Wednesday, October 6, against Knoxville Women's Soccer League (KWSL). The MC ladies displayed a fine effort and showed immense improvement from their first bout against Warren Wilson. Perhaps it was the home crowd of some 50 plus people cheering them on that added that extra energy needed to play a soccer game.

After an exhausting first half, the MC Soccer Club was really fired up. The s .e was tied 1-1 after a fine goal by captain Mary Hughes. Howev r, the second half wasn t quite as successful. The team's spirit and energy started dwindling. Yet, the undying enthusiasm of Sue van Aken and Laurie (J.D.) Winiarski kept the KWSL from scoring more than their additional two goals. The final score was KWSL 3, MC 1.

The Women's Soccer Club plays two games this weekend. The Ladies play U.T. Saturday at 9:00 a.m. at U.T., and Sunday at 11:00 a.m. here against Vanderbilt. Good Luck Ladies!

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK

Member FDIC

For the latest cuts and styles for men and women . . .
See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
separate Men's salon
Ear piercing and eyebrow waxing

CALL TODAY 982-4502

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 4 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, October 21, 1982

"Through The Years" at Maryville

by Peggy Millsaps
Echo Staff Writer

For a small liberal arts college nestled in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains, homecoming week is always a special time for students and alumni to recall memories. With the theme "Through the Years" Maryville College's Homecoming 1982 hopes to do just that with a weekend line-up of ORANGE and GARNET celebration.

As the official kickoff to homecoming weekend, Friday's parade will line up behind Lloyd at 4:00 p.m. The parade promises to be the best ever with the MC band leading the way for colorful floats, cars carrying homecoming queen candidates, romping clowns, and many surprises. The parade will march out Washington Street, down Broadway, and back up Court Street. Anyone not in the parade (everyone welcome) is encouraged to attend.

Friday night, in the alumni gym, the cheerleaders will host a homecoming pep rally. Following the pep rally, Coffee House festivities will include refreshment booths run by the various clubs and organizations and a series of twenty acts emceed by Beckie Haynes and Tom Hudson.

The Homecoming week hits full stride with the homecoming game Saturday, October 23, against Millsaps College. WBIR will cover the game. Also on hand will be the Maryville High band to perform a pregame show and to accompany the Highlanders at half-time. Half-time will feature the coronation of the 1982 MC Homecoming Queen. Following the game is the Homecoming Dance at Pearsons. Jasmine, of last year's Spring Formal, will provide the music. Tickets and mums for the dance are available until Friday.

To commemorate the theme, "Through the Years", dorms have built floats for the parade and each class has painted a section of the wall in the alumni gym. While the Student Programming Committee is the chief orchestrator behind homecoming, everyone is encouraged to pool their talent and enthusiasm for a memorable 1982 Maryville College Homecoming.

Oktoberfest "Wunderbar"

by Jeana Webb
Echo Staff Writer

"Sprechen Sie Deutsch?" No? Even if you do not speak German, everyone had the chance to enjoy good old German fun on Friday, October 15, for that was the day that Maryville College celebrated Oktoberfest.

The Student Planning Committee along with the help of the senior class and Lore Kuchlbauer coordinated this celebration. If you did not have the chance to attend you really missed some fun.

The cafeteria was decorated in the traditional blue and white Oktoberfest colors. Jim Stetner, an MC student, supervised the decorations, which looked really nice. The senior class dressed up in traditional German costumes and, for a measly sum of $.50, waited on the underclassmen. Each student attending the party was allowed to bring their own six-pack.

Now to the most important part -- the food. It will be a long time before Maryville College will experience such a fantastic dinner in the Cafeteria. The food was cooked by Lore Kuchlbauer, an MC student, and the food services staff. Lore was born in Munich, Germany so the food was authentic as well as good. The menu consisted of: porkroast and bread dumplings, wiener schnitzel and spatzel, fried chicken, fruit torte, and apple strudel. The whole event went very well and everyone had a great time, especially the seniors.

After the diner (later that night) there was a Rocktoberfest dance also in the cafeteria. There was a good turn out for the dance and everyone had a good time. Debbie Hall was the disc jockey for the evening. The dance ended at 12:30 and everyone went back to their dorms, bringing a great evening to a close.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, October 21

Opera Theatre presents three one-act operas, 8:15 p.m., Theatre.
Volleyball at King College
J.V. Football

Friday, October 22

Men's soccer vs. Catholic University, 1 p.m.
Homecoming Parade starting behind Lloyd, 4:00 p.m.
Pep Rally, Alumni Gym, 7:30 p.m.
Coffee House, Alumni Gym, 8:30 p.m.

Saturday, October 23

Crafts Fair, 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.
Pre-game activities 10:15 a.m.
Homecoming Game vs. Millsaps 10:40 a.m.
Barbeque, Alumni Gym, 5:00 p.m.
Homecoming Dance, Pearsons, 9 p.m. - 1 a.m.
Tennessee Intercollegiate Soccer Assoc. Quarter finals, T.B.A.

Sunday October 24

Campus Fellowship, CCM, 4:00 p.m.

Tuesday, October 26

"You, Me, Us" film presentation, "Women of the Toubou." Dean Bolden will be the facilitator. Dorm I, 7:30 p.m.
Volleyball vs. Covenant College and University of the South, at Lookout Mountain, Georgia.
Women's soccer vs. UT

Wednesday, October 27

Mid-Week Worship, 10:30 a.m., CCM

Guest Editorial

by Dr. William F. Pollard

Advice to the Practical Minded

When Traci Fraser asked me to write a short editorial for the Echo, several topics besides those dealing with education came to mind. She had given me a carte blanche-- a dangerous, but intriguing, editorial policy. So I dismissed the opporunity to write about "The Middle Ages: Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow" and began to think (drudge that I am) about the word "education" and the verb ducere, "to lead." If we are true to our etymology, "education" should be a process of "leading out," "broadening perspective," or of "personal liberation." ("Liberation" is sort of trendy word, and I apologize for using it in the Echo.)

If we wish to be "educated," we do not want to be "trained." Trahere, the Latin verb from which we derive our word, means "to pull" and has about it the connotations of "force," "limitaion," and "restraint." The core curriculum at Maryville has the word educere at its philosophic center, but the final responsibility for education lies with the student. The current trend towards the business major indicates that mnay students find training easier than education. The "practical" becomes the expedient -- job skills appear to be a hedge against unemployment. I should be honest and say that I see no reason for an undergraduate to major in business unless he plans to go on no further than the B.A. Liberal Arts majors consistently score higher on Law Boards, and the best M.B.A. programs have strong preferences for the liberal arts and sciences. For five years before coming to Maryville, I watched some of the brightest students at Belmont College get "trained" rather than "educated." Often these students got jobs quickly, but just as quickly they became bored and went through a succession of clerical positions. The jobs with a future went to those few who had a broad background and could conceptualize and integrate patterns of thought -- to those who had the truly "practical" education.

The student who wishes to educate himself might keep some of the following in mind:

1) Take the difficult courses that challenge you to work in new disciplines and to strengthen your abilities in areas where you have some competence.

2) Don't work for grades. You'll become a bore to yourself, a nuisance to your professors, and a burden to your friends.

3) Do work for new knowledge and new methods of inquiry. A "B" or a "C" in third-year French or in Shakespeare or calculus is more impressive than an "A" from a "safe" department or an "easy" professor, I asume Maryville has neither of these!

4) Don't think of core courses as obstacles to overcome. You will be amazed at how synthetic (not plastic) your mind will become if you seek interdisciplinary connections. In my field, a person can't really understand Chaucer without some knowledge of history, philosophy, art, physics (optics), and yes economics. In composition classes, I often search frantically in the recesses of my mind for an analogy. Sometimes I find what I'm looking for in my old bacteriology lab– I was a biology major before I was "saved."

I suppose my main point is that the most practical education is one which forces the student to conceptualize, to develop hypotheses, to recognize complexity, to dismiss the irrelevant, and to organize the relevant. English is one of many disciplines which emphasize the intrinsic value of an idea. My students at Belmont would often ask me to be honest and admit that I would major in something more practical if I were beginning my education again. I had to be honest and admit that I would change to something more practical - I would probably major in classical languages.

Letters ...

Dear Editor,

This letter concerns the recent football game with Dayton University and the events which occured in the stadium that day.

It has been two days since I attended the game, and I am still appalled at the outrageous behavior of the Dayton fans in regard to those of us who were there supporting MC. The fact that it was their homecoming not withstanding, I find it difficult to believe that we ("we" including everyone who was related to MC at the game) were subjected to uncivilized and uncalled for treatment. With the game on the field rapidly turning into a one-sided affair, the fans and band members of UD turned to ridiculing MC's supporters. MC's cheerleaders were particularly susceptible to abuse.

Beginning in the first quarter and continuing throughout the game, our cheerleaders were pelted with numerous objects, including champagne corks, ice, cups, hot dogs, and other sundry items. Late in the second quarter the cheerleaders were surrounded by band members preparing for the half-time show. This prevented them from doing any cheers. There was plenty of room for both the band members and the cheerleaders on the track, yet Dayton's band had no intention of moving out of the way. It went from bad to worse. In the third quarter a section from UD's band decided to ridicule our cheerleaders even more. They formed two lines and wove in an out among our girls chanting and dancing all the while. They then proceeded to encircle two cheerleaders and blast away with their instruments. When the girls attempted to get out of the circle the band members shifted their stance so as to lock the ring shut. Bob McQuade came to the cheerleader's defense by recovering their pompoms. (Note to Bob: Many special thanks!) All this time MC's fans were sitting in the stands bewildered, watching helplessly. Mrs. Brennan's repeated appeals to the UD security official to put a stop to this demeaning behavior were futile. The security (?) official's reply was the he could not control them. ??!!! He was no help whatsoever. The crowd and band continued their actions with literally no reprimand or punishment.

Those who attended the game can attest to what I've said. It makes no sense to me why this outrageous behavior was allowed. There was no call for such outbursts. Maryville's supporters did nothing to antagonize Dayton's people. Apparently sportsmanlike conduct is outdated at UD. One MC fan observed that everybody at UD was either a football player, a cheerleader, a band member, or a non-classified jerk. From all obvious appearances this seems to be an internally valid statement.

To MC's football players I'd like to say that we are very proud of you. The Dayton game yielded more than a lopsided statistic. It showed that our Scots have character and class, and it is character that counts in life, not the score of a football game. We who attended the game are not ashamed of you, so don't be ashamed of yourselves. You have a loyal following of fans, and we'll support you whether you win or lose. You're number one in our hearts. Come Saturday when you take the field against Millsaps, look up in the home stands and you'll see us cheering for you again. You are a good team, and we're proud of you. See you Saturday. WE LOVE YOU SCOTS!

Sarah Jane Lindsay

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

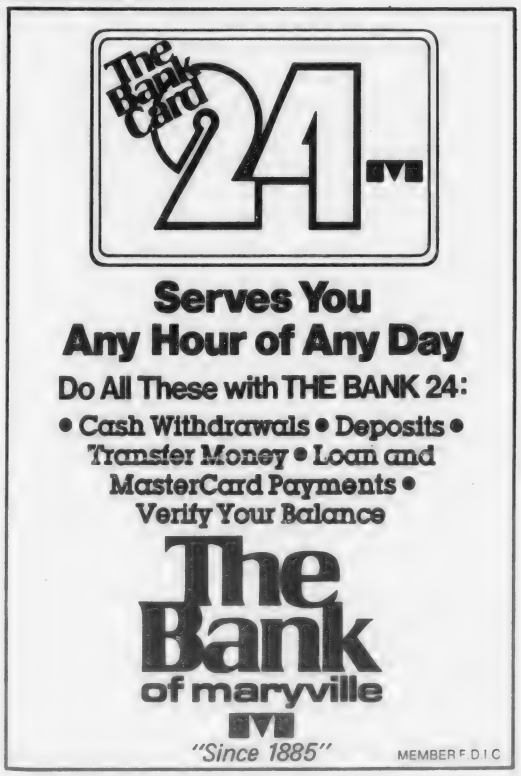
Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Administrators Named

by Jeana Webb
Echo Staff Writer

Fall term is a time of new things at Maryville College. Each year there are new friends, new beliefs and new lifestyles. The students aren't the only ones to face new changes. This year there are several new faculty members. There have also been some new administrative appointments made this year.



The first of these new appointments was announced by Dr. Wayne Anderson (President of M.C.) -- the creation of the Center for Professional Development. S.M. Atchley has been appointed as director of the new program. This new program represents the expansion of an existing program at MC. It will work toward developing and co-ordinating educational seminars on campus for various businesses and industries and will act as a consulting service to assist companies in employee training and staff development.

Ms. Atchley, a 1969 graduate of MC, has held positions with the Little Tennessee Valley Educational Cooperative and the state Department of Education. She also taught English here in Blount Co. She has served as the director of continuing education and community services at MC since 1978. She is a member of New Providence Presbyterian Church, the Blount County Republican Executive Committee, the Blount County Board of Realtors, and is active in the Blount Co. Chamber of Commerce and the United Way. She is also a past president and treasurer of the board of directors of Blount Co. Child and Family Services, past finance chairperson of the advisory board of the Blount Co. Girls' Group Home, a past president of the Blount Co. League of Women Voters and a former member of the board of directors of Agape, Inc. of Knoxville.

The second new appointment was the naming of Dr. Sarah McNiell as the director of MC's office of community services and non-credit programs. Dr. McNiell graduated from MC in 1953. She has served the college at various times from 1954-1978 as an assistant professor of history.

Dr. McNiell has donelvolunteer work with the Maryville-Alcoa League of Women Voters, the Blount Co. Historic Trust, Inc. and the Blount Co. Public Library Board. As freelance project she has done editing for publications of the East Tennessee Historical Socie- and writing grants for MC. She has also served with the Blount Co. Community Action Agency. She is a member of the Organization of American Historians, the East Tennessee Historical Society and the National Trust for Historic Preservation. She and her husband Stuart live in Maryville with their daughter Helen, a 5th generation MC student. They also have one son, Stuart III who lives in Nashville.

The third new appointment was the naming of Thomas Garsombke as the director of MC's continuing education program. Garsombke, who lives in Knoxville with his wife Diane and daughter Nicole (Nikki, age 2), comes to Maryville from Boston. He is a doctoral candidate in the higher, adult, and continuing education administration program at Northeastern University. He is a member of the American Association of Higher Education, the Association of Teacher Educators, the National Association for Public Continuing and Adult Education and other organizations. He is a worldwide traveler who has been to Russia, Poland, western Europe, India and Asia. He is fluent in the Malaysian, Indonesian, and elementary Chinese languages. His administrative and teaching experience includes positions at Northeastern University, the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the Milwaukee public school system and the Brown Deer, Wis., department of parks, recreation and adult education.

Opera Theatre Opens

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

It's Opera that's in the air as the Maryville College Opera Theater opened the season with their presentation of an Evening of One-Act Operas on October 19 in the College Theater at 8:15 p.m.

Three Operas were featured in the program: "A Hand of Bridge" by Samuel Barber and Gian Carlo Menotti, "There and Back" by Paul Hindmith, and "Gallentry" by Douglas Moore and Arnold Sungaard.

MC student in the cast include: Gloria Anaple (Freshman), Frank Fiore (Senior), Jeff Hayes (Senior), and Karen Kotz (Senior). Opera Theater Director Mr. Kent Skinner also performed, and Community member Sheril Halver sang while Tonya Wall accompanied on the piano.

The second presentation is slated for October 21 at 8:15 p.m. General Admission tickets are $4.00 for Adults and $2.00 for Students.

SNEA Elects Officers

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The Maryville College Student Tennessee Education Association (STEA) elected their 1982-83 panel of officers during an organizational meeting on October 7. The new officers include: President, Bill Warren, Jr. (Senior); Vice-President, Wendy Wolfner (Senior); Secretary, Sarah Jane Lindsay (Junior); Treasurer, Lynn Mathis (CE); Historian, Mary Lea Ballman (Junior); and Publicity Chairman/Representative to Student Programming, Susan Taylor (Senior).

STEA is a pre-professional organization for education majors. STEA is the Tennessee state affiliate of the Student National Education Association (SNEA). Their goal is the building of "a concern for tomorrow today." TEA helps prepare the future teacher for his/her chosen profession.

In their future meetings, the new officers plan to have guest speakers who will focus on various aspects of education. In the Spring, they will sponsor their annual "Professional Dav."

1982 MC

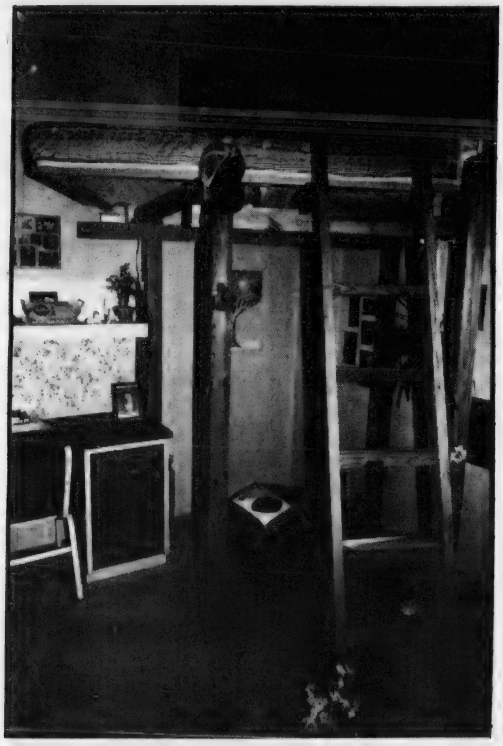
Beth Sieber is a 20 year-old psychology major from Elizabeth, Pennsylvania. Besides being active in MC life, Beth enjoys writing poetry, hiking, jogging, painting, camping, sewing, and doing other craft work, singing, and growing plants. In the future Beth hopes to someday attend graduate school, and plans a career in either college-level administration, personnel work, or working for a social or political action group.

Beckie Haynes is a 21 year-old psychology major from Hendersonville, Tennessee. She has been active in a variety of activities at MC. Beckie enjoys being outside, people, animals, and the mountains. She will be spending time in Scotland during the summer of 1983. Beckie hopes to work for a couple of years in the Therapeutic Wilderness Camp for Emotionally Disturbed Children, and would like to eventually spend time travelling around the U.S.

Sheryl Moore is a 21 year-old elementary education major from Dickson, Tennessee. Among her other activities she has worked with the Gifted Children program that is offered through MC, and plans to teach and later work toward a degree in Special Education. Sheryl enjoys reading, swimming, and working with people and children.

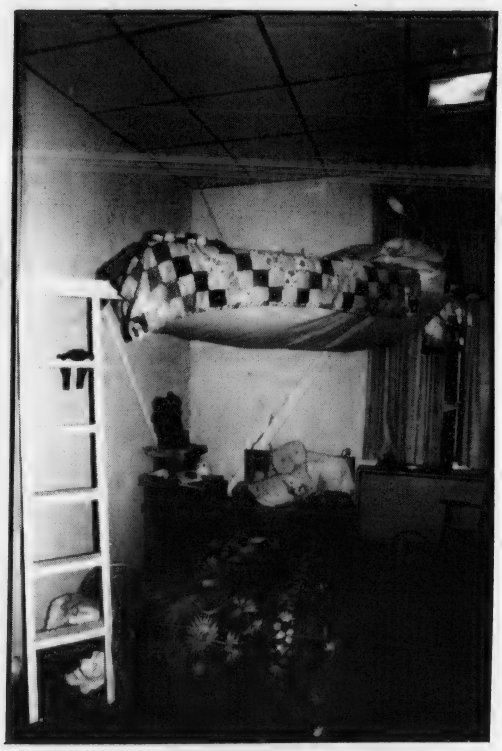
HOMECOMING CANDIDATES

Kathy Long, 21, is an English major from Fort Lauderdale, Florida. Along with many other activities she has been active in many of the campus Playhouse productions. Kathy enjoys hiking, reading, writing, running, tennis, swimming, listening, and the mountains. She will be going to Scotland for the summer of 1983, and after that hopes to do mission work for a year. Kathy plans to attend U.T. in the fall of '84 for her Master of Fine Arts in Theatre. She hopes to use that degree for a career in instructing children in theatre or educational television.



Rebecca Cole, from Philpot, Kentucky, is a 21 year-old biology major. She is planning to go to Gainesville, Florida to work with the manatees for her senior interim. Rebecca enjoys scuba diving, motorcycle riding, and working on her family's farm. After graduation she is going to take a year off to travel or study abroad, or for an internship. In the future Rebecca plans to do graduate work in marine biology or environmental science.

Shelley Kingsbury is 20 years old, and comes to MC from Punta Gorda, Florida. She is a biology major, and hopes to attend veterinary School at either U.T. or University of Florida. Shelley is currently working part-time as a Veterinary Assistant and as a laboratory assistant for the Biology Department. In her spare time, Shelley enjoys running, tennis, hiking, animals, and the outdoors.



MC is

UP IN THE AIR

over lofts

Photos by Kathy Blair

Critic's Corner

THE SIRLOINED LETTER

A Restaurant Review

by H. Fortes Twombley

The other evening, Aunt Matilda concocted one of her most renowned delicacies: Kraft Macaroni & Cheese. However, in the preparation of this infamous dish, she neglected to remove the pre-packaged cheese mix from its foil pouch and she stirred the pre-packaged package into the bent and broken elbow macaroni.

She apologized (complaining about the poor lighting in the kitchen), tossed the mess into the trash, and stated that she would prepare another of her palate-wrenching monstrosities: Quiche Ma-aze. Fearing the worst (and knowing that her quiche wasn't all that it was cracked up to be), I quickly extinguished the trash bucket and led her out the door and into Winston, our reliably unreliable landrover.

Cousin Joy was out of the house for the evening visiting friends at the Ison East Tennesssee Home for Hussies and Trollops.

Winston had a flat, so I chocked the wheels with some loaves of day-old banana nut bread Aunt Matilda had baked, and she then changed the tire.

Once underway, Aunt Matilda said that she wanted to go to Krystals, but I had another dining spot in mind.

I hadn't visited this particular culinary capitol in quite awhile. I recently heard that it had changed management and that the food was, well, the food sucked. But recently I understood that the establishment was again under new management -- and that the quality of the menu had substantially increased.

When we arrived, the parking lot was rather full, but gave no indication as to the great number of patrons in the dining hall. For an early evening hour of 5:30 the place was packed. The line of people waiting was almost out of the door!

Aunt Matilda (muttering under her breath about "no waiting at Krystals") and I were eventually served by two extremely courteous ladies and found ourselves a table in the corner.

The dining room was as I had remembered it – very bright with bland wall paper and chrome and plastic furniture, flowered curtains with various finger paintings decorating the walls, obviously done by the owner's child. (Why else would someone hang such pimples on the faces of the visual arts?)

The food was very good. My meal consisted of chicken filet, corn, sweet potato pudding, blueberry pie, and a glass of Mr. Pibb. Aunt Matilda only had the blueberry pie and milk.

Surrounding us were a large number of boisterous patrons, predominantly young people. They seemed to be having a jolly good time, particularly enjoying the occasional entertainment provided via a solitary microphone at the head of the dining room.

Aunt Matilda reached for the salt and knocked over her milk which (according to Mr. Murphy and his law) had no place else to go other than my lap. She apologized and mentioned that the milk at Krystals didn't spill as easily.

After helping the employees by clearing our own table, I quickly dragged Aunt Matilda from the dining room, all the while covering my lap with a frisbee I'd located on a nearby table.

After my initial fussing and fuming about my pants, I settled down. While driving Winston home, I remarked to Aunt Matilda that I thought the food in Pearsons had never been better.

Still muttering about Krystals, she did concede that the blueberry pie had been good, but that she hated the drapes.

The food was indeed very good – it was seasoned just right. Aunt Matilda's idea of seasoning is to prepare something in the fall and cook it in the spring.

The homemade blueberry pie was the highlight. If you didn't want the chicken, you could choose meatloaf, and there was a wide variety of beverages to wash it down with.

I recommend MC's Pearsons/Margaret Ware dining room. The food is indeed fine and prepared by courteous people -- a rarity these days. A solid A.

The decor however, must receive a C+ at tops. Get a new interior decorator.

Echo Ear

Did you hear that MPH still has the hots for GQ?

Hey KW–how are your Iron Teeth?

GR– Elton and the boys want you!

Pop quiz for J.T. – "What famous Walt Disney character visits Flanigans regularly?"

Is it true that Slushy made the highest score ever on the Sophomore Proficiency test?

A.A. - having trouble picking up your lunch tray? The weight room is calling . . . . .

Thanks to all the seniors who helped with the Octoberfest dinner! Andrew Baker, Jean Plant, and Beth Sieber.

S.F. Thanks for a wonderful year and 1 month! B.S.

Hey J.C. – Here kitty, kitty. You're really a pussy cat!

What's New:

by Joe Wynne
Echo Science Writer

Comics aren't what they used to be. Clark Kent in coming months will find another girlfriend as Lois Lane takes control of her own life and goes a separate way. Wonder Woman, in the wake of Women's liberation, will become physically stronger, deal with more realistic situations and become more caring and emotionally genuine. Her government friend Steve will also be shown as more equal in character and won't have to be saved by Wonder Woman all the time anymore.

Attention videophiles: the face of the video industry is changing. Television is grabbing more viewers due to the variety of cable programming and the growth of 3-D on TV. It is projected that in a few years gorillas will be able to lunge into your living room without the use of special glasses.

The movie industry is fighting back by using 3-D, 35 mm screens, and by building multicinemas. These theatres have less overhead and a more constant money influx. Cineplex, a company with a 21-theatre complex in Toronto has opened a 16 movie auditorium facility in Los Angeles.

There is a debate as to whether these mutlicinemas will be as palatable to the moviegoer, however. They possess small auditoriums that constantly leave the viewer aware of their surroundings. In any case, these big complexes will be able to show classics like "My Dinner with Andre" with lower maintenance cost. For example, "Life of Brian" lasted two years in Toronto.

See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
CALL TODAY 982-4502

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

Julie Humpert and Mary Hughes take time out of the action during the Women's Soccer Club match Sunday against Vanderbilt.

Lady Scots Ranked No. 13

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

Have you ever had one of those days where it seemed like no matter how hard you tried you just couldn't quite get it all together? Well, the Lady Scots Volleyball team had two of those days last week and unfortuantely, they happened to be the days that the team was to play. Fortunately, the team was able to work out a 2-2 record for the week which makes them 16-9 for the season.

Tuesday came and the team went to Carson-Newman to play C-N and Tusculum. The team was somewhat enthused and at the same time let down about the news of their being ranked number thirteen in the nation. The team was glad to be ranked, but everyone figured the ranking would be higher since the Ladies were number two in the region. The Lady Scots started off the night against C-N with a win 12-15, 15-2, and 15-10. The team's next opposition was Tusculum, and Maryville won 15-7, 15-4 to take both matches scheduled for the evening. Even though the team won, the majority of play could best be described by the word sluggish. There was a lack of crispness and precision with which the Lady Scots had beaten Mars Hill on the previous Saturday, but that lack could be attributed to the team's thinking about Wednesday's competition against ETSU and Bryan.

The key phrase for Wednesday's matches was mental stamina. The Lady Scots started off the evening by dropping a close one to ETSU 13-15, 16-14, and 16-14. The second match had Bryan defeating ETSU in two games, and it seemed as though everyone would go home with at least one win since Maryville was favored to beat Bryan in the last match, but such was not the case. Bryan took the first game 15-7; even though the Lady Scots tried valiantly, they were unable to rally and dropped the second game and the match 14-16. Coach Brown's comments about the night were to the effect that the team was too anxious to beat ETSU and their anxiety and eagerness caused them to make mistakes. She went on to say that by the time the team got around to playing Bryan; the Lady Scots were mentally drained. Although they tried to reach down and get more to defeat Bryan, they just couldn't get it.

Standout performances were turned in by Mari Jennings (9 for 19 attacks versus ETSU) and Ileta Howell and Victoria Paez. Both Ileta and Victoria came off the bench to spell the starters and to help the team keep going. If you don't think they don't work as hard as the rest of the team, stop by practice sometime, and you'll find out just how valuable they are. Any coach will tell you that substitutes are a vital part of any team's success.

The team's schedule for the rest of the month is Mars Hill and North Greenville at Mars Hill on the 20th, King away on the 21st, Covenant and University of the South at Lookout Mtn. on the 26th, and the Milligan Invitational away on the 29th-30th. The next and last home match of the season is November 2nd against Carson-Newman at 7:00 p.m. Put that date down on your calendar and come out and cheer the Lady Scots on to Victory.

Flyers Bomb MC

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

This week the Scots travelled to Dayton, Ohio to play the Flyers of the University of Dayton. The final score was 62-0 with the Flyers controlling the game. The Scots played with a lot of enthusiasm, but the freshman and sophomore dominated team had trouble matching up to the junior and senior dominated Flyers.

The Flyers, who were last year's runners-up in Division III, came out and scored on their first possession with a series of options and dives. With the score 7-0 the Scots fumbled the kick-off , setting up the Flyer's second score. The Flyers scored 31 points in both the first and second half with a ball control offense that gave the Scots trouble all day.

The Scots did have some bright points in the game. Jim Carr, a linebacker from Huntland, Tennessee, was one of the leading tacklers for the Scots. Another bright spot was the experience gained by the young Scots against a well-coached and experienced team.

This week the Scots are at home against the Majors of Millsaps for Homecoming. The Scots, who are 2-4, hope to avenge last year's 33-6 loss to the Majors.

Just a reminder to the new students on campus that you can get better-acquainted and save money too when you redeem the Campus Welcome coupons. The businesses are looking forward to meeting you and helping you feel "At Home" in the community.

They're redeeming coupons now, so get your share of the special savings. Visit Campus Welcome sponsors today.

CAMPUS WELCOME

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK

Member FDIC

HAPPY HALLOWEEN

the Highland ECHO

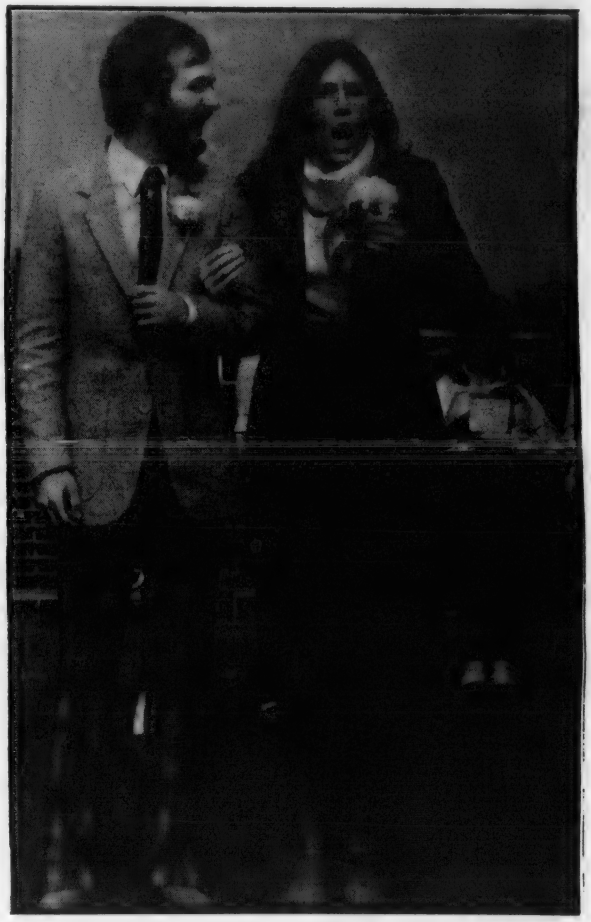
Vol. 68 No. 5 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, October 28, 1982

Maryville Makes History

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The Maryville College Founder's Day celebration was an extra special gathering this year as the College commemorated the placement of nine campus buildings on the National Register of Historic Places as the Maryville College Historic District. This newly recognized historic district includes: Anderson Hall, constructed in 1869-1892; the Lamar Memorial Library (now the Center for Campus Ministry) constructed in 1888; Willard House, constructed in 1891; Fayerweather Science Hall, constructed in 1898; Bartlett Hall, constructed in 1901; Pearsons Hall, constructed in 1910; Ralph Max Lamar Memorial Hospital, constructed in 1910; Carnegie Hall, constructed in 1917; and Thaw Hall, constructed in 1923.

Maryville College was founded 163 years ago on October 19, 1819. In a meeting at New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville, the Synod of Tennessee adopted a plan for a Southern and Western Theological Seminary later chartered as Maryville College. This event was celebrated Tuesday, October 19, 1982, in the Center for Campus Ministry at 10:30 a.m.



Highlighting the celebration, MC President Dr. Wayne Anderson announced that Maryville College has received a $500,000 challenge which the college will receive if they raise $1.5 million. This would result in $2 million for the College. "This generous gift is an extraordinary vote of confidence in Maryville College and its dynamic plans for the future," Anderson said. He acknowledged this confidence with deep thanks, adding, "I am sure this gift will stimulate giving from all sources and, when fully matched, will significantly increase the service Maryville College renders to its students and the greater Knoxville community."

President Anderson also reported an update on the Toward Century III (TCIII) capital fund-raising campaign of Maryville College. He announced that the campaign was nearing its goal of $11.5 million with the current $7,864,254 total. Tennessee Governor Lamar Alexander, the Honorary Chairman of TCIII stated, "I'm delighted with the creation of the Maryville College Historic District and the success to date of the Toward Century III campaign. It is clear that people understand that Maryville College is a great cause worthy of continuing support and preservation."

President Anderson introduced Mr. Carle David, chairman of the Maryville College board of directors, who read the above statement of Governor Alexander and who delivered the enthusiasm of the absent George Webster, the chairman of the National Steering Committee of TCIII and MC alumnus. "I know of no better investment than the high quality education this institution has offered since 1819," stated Mr. Webster.

MC vice president for Development Robert "Archie" Ellis recognized those responsible for the newly designated district. Ellis also relayed the message of Herbert Harper, executive director of the Tennesee Historical Commission. "The National Register is a list of properties significant in American history, architecture, archaeology, and culture. These places deserve to be preserved as a part of the cultural heritage of our nation. The State of Tennessee shares the pride I hope you feel resulting from this official recognition," stated Harper.

Those responsible for the development of this historical district include: Inez Burns, Stanley Shields (Mayor of Maryville), Bob Davis, Herma Cate, Sally McNiell, Hugh Crawford, Dan Gilmore, Charles Sterling, and Tillman Crane.

Echo Photo by Kathy Blair

Surprise! Kathy Long, escorted by Bryan McFarland, was elected as MC's 1982 Homecoming Queen Saturday. More Homecoming pictures on pages 4 and 5.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, October 28

Board of Directors meetings

Friday, October 29

Board of Directors meeting
East Tennessee Kidney Foundation Benefit Concert, FAC, 8:15 p.m.
Volleyball tourney at Milligan College

Saturday, October 30

Football at Randolph-Macon
Haunted House - location TBA
Men's Soccer vs. Lynchburg College, 2 p.m.
Volleyball at Milligan

Sunday, October 31

Happy Halloween!
Campus Fellowship, CCM, 4 p.m.
Haunted House
Last day of World's Fair

Monday, November 1

Soccer Finals, TBA
Volleyball vs. Trevecca and Bryan, at Bryan

Tuesday, November 2

Vote!!
Volleyball vs. Carson-Newman, 7 p.m.
"You, Me,Us" series films, "It's Not Me" and "Happy Birthday, I'm 40", Davis Lobby, 7 p.m. Facilitator: Jane Richardson

Wednesday, November 3

Mid-Week Worship, CCM, 10:30 a.m.

Letters ...

Dear Editor:

Congratulations to the Maryville College community for the outstanding program of activities which constituted this year's homecoming!

The student body in particular made this homecoming one of the best ever at Maryville by the many contritutions of individuals and groups too numerous to mention separately. Noticeable to so many alumni and staff members was the evidence of superior quality in practically everything that was done as a part of the weekend activities. The cooperative spirit that was demonstrated during the stressful period of preparation was remarkable. That spirit will continue to move Maryville College forward.

It was a class act by a group with real class!

Sincerely,
William R. Strickland
Vice President for Student Affairs

Dear Editor:

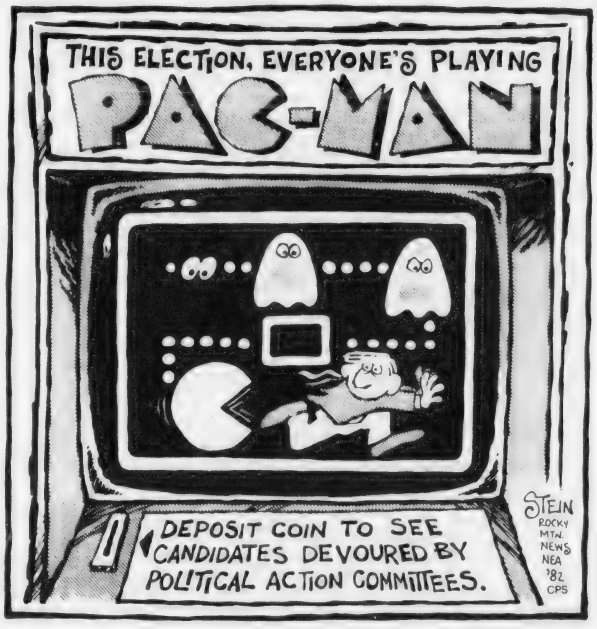
I am writing in response to the Joint Column that appeared October 14, 1982 which discusses the Food Service. To begin with, I'd like to compliment the writers on their creative, humorous way of putting across their opinions of the food service. I must admit that a year ago I would have sat down and helped them write it! But things have changed and this year I have been given the honor of being the chairperson of the Dining Hall Committe. For those of you who don't have the foggiest idea of what our committee does, we basically watch for and listen to problems and complaints about the food. Then we discuss them with the Dining Hall Manager, Mr. Kerrick, and try to come up with solutions to the problems to try and keep everybody happy (wishful thinking!)

Since Fall term began, I've listened to people's comments on the food, and even asked opinions. It may surprise some of you, but I've actually heard positive things! People have said that there was an improvement from last year--I'm not saying how great or small the improvement is -- but at least it's not worse than last year! One very good example of improvement is our salad bar.

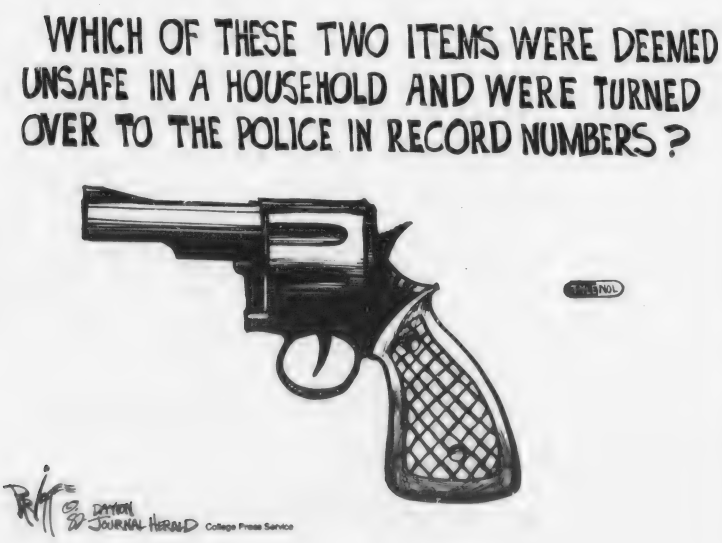
The column commented on the lettuce stating that "This year we have white lettuce with brown spots instead of the other way around . . . " This really bothered me because during the Dining Hall Committee's first meeting with Mr. Kerrick, we learned that fresh vegetable deliveries are made every day, Mon.-Fri. I know that the salad bar looks its worst on the weekends, but you must agree that 5 days of green lettuce and 2 days of not-so-green lettuce is a great improment over last year's 3 days of somewhat green lettuce and 4 days of "I can't believe they think we'll eat that" lettuce.

This is just one example, but there are others -- believe it or not. Maybe one evening while having dinner you will notice that the food in your mouth doesn't taste like cardboard -- it does have flavor after all. Unfortunately, we can't please everyone, but we are making an effort. For those of you who have some comments, whether negative or positive, I would like to welcome all of you to attend a Dining Hall Committee meeting.

Until then-remember that cereal is available at all meals.



Jina Radozycki



Dear Editor,

I'd like to second every comment made by Sarah Jane Lindsay in her letter about the football game at Dayton, printed in the October 21 issue of the ECHO. I was at the game and hers is an accurate account of what happened.

I would like to add one thing. Sarah Jane commented that the MC football players showed character and class. That is certainly true. What I'd add is this: the Maryville College cheerleaders also showed tremendous character and class under extremely difficult circumstances. They put on a first class act in conditions that were anything but first class. Cheerleaders, you are a good team too, and we are proud of you.

Libby Rankin
Manager, Office of Development

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Queen of Scots

by Jeana Webb
Echo Staff Writer

At one time or another while she is growing up, every little girl dreams of becoming a queen. She thinks about wearing a crown made of diamonds and silver. For few little girls does this dream actually come true. For one girl that dream has come true this year. That girl is Kathryn Marie Long, better known to us as Kathy. On October 23, Kathy was crowned Homecoming Queen for Maryville College for the 1982-83 school year.

Kathy is a 21 year old English major. She has participated in five Playhouse productions in the last three years, and was a member of Playmakers her junior year. During the summer of her junior year, she also worked in community productions.

Kathy has been a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes since her junior year and has served as vice-president for that organization. She was also vice-president of the Playhouse Association her junior year.

Kathy was a member of the homecoming court last year. She has participated in volleyball and softball intramurals since her freshman year. She also had the distinguished title of batgirl when she was a freshman.

Kathy plans to go to Scotland this summer. She wants to do mission work for a year and then attend graduate school in the fall of 1984 at U.T. Her career goals are to work instructing children in theatre or educational television.

Her hobbies and interests include hiking, reading, writing, running, tennis, swimming, listening and going to the mountains.

When asked about how she felt about being the new homecoming queen late Saturday afternoon, she said that she could not believe it, and that she had not expected to win. She had psyched herself up that one of the other girls running would win so it came as a complete surprise to her.

Congratulations Kathy. And to everyone else-you see, dreams really can come true.

Echo Photo by Kathy Blair

"Being elected Homecoming Queen is both a blessing and an honor - one which I credit solely to God. I don't think I've ever felt His love so completely."

announcing...

by Wendy Wolfner

Delta Omicron, the women's music sorority on campus, is proud to announce its Fall 1982 pledge class which consists of Gloria Anaple, Maggie Corey, Lisa Webb, Andrea Vousden, Leslee Hay, and Melanie Teffer ller.

Pledging took place on Tuesday, October 5, and was followed that evening by a Pink Drink Party. Throughout the pledge period the pledges received gifts which corresponded to the letters in Delta Omicron. The Formal Initiation will be held Sunday, October 31.

This year Delta Omicron members plan to participate in many projects which will be beneficial to the community and promote music. Among these are trick-or-treating for Unicef, helping with the American Cancer Society's Great American Smoke Out, and presenting programs during the Christmas season at nursing homes and at Everett School.

Spooking of Halloween...

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

It's time for ghosts, witches, monsters and such, and this year's best Halloween scare will be found at the Phi Mu Alpha/Playmakers' Haunted House to be held in the Alumni Gym on October 30 and 31 from 8 to 12 midnight.

An admission charge of $.75 will be paid by each daring visitor, and those wishing to revive may purchase refreshments sold by the MC Playhouse Association at the exit.

This will be the second annual Haunted House sponsored by Phi Mu Alpha, a national male music fraternity. Some publicity will be furnished by Delta Omicron and the Phi Mu Alpha Sweetheart (the Phi Mu Alpha "sisters").

Warning: The Phi Mu Alpha and Playmakers members are not responsible for those with heart conditions or pregnancy – enter at your own risk!

Join the Fun!

by Stacy Medlin
Echo Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered who is responsible for some of the study breaks, pizza parties, and the annual Christmas dance? Well, Circle K, a service organization sponsored by the Maryville-Alcoa Kiwanis Club, has taken a big part in the preparation of these activities along with planning other activities for the benefit of the college and its community. It is one of the many organizations that help students to extend their activities outside of classes and studying.

One very important service sponsored by Circle K outisde the college is the Big Brother/Big Sister program for the community. This program provides the underpriviledged youth in Blount County with opportunities they might not otherwise have. Last year this program and the Maryville College Circle K was featured on Action Ten News. The members are encouraged to plan activities for the little brothers and sisters. Some of these include treating one'e little brother or sister to a movie or hamburger, or brining them to one's dorm to spend the night.

Circle K usually has something going every month. To finance the Christmas dance, a raffle is held with the winner receiving a dinner for two at Darryl's. (Sounds like a great way to start off the evening before the dance!) Circle K is again this year sponsoring the Medic Blood Drive which they originated last year.

Circle K is open to anyone who is interested, and one may join at any time. So, if you do have an interest, drop in on one of the club's meetings in Fayerweather 201, Thursday nights at 7:00 p.m. If you can't make one of the meetings, see one of the officers: Pres. Dave Denshaw, Vice-President, Lisa Yacks, Secretary Sharon Pimm, or Treasurer Joe Longo. Join now - it's really a lot of fun!

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK

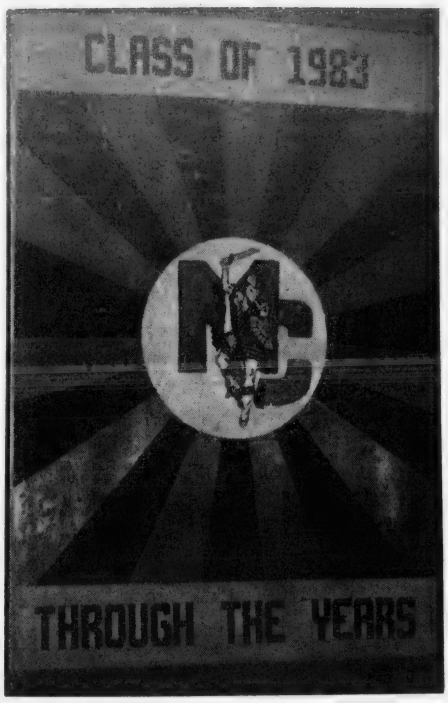
Member FDIC

MC President Wayne Anderson escorts 1981 Homecoming Queen Mary Jane Babich while holding the tiara intended for her successor, Kathy Long.

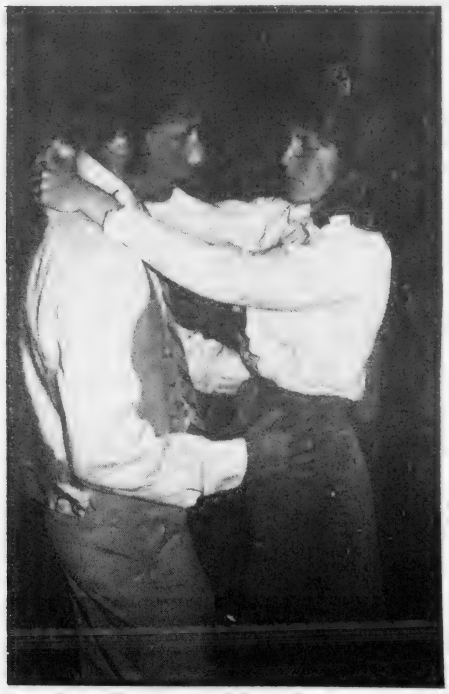
Bryan McFarland gives Kathy Long a congratulatory hug as she is announced Homecoming Queen.

This year's Homecoming game was the first MC game ever televised. WBIR was on campus throughout the week covering various aspects of MC and Homecoming events.

Chilly temperatures did not prevent these Davis residents from working on their float for Friday's parade.

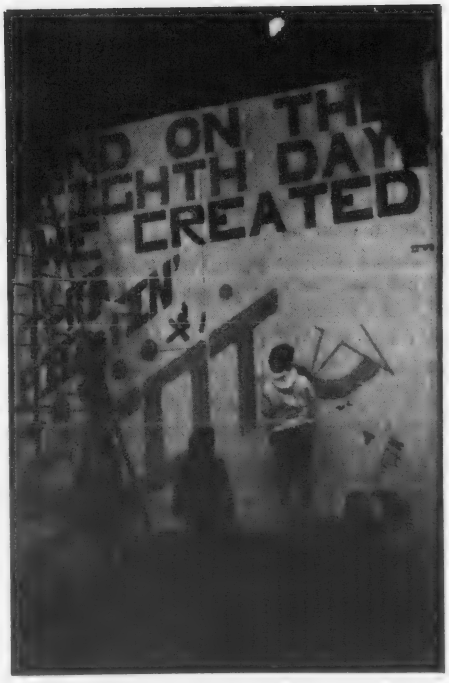


Football team captains Alex Albert and Gene Wheatley gave their pre-game comments at the pep-rally Friday night.

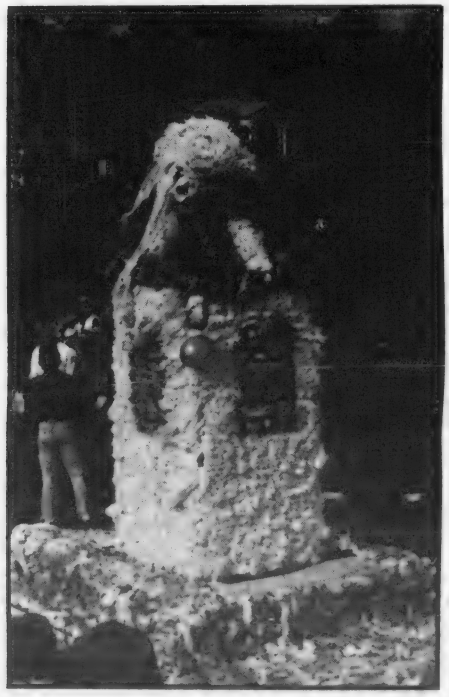


Homecoming Weekend

1982



Photos by Kathy Blair



MC's classes showed talent and spirit in the wall painting contest, but the Seniors came out with this winning entry.

Alumnus George Cassutto takes his turn dancing with Queen Kathy Long at the Homecoming Dance Saturday night.

Sophomore class members worked hard Thursday on their entry in the wall contest, a variation on the popular MC saying "And on the eighth day, God created the Fighting Scots."

Davis' winning float (minus its riders).

Religion & Higher Education

by Joe Wynne
Echo Staff Writer

Part I Campus Ministries: Boom and Bust

(The following is the first of a two part series. It deals with the leaders of the campus ministries. Part two will center on the students who take part in such programs.)

The generalization that institutions of higher learning are places where students shed the religious life for more secular intellectual concerns may have been true twenty years ago. However, the present generation of college students has found that the religious life can add meaning to the barrage of ideas and information they face at college. That Christian students can fuse religion and higher education into a workable lifestyle is testimony to campus religious leaders who understand their needs and coordinate their activities.

Peter Vial, Maryville College campus chaplain, organizes religious activities from the newly refurbished Center for Campus Ministry aptly located at the hub of the campus. His office is filled with chairs and sofas. It is a place for meeting and talking with people. From it he recalls changed in the college religious scene in the last decade, and notes a general trend back to traditional values.

"The school has hired a full-time chaplain. The school has put a chunk of money into remodeling this building saying 'this part of campus life is important and it will be done,' " he explains. Ten years ago the chaplain was part time, and there was less of an emphasis on religious life.

Vial admits that he doesn't know exactly why the emphasis was on other considerations, but attributes the change to the complex interplay between social priorities, college preferences, and student needs of the times.

The college kids a decade ago, according to him, 'tuned in' and 'dropped out' of society by rejecting all types of institutions, the Church being a major one. A big religious emphasis by the school would have met quite a different reception by students then.

"Here now, we've got a bunch of students who are interested in their own personal faith who want to help others grow." At Maryville they do this through activities such as the Campus Fellowship Group which meets for bible studies, group discussion, and outside projects.

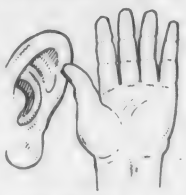
Vial works with students who want to talk about their faith and discover their relationship with God, and so does Father Devenney (or "Father Mike" as the students know him) of the John XXIII Catholic Center of the University of Tennessee. His office is almost identical to Vial's except for the tape player surrounded by cassettes of "Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young,' 'The Beatles,' and 'Linda Rondstadt' among others. Sometimes, on Sundays when he meets with individuals of his congregation, crying can be heard from there.

Father Mike is a vibrant, understanding man who as a Paulist priest specializes in ministering to the needs of college students. He has been on college campuses from Clemson to UCLA. He, like Vial, went to College within a different social attitude. However, Father Mike disagrees as the direction from which the pendulum has swung.

"I would not say that kids are going back to traditional values in terms of they had left them. I don't think the kids from the 60's or 70's did leave them. They just expressed them differently . . . they looked at it more in 'big issue' terms." To him they were less involved with a personal concept of God than the attitude, 'we have to all be together or all is lost.'

This attitude led to students fighting for 'the cause' and through this activity discovering God. This contrasts with the process for students today who are led to causes via their strengthened relationship to God. "Serious Catholics," says Father Mike, "who have come to understand what their faith really is start to become more involved socially."

Consequences, then, of the search for the personal religious experience are two-fold. Not only do students (in both secular and religiously based schools) feel that community service is necessary for individual fulfillment, but they seek something with which to base their values -- the Bible.



"I think among Catholic kids there is a much greater interest in the Bible than in the 60's and 70's . . . (they) are dealing with evangelical fundamentalism -- looking at what Jerry Falwell has to say, coming on 'Well, some of this sounds pretty good to me, but some of it doesn't seem to ring true.' They are searching to find out why some of it sounds good and what part of it they want," Father Mike adds. John XXIII sponsors bible study courses, retreats, and meetings, so that they can do so.

Through his own types of discussion groups, Peter Vial enables the Maryville student to come to grips with the complex issues involved in interpreting the meaning of the Scriptues. When personal interpretation is the rule, knowledge and experience are invaluable in forming the necessary confidence and expertise.

Community service is an important part of the religious student's experience, of course, which in turn leads that student to value service even more. Hence

See RELIGION, P. 7

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In
THE ECHO EAR

Marathon: Mind over Matter

by Lee Bidwell

I was barely into my daily four mile run, when I found myself hopelessly out of breath and struggling to get up a very short, gradual hill. I thought of those amazing people who ran the New York City Marathon earlier this morning. I could never run that far, I told myself, let along have the patience and endurance to train for it. Discouraged, I pushed myself on. Then, as I covered another mile, my mind started dwelling on the word "marathon" (the further I run, the more bizarre my stream-of-consciousness becomes). When I had told myself I could never complete a marathon, I was using a sportscaster's technical definition--twenty-six miles three hundred eighty-five yards. However, if you define a marathon as a goal- a challenge - you set for yourself - one that takes a lot of preparation ("training") to sucessfully meet - then every one of us is in a marathon every day. This may sound phony, but life is a marathon. The training schedule is basically daily routine. Before you laugh at and toally reject my "theory," just stop and think about why you are at Maryville College. Most likely it is because you have a goal (or goals) you want to meet, and you think a college education is important to your training program.

But the marathon can be broken into a series of smaller marathons. Just as Alberto Salazar or Greta Waltz set goals for each of the twenty-six miles (to get up a hill in a certain time, for example), we set smaller goals to meet. Graduating from Maryville College is a four year (more or less) marathon; each class is a ten week marathon; term papers and tests are marathons.

The point is we all have a goal or purpose in life that takes total dedication, persistence, and stamina to realize. If that is not a marathon, then what is it? Our "marathon" is more abstract and takes longer to finish (except in my case it would probably take me a lifetime to run that far) than the New York City Marathon, but nevertheless, the "run" is just as rigorous.

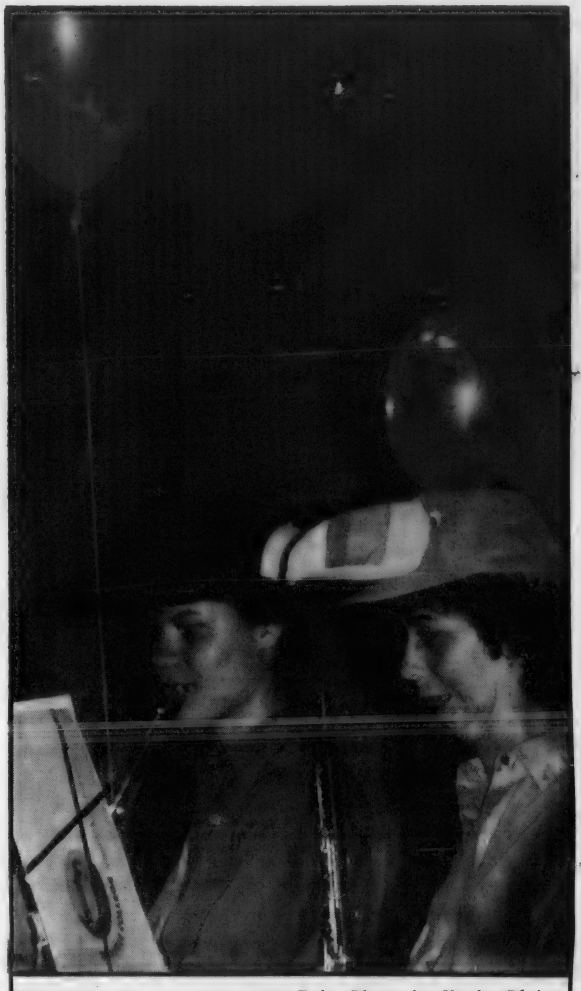
Now that I've written down these "deep" thoughts, I sit here wondering what prompted me to do so. The answer seems to be two-fold. First, I am trying to console myself for not being able to run twenty-six miles. Secondly, and more importantly, it's during this time of the term that I need motivation to keep me going. Maybe the idea that I'm running a marathon can keep me going.

Well, I better end this essay and read some Modern African Stories, or I am going to fall behind in my training schedule for the marathon of leading discussion in Non-Western this Wednesday.

Coffee House Brimming with Talent

MC kicked off Homecoming weekend last Friday night with the annual Coffee House. Emceed by Tom Hudson and Beckie Haynes, the 22 act show staged some of Maryville's best talent.

Jean Plant and Sharon Pimm led off the evening singing "The Rose". Bryan McFarland followed with three songs, one "for love", one "for life", and one "for fun." Other Coffee House singers included Toko Masilo, Tracy DePue, and Cynthia "Simp" Broughton and Trent Gilmore in a duet, with Trent on the piano.



Marta Wittig teamed with Kathy Balent for a number and sang a solo, and Tom Hudson and Gerald Burnett joined forces to sing about the MC "trenches". Jeff Hayes, Theresa Welch, Jeana Webb, Debbie Hall, Maelea Morrison with Bill Bender, and Angela Kirby rounded out the singers. Special thanks go to all the accompanists, who did an excellent job.

The music was not confined to singing, however. Andrea Vousden on flute joined oboist Barb Booker for some not-so-serious "serious" music. Andrea also appeared with Scarlett Carson for the piano-flute duet of "McArthur Park." Donnie Sawyer and Jim Huenke captured the audience with their "dueling pianos" version of the popular Alan Parson's Project song "Eye in the Sky."Elton John gave a surprise concert in the form of Susan Williams, Evelyn Sowell, and Kim Hatfield, while the "Beauty Shop Quartet" comprised of Laurie Woodhull, Gloria Anaple, Libba Gillum, and Kelly Fitzgerald combined comedy with harmony.

Signing for Coffee House were Jina Radozycki and Jean Plant. Jina signed a James Taylor favorite, while Jean reminded everyone of life at camp with "Hello Mudda."

Rounding out the evening were two bands. One band, "No the Score," made its Coffee House debut. It featured MC student Kevin Crothers. The other band, an MC favorite, was "Johnny Radical and the Stereo Anarchist Regime," with Lisa Yacks, Julie Humpert, David Denshaw, Kevin Crothers, and Danny Cartlidge. As usual they were worth the wait, and made the fall Coffee House end on an upbeat.

Special recognition should go to the Student Programming Committee, Matt Cragle, and all the others who helped put the Coffee House together.

Echo Photo by Kathy Blair

Was that a part of the act? Barb Booker grimaces at Andrea Vousden during their oboe-flue duet Friday night at Coffee House.

Concert Slated

There will be a concert in the FAC Music Hall, at 8:15 p.m., Friday, October 29, for the benefit of the East Tennessee Kidney Foundation. Admission to the concert is free; there will be a pitch made for donations to the Kidney Foundation. The MC community is cordially invited to attend.

The concert will feature Florie Cartlidge and Carol Ann Smalley, duet pianists, in music by J.S. Bach and Paul Creston. Cartlidge and Smalley will be accompanied in the Bach Concerto for Two Pianos by a string quartet composed from players of MACCO and the Knoxville Symphony.

The program will also include Claude Bolling's Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano with Florie Cartlidge, piano, Dave Cartlidge, flute, Dan Cartlidge, bass, and John Papone, percussion. Mr. Papone, a professional musician from Boston, will also present a percussion improvisation.

Echo Ear

"See, there was this bear and a rabbit in the woods . . It gets funnier everytime I tell it!" T.W.

Hey J.J. – Does A.L. have good taste in jewelry? We noticed he does!

Did you hear about the hot show at Cinema Six -- A.B.? Better RUN and catch it!

Hey Chilly-Willy– Is it really cold outside?

Hey S.C. – Why don't you paint your face more often?

S.C. -- We hear you've taken up jogging on I-40!

J.T. – No message, we just know how much you like to see your name in print!

Hey S.V. – I hear that X marks the spot!

I'd like to extend a special thanks to all of the people who helped to build the Davis dorm float. We couldn't have done it without your interest and assistance. Also a real special heaping bunch of thanks to David Sanchez, the man who was indispensible!

Thanks, Momma D.

RELIGION, From P. 6

the need for the campus ministries in institutions of higher learning is vital, and the dedication of their leaders is a welcome example.

Father Mike has a large stuffed hippopotamus against one of the walls in his office. A graduating student gave it to him to give to someone who needed it. There is a little girl in the hospital who will soon receive it as a gift, her smile being a symbol of what campus ministries can do.

Yet it may be that the delicate and inconsistent interplay of forces may lead to another shift of priorities away from the campus ministries. Peter Vial sits with his chin in his hand, looking out his window toward nothing and everything. "In that case we'll die. We'll just die."

See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
CALL TODAY 982-4502

Echo photo by Bill Argyle

Rethabile Masilo goes for the ball in Friday's soccer match against Catholic University.

Majors Mar Homecoming

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

The Majors of Millsaps rolled into Maryville Saturday to take part in the first-ever televised game from Honaker field. With the game being broadcasted throughout East Tennessee and Kentucky, the Scots came no closer than a 7-7 tie in the first half. The Majors went on to win 29-14.

The offense for the Scots had problems early in the game; in that, they stopped themselves with mistakes. After Millsaps scored on a fake field goal pass from Livingston to Powell, the Scots started to gel. Maryville drove the ball 62 yards and scored on the fourth play of the second quarter with Mike Surrency taking it in from the two. The drive was aided by some hard-nosed running from Glen Katz who had 75 yards on 11 carries for his day's work.

Millsaps then started another drive, but a fumble stopped them. The Scots returned the favor when O'Brien fumbled at Maryville's 38 yard-line. Robert Lenoir later scored the go-ahead touchdown. He had 140 yards for the day, with 51 of them coming from the opening play of the third quarter.

The Scots scored their last touchdown with Pat O'Brien rolling out to his right on a designed running play. He then cut back across the grain and dove into the end zone.

Maryville received some great defensive plays by seniors John Cockfield and Alex Albert. Cockfield had one fumble recovery and was in on numerous tackles as was Albert. But the play of the front line was not able to stop the Majors long; the linebackers and secondary were just a little too young Saturday.

This week the Scots will travel to Randolph-Macon in their final ODAC contest.

V-Ball Winds Down

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots Volleyball team rebounded from their performance of two weeks ago and got it all together last week to win all four of their matches, bringing their record to 20-9. The Ladies picked up wins over North Greenville Junior College, Mars Hill, King, and Carson-Newman.

On Wednesday, the Lady Scots travelled to Mars Hill, N.C., to play North Greenville and Mars Hill. The Lady Scots were able to defeat North Greenville 15-6, 11-15, 15-3. Coach Brown commented that North Greenville was a better team than what she had expected. Although the Lady Scots were downed in the second game, they were able to collect themselves and win the match. The match went down in the win column, but since North Greenville is a junior college the match will not be used in figuring out the regional or national rankings. The match that figured heavily in the ranking was the one against Mars Hill which the Ladies won 13-15,15-7,15-9. Coch Brown said that Leah Gross and Rachel Reese were offensive producers for Maryville with Leah serving critical points in the match. She went on to say that the Mars Hill squad was very up for the match. The Lady Scots got behind in the first game but were again able to bounce back and win the match.

The theme of being able to bounce back ran all through the Lady Scots' matches this past week as the team continued its winning ways on Thursday night at King College. The Lady Scots defeated King 17-15 and 15-7, and then defeated Carson-Newman 15-11 and 16-14. Coach Brown said that having three starters under the weather could have caused some problems, but that the team was able to pull together and play their best considering the circumstances. She also added that the team showed great character in being down and being able to come back to win. An example of such character was the team's 16-14 win over C–N after being down earlier in the game 14-7.

Coach Brown said that with each win the Lady Scot's chances for post-season play look better and better. The format for this year's post-season play is as follows: the top eight teams in the nation get a bye; the next sixteen teams will be sent to eight sites with two teams at each site. The winners of the first round and the eight bye teams will be sent to four sites with four teams at each site. The winners from those four sites will meet at San Diego for the Final Four Tournament. Coach Brown feels that the Milligan Tournament on October 29th and 30th and the November 10th match against UTC and Western Carolina at Chattanooga are the critical matches for the rest of the season. Remember -- the final home match for the regular season is November 2 at 7:00 p.m. against Carson-Newman. Come cheer the Ladies on to victory and possible post-season play.

Soccer Showing Skill

by Rethabile Masilo
Echo Sports Writer

In many of the recent games played by the MC soccer team, improvement, when compared to the earlier performances, has been apparent. This can be verified not so much by the statistics, but by the people who have attended some of the recent games. One who noticed was the Catholic University coach, who congratulated the Scots and said he "came to Maryville expecting an easy victory." After the first half, the referee came to me and "They (Catholic) came here to teach YOU soccer." I sort of got the impression that according to him, it was the other way around. The game ended in a 2-1 victory in favor of Catholic.

The following day, October 23, MC played King College in a game that, according to MC fans, was the most exciting of the season. The Scots lost after 2 hours and 10 minutes of soccer had been played. A game is usually 1½ hours long, but because this one was a quarter-final--someone had to win. The regular time went by with the two teams at a tie. Two periods of 20 mintues each were then awarded by the referee, but the tie remained as the overtime periods ended. The referees, therefore, had to resort to penalty kicks, by which King College won the game. Next Saturday MC plays Lynchburg at home. The support of its fans, which has been very much appreciated, will be needed to bolster the team to victory.

Ladies Looking to Win

by Kathy Walker
Echo Sports Writer

Maryville College Women's Soccer Club suffered two substantial losses against U.T. and Vanderbilt the weekend of October 16 and 17.

The first loss was against U.T. in Knoxville. The absence of several starting players left the team bewildered and the final score was U.T. 5, MC 0. Yet, the score doesn't give credit to the hard work accomplished by the defense. Amy Nicholson, Louise Donahue, and Julie Humpert displayed the immense effort needed to create a strong defense. Unfortunately, MC's offense was weak: there was not even one shot on UT's goal. Without aid from the offense, the defense could not withstand UT's domination.

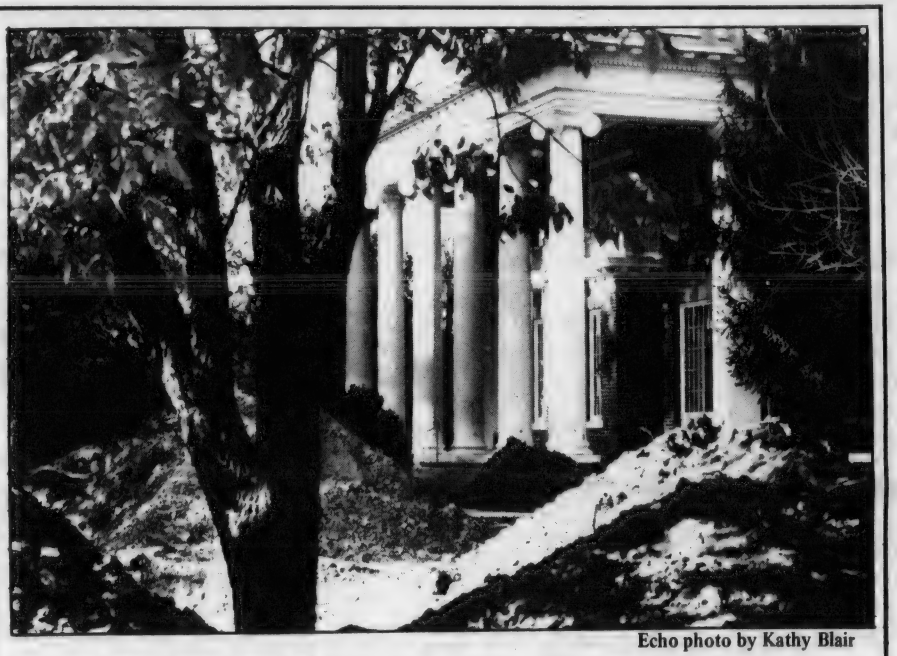
Sunday's game against Vanderbilt resulted in a bigger heartbreak. Vandy's teamwork and skill displayed a high caliber soccer team. Vandy had the skill and excellence needed for a successful team. Vanderbilt stomped MC 8-0.

The Women's Soccer Club plays UT at home on October 26th and hopes the home field advantage will pay off.

The Soccer Club would like to send a special Get Well Wish to their captain Mary Hughes, who won't be able to play the next few weeks due to illness.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 6 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, November 4, 1982



ACC To Reopen Calendar Debate

by Susan Jennings

The All-College Council approved a motion introduced by Dean Strickland to reopen study of the academic calendar issue at the October 13th meeting. This motion will revitalize the familiar trimester vs. semester debate. Under this proposal the executive officers of the ACC will appoint a representative committee composed of faculty and students to conduct a study of this matter. They will recommend to the Council at its December meeting whether to continue or discontinue the present calendar. Should discontinuance be recommended this committee will present replacement options.

In other action, Susan Jennings was elected assistant secretary of the ACC by acclamation, and Hubert Dixon was elected parliamentarian also by acclamation.

The next ACC meeting will be December 1st at 2:30 in Anderson 304. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

MC . . . a small liberal arts college nestled in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains . . .

Board Analyzes MC

by Jenny Fitzell
Echo Staff Writer

MC President Dr. Wayne Anderson at the fall semi-annual MC Board of Directors meeting announced that MC has for the fourth consecutive fiscal year operated with a balanced budget. Last year's balanced budget of $5.4 million is one in a continuing series since he assumed the presidency in 1977.

President Anderson attributed the College's financial responsibility to the continuing efforts of individual department budget managers to monitor budget control systems and to private gifts and grants. The college received $1,801,753.37 from 2,691 contributors in this past year's annual fund drive, a substantial increase in the number of donors, Dr. Anderson reported.

The Board of Directors also reviewed MC's institutional self-study report for accredidation by the Southern Association of American Colleges and Schools.

The Board elected Edwin Best, a retired budget analyst for TVA and a 1936 alumnus, as its vice chairman.

In other action, the board dedicated a garden, planted in front of the CCM by a volunteer work group from the Sebring Presbyterian Church of Sebring, Ohio, to Edward Gordon Humphreys, the deceased husband of board member Bernice Anderson Humphreys. Edward Humphreys was very active in both Memphis and Shelby County community and civic affairs. He was a farmer who earned a teaching degree from Memphis State University but chose to return to farming and become active in local business. According to Dr. Anderson, Mr. Humphreys had a strong interest in MC, and his wife has continued that interest.

Campus Calendar

Friday, November 5

"God's Favorite," Theatre, 8:15 p.m.

Saturday, November 6

Football vs. Knoxville College, there, 1:30 p.m.

"God's Favorite," Theatre, 8:15 p.m.

Sunday, November 7

Vespers service at Look Rock - leave from CCM at 4:00 p.m. (Dinner will be brought along for those who attend)

Monday, November 8

Backrubs sponsored by the Outdoor Club, 10-11 p.m., Davis Lobby.

Tuesday, November 9

"You, Me, Us" series movie, "Men's Lives," 7:30, Dorm I. Dr. John Hardwig will be the facilitator.

Student Recital, 7:00 p.m., FAC.

Wednesday, November 10

"God's Favorite" matinee, 2:45 p.m.

Volleyball, away

Editorial

Echoes from the past...

In trying to come up with a topic for this week's editorial, I leafed through some of the old Echoes filed away in the Echo office. I picked up the February 19, 1966 copy of the Echo and read an article entitled "I Could Have Dunced All Night." Even though it's obviously not something written in 1982 it still sounds familiar to many MC students. Since this week marks the beginning of the final marathon to the term's end, I decided this would be an appropriate addition to this week's Echo. For all of the late night typers in the days to come -- this is for you.

"I Could Have Dunced All Night" (adapted from The Holcad, Westminister College, New Wilmington, Pennsylvania)

7:00 Back from dinner, brush teeth, sharpen pencils, locate books and notes, announce to everyone on the hall, "Tonight I am going to study!" Settle down at the desk (with, naturally, a good study lamp and proper posture) for a long, winter's night.

7:10 Roommate bursts into room crying. A fight with her boyfriend, it seems.

7:11 Begin long condolence speech on the fickleness of all men and the advisability of throwing oneself into study to forget all about the beastly creatures until one emerges, fat and forty-five, as a near-sighted spinster with a Ph.D. in Sanskirt. Roommate, who had stopped crying for a moment, begins sobbing hysterically.

7:30 Run for wet towels for hysterical roommate.

7:32 Roommate receives a buzzer. Caller in the lounge.

7:32½ Operation Renovation goes into immediate effect to repair crying damage on roommate.

7:50 Roommate descends in majestic indifference to lounge.

7:55 Settle down to study.

7:56 Hunger strikes!

9:00 Return from coffee break at the 49'er. Roommate still out.

10:45 Finish skimming last 6 weeks of back history reading.

11:00 Roommate bursts into room joyful. All is well. Let's hear it for love!

11:45 Complete long congratulations speech to roommate on the many virtues of her dearly beloved.

11:50 Coffee Break.

12:35 Finish heated lecture to girl down the hall on the necessity of keeping up in one's studies.

12:40 Go to take a shower. Lights all out in showerroom. Nothing but cold water. Soap in the eyes. Yecchhh.

1:15 Finish first aid on injured toe. Attempt to convince roommate it needs a leg splint and long weeks of recuperation in the hospital, thereby forcing you, against your will, to miss finals.

1:17 Roommate is ungraciously sleeping.

1:20 Begin writing 10-page term paper due at 8:00 this morning.

2:45 Coffee Break to celebrate finishing introductory paragraph.

3:00 Sudden domestic inspiration. Clean entire room. Polish furniture. Wake rommate after accidentally dropping mop across her bed.

3:31 Back to paper.

4:00 Listen to chimes. Contemplate developing measles to explain late term paper.

4:04 Discard coma. Contemplate suicide.

4:06 Cowardice. Back to paper.

4:08 Discard idea of finishing rough draft. Genius does not need preparation. Begin typing paper.

5:45 Begin to see hallucinations. Was that the ghost of Christmas past? (passed without doing any homework, obviously). Coffee Break!

6:05 Still typing.

6:15 Notice sky beginning to lighten. Notice head beginning to lighten.

6:16 Back to typing.

7:25 Continue typing paper in semi-mesmeric state. Develop original style of footnoting and bibliography.

7:56 Roommate wakes up cheerfully "Good morning!"

7:57 Exit, in direction of Anderson Hall, bearing treasure.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

"God's Favorite" at MC

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

Comedy has been elected, and Neil Simmon's hit play "God's Favorite" is the script as the Maryville College Playhouse opens the 1982-83 season this Friday night, November 5, at 8:15 p.m. in the College Theatre.

In the cast, Robert A. "Archie" Ellis (Vice President for Development at MC) plays the leading role of Joe Benjamin, Senior Bryan McFarland (Roswell, Ga.) plays God's unlikely messenger, Sydney Lipton, Senior Jean Plant (Ft. Myers, Fla.) plays Benjamin's scatter-brained wife, Rose, and Senior Tom Hudson (Hughsonville, N.Y.) plays the alcoholic son David Benjamin. The twins, Sarah and Ben Benjamin, will be played by Senior Kathy Long (Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.) and Junior Tommy Brown (Lithia, Fla.). Supporting roles are played by Junior Pamela Nelson (Maryville, Tn.) and Freshman Charlie Parsons (Elmira, N.Y.). Directing the play is MC Theater Director Don Thomas.

The play is noted as a modern-day Job story that, said Thomas, "comes closer than ever before to an outright challenge of middle class values by a middle cass hero" in which Simon's characters are "intimidated by middle class standards of morality that often lead to a lifelong emotional stagnation." According to Thomas, Simon's appeal stems from his unique ability to mix humor and pain to achieve a real dramatic depth.

The play is scheduled to run November 5,6,11-13, at 8:15 each evening, and a special dollar matinee is scheduled for Wednesday, November 10, at 2:45 p.m. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $2.50 for students and senior citizens, except the matinee.

MACCO Pops Concert

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO) opened their 1982-83 season with their first Pops Concert on Tuesday, October 26, at 8:15 p.m. in the Maryville College Wilson Chapel under the direction of new director David Hoffecker.

The featured music constitutes a program of light classics and Broadway tunes. The music of Beethoven, Dvorak, Berlioz, and Johann Strauss was featured while medleys from the Broadway shows "West Side Story" and "The Sound of Music" were highlighted.

Following the concert, an informal reception was given in which patrons were invited to meet the Orchestra members and Hoffecker. Director Hoffecker and his wife, Melinda, recently moved to Maryville from LaCrosse, Wisconsin, with their four children. In Wisconsin, Hoffecker was director of instrumental ensembles and a teacher of brass instruments at Viterbo College.

This concert was one of five scheduled for this year's season. Upcoming concerts include the annual Christmas Festivel Concert (December 14), a Pops Concert slated for February which will feature guest guitarist Chet Atkins (February 15), and the annual Concerto Competition featuring local artists and Alcoa Foundation Affiliate Artist John Cimino, baritone, (April 19), and the Children's Concert (May 15).

FAC-ts

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

Pianist Jane Abbott was featured as the guest musician in the second Performing Artists Concert Tuesday, November 2, at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Miss Abbott's active career includes her resident professorship in piano at Baylor University in Texas as well as being a soloist accompanist, and adjudicator. In her list of achievements, she has won the Corpus Christi Symphony Bach Contest at 11, contests sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs at 17, and awards from the Texas State Music Teachers Association. She has performed with both the San Antonio and Houston Symphonies.

She received her Bachelor and Master's degree with high distinction and the coveted Performer's certificate from Indiana University. She has studied with instructors Sidney Foster, Frank Mannheimer, and Menahem Pressler in the U.S.A., Stanislav Neuhaus in Vienna, and Carlos Zecchi in Salzburg.

Tickets for the performance were $3.00.

See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
CALL TODAY 982-4502

The Bank Card 24 hr
Serves You
Any Hour of Any Day
Do All These with THE BANK 24:
• Cash Withdrawals • Deposits • Transfer Money • Loan and MasterCard Payments • Verify Your Balance
The Bank of maryville
"Since 1885"
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Featuring . . .
Linda Carroll
at the
HOUSE OF HAIR
THE SALON FOR FAMILY HAIR STYLING
Jack Coker and Kenneth Melton, owners
321 High Street Dial 982-4584

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In
THE ECHO EAR

Volleyball Nets Winning Season

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots Volleyball team had a fairly successful schedule last week as they went 7-2 for the week which brings their record to 27-11. It was however, one of those losses that resulted in the Lady Scots bringing home the second place trophy from the Milligan Tournament.

The team started the week by picking up wins over the University of the South and Covenant on Tuesday night. On Thursday, the team travelled to Milligan College for the Milligan Invitational on Friday and Saturday. Friday's action was nonstop as the Lady Scots played four times (three in a row). The team picked up wins over King, Mars Hill, and Bryan, but they lost a close one to UNC Ashville to end the day. On Saturday morning the Lady Scots disposed of Milligan and then rolled over Liberty Baptist to meet Mars Hill in the finals. Unfortunately, Mars Hill picked up that game to pick up their first and only win against Maryville for the season, thus leaving Maryville with the second place trophy. Each one on the team played well, having at least one outstanding game, but the team had some trouble pulling together in the final two games against Mars Hill which led to the Lady Scots downfall.

By the time you read this, the team will have travelled to Dayton to play Bryan and Trevecca and returned home to play their final home match against Carson-Newman. The only remaining match will be against UTC and Western Carolina on the tenth at Chattanooga.

Before the season is over, two players that deserve special recognition are seniors Rachel Reese and Masumi Mitsutomi. Rachel, who has played for the four years that she's been at Maryville, will be sorely missed next year. She has been a major factor in the Lady Scots post-season play and has provided leadership for this year's team. Masumi in her first year at Maryville has fit in very well with the team's style of play. She has adapted well to many new ideas that have been presented to her, and her consistent (sometimes excellent) play will also be missed next year.

The team would like to thank all those fans who have supported them this year, for the fans always help the team to win.

Randy-Mac Tops MC 14-7

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

Last Saturday the Scots of Maryville College travelled to Ashland, VA to take on the Yellow Jackets of Randolph-Macon in the Scots' final ODAC game. The Scots who gained 433 yards in total offense had little trouble with the team in yellow and black, but they couldn't defeat their own mistakes and the team in black and white stripes.

The defense of the Scots yielded only one long drive (app. 95 yards) of the day and held R-M to 252 yards. Randolph-Macon scored its first touchdown after a Pat O'Brien pass was intercepted. Randolph-Macon's second touchdown came in the fourth quarter when Troy Israel (13 carries for 89 yards) scored from the one.

The defense was led by some outstanding line-play and strong support from the linebackers and secondary. John Cockfield, Alex Albert, and Tony Mitchell led the Scots front line of defense with support from linebackers Jim Carr, Scott Collins, John McLeod, and Bob Aucker. The secondary was led by some great open field tackles by Paul Anagnostis, Bob McQuade, Pepe Prado, and Jeff Briggs.

The offense which was unstoppable in-between the 20's could not capitalize on their good fortune and scored only once. Mike Surrency and Glen Katz led the Scots on the ground with 91 yards and 60 yards respectively. Through the air, the Scots received crucial catches from Shannon O'Brien, Mark Araujo, and Gene Wheatley. But the Scots couldn't overcome their four turnovers and several bad ball placements by the officials.

The Scots scored their first touchdown with Pat O'Brien taking it in from the seven. Then with the Scots driving once again the refs hurt the Scots with a poor placement on a crucial fourth down play. With the score tied 7-7 and the Scots having a fourth-and-one inside Randolph-Macon's five-yard line, the refs ruled that the ball was dead behind the original line of scrimmage when actually O'Brien had gained enough yardage for the first down. Then later in the game the Scots were again inside Randolph-Macon's ten-yard line when Mike Surrency fumbled the ball while trying for extra yards.

The Scots who finished the ODAC season at 1 and 4 take on the Knoxville College Bulldogs Saturday at 1:30 at Austin-East Stadium.

Soccer Finishes Season

by Rethabile Masilo
Echo Sports Writer

MC soccer added one more "achievement" to its growing list last Saturday when it lost 3-1 to Lynchburg College, rated number four in the nation. The Lynchburg squad showed a lot of discipline and skill, both of which enabled them to set up many potential goals. The Scots had, apart from discipline, determination of a rapid nature--hence only three goals for Lynchburg, whereas last year the score was 7-0 against MC. It has really been a great pleasure for me, and no doubt for all the other players, to be part of this soccer program. It is now over and as we anxiously await the next season, we would like to thank everybody who showed interest in the sport, with the belief that the next time we will have much more support than we did this fall.

Ladies' B-ball Outlook

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

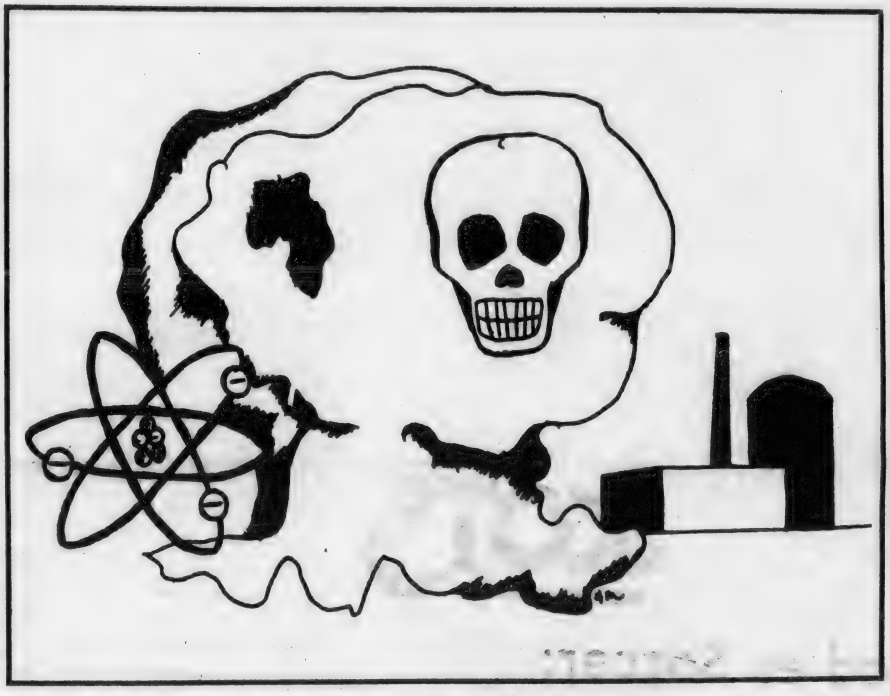
The Lady Scots Basketball team is starting to gear up for the 1982-83 season with daily practice and work out sessions. In a phrase; The Lady Scots are going into a new year with a look of "something-old something new."

The "new" for this year include a new head coach, new uniforms, and a new manager. This years head coach is Mrs. Brenda Cooper. Coach Cooper is no stranger to the Maryville basketball program as she was the assistant coach for the 1980-81 and 1981-82 seasons. She comes to Maryville by way of the University of Georgia where she received her master's degree in 1980 and Erskine College in South Carolina where she lettered in basketball, volleyball, and softball. She said that she was really excited about this year and very happy to be the new head coach. The new uniforms are supposed to be really impressive and the whole team is waiting anxiously to put them on and begin the season. Assisting Coach Cooper this year with the managerial duties is Nickie Frazier.

The "old" for this season are the players who, except for Barb Hogan, a wing player, played for the Lady Scots last year. Coach Cooper said that with five seniors, the team should have strong leadership. This year's seniors include: Kim Allen, 5'8" - has one of the best outside shots in the area, Candy Nutter, 5'8" forward - Maryville's first female all-American her sophomore year, Melissa Sullivan 6'2" forward - is looked to for her defensive play, Robin Rimmer 5'8" guard - runs point with a cool head and good speed, and Rachel Reese 5'8" guard - very effective shooter from 20-25 feet as well as a very intense player. The rest of the team is rounded out by sophomores that include: Trina (Coggins) Fancher 5'9" forward - great hustle and some fine basketball talent, Stacy Medlin 5'-6" guard - an agressive player who can shoot well fro the top of the key, Robi Simmons 5'5" guard - e tremely quick with ou standing ball handling skill Sara Covington 5'10" fo ward - very aggressive insid with fine inside shootin abilities, and Mimi Chesne 5'8" guard - good win shooter and very consiste at the free throw line.

The outlook for this se son is a tough schedule, li last year's, which will hop fully see the Lady Sco turn those close games th they lost last year into wi this year. Coach Cooper not as yet quite sure w the starters will be, but s expects everyone to see tion this year. The La Scots open their season against Knoxville College very physical (to say t least) team on Novemb 29th at Knoxville and th open at home on Decemb 1st at 7:00 against the U versity of the South. T Lady Scots are planning a great season so why do you come out and be a p of it by adding your s port as a fan.

the Highland ECHO



Vol. 68 No. 7 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, November 11, 1982

Zeroing In On The Bomb

by Jeana Webb
Echo Staff Writer

10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1-0!! Zero or Ground Zero, as it is called, is the time and place the nuclear bomb hits. Ground Zero talks about what happens to the land and the people living around where it hits. As the upperclassmen remember, last year there was a Ground Zero week held here at MC. There was a peace rally and other meetings explaining what Ground Zero was. Interested? Good! Read on!

This Thursday, November 11, is Veteran's Day. The group that organized Ground Zero week, The Peace Education Task Force, has prepared a convocation dealing with the First Strike issue. This is dealing with the question as to whether we should sign a statement saying we will not be the first nation to drop the BOMB. And it talks about getting Russia to also issue such a statement. Want to get involved?

Thursday during C-Hour (Come on professors, this is a good cause!) there will be a short movie shown in the Sutton Science Center dealing with the First Strike issue. This movie runs about twenty minutes. It will be shown again at 12:10 in the CCM. At 7:00 there will be a debate (place will be announced). The speakers will be people from outside the college community. They will be discussing the pros and cons of First Strike.

"We hope that people will come out and learn something about First Strike," says Barb Booker, co-chairperson of the Peace Education Task Force. This is something that is being done on other campuses this Veteran's Day. Want to know more about the Task Force?

Dr. Pickens and Barb Booker are co-chairpersons of the Task Force. It is not a club. It comes under the heading of Worship and Religious Programs Committees. The Task Force is a member of UCAM which is United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War. About 6 schools in Tennessee are involved in this. If you are interested, talk to anyone in the group and they will be glad to fill you in. The Peace Ed. Task Force plans to do more things as the year progresses, so it's not too late to get involved.

"It is really a frightening situation, but it is good to know that there is something being done -- there are people working to do something about the awful situation and that you can be a part of it. Every little voice helps!" says Barb.

BFW: B-R-E-A-D

by Mary Hughes
Echo Asst. Editor

Good News! Bread for the World realizes that people don't live by bread alone, so they have joined hands to feed America's hungry by educating the government about the proper bills to vote on in the legislature.

You do not have to be a member of Bread For The World to help. Simply write your congresspersons, asking them to support the "Preventing Hunger at Home" resolution to be introduced early in 1983.

Your letter should not be long. Address it to you representatives in Congress: Representative (or Representative elect) _____, Washington, D.C. 20515; Senator (or Senator elect) _____, Washington, D.C. 20510.

Stamp your envelope and include it in the "offering of letters" during Interim or mail it on your own. One short letter feeds people.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, November 11

Peace Day -
11:10, Sutton, and 12:10, CCM - Film on First Strike issue
7:00 p.m. - Debate, place and speakers to be announced
"God's Favorite," 8:15, Theatre

Friday, November 12

Men's Basketball exhibition against Windsor Basketball Club of Windsor, Ontario, Canada, 8:00, Gym
"God's Favorite," 8:15, Theatre

Saturday, November 13

Football vs. West Ga., there
"God's Favorite" final performance, 8:15, Theatre

Tuesday, November 16

"You, Me, Us" series film, "It Happens To Us," Davis Lobby, 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 17

Mid-Week Worship, CCM, 10:30 a.m.

Art Exhibit by Sharon Skinner in FAC Gallery through November 23

Editorial

I'm Not O.K., You're Not O.K.

by Mary Hughes
Echo Asst. Editor

For Lent last year I gave up the question, How are you? When the world blows up, I don't want God to accuse ME of being one of those people who blindly asks everyone how they are without truly caring.

Last winter I perched myself atop my loft ready to nosedive onto the multicolored carpet. As I pondered whether or not to leave a farewell note, my friend Jane burst through the door saying, "How are ya?" Without waiting for an answer, she grabbed my best dress from the closet and snipped, "Good. Gotta go–I'll give it back tomorrow." She gave me no chance to explain my suicidal state of affairs and didn't even question me when I told her she would NEVER have to give it back--EVER. She just tore out the door, ready for a night at Flanigans.

Last August, a little old lady, leaning against a blue Buick parked on Fifth Avenue and West Jake street just outside of New York City, lured my attention with the sweet question, "Hey honey, how are you?" Thinking her Buick might have a flat, I replied, "Fine" as I approached her. But before I could get ten steps closer to her, she whipped a .44 Caliber out of her crocheted and beaded handbag and snatched my wallet as I stood at gunpoint.

At least some New Yorkers have invented an original meaning for the dirty question, how are you? They really mean: I'm asking you this because I want to steal your money. The rest of the countryfolk are friendlier with their true meaning: I don't care how you are, but I should ask anyway because it just doesn't look good if I don't.

Unfortunately folks, very few people care how you are. And if you bother to explain your true condition anyway, very few people will listen.

I am certain that future generations in America will be born without ears. Evolution knows that American ears don't hear anyway, and genes can only stand so much lack of attention. But I'm sure that with ears or without, in sickness or in health, in earthquakes or amidst raging fire, Americans will always be "Just fine." Personally, I am giving up being "fine" for Lent this year.

books

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Outdoors Today

This is the first edition of "Outdoors Today." This Outdoor Club sponsored bulletin is designed to keep the College community abreast of activities and interests in which the Outdoor Club is participating.

The club has decided to widen its interests to include active support of environmental issues. We are hoping to do this by combining our efforts with those of an existing group, such as the Sierra Club or the Wilderness Society. We are now in the process of contacting such groups.

Nevertheless, we are still a recreational organization. A small group of six members braved the 90 foot cliff at Wesley Woods in a rappelling trip several weeks ago. Although a few came back with some cuts and bruises, it was still a "new", fun experience. A hastily prepared and planned weekend of rock climbing at Looking Glass Rock in Brevard, N.C. gave five members a very pleasurable weekend away from old MC-- and except for one person's flying face dive into a mud puddle -- we all arrived back safely.

The most recent event was a day of rock climbing at Look Rock, on Nov. 6th. This was for those who went rappelling last month. Mike Stevens of Wesley Woods Camp led the inexperienced crew on several climbs. However, it was the Outdoor Club's own Spiderman, David Sanchez, who really showed his skill as he used bellybutton suction to hang precariously from the rocks.

Keep your eyes open for signs about the Kayaking Seminar scheduled for the first week of Interim. Our climbing guide, Mike Stevens, will shed his E.B.'s and climb into a kayak to give a few pointers on "how not to drown while kayaking."

By the way, if you need equipment, hopefully we will soon have some to rent. We will post a list of available materials including rental fees as soon as we can. Also, if you have any suggestions for events and would be willing to help organize them, please let us know. (Box 2373). We can use your support.

Just a reminder to the new students on campus that you can get better-acquainted and save money too when you redeem the Campus Welcome coupons. The businesses are looking forward to meeting you and helping you feel "At Home" in the community.

They're redeeming coupons now, so get your share of the special savings. Visit Campus Welcome sponsors today.

CAMPUS WELCOME

FAC-ts !!

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The Maryville College Concert Choir will give their first Choir Concert of the 1982-83 season Thursday, November 18, at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

"Liefeslider Walzer" by Johannes Brahms and "A Jubilant Song" by Norman Dello Joio will be featured. Concert Choir soloists include Sopranos Karen Kotz (Senior), Diane McDaniel (Junior), and Tenor Jeff Hayes (Senior).

The choir will be accompanied by pianists Kama Cook (Junior) and Tracy DePue (Senior). Also accompanying the Choir will be pianist Tonya Wall who is a graduate at the University of Tennessee with a Masters in Piano Literature. Tonya Wall is planning an on-campus recital for February in which she will feature "Franck Sonata in A Major" by Franck for violin and piano. She will also accompany for "Fiddler on the Roof" slated for February.

Vocal and instrumental music students and majors presented a Student Recital this past Tuesday, November 9, at 7:00 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Organist Diane McDaniel performed "Fugue in A Minor" by Bach; Baritone Trent Gilmore sang "Vagabond" by Vaughan Williams and was accompanied on the piano by Kama Cook; Violist Barbara Morrow performed "Divertimento in C Major -- Allegro" by Mozart-Piatigorsky and was accompanied by Bill Bender; Tenor Jeff Hayes sang "Easter" by Vaughan Williams; accompanied by Diane McDaniel on the piano. And Diane McDaniel sang "Voiche Sapete (The Marriage of Figaro)" by Mozart, to the accompaniment of Maelea Morrison.

See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
CALL TODAY 982-4502

Echo Ear

The Eleventh Commandment decreed by the holier than the lowlier of Lloyd Hall: Thou shalt not have fun in Lloyd, especially on Fridays.

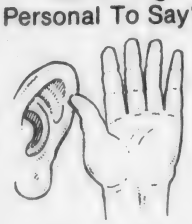
Hey D.C. & E.S. -- lost any flies lately?

S.V.--How's Perky and Budgy?

Hey Scots – Come on and fight, fight fight each other!

Sticks – How are your piano lessons going?

E.S. and G.R. – heard you're starting a new group, "The Drool Sisters."



Hey S.S. – Who's this? T.M.!!!

M.S. – Are you sure you want to leave for interim?! K.H.

M.A. -- Called home lately? S.W.

Who draws pregnant E.T.'s on the board??

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In
THE ECHO EAR

Two members of Maryville College's English faculty will take part in the fifty-second annual convention of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association in Atlanta on the 11th, 12th, and 13th of November. On the first day, Charlotte Beck will chair a session entitled "The Fugitive Legacy." Prof. William Pollard will read a paper entitled "Lady Bercilak and the 'Incarnation' of Gawain" in the Middle English section. SAMLA regularly attracts a large gathering of language and literature specialists from the Southeast, who present papers on all aspects of European and American language and literature.

Featuring . . .
Linda Carroll
at the
HOUSE OF HAIR
THE SALON FOR FAMILY HAIR STYLING
Jack Coker and Kenneth Melton, owners
321 High Street Dial 982-4584

Ladies Hope for Post-Season Play

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots Volleyball team showed great character and determination in their play last week. The Lady Scots went 2-1 for the week bringing their season total to 29-12.

On Monday, the team travelled to Dayton to play Trevecca and Bryan. The team went with seven players due to the withdrawal of Masumi Mitsutomi from the squad. Before the night was over, the Lady Scots were down to a bare minimum of six players. Kay Julian, while hustling to make a play, tripped over the net standard and injured her ankle. As a result of this injury, Coach Brown had to play both freshmen for both matches. The team was able to overcome all personnel changes and collected a match win over Trevecca in two games, 15-12, 15-12. The next match had the Lady Scots going against the host Lady Lions of Bryan in what Coach Brown described as "one of the nicest wins in her coaching career." The Maryville squad defeated the Lady Lions 15-9, 12-15, and 15-11.

Tuesday brought news of the Lady Scots national ranking at the number fourteen spot, and the final home match against Carson-Newman. Unfortunately, the Lady Eagles ruined the evening by defeating the Lady Scots 13-15, 15-13, 13-15, 15-9, 15-6. The rest of the week had the Lady Scots practicing with various combinations of players in various positions trying to find the best possible team to put on the floor. The Lady Scots travel to Chattanooga on the 9th to play UTC and Western Carolina; it is hoped that all seven team members will be in good health and able to play.

Some people that should be recognized for their efforts this year include: Coach Brown and Assistant Coach Donna Owens, Bonnie "Bo" Dobson (stats), Sharon Wood (stats and trainer), Jeff Pierce and Gerry Godfrey (scorers), and all those people who were kind enough to offer their services as line judges. A special thanks to everyone who showed up Tuesday for the final home game. We'll know on the 14th about post-season play, so keep your fingers crossed!

SCOTS
MARYVILLE COLLEGE

Knoxville Dogs Nip Scots

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

Saturday the Scots travelled to Austin-East High School to take on the Bulldogs of Knoxville College. The game started as a defensive struggle, but the Scots were soon frustrated by their own mistakes and the officials who on several occasions missed several clipping and other penalty calls. The Scots scored their only three points with seconds running out in the first half when Tony Mitchell kicked a 38 yard field goal.

The second half was almost a duplicate of the first half; in that,the quality of officiating was the same, the Bulldogs scored 21 points, but the Scots were unable to put anymore points on the board.

The game ended with Knoxville College on top 42-3. The Scots received some excellent play from their defensive front and backfield; Mike Surrency was a standout on the offense for the Scots.

This week the Scots travel to Carrollton, Georgia for their final game. They will face a tough West Georgia team with hopes of starting next year off on a better note.

Ladies Soccer: A Kick in the Mud

by Kathy Walker
Echo Sports Writer

Pouring, freezing rain did not keep Maryville College's Women's Soccer Club from playing this past Wednesday, November 3rd. Warren Wilson barely slipped by MC in this 3-1 effort. Warren Wilson was predicted to win by a good 5 to 10 goals, but the MC ladies played their best game ever nearly ending the game in a tie. With five minutes left, however, Warren Wilson scored two goals to put them on top. It was definitely the dirtiest game ever played: everyone was covered in mud from head-to-toe.

Spirit was the key issue of this game. After suffering a 5-0 loss to UT, these ladies found the spirit needed to hold a team together under the worst weather conditions and defeating odds. Hopefully, the MC ladies will be able to keep their spirits high for their last home game this Saturday, Nov. 13th. Come out and support the team!

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Member FDIC

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 8 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, November 18, 1982

Messiah Celebrates 50th Year

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The 50th anniversary performance of Handel's "Messiah" is scheduled for this Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 20-21. The first performance will be at 8:00 p.m. Saturday, and the second will be at 3:00 p.m. Sunday. Both performances will be given in the Wilson Chapel.

These performances will be guest conducted by Dr. Harry Harter who has conducted the "Messiah" for 34 years. Faculty musicians will include Sallie Warth Schoen, harpsichordist, Dr. James Bloy, organist, and Dr. Robert Bonham, pianist. John Dent, son of MC professor Dr. William Dent, has been selected as the trumpet soloist. MC's newly appointed music director Mr. David Hoffecker will direct the Maryville-Alcoa-College Community Orchestra.

The solists in the choir are: tenor Don Brakebill, a 1953 graduate of MC who is now the music minister at New Providence Presbyterian Church in Maryville; mezzo soprano Mrs. Ed (Peggy) Herbert, a 1982 graduate of MC; baritone Wyatt Parker, a 1965 graduate of MC; soprano Mrs. David (Yona) "Zona Gogle" Yellin, a 1959 graduate of MC; and alto Delores Ziegler, a 1971 MC graduate.

To honor longtime "Messiah" participants and contributors, the College will host a banquet on Friday, Nov. 19, at 7 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Room. The banquet is $5 per person, and among the honorees are Dr. Harry Harter, Sallie Warth Schoen, Dr. James Bloy, and Dr. Robert Bonham.

Dr. Harter came to MC in 1947 and directed the "Messiah" through seven years of performances in the Alumni Gym on campus after the Voorhees Chapel burned to the ground in the spring of 1947. Dr. Bloy joined the College faculty in 1953 and has served as the "Messiah" organist since 1962. Mrs. Schoen became the harpsichordist in 1958, and Dr. Bonham has accompanied on piano since 1965.

Echo photo by Tara Wey

About to enjoy an authentic Japanese meal are from left to right Craig Fishburn, Dr. Kim, Becky Gerrick, Masumi Mitsutomi, and Satoru Mitsutomi. Story on page 3.

Wonderful Wayne's Wanderings

by Marta Wittig
Echo Staff Writer

This morning, as I woke up to the sound of the trenchmen gunning down Davis Hall, I thought, wouldn't it be wonderful to get away? To escape into another world? Well folks, there is a man on campus who has managed the impossible.

Dr. Anderson, under the auspices of the Young Presidents Organization (YPO) is visiting Japan for the first three weeks of November. The YPO is an organization which has as its members presidents of all types of institutions, including banks, schools, industries, and corporations. Dr. Anderson is, within the YPO, the Education Chairman for 1983 and is in Japan on an all expenses paid trip to help line up speakers for a week long seminar for the YPO at Japan University.

While in Japan, he will conduct some Maryville College business at the Kansai Gaidai University in Hirakata City and visit some English speaking secondary schools.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, November 18

Choir Concert, 8:15 p.m., Music Hall

Friday, November 19

Review Day - No Classes

Saturday, November 20

Varsity and J.V. Basketball at Centre College

"The Messiah", 8:15 p.m., Chapel

Sunday, November 21

Catholic Mass, 1 p.m. Chapel

"The Messiah", 3 p.m. Chapel

Late Night Brunch, 11 p.m., Pearsons

Tuesday, November 23

Varsity Basketball vs. Oglethorpe University, 7:30 p.m.

J.V. Basketball vs. Oglethorpe University 5:30 p.m.

Wednesday, November 24

Thanksgiving Break

Maryville Community Thanksgiving Service, 7:30 p.m., CCM

Incidentally...

ATHENS, GA (CPS) - A sperm bank that opened next door to the University of Georgia recently had so many first-day student donors that it had to stop taking new applicants for two weeks.

Sperm bank manager Donald Zeh attributes the run on his bank to easy money. The bank, a branch of Xytex Corp., based in Augusta, Ga., pays donors $20 each. Zeh says students could made a donation every two days.

"We find we're getting a pretty good individual who has no other way of getting extra money," he says.

Xytex opened by the campus with an eye on Georgia's 20,000 students because of the demand for semen from educated people. "Would you want the sperm of a college graduate or someone with an IQ of 60?" he asks.

Xytex ships the sperm as far away as Alaska, where it's used for artificial insemination.

Zeh, for one, couldn't be happier about the turnout. "We want to get as much acceptability in the community and among the student body (as possible)."

Editorial

Well, Fall term is just about over. This will be the last issue of the Echo until January, when publication will resume on the 13th. During Interim the Echo staff will be analyzing the issues from Fall term and looking for new ideas for the next two terms. We'd like to enlist some help from the campus for this project. What we need is for you to fill out the questionnaire printed here on this page, clip it out, and put it in the box that will be placed in the Post Office.

Hopefully this will help us find our strong and weak points, as well as give us some new and different ideas. This term has been a trial period, since the majority of our staff members are relatively new. We'd like for the campus to "grade" us on our performance so far so that we'll know what areas to work on. Remember - this paper is produced for you, so if you're not happy with it let us know. (We wouldn't mind any positive comments, either!)

Since the close of Fall term also means the close of football season, we'd also like to thank Dan Bouch, who has been our faithful football writer for the past eight weeks. Dan has done a great job, and the regular appearance of his story before six p.m. on Sunday nights has been greatly appreciated. Thanks, Dan!

ECHO REPORT CARD

Have you enjoyed reading the Echo so far this term?

What features have you particularly enjoyed?

What features have you disliked?

Do you feel there is adequate sports coverage?

What would you like to see more of? Less of?

Do you feel that the Echo covers most aspects of MC?

Who would you like to write a guest editorial?

Any other comments?

Thanks for your time in filling this out. We appreciate comments from the campus any time. Watch for our next edition in January - there may be something that you suggested in it!

Until then, the Echo staff would like to wish everyone an enjoyable Interim and happy holidays. See you in January!

THE HIGHLAND ECHO STAFF WISHES YOU

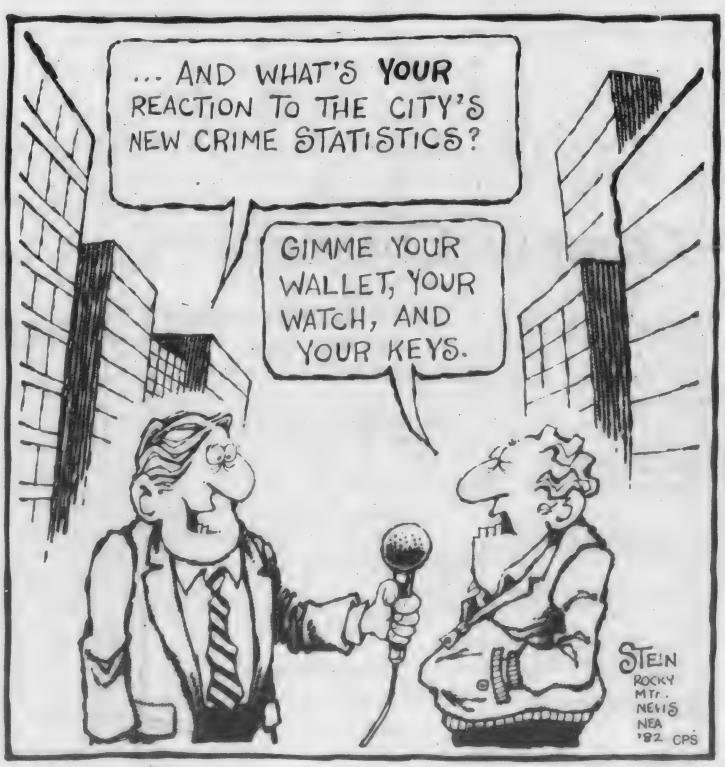
A HAPPY THANKSGIVING AND

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

WATCH FOR OUR NEXT ISSUE

JANUARY 13, 1983

A used book service is being sponsored by Alpha Lambda Delta, national freshman honor society, at the beginning of Winter Term. For a 10% service charge on all sales, society members will accept books on consignment for sale on Jan. 3.



Interested in selling? Take books during interim to Helen Smith, who lives in Lloyd, room 312.

Interested in buying? Shop in lobby of Fayerweather Hall all day on Jan. 3, 1983.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Nihongo Wa Ikaga Desuka?"

Becky-san ecky Gerrick)

Are you tired of "parlez-ous-ing Francais" or "hab-ing espanol" just to ful-l a language requirement? ell, how about Japanese? ere is a Japanese language ogram at Maryville Col-e, and it is taught quite fferently from either ench or Spanish. No more the eight meetings a ek with a teacher stand-g over you; instead it is lf-taught. The students lis-ten to tapes individually, and then meet only 3 or 4 times a week with a native Japanese speaker. During these meetings, pronunication is perfected and some grammar explained. Since classes are small, more individual attention is given in a more informal atmosphere. Masumi Mitsutomi is the drill leader. She is a lot of fun and a GREAT cook! Since we are a small class, we had an authentic Japanese meal at her home, and it was a learning experience too. Have you ever tried eating soup with chopsticks?

Maryville also has an agreement with the Kansai University of Foreign Studies. Students can spend one semester or a full year at the University. It is not necessary to know Japanese as classes are taught in English. Students can live with families which enriches the experience. All credits earned at Kansai transfer directly back to Maryville, so you will not fall behind. Also, the cost of the program does not exceed Maryville College fees. Those who go to Kansai are still considered Maryville College students and thereby eligible for financial aid and scholarships from the college.

The Japanese program is fun (just ask Craig-san or myself) and an excellent learning opportunity. Knowledge of Japanese is an asset in today's world.

If you are interested in the Japanese language program and/or the Kansai University opportunity, contact Dr. Kim and sit in on one of our classes. Do no let this unique program fade away! Sayonara.

FAC-ts

y Bill Warren, Jr.
cho Staff Writer

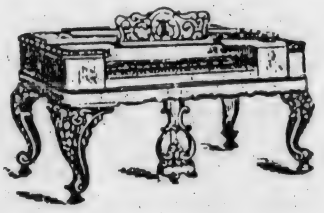
EWS RELEASE
oir Presents Fall Concert

The annual fall concert of he Maryville College Con-ert Choir is set for Thurs-ay, Nov. 18, at 8:15 p.m. n the College's Fine Arts enter Music Hall. There ill be no admission charge nd the public is invited to ttend.

Under the direction of IC's Kent Skinner, the hoir will perform eight orks, ranging from Vince ersichetti's "Sam was a an" to the "Liebeslieder alzer, Opus 52" by Jo-annes Brahms.

Other selections will in-lude "Sing Unto God" by aul Fetler, "Magnificat and unc Dimittis" by Ralph Vaughn Williams, "Turn ye, turn ye" by Charles Ives, "All the ways of a man" by Knut Nystedt, "To all to each" by William Schumann and "A Jubilant Song" by Norman Dello Joio.

Piano accompanists will be senior Tracy DePue and junior Kama Cook. Senior Karen Kotz will sing the soprano solo on "A Jubilant Song."



Guest accompanist for the Brahms and Joio works will be Tonya Wall of Knoxville. Mrs. Wall has played with the University of Tennessee Orchestra and served as the accompanist for the UT Summer Chorus this past year.

She earned her bachelor of music degree in piano performance at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro in 1975. She received her master's degree in piano literature from UT in August 1982.

Bill Bender Gives Lecture-Recital

Senior music major Bill Bender presented a lecture-recital in the FAC music hall 7:00 p.m. Tuesday, November 16.

The presentation summarized the findings of his Independent Study entitled "Twentieth-Century Russin Music for Children: Pedagogical Uses." In the study, Bender incorporated piano music composed by Soviet musicians in pedagogy for beginning piano students. He applied the Russian compositions and evaluated the rate of success in using this method. At the presentation, Bender performed short piano pieces by 5 composers. Mr. Victor Schoen advised this Indipendent Study.

Masako Yoneda Presents Senior Recital

Senior music major Masaka Yoneda from Yokohama, Japan, presented her Senior Recital on Tuesday, November 16, 8:15 p.m. in the FAC music hall.

Miss Yoneda featured Bach's "Partita in B" (a set of individual dances), Hayden's "Sonata in E" (one of Hayden's last compositions and most acclaimed), Schumann's "Novellette," Scriaban's "Prelaude in C," Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in G," and Prokofieff's "Sonata no. 3" in her recital. Immediately following the recital, Peter and Sandee Hess gave an open house reception in their home in honor of their host daughter, Miss Yoneda.

Remaining "undecided" about attending graduate school, Miss Yoneda stated, "If I go, I'd attend in the United States." She will be returning to Japan on November 27 to visit her homelands and attend her sister's wedding scheduled for December 8. Miss Yoneda worked during the duration of the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville as one of the hostesses of the Japanese Pavilion.

Featuring . . .
Linda Carroll
at the
HOUSE OF HAIR
THE SALON FOR FAMILY HAIR STYLING
Jack Coker and Kenneth Melton, owners
321 High Street Dial 982-4584

No service charge on checking accounts for students under 21

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Member FDIC

Echo Ear

C.C. - GO-GOF-GOFOR-IT - Go for it! S.F.

L.N. - Did I talk last night?

W.C. - we saw you throw those cherries at that little girl! Better luck next time!

The sun doesn't shine in West Ga. but the moon does, right Amy?

We heard Pearson's 307 is MC's new single's bar.

Hey S.O.B. - where did you learn to stand up?

Jump up! Jump back! S.S. attack!

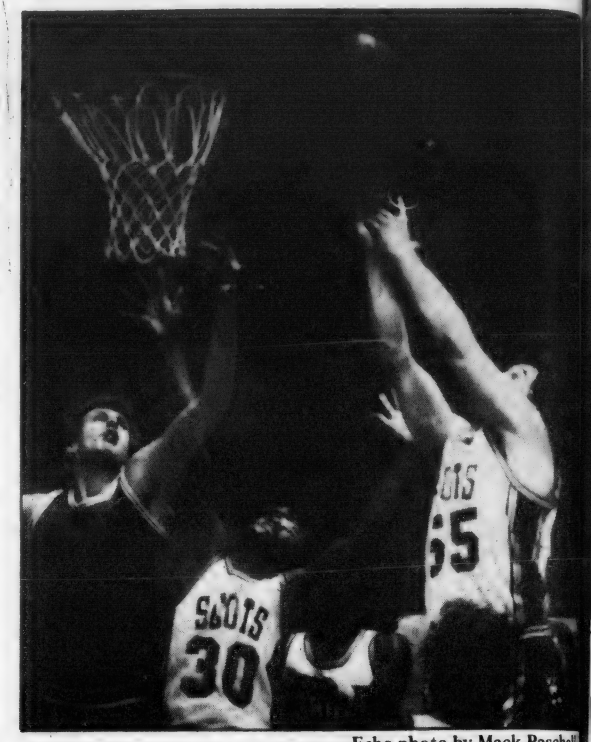
D.W. & K.C. - had any fantasies lately?

W.B.H. - how about some Acey-Deucey?

Hi Buckwheat!

Lady Scots in Playoffs

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer



Once again it's time to turn to the women's athletic program here at Maryville and see what's happening with the Lady Scots. First, we'll see what's going on on the volleyball court and then take a quick glance at the basketball program.

The Volleyball team travelled to Chattanooga on Tuesday, the ninth to play Western Carolina and UTC. The team knew they were in for some tough competition as Western Carolina rolled over UTC to start the evening. Western Carolina continued to dominate as they landed the Lady Scots their thirteenth loss of the year, and then UTC was able to save face, as they proceeded to put Maryville in the loss column for number fourteen. To be fair, the Lady Scots had spurts of fine play, but in the end, they were just outplayed by both Western Carolina and UTC. The regular season was over, and the only thing left was a possible post-season appearance. Well, if you haven't heard by now, the Lady Scots are in. They will host Eastern Mennonite College on Friday or Saturday for the first round of post-season play. Keep your ears and eyes open for the date and time, and come out and cheer the team on to a victory.

Turning now to basketball, as the season draws closer, the Lady Scots Basketball team is working harder and harder to prepare itself for a successful season. I took time out to stop in and observe a practice the other day and to talk with Coach Cooper about the team. The Lady Scots are working on speed and ball handling skills as well as different plays and patterns to find the open player or a specific player for a shot. There are, however, a few kinks that need to be worked out to insure a good season. In a few drills, it seems as though some of the players are slow to respond and move into their specific positions. This problem, however, can be attributed to inexperience and will be worked out as the season progresses. Injuries are also hampering the team's progress. Senior Melissa Sullivan is out indefinitely with a knee injury, and sophomore Mimi Chesney, although recovering from knee surgery, is still not one hundred percent. Coach Cooper said that she was pleased with the improvement of Sara Covington and that Sara has played exceptionally well during the pre-season practices. Coach Cooper will have her hands full leading the Lady Scots and taking care of the new addition to the Cooper family, but for my money both the team and little Amanda are in very capable hands.

Remember: volleyball-Friday or Saturday, and basketball - just around the corner. For non-stop action, follow the Lady Scots.

Echo photo by Mack Paschall
Andrew Baker and Larry Winter reach for the Ball Friday against the Windsor Club of Canada.

Fighting Scots Finish Season

by Dan Bouch
Echo Sports Writer

The Scots travelled to Carrollton, Georgia, Saturday night to face the Braves of West Georgia. The Scots went into the game against the second ranked Braves with hopes of stopping the Braves winning streak. The Braves, however, had other plans. They jumped on top early and remained there with the final score ending 45-13.

The Scots, who finished the season at 2-8, should not be upset with their performance against West Ga.

The Scots were the first team (this year) to score on the Braves in the first half when Jeff Seagle plunged from the one. John McLeod's kick was good. The Scots were also the first team this year to score more than 7 points against the Braves. Mike Maddox did the honors when he took the option-pitch from Pat O'Brien and dove into the endzone. John McLeod's point-after-attempt was wide.

The Scots received some excellent performances from a number of players. On offense, Glen Katz and Lindy Barile gained some tough yardage, while both Pat O'Brien and Pat Moyer had a good game at quarterback. Shannon O'Brien and Gene Wheatley caught several key passes that led to scores. On defense, the Scots received key performances from Alex Albert and John Cockfield with great support in the secondary coming from Paul Anagnostis and Bob McQuade.

This is my final column for the year, and I would like to thank several people. First, I would like to thank all the coaches for their time and effort. Second, the captains and seniors of the team Alex Albert, Eddie Belfi, John Cockfield, and Gene Wheatley, deserve recognition for their leadership throughout the year. Thanks also goes to the cheerleaders and Mrs. Brennan for the spirit they generated along the sideline and on campus. Also thanks goes to both administrative staff and support personnel (trainer, ball boys, managers, etc.).

Basketball Shows Season Promise

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Editor

Under the direction of coach Randy Lambert for the third straight year, the 1982-83 men's basketball team hopes to better its 7-19 record from last year. The team consists of three seniors, one junior, four sophomores, and three freshmen. Although all five starters from last year have returned, Coach Lambert is concerned that the majority of his substitutes are young and inexperienced. However, the overall outlook for the season is promising. Senior Andrew Baker and junior Bobby Rimmer will share the responsibilities of co-captains.

The Scots opened their 1982-83 season last Friday night in an exhibition game against Windsor Baksetball Club of Ontario, Canada. Windsor defeated Maryville by a score of 61-55. Bobby Rimmer led the Maryville scoring with 23 points. Sophomore Tyrone Matthews, the only other Scot in double figures, added 10 points to the cause.

Maryville will travel to Danville, Kentucky this Saturday to begin its regular season play against Centre College. On Tuesday, November 23, the Scots will play Oglethorpe University in their first home match. Good luck, Scots!

See Pat Clark and Nell Lindsey at
THE HAIR CELLAR
Now open at 514 W. Broadway, Maryville
Open Mon. - Sat.
Mon. & Thurs. late by appt.
CALL TODAY 982-4502

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 9 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, January 13, 1983

Strickland Resignation Shocks MC

by Jenny Fitzell
Echo Staff Writer

Dean Strickland resigned effective Dec. 6. At that time he sent a letter to members of the student affairs staff in which he cited personal and professional considerations as his reasons for resigning. He also indicated that he planned to complete his Ph.D. degree requirements which needed to be done to meet a deadline this summer.

William R. Strickland was named vice president for student affairs in September 1980. Strickland came from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill where he was Associate Vice-Chancellor for Student Development. He was a 1957 MC graduate and held the M.A. degree from Duke University and the B.D. degree from Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

From June-November of 1982 Maryville College was the defendant in a law suit filed by Ms. Shada Overton. Ms. Overton received her B.A. degree in 1976 from MC. Ms. Overton was then employed by MC as RD in Davis Dorm from September 1979 - May 1981, first under the direction of Dean Mangus and then under Dean Strickland. Ms. Overton also held the position of Coordinator of Student Activities during the academic year of 1980-81. During the winter and spring of that year, Ms. Overton did her practicum under the supervision of Dean Strickland in order to fulfill the requirements of the M.A. degree in College Student Personnel. Ms. Overton is currently employed by the College of Boca Raton, Boca Raton, Florida as Athletic Director, Consulting Housing Director, and Consulting Student Activities Director.

In her deposition, dated August 2, 1982, Ms. Overton states that she ". . . was discharged from her employment because she refused and rejected the sexual advances of William Strickland . . ." According to Ms. Overton's deposition, Dean Strickland tried, on two occassions in December 1980, to kiss Ms. Overton, and she rebuffed these advances. Ms. Overton admits that MC fulfilled its obligations under the contract for that year but claims that "Dean Strickland gave (her) a choice to consider (herself) fired or resign quietly. Ms. Overton felt she had no reason to resign quietly."

In the summer of 1981 Ms. Overton filed her complaint with the school. A Campus Review Committee was compiled to interview the parties and, upon weighing the information carefully, concluded to uphold the decision not to reappoint Ms. Overton. President Anderson supported this ruling. Ms. Overton then filed a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC). The EEOC never reached a decision on the matter. Finally on June 9, 1982, Ms. Overton filed suit with the U.S. District Court in Knoxville. Through this suit Ms. Overton sought reinstatement to her former position, full back pay, monetary compensation for the meals and lodging that accompanied her position, and restoration of all employee benefits.

In an affidavit filed September 20, 1982, President Wayne Anderson explained "the college policy . . . prohibits sex discrimination and specifically provides that persons who have such complaints file such complaints with my office. No such complaint was ever filed in my office until approximately four months after Ms. Overton was notified that her contract would not be renewed." President Anderson continued to explain that when an attorney representing Ms. Overton contacted him in the summer of 1981 concerning the allegations, a Review Board was formed. When asked in her deposition why she did not file a grievance with MC prior to the non-renewal of her contract in 1981, Ms. Overton replied,". . . I felt that Dean Strickland was just a man that made a mistake -- that it was a personal mistake and it should not have anything to do with professional ethics." When, according to Ms. Overton, she was "fired", she decided it wasn't a personal mistake. Ms. Overton stated, "He let his personal life get in the way of his professional life . . . he did not have any grounds for firing me. . . he had no concrete reasons. . . telling me that I was burned out and needed a personal life and needed a man is not concrete evidence, professionally speaking."

President Anderson upholds, however, that Ms. Overton was never fired and "maintains in the court case that the non-reappointment of a head resident came as a result of an assessment and for no other reasons." In the Defendant's Answers to Interrogatories filed August 24, 1982, MC stated that Ms. Overton's contract was not renewed due to: 1) A demonstrated inability to work effectively with the minority residents of the residence hall; 2) A demonstrated lack of understanding and respect for and willingness to observe appropriate procedures in dealing with student behavior problems; 3) A demonstrated insensitivity to and lack of appropriate concern for students whose life styles and values differ from hers that led her to be an ineffective counselor in the residence halls; 4 A rigidity in her approach toward working with students and staff members; 5) Her refusal to provide financial and program records to her supervisor, Dean Richardson; 6) Her demonstrated insubordinate and disrespectful behavior by violating instructions given her by Dean Richardson and Dean Strickland; and 7) Her own indication that she did not plan to return as a residence hall director after the 1980-81 year because she was tired of the work and its related demands."

The defendant, MC, in motions filed on September 20, 1982 and on November 17, 1982, asking that summary judgment in the defendant's favor be granted, stated that "as a matter of law (Ms. Overton) failed to allege sufficient facts to make out a claim of sexual harrassment or sexual advances by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended." MC also cited that the majority rule announced by the U.S. Federal Courts states that "unless the employer had knowledge of the alleged sexual advances and failed to take appropriate action, an employer is not liable under Title VII for such alleged conduct." MC also determined in these motions that

See STRICKLAND, p. 3

Campus Calendar

Thursday, January 13

English Proficiency Exam, 7:00 p.m.
Women's Basketball vs. Warren Wilson, 3:00 p.m.
Performing Artists Concert by Faith Asham, FAC, 8:15 p.m.
"Great Decisions" series in Proffitt Dining Room, 12-1 pm

Saturday, January 15

Varsity Basketball vs. Lynchburg, 7:30 p.m.
J.V. Basketball vs. Draughons College, 5:30 p.m.
Indoor Soccer, Alumni Gym, 2-5 p.m.
Jeans Dance, sponsored by B.S.A., 9-1 a.m., Pearsons Tight Jeans contest with $10 prize.

Sunday, January 16

Winter Film Festival feature "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex, But Were Afraid to Ask", Theater, 3 p.m.

Tuesday, January 18

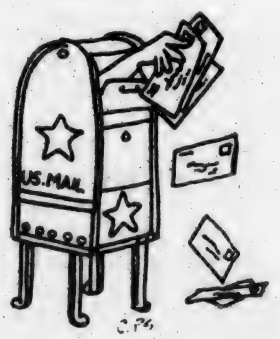
Varsity Basketball vs. Emory and Henry, 7:30 p.m.

LETTERS

In answering the Echo mail that accumulated over the holidays, I was surprised to find two "real" letters among the junk mail. One letter is from Don Xiques and Ed Welch, who are well known by most all upperclassmen and faculty at MC. The other is from Thomas White, an inmate at Indiana State prison, who hopefully after the printing of this letter will be hearing from a few MC students. I would like to print these letters here for everyone to read, and I hope that all will find something of value in them.

Howdy folks! I've got great news. Magellan was right. The world is definitely not flat. Donald and I have discovered this by trial and error despite feelings of barely hanging on on several occasions. One thing we both agree on is that this place called God's creation is certainly not boring, and the opportunities are limitless.

Let me try to explain. At the present time, two Maryville College juniors with the initials of DX and EW are (get this) supervising the construction of eighteen new rooms onto a hospital in the 3rd World. Great joke, huh? Wrong-O, Batman. We're actually in charge of a crew of 10 to 15 workers daily. You ask the question what two liberally educated college boys could possibly know about building a hospital ward? Well, that is a good question but. . . But with the help of a crash 3-week course on construction and the close advice of an engineer who is 30 miles away, we are actually doing it. We also dig in with the laborers and get sweaty and dirty, but since the literacy rate in Pakistan is only 17%, we must keep watch over blueprints and measurements. It is quite challenging. And in our spare time we amuse ourselves by going on rounds with doctors, observing surgery (Where can you do that in the states?), and traveling around Pakistan (Most recently to the fabled Khyber Pass and Afghan border -- watch out Russkies, those guys looked mean.).



Believe me, I'm not trying to boast because we do have our low times, but I do want to inform you of some exciting opportunities. I am reminded of the absolutely ridiculous remarks of people when they claim that they cannot find a job upon graduating from college. All I've got to say to that is hogwash. I've got news for you. There are jobs needing to be done all over the world, and if the job description does not fit your qualifications and interests, you just redesign the job until it does or dream up another one entirely. The possibilities are only limited by one's imagination. You think I jest. Read on.

The mission world is crying for volunteers of all ages and qualifications. Do you speak English? Well if by some wild chance you do, you are needed as a tutor or a teacher. The reason people need English is because it is the medium of communication in higher learning institutions and many businesses. In order for poor people to gain freedom in this class society, they must learn English. Other opportunities for service include: (1) being in charge of a hostel of boys in a nearby technical school, (2) being in charge of a recreation program for teenagers, (3) constructing drains and latrines in villages, (4) teaching in schools, (5) working in agriculture projects, (6) working in a hospital laboratory, (7) helping to relocate Afghan refugees, etc., etc., etc. It is a cop out to say you don't have the knowledge to do these things because you will learn. All it takes is a love for people and a willingness to jump in with both feet.

In answering the question "Why volunteer?", a missionary friend of ours put it all into perspective when he told an excerpt from the book Miracle on the River Kwei. It goes like this. A work crew of prisoners were coming off duty one day after laboring with shovels and picks in the fields. On arriving back at the camp, one of the guards counted the tools and found one spade missing. Flying off on a rage, the guard threatened to starve the whole crew of prisoners unless the guilty party confessed. No response from the prisoners. Getting angrier, the guard threatened to beat all the men until the guilty one fessed up. Still no response. The raging guard then stated bluntly that he would kill all the prisoners unless the guilty one confessed to losing the spade. At this juncture, one prisoner stepped out of the ranks and was immediately gunned down. The guard supposedly got his revenge. However, on returning to the barracks, the tools were recounted, and it was discovered that the spade was not missing after all. The man gave his life so his companions could live. 1 Corinthians 13 sums it up by saying, "Faith, hope and love abide; but the greatest of these is love."

I'm not necessarily asking for 600 volunteers from Maryville College to go to Pakistan. The opportunities are here, but they are also all over the world. You can be a missionary in the 3rd World, in the U.S., and in Maryville, TN. The all important question comes in asking ourselves "Are we?" Just don't say the opportunities for service are not there because they are. Look around. Explore. The sky is the limit.

Ed Welch

Dear Editor,

My name is Thomas White and I am an inmate in the Indiana State prison. A fellow inmate, whose home state is Tennessee, has led me to believe that you may be willing to publish an ad for me in the Highland Echo. If I have been misled then I apologize for taking up your time.

I wish to advertise for someone to correspond with. I have another mandatory 5 years to do and I am lonely. I realize this is my problem and not yours but I would appreciate any help you might give. I'm sorry to say I have no funds with which to pay for an advertisement and I realize your policy may prevent your publishing such as free. If this be the case, could you please direct me to someone who will help?

Well, thank you for listening. I hope you can help me but if you can't I do understand.

Respectfully yours,
Thomas White 14549
Box 41 Indiana State Prison
Michigan City, Ind. 46360

Applications are now being accepted for Editor of the Highland Echo and Editor and Assistant Editor of the Chilhowean for 1983-84. Anyone wishing to apply may obtain an application from Traci Fraser, Kay Lippincott, Victor Oakley, or Mrs. Exir Brennan.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Interims Involve Travel

During Interim three groups and two individuals ventured outside the realm of MC. Drs. Bunde and Yager canoed with their group through Okeefenokee swamp, while Don Thomas took his group to a different kind of jungle, New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Barger accompanied their group to Washington, D.C. Susan Williams discovered Iceland, and Helen McNiell toured Europe.

The canoe trip started in Folkston, Georgia. 16 canoers in eight canoes braved mud, mosquitos, and alligators for a chance to canoe through the Okeefenokee swamp. The ratios of men to women was an overwhelming 13:3, with the men winning out. The trip ended in Steven C. Foster State Park with several sore students and a lot of stories.

In New York City, DT's group saw six Broadway and off-Broadway plays. One of the plays, the musical Little Shop of Horrors featured a man-eating plant that sang and tried to eat the audience for the finale. Other items on the agenda were tours backstage at the Met and Lincoln Center, and the Public Theater. During their free time, students took in other sights of New York City, including watching a pickpocket at work.

Students on the Washington, D.C. interim were temporarily MC-bound as the snow storm changed their travel plans. When they finally reached Washington, they were free to tour whatever interested them. The Smithsonian, the White House, the Capitol, the National Cathedral and the National Zoo were among the sights visited.

Susan Williams and Helen McNiell developed independent interims which took them abroad. Susan travelled to Iceland, where her father is stationed at a NATO base in Keflavik, the northernmost NATO base. Susan prepared a photo-journalistic study of Iceland and its people. Susan said that language was no barrier in Iceland, and crime was practically non-existant.

Helen McNiell visited Cairo, Athens, Corinth, Rome, Florence, and Oslo on her cultural interim. She rode camels in Egypt, climbed to stoney heights in Greece, shopped in Rome, and spent Christmas with friends in Oslo.

adios...

Ah, yes! Good ole Roger! I'll always remember 'ole Rog. . . Er. . . Ah, Brunson! That's it - Roger Brunson. You know, he's the real nice guy who works in the Dining Hall! Yup, (sigh), he's been real good to all of us ever since he came to MC 3½ years ago. He came in with the ARA Food Service. He immediately won the hearts of many here and was asked to stay when ARA left and Morco took over. As a matter of fact, the college insisted that he stay on.

During his 3½ years, Roger has always come through with a smile and a friendly "Hello" or "What for you?" Not only was he a cheerful part of our everyday dining, but he also was an integral part of planning out special dinners and occasions. Sharon Crane said it well when she said, "Nothing was too much trouble for Roger." He always managed to remember the "little things" that made things more pleasant for everyone. He worked with Sharon Crane on Playmaker dinners and even helped to bring the food service into Student Programming realm. Yeah, Rog! His willingness to help and his honest concern for the students here at MC has marked him a man outstanding in his field. Now, we're sorry to say, he's moving on to greener pastures.

As of Saturday, January 15, Roger will be moving on to become the manager of the "Dos Amigos" Mexican restaurant in Atlanta.

Roger - we wish you much happiness in your move to Atlanta. Know that you will be missed. ¡Adios, amigo!

Maryville College
Non-Credit Classes

Among the courses offered this term . . .

Aerobic Swimming	Creative Writing
Advanced Racquetball	Karate
Alpine Skiing	Scubs Diving
Basic Black & White Photography	Beginning Racquetball
Color Photography

Developing Study Skills for High School and College Students
Private Study in Musical Instruments or Voice
Inquire about other courses!

Full refund if College cancels class for insufficient enrollment or if student withdraws prior to, but not including, the first day of class.

Register January 3-14 in person or by mail.
213 Anderson Hall, Maryville College
Telephone 982-6412 for further information.

STRICKLAND, from p. 1

the plaintiff did not dispute that "William Strickland's alleged overtures did not include any statements concerning the plaintiff's employment status at MC."

U.S. Magistrate Robert Murrian denied, on November 22, 1982 the defendent's motion for summary judgment. Murrian stated that "there were significant factual and legal questions unresolved in this case" and referred to the EEOC guidelines which "Provide that an employer is responsible for its acts and those of its agents and supervisory employees with respect to sexual harassment regardless of whether the employer knew or should have known of their occurence."

The Overton vs. MC case was set for trial December 3, 1982. The case was dismissed November 30, 1982 when an out of court settlement was reached.

President Anderson, when asked in an interview if Dean Strickland resigned because of the court case, answered, "I can't go into that. I can only refer you to his letter." President Anderson stressed the importance of realizing that "both parties agreed to dismiss the charges." President Anderson does not think that Dean Strickland's resignation in mid-year will hinder his career but suggests that Dean Strickland's completion of his dissertation will assist in his career. President Anderson further remarked, "We will miss Dean Strickland. He made a significant contribution here. . . We wish Dean Strickland well as he completes his Ph.D."

He went on to express his great confidence in Jane Richardson, noting her experience, ability, and concern for students, and in the entire Student Affairs staff to keep MC in good stead while MC searches for a permanent replacement. Dean Richardson and the student affairs staff will soon form a search committee composed of faculty, staff, and students. President Anderson said that MC is very anxious to have students' ideas and, therefore, will give the students on this committee the opportunity to review resumes and to interview the candidates.

President Anderson does not feel that this incident will damage MC's reputation as a fine academic institution and said, "We are putting the matter behind us. The court matter has been decided. We will move on."

A NEW SERVICE FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE

OPEN TIL 9:00 P.M.

MONDAY thru FRIDAY

If you don't have time during the day, we will be open Monday thru Friday til 9 p.m. Also the management announces that BRAD WESSON has joined their professional staff of hair designers. Call Brad today for a convenient appointment for you.

Brad is from Memphis School of Modern Hair Design.

House of Hair
321 HIGH STREET
DIAL 982-4584

Basketball Shorts

Women's

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots basketball team, after starting out the season in fine style by winning three of the first four games they played, have run into a brick wall and have lost their last four thus finding themselves in what Coach Brenda Cooper describes as a "slump from which they need to come out of." The Lady Scots now 3-5 for the year are playing well, but unfortunately not well enough to find themselves consistently in the win column.

The season opened in an action packed way as Knoxville College ran roughshod over Maryville 113-68. The game erupted into a bench clearing free-for-all as a result of some unnecessary and sometimes flagrant violations that went unnoticed by the referees. Aiding the Lady Scots in their effort were Sara Covington with 24 and Rachel Reese with 17. Kim Allen and Mimi Chesney both added 10 apiece.

The team then started off a three game winning streak by beating Sewanee 67-57 with Kim Allen pacing the team with 23. Trina (Coggins) Fancher and Sara Covington chipped in 12 each to help the team to its first win of the season.

The Lady Scots of Covenant came to town and were obliterated by the Maryville Lady Scots 85-38. Once again Kim Allen contributed to the cause with 32. Other players filling the net included Sara Covington 17, Rachel Reese 13, and Trina Fancher 10.

The team's third win came from a 67-59 victory over Tennessee Temple. Kim Allen 18 and Trina Fancher 18 led the Lady Scots with Candy Nutter dropping in 10 in her first game of the season.

The team went on a two game road trip and came back with two losses. Columbia defeated the Lady Scots 58-53 with Nutter 14, Fancher 11, and Allen 11 leading Maryville scorers. The team then dropped a 68-51 decision to Presbyterian even though Sara Covington scored 18 and Trina Fancher added 10.

The Lady Scots, after returning from Christmas break, have played some of the finest basketball played all season even though they lost to Midway 66-64 and Tenn. Wesleyan 66-50. The team played well and seemed to be playing together in spurts could not hold out long enough to collect wins. Rachel Reese (famous for her long range shooting) bombed in 22 and Candy Nutter added 14 in the Midway loss.

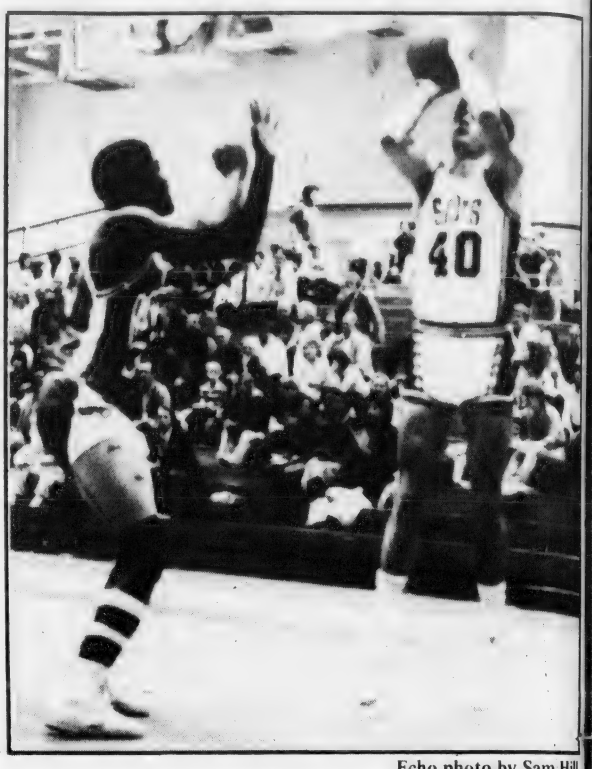
The team has had to contend with some changes in the roster that have affected their style of play. Melissa Sullivan is in all probability out for the season with a knee injury. Candy Nutter had to sit out the first three games of the season with an ankle injury, and Stacy Medlin is just now returning to practice after also sustaining an ankle injury. However, all is not as gloomy as it may seem. In addition to the starters (Robin Rimmer, Rachel Reese, Trina Fancher, Candy Nutter, Kim Allen, Sara Covington), Coach Cooper has some fine talent in Robin Simmons, Mimi Chesney, Penny Head, and Barb Hogan.

The Lady Scots travel to Harrogate to play LMU on the 11th and return home to take on Emory & Henry on the 12th at 6:00 and Warren Wilson on the 15th at 3:00. Other home games include Knoxville College-- Jan. 25th at 5:30, Fisk-- Feb. 8th at 6:00, Milligan-- Feb. 10th at 7:00, Bryan-- Feb. 11th at 6:00, and LMU-- Feb. 19th at 6:00.

Come support your Lady Scots to a winning season.

Men's

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Editor



The 1982-83 Men's basketball team started the New Year off with several new faces in the starting line-up. Among the new faces were freshman Paul Mills, who replaced Bobby Rimmer at the point guard position. Freshman Raymond Burnett also earned a starting position with his impressive play during the earlier games of the season. The third new face in the Scot's line-up is Dan Kirkpatrick, a transfer from Biscayne College.

In their first game, after Christmas break, the Scots defeated Eastern Mennonite College 55-53. Although Eastern Mennonite made a run at the Scots in the final seconds of the game, the Scots were able to hang on to their lead with aggressive play until the end. Paul Mills led the Scots scoring with 14 points. Dan Kirkpatrick also chipped in 12 points.

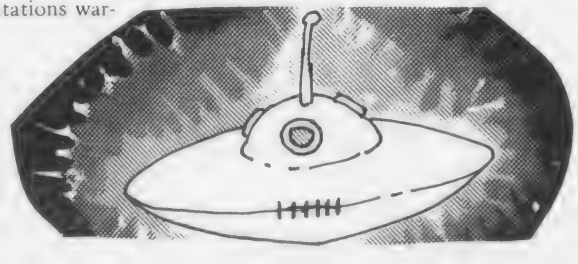
On Saturday, January 7, the Scots travelled to Dayton, Tennessee to challenge Bryan College. Bryan defeated Maryville 73-82. Top scorer for the Scots was Dan Kirkpatrick with 18 points.

Monday, January 10, the Scots played host to a tough Hampden-Sydney team. Hampden-Sydney defeated Maryville 65-71. Top scorer for the Scots was Raymond Burnett with 17 points. John Dunlap also came off the bench and scored 12 points.

The Scots overall record now stands at five wins and four losses. Their next game is Saturday, January 15 against Lynchburg College. Maryville hopes to record another victory in their win column. Come out and support the Scots!

Echo photo by Sam Hill

Greg Gheen shoots for two against Eastern Mennonite.



Contract Up, Ogden Gone

After an evaluation of football and other athletic programs at MC, the evaluation committee decided that the contract of Art Ogden, Head football coach and Athletic Director, would not be renewed when it expired December 31, 1982.

The evaluation committee found that there were "certain limitations" in the athletic program at MC and that "these limitations warranted a change in personnel," according to a news statement.

President Anderson stated that a three member search committee had been formed to review resumés and arrange interviews for applicants. The athletic committee will have the opportunity to interview the top candidates for the position.

The search committee, composed of Dean Richardson, Dr. Ramger, and Gene Wheatley, will be looking for certain qualities in the applicants. Among the qualities that they will be looking for are a committment to a liberal arts education, belief in smaller, church related colleges, committment to the philosophy of Division III athletics, and the ability to work effectively with faculty, staff, and students.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 10 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, January 20, 1983

All It Takes Is A Little CP&P

by Mary Hughes
Echo Asst. Editor

Going to a liberal arts college these days is like wearing clothes on a nude beach. It's not cool. You get dirty looks.

Your friends at home brag about their "technical" majors that will bring them to immediate and permanent stardom when they receive that diploma in the mail. Those upward and mobile students with majors like fish tank repair and automotive logistical hardware try to make your English, art, history, or chemistry majors seem, well, seem naked at Daytona Beach.

But take courage! It's all just a responsive policy time-phase!

Jean Jones, first and only Career Planning and Placement Director at MC, came to the foothills in 1976--the fireworks haven't quit exploding yet! Her knowledge of the job market and how to shop there is THE invaluable resource for anyone with any major. She emphasizes: "We can find something interesting in most fields as long as I know what a student is looking for. In the past five years over ninety percent of Maryville College graduates have gone into the career field or graduate program of their choice."

Early Planning

The process of career shopping should begin freshman year. A student can specify his/her areas of interest by talking to people who work in various fields. Setting up these "information-gathering interviews" could lead to future contacts for internships or a post-graduate job. After choosing a specific field, a student should concentrate on "gaining practical experience in that field," advises Ms. Jones.

"Those with experience, even as a volunteer, have a much greater chance to secure a job. I've had students come into our office and say they want to go into publishing. When I ask them about their experience related to the publishing business, they say they have never worked on a newspaper, in a publishing office -- no related experience. I would say their chances are about zero for the job they might want."

Waiting Line

The opportunity to work on a personal basis with students appeals to Jean Jones, who worked as a graduate assistant at UT's Career Planning and Placement office in 1975. UT's students once waited with sleeping bags outside the UT CPP for four , sometimes five hours in a morning, hoping to secure an interview with a visiting recruiter.

To eliminate the crowds, computers now randomly select 25-30 names out of hundreds of prospects for interviews. Luck catches interviews at UT, but Jean Jones works with individuals at MC to identify career opportunities and to make contact with prospective employers. She states, "It is not always the most qualified who gets the job, but the one who is best prepared for an interview."

Convincing an employer of your skills means possessing a credential-emphasizing resume. Ms. Jones helps students prepare a resume that shows off experience and skills; she also alerts people to the necessity of application letters, calls, and follow-ups-- she teaches how to get out of the waiting line and into a rewarding line of work.

The CPP office, on the second floor of Fayerweather, presents guest speakers of various backgrounds; a seminar about math and computer science opportunities will be held in the CPP on January 26. All students are invited.

CPP contains a complete career library which includes up-to-date books, brochures, and magazines about every career except fish tank repair and locomotive escalation auditing.

Internships

Internships are essential, according to MC's expert. "An internship does not have to be a high-paying job, just realistic experience," stresses Ms. Jones. Examples of cultural, diverse internships are the Student Environmental Health Project and the Appalachian Student Health Coalition, available in Tennessee this summer. These programs emphasize health care in rural areas and call for liberal arts, interpreting, biology, chemistry, pre-med majors and any student interested in a program that offers complete submergence in rural problems and decisions. Students can obtain more information from the CPP office.

Creative Careers

More valuable CPP resources: records of jobs that MC graduates have recently acquired. These surveys remind students that they can create their own major, even their own career. Cathy Angell, who completed her individualized environmental science major in 1982, landed the job she wanted in Ohio at Camp Kern where she teaches ecology and natural history to children and adults. She learned of this position through CPP.

Allison Perry, a 1982 English major, secured the title of Administrative Assistant to the Research librarian at Boston Public Library -- one of the best libraries in the country, according to authorities. Allison wanted to work in Boston and concentrate her efforts there.

California, Florida, Alaska --anywhere a student wants to go -- awaits the opportunist. Jill Kinsinger, who graduated in December, 1981, now directs recreation for an entire community in Alaska.

All of these graduates gained experience as they went through school, and utilized their educational experiences, such as independent study.

A broad-based education does not spell unskilled labor. Grab your interests and aspirations and learn how to shop the job market the right way! Count your blessing--the CPP--and that's not Compatible Policy Projection.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, January 20

Women's basketball at Milligan 7:30 p.m.

Friday, January 21

Varsity basketball vs. Catholic Univ., 7:30 p.m.

J.V. basketball vs. Cleveland State, 5:30 p.m.

CIV, 9:20 a.m., FAC, Dr. Manning Marable on Socialist Alternatives

Saturday, January 22

Varsity basketball, 7:30

Indoor soccer, 2-5 p.m., Alumni Gym

Women's basketball at Fisk University

Sunday, January 23

Film - "Return of the Pink Panther", 3:00 p.m., Theater

-Vespers, 6:15 p.m.

Tuesday, Janaury 25

Student Recital, FAC, 7:00 p.m.

Varsity basketball vs. Centre, 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, Janaury 26

Mid-Week Worship, CCM, 10:30 a.m.

Guest Editorial

by Joe Wynne

Environmentalist doomsayers are gradually losing influence on local legislation due to a new approach to solving ecological problems. This new approach is the result of the fusion of two recent world developments -- one social and one technological.

The social development is an acceptance of the use of commercial techniques in conserving natural resources. In the past, preserved areas or wildlife were roped off from danger. Yet the endangered animals over-grazed their small patch of land, and the ecosystems to be preserved were surrounded by industrial developments (the Smokies are beseiged by acid rain) or poached extensively. The new social attitude promoted the linking of wildlife to local economies so that people have a stake in preservation. For example, John Varty, who runs an African game preserve, takes celebrities on expensive photographic safaries as well as taking sportsmen on high-priced hunts. Money goes to the care of animals and the upkeep of land. Local people do not poach because they receive compensation by acting as guides, selling crafts, and receiving meat from the kills. This is a far cry from traditional preservist attitudes.

Similarly, many readers may be familiar with the Nature Conservancy which uses money from donations to privately buy up threatened areas for protection and study. As a business, the group can protect the lands much more effectively then government-protected lands through the shrewd use of business law. That is one way in which the adversary relationship between business and conservation is fading. Another way is that environmentalists have recently become less stringent so that low level radioactive wastes can be redefined and disposal simplified. Energy prices as a result have been deregulated. The Center for Environmental Problem Solving says that demand for environmental mediation is up. Business is understanding that conservation is necessary, also.

One of the major reasons why emotional responses, hostility, and opposition have occured in the first place is due to the lack of hard information on environmental issues. This is where the technological development actually a host of developments that make up the budding Information Age -- fits in. Harland Cleveland, director of the University of Minnesota's Institute of Public Affairs, has pointed out an important characteristic of the era: Transactions become sharing rather than exchange. The giver is not depleted of any resources when they are information, as in the traditional marketplace, so that the attitude between giver and receiver changes. The pertinent implications are that 1) benefits-more knowledge to public and private sectors-spread more easily, and 2) decision making becomes much more participatory as less information is controlled by a few. For instance, the Transnational Network for Appropriate Alternative Technologies (TRANET) is an information network which now links people, projects, and resources in the appropriate technological community.

What are some results of the simultaneous acknowledgement of envionmentalistic commercialism and use of the information network technologies? Industry and others involved will have up-to-date and accurate information on environmental issues. Confrontation will give way to co-operation. Local people will be able to assume appropriate direction and goals. Economists will begin to see that objects in nature have a more subtle, long term value that transcends the marketplace.

Here are some present examples of "fusion" solutions (between local governments, industry and conservation): The Florida Power and Light Company signed a $14 million contract to construct a garbage powered generating plant for 40,000 homes in Dade County; Portland, Oregon has passed tough building restrictions toward conservation where much of the burden falls on the homeowners; the Chinese and Mexican governments are two of many that have begun successful movements to half populations growth; six dams were restored in Springfield, Vermont, and voters spent $58 million to do it; the Center for Political Economy and Natural Resources is working on a national market approach to natural resource management; a new community in Southhampton, California is stressing solar power in its housing development; a referendum in Columbus, Ohio approved floating a $118 million bond issue so that a massive trash and coal fired plant could be built to fuel its street lights.

So the doomsayers are up against a growing grass-roots trend on two fronts which is taking on the global challenges rather than merely heading off alleged impending disasters. Certainly there are major imminent conservation problems. But the new approach is ready to take on these difficulties fueled by a new pragmatism and wisdom.

In the future, when we think of "conservation" we won't picture roping off lands and barricading wildlife. We will have a broader, more practical concept of the ecological value of those resources in the everyday challenge of living on this planet.

Remember the words of the late Rene Dubos, "Think globally, act locally."

Applications are now being accepted for Editor of the Highland Echo and Editor and Assistant Editor of the Chilhowean for 1983-84. Anyone wishing to apply may obtain an application from Traci Fraser, Kay Lippincott, Victor Oakley, or Mrs. Exir Brennan.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Decisions Arise

by Laura Hart

Not a day goes by that some kind of decision is made that concerns our well-being. That is where Great Decisions steps in to let us know what is happening beyond the borders of the U.S. For the next seven weeks, Great Decisions will be meeting on Thursdays from 12-1 p.m. in the Proffitt Dining Room. Future topics for discussions include: "Lebanon: Shattered State in the Middle East" with UT Lebanese student Joe Dagher; "Trade and Unemployement: Global Bread and Butter issues" with a simulation game led by MC's Dr. Scott Brunger and Ernie Goss; "Africa's Economic Squeeze Poverty, Hunger, and Refugees" with the Rev. Overton Mazunda of the East African Nation, Malawi; "Southeast Asia: A SEAN and its Communist Neighbors" with Dr. Brunger and Dr. Wan-Sang Han of Korea; "Inter-American Security: Lessons From the South Atlantic" with the Rev. Joel Gajardo of the Presbyterian church in Chile; "West Germany and the U.S.: What's wrong with the Alliance?" and "Nuclear Proliferation: Who's next to get the bomb?" with Dr. Bunde.

The first meeting was held on the 13th of January and covered the issue "U.S.-Soviet Relations: Nuclear Arms and Coexistence." Dr. Bunde spoke briefly and touched on such questions as "How do we accurately access Soviet intention?" "Is nuclear exchange winnable?", etc. Everything couldn't be covered because of the short time, but much was expressed and learned by both students and faculty.

Anyone is welcome to attend, but it is recommended that each person attending familiarize himself through the Great Decisions program book on reserve in the library. Each weekly topic is covered in this book.

Arthur Calling

Fifteen days in England, Wales, and Ireland–an interim trip in the summer--that is the British Heritage Tour planned by Mrs. Herma Cate and Dr. Elizabeth Fowler for this summer.

Their seventh trip to the British Isles, this tour will include such experiences as a canal trip in Amsterdam; viewing the Crown Jewels in the Tower of London; attending plays in London, Cornwall, and Dublin; visiting numerous castles and cathedrals, and enjoying a medieval dinner in a Welsh castle.

The group of twenty-five will leave Knoxville on July 4, go to New York, Amsterdam, and arrive in London. The return trip will be from Shannon (Ireland) to New York to Knoxville, arriving on July 18. Interim credit may be earned by reading the assigned material prior to departure.

Brochures describing the trip are available in Dr. Fowler's Office--Anderson 317.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

No Ifs, ands, or buts about it -- Molly Kennedy and Rocky Wyler were the winners of the tight jeans contest at the Jeans Dance Saturday night. The dance was sponsored by B.S.A.

Echo Ear

Stella and Blanche -- Come here often? You stimulate me! TT

S.J., I like your "footsie" pajamas! When are we going to have another slumber party–like Interim? HF

Van Aken - Plan A on your mission is complete-what about plan B?

Hey J.C. - Heard your new nickname is D.W.E.!

Hey M.A. - Truth or Dare - "How many states . . .?"

B.S. We heard you got a new earring . . .S.W.

J.T. Goodnight Johnboy!

Hey S.S. - Heard you like those Carson-Newman Eagles!

Hey Smooth - We changed your name to "Vienna Sausage"

R.C. - We heard your new beau is the Blount County Sheriff

T.W. - Hello, then. Glad to "meet" you!! B.

dancin' with the devil

by David Gaede

COLLEGE PARK, MD (CPS)

Former University of Maryland student Sharon Sadeghian was nervous as she stood in front of the school's Hornbake Library on an October morning last semester.

Flanked by three friends holding hammers and record albums, she bravely told the crowd of 200 before her, "The Lord is giving me all the strength I need."

Moments later, after evangelist Tom Short preached that "rock'n roll leads to death," Sadeghian began smashing a Led Zeppelin album with a hammer. By the time she and her friends were done, dozens of records were shattered on the library steps.

Preacher Greg Anthony announced his visit to the University of Washington with handbills asking, "Could it be that someone is trying to brainwash you through your stereo or the cassette recorder that's plugged into your ear?"

Rock 'n roll, it seems, is getting some hard knocks on campuses from coast to coast from Bible-waving, record-burning evangelists warning students of what Anthony, for one, calls music's "Satanic influence."

Almost out of the blue last term, the preachers began showing up on campuses everywhere.

Georgia evangelist Billy Adams, for instance, has destroyed over $200,000 in rock vinyl "because it preaches the use of drugs, illicit sex, the occult and rebellion."

Adams preaches on campuses throughout the South, often playing music by AC/DC, Kiss and The Beatles to prove his point.

See ROCK, p. 4

Maryville Scots On The Ball

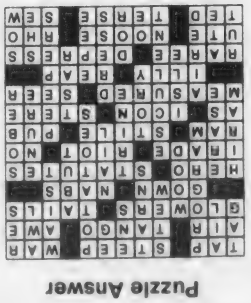
Women's

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots Basketball team went 1-1 last week and were also able to erase one of their losses to bring their record to 4-5 for the year. The team dropped one to LMU 73-65 at Harrogate on Tuesday, but was able to pick up a win over Emory & Henry 72-57 on Wednesday. Saturday's game against Warren Wilson was rescheduled for January 25 at 5:30 p.m., here at Maryville due to snow in North Carolina. The Warren Wilson game could be rescheduled for the 25th because the Knoxville College game for that night has been cancelled. According to Coach Brenda Cooper, Knoxville College has been declared ineligible for play by the NCAA. Coach Cooper also added that the first Maryville-Knoxville game which resulted in a Knoxville 113-68 win has been cleared from the record as if it never happened.

Leading the way in the LMU loss was Kim Allen with 19. Also contributing to the cause were Robin Rimmer with 14, Trina (Coggins) Fancher with 12 and Candy Nutter with 11.

Rachel Reese with her long-distance shots led the Lady Scots in their Emory & Henry win with a total of 23. Also aiding the cause with double-figure output were Candy Nutter 12, Sara Covington 10, and Kim Allen 11. Robin Simmons and Mimi Chesney, although not scoring in double figures, did come off the bench and played very well. Too bad the boxscore doesn't show everything, because Robin and Mimi played as well as anyone else on the floor that night.



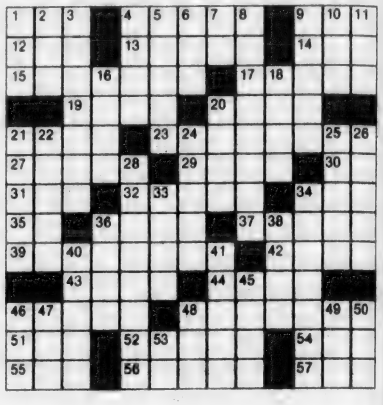
The team hits the road on Thursday for one against Milligan and then travels to Nashville for Saturday's game against Fisk. Next Tuesday's game against Warren Wilson will be the last home game until Feb. 6, so why not show up and lend your support. See ya there!

Men's

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Editor

The Maryville College men's basketball team defeated Lynchburg College on Saturday night 70-60. Freshman Raymond Burnette led the Scots in scoring with 20 points. Point guard Paul Mills also added 15 points. The Scots' overall season record stands at 6-4.

Puzzle Answer



CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

1 Dance for Gene Kelly
4 Precipitous
9 Armed conflict
12 Broadcast
13 Dance for Charo
14 Reverence
15 Frowns
17 Follows
19 Ball dress
20 Catches
21 Brave one
23 Laws
27 Turkish decree
29 Disturbance
30 Negative
31 Male sheep
32 Fence steps
34 Tavern
35 Conjunction
36 Sacred image
37 Cubic meter
39 Calculated
42 Prophet
43 Badly
44 Harvest
46 Street show
48 Sadden
51 Southwestern Indian
52 Loop
54 Greek letter
55 Spread for drying
56 Brief
57 Stitch

DOWN

1 Label
2 Be ill
3 Playbill
4 Cook slowly
5 Mountain lakes
6 Abstract being
7 For example: Abbr.
8 Vegetables
9 Blouse
10 Shoemaker's tool
11 Legal matters
16 Timber
18 Border on
20 Metal fastener
21 Man's name
22 Expunge
24 Threefold
25 Habituate
26 Sedate
28 Edible
33 British Conservative
34 Eyes: Slang
36 Capri, e.g.
38 Former Russian ruler
40 Ventilated
41 Garment
45 Fencing sword
46 Wheel track
47 Brunched
48 Click beetle
49 Pronoun
50 Seed
53 Digraph

ROCK, from p. 3

Jed Smock, perhaps the dean of the campus circuit riders, has recently added rock 'n roll to his already-impassioned anti-sex and drugs sermons at schools from Virginia to Kentucky to New Mexico State.

Illinois State students got to hear a last-minute debate in November between Jefferson Starship guitarist Paul Kantner and local minister Wesley Ates. Kantner had arranged the debate after Ates had urged students to boycott a Starship concert and "burn your Starship records on the front steps of the courthouse."

None of the anti-rockers have trouble drawing crowds. Some evangelists have even enjoyed bigger crowds by specializing in the evils of rock.

Nick Pappis, a "Christian record producer" from Florida, conducts college discussions about musicians using symbolism and subliminalism to "brainwash" listeners.

Many album covers, Pappis explains, show occult symbols like pentagrams, pyramids and broken crosses that can coerce young people into evil deeds.

The Electric Light Orchestra, Black Oak Arkansas and other groups, he charges, use backward masking-- recording messages backward on a record--to convey demonic urges to unwary listeners.

"Another One Bites The Dust" by Queen, Pappis says, actually says "Satan must have no limit" when portions of it are played backwards.

Greg Anthony contends the Rolling Stones' "Sympathy for the Devil" and "Dancin' with Mr. D," in addition to songs by Led Zepplin and AC/DC, are similar "tributes to Satan."

"Stairway to Heaven" sounds like "My sweet Satan, no other made a path, for it makes me sad, whose power is Satan" when played in reverse, Anthony claims.

"We're concerned not only with the lyrics and albums covers, but also with the lifestyles of the musicians and their intentions," says Dan Peters, who along with his two brothers lectures students about rock 'n roll.

COUPON

Love's Cafeteria, Inc.

Where You Pay Nothing for the Extras

Midland Shopping Center

Jan. 20 - Jan. 31

Your choice of meat Plus all the vegetable, salad, and dessert you can eat, Tea or Coffee $2.99

Breakfast Special ..... $.99

1. 2 Eggs, Bacon or Sausage - biscuit, coffee
2. Hot cakes, bacon or sausage, coffee
3. 2 biscuits & gravy, coffee

Sorry – No Sharing

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 11 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, January 27, 1983

Make A Date To Debate Calendar

by Mary Hughes
Echo Asst. Editor

The All College Council ad-hoc committee, which includes Wilma Coleman, Tom Hudson, Bob Naylor, Harry Howard, Martha Hess, and Larry West is searching for an alternative to the present 10-3-10-10 calendar.

At the December 8, 1982 ACC meeting, the committee recommended that "discussion concerning a calendar change. . . be reopened and . . . that ample opportunity be provided for current students to discuss the forthcoming proposal and offer suggestions."

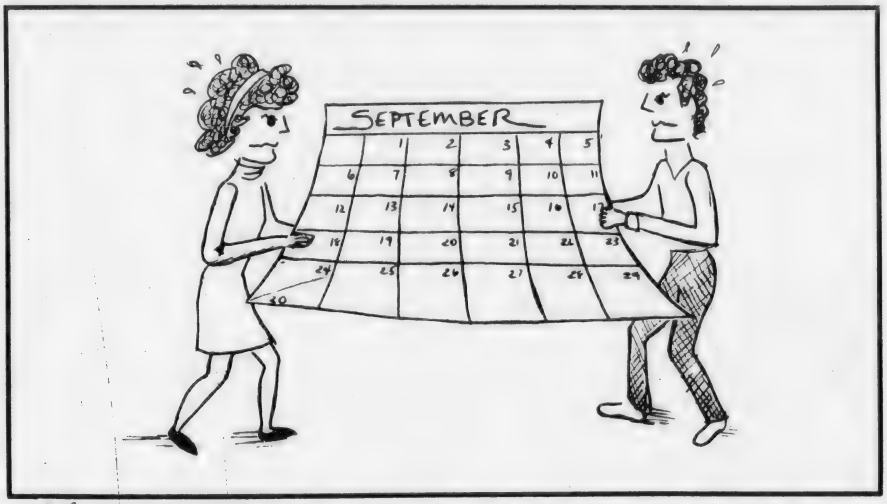
With the recommendation, the committee listed its reasons for requesting a change to a semester-like system.

Educational considerations include

1. allowing freshmen more time to adjust to college-level school work and to respond to poor study habits,

2. the opportunity for upperclassmen to correct problems and avoid falling behind,

3. a lessened effect of coursework missed because of illness or personal problems,



4. a longer "sink-in" time in certain disciplines,

5. a potential for more efficient use of faculty time with a reduction in preparation time.

Institutional factors involve

1. a likely reduction in the number of students who leave the college,

2. elimination of refund problems which are due to the current system,

3. fewer registration periods and fewer necessities for the faculty and staff to complete mid-term reports,

4. elimination of problems the college has with receiving federal grant-in-aid funds.

The committee also foresees the benefits of an optional final examination period as well as shorter and more class periods. The report notes that Interim, if kept, would be scheduled either in January or May. In response to student survey information, gathered in 1980-82 to "measure student attitudes about a number of issues," the committee reports that " it appears that the current calendar neither promotes nor discourages consideration of Maryville College by prospective students."

Mike Hester, co-chairman of the ACC, expresses his opinion about the calendar change: "Maryville College is one of the few schools, if any, that has trimesters. I feel trimesters offer a student more time for classes than if they were stretched out with five. If MC gave up its system, it would be just another private college. It would cause prolonged anxiety for students to complete work and for faculty to create work."

Hubert Dixon, freshman representative to the ACC stresses, "If there are flaws in the present calendar, why don't we try to fix these instead of moving on so drastically?"

Alfred Perkins, Academic Vice-President, is "absolutely for" a calendar change. He explains, "No calendar is perfect, but the advantages of the present calendar are far outweighed by the disadvantages.

"It may have been different fifteen years ago when the present calendar was adopted, but now there is a higher number of unprepared students, so they have a greater difficulty adjusting to college work. A longer term would be an advantage for them."

"Cost," says Perkins, "is also a bigger consideration now. The 10-3-10-10 calendar is more expensive. We now have three registration periods a year. A semester system would reduce the number of registrations by one. Every registration means additional salary costs which affect tuition. We want to bring down costs without hurting the academics."

"A decision of any substance that affects the way a school operates should be

See CALENDAR, p. 4

Campus Calendar

Thursday, January 27

Women's Basketball at Tennessee Temple, 7:30

Friday, January 28

Junior piano recital by Tracy DePue, Music Hall, 7:00.

Varsity basketball at Bridgewater, 7:30.

Chili and Beer Night at Lloyd--western and war movies on the wide-screen.

Saturday, January 29

Indoor soccer, 2-5, Alumni Gym.

Varsity basketball at Eastern Mennonite, 7:30.

Women's basketball at Tennessee Wesleyan, 7:30.

Film Festival feature "The Spy Who Loved Me." Theatre, 1:00 p.m.

Movies on wide-screen in Lloyd

Sunday, January 30

Superbowl Sunday!

Festivities in Lloyd begin at 3:00 p.m.

Kickoff at 5:30

Meatball sandwiches will be for sale - $1.50

Video concerts to be shown following the game.

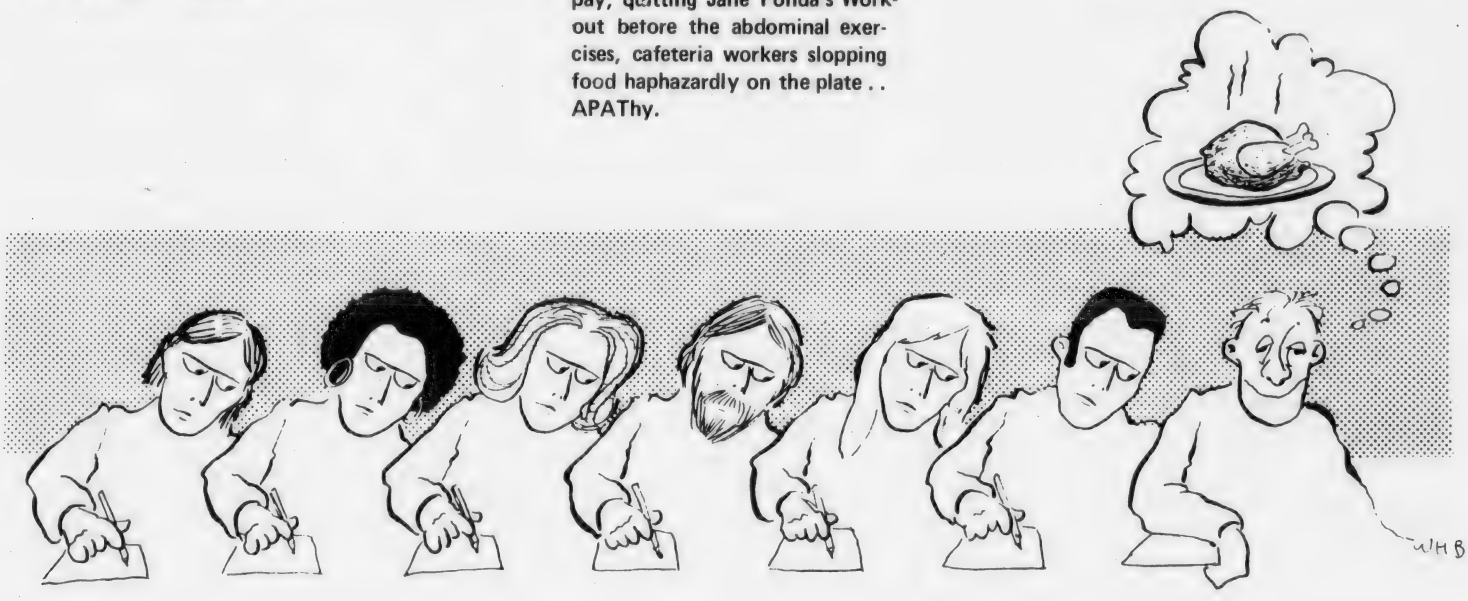
Monday, January 31

Varsity basketball at Washington and Lee, 7:30 p.m.

Women's basketball at Bryan College, 7:30 p.m.

Special Notice - Lloyd will have an open alcohol policy during Superbowl Weekend, but no glass containers, please. Also, video movies and concerts will be provided. Cassettes rented by individual students will not be accepted. Watch for schedules of shows and showtimes.

Apathy...



There are close to a million subjects I could editorialize for today's paper There is

Apathy . . . not taking your tray up in the cafeteria, skipping meetings, sitting in the cafeteria cutting down everyone who walks through the door, taking the mouldings off Joe Longo's door . . . APathy

Next paragraph. APAthy . . . tearing down stations on the nature and fitness trails, causing dorm damage for everyone to pay, quitting Jane Fonda's Workout before the abdominal exercises, cafeteria workers slopping food haphazardly on the plate . . APAThy.

APATHy . . . missing CIV, ignoring people as they pass on the sidewalk (how about just a friendly smile?), throwing the Echo on the Post Office floor, need I say more?

Of course everyone is guilty of one of these at times. But when you add it all together, it spells APATHY.

There will be a meeting to screen applicants for the publications Thursday, February 3 at 12:30 in the Fiction Room of the Library. Anyone interested in applying must bring a completed application to this meeting.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Hit the Trail

by Peggy Millsaps
Echo Staff Writer

Cathy Angell, a 1982 graduate of Maryville College did an independent study with a different twist. Rather than labor exclusively over a weighty mount of paper, Cathy took to the College Woods and marked what she calls "a self-guided nature trail."

The project conceived in Cathy's junior year was executed under the guidance of her independent study advisor, Dr. Judith Sumner to augment Cathy's individualized major in environmental education. Now working as a naturalist at Camp Kern Environmental Education Center in Ohio, Cathy says, "Dr. Sumner and I came up with the idea because we felt that a nature program could be very useful to the elementary schools in this area, as well as an interesting addition to the college campus."

The trail already existed, so Cathy's task was to clear the trail and pick and mark each station along the trail with a numbered post. She was assisted by Wayne Hughes of Maryville who did the wood work for the posts and several "willing and able" MC students who planted the posts. The project took about one year to complete.

The trail comprises the three levels of a forest: the canopy, understory, and herb layer with each containing respectively, the crowns of the tallest trees, shade-adapted shorter trees, and shrubs, vines, ferns, and wildflowers (several types are not commonly found in this area). Several types of hard-and soft-wood trees can be seen along the trail, notably Black oaks, Sycamores, Scotch Pines, and flowering Dogwoods. Animals that can be found among these three levels of the forest include squirrels, possums, rabbits, box turtles, and lizards.

To explain her trail, Cathy wrote and had illustrated by sophomore Barb Hogan, a small pamphlet which Dr. Sumner describes as "a smooth, polished job." The pamphlet and accompanying teachers' manual will be distributed to local elementary schools this spring.

Cathy, distressed after her last visit to MC by acts of vandalism committed along the trail, voiced her hopes that "in the future, students will be more appreciative of the effort put into the trail and realize that it not only

See TRAIL, p. 4

Echo photo by Tara Wey

Gail Wheatley gets a little help from a friend at the skating party sponsored by Circle K Sunday.

Hunter Memorial Planned

by Joe Wynne
Echo Staff Writer

"Dean Hunter has those qualities which inspire respect and confidence among the student body -- ability, scholarly attainments, intellectual keenness-- however these qualities alone cannot account for our warmth of feeling for him. Coupled with them are traits of character inseperably associated with the man--kindly humor, patient understanding of our failures, and genuine fineness. Whatever else we shall take from Maryville, we shall take the memory of an association with a person whose true nobility of character stands unquestioned."

These words were written about Edwin Ray Hunter who was a teacher and an administrator at Maryville College from 1918-1967. His many accomplishments and attributes have prompted the newly revived A.C.C. Library Committee chaired by Mr. Arthur Bushing to begin a drive to have a section of the library dedicated to him.

According to Head Librarian Exir Brannan, the dedication is long overdue and she would like the students to be involved in choosing exactly what section of the library would be most appropriate. The possibilities include the Special Collections area or, after the future library renovations and restructuring, a special research collection.

Hunter's half century at Maryville College was a time of many changes. Prohibition was still the talk of the town when he became Professor of English. Two years later he became also the Secretary of the Faculty and held this post until 1930. At this time, the Psychology Club studied "Effeminant Men and Masculine Women." As many as 3,500 fans packed the stands to see MC beat Wesleyan 27-0 under Coach Honaker.

In 1930, Hunter was promoted to Dean of the College, still teaching, and served in this capacity for five years. During his term, women celebrated newfound freedom, but men remained critical. Maryville men preferred women with intelligence and good looks-not necessarily in that order. Ralph Waldo Lloyd accepted the sixth presidency of the institution. Students described Hunter as an "understanding friend, willing-advisor, patient listener, logical thinker, capable administrator, ideal teacher, and an appreciator of wit."

When Hunter became Dean of Curriculum in 1935 --still teaching-- applicants were being turned away from the college for lack of room. Before he gave up this post in 1957 he saw the first black teacher named at Maryville. A Presbyterian magazine honored the Dean as "one of the great teachers in the Church" describing him as a "scholar with broad and varied interests, an authority on Shakespeare and an elder in the Presbyterian Church. His alert mind, his sense of humor, his Christian point of view make his classroom a place of preparation for responsible scholarship and service."

Hunter adopted two major changes while Dean which still exist today: comprehensive exams and independent study for all students. Maryville was thus one of the first colleges to do so.

He then went back to full-time teaching until 1967. During this period Joseph Copeland became President. When he finally left, the annual was dedicated to him. It read "Those who have travelled in his company can never forget his frequent pauses to delight in the unexpected glimpses of truth, his enthusiastic recall of the glories of the past, his concern over the roughness of the present path. To show our appreciation for his leadership and to recog-

See HUNTER, p. 4

A NEW SERVICE FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE
OPEN TIL 9:00 P.M.
MONDAY thru FRIDAY
If you don't have time during the day, we will be open Monday thru Friday til 9 p.m.
Also the management announces that BRAD WESSON has joined their professional staff of hair designers.
Call Brad today for a convenient appointment for you.
Brad is from Memphis School of Modern Hair Design.

House of Hair
321 HIGH STREET
DIAL 982-4584

Men Squeeze Cards

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Editor

This past week was a very busy one for the men's basketball team. On Tuesday, January 18, 1983, they travelled to Emory, Virginia to play Emory and Henry College. Emory and Henry defeated the Scots 58-64. Greg Gheen and Dan Kirkpatrick led the team's scoring with 13 and 11 points respectively.

On Friday and Saturday night, Maryville played host to Catholic University of Washington, D.C. In Friday night's game, the Scots defeated Catholic University in overtime 78-77. Point guard Paul Mills hit a last second jump shot at the buzzer to give Maryville a one point victory over Catholic University. Senior Greg Gheen and Freshman Raymond Burnette were the Scots' top scorers. Each one scored 19 points.

In Saturday night's contest with Catholic University, the Scots won 71-65. Dan Kirkpatrick had the hot hand for the Scots, scoring 15 points.

Maryville is currently the second place team in the ODAC conference. In ODAC play, the Scot's record now stands at 5-2. The team's overall record is 8-5. This weekend the Scots leave for their longest road trip of the season. While on the road, they will play Bridgewater, Eastern Mennonite, and Washington and Lee. This will be a tough trip for the Scots, but Coach Lambert is very confident in his team and their abilities. Good Luck Scots!

Women's

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

Live! Maryville College Sports! The big story-Lady Scots Basketball. Weekly record 2-1. Season record 7-7. Last Thursday - Milligan 81-52 loss. Leading scorer Candy Nutter 18 points and 8 for 8 from the free throw line. Trina (Coggins) Fancher 10 and Penny Head 8 were other point producers for Maryville. Saturday - place Nashville - team Fisk 73-63 win. Again Candy Nutter with 18. Sara Covington and Kim Allen with 12 apiece and Robin Rimmer with 10 contributed to the victory. Tuesday night Lady Scots vs. Warren Wilson. Lady Scots 76-56 winners. Everyone plays; everyone scores. Top scorer Rachel Reese with 16. Robin Rimmer and Sara Covington add 13 and 12 respectively.

Spotlight player this week Candy Nutter, passed 1,000 point mark. Taken over as Lady Scots' all time scoring leader. Way to go Candy!

HUNTER, from p. 3

nize his life and distinguished service to Maryville College we dedicate this annual . . . "

Students who wish to assist in choosing a memorial section may contact Exir Brennan or Mr. Bushing.

Why the Library? It was very important to the college in his mind. One of the last things he did for the school was to leave money for the collection.

CALENDAR, from p. 1

fully explored and aired. No change will occur because a handful want it."

Perkins explained that a new calendar requires approval and planning, thus, if one were voted in, it could not go into effect before the fall of 1984. " One of the problems is with attitudes, the attitude that 'it isn't going to affect me.' Hypothetically, if a change were made effective in the fall of 1986, I wonder if many students would oppose it. Maybe they would."

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler airs her views, "In our attempt to be a unique institution, a change in calendar, because everyone else has it, seems to me not the better part of wisdom. As far as I am personally concerned, one is as good as another. I have heard students say they enjoy break time and the freedom from cares while on break. I would go with the students' views."

Dr. Fowler adds, "If a sister institution like ETSU found that they lost 1,000 students with a calendar change and have never recovered, then in our day of declining enrollment, it would not be a feasible step."

Dr. Harry Howard believes a calendar change would be "desirable." "Two years ago, the students were so strongly opposed, I felt it better not to change, but now I think student interests might be better served with a new calendar. That doesn't say what that change ought to be though."

By March 1, 1983, the ad-hoc calendar committee should present the tentative proposal for a new calendar. "Within the next month," says Mike Hester, " all students and faculty can discuss the change during forums."

College President, Wayne Anderson, feels it is "very important to ventilate the issue - that faculty, staff, and students all have an opportunity to express their views. I hope that everyone will take an active interest to make sure it is looked at thoroughly. It is important not to just say 'We want, we don't want' ".

TRAIL, from p. 3

serves an important purpose for area elementary schools, but is also there for the college community."

Cathy Angell's self-guided nature trail provides not only a glimpse of the "serenity and beauty" of the forest, but also a valuable look at a living ecosystem of which all living things including we, are a part. An excerpt from Cathy's Independent Study reads, "Today's children are growing up in a world in which erosion, air and water pollution, animal extinction, and other environmental problems are abundant. Course in environmental education can help instill in children a more sensitive attitude toward nature, enabling them to become more environmentally responsive citizens."

The Bank Card 24 hr
Serves You
Any Hour of Any Day
Do All These with THE BANK 24:
• Cash Withdrawals • Deposits •
Transfer Money • Loan and MasterCard Payments •
Verify Your Balance
The Bank of maryville
"Since 1885"
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Echo Ear

Feather-head, get your car fixed and treat us to some beer!

Yo Budweiser! Stop lifting those twelve-ouncers and get some muscles!

T.R. - We heard you got propositioned Saturday night!

Hey S.S. - We heard you like to lap it up at the Lap. . .!

G.R. - Why don't you adopt a personality on the jog up to fourth floor Dorm I!

S.W.- Where do YOU spend your weekends?

S.O.B. - You'd better watch out - we're gonna GET you!

E.S. - Goodbye G.C., Hello . . .?

Hey L.G. - The graveyard is calling for you - Better not pass it by next time . . .

P.D. - What happened Friday night behind your locked door?

Hey S.J. Where's the fire? TT

Stella and Blanche - Do you have "it"? The Pink Panther

the Highland Echo

Vol. 68 No. 12 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, Febr.

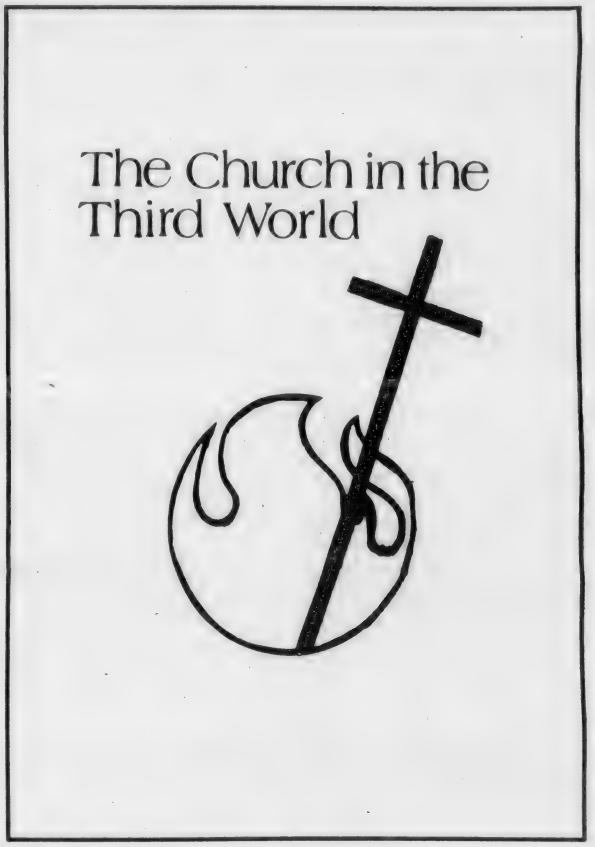
2-The Highland Echo, February 3, 1983
Looking Back
Echos on file ...
Echo

Meetings Expanded

A Cry For Justice

Maryville College's 107th annual February Meetings will focus on the theme, "A Cry For Justice: The Church in the Third World," and will bring five highly acclaimed guest speaker to campus.

The February Meetings will be held on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays of each of the four weeks in February with a different discussion topic each week. In past years, the February Meetings have been scheduled for one week only during the month; this expanded schedule is new this year.



The five guest speakers are: Dr. Joel Gajardo, a Presbyterian minister from Chile who is currently working as a Latin American missionary-at-large for the Board of Global Ministries of the United Methodist Church; Dr. Wan Sang Han, taught at several colleges and universities in the U.S., among them Tennessee Tech; the Rev. Overton Mazunda, a native of Malawi, Africa, who coordinated the World Council of Churches visitation team to the Southeast U.S. and attended the World Alliance of Reformed Churches Assembly in Ottawa last August; the Rev. Phyllis Neal, a 1972 graduate of MC who is assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Jamaica, N.Y., the oldest Presbyterian church in the country; and Dr. David Young, a past professor of chemistry and acting chaplain at MC who is now director of the Office of International Partnership, Division of International Mission, Presbyterian Church in the U.S.

The four weekly topics are: Feb. 1-3, "Africa," with the Rev. Mazunda and Dr. Young; Feb. 8-10, "Korea," with Dr. Han; Feb. 15-17, "Latin America," with Dr. Gajardo; Feb. 22-24, "Inner-City Global Village," with the Rev. Neal.

The guest speakers will lecture, hold discussion sessions and conduct worship services while on campus. All February Meetings events are free and open to the public.

The February Meetings are an annual tradition at MC and planned by a committee of staff, faculty, and students. Funding for the February Meetings comes from the John Vant Stephens Jr. Fund, established by Mrs. Stephens to provide a Christian influence for worthy youth and to perpetuate the loving memory of her husband, a Presbyterian minister and MC board member for 30 years. Both Dr. and Mrs. Stephens are 1915 graduates of the college.

For more information on the February Meetings and dates, times and locations, call the MC Center for Campus Ministry on weekdays at 982-6412, ext. 299.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, February 3

February Meetings Activities: Breakfast, 8:00 a.m., Proffitt Dining Room
Open class, 9:20 a.m., CCM
Discussion, 12:30 p.m.
Varsity basketball vs. Roanoke, 7:30 p.m.
J.V. basketball, 5:30 p.m.

Friday, February 4

MACCO Concert, 8:15 p.m., Chapel
Women's basketball at Covenant, 6:00 p.m.

Saturday, February 5

Indoor Soccer, Alumni Gym, 2-5 p.m.
Men's basketball at Carson-Newman

Sunday, February 6

Film Festival Feature, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers," 3:00 p.m., Theatre

Monday, February 7

J.V. basketball, away

Tuesday, February 8

February Meetings Activities: Open class, 2:30, CCM
Varsity basketball, 7:30 p.m.

Wednesday, February 9

February Meetings Activities: CIV lecture, 9:15 a.m., Music Hall
Discussion, 10:30 a.m., CCM
Worship Service, 7:30 p.m., CCM

Watch On Campus Today and posted notices for February Meetings activities and times.

File Now for Financial Aid

Well, winter term is in full swing, and if you are like most people the only thing on your mind right now is spring break and how to come back spring term with a great tan. But even though it's only the first week of February, there's something else you should be concerned about right now - next year's financial aid.

If you are one of the many MC students receiving financial aid, now's the time to prepare next year's forms. Financial Aid Forms (FAF) can be obtained in the Financial Aid Office, Anderson Hall. Along with the FAF, Maryville College requires an institutional application, which after completion is to be returned to the Financial Aid office.

Seniors who plan to attend graduate school should find our what forms the schools they are applying to require and start filling them out as soon as possible.

So before you hit Daytona Beach, make sure you've filled out and sent off your financial aid forms for next year - your wallets will thank you in September.

on a streak ...

Looking back through old Echos on file, the March 8, 1974 Echo caught my eye. The front page listed some world briefs like "Oil embargo may end Sunday," "SLA still holds Patricia Hearst," and "Seven indicted in Watergate investigation." But the story that really caught my attention was a real exposé on the current campus fad, streaking. (There was even a picture!) I have reprinted the story here so everyone can enjoy the accounts of the campus craze nine years ago.

"Streakers" Streak
by Lyn Stanley

The recent collegiate fad which has streaked its way across this country has finally made it to Maryville College. MC male and female coeds have vowed by their recent efforts not to be outstripped by any other "streaking" contingent, and espcially the University of Tennessee.

"Streaking" is the new fad to the collegiate world, from Stanford to North Carolina State, which consists of fast dashes across short stretches of ground by nude coeds. It is obvious that this new collegiate activity may very well be America's fastest growing sport because of the minimal equipment required- Absolutely nothing!

MC, being its usually progressive self, has added a few unique touches to this new "streaking fad."

By Sunday evening, "streaking" had managed to gain a full head of steam for this campus. The dashing fad began for MC on Friday evening when two male coeds darted across the parking lot of Midland Shopping Center to an awaiting vehicle before dusk. Sunday evening, or rather early Monday morning, was highlighted by the appearance of two nude coeds driven about the campus loop in all glory of a Homecoming Court.

But the males were not to be out done by this exhibition. Therefore, a group of young men were led through active pregame calisthenics before a merry crowd of boosters. Sporadic other "streaking" incidents occured throughout the night to only be marked by exploding firecrackers and the shrilling screams of the oncharging "streakers."

Much to the disillusionment of the average, modest student, one freshman student casually cruised about the campus on Monday afternoon in the highest fashion of this new craze of the collegiate world. Another student made his tribute to this "streaking" craze by calmly skate-boarding down the sidewalk in front of Pearsons to only be held up by our trustworthy security force.

The pinnacle of this week's "streaking" craze was the blur of a lunging coed across the stage in mist of a CIV program. The crowd cheered the darting nude on as he entered, exited, and reentered with amazing quickness. Some persons became speechless and astounded by this "outrageous exhibition of a learning community," so stated one individual. By far, the CIV appearance has highlighted MC's efforts not to be outstripped.

Comments on this new fad range and tilt the ends of any scale. One sophomore coed said that this enitre craze in "an absolute scream!" One upperclassman said quite excitedly that "this was the best study break he had ever had." He went on to remark "that a clean streak across campus sure beats a visit to Gilbert's any night."

As the campus continues its "streaking" passion, reliable inside sources have let it slip that a faculty-staff streak in near future is picking up its own head of steam. As this craze dominates conversations from the coffee shop in Anderson to the dining tables in Pearsons, the mad passion to "streak" across the MC campus becomes a bigger scream everyday.

All those interested in applying for the editorship of "Impressions," MC's literary magazine, should bring their completed application to the Publications committee meeting Thursday, February 3 at 12:30 in the library.

the Highland ECHO

Editor ..... Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor ..... Mary Hughes
Business Manager ..... Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor ..... Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer ..... Kathy Blair
Art Editor ..... Helen McNiell
Copy Editor ..... Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor ..... Susan Williams
Advisors ..... Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

"BILL'S A LAW STUDENT, HE DOES REAL HOMEWORK

Entertainment News Briefs

Chet Atkins Appears with MC

Legendary musician Chet Atkins, the CBS recording artist who is known around the world as "Mr. Guitar," will appear along with the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra in concert on Tuesday, Feb. 15, at 8:15 p.m. in Maryville College's Wilson Chapel.

Reserved tickets for the concert are $9 for adults and $6 for children, students and senior citizens. Tickets go on sale Tuesday, Feb. 1, and are available through the Maryville College development office, 546-6912 or 982-6412.

Atkins will perform five numbers accompanied by the orchestra, under the direction of MC's David Hoffacker, as well as several solo pieces. The orchestra will accompany Atkins on a medley of his hits, including "Java," "Detroit City" and "I Can't Stop Loving You."

Atkins comes to MC shortly after his move to CBS records from RCA records, where he had recorded and produced for more than 30 years. His first album for CBS, called "Cross Country," is to be released in late February.

His move to CBS comes during a surge in popularity for the 58-year-old guitarist from Luttrell, Tenn. Last year, Atkins received his eighth Grammy for the best instrumental performance on his album, "Country After All These Years." Also in 1982, The Country Music Association (CMA) named him its Instrumentalist of the Year, his fourth time to receive that honor.

Since his show business debut at the age of 17 with Archie Campbell and Bill Carlisle on Knoxville's WNOX-radio show, "The Midday Merry-Go-Round," Atkins has earned eight Grammy and four CMA awards.

In 1973, Atkins was elected to the prestigious Country Music Hall of Fame, said to be the highest honor for a country music artist.

Since that first radio show, Atkins has strummed and picked his way to the top of the recording business. He has recorded more than 70 albums and has sold more than 30 million records.

He has toured almost every continent on the globe and has performed for capacity crowds across the country He played before the late John F. Kennedy at the White House and appeared on numerous occasions with the late Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops. He has been a member of the Grand Ole Opry since 1950.

His television appearances include "The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson," "The Mike Douglas Show," "The Johnny Cash Show," "Soundstage" and "Kraft Music Hall," among others.

Atkins knows the music business not only from the nalge of a recording artist but from the desk of a music business executive. For many years he was both a producer and the vice president of RCA's Nashville operations.

Through his position at RCA, Atkins had an incalculable impact on the course of country music. He blended country music and pop music to create the "Nashville Sound."

The list of performers Atkins has discovered, signed, recorded or produced reads like a Who's Who of the country music business, including Eddy Arnold, Waylon Jennings, Charlie Pride, Porter Wagoner, Dolly Parton, Hank Snow and Steve Wariner.

He has recorded hits with artist like Elvis Presley, Don Gibson and Hank Williams, producing some of the classic songs of country music.

Now Atkins says he is excited about his new relationship with CBS, and adds that he will always have great allegiance to RCA. He says that the people at CBS are enthusiastic and readily realize that there is life after age 30 for a performer.

He adds that he won't rule out the possibility of producing at CBS, which he says is the largest recording company in the business.

Atkins says that he never really liked the role of executive and that now, after years of promoting and working hard on the careers of countless other performers, he is ready to work on his own career.

For more information about the Chet Atkins concert at MC or for ticket reservations, call the College at 546-6912 or 982-6412.

Competition Winner Performs

Mezzo-soprano Wendy White, winner of two national operatic competitions, will sing in concert at Maryville College on Tuesday, Feb. 8, at 8:15 p.m. in the College's Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Tickets to the performance, which is part of the College's continuing Performing Artists Concert series, are $3 for general admission, and can be purchased at the door.

In 1978, Ms. White accomplished the impressive feat of winning the two most prestigious national operatic competitions in the country--the National Metropolitan Opera Auditions and the WGN Audition of the Air.

Her debuts with leading symphonies and opera companies since then have dazzled audiences and critics alike. In the spring of 1979, Ms. White made her debut in Tel Aviv with the Israel Philharmonic at the Leonard Bernstein Festival. She also performed at the Corinthian Festival in Austria and Yugoslavia.

An increasing number of operatic and concert engagements have brought her debuts with the Chicago Lyric Opera, the Cincinnati Opera and the Pittsburgh Opera. She has appeared as soloist with various orchestras in the United States, among them the symphonies of Pittsburgh, Omaha, Indianapolis, Rochester and Fort Wayne.

The 1981-82 season included her debut with the Cleveland Orchestra as soloist in Bernstine's "Songfest," conducted by Lorin Maazel, performances of "Messiah" with the Hartford Symphony and "Rigoletto" with the Dayton Opera.

Library's Hour of Power

Are you aware of the extended library hours on Sundays? The library is now open 1:30 to 11:00 pm on Sundays. This change was made in response to answers received on the questionnaire circulated in November. Most of the 94 respondents felt that the library should be open more hours. Because of budget considerations, the schedule could be stretched only slightly. The additional time on Sunday was deemed to be of greatest value to students.

The library questionnaire has provided the library staff and Library Committee with a great deal of information on how students and faculty feel about the library. Where at all possible, the staff is trying to use this information to improve library service. Nearly all respondents stated that they would like to see more recent fiction books in the library. This matter has been considered by the staff and you can look for something new to help fill this need in the near future.

Another fact became quite clear from questionnaire responses. Students like the term-long checkout policy for books. The library staff concurs with this opinion. There have, however, been problems. The policy states that any book may be recalled after two weeks if it is requested by someone else. Books may be recalled at any time if they are needed for Reserve. In general, students have been cooperative when a book has been recalled, but there has been an increasing number of people who have chosen to ignore recall notices. Therefore, a fine of one dollar per day will be charged if a recalled book is not returned within two days. The staff hopes this will be enough to stop the problem. Changes in the cirulation policy may be necessary if recall notices continue to be ignored.

Affiliate Artist Returns

Baritone John Cimino, the 1982-83 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist at Maryville College, will return to the area on Monday, Jan. 31, for the second of his three scheduled visits.

During this visit, which will end on Sunday, Feb. 13, Cimino will perform for clubs and civic organizations, church congregations, classrooms and other groups.

Highlights of his second visit include performances at: Maryville Junior High, Fort Craig and Sam Houston Elementary Schools; Maryville's First United Methodist, New Providence Presbyterian, Eusebia Presbyterian, Morristown's All Saints Episcopal and Logan's Chapel Methodist Churches; plus classroom lectures and on-campus performances at MC.

Several dates are still open during Cimino's second visit. To schedule a performance contact Libby Rankin at Maryville College, 982-6412 or 546-6912.

MC Scots On The Road Again

Women's

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots basketball team had a tough time this past week as they dropped all three of their games scheduled for the week. Picking up wins over Maryville were Tenn. Temple, Tenn. Wesleyan, and Bryan.

On Thursday the team travelled to Temple where they lost by four 70-66. High scorer for Maryville went to Rachel Reese with 18. Candy Nutter 13 and Kim Allen 10 also aided the Lady Scot's cause.

On Saturday the team faced Wesleyan and were steam-rolled 92-50. Candy Nutter led the Lady Scots with 12, but a total of 33 turnovers made the difference. Coach Brenda Cooper said that in order to win, the team must limit the number of turnovers, and that she hoped to be working on better ball control skills during practice.

Monday found the Lady Scots in Dayton to take on Bryan. The Lady Lions prevailed 70-77 in overtime. Candy Nutter again was top point producer with 22, but according to senior Rachel Reese it was a fifteen foot swish at the buzzer by one of the Lady Lions that put the game into O.T. Rachel explained that Maryville was up by two with about six seconds left when Coach Cooper told the team not to foul any of Bryan's players. Playing in a 2-1-2 zone, the Lady Scots did not expect to be scored on by a game ending shot especially from a player who had not hit much of anything all night. However, as the buzzer sounded the ball went through and O.T. it was. Bryan was ahead by two 79-77 with less than five seconds left when Coach Cooper called time out and set the play. Candy was to set a pick thus freeing Rachel to shoot the ball to tie the game, but a tough Bryan defense spoiled the Lady Scot's comeback attempt and the game ended at 79-77.

The Lady Scots now 6-9 travel to Covenant on the 4th and then return home to play Fisk on the 8th, Milligan on the 10th, and Bryan on the 12th. Come out and cheer your Lady Scots on to victory.

Men's

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Writer

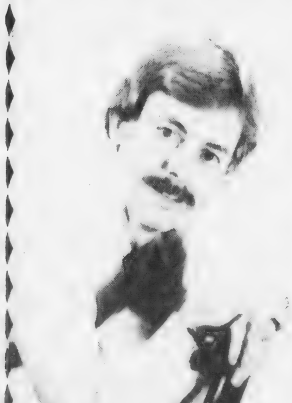
The men's basketball team added two victories and two losses to their record last week. The team's record now stands at 10-7. On Tuesday, January 25, 1983, the Scots lost to Centre College 54-56 on a last second shot. Raymond Burnette led the Scots' scoring with 16 points.

On Thursday of last week the Scots left on a tough five day road trip. The Scots first stop was at Bridgewater College in Bridgewater, Virginia. The Scots used a balanced attack to defeat Bridgewater 75-66. Four Scots scored in double figures. However, Greg Gheen was the team's leading scorer with 16 points. Gheen also grabbed 8 rebounds.

On Saturday night, the Scots recorded their second victory of the trip by defeating Eastern Mennonite 80-70. Dan Kirkpatrick had an outstanding game scoring 26 points and grabbing 10 rebounds. Once again, four Scots scored in double figures.

In their last game of the road trip, the Scots were defeated by Washington and Lee 64-87. Dan Kirkpatrick and Greg Gheen led the team's scoring with 20 and 14 points respectively.

On Thursday night of this week, the Scots will play host to Roanoke College and on Saturday night they will travel to Jefferson City, TN to take on arch rival Carson-Newman College. The Scots would appreciate your support at their games.



outdoors today

by Laura Hart

Ahhh, the great outdoors. Beautiful, huh?! So much to see, so much to do. I know you haven't heard too much about the outdoor club these days but we're here, and we're alive -- honestly!

Now that you know we aren't just a figment of your imagination, you're probably saying, "soooo what." You can't think like that - you've got to have a clear and open mind about all this. We've done some things and we've got some things planned too- would I lie to you? Of course not! "What things are planned?" Well, hummm (you've caught me off guard). OK, here it is, ummm (I'm thinking). Enough of this formality jazz -- I'm gonna tell you like it is -- we've got caving Feb. 5 (Sat.) $8 for the whole day (sign up in the Business office), kayaking lessons in the peewl (pool) Feb. 12 and March 4th with Mike Steven from Wesley Woods. The pool lessons are to get you acquainted with the will and ways of a kayak (sometimes I think it has a mind of its own), so during Spring term we can take a trip down the Hiwassee, ya-hoo! Do you like horseback riding? How does an overnite horseback trip sound?

For all you people who like to rock climb and rappel we frequently have people like Dave Sanchez and Cam Buchholtz who take charge and organize a trip to Cades Cove, Look Rock, etc. If you're interested, please get in touch with them. We've had a trip or two for rappelling and rock climbing to Brevard, S.C. for a weekend. Keep on the lookout for such future trips.

Mike Everett and his staff will present a hair & beauty Seminar sponsored by the Maryville College Senior Class on Wednesday February 23, at 7:00 p.m. at Wilson Chapel. Mike has studied with some of the world's most prestigious hairdesigners including: Vidal Sasoon, the Brays, the Chadwicks, Pivot Point, Michael Hemphill and Jerome Alexander. He has won several highly esteemed competitions including E. United States gold medal and the International Competition. Mike is known more locally for his full service hair studio and for his complete beauty makeovers. His theory is simple: Beauty is an optical illusion. Most all women are potentially beautiful as he will show when he "makes-over" women from the audience. Everett, his staff, and Nancy Lynn fashions will show his spring collection Wednesday Feb. 23. The hair & fashion collection will range from avant guarde to the classical look. All proceeds go the senior class.

Echo Ear

Kiki, Corkie, Bunny, & Tic -- Thanks for being "special" friends! You're always O.T.W., but I love you anyway! Kip

Sandra, why do they call you W.C.? T.T.

Muffy, your new "ducks" are just too divine! The C.B.C.! Kip

Women - Just when you thought it was safe - the ROC is back!

Hey T.T. -- What's this I hear about you sleeping wi three purty gals in your room??? Care to explain?

J.T. - How 'bout those f----- fish?

Q.P. - How's life in paradise?

J.R. - Had any 11's lately?! T.D.

Lady Di- How's that tuna today?

Zero - How 'bout them Dolphins? K.G.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 13 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, February 10, 1983

Fiddler On The Stage At MC

by Bill Warren, Jr.
Echo Staff Writer

The Maryville College Playhouse in conjunction with the Opera Workshop will present the award winning musical comedy "Fiddler on the Roof" in February. The production will open February 18th at 8:15 p.m. in the MC Theater. Performances are slated for the 19th, 24th, 25th, and 26th. The production will be directed by Donald Thomas with Opera Director Kent Skinner and orchestra conductor David Hoffecker.

In this MC production Frank Fiore (Senior) will be featured as Tevye, the poverty bound dairyman of Anatefka saddled with five marriageable daughters. Unable to provide dowries for his daughters and faced with changing times, his positive outlook on life is reflected in his song "If I Were a Rich Man." Tracy DePue (Senior) will be seen as his wife Golde who sarcastically calls him her "breadwinner." Together, they will sing the comical "Do You Love Me?" Jean Plant (Senior) will portray Yente, the busy matchmaker, contemplating possible husbands for Tevye's daughters. The eldest daughter, Tzeitel, will be played by Diane McDaniel (Junior) who wishes to break tradition in picking her own husband. Her choice, Motel, the tailor, will be portaryed by Mark Herron (Senior) who will sing the lively "Miracles of Miracles." Hodel, Tevye's second eldest daughter will be played by Karen Kotz (Senior), and Chava, the third daughter, who follows her sister's inclinations of choosing a man for herself, will be played by Gloria Anaple (Sophomore). Together, the three will sing "Matchmaker, Matchmaker." Perchik, suitor for Hodel, will be played by Jeff Hayes (Senior) while Fyedka, suitor for Chava, will be played by Todd Fleming. The supporting cast includes Teresa Welch (Sophomore) as Fruma-Sara, Angela Kirby (Junior) as Grandma Tzeitel, and Mark Beyer (Senior) as Lazar Wolf.

The source for "Fiddler on the Roof" comes from popular Yiddish fiction written by Sholom Aleichem. These stories appeared in various publications in eastern Europe which then spread to America. The author's pen name, Sholom Aleichem, is the Hebrew phrase for "Peace be with you"; his real name is Solomon Rabinowitz. He is considered "The Jewish Mark Twain." He is noted for his characterization of Tevye.

The musical has earned international acclaim having appeared in 21 countries. It premiered in New York City on September 22, 1964 and copped just about all the prizes and awards at the end of its first New York season. "Fiddler" also won the N.Y. Drama Critics' Circle Award. It is said of "Fiddler" that "here are haunting songs, stirring dances, human wisdom, comedy and poignancy to touch the heart."

Prices for the evening performances are $5.00 for adults and $2.50 for students and senior citizens. There will also be a matinee

The cast of "Fiddler On The Roof" Photo by Nancy Rojas

See FIDDLER, p. 3

Campus Calendar

Friday, February 11

Varsity basketball away

Dinner will be served in the Student Center 5:30 - 6:30. Pizza Hut pizzas will be served - you may bring a six-pack.

John Cimino will sing at 6:00, and a wide screen will show movies starting at 7:00 p.m. Watch for the movie listings, to be posted.

Thursday, February 10

February Meetings Activities (See posters for times and places)

Saturday, February 12

Brunch in Student Center, 10:30 - 1:00 p.m.

Indoor Soccer, Alumni Gym, 2-5 p.m.

Varsity basketball, away

Dinner in Student Center, 5-6 p.m.

Movies on wide screen all afternoon

February Fantasy Costume Ball, 9-1 a.m., Margaret Ware Dining Room

Sunday February 13

Movies on Wide Screen, 2-10 p.m.

Vespers, 6:15 p.m., CCM

Monday, February 14

Varsity basketball, away

Tuesday, February 15

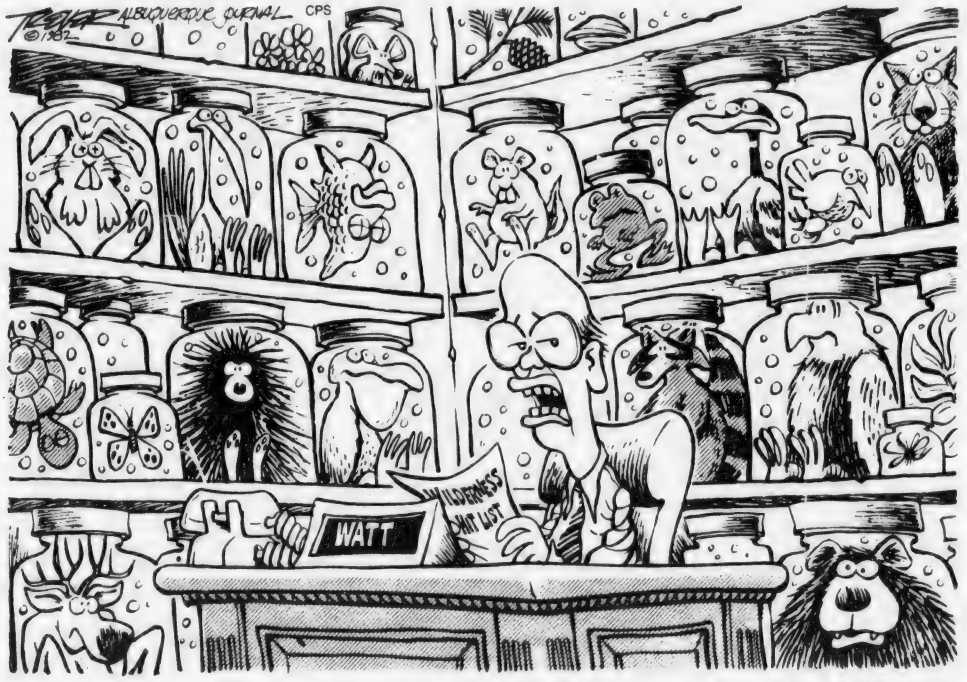
Mardi Gras Dinner

MACCO Concert, Chapel, 7:30 p.m.

Women's basketball, away

February Meetings

Wednesday, February 16



February Meetings

EDITORIALS

Next week, two open forums will be held to discuss the proposed calendar change. The forums are scheduled on Monday and Tuesday at different times so all interested students can find time to attend. These forums should prove to be informative for students, and if enought interested students attend, informative for the ACC.

During the last calendar change proposal two years ago, student involvement was high. Groups worked to inform the campus of the issue and involve everyone in the fight. This year, most people seem to have a "wait and see" attitude. Now the waiting is over, and it is time for all students who are concerned and even those who aren't to get involved. The calendar issue involves everyone in the college community.

The two forums will be the college's best chance to present the arguments for and against the change. A poor showing speaks for itself. If you are really concerned with your academic life at MC, why don't you attend a forum? Now's your chance - why don't you take advantage of it?

"IT IS NOT TRUE THAT I AM AGAINST PRESERVING THE ENVIRONMENT— ON THE CONTRARY...."

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

It's Just A Fantasy

by Kathy Long

Grey skies, barren trees, and cold winds. Perfect weather for . . . dreaming, right? Of course right. February's the month to escape into your imagination; and fortunately the social committee has worked up a dance to cater to the mood of February. The February Fantasy Costume Ball offers an excellent opportunity to "dress up" as your favorite character, heroine or hero.

The theatre department is providing the costumes; and just a leisurely stroll backstage through feathers and silk will stir even a sluggish imagination. The ball is February 12 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the exclusive Margaret Ware Dining Room. There will be a labeled bar with professional bartenders on hand and mixers and non-alcoholic beverages provided. Appetizers and hors d'oeurves will be served all evening along with the sounds of the live band, Jasmine. The cost is $2.50 per person and costumes may be rented backstage at the theatre on Friday, the 11th from 1-4 p.m. Costume rental is $3.00 plus a $5.00 - $10.00 security deposit depending on the costume which will be refunded on the return of the costume to the theatre. Masks are required to protect the individual's right to fantasize without recognition, and may also be purchased at the theatre for $1.00 So stop staring out the window dress up and make that fantasy happen!!

Echo Ear

Hey K.W. Heard you like the Stray Cat Strut!

B.A. Where are you mixers?

H.S. How's the bathroom?

Hey E.G. -- did you catch some zzz's at the CIV?

Hey M.J. - How's the "lug nut" business?

S.S. How's the paint roller?

Hey G.W. What're you doing?

Hey G.W. Do you wanna hear something really gross?

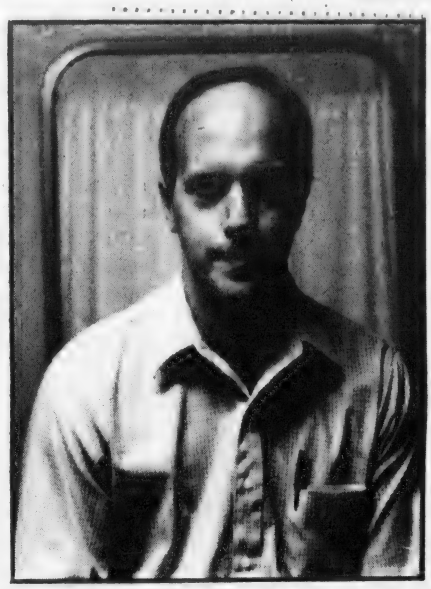
J.T. Got a tall boy?

Prudential, forget it -- Nobody owns a piece of the ROCK

M.J. What's the word from Fred? Cups or not?

L.G. What's the count?

H.H.H.. Looking Good. Tempt me! Wha say?



FIDDLER, from p. 1

on Wednesday, February 23rd at 2:45. All tickets for this performances are $2.00. Reservations can be obtained by calling the MC Switchboard at 982-6412 (Maryville) or 546-6912 (Knoxville). Don't fiddle your chance away . . . get your tickets now!

Mike Everett and his staff will present a hair & beauty Seminar sponsored by the Maryville College Senior Class on Wednesday February 23, at 7:00 p.m. at Wilson Chapel. Mike has studied with some of the world's most prestigious hairdesigners including: Vidal Sasoon, the Brays, the Chadwicks, Pivot Point, Michael Hemphill and Jerome Alexander. He has won several highly esteemed competitions including E. United States gold medal and the International Competition. Mike is known more locally for his full service hair studio and for his complete beauty make-overs. His theory is simple: Beauty is an optical illusion. Most all women are potentially beautiful as he will show when he "makes-over" women from the audience. Everett, his staff, and Nancy Lynn fashions will show his spring collection Wednesday Feb. 23. The hair & fashion collection will range from avant guarde to the classical look. All proceeds go the senior class.

Be on the lookout for Dr. Rick White Wednesdays at 8 p.m. in the infirmary. He is armed with a syringe and considered dangerous.

dr. at large

by Mary Hughes
Echo Asst. Editor

"Open wide and say Ah-ha! Dr. Rick White, a 1971 graduate of MC, is the new doctor at the college infirmary. He sees students on Wednesday nights from 7-8:00 by appointment.

Originally from Maryville, Dr. White went to Maryville High School, majored in chemistry at Maryville College, and graduated from UT Memphis Medical School in 1976. After establishing a family practice residency in Knoxville until 1979, he returned to Maryville.

"I always assumed I'd never find a place I'd like as well as here-I never did," White recalls. He and his wife Cathy have two children: Brian, 3 and Jennifer,5. An exercise enthusiast, Dr. White enjoys running and takes special interest in diet and exercise in relation to preventive medicine.

White states, "I enjoy working at Maryville College; it gives me an opportunity to meet different people from all over the country, and I enjoy working with college students. They are probably the most polite, appreciative, and compliant group as a segment of society."

An appreciative cheer for Dr. White!

OPEN FORUMS: The College community is invited to attend two Open Forums to discuss the Ad Hoc Calendar Committee's recommendation to change to a semester calendar. These Forums will be in Fayerweather 201 at the following times:

Monday, February 14 7:30 p.m.
Tuesday, February 15 4:00 p.m.

The full recommendation and examples of the present and proposed calendars and daily schedules are being placed in student mail boxes so that there will be ample opportunity to study them before the Forums.

Hoop Highlights

Men's

by Robin Rimmer
Echo Sports Editor

On Thursday of last week, the Scots were defeated by the Maroons of Roanoke College 74-64. Maryville led by 10 points at one point in the game, but the Scots could not maintain their lead. Greg Gheen led the Scots scoring with 13 points. Andrew Baker and Dan Kirkpatrick also turned in nice performances scoring 12 points each.

On Saturday night, the Scots were defeated by the Carson-Newman Eagles in a non-conference game. The final score was 103-83. The two teams traded baskets throughout the first half. Maryville went into the dressing room at halftime only 2 points down, but the Scots were unable to get any offense going in the second half. Dan Kirkpatrick led the Scot's scoring with 20 points.

Maryville's overall record now stands at 11-9. The Scots go back on the road again Thursday. During their road trip to Virginia, Maryville will get a second chance at Roanoke College.

Women's

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots basketball team had a complete turn around from last week's action on the way to winning both of their games scheduled for the week. Their season record is now 7-9.

The first team to fall victim to the Lady Scots was the Lady Scots. How is that possible you might ask. Well, the Lady Scots of Maryville travelled to Chattanooga to play the Lady Scots of Convenant on Friday, our side won. The final score was 76-73 with Sara Covington leading the way with 17. Also contributing to the cause were Candy Nutter 16 and Kim Allen 15. The whole team played well especially when one considers the arctic type condition under which the game was played. For some reason, the heat in the Covenant gym was non-existant, but the Maryville fan contingent warmed the place up with their support.

Fisk came to town on Tuesday, and if they had showed up for the first half they might have won. Maryville was extremely fortunate in picking up a 85-61 win. Considering that one of Fisk's best players was out sick, the ladies from Fisk played a great game with Kathleen Barbie scoring 35 with 32 of those in the second half. On the Maryville side Sara Covington played an outstanding game with 24. Candy Nutter 16, Kim Allen 10, and Trina (Coggins) Fancher 10 were also in double figures. The rest of the team played well with everyone playing and everyone scoring. Good game, Ladies!

The schedule only has five more games in it with Milligan on the 10th home, Bryan on the 15th away, Sewanee on the 17th away and LMU at home on the 19th. Don't get lost in the shuffle and come out and support your Lady Scots.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

The Southern Cafe

Critic's Corner

A Restaurant Review
by H. Fortes Twombley

The other evening, Aunt Matilda blew up the kitchen. Don't ask me how - last thing I knew, she was putting a little "kick" in her Moose Stew a la Matilda. Kaboom! Do you know how hard it is to clean up pureed antlers off formica?

Needless to say, we ate out that evening. Aunt Matilda whimpered about wanting to go to Krystal's. I told her that for all I cared, she could cook there and blow it off the face of North America.

Winston, our reliably unreliable Land Rover was in the shop (the mechanic said the headlights were leaking oil), so we hoofed it.

We didn't get very far (Aunt Matilda was complaining about carrying me piggy-back) when we spotted The Southern Cafe on Washington Street in Maryville right near the old railroad station.

The Southern Cafe isn't much to look at from the outside, but once one sets foot within the door, it's like entering a time capsule- time at The Southern Cafe does stand still. (This is evident by the clocks on the exterior sign - I've been told they haven't worked in about 15 years.)

Aunt Matilda and I sat in a booth with wooden benches and an elderly waitress asked us what we would have. I asked for a menu and the waitress pointed to a chalk board above the grill.

After some badgering, Aunt Matilda ordered a cheeseburger and fries, as did I, and we decided to split a pitcher of beer.

As we waited for our order, Aunt Matilda and I marveled over the interior decor - it was striaght from 1955. The walls could stand a good coat of paint and a leak in the ceiling screams for repair, but the cafe is very neat and clean.

We arrived during "happy hour" and a small population of regulars (mostly aging "good ole boys") were swapping stories and soaking up the suds (a lot of it in some cases).

Our waitress brought our beer and then our meal. We drank our deliciously ice cold beer from frosted mugs and sank our teeth into our big, juicy hamburgers. The burgers were large, on fresh buns, with crisp lettuce, tomato, mayo, and melted cheese. Our fries were just greasy enough for the salt to cling to them, even though Aunt Matilda put more salt on the table-top than on her plate.

The Southern Cafe provides a very nice eating atmosphere - friendly, local people, one relatively harmless video game, a juke box with predominantly country-western music, and an interior design to make one reflect back on days gone by.

The food at the cafe is very good, the pitchers of beer very large (for $3.25), the service quick and friendly, and the rates are very reasonable - we were able to eat for $6.58.

I heartily endorse The Southern Cafe as one of Maryville's finest dining spots. Drop in at "happy hour" (5 to 6 p.m.). A-

A NEW SERVICE FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE

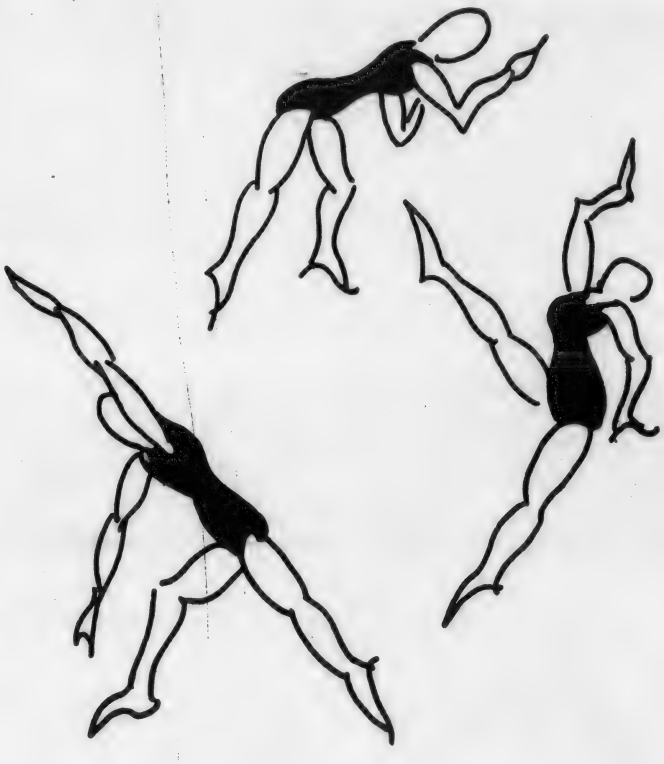
OPEN
TIL
9:00 P.M.
MONDAY thru FRIDAY

If you don't have time during the day, we will be open Monday thru Friday til 9 p.m.
Also the management announces that BRAD WESSON has joined their professional staff of hair designers.
Call Brad today for a convenient appointment for you.
Brad is from Memphis School of Modern Hair Design.



House of Hair
321 HIGH STREET
DIAL 982-4584

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 14 TRIAL EDITION MARYVILLE COLLEGE TRIAL EDITION Thursday, February 17, 1983

You've heard it all,
It's very common,
It's everywhere you look.

In magazines,
Health spas,
Expensive-looking books.

Well, I've got the secret to it all,
The question of What's right?

Just exercise until You're happy
With your body type!

Marta Wittig

Flash!!

Pat Moyer, member of the baseball team, has been accepted to represent Athletes in Action. He is slated to tour Europe this summer with the Athletes in Action baseball team as they play ball and witness for Christ. Athletes in Action is an organization which sponsors selected men and women from all over the United States in teams of basketball, football, baseball, track and field, and other popular sports. These teams are sent to compete athletically and to witness all over the world. Congratulations, Pat!!

Campus Calendar

Thursday, February 17

February Meetings Breakfast, 8:00 a.m.
Open Class, 9:20 in the CCM.
Women's Basketball game, 6:00 p.m.

Friday, February 18

"Fiddler on the Roof", 8:15, Theatre.
Junior Varsity Basketball game, 5:30 p.m.
Varsity Basketball game, 7:30 p.m.

Saturday, February 19

"Fiddler on the Roof", 8:15, Theatre.
Indoor Soccer, 2-5 p.m., Alumni Gym.
Women's basketball game, 6:00.

Sunday, February 20

Vespers, 6:15 p.m., CCM
Orange and Garnet Night, 7-10 p.m., Wilson Chapel.

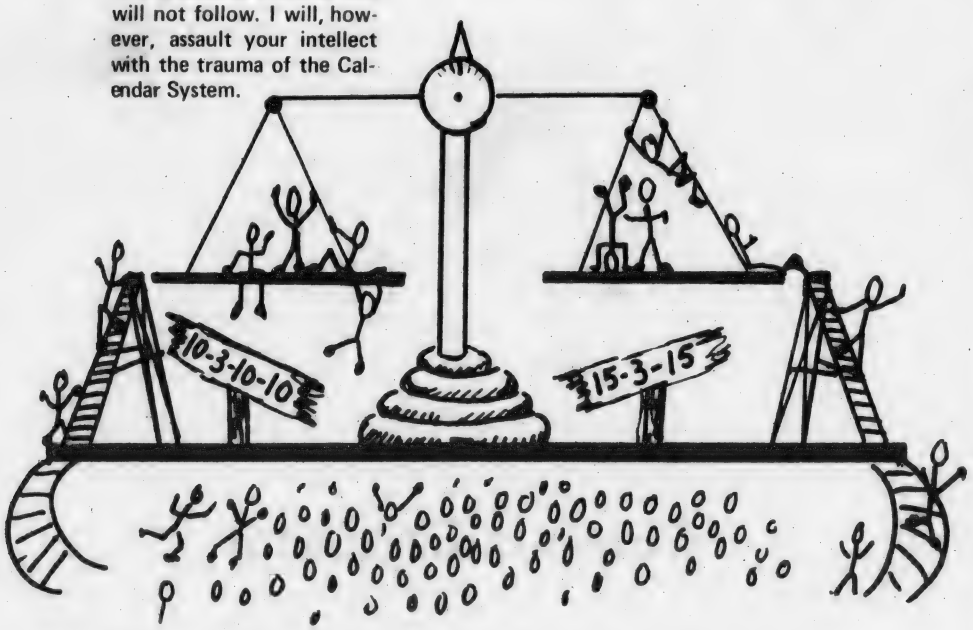
Tuesday, February 22

February Meetings - Open Class, 2:30 p.m., CCM.
Worship Service, 7:00 p.m., CCM.

Wednesday, February 23

"Fiddler on the Roof", Matinee Performance, 2:45 p.m., Theatre.
February Meetings - CIV, 9:30 , Music Hall.
Worship Service, 10:30 a.m., CCM.

"FIDDLER ON THE ROOF"

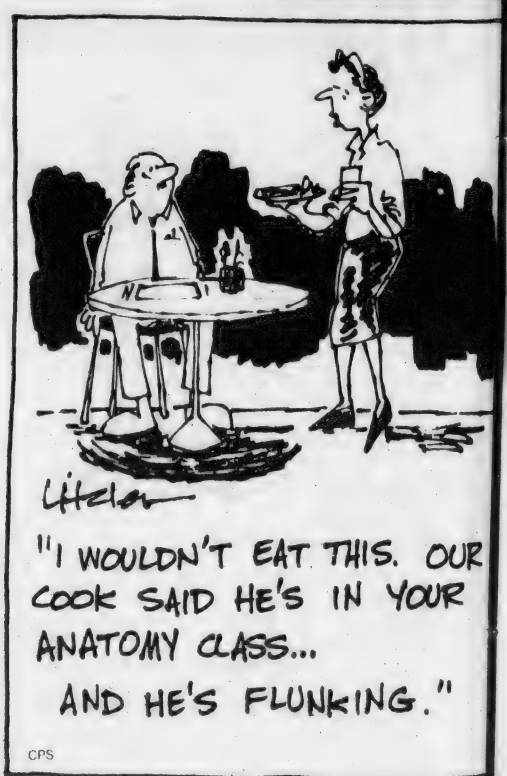


Premiers February 18th at 8:15 p.m. Other performance dates include the 19th, 24th, 25th, 26th, and a special Discount Matinee on Wednesday the 23rd at 2:45 p.m. Admission for all performances, excluding Matinee is Adults, $5.00, Students and Senior Citizens, $2.50. Come and experience the drama and delight of "Fiddler on the Roof"!

Professor Murders Wife

by Marta Wittig

The gruesome fictional tale will not follow. I will, however, assault your intellect with the trauma of the Calendar System.

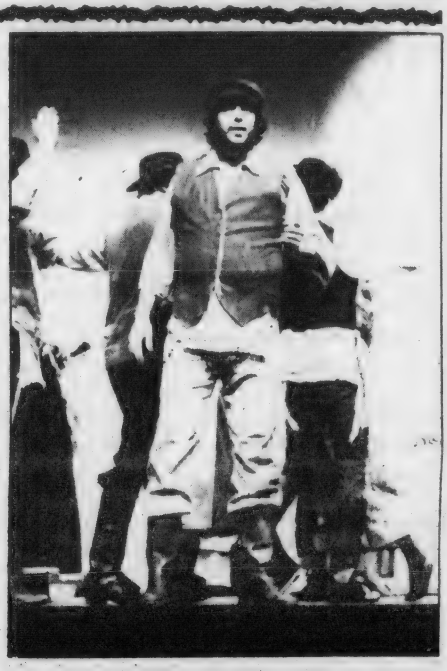


The ACC ad-hoc committee is recommending a change from the 10-3-10-10 calendar to a semester-like system.

The immediate hue and cry of the general student body seems to be against this change, even in the light of its benefits. I don't believe that the response is very academic or well-reasoned.

One of the ways to better this problem would be for a a student committe of five or six students to attend a college which operates under the semester system. To keep the number of experimental variables down, the college should be a small, private, liberal arts institution of the same caliber as Maryville. This experiment, though ideal for the situation, is not really feasible within the present calendar discussion scheudle. A substitute would be to find five or six transfer students who have practical experience with both systems and to obtain reports from them. This is definitely possible. The only hindrance is involvement. Will you step forward?

I will.



the Highland ECHO

Trial Editor . . . . . Marta E. Wittig
Copy Editor . . . . . Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor . . . . . Pat Moyer
Photography Editor . . . . . Debbie Coles
Art Editor . . . . . Kathy Balent
Advisors . . . . . Traci Fraser, Ellen Smith

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

FANTASIES ALIVE!!

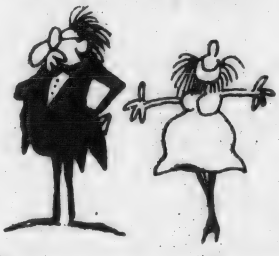
by Peggy Millsaps

The Student Programming Committee sponsored a February Fantasy Costume Ball Saturday night, February 12, in the Margaret Ware Dining Hall at Pearsons. The dance was a labeled bar event with professional bartenders on hand. Music was provided by Jasmine.

Students and members of the MC Community were invited to "act out their wildest fantasies" in a colorful panorama of costumes and masks. About one hundred revelers in all attended. Dancing the night away were, among others, a king and court jester, a pair of gnomes, a Greek king and goddess, Charlie Chaplin, and assorted "gypsies, tramps, and thieves."

Costumes and masks were available for rent from the Playhouse Association. Mrs. Clair Roberts, Todd Flemming, and Matt Kreigle pooled their ingenuity to transform the Margaret Ware Dining Hall into a blue and silver enchanted forest.

The occasion? "Just for fun," said Gloria Anaple, chairman of the Student Programming Committee. "It was a chance for students to live out some of their fantasies . . . and have a blast." She adds, "The dance was a well-planned event -- it is unfortunate for anyone who missed it."



"Just having a good time"

by Amy Waggoner

The Maryville College Choir will be having a different Spring Break this year. The singers will be touring Florida from March 11-20. The members will be housed by host families in towns all over Florida including Fort Myers Beach, Brandon, Haynes City, Palatka, Tampa, and possibly Orlando.

The tour, a tradition that the choir is trying to revive, is sponsored in part by the Alcoa Foundation and is a promotion of Maryville College and its music ministry.

When asked what she was looking forward to most, Leslee Hay, a three-year member of the choir replied, "It's always fun meeting people and answering questions about Maryville College. The host families are nice, and it's a pleasure to get to know them." She concluded, "The thing I'm most looking forward to, though, is just having a good time." Right on, Leslee!

FCA in the FAC

by Kathy Long

What is it about Maryville College that nutures the use of initials and abbreviations? You may have seen a sign or heard someone talk about "FCA in the FAC," but just turned around in disgust at the thought of having to decipher another set of capital letters. Well, I'm happy to report that the FCA is worth deciphering. The Fellowship of Christian Athletes began meeting last year, once a week, with just five loyal members. This year, under the continued leadership of Pat Moyer and Sponsor Mike Ledford, they've grown to an average meeting size of 30 students. Attendence however, has not been the only change for the group this year. They were granted a charter as an official club and organization, and are in the process of having an original constitution and statement of purpose written.

Along with the rest of the college, FCA sadly bid farewell to Mike and Diane Ledbord as they left Maryville to start their new life together in Alabama. Both Diane and Mike were active and enthusiastic members in FCA, and have left fond memories with the group. Fortunately, Coach Pat Dyer had become a member this year, and has already assumed the sponsor position which Coach Ledford left open.

See FCA, p. 4

"A LITTLE EXTRA"

by Pat Moyer

"A little extra" is the theme for this year's Fighting Scots baseball team which, under the direction of new head coach Pat Murphy, has been busy preparing for the season opener against the Tennessee Volunteers on March 1, 1983. Besides playing the VOLS, the Scots will also play a host of scholarship schools.

"Over 20 of our games are against scholarship teams," said Coach Murphy. "We'll need a little extra effort from every player in order to have a successful season."

A few of the players impressing Coach Murphy are Seniors Mark Woodhull and Mike Wortman, along with Freshmen Pepe Feliu, Glen Humphries, and Bob Smith. Woodhull, a senior pitcher, is a three-year letterman from Montana. Feliu, a shortstop, is blessed with exceptional speed and a sure-handed glove. He and second baseman Gleen Humphries should team up to provide a good double-play combination. Bob Smith is a six-foot-five pitcher with a good fastball and great control, according to Murphy. The Scots are also blessed with junior college transfers Mike Smicklas and Chip McElroy; each should provide leadership and experience to the club.

The team's highlight this season will be a ten day trip to Florida March 11-20, in which the Scots are slated to play 16 games against scholarship schools.

"With the attitude of the team, their willingness to work hard, and their desire to give 'a little extra', we should have an exciting season," concluded Coach Murphy.

Echo Ear

Hey Blue Rambler - Be Good. I think G.E. wants to light up your days. Ever-ready.

Hi T.P. who's the squeek this week?

K.W. We heard you had a new roommate last Saturday -

Hey J.T., how's T.?

Fighting to the End

by Amy Waggoner and Mark Mixner

As the basketball season comes to a close this week, the Lady Scots are 9-11, with a strong possibility of bringing their winning percentage over .500. This record, however, does not accurately reflect their success this season because many of their opponents were teams from much larger schools. Maryville belongs to the NCAA Division III and, as a result, offers no athletic scholarships. Division II schools, often on Maryville's schedule, have large enrollments and offer athletic scholarhsips. Captain Kim Allen said, "It is pretty tough playing against girls who are on scholarhsip." The Lady Scots remain unduanted by the tough schedule. "When you play against Division II teams, it can help your ranking in the NCAA standings," said Senior Rachel Reese.

Last week, the Lady Scots were 1-1, losing to Milligan College on Thursday. Saturday, Candy Nutter scored 27 points and Kim Allen and Sara Covington added 13 each as the team rolled past Bryan College.

The ladies, led by seniors Kim Allen, Candy Nutter, Rachel Reese, and Robin Rimmer, begin their last week of play Tuesday at Warren Wilson. Thursday they face the University of the South at Sewanee and Saturday, February 19, they play Lincoln Memorial University in their last home game. Everyone come on out and support the Lady Scots!!

Sports Briefs

Intramural basketball is well underway and off to a great start. Kim Allen and Leah Gross have provided an exciting schedule for non-varsity Athletes and students to participate in. Intramural Softball will begin Spring Term. Interested students should begin compiling a team.

The Varsity Tennis team under Coach Pat Dyer is looking forward to another exciting season. Both the Men's and Women's teams have returning lettermen and should pose a threat to other O.D.A.C. teams.

The Scots track and field team has been busy preparing since eary January. The team lacks depth, so anyone interested in being on the Track Team should see Head Coach Frank DeCamillas.

Snowbound Scots Return!

by Paul Anagnostis

Last Thursday our men's basketball team left Maryville for a three-game road trip through Virginia where they found that they had yet another foe to fight. Games were scheduled for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday against Lynchburg, Hampden-Sydney, and Roanoake, leaving the Scots no time to spare. Two feet of snow on Friday night proved to be too much for traveling, and they were left stranded in a hotel.

The Scots were able to travel Saturday to Hampden-Sydney to face the Tigers who are number two in the ODAC. They went into the game tied for second place with the Tigers, but fell, 74-53. Freshman Paul Mills led Matthews led the scoring with 18 points, while Gheen and Kirkpatrick each had 12 points and 10 rebounds. Coach Lambert would not blame the weather directly, but did hint that it might have affected the team's performance. He said that his team "was not mentally sharp."

The Scots saw their ranking in the ODAC fall to fourth place with a record of 7-7. Their right to host the first round of the ODAC playoffs is now in jeopardy; they must win their last two games to stay at home. After the success of last weekend's road trip, you can bet they are not looking forward to boarding another bus.

the Scots with 15. Greg Gheen was the only other Scot to score double figures, with 13.

Lynchburg was Maryville's next stop for a Sunday night game. The score was much closer, but the Scots were tipped up once again, 76-66. Sophomore sensation Dan Kirkpatrick led all scorers as he pumped in 21 points. Gheen hit for 12, and Tyrone Matthews added 11. The traveling may have been taking its toll, for Maryville shot only 37% from the field.

On Monday the Scots travelled to Roanoke to challenge the number two team in the country and were dealt their third loss, 74-63.

FCA from p. 3

FCA is a Christian organization which, contrary to its title, is not just for athletes. The usual program opens with group singing, accompanied on guitar by Marta Wittig and Kathy Baient. A Biblical message for daily Christian living and thought is then delivered by different volunteer each week. The message varies from skits to tapes, but it's always worthwhile.

FCA is a friendly, enthusiatic organization with no prerequisites. The meetings are held each Wednesday evening at 7:30 in the Fine Arts Center lounge. Come and decipher for yourself what the FCA's all about!!

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee
MEMBER FDIC

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you begin your financial career.

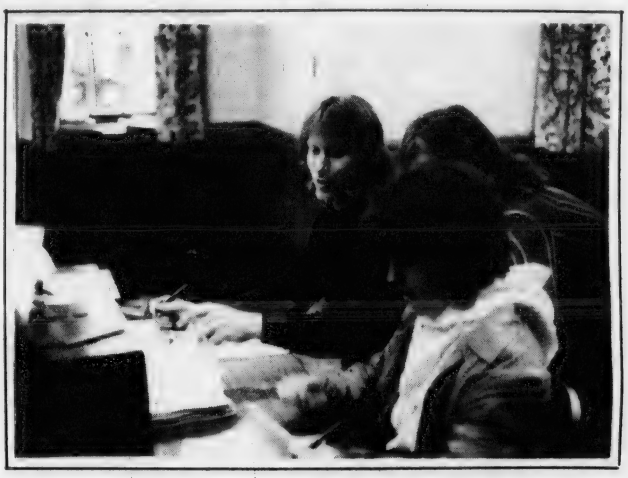
the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 15 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, March 3, 1983

Referendum Results

by Marta Wittig

On Thursday, February 24, the Ad-hoc calendar committee, headed by Dr. Howard, conducted a student Referendum. The subjects of inquiry included the calendar change and the daily schedule change.



A tally chart, compiled by Dr. Howard follows.

RESULTS	Number of students voting	Total % of those who voted	Total % of student body
Referendum	229		44%
Calendar Change
Uncommitted	16	7%	3%
Opposed change	152	66%	29%
Support change	41	18%	8%
Support change with reservation	20	9%	4%
Daily Schedule change
Uncommitted	23	10%	4%
Oppose change	139	61%	27%
Support change	50	22%	10%
Support change with reservation	17	7%	3%

The referendum had no place to indicate class rank, but from the roster charts, of the 229 who voted, 80 were freshmen, 59 were sophomore, 45 were juniors, and 37 were seniors. There were also eight students whose classifications were not indicated.

The possible implications of these results depend on the perusers position. Those opposed to the changes would be quick to point out that the majority of voters were also opposed. However, those in favor of the changes find a quick rebuttal in the poor voter turn out.

The next step in the referendum process is for the Ad-hoc calendar committee to submit a proposal to the All College Council at their meeting on Thursday. This is not a rehearsed procedure. In fact, this is an unprecedented proposal; proposals usually come from a college organization. This proposal was initiated in the ACC; therefore, the procedure is not predictable.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

Leslee "NY'er" Hay and Ben Hornsby collect ballots during the student referendum conducted by the Ad-Hoc calendar committee.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, March 3

Piano Recital by Wendy Wolfner and Barb Morrow, 7:00 p.m. FAC.

Saturday, March 5

Baseball vs. Draughon's Jr. College

Concerto Competition Auditions, 9:30 a.m.

Monday, March 7

Concert Band Concert, 7:30 p.m., Music Hall

Tuesday, March 8

Performing Artist Concert, FAC, 8:15 p.m.

Jury Exams, 4:30 p.m.

Wednesday, March 9

Jury Exams, 4:00 p.m.

Late Night Brunch, 11:00 p.m. Pearsons Dining Hall.

farewell...

by Melissa Parks

This week we watched the end of an era - the last episode of M.A.S.H. The show has played a big role in most of our lives. We spen t half of our lives watching Klinger try to get out of the army. We all know how Radar felt when he needed to sleep with his teddy bear. We got acquainted with Mildred and Erin and Peg and Mom and Uncle Ed despite the fact that we never met them on screen. M.A.S.H. has been very real for us.

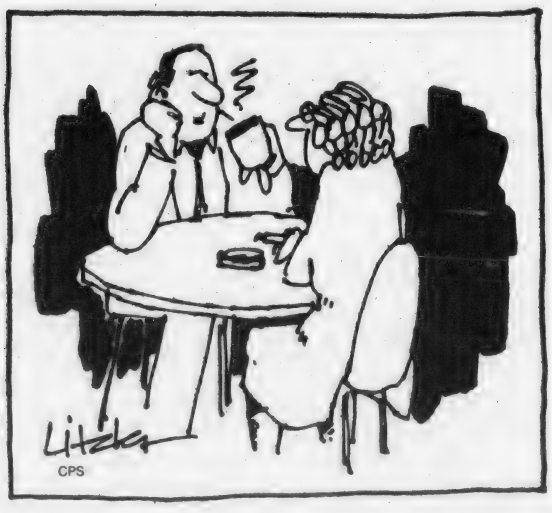
Usually we watch television in order to escape some of the horrors of life. But M.A.S.H. wouldn't let us escape. That bloody operating room was part of every episode. Still, when we watched M.A.S.H., we somehow ceased to want to escape. Maybe it was all the silly humor that made us sit through all the reminders that the Korean War did exist and that today's wars are real. Whatever our reasons, we kept watching. And we kept thinking. The show's message was not easy to erase from our memories. So we really thought about war and about peace. We really considered what those words mean. War for us was not glorious because M.A.S.H. revealed its human terms. M.A.S.H. helped shape all our views about the future of the human race.

Maybe that was the most special thing about M.A.S.H. - the humanity of it.

Point/Counterpoint

Part 1

by Glennis Riedl



The big MC calendar issue - I know everybody is probably tired of hearing about it but it is an important issue! I would like to briefly state some non-emotional reasons why I am against the proposed change.

1. The trimester system is unique. Some people say this point has no relevance but I feel it is important. I know quite a few people who came to MC because of the trimester system. If the main reason for changing the calendar is to attract more students, I think MC is going about it all wrong. If in recruiting the uniqueness and benefits of the trimester system were stressed, I think more prospective students would be interested in MC.

2. It seems that in changing to the semester calendar a lot of the courses (especially those in a series) will have to be redone. Under the proposed supposedly we will have the same amount of work per term. How can they say that when its obvious that more material will have to be covered. (e.g. Presently there are 3 courses in the inorganic chemistry sequence which will be condensed into 2 under the new calendar proposal. I realize that changing courses is a process that needs to be continually done, but the issue at hand is not a curriculum change but a calendar change. (Didn't we just have a curriculum change?)

3. There are two aspects of the calendar itself that I see as being ridiculous. First; the breaks in the middle of the term seem to be a big problem. Of course I know that other schools have breaks in the middle of the term, but that doesn't necessarily mean its good - does it? To interrupt the term for a week seems pointless. Its easy to forget a lot in one week and how many teachers really do expect people to study during their breaks, doesn't that defeat the idea of a break being a chance to get away from school? The second problem that I foresee concerns the proposed 7-period daily schedule. Did you notice the lack of an established lunch break? If a student were to take a D hour (11:15-12:10) and an E hour (12:20-1:15) he wouldn't get to eat. Now you may say only a fool would schedule his classes that way but I can see how it would easily happen. If there was a major course offered D hour that you had to take and either a related, minor or core course E hour it seems like you're out of luck and better plan on going hungry at least those two days D and E are officially scheduled for, but don't forget the option days meaning that you would possibly go 4 days without lunch. By the way - would you have to pay for lunch if you didn't get to eat it?

4. Another complaint I have is that most of the reasons I've heard for changing over to semesters concern freshmen. The idea that pampering the freshmen is MC's first concern really bothers me. The dropout rate at MC is high but is it really the trimester system's fault? I don't think so. MC is a hard school as anyone now attending will testify. This should be stressed to discourage those students who think college is all fun and games and encourage serious students. Besides the fact that is pampers freshmen, I feel this type of reasoning alienates students who presently attend MC. Many people feel that MC cares nothing for those of us past our freshmen year. Does nobody realize that many people who continue to come back do so partly because of the trimester system? A school shouldn't lower its standards to accomodate its freshmen.

!!...THOSE KIDS WOULD JUST LOVE IT IF I DIDN'T SHOW UP ONE MORNING. THAT'S WHY I GO, DAY AFTER DAY."

theHighland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisors . . . . . Tom Hudson, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Music

Award-winning violist Paul Neubauer will appear in concert at Maryville College on Tuesday, March 8, at 8:15 p.m. in the College's Fine Arts Center Music Hall. Neubauer's appearance is part of MC's continuing Performing Artists Concert series.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Neubuaer, the youngest competititor and first prize winner of the 1980 Lionel Tertis International Viola Competition, held on the Isle of Man in Great Britain, is a native of Los Angeles. Since making his solo debut at age 13 with that city's philharmonic orchestra, he has appeared with other renowned orchestras, among them the San Francisco Symphony and the English Chamber Orchestra.

With the English Chamber Orchestra, Neubauer gave the world premier of the "Second Viola Concerto" by Gordon Jacob in London's Queen Elizabeth Hall with Sir Charles Mackerras as the conductor. This concert was recorded for national broadcast by the BBC 3.

Neubauer also gave the North American premier of the Jacob Concerto with members of the Toronto Symphony conducted by Simon Streatfield.

In the summer of 1981, he appeared as featured artist in Holkham Hall at England's Kings Lynn Festival, as well as at the 29th International Festival Ljubljana in Yugoslavia.

Other recitals were at Wigmore Hall in London and a broadcast recording for the BBC 3. In addition, Neubauer has performed as a soloist at the Ninth International Viola Congress in Toronto.

As an ensemble player, Neubauer has given concerts in Merrakech, Casablanca and Rabat in celebration of the 25th anniversary of the enthronement of His Majesty King Hassan II and Morocco's independence.

In 1977-78, he was a member of the Gagliano String Quartete which won the senior first prizes in both the Coleman and Carmel Chamber Music Competitions held in Pasadean and Carmel, Calif., respectively.

Besides the Tertis Competition, other noteworthy awards Neubauer has received include the first prize in the Julia Klumpkey Award Competition in San Francisco in 1978, and first prize in the 1979 Etude Club Competition in Los Angeles.

A pupil of Paul Doktor at the Juilliard School in New York, Neubauer has also studied with Alan de Veritch and William Primrose.

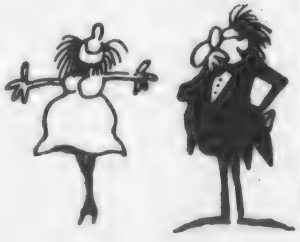
He has a continuing scholarship from the Epstein Fine Arts Fund of the Boys Club of American, which has previously assisted such artists as violinist Earl Carlyss and pianist Emanuel Ax.

◆◆◆

Local musicians are being offered the chance to perform in public with full symphony orchestra accompaniment through the Annual Concerto Competition of the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO), held each year at Maryville College.

According to David Hoffecker, conductor of MACCO, the competition is open to all vocalists and instrumentalists. A winner will be selected from each of the following categories: pre collegiate, collegiate and post collegiate. Winners of the competition will be announced in late March.

The winners will then perform with MACCO on April 19 in the College's Wilson Chapel.



Auditions before a committee will be held on Saturday, March 5, or by arrangement before March 12. Contestants must fill out an application form to receive an audition time. The applications are available at the College's Fine Arts Center office weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

All auditions will be held in the College's Fine Arts Center Music Hall. Each applicant should provide his/her own audition accompanist. MC will provide an accompanist only if the piano score is submitted to the College three days prior to the audition date.

Instrumentalists should prepare one movement of a concerto or solo piece for the audition, while vocalists should prepare one song or aria. All selections must be for solo with orchestral accompaniment.

Competition winners will be announced by March 14, and all applicants will be notified of the competition results. All winners will rehearse with the orchestra on April 13 and at one other rehearsal before the actual concert date (April 19). Orchestra rehearsals are Mondays from 7-9 p.m. in the College's Wilson Chapel.

For more information about the application form or competition rules, contact the College's Fine Arts Center office, 982-6412 in Blount County or 546-6912 in Knoxville.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

Jenny Walker gets the full treatment from Mike Everett at the Hair and Beauty Seminar presented by Mike Everett and his staff. The seminar was sponsored by the Senior Class.

good foundations

by Scarlett Carson

Are you enthusiastic about your school and eager to promote MC to prospective students? If so, maybe you belong in the Student Foundation.

The Maryville College Student Foundation, sponsored by the Admissions Office, provides campus tours, and occasionally housing, for prospective students. The members of the Foundation are also planning a fund raiser and a spring social event.

In the past, applicatns to the Student Foundation have been screened by Larry West, Director of Admissions. This year, however, the screening will be done by the Student Foundation members themselves. When questioned about this growing responsibility, Gerald Burnette, student coordinator of the foundation said, "We're really developing a character of our own. . we're accomplishing our purpose and we're doing a good job of it."

Now in its third year, the Student Foundation has quickly realized its dual objective of aiding the Admissions staff and establishing a good rapport with prospective students. Accordingly, the major future goal for the Foundation is to continue to provide these services; and with 25 enthusiastic members, it shouldn't be difficult.

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you begin your financial career.

Sports

Pat Murphy, a former pitcher for the San Francisco Giants, has been named head baseball coach at Maryville College.

Coach Murphy came to MC last fall as defensive secondary coach for the Scots football team after he was offered several contracts with major league baseball teams. He did play last summer for the Giants.

Upon coming to MC, Coach Murphy explained, "The rewards of coaching at this time at the college level were too tempting."

A solid athlete with background in several sports, Murphy was graduated in 1982 from Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton where he was All-American on a baseball team ranked 10th in the nation.

As a youngster, Murphy won two Kid Gloves Boxing Championships. These days in his spare time, he enjoys serious running, and "working out on the bags with the gloves."

give life

Circle K is sponsoring a blood drive. Medic, the volunteer community blood bank, will be at Maryville College on Thursday, March 3rd from 10:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. in the Center for Campus Ministry - due to increased response, the blood mobile is no longer a sufficient facility. Medic is the area's only volunteer, nonprofit blood center since 1958 and is the sole supplier of 27 hospitals in East Tennessee and Southeastern Kentucky. Medic is a member of the Valley Regional Association of Blood Service Units, the Tennessee Association of Blood Banks, and the American Association of Blood Banks, and, participates in the AABB's nationwide clearinghouse, a computerized transfer system linking blood banks nationwide.

The demand for blood is great. Blood is needed every day to save lives. Your blood donations can help accident victims, surgery patients and persons with cancer, anemia, ulcers and many other illnesses. The only source of blood is a healthy human donor. Close to one million people in East Tennessee and Southeastern Kentucky depend on Medic for their blood needs. This year's blood usage in Medic's area is up almost 20 percent over last year due to greater dependence on component therapy to treat disease and illnesses, and to greater surgical use.

Donating blood not only helps others but provides security for the donor, as well. Medic donors and their families are exempt from the blood center's service charges if blood is needed within a year of each donation. A donor also receives an additional year of family coverage for every donation made. Ninety-five of us will need blood or one of its components or products by age seventy-two, but fewer than five percent of those able to donate are willing to do so.

According to Medic's blanket coverage, if thirty percent of the students give blood, Maryville College will receive one-hundred percent coverage for one year. However, if MC does not reach this goal, then the donors and their dependents are the only ones covered.

The Bank Card 24 BVB

Serves You Any Hour of Any Day

Do All These with THE BANK 24:

• Cash Withdrawals • Deposits • Transfer Money • Loan and MasterCard Payments • Verify Your Balance

The Bank of maryville

"Since 1885"

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

COLLEGE POETRY REVIEW

The NATIONAL POETRY PRESS

announces

The closing date for the submission of manuscripts by College Students is

April 1

ANY STUDENT attending either junior or senior college is eligible to submit his verse. There is no limitation as to form or theme. Shorter works are preferred because of space limitations.

Each poem must be TYPED or PRINTED on a separate sheet, and must bear the NAME and HOME ADDRESS of the student, and the COLLEGE ADDRESS as well.

MANUSCRIPTS should be sent to the OFFICE OF THE PRESS.

NATIONAL POETRY PRESS

Box 218 Agoura, Ca. 91301

Come To the

AAUW

BOOK FAIR

March 4th and 5gh, 9:30 am - 5:30 pm

Used paperbacks and hardbacks in many categories:

art	adventure
biography	mystery
cooking	romance
history	poetry
psychology	language
religion	children's literature
travel

Also, second-hand records, paintings, and prints.

BLOUNT COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

(opposite Maryville Towers on McGhee Street)

Donations accepted

Wednesday, March 2, 3:30 - 8 p.m.

and
Thursday, March 3, 9 a.m. - 8 p.m.

rear of Blount County Library.

Old textbooks and ancient magazines do not sell!!

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 ... 1, 1983

VOL. 68

#16

MISSING

Pa ... nd

re-he r pro-

Co

Thursday, A
Junior Recit
Lisa Skeen,
Hall
Men's Tenni

Friday, Apr
Baseball an
Senior Reci
Hall

Men's Tennis, away

Sports

Pat Murphy, a former pitcher for the San Francisco Giants, has been named head baseball coach at Maryville College.

Coach Murphy came to MC last fall as defensive secondary coach for the Scots football team after he was offered several contracts with major league baseball teams. He did play last summer for the Giants.

Upon coming to MC, Coach Murphy explained, "The rewards of coaching at this time at the college level were too tempting."

A solid athlete with background in several sports, Murphy was graduated in 1982 from Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton where he was All-American on a baseball team ranked 10th in the nation.

As a youngster, Murphy won two Kid Gloves Boxing Championships. These days in his spare time, he enjoys serious running, and "working out on the bags with the gloves."

give life

Circle K is sponsoring a blood drive. Medic, the volunteer community blood bank, will be at Maryville College on Thursday, March 3rd from 10:00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. in the Center for Campus Ministry - due to increased response, the blood mobile is no longer a sufficient facility. Medic is the area's only volunteer, nonprofit blood center since 1958 and is the sole supplier of 27 hospitals in East Tennessee and Southeastern Kentucky. Medic is a member of the Valley Regional Association of Blood Service Units, the Tennessee Association of Blood Banks, and the American Association of Blood Banks, and, participates in the AABB's nationwide clearinghouse, a computerized transfer system linking blood banks nationwide.

The demand for blood is great. Blood is needed every day to save lives. Your blood donations can help accident victims, surgery patients and persons with cancer, anemia, ulcers and many other illnesses. The only source of blood is a healthy human donor. Close to one million people in East Tennessee and Southeastern Kentucky depend on Medic for their blood needs. This year's blood usage in Medic's area is up almost 20 percent over last year due to greater dependence on component therapy to treat disease and illnesses, and to greater surgical use.

Donating blood not only helps others but provides security for the donor, as well. Medic donors and their families are exempt from the blood center's service charges if blood is needed within a year of each donation. A donor also receives an additional year of family coverage for every donation made. Ninety-five of us will need blood or one of its components or products by age seventy-two, but fewer than five percent of those able to donate are willing to do so.

According to Medic's blanket coverage, if thirty percent of the students give blood, Maryville College will receive one-hundred percent coverage for one year. However, if MC does not reach this goal, then the donors and their dependents are the only ones covered.

The Bank Card 24 hrs

Serves You
Any Hour of Any Day
Do All These with THE BANK 24:
• Cash Withdrawals • Deposits • Transfer Money • Loan and MasterCard Payments • Verify Your Balance

The Bank of maryville
"Since 1885"
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

COLLEGE POETRY REVIEW

The NATIONAL POETRY PRESS

announces

The closing date for the submission of manuscripts by College Students is

April 1

ANY STUDENT attending either junior or senior college is eligible to submit his verse. There is no limitation as to form or theme. Shorter works are preferred because of space limitations.

Each poem must be TYPED or PRINTED on a separate sheet, and must bear the NAME and HOME ADDRESS of the student, and the COLLEGE ADDRESS as well.

MANUSCRIPTS should be sent to the OFFICE OF THE PRESS.

NATIONAL POETRY PRESS

Box 218 Agoura, Ca. 91301

Come To the

AAUW

BOOK FAIR

March 4th and 5gh, 9:30 am - 5:30 pm

Used paperbacks and hardbacks in many categories:

art
biography cooking history psychology religion travel adventure mystery romance poetry language
children's literature

Also, second-hand records, paintings, and prints.

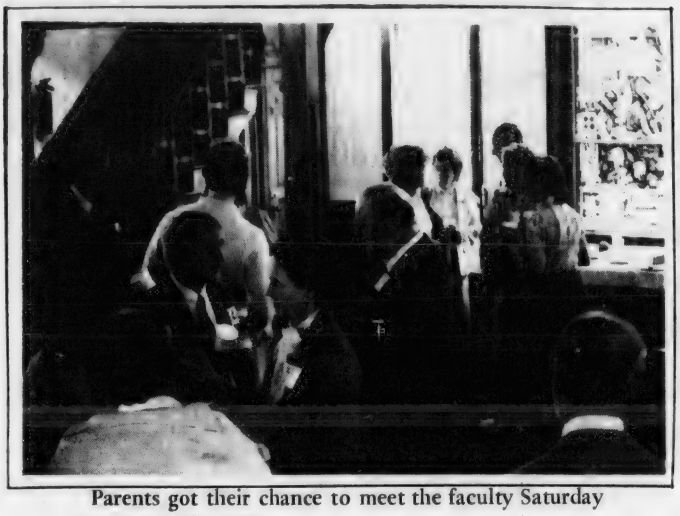
BLOUNT COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

(opposite Maryville Towers on McGhee Street)

Donations accepted

Wednesday, March 2, 3:30 - 8 p.m.

and
Thursday, March 3, 9 a.m. - 8 p.m.



rear of Blount County Library.

Old textbooks and ancient magazines do not sell!!

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 17 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, April 21, 1983

Parents, students enjoy weekend

Parents got their chance to meet the faculty Saturday morning in the CCM.

Mark Beyer and supporting cast presented "Everyman" Saturday in the CCM.

Photos by Kathy Blair

Playmakers Beckie Haynes, Gloria Anaple, Kelly Fitzgerald, and Jean Plant suggested "Let's Not Talk About Love" at dinner in Pearsons.

The Woodwind Quintet, led by David Hoffecker provided lunchtime entertainment.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, April 21
Junior Recitals-Kama Cook and Lisa Skeen, 7:00 p.m., Music Hall
Men's Tennis, 1:30 p.m.

Friday, April 22
Baseball and Softball, 3:00 p.m.
Senior Recital-Bill Bender, Music Hall

Saturday, April 23
Softball, 3:00 p.m.
Senior Recital-Karen Harville, 8:15 p.m., Music Hall

Sunday, April 24
Baseball, away

Monday, April 25
Softball, 3:00 p.m.
Men's Tennis, away

All the news that fits

Well, here it is - another edition of The Highland Echo. Lately I found that there are a lot of people on campus, faculty and administration as well as students, that have no idea where and how the Echo is produced. So, for those of you who have no idea what goes on behind the scenes before it hits the Post Office, here's the scoop.

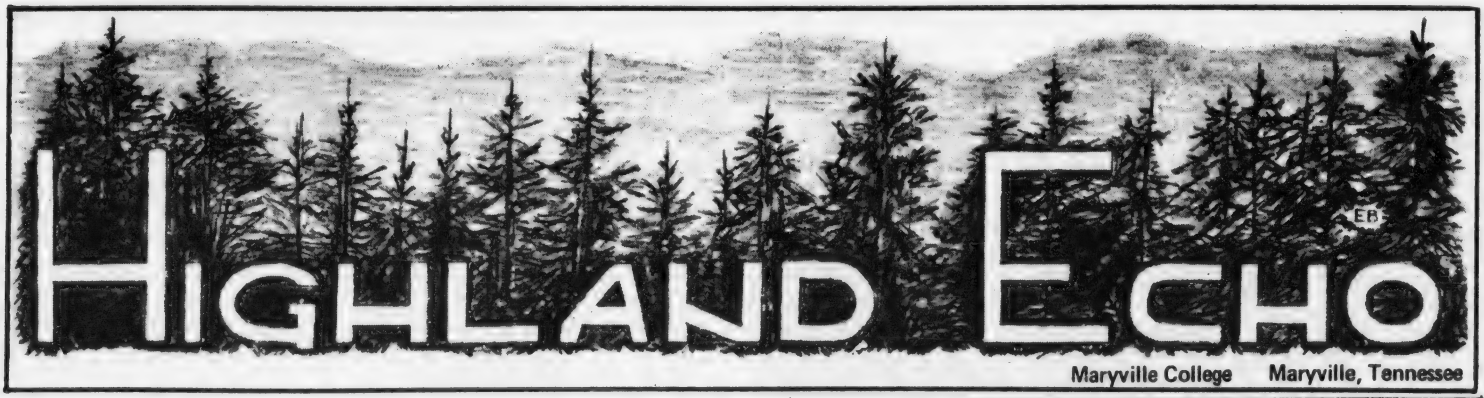
The Echo begins almost two weeks before its publishing date. For this week's Echo, work was started on Sunday, April 10. Between that Sunday and Wednesday assignments were thought of and given out.

The following Sunday is when the real headache begins. Between Sunday and Tuesday we have to round up all the stories and get them typed (when the typewriter is working). Susan Williams, our typist, puts up with weird schedules and typewriters that are always on the blink.

Kathy Blair, photography editor, has to develop and print the photographs for the issue - this week she shot and developed five rolls, the result of which you see. There were many more pictures, but we only have so much room.

Along with the photos and copy are the headlines. Believe it or not, making up headlines is a long and complicated process. First you have to decide how many columns you want the story to run, then the type size, and then compose a head of the chosen size to fit in the space. If you think some of the headlines you've read are bad, you should see some of the ones that weren't used!

After the heads and photos are made, they are taken to the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times to be processed. The Echo is fortunate to have the help of the Daily-Times staff - they are great people who are always ready to help.



When the copy has been typed our typesetter, Terri Roberts, takes over. She types the stories into a special typewriter in the Print Shop that justifies the copy into whatever width we want, and in whatever type face we want.

Tuesday night it all comes together (usually) at layout. Kathy and Jenny Fitzell put the paper together, which is something like putting the pieces of a jigsaw puzzle together. The typeset copy is on special paper, and waxed on the back. The wax allows us to pick up and move the copy to wherever we want. Special tapes with designs and lines are used to box in and separate stories - it is an interesting process. After everything is laid out and proofed, we hang it up for the night.

Wednesday morning the corrections are typeset and spliced in, any last minutes stories set, and the finishing touches made. By 1:00 the finished layout sheets have to be delivered to the Daily Times for printing. That afternoon at about 4:00 the papers are ready to be picked up, and then folded by hand. Thursday morning we deliver them to the Post Office, and that's the last we see them until they end up on the Post Office floor.

The entire Echo staff is composed of students - that's something you need to remember if your paper is late or if one doesn't come at all. Besides carrying three classes we're also trying to put out a weekly paper, and believe me that's quite a lot of work!

So as you read this week's Echo, just think - we're almost ready to start on next week's issue, and assignments for week after next's are already out. Well, there you have it. That's how the Echo gets from us to you.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Editor-in-training . . . . . Jenny Fitzell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisor . . . . . Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

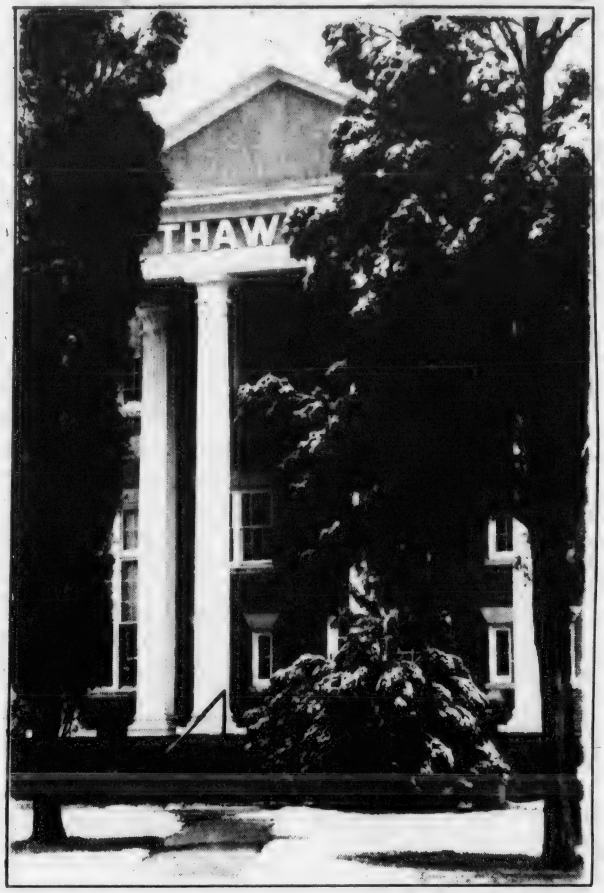
Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Student Wins Scholarship

Bill Warren, Jr.
cho Staff Writer



Sarah Jane Lindsay was warded a Don Sahli Scholrship by the Tennessee ducation Association EA) at their state Conntion in Nashville on Friay, April 8, 1983.

A Junior Political Science ajor from Chattanooga, arah Jane is using her elecves to obtain her Secondry Education Certificaon. She has been an active ember of the MC chapter f STEA for two years and rves as the club secretary r the current academic year. Her tentative plans after graduation include teachng for a short period of time and eventually attending law school.

The Don Sahli Scholarship is named after Dr. Donald G. Sahli (1916-1981), the TEA Executive Secretary from 1963-1976. TEA notes that "the Don Sahli Scholarship Fund is a fitting tribute to the man who lead the TEA during one of its finest hours and who continued his active interest in the Association until his death in 1981."

Both Undergraduate and Graduate scholarships are awarded. On the Undergraduate level, one $400.00 scholarship is awarded to the state's student TEA President while an additional $400.00 scholarship and two $200.00 scholarships are awarded to student TEA members. The applicants apply through their local chapters. On the Graduate level, one $400.00 award is given.

Sarah Jane was the recipient of the second $400.00 scholarship mentioned above. She was presented with the scholarship at the TEA Awards Luncheon on Friday. "I was very surprised to win at the state level," Sarah Jane said.

Photos by Kathy Blair

FAC-TS

Student Recitals Presented

y Bill Warren, Jr.
cho Staff Writer

Three student recitals are heduled for this week at e FAC.

Junior Kama Cook, pianst, and Junior Lisa keen, organist, will be resenting their Junior Rectal on Thursday, April 21 7:00 p.m. in the FAC usic Hall. Kama is a perrmance studies major on ano from Elkton, VA. She ill feature Mozart's "Sonain C Major, K330," riffes' "The White Peaock," and Liszt's "Concert tude, 'Forest Murmers' ". ama studies under Dr. onham. Lisa Skeen is a erformance studies major n organ from Maryville. She will recite Bach's "Toccata Adigio, and Fuge in C Major," Messiaen's "The Angels," and Widor's "Toccata from the 5th Symphony." Lisa studies under Dr. Bloy. After the recital, a reception will be held in the FAC Lounge. It is open to everyone attending the recital.

Senior Bill Bender, pianist, will be giving his senior recital on Friday, April 22, at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall. He will play Mozart's "Theme and Variations in A," Beethoven's "Sonata in C Major, Op. 53," Scriabin's Etude in F," Liszt's "Etude in Db, 'Un Sospiro," and Chopin's Fantasia in F minor." Bill is from Denville, NJ, and for the past four years has studied under Mrs. Schoen. He plans to attend graduate school in Cincinnati, OH.

Senior Karen Harville, organist, will be presenting her senior recital on Saturday, April 23, at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall. She will perform Bach's "Prelude and Fuge in A Minor," Charles Ivies' "Variations on America," a selection of English trumpet tunes, and Messiaen's "The Serene Alleluias." During the past four years, she has studied under Dr. Bloy. Karen lives in Maryville with her husband, Jim, and daughter, Elizabeth. After the recital, a reception will be given by her family in her home on Sevierville Road.

April Showers?

For all you do . . .
This snow's for you

MC students were surprised to awaken Monday to a white spring scene. Radio stations jokingly played "Winter Wonderland," and MC bathing beauties were upset at the disrupting of their sunning schedule. By the afternoon the snow was gone, but this has been a winter to be remembered.

SNEA STUFF

Bill Warren, Jr.
cho Staff Writer

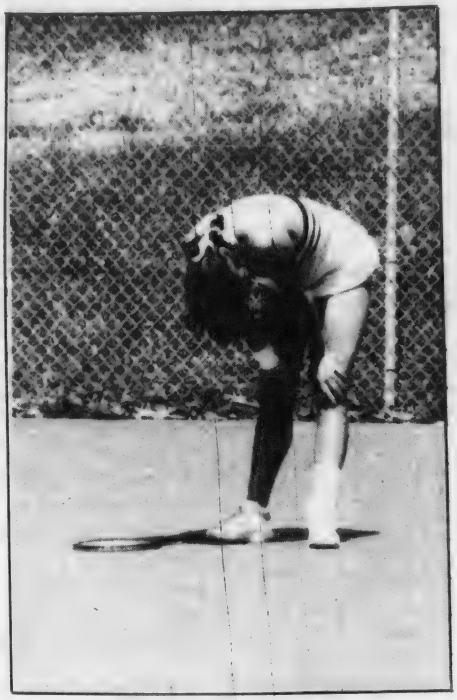
Mrs. Gloria Dailey, the EA Instruction and Prossional Development (IP) Coordinator, was the est speaker at the April 1983 SNEA meeting.

Mrs. Dailey directed a workshop on "Time Management" focusing on the classroom environment and the teacher. She lives in Nashville and holds a career position at the TEA state office. Her career includes traveling to the local STEA Chapters to direct seminars and workshops. The IPD program aims at determining the basic instructional concerns found among Tennessee educators and to assist both teachers and local STEA chapters in addressing them.

Sports Briefs

Softball

by Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer



There's an old sports adage that says that any sports contest is 60% mental, 30% physical, and 10% luck. Unfortunately, for the Lady Scots softball team, neither the 60 nor the 10 seems to be falling their way. An outstanding play is followed by an error which leads to a run and before you turn around the team has lost its intensity, and a team that's not in the game mentally is seldom in the game physically and usually ends up losing.

However, all is not lost, for although the Lady Scots have not set a blistering pace for the season as yet, there are some sure signs of improvement as a result of experience. Coach Pat Ballard says, "if you don't play one of the toughest schedules in the nation, then I don't know who does."

He points to the combined records of two of Maryville's opponents as proof. Hiwasee and Tusculum together have won close to thirty games while losing less than five. Ballard is pleased with the ladies performance this past weekend at the Lagoon Invitational in Montgomery, Ala., saying that the team showed itself that it could play with the best in the nation. The Lady Scots having finished the toughest part of their schedule are now 2-11 and hope to pick up wins against teams such as Bryan, Milligan, and Tenn. Temple.

For a quick look at last week's action, read on. On Tuesday the team dropped two to Tusculum at Greeneville by scores of 8-1 and 2-1. Wednesday the team travelled to Hiwassee and picked up its first win by defeating the Lady Tigers 9-5 in the first game. The second game found the Lady Tigers the winners 16-2 as a result of ten Lady Scots errors. The team then travelled to Montgomery where on Saturday they lost 6-4 to Troy State in fifteen innings, and then dropped another close one 3-1 to Delta State before being handed another setback by Auburn (yes that's right Auburn) 15-3. Sunday found the Lady Scots back on the field and back in the win column, after being drilled 11-0 by a team from Mississippi, the Lady Scots rebounded to beat Lomax Hannon Jr. College 8-7.

The team travels to Milligan on Thursday and then hosts the East Tenn. Classic on Saturday. Teams participating in the tournament which will most likely be held at Everett Park include Maryville, Hiwasee, Tusculum, LMU, and Milligan. Come out and back your Lady Scots and help put them in the win column once again.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

The agony of de-feet is evident at the women's tennis match against LMU.

THE HAIR CELLAR
514 West Broadway
4 Blocks from the College in the basement
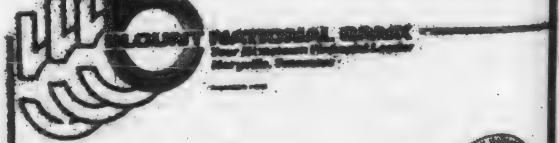
Ron Iven's Properties
Across the street from Mr. T's

New Summer Hours
Daily 8:30 - 5:00
Saturday 7:30 - 1:00
Thursday late by Appt.
982-4502
Ear Piercing - $8.00

Hair Plus
FOOTHILLS MALL
MARYVILLE, TENN.
TEL: 982-3443

The staff of Hair Plus invites you to visit our new salon in the Foothills Mall.

Lin Ramsey
Linda Carroll
Donna Glandon
Gail Gredig
Nancy Smith
Polly Whitehead-Manicurist



We're open Mon. - Sat.
10 a.m. - 9 p.m.

We're The Professionals

Mark Hendricks
Sheila Spears
Carolyn Shanklin
Karen Hord
Annette Frye

Show your student I.D. for a 10% discount on Spring and Summer styles. Call or come by today. Walk-ins are welcome.

REDKEN We use and recommend Redken products
FOOTHILLS MALL 982-3443
Just say, "Charge It" - VISA, MasterCard

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you in your financial career.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 18 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, April 28, 1983

Ground Zero Hits Home

by Ciretta Carpenter

This week Maryville College exercises a peaceful tradition; or should I say Peace-Full? On Saturday, April 30th, the Peace Education Taskforce is sponsoring its second Ground Zero Week Open Mike Rally. The campus, along with the nation, will verbally recognize the all too real threat of modern nuclear warfare , this year's theme being "What About the Russians?" Speakers will include Steve Ford, Dr. Bunde, Dr. Pickens, Dr. Brunger, Peter Vial and others. And musical entertainment will be provided by Debbie Hall, Bryan McFarland, Gerald Burnette, Danny Cartlidge, Laurie Nelson and Lisa Vandivort. Some "peace paraphanalia" will also be available for purchase and order (buttons, etc.). The rally will begin at 12 noon in front of Thaw Hall. We hope that the attendence to this year's rally will equal and surpass last year's, simply because there can never be too much enthusiasm exhibited when one is concerned about that which threatens out existence.

At 2:30, we will all move down to the Chapel Complex to enjoy Lysistrata, a play by the scatological Greek writer Aritophanes. The play concerns the effects of the Peloponnesian Wars (which lasted twenty-six years), and a scheme the women of Athens and Sparta designed to end that war. The peace symbolism and the scatological humor of Lysistrata are not to be missed. (The cost for students is one dollar.) The Peace Education Task Force invites the college community to join us in these peace-full events.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, April 28

Faculty recital, 8:15 p.m., Music Hall

Friday, April 29

CIV, 9:20 a.m.
Softball, 3:00 p.m.

Saturday, April 30

"Lysistrata," 2:30 p.m., Chapel Courtyard
BSA Mountain Trip
Block Party

For sports games and times see "On Campus Today" and watch for other events to be announced.

All Comped Out

by Jenny Fitzell

Comps - They are something every senior anticipates, but how does one begin to review material learned during the last four years?

Bruce Guillaume, director of the counseling center, outlined two simple principles to be remembered. He explained that the brain works at full capacity for forty-five minutes to an hour and that after each period a ten minute rest is critical. "Students tend to put in a whole lot of hours, but," said Guillaume, "this won't work." Studying in some other place than the dorm room is the second principle to be followed. Between the stereo and the t.v. there are just too many distractions. However, Bruce does think that study groups can be helpful, if the students really do work. Mr. Guillaume also suggests that the daylight hours be committed to studying because most students start to wind down by nightfall, and what could have been accomplished in an hour will require an hour and a half.

Mr. Guillaume also revealed a couple of "tricks" that may prove helpful. He proposed that students obtain alternate texts on the subjects to see what information is included in both, the logical deduction being that this material must be important. To restrain the wandering mind, Bruce recommends placing a piece of paper on one corner of the desk, and, as thoughts of unfinished projects seep in, write them down. Thus the student will have a list of items that can be completed during the ten minute breaks. Mr. Guillaume advises the day dreamers to let their minds wander for thirty minutes before they begin studying. Then they will concentrate better.

Bruce said that anyone just starting to study "has not stacked the deck in his favor. However panicking is not productive and can be overcome. The students must follow these suggestions, organize themselves, and divide up the material into the remaining days." The three key aspects to keep in mind are: (1) organization; (2) attitude - "what one says to himself about comps"; (3) pace - "eleventh hour studying doesn't pay off." Mr. Guillaume also believes that sleeping, eating, and exercising should not be given up next week. Bruce Guillaume stressed the importance of comps and gave as his best advice, "know the subject matter, don't waste time outguessing the professors."

EDITORIALS

As an editor of a MC publication, I feel that I should write a few words about the current situation with the yearbook. There have been grievances voiced about this year's book, and I hope that it will make some of the MC community sit up and take notice of all the publications and the problems that they are currently facing.

The Echo, Chilhowean, and Impression's all operate on a budget. Our budgets were cut this year, and we are facing another probable cut for '83-'84. Printing costs are going up, which means the already dwindling pages of the yearbook may be cut even more. The Junior class has expressed an interest in helping the yearbook raise additional funds-- great! It would be nice if all four classes next year got out and supported the yearbook. After all, the Chilhowean is the one really lasting reminder of our years spent here.

Besides financial support, the Chilhowean needs staff support, as does the Echo. It takes many dedicated people to put out a quality product, and it seems MC is lacking in that category. Right now the Echo needs sports writers - there must be someone out there hiding in the woodwork that would like to help - or is there? There are many MC students who complain about the quality of MC publications, but when it comes down to doing actual work for them they wouldn't think of it. How can we do a good job if we have no help?

Next fall when work begins on the publications, instead of just reading them why don't you get involved? With the continuous and dedicated support of MC students, the publications on campus could really excel and become quality products that we all can look forward to and be proud of.

P.S. - I still need sports writers - any volunteers??

LETTERS

To the Editor,

This is a formal complaint concerning this year's annual. We don't mean this to be taken personally by any member(s) of the annual staff. However, the number of mistakes is inexcusable. For instance, it seem no effort was made to label pictures correctly. Many people were misnamed in pictures or not named at all. Also, many people who had their class picture made did not appear in the class section - Why is this? Names were misspelled on some pages yet on other pages they were correct - this should certainly have been checked. It also seems there was little organization in the placement of pictures. Putting people on a dorm page when they don't live in that dorm; putting a picture of an upperclass dorm in the Freshmen section - it doesn't make sense.

Again, we don't want anyone to be offended and yes, we do realize there was a change of editorship, but we want to make sure that these mistakes don't occur again. As Juniors, we want out Senior annual to be better.

Glennis Riedl
Joan E. Marshall
Kim Hatfield
Jennifer Denny
Sheryl Moore
Evelyn Sowell
Christopher Porter
Kim Corbett
Laurie C. Nelson
Lisa VanDivort
Terri Roberts

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Editor-in-training . . . . . Jenny Fitzell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robirt Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisor . . . . . Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Lysistrata:MC Passion Play

by Bill Warren, Jr.

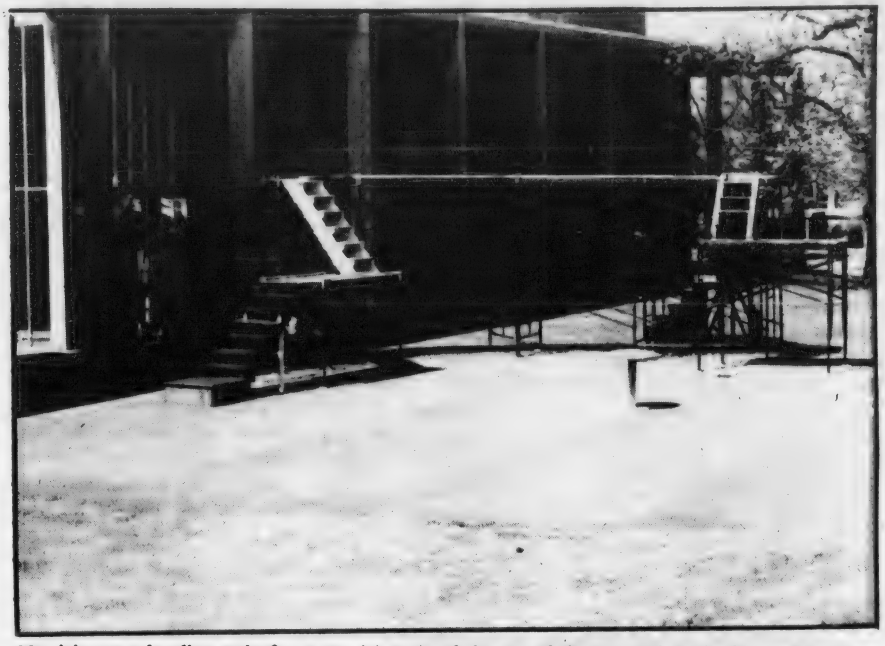
The MC Playhouse has set the stage for Lysistrata, a Greek comedy by Aristophanes. Lysistrata is Aristophanes' most popular play because it is the most appealing to 20th century playgoers. Performances will be April 20, May 1, 7, and 8 at 2:30 p.m. outside the theatre complex.

Featured as Lysistrata is Sharon Crane of the Maryville College staff. Sharon is both the Resident Director of Lloyd and the Director of Student Programming. Lysistrata, the outspoken woman of Athens, suggests to the women of Sparta and Athens "Total abstinence from SEX" as the solution to ending warfare.

Players of the Athenian women include Jean Plant (Senior, Ft. Myers, Fla.) as Kleonike, Kathy Long (Senior, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.) as Myrrhine, Beckie Haynes (Senior, Hendersonville, TN) as Lampito, and Teresa Lawson (Senior Sweetwater, TN) as Ismenia. Tommy Brown (Junior, Lithia, Fla.) will play Myrrhine's husband, Kinesias.

Koryphaios of Women, the leader of the women's chorus, will be Gloria Anaple (sophomore, Cincinnatti, OH) and Koryphaios of men will be Joe Longo (Junior, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.).

Other supporting roles include Bryan McFarland (Senior, Roswell, GA) as commissioner, Tillman Crane (Maryville, TN) as Spartan Herald, and Mark Beyer (Senior, Cincinnati, OH) as the Spartan Ambassador. Karen Kotz (Senior, Knoxville, TN) will be featured as the statue of Peace.



The chorus of women includes Beth Manire, Angela Kirby, Kelly Fitzgerald, Diana Bonyadi, Becky Sanden, Maelea Morrison, Maggie Corey, and Pamela Nelson.

The chorus of men includes Jim Kidder, Donald Thorne, Thomas Greer, and Phil Finney.

The Directoral staff for this production is lead by Director Donald Thomas. He will be assisted by Assistant Director/Chorus Master Karen Kotz. The Costume Designer is Pamela Nelson, and the set designer is Tillman Crane, who has constructed a special stage outside the theatre.

The Archers in Lysistrata include Andrew Baker, Walter Hardaway, Jim Stettner, and Mark Mixner. Emily Nelson will portray the child, and Jina Radozycki will be the Policewomen. The Supernewmoraries include Vic Newmark, Eric Greaser, and Leslee Hay.

Admission is $3.00 for adults and $1.00 for students and senior citizens. Note: Lysistrata contains material of an adult nature.

No, it's not a landing strip for E.T. - it's part of the set of the upcoming playhouse presentation of "Lysistrata" opening this Friday night.

Echo picture by Kathy Blair

Reach Out and Touch Someone

by Peggy Millsaps

From Monday April 18 to Thursday April 28 volunteers stationed themselves weeknights at long tables hugging the walls of a large room next to the Career Planning and Placement Center to telephone alumni flung far and wide across the United States.

What was going on? Going on was an annual two-week long phone-a-thonsponsored by the Office of Development. The phone-a-thon was the result of MC's nomination by the council for the Advancement and Support of Education and the United States Steel Corporation to receive an award at CASE Annual Assembly in June for Improvement in the Alumni Incentive category. The prestigious award is in recognition of the response received last year from college alumni to the challenge issued by an anonymous donor who agreed to donate $500.00 if alumni matched it with $1,000,000.

Volunteers from various campus organizations including Chi Beta, Circle K, the Playhouse Association, IVCF, and the American Chemical Society, under the direction of Jeanne Gibson, dialed computer-selected numbers to raise the stipulated amount. Freshmen, Seniors, individuals from outside the immediate campus community, and staff and faculty members also pitched in. Door prizes for volunteers were donated by Pizza Hut, Pizza Inn, McDonalds, and Wendy's.

If the stipulated amount is raised by the June 30 deadline, the money would be used for:

(1) Increased scholarship, work, and loan programs for students.

(2) Renovation of the physical plant.

(3) Faculty salaries,

(4) New academic programs,

(5) Increased endowment for overall operation.

While estimates of the amount raised aren't in yet, Jeanne Gibson, who masterminded the two-week phone-a-thon, "wishes to thank all students, individuals, and groups who participated and remind students who haven't graduated yet that they will be called next year."

It's a good cause, folks.

---

by Marta Wittig

The publication positions of Impressions editor-in-chief, and assistant editor and the Chilhowean assistant-editor were recently filled by Susan Jennings, Jeff Tickle and Crystal Carrol, respectively.

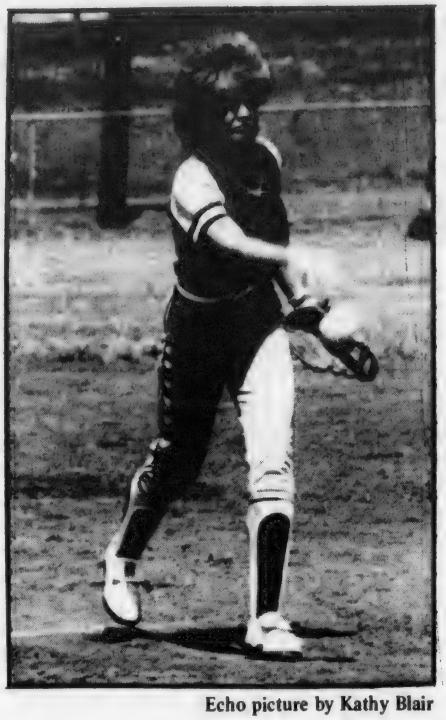
Susan, currently a sophomore English major, is the assistant editor for Impressions this year. Her plans for the magazine are to keep the tradition while bringing out the quality. Sophomore Jeff Tickle is experienced in writing and photography and should prove an asset to the staff.

In spite of the dubious future of the 1983-84 Chilhowean, Crystal Carrol is the new assistant editor to the yearbook. Crystal is a sophomore management major with experience in "yearbooking" which will be invaluable next year, as the staff works on the budget. This year's book cost almost $8,000 and next year's book will cost six percent more for a similiar, two-color cover, 128 page book. The present budget is set for 4500 dollars, which creates quite a financial strain.

"Please speak up", says Brenda Gillespie, editor-in-chief," and make your voice heard if you want a yearbook next year."

IN SHORT

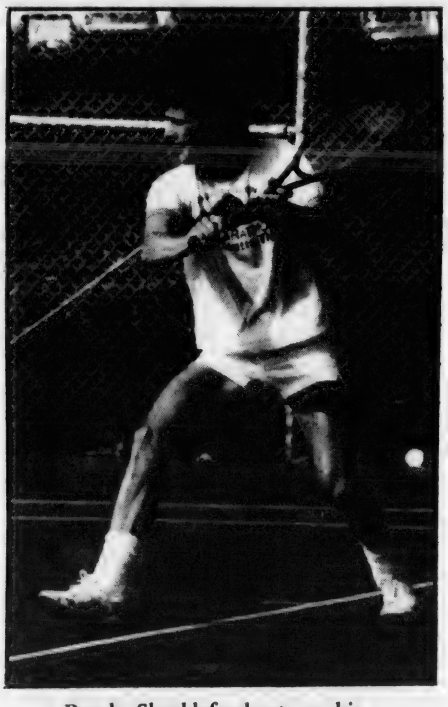
by Brian Rigell



The Lady Scots softball team has finally started playing to its potential, and as a result the Ladies find themselves back in the win column. The team has gone on a tear and have won their last five games in a row thus bringing their record to 6-11.

Last Thursday the squad travelled to Milligan and came away winners 8-5 in the first game. The team scored their third win of the season. The next game found the Lady Scots pounding Milligan for an 11-2 victory.

The East Tennessee Classic was scheduled for last Saturday, but it turned into a 40 days - 40 nights contests, so called because it rained and rained and then it rained some more, and when it stopped, it just started all over again. So much for this year's classic!



Monday came and so did Tenn. Temple. Unfortunately for them the Lady Scots were not very gracious hosts as they defeated the Lady Crusaders 8-3 and 3-1. The Lady Scots showed some fine hustle and talent in route to both victories.

Thursday, the team travels to Dayton to play Bryan. Friday, the Lady Scots will either be at Warren Wilson or here against Milligan. Saturday, the squad will travel to Milligan for the state tournament. The last home game of the season will be May 6th against Warren Wilson. Time and place will be announced later. Make plans to attend and support your Lady Scots.

Echo picture by Kathy Blair

Trina Fancher makes her pitch at a softball game held last week.

Randy Shackleford sets up his backhand at the men's match on the 21st.

Echo Ear

G.W. - Jumping Over Hills Now! - T.H.

Hey Sue - What's up?

H.H.H. - Boy, do you look happy!

Amy - Are you still flying like Superman?

Beth - Late hours will make you - - - - -.

Kitty - Do you live for weekends?

M.J. Salt works wonders doesn't it?

Debbie - Missed the birds in the library.

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In

THE ECHO EAR

WE NEED your HELP!

The Echo would like to report on all of MC's sporting events, but we need your help. If you would like to be a sports reporter (or any kind of reporter) for the Echo, please give you name and box number to box 2820. We can't have any sports stories without sports writers!

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you begin your financial career.

THE MUDVILLE WRESTLER

Vol 1 No. 1

The Paper that knows all the Dirt.

Madness Of May On Its Way

by Marta Wittig

A Tentative History of the Madness as set forth in the annals of time.

In the days of yore, before the neolithic founders of the institution were certain the desirability of the existence of the month of May was discussed and debated. The philosophers claimed that May was integral to the continuance and maturation of spring - which was true. The dilemma rested in an illness which occured only in the month of May which was wont to drive humans mad. They called it May Madness, for the true scientific name was far too difficult to pronounce. The only cure was time. Often, people tried to suppress the madness and entered into a deep and deadly depression.

Well, the philosophers decided that if May was cancelled, the disease would natually be expunged. As the perceptive reader has realized, this didn't work.

Time went by and people continued to suffer from the madness.

Immediately after the founding of Maryville College, it was discovered that the madness was extremely detrimental to the well-being of the student body. Many days were permeated with the [illegible] unable to stop the madness, its existence shall be permitted by the college only on the first weekend of May. And that the college will provide

1) activity of a diversive nature.

2) food of an edible kind.

3) blindfolds for campus administrators.

This proposal is designed in good faith and is agreed upon by all signers."

As May approached, the students began to get restless. Then, with no other warning than the tolling of the midnight bell, the first of May arrived and with it came pandemonium. The men raided the women's dormitory, teachers threw their desks out of the windows and the administrators hid. For thirty-one long days, the campus was gripped in the frenzied hands of the madness. There were casualties from the debauchery, but nothing could be done until June.

After several years of this debilitating activity, the administration saw fit to rise to action, in their prodigious way. For nearly a century of All College Council meetings, committee meetings, sub-committee meeting, and [illegible]

Wrestler photo by Tara Wey

Some poor, unsuspecting seniors cower as professors administer the dreaded comps. This question is desinged to see if the seniors can sink or swim.

One can't fault them for trying. The intelligent reader knows that the madness continues to run for the entire month of May. Just don't tell the administration - we wouldn't want to confuse them!"

Campus Calendar

Friday, May 6

Parade of Fools, 4:00 p.m.
Oink and Ale, 5:30 - 7:00 p.m. Pearsons Veranda
Block Party, 9:00 - 1:00 a.m., Pearsons Veranda

Saturday, May 7

Giant Banana Split, 12:00 p.m. in front of Pearsons
Outdoor Festival, 12:30
"Lysistrata," 2:30 in front of Chapel
"Spring Fling," Airport Hilton, 9:00 - 1:00 a.m.

Sunday, May 8

Final performance of "Lysistrata," 2:30 p.m.

Monday, May 9

Sports Banquet

Reminder - Playmaker auditions will be 7:00 p.m. Wednesday the 18th at Wilson Chapel.

Plug Yourself Into The Madness

It's that time again - time to let your spring fever take over! Student Programming has planned some activities guaranteed to take the weary mind off comps and studies.

Friday, May 6 will kick off the weekend with the "Parade of Fools" sponsored by the Playhouse Association Al Perkins will be the Grand Marshall. The Parade is at 4:00 followed by the beloved "Oink and Ale" from 5:30 - 7:00 on Pearsons Veranda. Pit-cooked Pork and beer are on the menu; I.D. is requried for beer with the meal. From 9-1 a.m. Jean Plant will be spinning the sounds at the Block Party on Pearsons Veranda.

Saturday, May 7 begins on the right track with a giant banana split in front of Pearsons, followed by an outdoor festival at 12:30. Booths, music, and fun are the key words. At 2:30 "Lysistrata" will be performed

To wrap up the weekend, the "Spring Fling" will be held in the Grand Ball Room of the Airport Hilton from 9:00 - 1:00 a.m. $5.00 will admit you to the fun. A labeled bar will be set up, and snacks provided. Join in the madness with Student Programming!

Movies

Coming Soon To the Dogwood

Gone With The Wind

Part II

Gone With The Wind Part Two : Scarlett Grows Up

Starring: Exir Brennan as Scarlett O'Hara
Art Bushing as Rhett Butler
Marilyn Pollio as Melanie Wilkes
Jerry Waters as Ashley Wilkes
Arda Walker as Mammy and Kay Martin as Prissy, Aunt Pittypat, and Belle Watling Original costuming by Edith Largen in Technicolor and SENSURROUND

Reds

Reds* starring Terry Bunde*Jim Pickens*Carol Coffey* with Harry Howard*Amy Grubbs Young-Bae Kim Ciretta Carpenter*David Cartledge*Tami Fry* Peter Vial* and Julie Quinton as the "Q".
Musical Score by Danny Cartledge * Produced and Directed by Ground Zero Productions

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Walker" starring Arda Walker

"Everything you Always Wanted to Know About Asexual Reproduction - But Were Afraid to Ask" starring Judith Sumner. . . . . .
Get the new smash album from the movie, which includes the single, "She Blinded Me With Science."

"A Streetcar Named Desire"
starring David Cooper as Stanley Kowalski
Carolyn Blair as Stella Kowalski and Charlotte Beck as Blanche DuBois

New Course Offerings

Spring '83:
"A Survey of American Literature" will be offered by Dr. Fowler Saturday, May 7 from 9-12. 1 credit.

Fall '83:
"The Empire State Building: Introduction to Architectural Phallic Symbols," Mr. Bonham, instructor.
A Companion course will be offered by Dr. Beck on phallic symbols in literature. 3 or 6 credits.

Dr. Pollard will offer "Conjugating Verbs - Your Pet Can Help" ("how long have you lain there, Finley?"). 3 credits.

Sharon Crane will offer a new P.E. Course, "Fundamentals of Roller Derby : Dress for Success," 1 credit.

In Thaw 201 "Economical Dental Hygiene: Learn to Floss with Ernie Goss." 3 credits.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 19 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, May 5, 1983

Peace Rally Is On Target

by Amy Waggoner

The 2nd annual Peace Rally, the culmination of Ground Zero Week, was held in front of Thaw Hall on Saturday, April 30, 1983. The theme this year was one that all of us can relate to in one way or another - "What About the Russians?"

For those of you who were not there, even the words "Peace Rally" probably conjure up images of those massive peace demonstrations of the sixties that you are all too young to remember but the media will not let you forget. Actually, though there were similarities, this rally bore little resemblance to those earlier demonstrations. The main purpose of the event was to educate students about the arms race and to say, "We don't want to be blown off the face of the Earth." The crowd of about 50 people was quiet, and it seemed that many had come to hear what the speakers had to say in order to make a decision themselves.

The speakers' arguments were very convincing, contained many little-known facts about the arms race, and made an impact on the audience. Dr. Jim Pickens addressed the question of defense, the possibility of nuclear war, and the effects it would have on us. He and many others feel that nuclear weapons are not the way to best defend ourselves and that even traditional military weapons are more of a threat to national security than a nuclear freeze. Dr. Pickens urged everyone to find out his role in preventing nuclear war.

Dr. Scott Brunger, professor of Economics at Maryville spoke of the monetary drawbacks of the arms race and presented us with some interesting observations. For instance, many people know that recent figures indicate that 11-14% of the Soviet Union's budget is spent on defense, while only 7% of the United States' budget goes to the military? So that means we are behind, right? Wrong. When both figures are adjusted for inflation and economic stability, they come out just about even. This vital information seems to be "left out" of most reports.

Dr. David Cartlidge spoke about the efforts of several churches in the area that are making concerted efforts to bring a message of peace to other churches in Russia and Hungary. He challenged each person to start a peace group in his or her own church. Dr. Terry Bunde challenged students to be responsible and know what is going on in the world. An uninformed decision on the part of the student as to which side to take is the greatest danger right now.

The rally was also not without its student participation. Julie Quinton and Ciretta Carpenter served as femcees with great enthusiasm. Several of Maryville College's talented students provided musical entertainment - "Music with a message." Danny Cartlidge, Laurie Nelson, Bryan McFarland, Gerald Burnette, Lisa Vandivort, and Debbie Hall performed songs by Lionel Richie, Dan Fogel-

cont. on pg. 7

Echo photo by Tara Wey

Dr. Terry Bunde makes a point at the Peace Rally

FACts

by Bill Warren, Jr.

MC's Dr. Robert Bonham will present a unique musical program entitled "An Ingenious and Outrageous American: Charles Ives as Seen Through His Violin Sonatas" on Friday, May 6, at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

This program will feature Ives "Second" and "Fourth" violin sonatas and will incorporate a discussion of each. The "Second Sonata" is a series of small movements with titles such as "In the Barn," Turkey in the Straw," and "Battle Cry of Freedom." Another of the movements is entitled "The Revival" and is based on the hymn tune "Come Thy Found of Every Blessing." The "Fourth Sonata" also features smaller movements which draw melodies from the hymnbook. Familiar melodies include "Jesus Loves Me" and "Shall We Gather at the River."

Both sonatas will be performed by Dr. Bonham, piano, and Melinda Hoffecker, violin. Dr. Bonham, who studied Ives in connection with his doctoral dissertation at Ohio University, will lead both discussions concerning the sonatas. Dr. Bonham explained that these works illustrate Ives' creation of a European model - the sonata - that used American folk material.

Having been a member of the MC faculty since 1965, Dr. Bonham has performed in numerous of the annual Handel's "Messiah." has presented concert recitals, and most recently accompanied ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist Jeffrey Solow, cellist, during Solow's 1981-82 MC visit. He was reared in India while his parents served as medical missionaries. He earned his bachelor's degree from Phillips University in Oklahoma, his Master's of Music at the University of Kansas, and his doctoral degree from Ohio University. His teachers have included Mme. Angelica Morales Von Sauer, Alexander Fiorillo, and Lili Kraus.

Mrs. Hoeffecker, MC's David Hoffecker's wife, graduated with a Bachelor of Music degree from the Eastman School of Music and the University of Rochester, New York. She has also studied at the Institute of Music and the Cleveland Music School settlement in Ohio. Her career in music has included recitals in several states and in Central and South America. She has

Bonham cont. on pg. 8

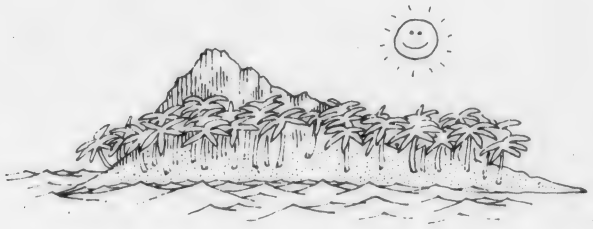
NO IMAGE ON

THESE PAGES

Letters

To the editor:

The letter to the editor which appeared in the April 28, 1983, Echo seems to have evoked reactions it did not intend to evoke. One indication of this was the letter which the editor of the Echo placed right next to it in defense of publications.



Maryville's publications have deteriorated in the past few years. Too many mistakes elude proofreading, too little creativity and not enough professionalism.

The old staffs, editors etc. are asking for help. They don't want to do the job alone. Recently, the class of 1984 offered to help the annual financially. In return, they wanted a committe to proofread pages for mistakes so that errors like Peter Vile (sic) looking like Kent Skinner would not happen. They were told that they could not see the pages and copy. Presently, there is a ruling which states that staff members can not see the introduction and cover until distribution. How can people help when they aren't even allowed to see vital sections of the annual? If the yearbook is to be published for a group, shouldn't the designing of it be a group effort, not the editor's, not the head photographer's etc.? People are eager and willing to help. The signers of the letter wish to do more than express their opinion. They want to be a part of the publication, not merely a peanut gallery.

A lot of change needs to occur. New ideas need to be heard and put into effect, so, when you ask for help, please don't tell the people who offer to give it they are restricted and confined to rules that benifit (sic) the title that creates them and not the student of Maryville College. Nobody likes to be placed in confinement, not physically, not creatively. I realize that in any organization rules must exist, but I believe that a few of the stipulations should be examined before the finger is pointed towards apethy (sic) and unwillingness to lend a hand to create better MC publications.

Nancy Rojas

Dear Editor:

In response to the "formal complaint" about this year's annual, we offer the following:

A. Number of mistakes - What is an "excusable" number of mistakes? Is it possible that when you count, you may find relatively few, and that a number of these were printer's mistakes which slipped through in spite of our corrections?

B. Correct labeling - Many hours were spent in identifying people included in photos. Again, we ask, how many did you actually find like this? Are you, by any slim chance, exaggerating?

C. "Many" misnamed - Again we ask, how many? We regret that any occur, but there is hardly the expectation that any printed work is perfect. Errors occur in the best of printed works, even in the Echo, vis-a-vis Kim Corbitt's name.

E. Inconsistent spelling - How many? You indicate that there is an excessive number. We regret any, but we do not agree that there are a gross number present.

F. Dorm pictures were misplaced. For this we apologize.

G. Change of editorship: One person edited the entire book.

If you wish to help us produce a good yearbook, as error free as possible, notify us, and we will share the work and the satisfaction.

Brenda Gillespie, Editor, 83-84
Mrs. Exir Brennan, Advisor

The Echo prints all letters exactly as they are submitted. All mistakes are left uncorrected.

Editor . . . . . Ms. T
Assistant Editor . . . . . Bloody Mary
Business Manager . . . . . Elphalunt Petty
Sports Editor . . . . . Bright, Red
Photography Editor . . . . . Swiss Orange Chip
Art . . . . . Whistler's Mother

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Mudville Wrestler, and promptly thrown away. Opinion's expressed in the Wrestler are the views of an insane group of people caught in the giddy clutches of May Madness, and should not be considered valid statements of truth (except on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday). The Echo is printed on biodegradable paper and will self-destruct in 5 seconds.

Sports

Softball

by Brian Rigell

Even though the '83 season is beginning to wind down, the Lady Scots softball team is still working hard and aiming for a winning record. The team's record is now 11-14 with four games scheduled for the rest of the season.

The Lady Scots consecutive win streak was snapped on Thursday as the Lady Lions of Bryan split a double-header in Dayton. The Lady Scots took the first game 7-3, but Bryan rallied and managed to squeeze by on a 3-1 margin to take the second one.

Friday found Milligan at Everett Park, and the Lady Scots were victorious twice. Maryville took the first game 7-1 and continued their winning ways in the second by a score of 5-2.

On Saturday the team left at 5:30 a.m. for the State Tournament in Johnson City. Teams at the tournament included Bryan, Emory & Henry, Hiwassee, LMU, Maryville, Milligan, and Tusculum. The Lady Scots first opponent was Bryan, and the Ladies were able to avenge their earlier loss by rolling over the Lady Lions 9-2. Maryville's next task was Hiwassee, but the Lady Tigers proved to be the better team for that game winning 4-2. The Lady Scots then plastered E&H 9-1 to win their eleventh game of the season. LMU however ended the Lady Scots' hopes of carrying off a trophy by winning 6-5 in extra innings. Coach Ballard commented that when the Lady Scots won they won big, and that the two loses were close and could have gone either way. Ballard seemed pleased by the team's performance, as well he should be considering that the Ladies lost to probably two of the best teams in the region. Hiwassee was the eventual winner with LMU taking second, and without any qualms, we'll give our own Lady Scots third, based on their 4-0 record against the next best finisher Milligan.

By the time you read this, the team will have travelled to Chattanooga Tuesday to play Tenn. Temple and returned home to prepare for their season finale Friday at home against Warren Wilson. Friday marks the last game in the careers of three outstanding players, and we would certainly be remiss for not recognizing them. Shortstop Kim Allen, second baseman Rachel Reese, and first pitcher Candy Nutter are perhaps the best 6-4-3 or 4-4-6-3 double play combo in the state, and it will be some time before a group such as these comes along. Good luck, Ladies, it's been a great pleasure!

Baseball

by Pat Moyer

The Maryville College baseball team split a double-header with Emory and Henry College April 27 to close their season 11-19-1. The Scots needed to sweep the wasps in order to qualify for the ODAC tournament.

Although the team didn't make the conference playoffs, Coach Murphy was pleased with his team's performance this year. "Sure we made a lot of mistakes" said Murphy "but we're a young team, and I was happy to see the club develop the way they did throughout the season."

Here's a look at those developments:

*Mike Smicklas, a transfer from Palm Beach Junior College, literally dominated the conference offensively "Smic" hit .544 to lead the league. He also led in home runs (8) and runs batted in (39).

*Freshman Pepe Feliu set a new Maryville College base stealing record when he swiped number 28 in the final game of the year. He also led the conference with his base stealing percentage, only being caught two times in 30 attempts.

*Ernie Stevens, a freshman, also set a new Scot record as he batted in 8 runs in a double-header against Eastern Mennonite College.

The diamond men will only lose one senior, Mark Woodhull, to graduation, and so should be quite competititve.

"We have a great nucleus here, and should prove to be a force to be reckoned with," revealed Murphy, "I'm sure that our season will have a better outcome in '84" he concluded.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

Mimi Chesney swings for a hit

Women's Tennis

by Kandy Schram

The Lady Scots Tennis Team started their season off weakly; however, they finished very strongly. This last week proves my point. On Wed. 27 the Lady Scots travelled to Tusculum to find a sweet victory of 9-0. On Thursday they travelled to Roane State. Things went differently; they lost 0-9. But the Lady Scots bounced back on Sat. defeating Tusculum once again 9-0.

Sat. was the last match for the Lady Scots. They will be saying good-bye to Seniors Sharon Wood, Shelley Kingsbury, and Sue Spence. It's been fun ladies. Good Luck!

cont. from 5

bert and some folk songs. "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?" - a Russian folk song with an anti-war message - was a big hit of the day.

Perhaps one of the most convincing speeches of the day was given by Steve Ford. His contention was that the Russians do not want a war, either, and that we must trust each other. Actually, this seemed to be the prevailing attittude of the day. He summed it up when he said, "Distrust, hatred, fear, and misunderstanding are the major obstacles to achieving our goal -Peace." That's something to think about, folks.

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee
MEMBER FDIC

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you begin your financial career.

Wrestler photo by Tara Wey

A new method of buying milk has been instituted at Kroger's. Instead of conventional cartons and jugs sold over the counter, Kroger's has negotiated with Elsie the Borden Cow to give factory fresh milk right in the parking lot. Patrons bring containers from home and enter where it says "in," collecting the fresh milk from the spouts at the end of the hallway. Kroger's expects this new method to become popular in a short period of time.

EMPTY Space

Bonham from pg. 5

also taught violin at Gosher College, Viterbo College, and the North Shore Community Music School in Beverly, Mass. Currently she is a member of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra. She has also held membership with the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, Sinfonica Nacinal de Columbia in South America, Camerata Bogota in Columbia and La Crosse Symphony Orchestra.

This program will be free to MC students and the public, and it is included in the CIV program.

Wrestler photo by Traci Fraser

Lamar Alexander and Jimmy Carter shake hands with relief after an exhausting round of negotiations between MC students & board members. Peace was achieved between the two, but only for a short while.

Announcements

Friday's Lunch Menu: Meatballs will be the entree. To take tired minds off of Comps, the Bee Gees will provide entertainment, and the Dukes of Hazzard will be guests in a contest of Spades. Milk-Duds will be awarded as prizes.

Bill Slater will present a CIV Friday night entitled "My Life with the Hell's Angels," 7:30 p.m. in the Music Hall.

Just arrived at the Bookstore - the new Ambushing Manual of Outlining and Research, a book all MC students must have.

Hey N.R. - Your methods always have been questionable. You'll regret them now. B.

Hey Chilly - Have a super weekend in Hotlanta! We'll miss ya! B. & R.

Laura & Angela - Still Love ya! Signed the Third Musketeer.

Hey Puppyspot - Are you going to fling it out while Tam is away?

Do you Love the man Diane W.?

Hair Plus
FOOTHILLS MALL
MARYVILLE, TENN.
TEL: 982-3443

The staff of Hair Plus invites you to visit our new salon in the Foothills Mall.

Lin Ramsey
Linda Carroll
Donna Glandon
Gail Credig
Nancy Smith
Polly Whitehead-Manicurist

We're open Mon. - Sat.
10 a.m. - 9 p.m.

We're The Professionals

Mark Hendricks
Sheila Spears
Carolyn Shanklin
Karen Hord
Annette Frye

Show your student I.D. for a 10% discount on Spring and Summer styles. Call or come by today. Walk-ins are welcome.

REDKEN We use and recommend Redken products
FOOTHILLS MALL 982-3443
Just say, "Charge It" - VISA, MasterCard

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 19 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, May 12, 1983

ACC Passes Calendar Proposal

The All-College Council at its May 4 meeting officially passed the long-debated calendar issue, changing MC's term schedule to semesters. The final proposal accepted was the original one proposed by the Ad-hoc committee, having been amended from the faculty's proposal.

According to the minutes of the meeting, "a dissatisfaction was expressed the faculty had placed Interim at the end of the spring term, and an amendment was offered to move it back between two semesters." This move, passed 12-5, brought the proposal back to the original form submitted by the ad hoc committee.

A motion was made to require a two-thirds majority to pass the proposal: it was defeated 6-11. The final recommendation, as amended by the ACC, was passed in a secret ballot, 13-4. Now the proposal will either go before the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors, or the Board itself at its fall meeting.

NEW DEAN AT MC

Jane G. Richardson, acting dean of student affairs at Maryville College since December 1982, was named to fill the position on a permanent basis.

Her appointment as dean of students is effective immediately and follows a search by a four-member faculty, staff, and student committee.

In this position, Mrs. Richardson's responsibilities will include the College's student life, student activities programs; career planning and placement, counseling and health services; residence halls; athletic program; orientation of new students and parents and international student advising.

The new dean of students joined the MC staff in 1976 as head resident of Dorm I and was promoted to assistant dean of students in 1977. From January to August 1978, she served as acting dean of students. She was promoted to associate dean in November 1979. In 1982, she was named the College's Outstanding Administrator of the Year.

Mrs. Richardson was graduated in 1978 from the University of Tennessee in Knoxville where she studied counseling and human relations. She has also studied crafts at the Arrowmont School in Gatlinburg and has pursued graduate studies in college personnel work.

Before coming to Maryville, Mrs. Richardson served as administrative secretary of the Daniel Arthur Rehabilitation Center in Oak Ridge from 1969 until 1974. Prior to that position, she was executive secretary for the Oak Ridge Community Art Center.

The new dean has served as a board member of the Cooper House, a halfway house for boys in Knoxville, and has coordinated a Coffee House program for teens and young adults in Oak Ridge in the late 1960's and early 1970's.

Mrs. Richardson is a past board member of the Tennessee Mental Health Association and past president of the Oak Ridge Mental Health Association.

A native of Oak Ridge, the new dean resides in Maryville where she is a member of New Providence Presbyterian Church. She was formerly an elder at First United Presbyterian Church of Oak Ridge.

She has four grown children Jorjan, Beth, Wade and Michael.

Echo photo by Kathy Blair

For all you do...this Bud's for you, Kelly Fitzgerald (and everyone else who enjoyed May Madness '83).

Thursday, May 12

Mexican Dinner served by Sophomore class, 5:00

Friday, May 13

Be careful!

Saturday, May 14

Senior recital by Hampton Hendry, 8:15 p.m., FAC.

Block Party sponsored by Sophomore class, 9:00 p.m.

REMINDER: Playmaker auditions will be held Wednesday the 18th at 7:00 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

Letters

Dear Editor,

As a student and sophomore representative to the ACC, I must frankly admit that I am very disappointed and disillusioned with the governance system here at Maryville College. After the ACC vote on May 4th concerning the calendar change I am more than ever convinced that the majority of student's feelings cannot be accurately represented under the present system.

There are several flaws in our current system of government. First of all, although the students are the largest body represented to the ACC, we only have access to one-third of the votes, yet, we are the group that is usually most affected (both positively and negatively) by the decisions of the ACC. In effect, we are almost powerless to influence a decision one way or another.

Secondly, the present structure of the ACC provides the opportunity for intimidation from those who hold higher positions. Even though the All-College Council is a governing body composed of an equal number of faculty, staff, and students, and technically all members have the responsibility to vote the way their constitutents feel, one cannot deny the fact that it could be very difficult to vote in opposition to a professor one has to face for the next four years, for example. It is possible, in this situation, that some students (or faculty or staff) may feel pressured to vote in a way that isn't consistent with the feelings of their constituents.

Finally, although students are encouraged to voice their opinions and make their feelings known through the ACC and its members, does it really make a difference? I'd hate to think that the students have a voice in the decisions that affect our college only when that voice concurrs with the wishes of the administration.

Since some major changes will be taking place at MC during the next few years, why don't we modify our present system of governance to one that will accurately and fairly act on the students behalf. Isn't it about time?

Susan Jennings

Dear Editor,

I would like to ask the students of Maryville College a question: Is it too much trouble for some of you to take your trays to the dishroom window after meals? I work in the cafeteria and I realize that it is my job to clean up; however, I do not feel that it is my responsibility to play mother hen and carry trays of able-bodied students to the dishroom.

This problem is espcially worse on nights that the cafeteria serves a special dinner such as the one served on May 4. If students are able to walk to the cafeteria, get their food, and carry their trays to a table, surely it is not asking too much for them to bring their trays (with glasses, plates, and silverware included) to the dishroom. Please show some courtesy and respect to your fellow students (who have quietly put up with this pesty problem until now) and the regular workers who serve you. Thank-you very much.

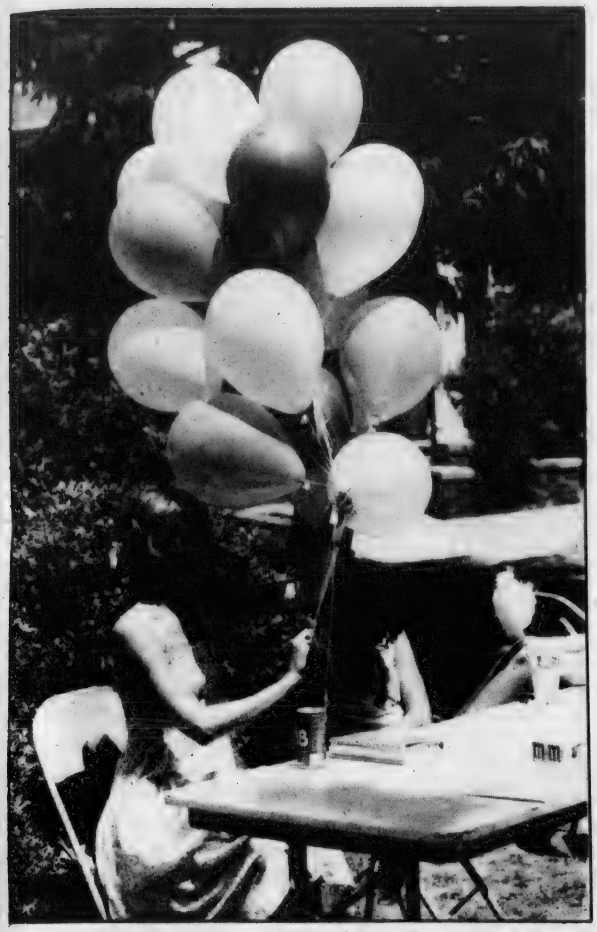
Sincerely,

M.J. Burnette

P.S. Maybe a new course called Etiquette 101 should be offered next fall for those to whom this letter applies.

Have you ever watched a movie that had a way of making you cry? I've seen many, and Monday's movie was no exception. It was a true story about Barbara Graham who was gased in 1955 for the death of an elderly woman. Mrs. Graham pleaded innocent to the end although she was found guilty. Lindsay Wagner portrayed Graham in "I Want to Live." Usually after seeing movies that have an impact on me well, I cry my eyes out, then wonder why it happened and fall asleep only to awake the next morning without much thought about it.

This time I won't do that. I feel I've got something worthwhile to say. So much happens in the world that doesn't touch us personally, but what about the things that are close to home like here at college (its home for now). We're affected each day for different reasons, and we react differently. So what's my point? Well, if one day you get an 'F' on a test and you feel outraged we tend to take it out on others. If you think about it, it's true. What about the times you've come into the cafeteria and start complaining about the quality of food. I don't know about you, but it makes me tense and upset. Now I know everyone handles things differently, but why look at all the bad points and just harp on things. If you do the opposite won't things be much better? I'm just saying "BE AWARE" of what you can do to people.



We've got to live with each, so why not make the best of it. Say hi sometimes to someone (even a stranger); show someone that you care. It's so easy to be negative about life and people, but where can that get you. You may not think that what you have now is important or worthwhile because it doesn't jump out at you as that way, but if you see it that way, well of course it won't be. Each day is a new experience. Don't wait to find out in 5 or 10 years that actually it was an important part of you life.

Laura Hart

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Editor-in-training . . . . . Jenny Fitzell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisor . . . . . Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Echo Photo by Kathy Blair

May Madness '83 helped weary studiers regain their (in)sanity. At left Donna Whittum and her balloons made a colorful display, and at right students line up at the "Oink 'n Ale" (photo at right by Mack Paschall).

News Briefs

Award Winner

by Bill Warren, Jr.

SNEA Member Melissa Parks was awarded the Alpha Delta Kappa local Chapter Scholarship for the 1983-84 academic year.

Melissa was recognized and awarded the scholarship at the Alpha Delta Kappa Dinner Banquet held at Western Steer on Monday, May 2, 1983. Melissa is a sophomore History/Secondary Education Major from Maryville, Tennesee. Her husband Tim works at the Knoxville Hilton. Congratulations Melissa!

Room Roulette

Don't forget - room draw will be May 20 from 4-6 p.m. in Fayerweather. Your $40 reservation fee must be paid to the Business Office by May 19, and you must bring your receipt to the draw. The $40 is non-refundable - it will be applied toward next fall's room charges.

Exercise your Rights

by Amy Waggoner

It's election time again! Elections for representatives to the All-College Council will be held at the end of this week. On Thursday, May 12 at 6:00 p.m. in Lloyd lobby there will be a town meeting to give the students a chance to meet candidates and hear their views. Then on Friday, May 13, a campus-wide election will be held. You will be able to vote during break in Fayerweather lobby and during lunch and dinner in Pearsons lobby.

Nominees for this year's election are:

SENIORS
Wilma Coleman
Angela Kirby
Sarah Jane Lindsay
Glennis Riedl

JUNIORS
Paula Walton
Teresa Welch

SOPHOMORES
Hubert Dixon III
Eleanor Woodfin

STAFF
Alan Kines
Terry Whittum

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICERS
Ellie Gilmore
Jane Richardson
Bobby Saylor
Larry West

FACULTY
1-5 YEARS
Scott Brunger
Young-Bae Kim

6-15 YEARS
Harry Howard
Judith Sumner

16+ YEARS
Edith Largen
Jerry Waters

Everyone vote in the election and make your voice heard!

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you begin your financial career.

Sports Banquet Honors Athletes

by Robin Rimmer

The annual Maryville College All-Sports Banquet was held on Monday night, May 9, 1983. The banquet is a yearly event that is given in honor of the student athletes to recognize their accomplishments. Jane Richardson, Dean of Students opened the program with the invocation. Glenn Morton, disc jockey for WGAP of Maryville, served as the emcee for the banquet. Thirty-one awards were given to athletes for their outstanding accomplishments. Senior Andrew Baker was awarded the J.D. Davis Award by President Wayne Anderson. The J.D. Davis Award is awarded yearly to the outstanding senior athlete. The other award winners are listed as follows:

CHEERLEADERS
Senior Ginger Harris, sr., Miramar, Fla.

FOOTBALL
Best Offensive Player: Glenn Katz, jr., Bronx, N.Y.
Best Defensive Player: Alex Albert, Jr., Leicester, Mass.
Most Inspirational Player: Alex Albert, jr., Leicester, Mass.
Iron Man Award: Harold "Bubba" Wells, fr., Birmingham, Ala.

SOCCER
Most Valuable Player: Nelson Gonzales, fr., Miami, Fla.
Most Improved Player: Charles Gumula, fr., Coral Springs, Fla.
Coach's Award: Ken Davidson, sr., Fair Lawn, N.J.

VOLLEYBALL

Most Improved Player: Kandy Schram, soph., New Port Richey, Fla.
Coach's Award: Leah Gross, Sophomore., Hollywood, Fla.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Most Valuable Player: Greg Gheen, sr., Knoxville, Tenn.
Coach's Award: Andrew Baker, sr., Chattanooga, Tenn.
Most Improved Player: Raymond Burnett, fr., Knoxville, Tenn..
Most Improved Player: Paul Mills, fr., Crossville, Tenn.
Junior Varsity Player of the Year: Walt Hardaway, soph. Memphis, Tenn.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Most Valuable Player: Candy Nutter, sr., Knoxville, Tenn.
Most Improved Player: Sara Covington, fr., McColl, S.C.
Coach's Award: Trina Coggins-Fancher, fr., Louisville, Tenn.

SOFTBALL

Most Valuable Player: Kim Allen, sr., Madison, Tenn.
Most Improved Player: Barb Hogan, soph., Hollywood, Fla.
Coach's Award: Nickie Frazier, jr., Kingsport, Tenn.

BASEBALL

Outstanding Offensive Player: Mike Smiciklas, jr., Boca Raton, Fla.
Outstanding Defensive Pla Player: Kevin Jenkins, fr., Flower Branch, Ga.
Outstanding Pitcher: Ron Rayho, fr., Knoxville, Tenn.
Freshman Player of the Year: Pepi Feliu, fr., Boca Raton, Fla.
Ken Stinnett Award: Pat Moyer, soph., Hialeah, Fla.

TRACK

Bob Thrower Award: Tony Volkodav, soph., Round Lake Beach, Ill.

MEN'S TENNIS

Most Valuable Player: Randy Shackleford, Sr., Kingsport, Tenn.
Coach's Award: Dave Raulerson, jr., Bristol, Tenn.
Most Improved Player: Jerry Vagnier, soph., Riverdale, Ga.

MC got a burst of excitement last week when the wind blew down a tree behind Fayerweather. Photo by Mack Paschall.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Most Valuable Player: Sharon Wood, sr., Knoxville, Tenn.
Most Improved Player: Kathy Balent, fr., Sterling Heights, Mich.
Coach's Award: Sue Spence, sr., Jacksonville, Fla.

1983 J.D. Davis Outstanding Athlete of the Year Award: Andrew Baker, Sr., Chattanooga, Tenn.

SENIORS

Want to leave a mark on good ole MC? Don't carve your name in a desk - turn in a will to the Echo! Remember that practical joke they played on you freshman year? Now's the time to get 'em back! Just keep them reasonably clean and not overly long, and we'll print them in the Echo. Return your wills as soon as possible to box 2820 - final deadline will be Friday, May 20. Here's your chance, Seniors!

Echo Ear

"SMURF" - Let's do it again sometime! - T.W.O.

Ebeneezer - The moupums are calling! Quasi

Mable - Let's go Park-ing" again! Martha

Hey D.R.K. - I hear you like to go swimming at the Hilton.

M.J. - Take my word for it - Salt is bad for your health!

C. - Do you eat cannibals? - S.

Hey Swish, Have you found the "real thing" yet? S&B

SWENSEN'S
COUPON

Foothills Mall
Maryville, Tennessee

BUY ONE - GET ONE FREE

Super Hot Fudge Sundae

— Bring this coupon —

Expires 6/2/83

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 68 No. 20 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, May 19, 1983

Evacuate Without A Hassle

by Peggy Millsaps

Almost before we knew it, another school year has sped by, leaving in its wake a trail of memories, crushed soft drink cans, discarded exam notes, rumpled old clothes, football pennants, new wave albums, and a litter of jogging clothes. The memories you can keep to savor on the beach this summer, but the rest must be cleared out of the dorms and carted home or stored.

Everyone has heard by now the campus-wide wail lamenting the summer storage situation. If you haven't it goes like this: there will be no storage space at MC this summer due to proposed dorm rennovation. Information on safe, alternative storage spaced should be out by Friday.

In the meantime Student Affairs has posted a list of exit times and offered suggestions on packing for storage and leaving dorm rooms.

Excluding seniors, all students and their belongings must be out of the dorms by noon Saturday May 28. Only those granted deferment in writing are exempt. Seniors must be out by 5 p.m. Monday, May 30.

It's suggested that students take home as much as possible. Everything left for storage must be in sturdy boxes sealed with large tape, and marked with the student's name and residence hall. A slip of paper with the same information should be tucked inside as well. Grocery store cartons are not recommended for storage and they may contain pests or insect larvae. Cartons are available at the book store.

Even in light of proposed dorm renovation this summer, proper check-out procedure should be observed in all dorms. Rooms should be clean, in good condition, and with original furniture present and intact. Floors should be vacuumed and trash cans emptied. Stickers, as well, should be removed from walls and furniture. See your head resident for further specifics.

Off we go, then, for a three-month hiatus from books and papers and exams. Already student life has undergone a metamorphosis: stereos are noticeably louder, bikinis and swim trunks are more prevalent, panty raids have occured with astonishing frequency, and the scent of Coppertone pervades the air. Feels like it's going to be some kind of summer.

Banned Film Scanned

by Ciretta Carpenter

Last year around this time several people gathered in CCM to view a 60 min. documentary by the name of "Eight Minutes to Midnight." In it, Dr. Helen Caldicott was waging a personal campaign against the production and use of nuclear arms. As a Boston pediatrition, Harvard teacher, mother and wife, Caldicott has become one of the world's leading experts on Nuclear Power and the Nuclear Arms Race. The film discussed the threat of the human race's extinction by nuclear arms proliferation. Highly informative, as well as acclaimed, "Eight Minutes to Midnight" was nominated for the Academy Award as Best Documentary Feature of 1981.

That, however, is past, and more often than not, past is prologue. . . Dr. Caldicott, under the Toronto Film Board, has furthered her campaign with the release of "If You Love This Planet," a 25 min. documentary film on the effects of nuclear proliferation on this planet. During Spring Break, while most of us were sunning ourselves in Florida or spending longed-for time with loved ones, the U.S. State Department was worrying about what Dr. Caldicott was saying. The effect of their concern was an actual and conceptual labeling of "If You Love This Planet" as "Foreign Propaganda", there was some talk of the State Department wanting the names of those persons who had viewed the film, and it was called 'propaganda from a dangerous country'. Currently there is a battle for the removal of that label.

Why is all this background information important? Primarily because the film will be shown here this Saturday in Room 113 of Sutton Science Bldg. at 11 a.m., as well as a follow-up discussion led by Rocio Huet-Cox, MD, a member of Physicians for Social Responsi-

See MOVIE, pg. 4

Campus Calendar

Thursday, May 19

Alumni Recital by Norko Meguro, pianist, 8:15 p.m., FAC

Friday, May 20

Room Draw 4-6 p.m.
Presidential Forum, Lloyd, 7:00 p.m.
Rising juniors class officer's election.

Saturday, May 21

Senior Class Casino Night
"If You Love This Planet," 11 a.m., Sutton 113

Sunday, May 22

Beached Whale Beached Walrus Party, Lloyd.

Monday, May 23

Rising seniors class officer's election.
Academic Awards Dinner, 5:00 p.m.

Tuesday, May 24

Combined Faculty recital, 8:15, Music Hall

Wednesday, May 25

Mid-Week Worship, 10:30 a.m. CCM

Letters

Dear Editor,

As an student and athlete at M.C., I am writing in concern of the direction of M.-C. athletics. In division-three athletics all sports are to be treated equally. The athlete is recieving an excellent education, while competing in sports. Again, ALL SPORTS ARE SUP-POSED TO BE TREATED, FUNDED, AND PRO-MOTED EQUALLY.

After being a member of the track team for two seasons, I have found this not the case at M.C. for example, in the last two season, the track team has had four different coaches. Also, the track team recieved no practice uniforms this season (Other sports receive practice uniforms) In addition, the team recieved no shoes, (Other sports recieve and keep shoes, some even got practice shoes.) Also, the track schedule was a joke. No serious preperation was taken to make an atequate schedule. Lastly, at the awards banquet the track team recieved one award. This is fine, but other sports gave from three to five awards.

Track is an excellent lifetime sports. Its cost are minimal. Other athletes could develop in the off season by running track. For these reasons track should be promoted and encouraged. Track should be more important to the athletic department than it presently is. Any Athletic department that thinks so low of track should simply eliminate the sport. There is one thing worse than having a track team, and that is having a track team like Maryville College's which is run incorrectly.

Sincerely submitted,

Samuel C. Hill, III

The Echo prints all letters exactly as they are submitted. All mistakes are left uncorrected.

the Highland ECHO

Editor . . . . . Traci Fraser
Assistant Editor . . . . . Mary Hughes
Business Manager . . . . . Evelyn Sowell
Editor-in-training . . . . . Jenny Fitzell
Sports Editor . . . . . Robin Rimmer
Layout Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell
Chief Photographer . . . . . Kathy Blair
Art Editor . . . . . Helen McNiell
Copy Editor . . . . . Lisa Swisher
Typing Supervisor . . . . . Susan Williams
Advisor . . . . . Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

oad Scholar----------

Leslee Hay

very school year brings
v changes: new students,
v courses, new profes-
. The end of the year
ngs good-byes, some fi-some temporary. As we se the current year, ryville College will say
d-bye to a recent addito the faculty. Dr. Wil-n F. Pollard, Jr. will be ing a year's leave of ab-ce for the 1983-84
ool year. He and his wife rdre will pack up and ve to England for a year inning in September.

hile in England, Dr. Pol-d will pursue a post-doc-al program in paleogra-y at Oxford University.
Specifically, Dr. Pollard will work on medieval Latin manuscripts of late Franciscan friars and Lollards. He intends to study them for the purposes of editing and literary analysis.

At Oxford University, Dr. Pollard is a member of Keble College, one of many colleges of the University. Oxford (as well as Cambridge) is divided into many colleges which function as residences and bases for membership of students, scholars and professors. The University as a whole supervises courses and confers degrees. Dr. Pollard will take courses from Keble College as well as other colleges at Oxford. He and his wife Deirdre will rent a house for the time they are in Great Britain.

While at MC, Dr. Pollard taught numerous freshman and upper-level English courses. Included were English as a Second Language, Linguistics, English 121-122, the new Humanities, Ancient and Medieval Philosophy, an Anglo-Saxon seminar, and Medieval Literature (Chaucer).

Although Dr. Pollard has been here only two years, he will be missed by all who had him for class. The upperclassmen especially will miss his witty humour and the fact that he is always willing to listen. Thank you, Dr. Pollard -- you will be missed!!

News Briefs

ll-College Council elec-ns for 1983-84 were held day, May 13. Sarah Jane dsay, a rising senior
m Chattanooga, Tenn.
s elected ACC co-chair-
n. "I was really excited en I was told the news" d Sarah Jane. "I'm look-forward to working with sident Anderson and the Council members. 1983-84 should prove to be another eventful year in terms of proposals considered by the ACC."

Other winners were Glennis Riedl, a rising senior from Knoxville, elected senior representative. Rising junior Paula Walton, from West Palm Beach, Fla. and Eleanor Woodfin, rising sophomore from Clarksville, Tenn. will represent the juniors and sophomores.

Administrative officers Larry West and Ellie Gilmore were elected, with West receiving a two-year term. Scott Brunger, Harry Howard, and Jerry Waters will represent the faculty. Congratulations one & all!

The annual Maryville Col-ge Awards Dinner will ke place on the 23 of May 6:00 p.m. in the Margaret are Dining Room of Pear-ns Hall.
This is an important event
the college calendar and ovides the college com-
unity with an opportunity to honor the scholastic and leadership qualities shown by members of the student body. It is a serious occasion but also a very enjoyable one. You are encouraged to attend and support your students and peers.

Students wishing to attend need to make reservations in the dining room from Monday, May 16 through to Friday, May 20 Staff and faculty can make reservations through the office of Student Affairs.

For those students not wishing to attend, the evening meal will be provided in the snack bar from 6:00 - 7:00 p.m.

Ten new members of Ala Gamma Sigma senior holastic honor society at aryville College were re-ntly inducted in a cereony held on campus.
lee Millar Bidwell, a jun-was one of those induct-
Mrs. Bidwell also re-ived the Alpha Gamma gma Scholarship Award.
sociology and political science major, she lives in Maryville with her husband, Larry Bidwell. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Millar of Antioch, Tenn.

Others inducted into the society were seniors JoAnn Berretto of Winter Haven, Fla., Barbara Booker of Cocoa Beach, Fla., Gerald Burnett of LaVergne, Tenn., Carolyn Bussey of Flint Hill, Va., Rebekah Gerrick of New York, N.Y., Amy Grubbs of Jeonju, South Korea, Ginger Harris of Chamblee, Ga., Shelley Kingsbury of Punta Gorda, Fla., and Lisa Swisher of Lake City, Tenn.

To be named to Alpha Gamma Sigma, students must have maintained a 3.33 or higher grade point average during their college studies.

FAC-ts ----------

by Bill Warren, Jr.

Japanese Alumnus Noriko Meguro is visiting MC this week to give a guest recital on Thursday, May 19, at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Miss Meguro will feature J.S. Bach's "Partita No. 6 in E Minor," Otaka's "Sonatine pour Piano, Opus 13," Franz Schubert's "Moments Musicaux, Opus 94, D. 780," and Chopin's "Scherzo No. 1 in B Minor, Opus 20" in her recital.

Miss Meguro's career in piano performance began in Japan when she began taking piano lessons at age eight. She came to MC at age 18 and started studying with Dr. Robert Bonham. She attended Wichita State University to pursue her Masters. At Wichita, she studied with Dr. Robert Roux. She completed her Masters this spring.

While attending Wichita, Miss Meguro won two piano competitions. She was the winner fo the Concert-Aria Competition in 1981 in which she performed Prokofiev's "Piano Concerto No. 1" with the Wichita State University Orchestra. She also won the Gertrude Messenger Wallingford Piano Competition in 1982. This competition was judged by Santiago Rodriquez, a silver medal winner of the 1982 Van Cliburn International Competition, and the award was $500.00.

Last call for summer interim to England, Wales, and Ireland! Two or three places are still available on the British Heritage Tour. July 4-18, conducted by Dr. Elizabeth Fowler and Mrs. Herma Cate.

Three hours credit may be earned by reading specified books and keeping a journal on the trip: then the three week interim period between Thanksgiving and Christmas will be free for holiday work or relaxation.

The group will leave Knoxville on July 4, fly to New York, cross the Atlantic, spend a few hours in Amsterdam, and arrive in London by afternoon. Medieval castles, stately cathedrals, historic homes, and live theatre in London.

see ENGLAND, pg. 4

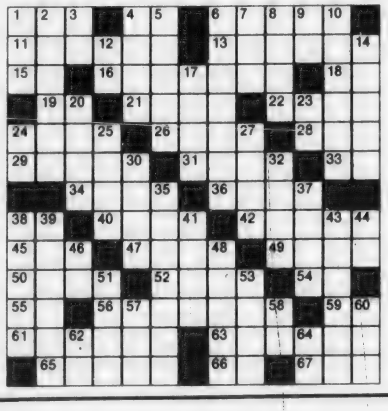
VIM's Commissioned

Maryville College's Volunteers in Mission for 1983 were commissioned at Mid-Week Worship, May 18, led by Dr. Dean Boldon in the Center for Campus Ministry.

Graduating Senior Carol Coffey will be serving this summer at the Interfaith Center in Jackson, Kentucky. Southeast Alaska will be the area of service for Seniors Tommy Brown and Bryan McFarland and Steve Sipple will work at the Children's Center in Buckhorn, Kentucky where several MC students have served during recent years, and the Presbyterian Children's home in Farmington, Missouri will be the scene of service for Andrea Vousden.

Volunteers in Mission is a program of the United Presbyterian Church which offers opportunities for service around the world.

College Press Service



CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Sixth sense, for short
4 Graduate deg.
6 Records
11 Steeples
13 Click beetle
15 Yes, in Madrid
16 Accompanied
18 Chinese mile
19 Artificial language
21 German title
22 Notices
24 Mud
26 Gardener's need
28 High card
29 European land
31 Future flower
33 26th U.S. Pres.
34 Falsehoods
36 Paper measure
38 Compass pt.
40 Seasoning
42 Rod
45 Number
47 Foray
49 Century plant
50 Loud noise
52 Approach
54 Teutonic deity
55 Printer's measure
56 Sifted
59 IL's neighbor
61 Retreat
63 Prepared for print
65 Liquid measure
66 Abbr. on a ship
67 Sum up

DOWN
1 Worm
2 Enthusiasm
3 Greek letter
4 Intertwine
5 Residues
6 Wirehair, for one
7 Pub drink
8 Cushions
9 And: Lat.
10 Choose
12 Ruthenium symbol
14 Step part
17 Love god
20 Spoken
23 Per person: Abbr.
24 Scale note
25 Yale students
27 Grant and Remick
30 1812 or 1914
32 Facts
35 Defame
37 Masculine
38 Sedate
39 Glossy paint
41 Bound
43 Fashioned
44 Santa —
46 See 55 Across
48 Small valleys
51 Fortitude
53 Warren Beatty film
57 Anger
58 501: Rom.
60 "The — Couple"
62 Scale note
64 Bye

ENGLAND, from pg. 3

Stratford, Cornwall, and Dublin -- all are included on the itinerary. Return is out of Ireland's Shannon airport.

The tour price of $1892 includes air fare, all entrance fees, two theatre tickets, first class hotels, deluxe transportation, and all meals except daily lunches (after an English breakfast, bility. We urge you to come and view this obviously influential film, and answer the question of "Why is the U.S. State Dept. nervous about this film?" and "since when is Canada a dangerous country?" (The Film is released by the Toronto Film Board). Oh yeah, I almost forgot: "Eight Minutes to Midnight" was "only" nominated for the Academy Award as Best Documentary Feature of 1981, but "If You Love This Planet" won the 1982 Academy Award in the same category.

MOVIE, from pg. 1

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee

Blount National Bank offers student bank accounts without fees to eligible full time students.

We also support Maryville College in academics, athletics, arts, science, and business.

Let Maryville's Hometown Financial Leader help you begin your financial career.

Hair Plus
FOOTHILLS MALL
MARYVILLE, TENN.
TEL: 982-3443

The staff of Hair Plus invites you to visit our new in the Foothills Mall.

Lin Ramsey
Linda Carroll
Donna Glandon
Gail Gredig
Nancy Smith
Polly Whitehead-Manicurist

We're open Mon. - Sat.
10 a.m. - 9 p.m.

We're The Professionals

Show your student I.D. for a and Summer styles. Call or com welcome.

REDKEN We use and recomme Redken products
FOOTHILLS MALL 982-3
Just say, "Charge It" - VISA, MasterCard

79387
160

1983 - 1984

VOL. 69

#1

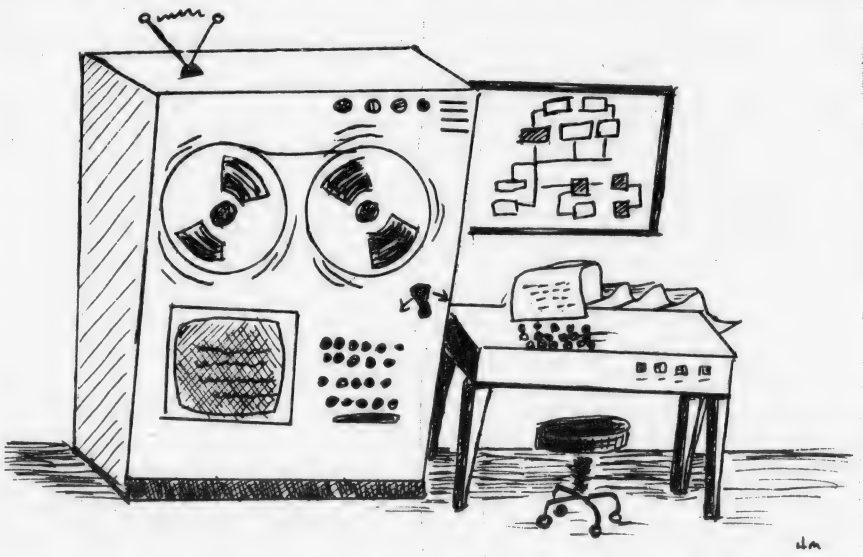
MISSING

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 2 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, September 29, 1983

Maryville Computes The Future

By Peggy Millsaps



It had to happen. With the proliferation of video games, the upsurge of "techno-pop" dance music, and the word "apple" no longer synonymous only with fruit, infiltration of MC was inevitable. Slowly, surely, insidiously, the Computer Age has dawned on campus.

Witness the new computer lab in Sutton Science Center. The lab, proudly marked with a hand-lettered sign, features four 8/16 - bit VECTOR 4/20's, three VECTOR 4/40's, and three Apple 11e Starter Systems. If that jargon is incomprehensible to some, the significance of this fact will not be. MC's is one of the first VECTOR labs in the country.

The lab was made possible by an $85,000 Pew Grant, and heralds MC's first offering of a computer science minor. When I visited the lab, Dr. Dent, Professor of the Chemistry, Math-Physics Department, and a student were feeding a punched card into one of the seemingly formidable machines and studying lines of a print on a readout screen. Dr. Dent explained that sixteen terminals are tied together making all the computers' information available at a single terminal; a teminal in the FAC building is tied in as well, permitting two-way communication.

Among this lot of microcomputers which programs in five languages, is a word processor that creates files and writes letters, an accounting package that does general ledger, payroll, and inventory, and a Data Management System applicable to business.

As if a new lab was not enough, Thaw Hall is looking into possibilities of computerization. Exir Brennan, Director, said she "is greatly desirous of providing computer retrieval of library materials." When I caught her in mid-flight between shelves, she was tracking down information on wild boars. With the sort of retrieval system she envisions, a student looking for information on wild boars, for example, would punch the subject into a terminal and have quick access to Thaw's store of information. Computerization would mean not only fingertip access to materials in Thaw; but to all information in the Southeastern Library Network.

This network has access to one of the largest data bases in the world, as well as the holdings of 3,000 libraries. Membership, in which Mrs Brennan is interested, would plug Thaw into 11 million records. Imagine a day when the often laborious task of locating a chemical abstract or an MLA bibliography listing is only a key punch away. "For this institution to be viable," Mrs. Brennan said, "I am greatly concerned with computer retrieval systems." The implications of such a system are "joyous, It would open up vistas of information unavailable ten years ago."

See COMPUTERS, pg. 4

Part-Time Faculty Hailed

In addition to the full-time faculty introduced in last week's Echo, Maryville College has gained five part-time faculty members. They are: Thomas Cronan, professor of Biology, Stephen Stringham, professor of Biology, Ruth Harmatz, professor of Math and Physics, and Merritt Ireland, professor of Art.

Tom Cronan was born and raised in Baton Rouge Louisiana. He and his wife Joan, have two daughters, Kristi, 12, and Stacey, 11. His educational background includes a BS degree from Louisiana State University, an M.Ed. from Northwestern of Louisiana, and an Ed. D. from the University of Tennessee. Presently on leave from The Citadel where he has taught for the past 11 years, Cronan is now serving as a lecturer in the School of Health, Physical Education and Recreation at U.T. He is scheduled to teach Human Anatomy and Physiology Winter Term and Kinesiology Spring Term.

In 1980 he received the R. Hughes Daniel Award for Outstanding Teaching at The Citadel, and this year was the recipient of two grants - the first dealing with Nutrition Education and the second with Biomechanics.

Evidence of Cronan's concern with health and exercise extends beyond his teaching responsibilities. While at LSU, he was a member of the track team, and he now competes in the Masters Track and Field; in Charleston he served as exercise physiologist for the Cardiac rehabilitation program; and he welcomes the

See FACULTY, pg. 3

Campus Calendar

Friday September 30

8:00 - 12:00 Movies in the Snack Bar. "Caddy Shack" and "Stripes"

8:15 - CIV, Margaret Kennedy performs in concert in the Music Hall.

Saturday, October 1

10:00 a.m. - Football, Scots vs. Washington & Lee at home.

Sunday, October 2

7:00 p.m. - Vespers in the CCM.

Tuesday, October 4

7:00 - Volleyball vs. Carson Newman at home.

Wednesday, October 5

9:20 a.m. - CIV, Sidewalk Dance Theatre in Wilson Chapel

10:30 a.m. - Mid-week worship in the CCM.

2:30 - 3:30 - Swimming test for all who have not taken it.

Editorial

Slow down. You move too fast.
You got to make the morning last.
Just kicking down the cobble stones.
Looking for fun and feeling groovy.

Hello lamp post. What ya knowing?
I've come to watch you flowers growing.
Ain't you got no rhymes for me?
Do de de do do feeling groovy.

I got no deeds to do no promises to keep
I'm dappled and drowsy and ready to sleep.
Let the morning time drop all its petals on me.
Life I love you. All is groovy.

Breathing in the helium from a balloon, being Jack and Jerry on the putt putt golf course, skipping, saying silly words, wearing wrestling shoes with a dress, laughing uncontrollably, pretending to be a poster of Jimmy Connors, making choo-choo noises by blowing into a plastic baseball bat.

In the last few days , these are the things I have seen adults doing. If you stop a moment and recreate in your mind these people carrying on so in a public place, like a shopping mall, the mental images are rather humorous. These nonsensical actions compose an important part of life by providing a release for tension. Thus, when people tell those enjoyers of frivolty that they look ridiculous, they have been paid the highest compliment and have succeeded in their purpose. For them the song, reprinted above,was written.

Today's competative, mechanical society, under the pressure of time,often loses sight of life's trivalities. The hectic pace and technical drone harden people's minds into a cast of problems, computations, solutions, drown out any foolishness and cause life's diversions to lose their cathartic quality. When this childlike simplicity, stored in every adult, becomes so deeply buried and must be vented or risk being lost, silliness runs rampant. Thank goodness. And, for those people who say "They look ridiculous," hope still remains because these words are for them:

All week long, we've been looking at horizons and it's hard on the brain
Sometimes I wonder is it the car or the highway that rolls through the rain.
This day has no number
This day has no name.
But it's time for the weekend all the same.

Why don't you put on your Saturday suit;
Let's fly away
We can find ourselves a little cafe
Where the street people come to play
And let the wine and the sunshine blow our minds away.
Saturday Suit me fine today.

All week long We've been sitting on our islands looking within.
Sometimes I know it must seem like we'll never be happy again.
Put on your makeup
And I'll shine my shoes
I know that it's Monday but I'm bored with the blues.
Why don't you put on your Saturday Suit:
Let's fly away
We can find ourselves a little cafe
Where the street people come to play
And let the wine and the sunshine blow our minds away
Saturday Suit me fine . . . today.

Jimmy Webb

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Jenny Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Sports Editor . . . . . Chris Porter

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Artist . . . . . Helen McNeill

Business Manager . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

LifestyleProgramDeveloped

By Marta Wittig

The Institute for Lifestyle Development, headed by Bruce Guilluame, is an honest attempt to anticipate and prevent problems in the entire stratus of the college community. Faculty, staff, and students are being offered all the help available to achieve general community well-being.

Modes for accomplishing this goal are varied and interesting. One very individual aid is the Health-Risk Appraisal Test which was administered to all incoming students for the first time this fall. The Health-Risk Appraisal Test (HRA) addresses six main areas of stability, including emotional, academic, nutritional, physical, spiritual, and social well-being. Based on the responses to these subjects, HRA determines an individual balanced program for each student. This program includes information on all six areas including exercise. (As an interesting aside, it has been determined that 60% of the incoming class gets no exercise at all. Exercise is very important to the reduction of stress).

The Resident Directors and many administrators have also taken the HRA. Returning students may take the HRA test at a cost of twelve dollars. See Donna Davis for details.

The Institute for Lifestyle Development is the offspring of an idea in Business and Industry. It has been proven that the prevention and monitoring of employee problems improve worker productivity, help to keep them healthy and help overall worker performance.

With some modification, the Institute for Lifestyle Development hopes to do the same. One of these outgrowths is a concern for the prevention of academic trauma. If a student cuts two classes in a row or receives a grade below a "C", the teacher has the perogative to notify Bruce Guilluame who will, in turn, find out what the student's problem is and deal with it (if necessary) constructively.

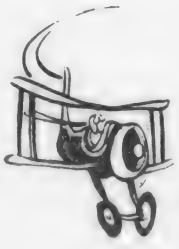
Another more comfortable and infinitely less stressful outgrowth of this program is the Relaxation Room. This is a private room which is always available (appointments necessary during business hours) for some completely stress-free time. There are comfortable chairs to sit in and several cassette tapes containing information on self relaxation and soothing music. This room is located on the second floor of Fayerweather (206). For appointments see Donna Davis in the Student Affairs Office.

The Institute for Lifestyle Development is not yet completed; however, the services as well as the upcoming seminars on self-improvement are well worth looking into.

Soprano Margaret Kennedy will appear in concert at Maryville College on Friday, Sept. 30 at 8:15 p.m. Miss Kennedy will perform selection by Bellini, Brahms, Rossini, Prokofieff and Copland and will be accompanied by Pianist Carolyn Rankin.

FACULTY cont. from pg. 1

opportunity to share ideas with students and faculty concerning "Wellness."



Considering his transfer to Maryville, Cronan said "I look at my presence on MC's campus as an opportunity to grow, professionally speaking, and, hopefully, to add measureably to my profession by working with what I've found to be a fine student body at MC."

Stephen Stringham, currently teaching physiology, lists his educational experiences as Humboldt State University where he received a B.S. in Biological Oceanography, the University of Alaska from which he was awarded an M.S. in Wildlife Biology, and The University of Tennessee from which he anticipates a Ph.D. in Wildlife Ecology.

Stringham has been involved in research on bears, moose, and other wildlife in Alaska, Montana, Wyoming, Tennessee, and Austria. He has also studied marine invertebrates in California.

Previous teaching experience includes ecology, biology, animal behavior, mammology, gymnastics, and diving. Stringham's hobbies range widely from gymnastics, diving, skin-diving, hiking, camping, wildlife and landscape to photography, sculpture, short story writing, and classical music, both listening and composing.

Ruth Harmatz, Virginia Jett and Merritt Ireland were unavailable for interviews, but The Highland Echo extends to them, as well as to Stephen Stringham and Tom Cronan, a hearty welcome.

Classes Meet On Saturday

By Teresa Hurst

Until recently, the average college age freshman was approximately eighteen years old. Now, because of population demographics, more and more adults with nine to five jobs are pursuing an education. Maryville College is helping meet the needs of these adults by offering Weekend College.

Weekend college offers degrees in Management, Business, Social Sciences, and Humanities. Options for a minor in computer science and programming are also offered, However, according to Tom Garsombke, director of continuing education for Maryville College, most degrees obtained are usually within five to six years on a part-time basis.

The program began the week of September twelfth. For convenience to students, Weekend College courses are offered in Maryville Knoxville, and Oak Ridge with classes on Friday evenings and Saturday mornings and afternoons. To better accomodate students, facilities such as day care, parking, and overnight lodging are provided.

According to Garsombke, enrollment in continuing education has nearly doubled since the advent of Weekend College. Thanks to Maryville College, adults who may otherwise be unable to obtain a college degree are now able to continue their education.

V-Ball Nets Coach

Brenda Ott, Knoxville native and former University of Tennessee-Knoxville volleyball player, has been named volleyball coach at Maryville College for the 1983 season.

Ms. Ott replaces Sharon Brown who has resigned her coaching position to pursue another graduate degree.

The new MC coach played four years of volleyball at UTK where she earned the B.S. degree in education in 1975. She also holds the Master of Mathematics degree from UTK and the Master of Science in physical education from Auburn University.

While in graduate school at Auburn, Ms. Ott was assistant volleyball coach for the men's team for two years. She has also coached for two years the Smoky Mountain Athletic Club's women's volleyball team, which consists of former UT and Knoxville area players.

A graduate of Doyle High, Ms. Ott has also played volleyball for the United States Volleyball Association's Knoxville team for the past 11 years.

Scots Not Over Yet

By Chris Porter

Well another school year has started for Maryville College, and things are in full gear on the football field with the Scots. This year's team is not as big in numbers as previous years, but there exists a unity that was missing the last two years.

The season opener was disappointing on the scoreboard, but the young and inexperienced Scots learned a great deal from the game. Hampden-Sydney defeated the Scots by a score of 31-7. The score was no indication of how well the Scots played. The score was still 16-7 late in the third quarter when some crucial mistakes opened up the game. The defense played an excellent game led by Bob Aucker, David Clancy, Paul Anagnostis, and Jeff Briggs. The only problem was that the defense was out on the field too long and tired late in the game. The offensive team has worked hard in camp to learn a new offense and had some trouble executing the game plan early. The starting offense is the most experienced team the Scots have had in several years. With 8 juniors and 3 sophomores, they have all started to gell as a team.

The home opener for the Scots was a different story. The first team offense was able to give the defense enough rest and to put enough points on the board. The Scots played host to Bridgewater College this week and sent them away as 24-7 losers. With a determined offensive line that did not allow a sack all day, the Scots handled Bridgewater's defensive front well enough to lead the offense in an improved showing over last week.

The defense, who spent fewer minutes on the field this week, was led by the defensive-line play and supported by the linebackers and secondary. The defensive-line had several sacks and applied pressure to cause several other key turnovers.

The Scots had some key performances from Roger Scarbro, Odell Parker, Darnell Lauderdale, and Steve Saylor. Parker and Lauderdale led an impressive defensive-line charge that gave Bridgewater trouble all day. Roger Scarbro, who had a nice day in the backfield, had a better day returning kicks for the Scots. Scarbro had 93 yards in punt returns and 54 yards in kickoff returns. Scarbro also had a 65 yard touchdown punt return called back for an illegal block. Steve Saylor has found a home on the Scots' team as a placekicker. Saylor converted on every point-after-attempt and connected on a 31 yard field goal.

Soccer Still Kicking

The Maryville College Soccer Team got their 1983 season off to a rocky start, dropping to their first three opponents.

The season opener saw Warren Wilson edge the Scots 2-1. Although the Scots were technically superior, they were overpowered in the midfield and could not sustain any offensive scoring drives. Their only score resulted from a penalty kick by defenseman Chris Laicy after Quy Huyng was fouled in Warren Wilson's penalty area Freshman goalkeeper Robbie Freeman played extremely well, turning back 13 shots to the goal.

In their second game, the Scots bowed to Tennessee-Wesleyan 3-1. Wesleyan scored twice in the first period before MC's Mike Alberda scored for the Scots. Wesleyan scored once more in the second period, sealing the game.

Last Saturday's game was a double disappointment to the Scots when they lost to Eastern Mennonite College 3-0 and lost midfield Wade Wright to ligament injuries. The Mennonites scored in the first minute of play on a well executed play, stunning the Scots.

The Scots' game against Milligan College has been cancelled, so the next game for them will be on Saturday morning at Honaker Field.

WELCOME TO MARYVILLE

We invite you to open a checking account with us or check on a student loan. Come to town on Court St. and you run into us!

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee
984-1500

Go Big Maroon

By Brian Rigell

Now, I know the first thought that crosses your mind is, "shouldn't that title be go big orange?" And then you'll probably say to yourself if that title was "Go Big Orange", then what is an article about UT sports doing in the Echo. Well, if you're not totally confused yet, read on and I'll try to get you that way. No, I'm just kidding.

The whole saga begins with the ordering of uniforms for the Lady Scots' Volleyball team. In an effort to show school spirit, the team has two sets of uniforms - one orange and one maroon (the closest thing to garnet), and it seems as though the team does a lot better in their maroon uniforms. The overall record of 6-4, with a record of 6-1 in maroon and 0-3 in orange.

The team travelled to Dayton on the 20th to play Bryan and Sewanee. The Lady Scots rolled over Bryan in the first match and then played in a barnburner against Sewanee with Maryville hanging on to win. The team then hosted the Maryville Invitational over the weekend. Friday night's action saw the Lady Scots dispose of Milligan, Emory and Henry and Sewanee. On Saturday it seemed as if the world had crashed, for the Lady Scots lost all three of their matches scheduled in route to being eliminated from the tournament. King, Carson-Newman, and Bryan were able to take advantage of Maryville's misfortunes and record wins against the Big Maroon (although at the time the team was wearing orange). King went undefeated until the championship match where Emory and Henry took the first place trophy. King placed second with Carson-Newman in third and Maryville in a disappointing fourth.

The Lady Scots main trouble seems to be that they play in spurts. In all of their losses the Ladies spotted their opponents at least five points before they were able to score once. Lack of concentration and mental toughness seem to be two other factors which plague the team. However, those of you who follow the team should not give up hope, for they show great promise and only need to work out a few kinks in order to show improvement in the win column.

The Lady Scots will have played at ETSU against ETSU and Carson-Newman by the time this is printed. Then they return home to face Carson-Newman on the 4th of October. A special thanks goes out to all those who showed up for the tournament. Your support was greatly appreciated.

COMPUTERS cont. from pg. 1

The Business Office, even, has the College budget on a computer and writes its own programs with the help of Lee Shamblin, Computer Director, using the Data Management System. Linda Stephens, Controller, noted an increase in office efficiency since the system's installation in 1979.

I asked Jean Jones, Director of Career Planning and Placement, if she forsees computerization of CPP. She explained that she has been studying three or four systems that would facilitate access to the office's extensive files. One day a student may be able to punch in his interests and aptitudes and receive a listing of job options, information, and locations.

Further computerization of MC, of course, could hardly be affected with the wave of a magic wand. Expense is a critical factor-priorities of equal value demand equal attention. Inadequate funding and budget cuts necessitates the Business Office's writing its own programs and prevents Thaw Hall from access to data bases. Still, the signs of gradual campus-wide computerization are visible.

As one whose closest encounter with a computer is the pocket calculator, I envisioned the computerization of MC as an invasion of machinated monsters with giant tape reels for eyes and a slot mouth spewing roles of incomprehensible data, all housed in an underground labyrinth in whose corridors a wandering soul would be forever lost. Not so. Sutton, Thaw Hall, the Business Office, and CPP are proving that computers are as innocuous and indispensable as, oh, say, the pocket calculator.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 3 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, October 6, 1983

Students Aid Community

By Peggy Millsaps
Marta Wittig

Five students have extended their concerns beyond campus to lend a hand-and a little heart- to three budding social services. Gloria Anaple, Debbie Hall, Charlie Parsons, Julie Quinton, and Donald Xiques live and work at, respectively, Blount County Girls Group Home, Haven House, and Dismiss House.

Gloria Anaple works with the Blount County Girls Group Home. Because the phone number is guarded, we were unable to talk to Gloria there. Nonetheless, we learned that the facility provides shelter for runaway girls; the guarded number protects their privacy.

Debbie Hall works at Haven House, the location of which cannot be disclosed for the sake of its occupants' privacy. Haven House offers refuge to battered women. Women in need of aid call the CONTACT number to speak with a House volunteer. Upon exceptance, they are given lodging and put in touch with sources of legal aid, medical care, and food stamps. Debbie became involved "accidentally" through Child and Family Services. She is now Resident Director and performs such diverse duties as long-term planning for the facility, coordinating, functioning, helping train volunteers, and working with staff and clients. Said Debbie, "The reality of physical and mental abuse is not distant. Violence has nothing to do with education, intellect, or social status."

Charlie Parsons, Donald Xiques, and Julie Quinton work for Dismiss House on Cates Street. Dismiss is a halfway house for ex-prisoners which provides a supportive transition from prison to free society. Ex-offenders are recruited on the basis of attitude and promise of improvement, although Julie emphasizes that Dismiss is not a rehabilitation center. Volunteers help ex-offenders look for jobs while re-orientating them into society by interaction with students at Dismiss. Julie, who serves as Social and Recreational Director and Deputy Director, became involved through a friend who, in turn, led her to Dr. Harry Howard. Julie interviews inmates, helps residents find jobs, solicits donations, and even does physical repairs and "some cooking" when the occasion demands. "Also," she adds, "I try to help keep attitudes up."

Charlie Parsons became involved because of "a sense of fascination with the psychology and sociology of the whole idea of ex-offenders growing in a family and readjusting."

Charlie Parsons succinctly sums up his involvement as "a chance to participate in a vision." Donald Xiques adds an epilogue: "The best way to practice faith is to live it."

Dr. Charlotte Beck

Dr. Beck Publishes First Book

By Amy Waggoner

Dr. Charlotte H. Beck, associate professor of English here at Maryville College, recently published her first book, entitled Worlds and Lives: The Poetry of Randall Jarrell.

Although Jarrell is not one of the most renown poets of the twentieth century, he is known as one of the best war poets for his work about World War II. He also won the National Book Award in 1960 for The Woman at the Washington Zoo.

Dr. Beck first became interested in Jarrell during her high school days as she began to discover the dramatic monologue. Since Jarrell often used this technique in his poetry, her interest in him grew, resulting in her doctoral dissertation entitled The Dramatic Mode in the Poetry of Randall Jarrell. Dr. Beck has retained her interest in him after receiving her doctorate, publishing several articles on Jarrell since then.

Dr. Beck noted that writing a book is not very different from writing a dissertation, or even an independent study at Maryville College. The hardest part is getting the work published. She also noted that having a work published is not really a great accomplishment. In fact, at most major colleges and universities it is expected – most faculty members publish at least one article per year and eventually publish several books. "What publication does demonstrate" explained Dr. Beck, "is that the professor has a vital interest in research and writing and will therefore continue to develop as a scholar."

Although she does not expect her book to be a best-seller (scholarly works rarely are), Dr. Beck would like to see it awaken more inter-

See BECK, pg. 3

Campus Calendar

Thursday, October 6

7:00 p.m. - CIV - "Born of Fire" a National Geographic Society film highlighting the theory of platetectonics - in the theater.

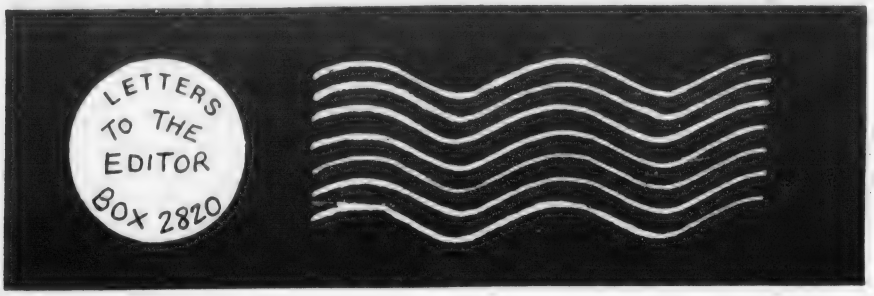
Friday, October 7

Volleyball - Juniata Classic - away

Saturday, October 8

Football vs. Washington & Lee Away

Soccer vs. Stamford - away



Sunday, October 9

7:00 p.m. - Vespers in the CCM.

8:00 p.m. - Orange and Garnet Night - Wilson Chapel.

Wednesday, October 12

9:20 - CIV - U.S. Justic Dept. Film Festival - "If You Love Planet," Acid Rain: Requiem or Recovery," and "Acid from Heaven" - theater.

Saturday, Oct. 1

Dear Editor,

God spoke to me today. He spoke to me through the football team.

This morning I sat down to breakfast with 65 football players. I felt extremely out of place, being the only female in the dining hall and the only student who was not a player or a coach. But after I had food on my plate and realized that I had entered the dining hall during pre-game team-time, I decided not to eat alone. One of the players eased my anxiety and invited me to dine with the group. I did.

By the time breakfast was over, my ideas about football changed completely. At first I watched each player, some rugged-looking, some timid, some contemplative, others nervous - each his own man. My dining companion explained that he suffered from the common ailment called "Saturday Morning Jitters." And as my friend and I talked Reggie Widener and Odell Parker called the team together for devotionals.

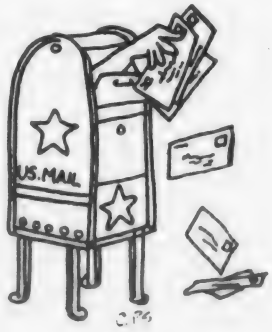
They joined together and listened to a scripture reading which they applied to team dedication and level-headedness. One member recalled the story of David and Goliath. They prayed aloud. Coach Sawyer then reminded the players of a saying that hangs in Coach Lambert's office: "Your abilities are God's gift to you; what you make of yourself is your gift to God." The players joined hands and closed in prayer: "Dear God, we ask that we may utilize our ability; help us to continue with the proper attitude."

The player next to me and I sat in silence for several moments. When we resumed our conversation, he explained that devotionals are only part of his pre-game warm-up.

"It takes me an hour to put on my uniform. I make sure there are no runs in the pants. Then I lie down on the bench and think for awhile. I put on my shoulder pads, make sure they are on just right. . . "

As we talked he mentioned that Mike Hadden, who broke his ankle at the beginning of the year, had thought his ankle was only bruised and asked the coach if he could keep playing. In honor of his dedication, the team awarded him the ball that the team used when they beat Bridgewater. The next winning football will go to Jeff Seagle who broke his foot.

A football game involves far more than the colorful life we see on Saturday afternoons. It includes sense of humor (Did you see Coach Saylor boogy down at the pep rally?), psychological preparation, and spiritual unity. It involves far more than anything I have mentioned.



I regret my previous (and continuous) ignorance about the Scots' football team, but I am glad that God spoke to me through the spirit of the football team. They are an example to us all, because whether they win or lose today, they will be out there playing again next week and you can bet that God will be by their sides.

Sincerely,
Mary Hughes

It never ceases to amaze me how cheap and money hungry and lazy Maryville College is. I have lived in a room for 2 years that has had a disgusting 4 ft. diameter stain on the wall. The plaster board in this area was ruined and turned to mush. This mess was caused by a leak in the women's shower in Pearson's Hall a year ago. After at least a month of leaking, the maintenance department finally "fixed" the shower. They didn't fix it right and the shower continued to leak. Now 1 year later maintenance finally comes in to fix my wall and discovers they didn't fix the leak properly - after they cut a 5' X 4' hole in my wall. This hole will be here indefinitely. I currently pay more than $450 extra charges to live in Pearsons. I don't need a beautiful, perfect room, but it would be nice not to live in one with gross, offensive stains, and now a hole in the wall.

I have suffered much duress, anxiety and discomfort from this unhealthy and disgusting nuisance. President Anderson, if you read this letter, please do something - you're my last hope.

Occupant - room 228
Pearsons' Hall

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell

Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Business Manager ..... Kathy Fitzell

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Affiliate Artist Introduced

Mezzo-Soprano Janice Meyerson has been selected as the 1983-84 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist presented locally by Maryville College.

The appointment of Miss Meyerson, who is scheduled this season to make her New York City Opera debut in the title role of "Carmen," is again sponsored by the ALCOA Foundation with additional assistance from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Miss Meyerson's first visit to the area is set for Dec. 5-15, followed by additional visits Jan. 10-29 and April 3-13. During each of these visits, she is available to perform at schools; churches; club, civic and other group meetings; as well as for businesses and industries. Pianist Robert Bonham, associate professor of music at the College, will accompany Miss Meyerson.

The 1983-84 Affiliate Artist, in addition to her visits to this area will appear in Madrid in Wagner's "Lohengrin" in February 1984.

Since her 1977 debut in "Tristan and Isolde" with the Philadelphia Orchestra, Leonard Bernstein conducting, Miss Meyerson has appeared with major opera companies and symphony orchestras throughout the United States, Europe and South America.

In 1978 she was named a National Finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Auditions, and in 1981 she made her New York concert debut by replacing an ailing Tatiana Troyanos in the role of Judith in Bartok's "Bluebeard's Castle" with the New York Philharmonic. She was subsequently re-engaged for the 1982-83 season to sing Bernstein's "Jeremiah Symphony."

Prior to this, Miss Meyerson appeared twice with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Seiji Ozawa in Bruckner's "Te Deum" and in a televised production of Berlioz's "Beatrice et Benedict."

She has also appeared with the National Symphony Orchestra in Aaron Copland's "The Tender Land," conducted by the composer, and in Mahler's "Third Symphony" under the direction of Gunther Schuller. She also performed the "Third Symphony" with the American Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall.

Ms. Meyerson made her Euopean debut in "Carmen" at Theatre de la Monnaie in Brussels and her Paris debut at the Theatre de la Ville in Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas." In South America, she debuted with the Opera Nacional de Colombia as Azucena in Verdi's "Il Trovatore."

A native of Omaha, Neb., Ms. Meyerson graduated from Washington University in St. Louis and from the New England Conservatory of Music with a master's degree in voice.

She is the recipient of numerous honors, and in 1981 was selected to join the distinguished roster of Affiliate Artists, Inc.

Local persons or organizations interested in scheduling an appearance by Miss Meyerson should contact Libby Rankin at 982-6412 in Blount County or 546-6912 in Knoxville.

Talents Chance Stardom

By T.M. Pitcott

When asked "What is Orange and Garnet Night," Gloria Anaple replied: We call it "the ultimate MC Variety Show." The idea started last year. The purpose is to get people who are interested in performing in Coffee Houses and quiet evenings together. Orange and Garnet Night avoids the chaos that used to ensue at more casual Coffee Houses. One problem this concept hopes to dispose of is the excessive length which less structured shows attract.

Everyone who wishes to perform at Orange and Garnet Night is invited to do so. A panel of judges (faculty and students) will rate each act. Those acts with the highest rating will perform at future Coffee Houses.

Orange and Garnet Night will be held Sunday, October 9 in Wilson Chapel. Everyone is invited to come and participate. You can sign up in the Student Programming Room, Fayerweather 204.

BECK, cont. from pg. 1

est in Jarrell's poetry and help him become better known to the general reader.

Can we expect to hear more from Dr. Beck in the future?" I certainly hope so," she said. "I've applied for one NEH grant to work on setting the dramatic monologue and another to study the Fugitives and their students. By next summer I hope to have settled on one or the other as a long-range project."

Dr. Beck's book, World and Lives: The Poetry of Randall Jarrell, is on sale for $12.00 in the book store.

Teachers Display Art

The Maryville College Fine Arts Center Gallery will present the Knox County Art Teachers Art Exhibit Oct. 2-28.

According to VaLera Lewis, Knox County art supervisor, the following teachers will participate in the MC October exhibit:

Faye Pollard, painting, Carter MIddle School; Edith Barton, paintings, Doyle Middle School; Harvey Whittaker, pastels, East Knox County; Judy Jorden, drawings, and Robert paintings, both with Hall Middle School; Bill Shinn, ceramics and paintings, Karns Middle School; Mack Hickey, paintings and ceramics, and Alan Seneker, paintings, Carter High School; and Betty Rowland, paintings, Doyle High School.

Also participating are Robbie Seagren, Javonne Hall and Peggy Griffin, all with paintings, Farragut High School; Nancy Irwin, ceramics and weaving, and Harriett Jenkins, paintings, Gibbs High School; JoAnn Cooper, weaving, Powell High School; and Merritt Ireland, constructions, Ft. Sanders Development Center and part-time faculty member at MC.

Fred Patterson, Halls High, and Jan Cox and Jim Fox, Karns High, will also display work in the show.

WELCOME TO MARYVILLE

We invite you to open a checking account with us or check on a student loan. Come to town on Court St. and you run into us!

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
Your Hometown Financial Leader
Maryville, Tennessee
984-1500

Hair Plus
FOOTHILLS MALL
MARYVILLE, TENN.
TEL: 982-3443

We Offer A 10% Discount To Students

Open Mon - Sat 9am - 9pm

"Kick-Off" The Fall Season With A New Look-For The Newest And Updated Hair Fashions
Come By HAIR PLUS...
Walk-Ins Welcomed

Mistakes Best Scots

By Dan Bouch

On Saturday afternoon Maryville College played host to Catholic University in yet another tough ODAC game. This game marked the third of the year for the rebuilding Scots, and it was clearly evident that the young Scots still have a lot ot work ahead of them.

The Cardinals of Catholic got off to an early start when Pat Moyer's pass the first play from scrimmage was intercepted and returned for a touchdown. This put the Scots in a hole early from which they were never able to recover. Besides the turnovers, the Scots' offense was able to move, but it seemed that every drive was stopped by mistakes or turnovers.

The defense for the Scots played another good game, but they grew tired late in the game. The defense was on the field too long as the Scots' offense was stopped by mistakes. The defense was led by another good game by the defensive line. The line was led by sacks and tackles from Mike Ferrell, Matt Ferguson, and Odell Parker. The defense also received some support from Paul Anagnostis and Brian Gray in the secondary.

Although the Scots only put 3 points on the board (a field goal by Steve Saylor), they were able to generate some offense with a balanced running and passing attack. The Scots were able to move the ball between the 10 yard lines but were unable to put the ball in the end zone.

Next week the Scots try to improve on their 1-2 record as they travel to Lexington, Virginia where they will play the Generals of Washington & Lee.

New Trainer Added

Vanessa J. Rice has joined the Maryville College staff as head athletic trainer.

Ms. Rice came to MC from Morehead State University in Kentucky where she recently received the M.A. degree in health and physical education. She replaces Karl Bailey who left this summer to take a position with Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

At Morehead, Ms. Rice worked as a graduate assistant athletic trainer and was responsible for the women's six-sport program. She also assisted with the men's program.

Her duties included recognizing injuries and carrying out treatment and rehabilitation programs for all female athletes and traveling with the volleyball, basketball and softball teams. She also worked with the pre-season football camp and supervised and instructed all student trainers.

In 1982 Ms. Rice completed an internship with the Temple University Center for Sports Medicine and Science. Her responsibilities there included supervising rehabilitation programs and administering prescribed therapy for patients, conducting Cybex testing and assisting the Center's doctors. She also completed research for an updated study on the torque forces of Turf Shoes on Artificial Turf.

Ms. Rice earned her B.S. in health sciences from West Chester State College in Pennsylvania. There she served as a student trainer for three years, assisting with men's football and women's basketball and volleyball. She also served as host trainer for the NCAA Boxing Championship.

In addition to her duties as a student trainer, Ms. Rice also served as vice president of the athletic trainer's club and captain of the women's rugby team and participated in cross country skiing and intramural sports.

"We are very pleased to have Vanessa join the Scots' program. She comes from two very good programs and was highly recommended for her expertise and professionalism," Coach Saylor said.

Women's Soccer Begins

The Maryville College Women's Soccer Club opens their season Saturday morning against Warren Wilson at Honaker Field. Come support the Scotty Wenches.

Soccer Lacks Scoring

By Chris Porter

The day was not with the Scots as they found themselves defeated by the Washington & Lee Generals by a score of 2-0. The small but spirited crowd saw the undaunted Scots' defense hold Washington & Lee to only one goal per period, the first being made on a penalty kick in the opening minutes of the game. From that point on the Scots played mostly a defensive game turning back 2-1 shots, while a frustrated MC offense was turned back 10 times.

Injuries during the game continued to plague the Scots. Chris Laicy came out with a leg injury early on. Mike Olberda was taken to the hospital after surviving a staggering blow but was soon released.

Rethalite Masilo, the only original member of the Scots' midfield, played his usual fast-footed juggling act, but the offense never gelled to sustain a successful scoring drive. Coach Levanthal said he was also pleased with the performances of freshmen late in the game. Charlie Gummuld also deserves credit as a defensive spoiler.

The Scots play Tusculum on Honaker Field Wednesday afternoon at 4:00. This game is important to the Scots and could use your loyal support.

COUPON

$3 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA

Coupon must be presented. Offer expires Oct. 16, 1983. Not valid with any other offer. Good at Maryville location only.

Godfather's Pizza

501 CUSICK ST. MARYVILLE 983-6800

Davy Crockett Stable, Inc.

TOWNSEND TENNESSEE

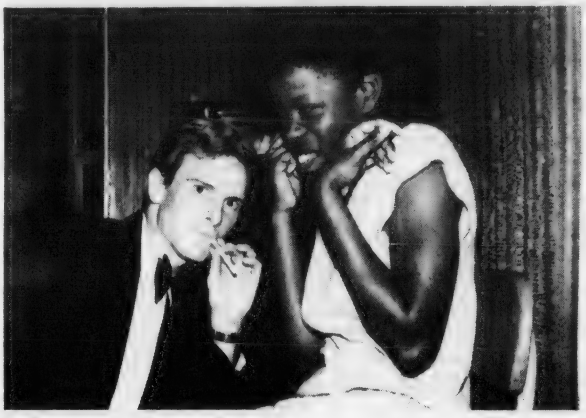
Just to remind MC students

We are open all winter.

You do not have to be an expert to ride here.

Faster rides for the experienced offered

Rides of various duration available including overnight campouts for groups and clubs.



This ad good for a 10% discount on an overnight campout of 10 people or more.

CALL FOR INFORMATION – 448-6411

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 4 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, October 13, 1983

(Right)

Donald Xiques, armed with a toothbrush, dares to tell a joke?

(Left)

Donald Xiques and Sonja Gilmore clown around backstage at Orange and Garnet Night. Don was one of the emcees, and Sonja sang her version of "Bringing Home My Bumble Bee."

(Left)

Trent Gilmore, a music major at MC is accompanied by his own piano playing and partner John Wright (not pictured)

(Below)

Danny Cartlidge and Laurie Nelson entertain the audience..

Students Meet Judgment

Sunday night, school colors shone forth. Maryville College talent came out in force, making Sunday night shine orange and garnet.

Singers delighted the audiences with country, pop, spiritual, and self composed pieces. Acts were performed by John Wright, Trent Gilmore, Dan Cartlid Laurie Nelson, Gloria Anaple, Tokoloho Masilo, Kevin Roberson, Diana Bonyadi, Diane McDaniel, Angela Kirby, Lisa Vandivort, Carol Cooper, Simp Broughton, Monique Requith, and Bryan McFarland.

Tommy Brown (and friend) amused spectators with colorful stories. A flare of drama was added by Sonja Gilmore.

Tyrone Matthews, Simp Broughton, Kevin Brown, and Sara Covington dazzled the audience with an impressive dance routine. An added bit of grace was provided by Jina Radozycki and Amy Nicholson.

Orange and Garnet Night- a night to remember.

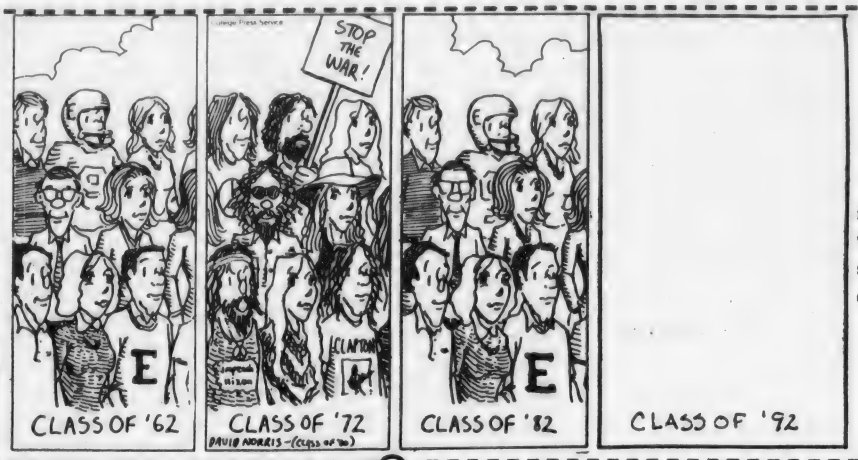
Campus Calendar

Sunday, October 16

7:00 - Vespers in the CCM

Tuesday, October 18

6:30 - Volleyball vs. King College and Concord College - Bristol, TN



4:00 - Soccer vs. King College - Bristol, TN

7:30 - All-Campus Karate Workshop. Wilson Chapel.

Wednesday, October 19

9:20 - "Crisis in the Sahel" CIV

10:30 - Midweek Worship - Bread for the World, Maryville College Chapter

Complete the next frame by drawing a picture of the class of '92 in which their opinions toward predictable political issues in the 90's are represented, and return it to the Echo, Box 2820. The results will be tallied, and the picture representing the majority's point of view will be printed.

As the cartoon suggests, a wave of conservatism in the early sixties, which broke into one of radicalism in the seventies, has brought American students full circle. How has conservatism come to be once again, the dominant feeling? To answer this question, let us first remember the past.

The civil rights and racial rights movements, prevalent in the early sixties, gained support through non-violent demonstrations, while the anti-war movement attracted, as yet, only a few university intellectuals.

From the mid 1960's through the early seventies, however, violent protests replaced the peaceful demonstrations as students became impatient with the government's lethargy in appropiating funds for social improvements. The dearth of finances which these reforms demanded was quickly linked to the increasing expense of the Vietnam War. Thus, the civil rights and antiwar campaigns fused into a homogenous movement. Campuses nationwide displayed their dissatisfaction with the draft laws and their frustration with Congress's seeming negligence toward such issues as poverty legislation. The general result was waning support of the government and intensifying riots on college campuses. These riots culminated after the assasination of Martin Luther King, Jr., who also attributed the cost of the war as a detrimental factor in the realization of equality.

In the wake of the termination of America's involvement in Vietnam, the longed for peace was shrouded by the exposure of Watergate. Following President Nixon's resignation, a period of rebuilding ensued: President Ford tried to present to the public an open and trustworthy government; President Carter took a moderate position on most major issues and injected a moral tone into his campaign.

Tranquility, however, was not enjoyed for very long: On November 4, 1979 Iranian students seized the American Embassy and held it for 444 days; Pope John Paul II and President Reagan were victims of assassins' bullets; Forty-three days ago the Soviets shot down a Korean Airliner. What is the point of resurrecting all these past incidents? - to show that many events of the 60's and 70's are occuring in the 80's. The threat of assassination still prevails, and civil rights remain violated. However, although the issues may be the same, the reactions of the students, the leading generation of the future, are quite different. The reinstatement of the draft and the failure in passing ERA did not receive many protests. I do not mean to suggest that rioters should rampage the college campuses; the fatal results of such actions were demonstrated at Kent University in 1970. Using a more civilized approach to express approval or dissatisfaction would suffice. However, a general disinterest in these matters seems to be the dominant feeling. Let us consider the most recent controversial issue, the shooting down of the Korean jetliner, to evaluate the future generation's attitude. After the initial fear that this incident could explode into a major conflict wore off, which it quickly did, I heard several students state, "If I have to hear about that Korean jetliner one more time. . ." If this would represent the majority's point of view, what does this apathy suggest? Perhaps the students do not want to face these political issues. Maybe this low-keyed reaction is their way of keeping these conflicts from erupting into unwanted, domestic violence. Possibly, the students don't want to assume any responsibility for the direction of the world, or more likely, the students of the 80's have seen that America, if the many "crisis" are quickly pushed into the past, will go on anyway. y What do you think? What will the students of the 80's attitude generate in the students of the 90's?

Letters

Dear Editor,

This is in response to the announcement of the opening of the Women's Soccer season. I am appalled that the phrase "Scotty Wenches" was published. I realize the phrase was meant in a humorous manner, however, the phrase has a negative connotation. I feel it is the responsibility of the Editor to screen out this type of derogatory material.

The Women's Soccer Club is a hard working organization struggling for varsity status. This type of humor only hinders our chance for advancement. We need support not degradation.

Let's go out and win ladies. We'll show everyone what we've got!

J.D.

The Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Jenny Fitzell

Assistant Editor . . . . . Kathy Fitzell

Sports Editor . . . . . Chris Porter

Photographer . . . . . Nancy Rojas

Advisor . . . . . Stephen LeMay

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

MC Fights Hunger

By Marta Wittig

Bread for the World, a Christian citizens movement, has a chapter on the Maryville College Campus.

Mary Hughes, chairwoman of the Maryville College Chapter (MCC), explains that the purpose of the organization is not one of direct aid, such as money or food, and adds, "It (MCC) tries to effect government policy in the United States and other countries."

Bread for the World, a registered lobby, tries to motivate citizens to action through a nationally distributed newsletter which informs readers about impending legislature and forms of reaction.

The campus chapter of Bread for the World brings in speakers and films for campus awareness.

World Food Day, October 21, is an around the world Hunger Awareness day. There will be world-wide cropwalks, marches, and demonstrations. The MCC plans to participate; watch for details.

For more information contact Mary Hughes, Box 2336.

Sahel Crisis Discussed

By Peggy Millsaps

Wednesday, October 16, Dr. Scott Brunger, Assistant Professor of Economics, will host a CIV program, "Crisis in the Sahel."

Dr. Brunger will "talk about Chad in perspective." He feels "debates in the press have not been very revealing."

Sahel is on the border of the Sahara Desert which runs through Chad and five African countries. All but one of these countries have experienced violence as the desert destroys their livihoods, Dr. Brunger explained.

"Ecology is an underlying cause of warfare," he noted. "Warfare involves not only the Lybians and American supporters, but the French and Nigerians as well.

"We need to know more about what's going on before we get involved," Dr. Brunger stressed. "There is more going on than appears to be."

good luck

The following women are nominated by the senior class for Homecoming Queen. Seniors will vote in the reducing election on Friday, Oct. 14, 1983 to select 5 women to run as Homecoming Queen in the campus-wide election. (tentatively scheduled for Oct. 24).

Wilma Coleman
Carol Cooper
Susan Friedman
Kim Hatfield
Mary Hughes
Sarah Jane Lindsay
Helen McNiell
Joan Marshall
Lorie Peters
Glennis Riedl
Terri Roberts
Evelyn Sowell
Susan Williams
Laurie Winiarski

MC Gives Big Advantage

By Pam Matthews

After the receiving of degrees and the fond farewells have faded from memory, some graduates decide to pursue a career. Others, however, elect to further their education. by attending graduate school.

What advantages might Maryville College graduates have over other students in graduate school? According to Mrs. Jean Jones, Director of Career Planning and Placement here at Maryville College, "The offering of Independent Study, Internships, Interim and other programs can provide a solid foundation for those students wishing to attend graduate school. Independent Study sharpens the writing and research skills vitally needed in the required thesis of graduate school. Interim and Internships can provide practical experience in various areas of study and occupations . Another advantage is Maryville's small size. It allows faculty to assist and guide students individually in preparation for graduate school."

"Science majors, in particular," Mrs. Jones continues, "have extensive use of laboratory equipment, unlike other graduates at large institutions, who usually have little opportunity to work in the laboratory. Science majors can also do independent research in their areas of interest."

What are some of Maryville's 1983 graduates involved in now? Jane Jafvert, with a double major of Interpreting/Recreation, is currently enrolled at the University of Tennessee in Theraputic Recreation. During an Internship she worked at T.V.A.'s Melton Hill Dams conducting special tours and activities for the hearing impaired.

Andrew Baker, a business major, and Barbara Booker Pritchard, an economics major, are at the University of Tennessee Graduate School of Planning. Each received an assistantship. Under this program, qualified candidates receive a waiver of tuition and fees and are assigned to work in a specific department or related field. Andrew, who is working for East Tennessee Development District, surveys the industries in this region. Barb, meanwhile, is working with a professor on computer analysis of economic projectors. These work assignments help finance their graduate studies.

In the area of science, Joann Berretto is seeking a PhD in Animal Science from Cornell University in New York. As a biology major at Maryville, she worked during an Interim, with an animal nutritionist at the Knoxville Zoo. Over the summer of her Junior Year, she went on a study trip to Kenya, Africa.

As evidenced above, Maryville College has several distinct advantages over much larger colleges and universities. Maryville College's emphasis on academics, small enrollment, excellent faculty, and accessible laboratory facilities provide a sound foundation in preparation for graduate school.

The following list includes other 1983 graduates who are attending graduate, professional and technical schools:

Bill Bender, (Music)	Ohio University, Music/Piano
Robin Rimmer Bright, (Physical Education)	University of Tennessee, Physical Education
Peter Davis, (Chemistry)	Southern College of Optometry Memphis, TN, Optometry School
Carol Humphrey, (English)	University of Tennessee, Law School
Joe Wynne (Biology)	Duke University, Ecology

Generals Command Scots

By Dan Bouch

Last Saturday the Scots travelled to Washington and Lee and played what seemed to be a replay of the opening seconds of the Catholic University game. Mark Ferrell kicked-off into Washington and Lee's endzone. After a reverse handoff, Washington and Lee was in the Scots' endzone, and Maryville was down by seven with only seconds run off the clock. Once again the young Scots had to fight out of a hole. And again, they were unable to do so.

This week the offense was able to move the ball but made big mistakes (fumbles and penalties) that ended drives. The Scots did manage to put seven points on the board, when in the second half, Scots trailing 24-0, Pat Moyer hit Pat Foster with a 56 yard touchdown pass. Steve Saylor then converted the point after to give the Scots their only score.

Washington and Lee was able to handle the Scots' defensive line for most of the day even with crucial mistakes; they had good field position all day and were able to put 44 points on the board. The Scots received some good defensive play despite the score. Paul Anagnostis, Scott Dixon, and Kevin McKee lead the Scots' defense with some hard hitting and tackling.

The offense had some bright points despite the lack of points and yardage. David Clancy, who moved from defense to offense this week, played a good game as running back. The Scots, however, completed only three passes in twenty attempts with one going to Foster's touchdown. The incompleted passes hurt their running attack and thus slowed the offensive output.

Lady Scots Pull Out Victory

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots volleyball team went to the well three times in the past two weeks, and although they were only able to bring back one, they did show signs that they're playing up to their potential.

The team travelled to ETSU on the 27th to play against Carson-Newman and ETSU. The night started out on a good note as the Lady Scots won their first game against Carson-Newman, but after that it was all down hill. Carson-Newman was able to rally and take the next two games to win the match.

The next match was against ETSU, and it only took two games for the host team to crush the visiting Maryville squad. ETSU ran off a string of fifteen points to win game one 15-0 and then came back with fourteen more before allowing the Lady Scots one on the way to a 15-8 win.

The team returned home and began to prepare for their next match which was against arch-rival Carson-Newman on Tuesday night, the 4th.

Tuesday night came, and if you weren't there, you missed what probably was the most exciting match of the season so far. A big crowd composed of students, faculty, and staff turned out to see the Ladies emerge victorious in a cliff hanger that went to the wire. In the best of five match, the Lady Scots went up two games to none with scores of 15-9 and 15-12 and seemed to be well on their way to a win, needing only one more game, before running into trouble. The Lady Eagles stormed back to win the next two with scores of 15-7 and 15-8, thus forcing the match into a fifth game. And what a fifth game it was! The gym was filled with so much tension it was a miracle that the roof didn't fly off. The Lady Scots were down 13-11 with the serve and were able to squeeze out one more point before giving the ball back to Carson Newman. The Lady Eagles scored, making it 14-12. It looked grim for the Lady Scots, and no doubt Carson-Newman fans were singing "Turn Out the Lights" when the Lady Scots' PRIDE took over. Then, perhaps one of the most exciting plays of the night occurred. Carson-Newman served, and Maryville, unable to set up an attack, passed back a free ball which a Carson-Newman player allowed to land right at her feet and most importantly right on the line. Side out Maryville! Jubilation reigned supreme! The Lady Scots reached deeply and came away with a 16-14 victory! Now, ya'll can start singing "Turn Out the Lights."

Soccer Record Reversed

By Chris Porter

The MC Soccer Team dropped its fifth game of the season last Wednesday to undefeated Tusculum, 2-0, but proved itself Saturday in Birmingham, Alabama, by beating Samford (student body around 7000) by a Score of 2-1. This win not only breaks their five game losing streak, but it also constitutes the first road victory in the history of MC soccer (not counting Milligan's forfeit earlier in the season).

Not much can be said for the Tusculum game, except that the Scots played with 100% effort and with an intensity that demands respect. Tuculum got no goals from the field; their only scores resulted from a penalty kick late in the first period and a corner kick early in the second period. Goalkeeper Robbie Freeman is credited with 16 saves for that game. The MC offense took 16 shots but never capitalized.

The story on the Samford game is different, though. Both teams remained scoreless through the first period, but Samford scored in the first minute of the second half on a corner kick (the only scores against MC since the MC-Mennonite game have been corner or penalty kicks, by the way). The Scots retaliated via another Chris Laisy penalty kick fourteen minutes into the period. Eight minutes later, Julio Pesiri scored on a tremendous kick from the field. Minor Taylor was also given credit as a strong factor for the offense.

Ladies Fight With Might

The Maryville College Women's Soccer Club opened their season on Saturday with a loss to Warren Wilson College. Warren Wilson scored ten unanswered goals, but the Lady Scots continued to fight back. The Lady Scots' offensive line consisting of Senior-Mary Hughes, Senior-Tokoloho Masilo, Freshman-Cynthia Mayfield and Freshman - Jody Mullens dominated the opening of the second half with a twenty-five minute offensive attack.

Senior coach, Steve Ford commented after the game that he was not down about the game. The score of Saturday's game was not an indication of poor performance. He recognizes the team's potential and feels the Lady Scots may return home next Saturday with a trophy from the Warren-Wilson Tournament.

SEE US FOR
CHECKING ACCOUNTS
AND STUDENT LOANS

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
984-1500
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

COUPON
$3 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA
Coupon must be presented. Offer expires Oct. 16, 1983. Not valid with any other offer. Good at Maryville location only.
Godfather's Pizza
501 CUSICK ST. MARYVILLE 983-6800

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 5 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, October 20, 1983

Asbestos Discovered

Chemical Triggers Quick Action

By Kathy Fitzell

With the completion of Lloyd Hall, the extensive project undertaken this past summer to remove asbestos and renovate the dorms will be finalized.

Ceiling materials in Davis, Hall I, Copeland, and Lloyd were found to contain asbestos during testing completed in March of 1983.

Upon receiving notification of the tests' positive results, administrative officials moved quickly to decide on a course of action.

According to Environmental Protection Agency guidelines one of three forms of correction can be implemented: enclosure, which consists of erecting a barrier between the chemical and the area of activity; encapsulation, for which the asbestos is sprayed with a hardening sealant that prevents fiber release; and removal, during which all asbestos is taken off the supporting surface.

Although the Environmental Protection Agency assigns no safe level for the presence of asbestos, the material found on Maryville College campus fell far below the Occupational Safety and Health Administration standards of two fibers per cubic centimeter.

In spite of the low levels of asbestos, officials proposed that the material be removed. On April 29, 1983 the Board of Directors voted to approve the removal plan. Administration and Board members agreed that although removal was the most expensive and extensive of the available options, it was the only one which would insure against possible health risks.

Asbestos discovered in the dorms was combined with calcium and used primarly as an adhesive and a fire retardant. The chemical was found in small enough quantity to pose no immediate health hazards. An MC spokesperson stated that had there been any danger, the dorms would have been evacuated at once.

An outcome of the asbestos removal process was the total renovation of the four dorms involved. Margaret Bell Lloyd Hall built in 1959 and Hall I, Davis, and Copeland constructed in 1966 had never undergone such thorough repair since their completions.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, October 20

7:00 - Volleyball vs. Carson-Newman, Jefferson City, TN

7:00 p.m. "Of Race and Blood" - Sutton Science Center 113.

Saturday, October 22

12:00 noon - Volleyball vs. Mars-Hill away

Football vs. Millsaps College - away

Soccer TISA quarter-finals

8:15 p.m. - Faculty Recital - Sally Schoen - FAC

9:00 p.m. Halloween kick-off - Sophomore class dance - Pearsons

Sunday, October 23

7:00 p.m. - Vespers in the CCM

Monday, October 24

Soccer - TISA semi-finals Location and time TBA

Tuesday, October 25

7:30 p.m. - MACCO - Broadway hits and classical compositions, FAC

Wednesday, October 26

9:20 a.m. - CIV "The Cosmic Drama", Dr. George Schwietzer

10:30 a.m. - Midweek Worship - Rev. John Stuhl

6:30 p.m. - Volleyball vs. King College at home

3:45 - Board of Directors and student affairs open discussion - Fayerweather 206

CAMPUS NOTES

Anyone interested in learning more about the tenure policy at Maryville College should direct his concern to Dr. Al Perkin's office. If sufficient interest is shown, Dr. Perkins will arrange a meeting.

* * *

The Organization Chart is on file in the Student Affairs Office for students who would like to see it.

Peter Vial Answers Calling

By Amy Waggoner

On December 1, 1983, our campus minister will be returning to parish ministry. Peter Vial will be the new minister at First Presbyterian Church in Fort Scott, Kansas. Fort Scott is a small city in eastern Kansas, south of Kansas City: It is also the town in which his wife was born. Ironically, Debby Vial's mother grew up as a member of First Presbyterian, and Debby was baptized there. In a sense, Peter and Debby feel as if they are finally going home.

Why does Peter want to leave MC? He stresses that he really does not want to leave but feels called to parish ministry. Although he likes his job and the people here, he is excited about the chance to do what he is best at; moreover, he wants everyone at MC to be as happy about this move as he is. We all need to understand that this move is positive, not negative, and Peter stand that this move is positive, not negative, and Peter has no regrets about his years at Maryville. "As excited as I am about returning to the parish ministry, I am going to miss Maryville College - it's a very special place to work," he explains.

Peter's last day at work will be November 9. A search committee, made up of Jane Richardson, Dean of Student Affairs, Dr. Brunger, and Susan Jennings, is now reviewing applications for the position.

Good Luck, Peter!

EDITORIALS

Communication: the exchange of thoughts, messages, etc. (American Heritage Dictionary).

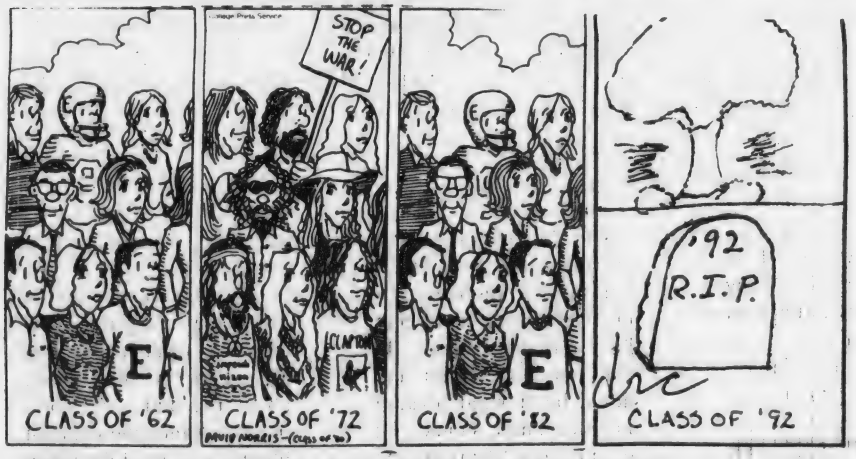
One day when I was in the shoe department of a store, I observed two sales people asks the same family if they needed help. Both times the responses were identical, "We just want to sit here if that's alright with you." A few minutes later one member of this family went up to these same salespeople and said, "Can't we get any help here?"

Responsibility: A person or thing that one is answerable for; a duty or obligation (American Heritage Dictionary).

A few days later I had the good fortune of being in this same shoe department when the mother of this family returned. "You.You.You are to blame for this! You made me buy the wrong size," the lady screamed as she violently shook her finger at the wide-eyed salesman.

Although not as ridiculously displayed, this incongruous behavior is not unique to the society outside of Maryville College. At this educational institution the act of communicating the assumption of responsibility is waning, thus creating a stagnation. Communication and responsibility depend on one another to stimulate progress.

What is replacing these crucial elements of society?



Silence: On several occasions assigned news stories were never returned. No word declining the assignments was ever received. Thus, when the deadline arrived and the stories did not, I found my self wasting a lot of time chasing the reporters around campus only to hear the same words,"Oh, I couldn't do it, and I didn't know how to get in touch with you."

Not only students substitute silence for communication but faculty members and administrators do, also. At a meeting I recently attended, after everyone sat without speaking for several minutes, the administrator who had called the meeting finally said to the student chairman, "Are you waiting for me to do or say something?" He replied that he was, and the administrator responded, "Oh, I was waiting for you to do something." This meeting fizzled until it was mercifully extinguished. Silence, which replaced communication in these examples, left the responsibilities unfulfilled and, therefore, caused production to cease.

Communication can also be crippling when, instead of offering constructive criticism, it only demeans. When responsibilities are not expected to be met, the fulfillment of these obligations is further removed.

On several occasions, when a student, faculty member, or administrator discovers that a certain event was not covered, the usual reaction is for him to degrade the paper without considering that the amount of space and the number of sincere reporters does, to a large extent, determine the contents of the paper.

The reaction of some faculty members to a story printed a couple of weeks ago also illustrates this point. Within this article, mistakes concerning a professor's title and a location were overlooked. Although I do realize that it is the editor's responsibility to filter out such errors, I was disheartened and disappointed to learn much later that a big joke was made of these mistakes and of the paper. The Highland Echo would like to improve itself and would be better able to attain this goal if students, faculty members, and administrators would air their opinions with the editor. The completion of tasks depends on the correct utilization of communication.

This was the only response the Echo received. Is this the consensus?

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell
Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas
Advisor ..... Stephen LeMay

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Letters

Dear Editor:

I think it is safe to say that there is a general agreement among the majority of MC students and teachers, etc. that we do have a beautiful campus. I , personally, enjoy and appreciate it very much.

Sunday morning I went to breakfast and then to the post office. While walking to the post office I looked around our beautiful campus and noticed that it had been randomly marked with "Spades" that had been spraypainted on various buildings' windows, etc. I was agnry, sad confused, and had a lot of questions going through my head.

I immediately thought about the "secret"group, the Spades - whom almost everyone knows about. I would like to ask why it is necessary for them to "have their fun" or "make their initiations" at the expense of our campus? Is there a justiifiable reason for vandalism - specially the spraypainting of spades - on campus? Or is my sad impression of the members of this "secret club" as being ignorant, indifferent and disrespectful towards MC's environment and people really true? I sincerely hope not!!

Someone who appreciates and respects Good Ole MC

Kim, LeMay Discuss Airliner Tragedy

By Pam Matthews

On September 1, a Soviet fighter blasted Korean Airlines Flight 007 out of the skies. The furor created by this incident has since dissipated

Because of their background, two of Maryville College's faculty members, Dr. Young-Bae Kim and Mr. Stephen LeMay, were asked to share their views with the Highland Echo.

Dr. Kim Professor of Political Science and Coordinator of International Studies, is a native of Korea. He received his Bachelor of Arts Degree at Yonsei University in Seoul and later completed his education in the United States.

"It was a tragic, morally intolerable event; however, it's only based on what we know so far," he said.

When asked about the effect it has had on South Korea's relations with the Soviet Union, he answered, "South Korea, since 1945, has not had any formal relations with the Soviet Union. During the last several years, though, the Korean government has been wanting to establish formal relations. I would like to see some form of relations established. This incident certainly set things back."

According to Dr. Kim, this occurrence has strengthened South Korea's and the United State's relations. "Since Korea is not a member of the United Nations, the U.S. spoke for the Korean government to the Soviet Union." '

"From what I have been reading in the Korean newspapers, the Koreans recognized that the plane might have strayed into Soviet air space," Dr Kim said. "What they don't understand is why the Soviet fighter pilot shot down an unarmed civilian airplane."

"Generally, Koreans feel that the U.S. did everything that they could. Popular opinion, shortly after the incident, was calling for more drastic measures," he affirmed, "but would it serve U.S. or Korean interests if we expelled all the Soviet diplomats in the U.S. or cease the arms talks?" In judging the Soviet's actions, Dr. Kim feels that we should not. "Our cultures do not really understand each other. However, that does not imply that we approved of their action. In the long run, there may be some changes for the better, for this hurt their image, The Soviets are quite sensitive about world opinion. Now they are no longer the peace keepers in the world's eye. Eventually we may be able to reach a mutual understanding on both sides," Dr. Kim concluded.

Mr. Stephen LeMay, an Instructor of Economics, was a Russian Voice Processing Specialist while in the United States Air Force for six years. His training included study of the Soviet language and culture. Because of his work in the Air Force, he is familiar with the Soviet Far East.

"I think we're dealing with a series of coincidences, misinterpretations, and errors," he said. "The coincidence was that an RC-135 was in the same general vicinity as the KAL 007. In turn, they (the Soviets) misinterpreted this, which led to their error of misidentification of the aircraft. They routinely use their civilian airplanes in gathering intelligence. Therefore, since they do it, they believe that we use our civilian airplanes for the same purpose," he further explained.

"The key error in this was the misidentification of KAL 007. It is probable that the Soviet pilot mistook it for the RC-135. Another error was that of the violation of airspace by the KAL 007, possibly caused by some erroneous information that was fed into the Inertial Navigation System computers," Mr. LeMay said.

"Despite that the Sea of Okhotsk is considered international waters, the Soviets are very sensitive to this area, especially the small passages between the Kurile islands and the area off Sakahlin island. The Soviets are paranoid about their territory. They are afraid of intrusion. This is the reason for the Soviet-bloc countries. They want to protect the Motherland," he said.

"They (the Soviets) violate our airspace frequently with their bombers flying over the Aleutain islands," Mr. LeMay said. "They also deliberately lured an unarmed plane off-course while on an intelligence gathering mission. Any country that would intentionally lure an airplane off-course would not be concerned about shooting down an airplance carrying 269 passengers," he remarked.

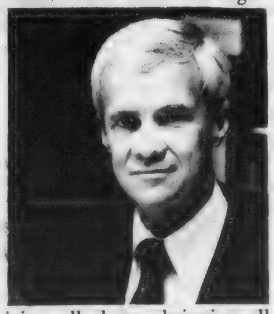
According to Mr. LeMay, the effect on U.S.-Soviet relations will probably be longterm. "It will certainly have implications with future arms talks. No one bought their spy tale. It just affirmed what we already know; they shouldn't be trusted. It also shows that we are dealing with people thatdo not want todeal clearly by the violations of SALT I and II. It has put some distance between us that had not been there in recent times."

In response to the U.S.'s retaliatory actions, he stated that the U.S. did everything that they feasibly could. "A grain embargo, for instance, would not be rational, for it would hurt our farmers. The Soviets would purchase it elsewhere."

"What they do to the pilot and others responsible for the incident depends entirely upon the political situation. The pilot might be made a hero and be given a medal. On the other hand, it did cause some difficulties, and they might make a scapegoat out of him. For propaganda reasons, they will probably make the pilot a hero and a scapegoat of someone else," he said.

"The reason behind the Soviet's silence after the shooting down of the plane," he expalined, "was to find out what happened and to develop a plausible theory. Because of so much bureaucracy, it slows everything down."

As previously mentioned by Dr. Kim, Mr. LeMay commented that the U.S. and the Soviet Union do not understand one another. "This lack of understanding reflects in our relations. We don't understand them culturally either. We only have the views of defectors and dissidents, not the views of the common Soviet citizen."



As stressed by Dr. Kim and Mr. LeMay, the shooting down of the Korean airliner was an abominable act by the Soviet Union. It also illustrated their extreme paranoia and insecurity. We can hope that we will establish some form of mutual understanding in order to prevent another tragedy of this nature from occurring in the future.

Libertarian on Hard-line Platform

By Marta Wittig

Libertarian Presidential Candidate David Bergland hosted an informal meeting in the Fine Arts Lounge on Friday, October 14.

Bergland is a hard-line Libertarian, wielding a platform which calls for legalizing all drugs, bringing all U.S. troops and weapons home from overseas, and abolishing the CIA, IRS, public schools, social service programs, and national parks.

The basic thrust of all that Bergland stands for is the removal of government as mediator and policy maker. He advocates "self ownership and the obligation to take responsibility for oneself and to respect the rights of others." He said many social services should be stopped because the government should not be involved. "Government should not be in the charity business," he said.

When asked about foreign policy, he replied with a firm "No. We should not be involved."

About his chances for the presidency Bergland said, "I'm serious about seeking the presidency, but realistic about the odds. I'm working to advance the cause of liberty, and the Libertarian party is an effective vehicle."

Art of Third Reich

By Wilma Coleman

"Of Race and Blood," is an eighty-nine minute documentary on the art and artists of the Third Reich and Adolf Hitler's plan for art as an important part of the Nazi movement. Paintings, drawings and etchings confiscated by the United States' troops at the end of World War II as well as rare photographs used to recreate the artistic climate of Nazi Germany can be seen in Sutton Science Center, room 113 on Thursday, October 20, at 7:00 p.m.

On Oct.26 at 9:20 a.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall, Dr. George Schweitzer, alumni distiguished service professor of chemistry at UT Knoxville will be presenting the discussion, "The Cosmic Drama." This is a discussion of conflict and compatability between theology and science.

WHO WILL

GLENNIS

Glennis Riedl, from Knoxville, Tennessee, is a history major. She plans to work for a while and then attend graduate school.

Kim Hatfield, a mathematics major at Maryville College, is from Knoxville, Tennessee. She plans to attend graduate school.

KIM

Laurie Winiarski "JD" comes to Maryville College from Iselin, New Jersey. She is a psychology major whose future plans include obtaining a Master's degree in Psychology.

Helen McNiell, a Maryville, Tennessee native majoring in art, looks forward to a career in advertising or editorial art.

Mary Hughes, an English major from Orlando, Florida, plans " to live it up with newly broadened horizons and might even buy a dog!"

LAURIE

HELEN

MARY

BE QUEEN?

Diploma Not Success Key

By Peggy Millsaps

"Once I get that degree," the student often thinks "my future job security is sealed."

Not necessarily. A degree does not always assure an employer that a job candidate has directly applicable skills and experience. There is, however, a way to make your resume stand out and show a prospective employer that you can do the job: an internship.

What exactly is an internship? Formally defined, an internship allows the student to apply academic learning in a non-academic setting. An anthropology major, for example, may intern for a summer in a historical preservation project. Or a junior interested in politics or law may intern one fall with the state government. Interns may or may not be paid; they may or may not earn academic credit; they may intern full-time or part time in conjunction with their studies. The possibilities are multiple.

Traci Fraser, for example, a senior political science major looking toward law school, is interning as an in-house publications editor with Appalachian National Life Insurance Company in Knoxville. Traci is responsible for two publications. She gathers, edits and writes copy, designs layout and photographs for one, and writes statistics, adds relevant articles and does layout for the other. "I have complete creative control," says Traci, "so it's a good way for me to try out new ideas for stories and layout. She adds, "It's nice to get paid for something I enjoy doing."

Other interns are Joel Chesser, a math (computer graphics) major presently at Argonne National Laboratory in Chicago and Dianne Bonning, an Interpreting major, presently at the Socil Services Center in New Orleans. Amy Nicholson, also an Interpreting major, is planning a winter internship at the Helen Keller Center in New York; Ruby Warren and Jina Radozycki, interpreting majors, are planning internships in Tampa, Florida and Ft. Worth, Texas.

There are two routes to an internship: 1) Application to an already existing program; 2) Designing an individual internship. This involves advanced planning, definition of interests, outlining of experience to be gained, identification of potential settings, advanced arrangement for academic credit, and sending a cover letter and good resume to organizations in which you are interested.

In either case, Career Planning and Placement is the crucial link between the student and a desired internship. CPP provides listings of internship options, locations, and information, as well as an internship worksheet which helps students clarify goals and outline methods for achieving them.

To help secure a desired internship, CPP offers these tips:

1) Prepare a resume and cover letter, using the CPP sample resume/cover letter. Then prepare a rough draft and get it critiqued by a CPP staff member before typing enough copies for adequate distribution.

2) Identify contacts: solicit the help of family, friends, professors, etc. in getting your name before employers; research CPP Summer Job Internship listings; utilize personal contacts and information from CPP resources and list addresses to which you want your resume sent.

3) Follow through: send supplimental information requested by all resume recipients and fill out supportive material neatly. This means time, though, and (if possible) typing.

Breaking into today's job market is not easy. A college degree is no longer a ticket to ride. An internship, secured with the help of CPP, may be just what you need to get ahead of the game.

Leaders Win Awards

The Maryville College Women's Club has awarded scholarships to three MC students for the current academic year.

Selected were Lee Bidwell, Maryville, Tenn., Adrienne Ramsey, McMinnville, Tenn., and Sarah Jane Lindsay, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. Bidwell is a senior studying sociology and political science. The daughter of Mrs. Sandra Millar of Antioch, Tenn., she now lives with her husband, Lawrence, on Stanley Street in Maryville. The presidential Scholar is a member of Pi Gamma Mu, Alpha Gamma Sigma, and Alpha Lambda Delta.

Miss Ramsey is a junior Presidential Scholar studying business administration. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey of McMinnville, BSA, Student Programming, and the All-College Council.

Miss Lindsay is a senior political science major and has been active in Student Foundation, SNEA, Phi Gamma Mu, Campus Judicial Board, and is the ACC Co-chairman. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Lindsay of Chattanooga.

The MC Women's Club Scholarships are awarded annually to deserving juniors and seniors who maintain a satisfactory academic record and have supported undergraduate activities through participation and leadership.

Blount County Honors Students

Six Maryville College students have been awarded Blount County Alumni Association Scholarships for the current academic year.

Selected were five Maryville residents: Sally Anderson, Mary Jane Burnette, Marty Green, Robin Simmons and Melanie Teffeteller. One Townsend resident was also selected: Rebecca Sanden.

Miss Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Anderson, is a physical education major. A Maryville High graduate, she is currently a senior at MC.

Miss Burnett, a Heritage High graduate, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Burnett. She is a junior at MC.

Also a junior, Miss Green, an English major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Green.

Robin Simmons is a Lady Scots Basketball player majoring in physical education and health. She is a junior at MC and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Simmons.

A music education major, Miss Teffeteller is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Teffeteller. The Heritage High graduate is presently a senior at MC.

Miss Sanden, of Townsend, is a senior history major at MC. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sanden.

The scholarships were announced by association president Frank Vigh. The $500 stipends, awarded annually to deserving Blount County students, were established in 1978. Funds for the scholarships are raised from the Maryville College Harvest Craft Fair and membership dues.

Shane's Playing Inspired

On October 22, at Maryville College, the music will span 179 years when Pianist Sallie W. Schoen presents a program of piano music composed by women.

The program, scheduled for 8:15 p.m. in the MC Fine Arts Center Music Hall, will begin with "Sicilienne' by Maria-Theresa von Paradis (1759-1824) and close with Emma Lou Diemer's "Toccata for Piano," which was published in 1979.

Other compositions on the program include "Nocturne in B-flat Major" by Maria Szymanowska, Clara Schumann's "Prelude and Fugue in G Minor," "Nine Preludes for Piano" by Nancy Van de Vate, "Set of Five" by Mary Jeanne Van Appledorn, "Five Improvisations" by Mrs. H.H. A. Beach, Germaine Tailleferre's "Pastorale" and "Air de ballet" by Cecile Chaminade.

Mrs. Schoen, associate professor of music at MC, was inspired to present this recital of music composed by women by Ellen T. Zwillich, the first woman to receive the Pulitzer Prize for a musical composition.

An accomplished performer, teacher, and acccompanist, Mrs. Schoen came to MC in 1955 from Montreat College in North Carolina. She earned her bachelor's degree in music from the Oberlin College Conservatory of Music and her master's degree from Indiana University. She has completed post-graduate work at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, and at Indiana University.

Her piano teachers have included Joseph Hungate, Walter Robert, Heinz Scholz and Menahem Pressler.

A registered accompanist, Mrs. Schoen has played for MC graduates Margaret Mann and Sarah Tompkins Beatty, both professional opera singers, and for the 1982-83 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist John Cimino, bariton.

She has also played the harpsichord in Maryville College's annual presentations of Handel's "Messiah" from 1958 to 1982.

Mrs. Schoen's recital is free and open to the public.

Sallie W. Schoen

MC Basks in the Lights of Broadway

The hit songs of Broadway and the classical compositions of the masters will highlight the annual Pops Concert of the Maryville-Alcoa College - Community Orchestra (MACCO), under the direction of David Hoffecker.

The concert, which inaugurates MACCO's 1983-84 season, is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 25, at 7:30 p.m. in Maryville College's Wilson Chapel. Tickets are $5 for adults, $4 for students and senior citizens and $3 for children under six.

The first half of the program will feature works by the masters, including Wagner's overture to "Die Meistersinger" and Beethoven's popular "Fifth Symphony."

Tonya Hart Wall, pianist, will perform Ravel's "Concerto for Piano." She is the post-collegiate winner of the 1983 Annual Concerto Competition held during the orchestra's 1982-83 season.

Ms. Wall, who currently teaches Suzuki piano lesson at the College's Preparatory School for the Arts and at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville, received her Bachelor of Music degree in piano at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro. Last year, she completed her master's degree in piano literature at UTK.

The pops Concert will continue with the music of two of Broadway's most successful composers Andrew Lloyd Webber and Richard Rogers. Webber's hit musicals include "Evita" "Cats" and "Jesus Christ Superstar." The orchestra will salute Rogers, performing songs from his Broadway hits "South Pacific", "The Sound of Music" and "Oklahoma."

The orchestra will also perform a medley of songs by John Lennon and Paul McCartney, pop music's famous song-writing team.

For information on tickets to MACCO's Pops Concert or season tickets, call the MC Office of Development at 982-6412 in Blount County or 546-6912 in Knoxville.

SEE US FOR CHECKING ACCOUNTS
AND STUDENT LOANS

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
984-1500
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

The following list is a continuation from last week's edition of the 1983 graduates attending graduate schools.

Todd Dickson, (Chemistry)	University of South Carolina, Columbia, SC, Organic Chemistry
Jeff Hayes, (Religion)	University of Chicago, Chicago,IL, History of Religions, Divinity School
Hampton Hendry, (Music)	Florida State University, Tallahassee, FL, Music
Beth Manier, (English)	University of North Carolina, Library Science
LaDonna Montgomery, (Biology)	Wake-Forest University, Ecology
Candy Nutter, (Business)	State Technical Institute Accounting/Computer Science
Jeff Pierce, (Math)	University of Tennessee Math
Wendy Wolfner, (Music)	Florida State University Music

Scots Ground Eagles

By Dan Bouch

The Fighting Scots defeated the Eagles of Baptist University of America 7-0.

The Scots' offense came out and was able to move the ball down inside the 5 yard line on runs and pass plays, but failed to score when Tony Fox had the ball jarred from his hands at the goal line. The rest of the half the Scots failed to move the ball with any consistency.

The defense for the Scots played an inspiring game in the first half and stopped the Eagles when they had to. In the second half the defense needed some big plays from Bob Aucker (two interceptions), Paul Anagnostis, Ferrell, and Lauderdale came up with key hits & tackles to stop several Baptist drives. They solidified a defense that seemed to bend but not break.

The offense came out in the second half and drove the ball down the field in an impressive 10 play drive. This drive was aided by several key receptions. One of these was a catch by Shannon O'Brien who then raced into the endzone, but an illegal block called the play back. Then several plays later Lindy Barile took a hand off from Pat Moyer into the end zone untouched.

This drive used up several minutes on the clock and enabled the Scots to win. The offense received several outstanding performances from Shannon O'Brien, Greg Hunt, David Clancy, and Pat Moyer. O'Brien had three receptions for 95 yards and Hunt had several key first down receptions. Clancy was a sparkplug out of the backfield with key catches and runs and draws. Pat Moyer also had a better game this week throwing 12-25 for 170 plus yards.

Ladies Spikelt Rich

By Brian Rigell

If you remember last week's article about the Lady Scots' Volleyball team, then you've already got a good idea about this week's. Except for a different team, and some different scores, the action in the gym last Wednesday night was just as exciting as it was when the Lady Scots hosted Carson-Newman the previous Tuesday.

The Lady Lions of Bryan College came to town Wednesday night, and they were ready to play. Unfortunately for them, the Lady Scots were not to be denied. Bryan took the first game 15-11, but Maryville stormed back to take the second one 15-2. The third game went to the Lady Lions by a score of 17-15, but the Lady Scots said "Enough" and came back to win the next two and the match with scores of 15-9 and 15-4.

The thing that was most important about this match was the fact that the team looked the best it has to far this year. The team pulled together and played as one especially afterDenise Penzkofer (one of the starting six) was removed from the game as a result of "heat exhaustion following a slight concussion" according to Sharon Wood, who is the Lady Scots' trainer. Also to be commended for an outstanding performance is Belle Ferguson, a freshman, who was pressed into action when Penzy had to leave. The Lady Scots showed that they have the potential to go very far as long as they play together.

Them team now 8-6 play away three times this week, Tuesday at King, Thursday at Carson-Newman (at 7:00 so think about making the trip, it's not that far) and Saturday at Mars Hill, N.C. The Lady Scots return for a home match against King on Wednesday the 26th. Come out and get caught up in that Lady Scots PRIDE!

Soccer Shows Potential

By Chris Porter

The Scots' soccer team went to Washington, D.C. and Winston-Salem, Virginia covering 1100 miles from Thursday through Saturday.

The frustration of the young Scots' soccer team brought them together to play a tremendous game against Catholic University-their best game yet-but in the end, they were dissappointed, 1-0. Their urban host expected an easy game out of the Scots, but the young rural visitors exhibited talents that they are capable of producing. Catholic came on strong, but the defense absorbed the mounting pressure. Goalkeeper Robbie Freeman and the fullbacks staved off wave after wave of Catholic offense. Center back Fahed Shawwa cleared numberous Catholic volleys out of harm's way. Poor marking on the Scots' part, however led to a Catholic goal with about ten minutes left in the half.

It was evident at this point that the Scots' superior conditioning dictated the rest of the game. Outstanding midfield play by Julio Pesiri, Reti Masilo and Minor Taylor created many successful counter attacks for MC, putting Catholic on their heels. Forwards Jamie Bolinger and Mack Paschall penetrated the Catholic defense at will, only to be thwarted by the ODAC's number one ranked goalie. Similarly, Masilo's tremendous shots were also denied.

Saturday's game did not go as well. Freeman sustained a thumb injury against Catholic and was casted in Washington. Fahed couldn't play due to the recurring ligament problems in his ankle. These injuries, besides removing their defensive middle, gave them virtually no bench. So,tired, and injured, they took the field at 2:00 after arriving earlier that morning at 1:00. With all this going against the Scots, Roanoke College, nationally ranked fifteenth, had no trouble scoring seven goals on the Scots.

Davy Crockett Stable, Inc.

TOWNSEND TENNESSEE

Just to remind MC students

We are open all winter.

You do not have to be an expert to ride here.

Faster rides for the experienced offered

Rides of various duration available including overnight campouts for groups and clubs.

This ad good for a 10% discount on an overnight campout of 10 people or more.

CALL FOR INFORMATION -- 448-6411

Harriers Stride Into Season

By Rick Carver

The Maryville College Fighting Scots Cross Country Club opened its season with a meet in Berea, Kentucky, on Saturday, October 15th. The field of approximately 80 runners included participants from Eastern and Northern Kentucky Universities, Lincoln Memorial University, Moorehead State, Centre College, Transylvania, MC, and the host, Berea College. The Scots, who have been in training only three weeks, put together some fine times against the stiff competition. The tough five mile course consisting of grassy fields, dirt roads, hills loops, woods, and a creek, created further difficulties for the determined runners. Sam Hill paced the Scots with a very impressive time of 29:48. Following him were professors Steve LeMay and Rick Hughes, who also turned in very respectable times. Other Scots to finish were Rick Carver and Steve Cunningham.

THANKS TO SHANNON O'BRIEN

The Fairview Pee Wee Football Team, Cheerleaders, their coaches, and parents would like to thank Shannon O'Brien for a great job as the speaker for their banquet on October 13, 1983. He is a very impressive young man. Shannon is definitely a credit to Maryville College, the athletic dept., and his parents.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 6 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, October 27, 1983

Homecoming Hops at MC

With the theme "A Highlander's Celebration," Maryville College will commemorate its 164-year-old Scottish heritage during Homecoming weekend, set for Oct. 28-29.

This year the College's alumni office is hosting a special Decade '60 reunion featuring impromptu get-togethers, and events and music of the '60s for all alumni who were on campus during the 1960's. Also planned are special activities and events both Friday night and all day Saturday for all alumni, students, and the community.

The festivities begin on Friday afternoon at 4 p.m. with the annual Homecoming Parade from campus through downtown Maryville.

Afterward, from 7:30 to 11 p.m., those interested can attend a Homecoming bonfire in the parking area beside Bartlett Hall on campus, followed by a pep rally and informal Coffee House in the Alumni Gym. Both current students and Decade '60 alumni, including alumni cheerleaders and performers, will participate

Saturday is the big day. Alumni visiting campus for the day will register from 9:30 a.m. until noon in the Wilson Chapel Colonnade.

The annual Harvest Crafts Fair will be held in the Physical Education building from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The fair is co-sponsored by the MC Women's Club and the Blounty County Alumni Association.

Special activities are planned for alumni and students during the morning, including a touch football game, in which the Alpha Sigs and Kappa Phi's vie for the "Stinkin' Shoe" award, field events and a contest to see which "laddie" has the "bonniest Knees."

Lunch will be served on the lawn between Thaw Hall and the P.E. Building from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. The cost is $2.50 per person. During lunch a band will be performing contemporary Christian music.

Kick-off for the annual Homecoming football game is at 1:30 p.m. on Honaker Field. This year the Scots will host Randolph-Macon College of Virginia, an Old Dominion Athletic Conference rival. Tickets to the game are $4 for general admission, $2 for students ages 12-18 and free for children under 12.

The College will host a barbecue supper in the Alumni Gym from 4:30 - 6:30 p.m. After the game, students, alumni, and community members are invited to remain on campus for dinner. The cost if $5.50 for adults, $2.75 for children ages 2-10 and free for children under two.

Rounding out the weekend is the annual Homecoming Dance at 9:00 p.m. Saturday. Deejay Ed Rupp, a 1972 graduate, will spin the music of both the 1960's and 1980's in the Margaret Ware Dining Room in Pearsons Hall. The cost is $2.50 per person.

For an added touch throughout the weekend, mums may be ordered from Student Programming through Friday, October 28 in Pearsons during lunch and dinner.

For more information about Homecoming, call the College at 982-6412 in Blount County or 546-6912 in Knoxville the Blount County Alumni Association

Campus Calendar

Thursday, Oct 27

6:30 p.m. - Alumni Association Executive Board Dinner Meeting - Proffitt Dining Room

Friday, Oct.28

9 a.m. - 3 p.m. Alumni Association Executive Board Meeting - Proffitt Dining Room

12 noon - Alumni Assoc. Executive Board judges class mural competition - Alumni Gym

4:00 p.m. Homecoming Parade - MC Campus through downtown Maryville.

7:30 - 11 p.m. Homecoming Bonfire, Pep Rally and Coffee House (featuring Decade '60 cheerleaders and talent) - Bartlett Hall parking lot and Alumni Gym.

8:00 Knoxville Opera - FAC

Saturday, Oct. 29

9:30 a.m. - 12 noon Alumni Registration - Wilson Chapel

9:30 - 11:30 a.m. 'Theme Mobile' Competition for Decade '60 families and Student Foundation - Fayerweather Hall 204.

10:00 a.m. Decade '60 choir and band meetings: members meet to rehearse for Homecoming Game presentation of the 'Alma Mater'. Band meets in Wilson Chapel Theatre and Choir meets in Wilson Chapel Choir Room.

10:00 a.m. - 1:30 p.m. Bookstore open - Fayerweather Hall

10-11 a.m. "Stinkin Shoe Contest" for Decade '60 with the Alpha Sigs versus the Kappa Phis (Thetas and Chi Betas will cheer from the sidelines)- practice field behind the P.E. Building.

10-11 a.m. Field events for the whole family - Soccer Field

11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m. Lunch - lawn between Thaw Hall and P.E. Bldg. $2.50 each

12 noon "Bonny Knees" Contest for Decade '60 Men wearing kilts or shorts - Lunch area

1:30 p.m. Homecoming Football Game - MC vs. Randolph-Macon

1:30 - 6:30 p.m. College Community Barbeque Banquet Alumni Gym

9:00 p.m. Homecoming Dance featuring music of the 60s with deejay Ed Rupp ('68-'72) - Pearsons Dining Room $2.50 per person

All Day (10 a.m. - 5 p.m.) MC Harvest Crafts Fair - P.E. Building

Sunday, October 30

2:00 Knoxville Opera - FAC

Horror Movies

7:00 Vespers

Monday, October 31

Phi Mu Alpha Haunted House - FAC time -TBA

Cheerleading Clinic Begins

Wednesday, November 2

10:30 - Midweek wor-

Editorials

I was watching the CBS Evening News with Dan Rather when a CBS cooresponsdent, reporting on the rising crime caused from the increased infiltration of Canadian criminals into my hometown of Hollywood, Florida, said that Hollywood was now known as "Little Quebec". First South Florida dubbed "The Little Apple", then Miami, "Little Cuba", and now Hollywood, "Little Quebec", these areas have sustained many changes, and the Hollywood of today is foreign to the hometown of my childhood.

As I pondered on how different it would be to grow up down there now, memories came back to me. Well, from that point on, the week seemed to turn into nostalgia week. The next day a friend of mine showed me his high school yearbook. Then another friend and I, upon seeing some kids play, started to talk about games we used to play. As my friends remembered earlier times, their eyes no longer focused on what was in front of them but looked far away, and unsuppressable smiles, not in reaction to a present experience but caused by something from the past, proved that they had left the here and now to revisit there and then.

Although previous incidents may influence the present, the two time periods are for the most part separated; regaining the past is not accomplished without losing some of the present. However, the past and the present do, on a few occasions, meet and intermingle with each other. One of these occassions is Homecoming. The word, "Homecoming", itself suggests a"going back." This return, however, is not only in one's mind but is a physical retracing. Although the circumstances are not identical, the environment, preserved as well as possible, and the people of one's past are present once again. Old Maryville College students are rejoined, and previous adventures retold while the MC students of years past and the students of today meet and participate in more chicanery. The manner in which the present and past here meet, allows the past to leave its dormancy while the present is not expended.

On Friday, October 28, Homecoming '83 will commence. The past and present will be granted the opportunity to fuse and create something original - new memories.

CAMPUS NOTES

The election for the Homecoming Queen only has been rescheduled due to a problem with the balloting. The rescheduled election will be held this Thursday, October 27 during break in Fayerweather, and during lunch and dinner in Pearsons.

The underclass representatives are Freshman - Sherrie Farmer, Sophomore - Amy Falston, and Junior - Amy Blance.

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. The Valley of the Horses, by Jean M. Auel. (Bantam, $3.95.) Sequel to The Clan of the Cave Bear.
2. Truly Tasteless Jokes, Book I, by Blanche Knott. (Ballantine, $2.25.) Beyond off-colored jokes.
3. Master of the Game, by Sidney Sheldon. (Warner, $3.95.) The secret behind a woman business tycoon's rise to power.
4. The Color Purple, by Alice Walker. (Washington Square Press, $3.95.) Winner of the 1983 American Book Award.
5. Different Seasons, by Stephen King. (NAL, $3.95.) Four novellas that transcend the horror genre.
6. Friday, by Robert A. Heinlein. (Del-Rey/Ballantine, $3.95.) Latest science fiction by the master.
7. Bloom County — Loose Tales, by Berke Breathed. (Little, Brown, $5.95.) Highlights from the author's cartoon strip.
8. Spellbinder, by Harold Robbins. (Pocket, $3.95.) An explosive look at the multi-million dollar business of religion.
9. Return of The Jedi, by James Kahn. (Ballantine, $2.95.) Companion to the hit movie.
10. Lace, by Shirley Conran. (Pocket, $3.95.) A jet-set journey through the lives of four women who share a guilty secret.

New & Recommended

Miss Manners Guide to Excruciatingly Correct Behavior, by Judith Martin. (Warner, $10.95.) Observations about American manners and mores.

A Quiver Full of Arrows, by Jeffrey Archer. (Pocket, $2.95.) 11 tales of passion and intrigue, fate and love.

Life, the Universe and Everything, by Douglas Adams. (Pocket, $3.50.) The cosmic conclusion to the Hitchhiker's Trilogy.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS-NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell
Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas
Advisor ..... Stephen LeMay

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Letters

Dear Editor:

Several students feel that the following prayer, written by Charlie Parsons for the Midweek Worship on October 26, should, because of its magnitude, be printed in the paper.

Our gracious Father - guardian of life, maker of miracles - we ask you today for a miracle. We do not expect that starvation will instantly relinquish its hold on earth. Much of the human community faces a pitiful reality far beyond the desire for a spectacular remedy.

Why do people starve? Ask the sociologist, ask the economist, ask the demographer, ask the biologist -- yes, even ask the weather man. They will all have the answers. Hunger is an effect for which there are many causes, but behind the causes --- behind all the analysis --- there are human beings.

Why do people starve? Why do well fed people always ask that question? Yes, we want to help, we want to be part of the solution. Questions need to be asked - solutions needs to be found. God, it is ironic or perhaps just that your well fed children are still hungry. We hunger to change a reality in which we have no direct experience. Somehow we cannot allow starvation to continue.

Father, the miracle we ask of you is one of sustenance. Continue to create in us the spiritual hunger to change the reality of starvation - sustain our committment. Yours is not a hunger of weakness but a hunger of strength. Create in us an indivisible bond of human kinship to those who are in need.

We remember Christ who fed a multitude given but a few loaves of bread. Above all Christ's food is a spiritual food. Help us to realize that we too possess an unfathomable resource to nourish others. Let us never ignore out store of nourishment. Give us the grace to accept your truth: As brothers and sisters in Christ the problem of hunder is not divided by two seperate realities. The responsibility of fighting hunger belongs to all of us.

Father, finally we ask that you provide us with a call to action. We are that part of the body of Christ which can fight starvation with political action. Give us the strength to use our blessing of political freesom. A limp inanimate doll. Starvation is the most literal dehumanizer. The body starts to digest itself, the mind can only think of food, the eyes become glassy and immobile - complete apthy sets in. Death is a matter of complete helplessness father than a loss of an medical battle.

I have never experienced starvation. I have experienced a nutrition book and a child's doll. I pray God that I will not forget about starvation.

Something Lurks in the Woods

By Marta Wittig

All Hallow's Eve approaches - and all those of a sensible mind hie towards gatherings and bonfires, people and light.

Ah - but not so for a derelict few: those who would run rampant in the house of the dead, among plots in the field under the crimson moon.

Here goes one of a foolish sort who, being very short on cash, ventures a bet with a garrulous friend - five dollars, small fee for an evening's threat. Shall we call him hero? Hero? Herman. Now let the true tale begin.

Herman has come to his classes end, and with no thought for life or limb, wends his way to the office of student affairs to seek out Dean Levethian. He did not find the Dean, but spoke to the Dean's faithful friend, Alfalfa Bane, whom we all know and love, about the dangers of the college forest at night.

Bane mentioned, for jest he thought, that he should not venture to the woods, but remain in the hall. Tonight is halloween and there would be goblins and witches about. Ha-ha.

He thanked her graciously, and with no further thought, started his paper for appliance thought, a core requirement for home economics majors.

Time passes, the sun goes down, the crown of the clock is being appraoched by its uneven hands, and Herman is sucking down an ice cold lemonade as his chaser with skim milk as his bracer.

Oh Herman - turn back, before it's too late! You don't need the money, and it's way past your bed-time! Coach J.Doll will be irrate!

Foregoing all qualms, Herman heads for the hills and seven buckets of thrills.

As Herman creeps among tombstones that buckle and groan, he bows to long ago residents and their afterglows. He hears noise in the distance and sees a smattering of lights deep in the college woods - and (fool) he enters the forest on this of all nights!

Approaching the theatre, he hears a voice (so familiar), and stands behind a tree at the top of the hill. Who is it?, he thought. Dean Levethian! But she was ill today! Gee, is this a Board of Directors meeting or something? There's, Dr. Bird, Dr. Beak, and Dr. Bear! I wonder what they are doing here? And, Dr. Tailor, Dr. Gumby, Dr. Lunger, and Dr. Summoner! Maybe it's a faculty meeting. Or a potluck supper - that's an awfully large pot on the fire down there! I wonder if Dr. Tailor would mind if I asked him about my appliance though paper? I'll just sneak up there and -

"Spy! Sacrifice! Trespasser in the Coven! Burn him! Cook him! in the witch's oven!"

They grabbed Herman by his arms and legs and brought him to the great pentacle of diadems where Dean Levethian was presiding.

"Help!" screamed Herman, "Dr. Panderson! Help me! What's going on!"

Then, a hush fell over the arena as a bearded man, who was wearing a black cape with the inscription - "Dobbs - You Hook 'Em, We Cook 'Em," approached.

I'm sure the reader cannot imagine Herman's anguish and is quite aghast. I can hardly proceed.

Well.

Herman flitted in and out of consciousness. He vaguely saw Dr. Tailor stirring the pot and pouring in all that Alfalfa Bane gave him: hopping frogs, squeaking mice, and wriggling cockroaches. All manner of ghastly things were added to the brew.

Soon after this he saw Dr. Panderson weave his hands over the spot. He's saying grace, Herman thought, maybe all is not lost.

Oh Herman! You innocent fool! Run before it is too late!

After the blessing, Dr. Panderson scooped a bowlful of stew out of the kettle and passed it around. Each sipper blessed the brew to heaven, earth, and themselves and passed it on. Finally the bowl came before Herman's tighly shut lips. "Embibe, Embibe!" was the cry.

"Wait!" shouted the Dobb's man. "Has he a card?" The crowd was subdued. Herman was searched, but no card was produced. "He is banned," said the Dobb's man.

"Banned! Banned!" the shout began. Dr. Panderson then stepped into the penacle of diadems and chanted:

"Herman has been and Herman has seen.

And all this is to me as spleen.

For he has no card,

So he is barred.

His memory will seive and have No Memory of tonight or of his plight,

Say Heaven, Earth and I."

The crowd shouted "Fire!", and threw Herman in the stream where he awoke the next morning with no proof of his journey.

Reader, beware of All Hallow's Eve, for if you venture out there is much danger about, you may not return alive.

Happy Halloween. . .

College Preserves History

By Wilma Coleman

Have you ever wondered why good ole MC looks the way it does? In answer to this question, Dr. Sarah McNiell will present an illustrated lecture on the architecture of Maryville College, Wednesday, November 2, at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

A graduate of Maryville College, history major Sarah McNiell received a doctorate in American History from the University of Tennessee. Her studies focused on late 19th century social and cultural history. Earlier in her career, Dr. McNiell taught history at Maryville College. She now works for the Office of Development, coordinating community services and non-credit programs.

Dr. McNiell will briefly present the history and discuss the architectual styles of the building on campus. Dr. McNiell said, "We walk past these buildings every day, never really being aware of them."

While submitting nominations to the National Registry of Historic Places for some MC buildings, Dr. McNiell first became interested in the architectual background of the college. Nine buildings including Willard House (1891) are now listed in the Registry. The Tennessee Historical Commission provided a $25,000 grant for the restoration of Willard House, which the Alumni matched. The $50,000 will be used on the exterior of Willard House, which will help prevent further interior damage. A Knoxville architectual firm, McCarty, Bullock and Holsaple Inc., noted for its restoration work, has recently been employed to make plans for the restoration process. Work will begin on the exterior on Jan. 1, 1984 and will be completed by Sept. 30, 1984. No decison has been made as to the function of the restored house, but that will be decided before interior work is begun. Any suggestions for the future use of Willard House should be directed to President Anderson.

Ministry Reborn

By Teresa Hurst

On October 13th, Maryville College's Ministerial Association held its first meeting in over twenty years. The Ministerial Association was founded in 1901. The purpose of this association is for its members to assist in bettering Sunday school classes and churches in the surrounding area. This association also strives to produce interdenominational understanding develop contemporary Christian concepts, and increase awareness of the needs in the mission field.

The president of the Ministerial Association is Mitchell Van Metre, with Mark Street as vice-president, and Ed Stueckle as secretary. The association is sponsored by Dr. David Yu and Reverend Peter Vial. Meetings are to be held each week at which topics associated with the Christian ministry and one's own spiritual, moral, and social well-being will be discussed. Membership is open to students, faculty, and staff who are currently involved in pursuing church related vocations.

SEE US FOR CHECKING ACCOUNTS
AND STUDENT LOANS

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
984-1500
MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Majors Rule Over Scots

By Dan Bouch

Saturday afternoon the Scots traveled to Millsaps College in Jackson, Mississippi to play the tenth ranked team in division III. The Majors have one of the finest teams with other rankings of national prominence.

The Scots opened the game slowly by moving the ball against one of the toughest defenses in the south. They were able to move the ball all day but were stopped by big plays and interceptions. Several of these interceptions led to Millsaps scores.

The defense, too, created its problems by giving up the big play in key situations. The defense did, however, play some excellent ball and stopped Millsaps several times. The defense received key performances from several players. Bob Aucker, Paul Anagnostis, Marty Carpenter, and Jeff Sims came up with big tackles and plays for the Scots.

The offense which sputtered at times received some fine plays from Pat Foster, Shannon O'Brien, Jeff Silver, and Robert Echols. All of these players came up with key catches for some bright moments for the Scots.

This week the Scots are at home for their final home game. The Scots will play Randolph-Macon for Homecoming.

The Echo's roving reporter caught two students (l-r) Carol Cooper and Mary Hughes, in the act of hijacking the Scots' bus, bound for Jackson, Mississippi.

Athlete Spreads Word Overseas

By Peggy Millsaps

This past summer, Pat Moyer, a junior from Hialeah, Florida, spent seven weeks in Europe as part of the Athletes in Action baseball team.

Athletes in Action is affiliated with the Campus Crusade for Christ and seeks "to promote good will and the Christian lifestyle through sports," Pat said.

Twenty-five members were chosen from across the United States. They toured West Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Finland, Norway, and London playing games and holding clinics to teach baseball in parts where is it unknown. The team emerged with a 28-0 record, but Pat emphasized that fellowship and promotion of the Gospel was more important than winning games.

Pat especially enjoyed Sweden, a country he called "the ideal place. There, no one is bothered with wars or extending their boundries. The people are nice and the economy is good."

Other countries were different: "Some places in Europe have it rougher than we do - lack of money and poverty are problems, and alcoholism and drug abuse are rampant. Seeing some of these places made me proud of being an American."

Also memorable for Pat are friendships he made among members of the team. "We really became close in a few weeks and still correspond," he said.

Pat "definitely" plans to return to Europe with Athletes in Action. He called the trip "one of the most life changing experiences I've ever had."

Best Foot Forward

By Chris Porter

The MC soccer team played a series of games sanctioned by the Tennessee Intercollegiate Soccer Association last week, but due to circumstances, was eliminated from the playoff competition by Tusculum College. The first game, a TISA regular season game, found the Scots trailing 1-0 (from yet another penalty kick) and facing a five-man prevent-type defense. The Scots failed to score and lost the game, thus getting last seed in the quarter finals and facing King, again away.

The second game against King was a similar story, but this time the Scots came out 1-0 winners. The game remained scoreless through ninty minutes of regular play and twenty minutes of overtime, but the stats show domination of King by the Scots: at twenty-five MC shots to King's five; eight corner kicks to two; and nine goalie saves to eighteen. The only score of the game came four minutes into sudden death via a penalty kick by Captain Retabile Masilo, thus ending the game and propelling the Scots into the semi-finals.

The Scots faced Tusculum at their home field Monday, but due to academic concerns, and injuries, half of the Scots' starting team couldn't make the game. Tusculum had beaten the Scots 2-0 earlier in the season, but with only ten men on the field, the Scots were easy prey for the Tusculum offense, giving up eight goals while being unable to score. The Scots face two ODAC games in Virginia this week and will be looking for the first ODAC victory for the Scots' soccer program.

Ladies Continue Fight

By Brian Rigell

If you've ever been on an elevator when it dropped suddenly, then you've got a pretty good idea what the Lady Scots' Volleyball team felt like this last week. In other words, the bottom dropped out, and the Ladies were able to salvage only one match in four tries.

Tuesday, the team travelled to Bristol to take on King and Concord. The first match was against Concord, and although both games were close, the Lady Scots couldn't quite pull them out, and as a result, Concord won. King was next, and the Lady Scots handed their hosts another loss, winning in two straight.

On Thursday, the team travelled to Carson-Newman and engaged in a match that went to Carson-Newman in three straight games. Although the majority of games in which the Lady Scots participate are refereed without much complaint, the one against Carson-Newman was not one. Some calls were borderline, others were crucial, while some were missed altogether, and the Lady Scots wound up on the wrong side of most of these calls.

The team travelled to Mars Hill on Saturday, and the only nice thing about that trip was the lunch they ate courtesy of Leah Gross and family. Thanks, Leah!

The Lady Scots lost in three straight to Mars Hill in a contest in which they were out-muscled. Mars Hill had two girls who would bring rain every time they went up to spike, and the Lady Scots were just overwhelmed by their height. The team also had trouble with the basic fundamentals which included serves, passes, and sets.

Harriers Outlegged

By Rick Carver

The cross country club traveled to Dayton, Tennessee on Friday, October 21st for a dual meet with Bryan College. The Scots, competing in their second meet of the young season, turned in some excellent times and high finishes. However, the improvements were overshadowed by a veteran group of runners from Bryan, who used their experience to defeat the Scots at the grueling and hilly 4.4. mile course.

Sam Hill, placing second overall, again led Maryville College with a time of 26:13. Others turning in noteworthy times were Rick Hughes (fifth overall), Stephen Lemay (sixth overall), and Rick Carver. Van Conners, a last minute substitution for the injured Steve Cunningham, fell victim to the treacherous inclines and rocky terrain and was forced to withdraw due to an injury sustained from a fall.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 7 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, November 3, 1983

Beirut, Grenada Crises Generate Concern

By Marta Wittig

Two crises of undefinable magnitude have recently been thrust upon the American people: In Lebanon two terrorist bombings destroyed troops of the United States and French peace-keeping forces; Grenada, a British protectorate, was invaded by U.S. troops and forces from six Caribbean nations.

Propaganda thrives in the face of America's disturbance, seeking to placate horrified citizens and to eliminate their protest. And yet, the question "Why?" forces itself into recognition.

Dr. Boldon, associate Professor of Sociology and Chairman of the Social Science Division, lived in the Middle East for eight years and has studied it extensively. In answer to the Lebanon "why," he cites foreign policy or rather the lack of foreign policy as the trouble. "Reagan does not appear to have a policy in the Middle East. He has not pushed a peace plan; he has left out Syrians in the present situation; he has not paid attention to Palestinian rights." He adds, "It is a difficult situation."

The problem in Lebanon, Dr. Boldon said, is the large number of different groups striving for power, principally the Maronite Christians, the Druze, and the Shi'ites, and the Syrians.

Initially the Marines were sent to monitor the withdrawal of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) and provide stability. Their task became a manifestation of the administration's preoccupation to get Israeli and Syrian troops out of Lebanon. In these efforts, they neglected the task of building up Lebanon's internal stability.

Dr. Boldon's sights are set on the negotiations in Geneva with the hope that the "United States will make it clear to include Israel and Syria" in the plans for peace.

Grenada presents a very different answer to "why?"

Reports available to the public from the President sum it up as an evacuation of Americans from that island due to a revoluation. Discovered on the Island was a military building of Cuban and Russian weapons and an extensive air strip. Due to an American reporter ban, not much else is known.

Pentagon sources, however, said that this military operation was the largest since the Vietnam War and the first since the 1965 invasion of the Dominican Republic. It baffles the mind to realize, as Dr. Boldon said, that "we were evacuated from Iran through the State Department after the revolution. I'm sorry to see the evacuation of Americans as an excuse to do something else."

What else? Dr. Walker, Professor and Chairman of History, feels she cannot make a decision on the impact of the Grenada coup until there is more information. She adds, "There is no indication of negotiations with the regime. It makes me very uncomfortable when the United States uses its army for political intervention."

The 1983 Homecoming Court and their escorts. Please see pages 4 and 5 for pictures of a Highlander's Celebration.

MC Achieves Budget Goal

Maryville College has for the fifth consecutive fiscal year operated with a balanced budget, the MC Board of Directors learned during its semi-annual fall meeting held on campus this past Friday.

MC President Wayne Anderson reported to board members gathered in the College's restored Center for Campus Ministry that last year's balanced budget of $5,581,000 is one in a continuing series since he assumed the presidency in 1977.

"Balancing the budget is a feat not easily achieved by many colleges and universities with today's troubled economy. We heartily commend President Anderson and the College's consistent success in doing so in light of the overriding financial adversity of our times," Edwin Best, chairman of the directors, said in commenting on the report.

Dr. Anderson attributed the College's balanced budget to a widespread sense of fiscal responsibility among faculty and staff and to strong budget control among individual departmental budget managers.

He also cited significant energy savings from the new wood-burning heating system and substantial private gifts and grants as other contributors to the balanced budget.

The College saved $153,000 in energy costs last year and received $1,656,870.77 from 2,721 contributors in this past year's annual fund drive, Dr. Anderson reported. This represents another substantial increase in the number of donors, he noted.

See Budget, pg. 7

Campus Calendar

Thursday, November 3
7:00 – Student Recital

Friday, November 4
8:15 – Playhouse "The Real Inspector Hound" – Wilson Chapel

Saturday, November 5
1:30 – Football vs. Emory & Henry – away

8:15 – Playhouse

Sunday, November 6
3:00-5:00 – Knoxville's 200 East artists' reception – FAC

7:00 – Vespers

Tuesday, November 8
3:00 – Soccor vs. Tennessee Tech – home

8:15 – Choir Concert – Wilson Chapel

Wednesday, November 9
9:20 – CIV – "Sociobiology: The Human Animal" – FAC Lounge

10:30 – Midweek Worship – Black Student Association – CCM

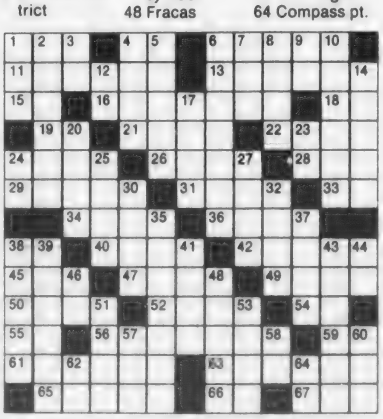
2:45 – Playhouse

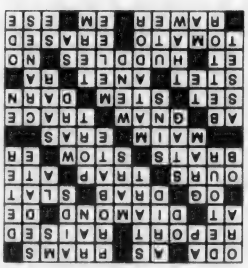
Editorials

The other day when things were getting hairy and the tears were about to blur my vision, which would have only made things worse since I was driving at the time and was already suffering from impaired vision because I had torn one of my contacts that morning, I thought over the events of that day and decided I didn't know whether to cry, as originally planned, or to laugh hysterically because the "tragedies" were becoming so humerous that the whole day seemed ridiculous.

Well, as I was weighing the pros and cons of each physical release for my emotions, I began to think how instead of there being two reactions for one situation, the same physical response, such as crying is often emitted in constrasting situations. Some cry when they are sad, some when they are happy, and some on both occassions. I have wondered if an alien intelligence came to earth to gain an understanding of the human race, and a human being took the visitor to a place where he could observe all these crying people, he may be more baffled than before, think the human race was crazy, cup his hands over his ears and run away. Or, because of the obscurity of the situation before him all these people weeping at the same time, his first human emotion may force its way out in the contradictory form of laughter. While people, you may say, have a right to laugh with the human being whose tears are out of gladness, thus sharing in his happiness, only an insensitive boob would laugh at someone's misfortune. I will on this point have to disagree because, at one time, I was in an auditorium with five-hundred other students, all of whom were viewing a horrble thing and all of whom were laughing. The class was watching a frontal labotomy. For the medical profession to consider cutting into a man's brain, when such an operation may not even improve the condition of the person but may leave him in a more pitiful state, struck me as barbaric.

As the operation progressed, it became more and more sickening. As I looked around the auditorium and thought how awful it was for them to be laughing, I realized that I, too, was laughing. I was taken aback by myself. I stopped laughing and began to really listen to my classmates. The laughter -nervous , fearful, strained, uncontrolled-buffeted my ears in loud, sharp bursts. I then realized that if I did not laugh, I would cry. When the movie turned to the topics of manic-depressives, and schitzophrenics a wave of relief flowed through the auditorium. Having experienced, intensely, the irony of emitting a reaction in opposition to the emotion produced by the situation was confusing yet enlightening at the same time.





CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Harem room
4 — a rule
6 British baby buggies
11 Book review
13 Lifted
15 Near
16 Precious stone
18 Robert — Niro
19 King of Bashan
21 Colorless
22 Narrow board
24 Possessive pronoun
26 Snare
28 Devoured
29 Unruly children
31 Pack away
33 Teutonic deity
34 Cripple
36 Time periods
38 Hebrew month
40 Eat away
42 Delineate
45 Deposit
47 Stalk
49 Mend with cotton
50 Let it stand
52 Dillseed
54 Sun god
55 Visitor from space, for short
56 Gridiron meetings
59 Negative
61 Salad ingredient
63 Wiped out
65 Less cooked
66 Printer's measure
67 Ethnic ending

DOWN
1 Anglo-Saxon money
2 Temporary route
3 News org.
4 Dry
5 Begin
6 Kind of court
7 Hurried
8 Helps
9 Ed.'s concern
10 Staid
12 GI green
14 Hinder
17 Planet
20 Small weight
23 Note of scale
24 Siberian river
25 Antlered animal
27 Harbor
30 Misdeeds
32 Hospital section
35 Bullfighter
37 German district
38 Item of property
39 Wagerer
41 Travel
43 Long-legged birds
44 See 66 Across
46 Tellurium symbol
48 Fracas
51 Unfreeze
53 Fixed period of time
57 Southwestern Indian
58 Pin-up appeal, for short
60 Poem
62 RI's neighbor
64 Compass pt.

Puzzle Answer

CIV Update

"Sociobiology: The Human Animal." is a 57 minute color presentation which explores the biological determinants of behavior and the surrounding controversy. This CIV program will be presented on Wednesday, November 9 at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Lounge. Are morality and justice acquired, or are they rooted in the genetic code? Attend the CIV and decide.

CAMPUS NOTES

Attention M.C. Students & Staff:

Open House at Blount County Dismas House on November 5th from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All interested College folks welcome. Let's get to know each other. For more information call 983-9790.

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell
Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas
Advisor ..... Stephen LeMay

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Crawford Reserves Time For U.S. Service

By Peggy Millsaps

Duncan Crawford, general practitioner of law in Maryville and fall instructor of Business Law at Maryville College, spent two weeks in Istanbul as part of the United States' Naval Reserve. As Commander of a Naval Control of Shipping Unit, one of eleven units at the Knoxville Naval Reserve Center, Mr. Crawford is required to spend two weeks annually on active duty.

Mr. Crawford's unit manned five of the thirteen ports for merchant shipping in the Mediterranean. The Mediterranean was included in the exercise, he said, "because the Middle East is a powder keg, an area where preparedness is essential."

Operating from the American Consulate, the unit controlled, routed, and reported the movements of both real and make believe ships. Because much of the world's commerce is transacted by shipping, merchant ships, particularly for a manufacturing country such as the U.S., are a vital interest to be protected.

Another part of the exercise involved preparation of a port report containing information on shipping agents, port facilities and harbor maps in advance of an actual war situation.

Because of Istanbul's "sensitivity to military presence" the unit was required not to wear uniforms or to use military titles.

Although he has not "confirmed it with an almanac," Mr. Crawford was told that Istanbul is the third largest city in Europe with a population of six million. The Soviet Union's only access to the Mediterranean Sea is through Istanbul via the Bosphorus.

Mr. Crawford, who had lived in Italy for three years after graduating from college, said he "expected much the same thing" of Istanbul, but found instead that "the Turks are not Arabs or Southern Europeans; they are just. . . the Turks, proud and independent."

He was quick to point out that even though Istanbul faced anarchy three years ago and is now under martial law, he "felt no oppression, no political unrest or anti-American hostility."

Although "as an American" he "did not inquire into Turkish politics," he found "that the Turks value democracy and are willing to pay the price for it." They are willing members of NATO, prefer not to be thought of as a U.S. "client state," and wish to avoid the Middle East conflict by avoiding alignment with the countries presently involved in Middle Eastern conflicts.

Turkey is a relatively poor country, Mr. Crawford said, with low incomes but little hunger, as they are one of the few countries in the world able to sustain themselves. They uphold the notion of working for a living and appear content with the stability under martial law.

Mr. Crawford says he developed "a great respect for the Turkish people," and found the food, especially, a pleasant feature of his trip. If the Navy calls him again, he is "ready to go back!"

Echo Poll

Should We Be Involved?

The Highland Echo conducted an opinion poll regarding the recent events in Beirut and Grenada. The question inquired whether the United States should be involved in Grenada and/or Beirut and asked for comments.

Of the 67 people who answered the poll, 28, or 42% were women. 11(39%) of these answered affirmatively to U.S. involvement in both Beirut and Grenada, while 15(53%) felt the U.S. should not be involved in either situaion. One woman agreed with U.S. participation in Beirut but not with that in Grenada. Another woman reversed these opinions.

38 (57%) , men answered the poll. 22(58%) replied that the U.S. should participate in both areas, while negative votes to both military actions numbered 15 (39%).

Overall 33, or 49% agreed with U.S. involvement in both areas. 20, or 45%, disagreed with both situations. 3, or 4% believed the U.S. should be involved in Beirut but not in Granada. 1, or 1% felt the U.S. should be in Granada but not in Beirut.

COMMENTS

In Beirut, yes. Although our position there is volatile, we were invited by the government in power and we are part of a multi-national force.

In Grenada, no. Just because a government doesn't espouse the views of this country, we don't have the right to military force our beliefs upon it.

The U.S. has responsibilities around the world. We are not an insular power. We must try and preserve and promote democracy around the world. There was a need in Lebanon to help create some stability. We also need to help democracy bear fruit in Grenada. I know things are not going as well as we would like, but the U.S. is not an aggressive power if one honestly looks at our history.

They are not there keeping peace. They are there getting killed. Therefore nothing is getting accomplished. Bring them home.

I think at this point any military intervention by the U.S. could be a sure cause for war to break out - too many countries may become involved.

The U.S.'s imperialistic approach in the world politic is dangerous.

Leaving aside the questions of international law, who first asked whom about invading, and why the press was barred, it is clear that the Reagan Administration has once again proven itself to be an unstable member of the international community. If this administration were an individual it might be labeled paranoid, since it sees all activities as THEY (Soviets, Cubans, Commies in general) are out to get ME (U.S., western culture, democracy). This warped, simplistic thinking leads to aberrant behavior, such as invading Grenada or blowing up (through intermediaries) Nicaraguan oil reserves. These actions are aberrant because they will not solve the problem (real or imagined) and they produce consequences which evoke similar, inappropriate behaviors.

We American citizens are partially to blame for this state of affairs. We have permitted ourselves to believe that military activities are solutions to problems. Because of this delusion, we have allowed our political and social institutions to play the whore to the military-industrial complex. So it is not only the Reagan Administration which is sick; it is all of us. The sickness is not simply ideological paranoia; it is militarization.

We should mourn the dead in Grenada, in Lebanon, in Nicaragua, in El Salvador, in Afghanistan, in Iran and Iraq. . . We should mourn for ourselves, since if we continue to use militarization as our mode of thinking, "there'll be nobody left behind to grieve" (Tom Lehre).

Dr. James D. Pickens
Assistant Professor of Psychology

I don't want another Vietnam - the U.S. should mind it's own business and stay out.

We should be there to protect our interests, our people, and prevent communism.

At the risk of appearing a heretic, I view both these actions as provocative and extremely difficult to justify in the arena of world opinion. Whatever credibility we may have enjoyed has been shaken to its foundations, I fear. Both actions strike me as politically inspired- an assurance by Mr. Reagan to the ultra-conservative sector from which he draws his support.

It is perhaps unfair to suggest that everyone applauding these moves is an ultra-conservative. But the truth is that in Lebanon these is a perception that American presence in Israel in surrogate. And we very well knew this. A UN force would have been much better received; the machinery was already in place.

As for the macho display of force in Grenada, the U.S. can hardly send in troops every time a Latin-American government not in ideological accord with the reactionary administration in Washington comes to ascendancy - or can we? The censorship program that controlled press access to the scene was unconscionable. Mr. Weinberger, who theoretically represents a civilian curb on the military (the Constitution prescribes it) remarked that these are matters for the military to decide and he would not think of questioning their authority. He has apparently abdicated any responsible function he exercises as curb.

In that regard, it has been said that a burgeoning military will soon find work for its hands (or arms) to do. Unless we take action as a people to halt the insane direction we are taking, we may soon put to the test the recent theory of Carl Sagan, et al, regarding what a nuclear war can mean to us all.

Dr. Russell D. Parker
Professor of History

A

"Yesterday my friends finally made me take the crown off- it's not like this means anything to me!

This was such a special weekend - it was great to turn our clocks back Saturday to enjoy one more hour. I'm quite honored and flattered. Do you have any extra copies of the Echo? This must be my lucky year.

GHLANDER'S

CELEBRATION

Coffee House Perks

By Teresa Hurst

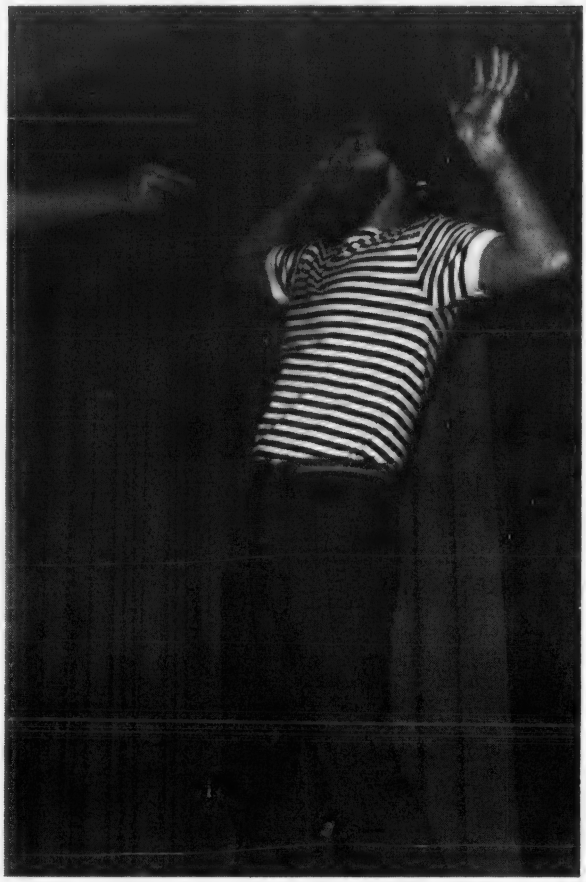
Maryville College held its first Coffee House of the 1983-84 school year on October 28 following the traditional Homecoming bonfire and pep rally. The alumni gym was overflowing with students, parents, and alumni. The energetic spirit of Maryville College filled the gym as some of Maryville College's finest performed.

Tyrone and Company work on the "Chain-Gang" during the Homecoming Coffee House held Friday Night.

Tommy Brown served as master of ceremonies. Tommy was assisted by co-hosts Wilma Coleman and Leslie Hay. The three expressed the spirit of the sixties with their "hip" attire. Diane McDaniels sparked the evening by singing "Out Here On My Own," the theme from the television series Fame. Trent Gilmore then did a solo of "Jesus Is Love." Next on the agenda was the group stripes, which was led by Kevin Robinson. They sang "Emmanuel."

An alumni group, the Salt and Peppers, then presented a series of songs. They sang "The Man Who Never Returned," "A Hundred Miles," "If I had a Hammer," and "I'm Back in the Saddle Again."

A dance routine was performed by Lisa Vandivort and John Wright to Lionel Richey's "All Night Long." A trio consisting of Dana Paul, Richard Bascaglia and Brian McFarland then sang two songs entitled "Where I Live" and "Julia."



A series of heart-warming sketches were presented by a group of alumni, members of the faculty, past and present, were honored with these sketches.

The song "In the Heart of the Night" was performed by Angela Kirby. Tyrone and Company then presented an unexpected treat by performing the popular sixties song "Chain-Gang." The group then danced for the audience.

Another alumni group, dubbed "The Blue Shades" performed a series of songs. The Blue Shades were "the first cool thing at Maryville College." The audience certainly thought so. They presented "Johnny Be Good," "I'll Never Dance with Another," "Long, Tall Texan," and, as an encore, "Dream."

John Wright and Sonya Gilmore sang "He's So Wonderful." Jina Radozycki then signed to the Song "I Would Give Anything." Brian McFarland presented a song he wrote entitled "Claudius," which was about a wounded eagle he met while in Alaska last summer. Jina signed in accompaniment.

The audience was engrossed by the outstanding performances of both students and alumni. The Homecoming Coffee House was a tremendous success.

While attending a play, Tommy Brown (Moon) is startled to find himself involved in the action.

Comedy Hounds Maryville

By Pam Matthews

Embarking on its 1983-84 season, the Maryville College Playhouse will open with the hilarious "whodunnit" comedy The Feal Inspector Hound by Tom Stoppard. Director Don Thomas selected the play for its value as an ensemble piece for actors. "It's also an excellent play for beginning actors," he said. Others on the Directoral Staff are Tillman Crane - Technical Director, Jill Lucke and Pamela Nelson - Costume Designers, and Ron Skyburg - Lighting Designer.

Jim Kidder (the Inspector Hound) begins his analysis of the dead body and possible murderer.

Playing the title role of the peerlessly clever Inspector Hound is Jim Kidder. Eleanor Woodfin is cast as Mrs. Drudge, the housekeeper of Muldoon Manor, who "pops in on her bicycle when the weather allows." The quite suspicious Simon, as portrayed by Ed Welch, finds himself caught between the affections of Felicity (Laura McClendon) and Cynthia (Angela Kirby) while Trevor Nelson as Mangus takes great pleasure in knocking people down with his wheelchair. Tommy Brown and Tom Scott complete the cast as the apparently bored critics Moon and Birdfoot, who unwittingly become involved in the play near the end.

Generally satirizing mysteries and critics in general the play is filled with mysterious characters, unidentified bodies, and hidden identities, which are accompanied by an ending with an unexpected twist. When asked what he enjoyed about the play, Mr. Thomas replied, "I particularly like the way it satirizes mysteries and critics. Critics need all the satirization they can get," he amusingly remarked, "I also like it because it blends all forms of

See Hound, pg. 7

Tune-In Students' Program

By Amy Waggoner

"The Student Programming Committee is sponsoring . . . " How many times have you heard this preface to an announcement in the dining hall? How many times have you seen it on a poster? But have you ever wondered who makes up the Student Programming Committee and exactly what it does?

The Committee is just what its name implies - a group of students who try to plan campus-wide social events. It is under the Office of Student Affairs, with Sharon Crane as its director and Jim Stettner and Gloria Anaple as student co-chairmen. The committee itself has ACC appointees and student volunteers serving on it.

The idea behind Student Programming is to get people involved. Gloria Anaple, Co-Chairman says, "We want to show people that there can be exciting social life on a small campus. We want to get people involved and keep them interested." They try to dispel the waning enthusiasm - not always an easy task at Maryville - and are doing a good job.

The Committee is directly responsible for four events: Homecoming, The Medieval Feast during Interim, February Fantasy, and May Madness. Although it would seem that these activities would take up most of its time, the Committee also works with other groups in sponsoring dances, coffee houses, study breaks, and other activities around campus. It also works closely with the food service in the dining hall to plan special dinners and to offer suggestions on how the management can better serve the students' needs.

The Alumni Office strongly supports Student Programming, since many alumni are interested in improving the quality of social life at Maryville. In fact, the Alumni Association donated the video cassette recorder on which we have seen recent movies, and Mr. Paul Fox donated the dartboard now being used in Copeland Hall.

The Student Programming Committee is open to anyone who wants to serve, but Gloria stresses that it takes dedication and hard work - keeping students interested in campus activities is a major challenge - but it's also a lot of fun. Perhaps she sums it up best when she says, "It's a challenge. Sometimes we're successful; sometimes we fail. But we always learn and have fun."

Hound, cont. from pg. 6

comedy from the highest – such as wit and satire– to the lowest–such as farce and situation."

Performances are scheduled for November 4, 5, and 11 at 8:15 p.m. in the Maryville College Theater. Matinees will be held November 9 and 13 at 2:45 p.m. Ticket prices are $4.00 for adults and $1.00 for students and for senior citizens. Tickets for the November 9 matinee are $1.00.

ARTISTS DISPLAY WORK

Knoxville's 200 East, an organization of contemporary artists, will exhibit paintings, prints, drawings and sculpture at Maryville College's Fine Arts Center (FAC) Gallery from Nov. 1-30.

The 200 East artists will discuss their work at a reception honoring them on Sunday, Nov. 6, from 3-5 p.m. in the FAC Gallery. The public is invited to attend.

The group 200 East is a cooperative of approximately 15 artists whose objectives are to exhibit their own work and that of other area artists and to promote contemporary art in the greater Knoxville area.

The organization began in October 1982 with an 11-member show and has sponsored continuous shows and exhibits of contemporary art ever since.

Among the current members of 200 East are Painters Michael Clopton, Tom Shaw, Teresa Sise and Mary Wieland; Sculptors Mark Fessler, Barbara Lample and Robert Reid; Lou Horner, paintings and sculpture; Margaret Georgiann, commercial graphic artist; Merritt Ireland, constructionist; Brian Wells, printmaker; Cathy Suttle, ceramics; and Nancy Campbell, stained glass.

The MC FAC Gallery is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. No admission is charged.

Center Provides Aid

Did you know that Maryville College has a learning center? This center, located in Sutton Science Center and under the direction of Dr. Polio, originated under a grant and has developed into a strong, beneficial unit. The learning center was designed to teach educational psychology majors how to work with children who exhibit learning disabilities and as a center where the community could bring such children for help. The center now also provides an atmosphere in which psychology majors can experience how it would be to fill the position of school psychologist. The center also offers these students a practicum in diagnostic education.

The learning center, however, is not dedicated to serving only the community and psychology majors. The center provides MC with all its reading tests and teaches a developmental reading course. The learning center is also a resource for both students, who need help with their classes, and faculty, who can come to the center for ideas which may help students with learning problems.

Associate Director Susan Cambell will be assuming most of the responsibilities of the learning center. Ms. Cambell has taught English in the Knox County schools and on the college level, and has her masters in guidance and counseling. She will work at the center every Monday through Wednesday and on Thursday till noon. The Learning Center's staff also includes Nancy Pickens, Donna Stein, and Jana Bryles.

GOOD FOR HAPPY HOUR PRICE

ON ONE PITCHER OF DRAFT

ANYTIME

HOULIHAN'S LOUNGE

324 Gill Street, Alcoa

982-9914

No Cover Charge for Entertainment Nights

Expires November 30, 1983

Budget, cont. from pg. 1

Dr. Anderson also told the Board the College's Toward Century III capital gifts campaign has raised $10,119,291 to date toward the total goal of $11.5 million.

In other action, the board heard a report on the one-million-dollar residence hall renovation project which the directors approved at their last meeting in April.

Four residence halls --Davis, Copeland, Hall I and Lloyd -- are now environmentally safe with all asbestos completely removed, the directors were told.

In addition to replacing all ceilings in the halls, the College installed all new carpet and repainted all walls in individual rooms and lobby areas. The College also provided new curtains and new mattresses as well as improved lighting and fire alarm systems. Furniture in individual rooms was also re-upholstered.

Contractors worked an estimated 20,000 manhours from June to September to complete the bulk of the renovation work on the halls before students arrived for fall term. Minor tasks, such as installing bolsters for the beds and other finishing touches, will continue through this term.

A total of 29 directors attended the day-long session on Friday.

Scots Disappointed

By Dan Bouch

Saturday afternoon the Maryville College Scots played host to Randolph-Macon College in what proved to be a disappointing Homecoming for the Scots and their Alumni. Randolph-Macon, who has one of the best teams in the ODAC, gave the Scots trouble all day.

The defense for the Scots was able to hold the Yellow Jackets at times but gave up a number of big plays late in the game. Early in the game the defense held Randy-Mac but received little help from the sputtering offense. The defense received some hard hitting from Brian Gray, Paul Anagnostis, Bob Aucker, and other secondary members.

The offense for the Scots mounted very little in scoring threats for drives. Once, the Scots were deep in Macon territory when the Jackets intercepted a Pat Moyer pass intended for Shannon O'Brien. The offensive line for the Scots was able to handle Randolph-Macon's defensive line well enough to move the ball early, but adjustments by Randolph-Macon at halftime slowed any rushing attempts by the Scots.

This was the final home game for the Scots, now 2-5, who travel to Emory, VA, this week to play Emory & Henry College.

The faces of the crowd reveal a multitude of emotions during Saturday's Homecoming Football game.

How Do You Spell Cross Country

By Rick Carver

How many of you Highland Echo readers can run a mile? Not so tough, right? How about five miles? This may be difficult for some, but approximately half of the Maryville College community could accomplish such a task. Want to try for seven miles? Maybe the soccer and basketball teams and about a dozen others would make it. 11 miles? 17 miles? One would have to be crazy! Well, the cross country club does all of the above as part of their training for rigorous five-mile meets.

The next question asked is "why?". Now let's face it, five miles is an understandable training program for a five mile meet; seven miles is reasonable because it builds endurance; but 11 and 17 miles? Are these people masochists, heavy drinkers, or simply insane? Not quite.

What does it take to be a cross country runner? Why would someone want to agonize through the ordeal of running 17 miles? Is it to get in shape? Surely there must be an easier way. Are they bored and need something to do? Not likely. Maybe the individuals involved with running mega-miles are in it for self-satisfaction? Possibly. They are probably trying to better themselves through physical exercise. If one can conquer a long distance hurdle such as 17 miles, then why can't he achieve long distant goals in the classroom and life as well? The determination to succeed, which is involved in long distance running, makes a person attempt to run 17 miles, which, by the way, is 65% of a marathon.

Determination is not the only factor. People can be determined and succeed in their quests or goals without running 17 miles. What is it, then, that makes a cross country runner? Self satisfaction? Insanity? Endurance building? Mental discipline? Pride? The answer is a mixture of all of the above, but the key ingredient can be found only through participation in this type of athletic endeavor. How do you spell cross country? I spell it G-U-T-S, or more scientifically, intestinal fortitude. If you don't believe it, come out and give cross country running a try!

Ladies Dish Out Destruction

By Brian Rigell

Homecoming is probably one of the most important events of the school year, and there are not too many people who would want to miss all the excitement and fun of that weekend. However, while most of you were here watching the football Scots take another one on the chin, the Lady Scots' Volleyball team was away on a road trip dishing out some destruction at the Milligan Invitational.

A short recap of the week shows Maryville losing to King at home on Wednesday before leaving for Johnson City on Friday morning. Friday's action saw the Lady Scots drop their opening match to Milligan and then rebound to defeat Tusculum and North Georgia to take first place in their pool. On Saturday the Ladies continued their winning ways by defeating UNC-Ashville. Maryville then faced Mars Hill in the semi-finals, and the Lady Scots completely destroyed them and, in doing so, earned a spot in the finals against Concord. Unfortunately, Concord was able to record the win, thus leaving the Lady Scots with the second place trophy. Way to be Lady Scots!

The team, now 13-12, will have played at Sewanee on Tuesday by the time this is printed. The last two matches of the year are at home so keep an eye out for time and dates and come support your Lady Scots to a winning season.

CHAMPS

25% OFF

All Shoes, Apparel, Sports Equipment

Friday, Saturday, Sunday

November 4-6

Foothills Mall Only

983-6463

Davy Crockett Stable, Inc.

TOWNSEND TENNESSEE

Just to remind MC students

We are open all winter.

You do not have to be an expert to ride here.

Faster rides for the experienced offered

Rides of various duration available including overnight campouts for groups and clubs.

This ad good for a 10% discount on an overnight campout of 10 people or more.

CALL FOR INFORMATION -- 448-6411

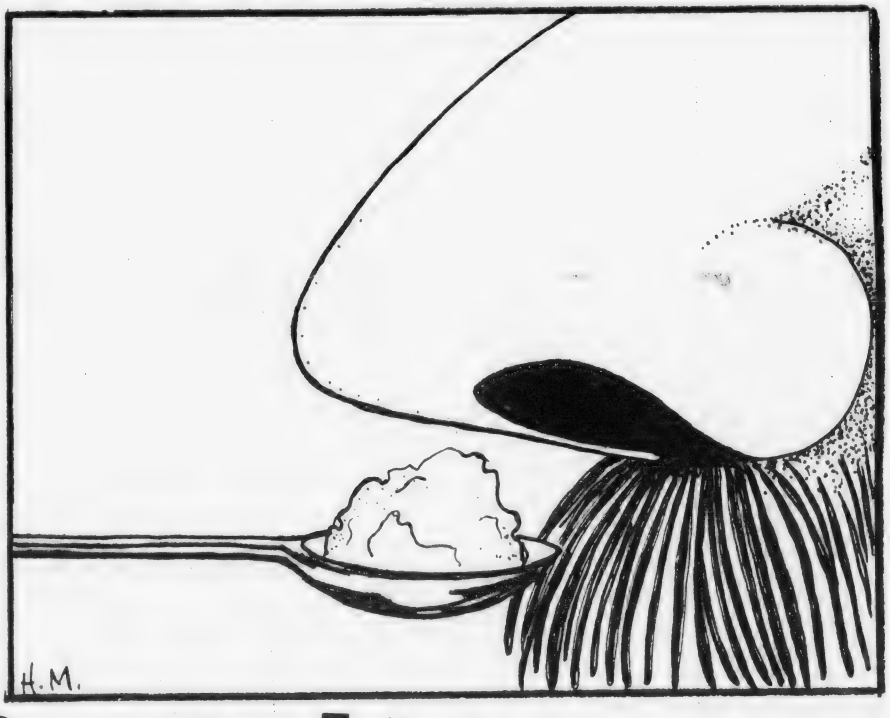
The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 8 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, November 10, 1983

Maryville College: Feeling the Drug Effects

By Peggy Millsaps

Two Maryville College students were arrested the week of October 23 for the selling of a controlled substance. Gerald Thompson, Fleetwood, New Jersey and Victor Newmark, Marietta, Georgia were taken into custody at 12:45 p.m. Wednesday in a "Buy-Bust" operation at Dorm I according to Detectives Guy Young and Ken Myers and Captain Johnny Blair.



Young and Myers, operating on tips received concerning drug trafficking at the College, seized a half-ounce of cocaine with an estimated street value of $1,300.

After being charged with the sale of a controlled substance, Thompson was held at Blount County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bond. Newmark was freed on a $7,500 bond. After their arrests both students withdrew from the College.

If Thompson and Newmark had not withdrawn they would have been dealt with according to college policy as stated in the 1983-84 Student Handbook. The Handbook prescribes "disciplinary action up to and including suspension from the college for anyone who illegally distributes drugs."

"We take seriously all matters related to drugs," said Jane Richardson, Dean of Students. "The College's policy is clear on the subject: both illegal use and distribution of drugs are prohibited. Also we are not in a position to protect students breaking the law."

The recent arrests raise the question of the extent of hard drug abuse on campus. "We know drug abuse exists at MC," Dean Richardson continued,"as it does at all colleges and universities. We feel that the extent is not excessive here by society's standards. Probably alcohol abuse is our greatest problem, followed by 'pot and pills.' Cocaine is expensive and not likely to be as accessible to students."

Among college-age youth nation wide, the problem is more severe. A recent article in U.S. News and World Report cited the United States as "having the highest rate of drug abuse among any developed country on the globe."

According to the article, two decades ago only a small section of the population was familiar with cocaine; even less had tried it. by 1982, however, nearly 22 million adults aged 18-to 25 had used cocaine.

Dean Richardson commented on the effects of the arrest on the College community. "For a day or two, there was a flurry of questions from a few students about law enforcement officers coming on campus without permission or knowledge of college officials. Other than that, there seems to be little or no talk about the arrests, and no immediate concern is apparent of this campus having a wide scale drug problem."

Nichols Computes Future

Dr. John Nichols, associate professor of mathmatics, has been named coordinator of academic computing laboratories at Maryville College.

In the newly created position, Nichols will be responsible for the two computer labs in Sutton Science Center, which are under the supervision of the mathematics, physics and computer departments, to ensure that instructional and research needs are being met. Dr. Nichols will also continue to teach mathematics.

Lee Shamblin, director of computer services, will continue to be responsible for the mainframe computer in Anderson Hall, which is devoted entirely to administrative purposes.

Dr. Nichols graduated from Walland High School and from Maryville College with a B.S. in mathematics. He earned M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in math from the University of Tennessee.

Except during a two-year leave of absence to study full-time under National Teaching Fellows Program 1969-72, he has taught at MC since 1967.

Dr. Nichols served as an assistant professor of mathematics from 1972-1977 when he was promoted to associate professor. In 1982 he was awarded a Faculty Development Grant to study computer science and mathematical statistics.

Nichols is currently a member of the American Mathematical Society and See Nichols, pg. 3

Campus Calendar

Friday, November 11

6:30 - Volleyball vs. Covenant College and Berea College - Home

8:15 - Playhouse Wilson Chapel

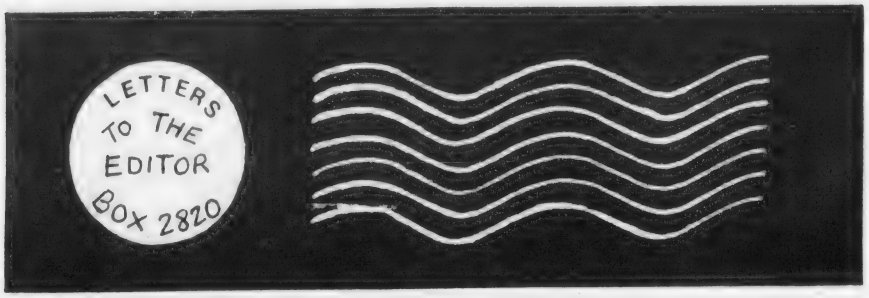
Saturday, November 12

10:00 a.m. - Soccer vs. Transylvania - Home

Sunday, November 13

2:45 - Playhouse - Wilson Chapel

7:00 - Vespers - CCM



Tuesday, November 15

6:30 - Volleyball vs. ETSU - Home

8:15 - Faculty Recital - Robert Enrgenbright, Baritone - FAC

Wednesday, November 16

10:30 Midweek Worship-Father Jack Hickey, Vanderbilt University - CCM

The Highland Echo received this letter to the editor and thought it deserved a response from the students and faculty.

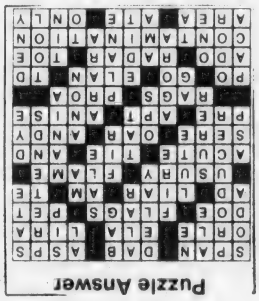
Dear Editor,

This past summer I visited a friend of mine who attends one of the most highly reputed universities in the country. During our conversations she told me about the relationships between professors and students and also about those between different departments within the university. One incident in particular really horrified me. A philosophy professor of hers would ask her to get him a cup of coffee for class and would usually toss the change in her direction. One day she felt something hitting her cheek. She turned, and found it was the professor throwing the change at her face!

I'm sure that most of you would consider this action an injustice and are thinking how lucky we are to be attending Maryville College where such violations do not occur. That's what I thought.

A few weeks back on campus and in the classroom, however, made me more aware. I realized that there are much more subtle insults than a physical attack which are just as damaging to a student's morale. Sarcasm readily comes to mind.

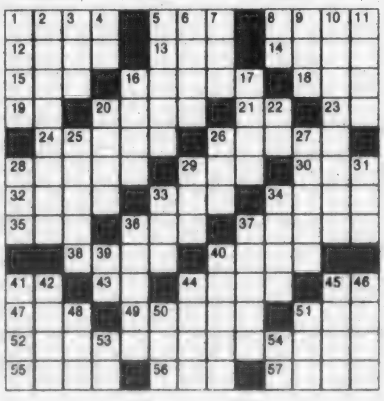
Most students, I have found, go to class hoping to learn about the subject at hand. Frequent comments such as "I'm sure everyone has read this and understands it completely" and "I'm sure we don't know anyone who would do this, do we?" are not appropriately enlightening, nor is facing this attitude on the part of the professor day after day any inducement for the student to delve into study and perform his best.



Questioning the students' powers of intelligence, likewise, does little to build confidence. Explaining every word of the text and remarks such as "I know this is a philosophical discussion and is over your heads" simply translates "you are too stupid to understand these basic ideas and probably anything else I bring up." At this point I must ask - if we are so incompetent to understand why were we accepted into the college, or why are you bothering to teach us?

This question points to another. My friend also told me that the professors at her university are obsessively concerned with proving themselves right and every other opinion totally wrong. They hold class and teach, but primarily they want to demonstrate how smart they are. I realize that such blatant antagonism does not reveal itself at Maryville, yet I must wonder whether the students do not supply a somewhat "captive" audience for what the professor believes to be cute and clever comments. Simple and serious questions from students also often seem to play straightman to flippant replies.

Teachers often complain that they face unresponsive students. Must you really wonder why? Plenty of students have good ideas about the material but do not relish being dismissed or not conisdered credible. Still others may not find the sarcastic, demeaning attitude deserving of a response. As for the blank faces that seem not to learn, don't be fooled. They are learning (and have been for years) and much more than the syllabus prescribes. This added knowledge has little to do with school but much to do with dealing with people. I suggest that most people including these professors, would take offense to being treated or spoken to in the condescending and sardonic manner we are taught.



Perhaps the biggest question, certainly one which followed my visit, revolves around the true benefit of a higher education, of going on to Graduate school and possibly beyond. Does a degree merely feed the ego and make those without so much learning seem terribly ignorant? If so, then education is a very fragile commodity. Perhaps such a basis for life needs to be supported by downgrading remarks and action. I had always thought that going to school built a foundation for improvement. Do you really know what you are teaching us? I wonder.

RHM

ACROSS
1 Bridge
5 Flounder
8 Snakes
12 Heraldic device
13 Guido note
14 Italian coin
15 Female deer
16 Pennants
18 Fondle
19 Paid notice
20 Fabricator
21 Part of to be
23 Digraph
24 Exorbitant interest
26 Blaze
28 Sharp
29 Stalemate
30 "— so to bed"
32 Withered
33 Scull
34 Mr. Griffith
35 Before: Pref.
36 Likely
37 Flavoring herb
38 Tatters
40 Malay canoe
41 Italian river
43 Proceed
44 Verve
45 NFL score
47 Bother
49 Detecting device
51 Digit
52 Impurity
55 Region
56 Munched
57 Merely

DOWN
1 Soft drink
2 Maker
3 Pub drink
4 Compass pt.
5 Postpone
6 Winglike
7 Container
8 Jolson
9 Drink slowly
10 Shams
11 Fill
16 Word with camp or place
17 Store event
20 Musical instrument
22 New Eng. state
25 More certain
26 Evergreen
27 Craze
28 Snake
29 Make lace
31 Change the color
33 Harvest goddess
34 Soon
36 Greek marketplace
37 Macaw
39 Silver symbol
40 Jet
41 South American rodent
42 Aroma
44 Redact
45 Saw
46 Gainsay
48 "— of these days..."
50 Dr.'s gp.
51 Soldier of a sort
53 Bye
54 Suit — a T

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell
Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas
Advisor ..... Stephen LeMay

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Theatre Review

Inspector Hound Inspected

Eleanor Woodfin, in the role of Mrs. Drudge, listens to the broadcast that a dangerous criminal is on the loose.

By Teresa Hurst

I must admit I did not relish the idea of sitting through another "who-dunit" play, when I was assigned to write a review of the Maryville College Playhouse production of "The Real Inspector Hound." The play, contrary to my biased opinion, turned out to be quite entertaining. I found myself engrossed in trying to figure out who the real murderer was. The comical antics of Moon (Tommy Brown) and Birdfoot (Tom Scott) provided the audience with their step-by-step deduction of who did it. In fact, the entire play seemed to pull the audience into the action. When I finally thought I had figured out who the real murderer was, the play took a surprising twist and convinced me I was completely wrong. After seeing "The Real Inspector Hound," my opinion of detective dramas was grossly changed. The play was superbly cast and produced, not to mention extremely entertaining!

(Left)

Phil Finney plays the mysteriously, murdered man.

Circle K Gets Involved

By Amy Waggoner

Do you like helping others, making new friends, and having a good time? You can do all three here at Maryville College - through Circle K. Circle K is a service club that many people here have heard of, but one that not many know very much about.

The purpose of Circle K is to help out not only the college, but also the community. The members work in conjunction with local Kiwanis Clubs (Maryville and Alcoa) on various projects. Their major project is the Big Brother/Big Sister program with children from the area. These children come from foster homes and Boy's Club and Girl's Club in Maryville. Most Circle K'ers think that this is a rewarding program for themselves as well as for the children. "We really have a good time helping the kids grow up. It's an exciting experience," says Lynne Davis, an active Circle K member the past two years.

The club also helps with the annual Kiwanis Pancake Breakfast, the annual Arts and Crafts Fair on Homecoming weekend, sponsors various dances and social activities, and this year will be the host club for the Circle K District Convention at the Airport Hilton.

The club has about 30 members, and membership is on the rise. To join Circle K, contact any of these officers: Todd Honeycutt - President; Kevin O'Reilly-Vice-President, Paul Walton and Sharon Pimm-Secretaries, Lenida Hawkins - Treasurer.

Information Science: The Final Frontier?

By Peggy Millsaps

Forget the stereotype of a tight-lipped spinster blinking through cloudy spectacles at a worn copy of How Green Was My Valley. Today's librarian is not quite what she used to be. (Today's librarian, further, is just as likely to be a he.)

Dr. Michael Pimberton, Associate Professor of the U.T. School of Library and Information Science (there's your he!) will speak Monday, November 14 at CPP during break on burgeoning career options in library and information science.

As a preview to Dr. Pimberton's talk, Exir Brennan, Director of the Library expounded a bit on each area he will cover:

1) Records Management: the records manager organizes and makes information (i.e. hospital records, newspaper clippings and photos, corporate reports) readily accessible. Business, industry, communications, and education employ record managers.

2) Archives: due to a growing appreciation for archive materials, libraries, Chambers of commerce, museums, newspapers, and various companies employ archivists in the conservation (gathering) and preservation (physical care and handling) of material. The archivist's job is two fold: he must know not only the contemporary and historical significance of his material, but also how to prepare articles for archives.

3) Data Base Management: the data base manager does much the same thing as the record manager but utilizes instead the computer retrieval system and creates data bases for retrieval.

4) Indexing: the indexor takes salient details from material and lists it in terminology particular to the subject indexed.

5) Abstracting: similar to the indexor, the abstractor summerizes in considerably less words than the original the "high points" of his material. Because of increasing specialization among indexors, most students major in a particular field and minor in library and information science.

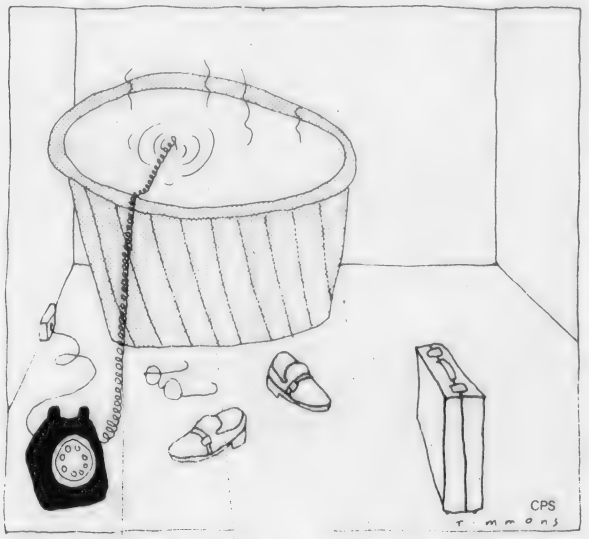
Mrs. Brennan emphasized that the new information specialist is not "an egghead bookworm" nestled in a corner with his materials. As unforseen jobs open to information specialists, specialists must possess good oral and written communication skills. "Also," she added facetiously, "they should be walking encyclopedias."

Nichols, cont. from pg. 1

the Mathematical Association of America. Locally, he is co-founder and member of the Blount County Historic Trust.

Dr. Nichols is the son of James R. Nichols, a resident of Walland, Tenn., and the late Elizabeth J. Nichols. His daughter, Melissa Jane, attends Alcoa Middle School.

Scots Fight To End



By Chris Porter

The original road trip scheduled for the weekend of Oct. 27-29 was postponed by the Scots this past weekend due to academic commitments and injuries. When the Scots finally left, they got no further than Marion, Va. in the school's new bus because of a faulty fuel line valve. As a result, the Scots arrived at Hampden-Sydney fifteen minutes before kickoff with only a chocolate bar for lunch.

The Scots were undaunted by the ill-fated journey, and exhibited their usual competitive spirit. With the return of Freshman midfielder Wade Wright, Coach Levanthal was able to use a 4-4-2 formation which seemed to exhibit positive characteristics in practice. For the first 10-15 minutes, the Sctos controlled the midfield and set up many scoring opportunities for midfielders Julio Pesiri, Wade Wright, and Mack Paschall and forwards Quy Huynh and Minor Taylor. Both teams were moving up and down the field, when a Hampden-Sydney forward penetrated the defense. In his effort to keep Hampden-Sydney from scoring, goalkeeper Steve Courtoy sustained a broken nose. Wade Wright took over between the posts. Subsequently, Hampden-Sydney went ahead 3-0 in the first half. Just before the half, Mike Wilcos attempted a goal, but the score was taken away because time ran out. Hampden-Sydney was kept scoreless through the second half. Scot Defenseman Chris Laicy successfully marked out of the game Jeff Mencini (the ODAC scoring champion). MC's only score came via a Retabile Masilo direct free kick from 24 yards out that was deflected by Quy Huynh through the Hampden-Sydney goal. The final score was 3-1.

The second match found the Scots hosted by perennial ODAC champions Lynchburg College. Being the major men's varsity fall sport, the Scots were treated to delightful exposure. They were individually introduced to the crowd, and the game was broadcast on local TV and radio.

The attending physician in Farmdalex, where Courtoy was treated, gave the decision to play up to Steve, and Coach Leventhal allowed him to play. Understandably hesitant play resulted in a goalkeeper change in the first half. Although not getting blown out, the Scots were unable to sustain a successful scoring effort and finally succumbed to relentless counterattacks by Lynchburg. The final score was 4-0. Lynchburg is once more ODAC champs. Excellent defensive play was attributed to Nelson Gonzales, and Masilo came up with another great offensive effort.

V-Ball Moves On

By Brian Rigell

With just three matches left in the season and a record of 13-14, the Lady Scots' Volleyball team is facing the reality that their backs are against the wall and time is slowly but surely running out. The Lady Scots find themselves in this situation as a result of dropping two games last Tuesday in a tri-match at Sewanee. The team dropped the opener against host Sewanee and then were handed another loss by Tennessee Temple.

The remaining matches are at home with a tri-match against Covenant and Berea this Friday at 6:30, and the final match is against ETSU on Tuesday the 15th. The Lady Scots will have to be psyched and ready to K.A. in order to keep their hopes of a winning season alive.

Special thanks goes out to all of you who have supported the Lady Scots throughout this season because without you it would not have been possible. So the next time you're sitting around wondering what to do think about getting out and supporting your Fighting Scots or your Lady Scots, because they're out there giving 110% for you!

'83-'84 Basketball Outlook- More Than A Dribble

The Maryville College Fighting Scots basketball program has set its sights high for the 1983-84 season.

Fourth year Head Coach Randy Lambert says that his primary goal is to do well in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference play this season. "Our demanding road schedule will make it hard to produce a good won-loss record, but the conference is much more balanced this year. Whoever wins the championship could lose as many as four or five games."

"The ODAC is one of the most competitive Division III conferences in the country." Last season Roanoke College not only won the conference championship but went on to finish third in the Division III national tournament. Coach Lambert has never beaten Roanoke College, and he said that a win over this national powerhouse is a major goal of this season.

"In constructing a schedule this year I wanted to include as many Division III schools from the South as possible as well as NAIA competition. In addition, we will sponsor our own tournament for the first time this season -- the Dr. Pepper Classic Nov. 25-26.

A primary strength of this season's team is size. This is one of the tallest starting teams that Maryville College has had in some time. Raymond Burnett of Knoxville, Tyrone Matthews, Decatur, Ga., and Deangelo McDaniel, Moulton, Ala., are all 6-5. Center Dan Kirkpatrick, Miami, Fla., is a strong 6-7.

Team attitude has been very positive, and we're getting excellent leadership from our returning players," said Coach Lambert. "Tyrone Matthews and Dan Kirkpatrick, both juniors, were elected captains by team vote. Both know the system and what I expect from the team."

"This team is very competitive. They hate to lose and I like that. It goes along with my personal philosophy really well.

I'm concerned with our overall depth in terms of experience, outside shooting ability and team quickness. Hopefully, we can offset these possible weaknesses with some changes in our overall strategy which we are experimenting with right now. Whether our young bench will come through when necessary remains to be seen."

This is a young team with no senior members so all players should be returning next year.Coach Lambert explained that each game should, therefore, be thought of in terms of a learning situation.

"This team has a lot of to their potential, they should do well in conference play and, hopefully, get an NCAA post-season tournament bid."

Potential is the key word for the 1983-84 Maryville College basketball season.

SEE US FOR CHECKING ACCOUNTS
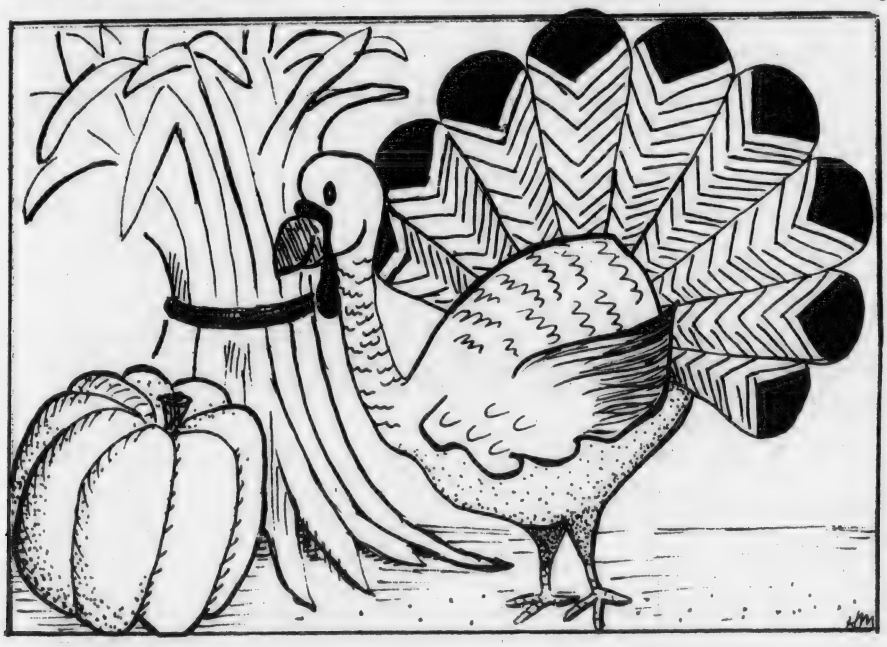
AND STUDENT LOANS

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK
984-1500
MEMBER F.D.I.C.



The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 9 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, November 17, 1983

Maryville College Gives Thanks

By Peggy Millsaps

Winter's encroaching chill and store front displays of stand-up cardboard turkeys and by now cliched pumpkins and corn shuck ensembles tempt us to idealize reveries of Thanksgiving-some of us can't quite forget the evocative lyrics,"Over the river and through the woods. . . " But, as Robert Ringer Wryly puts it, "this ain't Walton's Mountain anymore." He is referring to twentieth century America, less epitomized by cardboard turkeys than the atomic bomb.

In keeping with that motion, the Echo put his question up for response: In a time when war, nuclear arms, hunger, population and ecological problems, and international tensions are the pressing issues - and fears- facing you as a student entering the competitive social, business, and scientific world, for what, at Thanksgiving, are you thankful?

Recurring responses were family, friends, education, democracy, freedom.

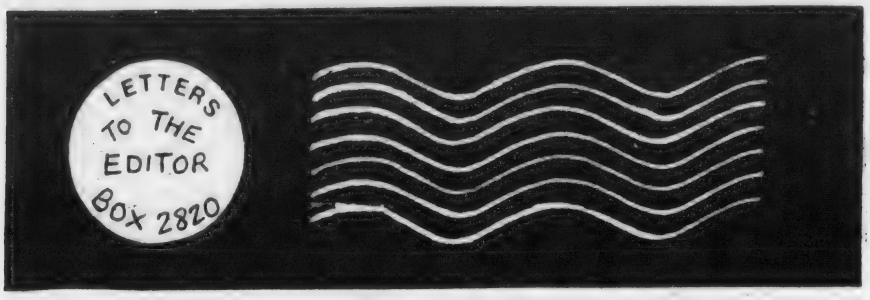
Kimberly Spargo, freshman presidential scholar was particularly eloquent: "Thanksgiving is not a time of shuddering in fear of nuclear wars and the competitive job markets. What will be will be. Thanksgiving is simply a matter of praising God for being who you are in a world that often times destroys individual identities. Be thankful for being able to rise up in the morning, fully aware, and for being able to travel through the day as a single individual, giving love to those around you. Thanksgiving belongs to God, for he gives us life, and our lives should revolve around this love.

Another responder, Nancy Jones concentrates on today: "What the future actually holds for us is a mystery to us all. We are all able to assume what possible consequences lie ahead for us in terms of nuclear war, world hunger, and overseas conflict. The future may indeed look bleak. But what about today? What about the next 24 hours and all the other 24 hours that have brought us to this point in time? Today we are alive and well. Today we have our families to understand and support us. Today we have the opportunity to live, to love, to learn, and to play. Today we are blessed and today we should be thankful for these blessings. During this time of Thanksgiving these are the things for which I am thankful, the love and support of my family and friends and the wonder and challenge of being alive today to help in making a better tomorrow. Amid the noise and confusion of our daily lives we get so caught up in our whirlwind of activities and concerns that we tend to lose sight of what gives us the courage to carry on - our blessings. Count them. Then take the time to be thankful-today.

Happy Thanksgiving

ACC Conducts Business

By Eleanor Woodfin



The All College Council, in its first official meeting on November 2, passed a proposal to include the Admission and Standing Committee (A&SC) in the ACC structure under the Academic Life Council (ALC). The A&SE reviews applications for admission and hears appeals from students who are academically dismissed. The original proposal included that the composition of the A&SC consist of three faculty members, the Registrar, the Director of Admissions and the Representative from the Office of Student Affairs; that the Director of Admissions chair the A&SC, and that the chairperson cast a deciding ballot only in the event of a tie vote; that the faculty members serve for staggered three year terms to provide continuity; that proposals for changes in admissions and standings policies take the form of recommendations from the A&SC to the ALC.

Two amendments were proposed and passed. The first presented by Dr. Beck on behalf of the faculty, suggested that the committee contain four faculty members rather than three to represent four areas of study: Fine Arts, Humanities, Natural Sciences, and Social Sciences. The second proposed that the representative from the Office of Student Affairs be changed to the Dean of Students or the Dean's designated representative from the Office of Student Affairs.

The ACC would also like to commend the Student Programming Committee and the Office of Alumni Relations for their excellent work on Homecoming 1983.

MC Gets World's Fair Gift

Have you walked by the sculpture in front of Thaw Hall and wondered what it is and where it came from? This iron and wood monument is a sun-dial which was part of the Korean Pavillion of the 1982 World's Fair. The Korean Pavillion gave this sculpture to Maryville College at Dr. Kim's suggestion that the pavillion leave something with the college.

Dear Editor,

I couldn't believe your lead article in the last edition. I know Maryville College never has any exciting news, but I can't figure out why you would want to publish the article on "Feeling the Drug Effects." To further embarrass the two guys? To stir a controversy on the campus? To raise bigger questions? I quote Jane Richardson: "For a day or two, there was a flurry of questions from a few students about law enforcement officers coming on campus without permission or knowledge of college officials. Other than that, there seems to be little or no talk about the arrests, and no immediate concerns apparent of this campus having a wide scale drug problem." So why put 3 week old news that has already spread around campus? Do you want to open old wounds? If you want to print controversy focus on constructive dilemas. What about the trash being dumped in the woods? the mud hole next to the Coke plant? The deteriorating buildings on campus and what's being done to them (At least Willard House will be remodeled)? The low admission of students this year? The go ahead with the calendar change? The poor shape of Pearson's? The board of directors meetings and low student turnout to open meetings (which was aided by poor publicity of the meeting)? The need for repairing the interior of Thaw and Anderson?The lack of communication between administration and students? Who our Vice-President of Developemnt is? What students really do on weekends? The severe problem of student apathy? The continuous problem of litter on campus? for the sake of saving paper I'll stop here. The newspaper could be a powerful force if it reports issues that affect us all. Try to motivate all 400 of Maryville College students. It'll be a hard job, but the Echo is the best place to start.

Peace
John Rush

The Highland Echo would like to correct some information in the article "Center Provides Aid" which appeared in the November 3rd issue. Ms. Cambell's graduate degree is in English Education, and she has served on faculties at the University of Alabama and Brevard Community College in Florida. Susan Cambell's hours at the center are Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons.

The Highland Echo would also like to acknowledge and thank Keith Moore for his photographs that appeared in the November 3rd issue. The front page group picture and the photograph of Mary Hughes on page four were taken by Keith.

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell
Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographer ..... Nancy Rojas
Advisor ..... Stephen LeMay

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Affiliate Artist Introduced

Mezzo-Soprano Janice Meyerson, the 1983-84 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist presented locally by Maryville College, is one of 70 singers selected to perform for the Opera America auditions in New York City on December 15.

Miss Meyerson, who is scheduled to make her first visit to Maryville December 5-15, will leave one day early to participate in the national auditions, the College announced today.

According to Miss Meyerson, Opera America is a national organization of all opera companies in the United States. Directors of these companies meet annually at their national convention to hear selected singers. Some 400 singers submitted applications to appear before the group this year.

When contacted in New York yesterday about her selection, the mezzo-soprano expressed her excitement at having the opportunity to perform before all the oepra company directors at one time. She admitted, however, to being more nervous about her debut later that same day with the New York City Opera Company in the title role of "Carmen."

Miss Meyerson's appearance last night in "Carmer" was the first of two performances with the NYC ance last night in "Carmen" was the first of two performances with the NYC Opera. She will repeat the role for a November 12 matinee.

Because of the change in scheduling, Miss Meyerson will come to Maryville a day early during her January visit, now set for Jan. 9-29. She will also visit again April 3-13.

Several openings remain for local persons or organizations interested in scheduling an appearance by Miss Meyerson during her initial visit in December. Those interested should contact Mrs. Libby Rankin at 982-6412.

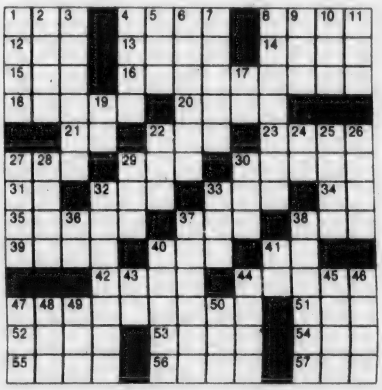
Party Starts At 8:00

By Marta Wittig

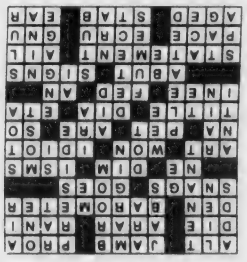
It is late Tuesday night, and you wish you were at Confetti, Knoxville's newest hot spot! An experience in deco art, Confetti blends music dancing into an explosive celebration that just won't stop.

The DJ is a phenomenal man, mastering the whole evening with a svelte chic that leaves one, in the words of the group X, "oooahh, breathless."

The menu is varied and the drinks smashlicious. Confetti has your pleasure as its greatest desire. They've got a wandering magician, warm, friendly service, and a rocking atmosphere that will chase your blues away.



Come. Enter the world of Confetti and enter your dreams.



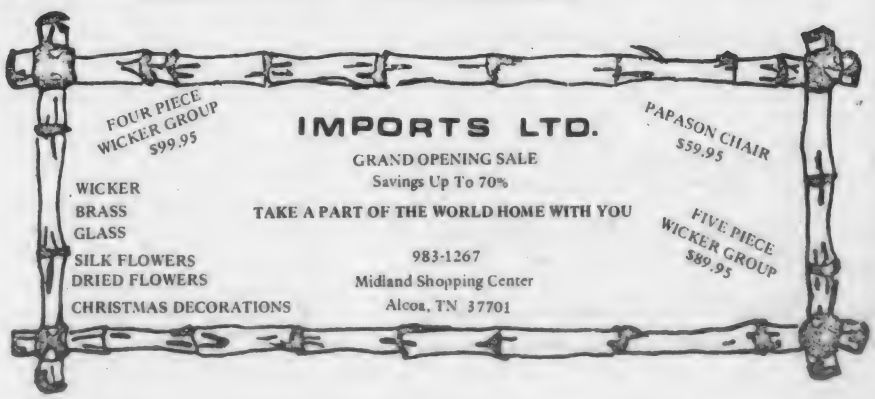
CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 In music, high
4 Part of a door frame
8 Malay canoe
12 Expire
13 Sandarac tree
14 Hindu queen
15 Lair
16 Weather instrument
18 Obstacles
20 Proceeds
21 Compass pt.
22 Obscure
23 Doctrines
27 Skill
29 Took a gold medal
30 Simpleton
31 SA's neighbor
32 Rover, for one
33 Exist
34 — what!
35 Name
37 Part of a circle: Abbr.
38 Greek letter
39 Arrow poison
40 Gave food to
41 Article
42 Border on
44 Omens
47 Declaration
51 Be indiposed
52 Length of a step
53 Tan color
54 African antelope
55 Matured
56 Pierce
57 Organ of hearing

DOWN
1 Says further
2 Hold on property
3 Occupant
4 Pokes
5 Macaw
6 Border
7 Besom
8 Hold chair of authority
9 Rodent
10 Number
11 Ventilate
17 Pronoun
19 Earth goddess
22 Speck
24 Yes, in Madrid
25 Majority
26 Portico
27 One opposed
28 Shower
29 Tiny
30 A Gershwin
32 Having folds
33 Succor
36 Tellurium symbol
37 Emulate Dick Tracy
38 Occupy
40 Smokes
41 Three-toed sloth
43 Exist
44 Blunt end
45 Columbus caravel
46 Calumniate
47 Resort of sort
48 Label
49 High card
50 New Deal agcy.

Puzzle Answer



SEE US FOR CHECKING ACCOUNTS AND STUDENT LOANS

BLOUNT NATIONAL BANK

984-1500

MEMBER F.D.I.C.

Scots Play It Up At Home

By Chris Porter

The Maryville College Scots Soccer Team finished their 1983 season with style Tuesday handing Division I Tennessee Tech a 3-1 defeat. Forward wing Quy Huyhn scored on a pass from Minor Taylor within the first two minutes to give the Scots an early lead. The ball rarely got into MC territory during the opening thirty minutes due to the relentless attacking of Taylor, Julio, Pesiri, Rethabile Masilo, Mark Alberda, and Wade Wright. At the thirty minute mark, the tide took a turn against the Scots when goalkeeper Steve Courtoy reinjured his broken nose while blocking a Tech shot to goal and had to end his season early. Tech's offense seemed spurred on after that, and at the 43 minute mark capitolized on some confusion in the keeper's box and tied the score with a shot up the middle. The score at the half was 1-0.

Neither team could get a goal in the second half until the 35 minute mark when Mack Paschall took the ball up the wing and found Pesiri open in the middle. Pesiri got it past Tech's goalkeeper to tie the score. Immediately after the goal, Pesiri struck unpredictably, stealing the kickoff from Tech. Taylor got hold of the ball and attempted to hit Quy again with the pass. This time it was intercepted by a Tech back who kicked it into goal from MC. Taylor, the last MC player to touch the ball, is credited with the goal.

The defense kept Tech from scoring any of their own goals through the second half, sometimes confronted by ten Tech players on the MC side of the field. Extremely good play was seen throughout the game from Fahed Shawwa, Charlie Gumula, Chris Laisy and goalkeeper Wade Wright. Chris Laisy also saw a good deal of offensive play late in the game.

The young Scots finished this season with a 5-12 record registering the most wins in the history of the varsity sport at MC. This year proved to be rough for the Scots. Their bench was continuously weak, which led them to be vunerable to problems like injuries and academic interest. Coach Leventhal will begin recuiting soon for what he considers a tougher schedule next year. He does have a strong, experienced team back here to build on.

Scots Finish Season With Win

By Rick Carver

The harsh weather in Bristol, Tennessee on November 11 consisted of 40 degree temperatures, biting winds, and a bitter cold rain. The Maryville College Cross Country Club was hot as they scorched King College in a dual meet, however. The Scots also blazed a trail that would see each Maryville harrier set a new course record.

Leading the furious assault on a 31 minute course was Sam Hill. He turned in a sizzling time of 27:52. Neil Davis, a newcomer, sparkled as well by racing to a time of 29:25. Rick Hughes, Stephen LeMay, and Rick Carver also bettered past performances through the five miles of rolling hills, woods, and narrow paths with time of 29:56, 30:27, and 30:49, respectively. The efforts of the Scot runners combined to establish a very impressive team score of 21, which proved to be plenty of cushion to defeat King's team score of 34.

This meet marks the end of the first year's attempt to revive Maryville College's cross country team into the power that it once was. The club's record is now 1-1 in dual meets and also includes an impressive showing in an eight team meet. The members of the club will continue their extensive training program and hope to run in several meets next year. The student Harriers would also like to thank Mr. Rick Hughes and Mr. Stephen LeMay for their hard work, patience, and dedication to the club. The effects of the time you spent with us will be seen not only in the present but in the future as well. Thanks.

Davy Crockett Stable, Inc.

TOWNSEND TENNESSEE

Just to remind MC students

We are open all winter.

You do not have to be an expert to ride here.

Faster rides for the experienced offered

Rides of various duration available including overnight campouts for groups and clubs.

This ad good for a 10% discount on an overnight campout of 10 people or more.

CALL FOR INFORMATION -- 448-6411

Lady Scots Shoot For Victory

The Maryville College Lady Scots basketball team has joined the newly formed Women's Intercollegiate Athletic Conference under the NCAA for the 1983-84 season.

Second year Head Coach Brenda Cooper considers this to be both a challenge and an opportunity. "I'm very excited about our basketball season this year. Our goal is to improve on last season's record of 12-11."

"In order to do this we will have to have strong performances against other teams in the new conference. We played roughly half of these teams last year, and I feel that the conference has been evenly matched overall." Other teams in the conference include Sewanee, Southwestern, Centre, Berea, Fisk and Transylvania.

Coach Cooper believes that additional height will be a real asset to this year's roster. In addition to added rebounding ability, outside shooting should be a primary strength.

"I consider the talent of this team to be above average overall. I don't expect any one player to dominate. A good solid team effort will really be required in order for us to be highly competitive," said Coach Cooper.

The Lady Scots return six players from last year's squad. Team captain Trina Coggins Fancher from Newport will aternate between the forward and wing positions. Last season's Most Improved Player, Sara Covington of McColl, S.C. is expected to spark the inside game.

Returning to the wing position are Mimi Chesney of Friendsville and Penny Head, Nashville. Both are good shooters and should provide strength to the Lady Scots' offense. Juniors Robin Simmons of Maryville and Stacy Medlin, Lewisport, Ky., share the point guard position this season.

Heading the list of newcomers for the Lady Scots is freshman Kathy Pennington of Huntsville, who last year held the Scott County High School all-time rebounding record. Joining her at forward are junior college transfer Denise Penzkofer from New Port Richey, Fla. and Pam Gunter from Rossville, Ga., Jenny Black of Vonroe is expected to contribute at point guard position with her quickness and ball handling skills.

Coach Cooper said that the Lady Scots will have to produce a good season record in order to receive a post-season tournament bid. "Because we are in a brand new conference, the winner does not automatically get an NCAA tournament invitation. That will be awarded strictly on the basis of our won-loss record."

Women's Soccer Update

The MC Women's Soccer Club finished their season with a disappointing loss to the Knoxville Women's Soccer Club. The Lady Scots never quit even though they were behind the victors by five points. The only MC score came in the second period when Ann Ritter scored on a pass from Helen McNiell.

All of the Lady Scots did a fine job, but seemed to lack experience against the older team. This is the end of their third season as a club, and the returning players should expect varsity status soon.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 10 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, January 12, 1984

Renowned Quintet Adds A Touch Of Brass

One of the foremost brass chamber ensembles in the United States, the Empire Brass Quintet, will appear in concert at Maryville College on Tuesday, Jan. 17.

The concert, the third in the Maryville-Aloca College-Community Orchestra's (MACCO) 1983-84 season, is the highlight of the College's first BrassFestival.

As a prelude to the Empire Brass Quintet concert, high school students from a four-state area who are participating in the Brass Festival will present several selections, including works by Gabrieli, Schutz, Maurenzio and Sasato, among others. The prelude concert begins at 7:30 and the Empire Brass Quintet Concert at 8:15 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

Since its original members were introduced to each other in 1972 at Tanglewood by Leaonard Bernstein, the Empire Brass Quintet has toured throughout the United States, Europe and Japan. The group has won numerous awards and prizes and received international critical acclaim both for live performances and for more than 20 recordings.

Members of the group include Rolf Smedvig, trumpet; Charles A. Lewis Jr., trumpet; David Ohanian, French horn; Lawrence Isaacson, trombone; and J. Samuel Pilafian, tuba.

Currently the group is the Quintet-in-Residence at Boston University, where they have been since 1975 and where they teach the annual Empire Brass Quintet Symposium for gifted brass players at Tanglewood Institute.

During the 1983-84 season, the Empire Brass Quintet will give over 70 concerts in the United States, including four New York appearances - at Alice Tully Hall in Lincoln Center, the Cloisters Museum, the 92nd Street Y, and the Century Club. In March 1984, the Quintet will perform the world premiere of Ira Taxin's Concerto for Brass Quintet and Orchestra with the Cincinnati Symphony. For the second time, the ensemble will appear as featured guest artists with Bobby Short and his trio in a celebration of Cole Porter music. In May 1984, the Empire Brass makes its third tour of Japan.

During the 1982-83 season, the Empire Brass Quintet performed more than 60 concerts in the United States, and made their fifth European tour. Summer 1983 found the Quintet giving several performances in Saratoga and throughout New England, including a "warmup" for the Boston Pops at their annual Fourth of July concert at the Esplande, and return concerts

See Quintet, page 4

New CE Director Appointed

Dr. Sarah McNiell has been appointed director of continuing education at Maryville College, MC Academic Vice President Alfred Perkins announced.

Dr. McNiell, who has been director of community services and non-credit programs at the College since September 1982, replaced Thomas Garsombke who has moved out of state.

In her new position, Dr. McNiell will assume responsibility for the CE degree program which includes all evening and Weekend College courses. She will continue to direct the non-credit program activities of the College.

"Dr. McNiell's wide professional experience and knowledge of this region will be invaluable assets as the College continues to expand its service to the Great Knoxville area." Dr. Perkins said.

Dr. McNiell is a 1953 cum laude graduate in history from MC who has served the College at various times as an instructor and assistant professor of history. She has also taught in the CE program.

She holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in American history from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville where she was a Danforth Fellow.

Dr. McNiell has also taught through UTK's Center for Extended Learning and has completed several free-lance projects, including editing the "Publications" of the East Tennessee Historical Society and writing grants for the College.

See McNiell, page 3

Campus Calendar

Thursday, January 12

7:30 p.m. Ladies Basketball vs. Tennessee Temple-Chattanooga

Saturday, January 14

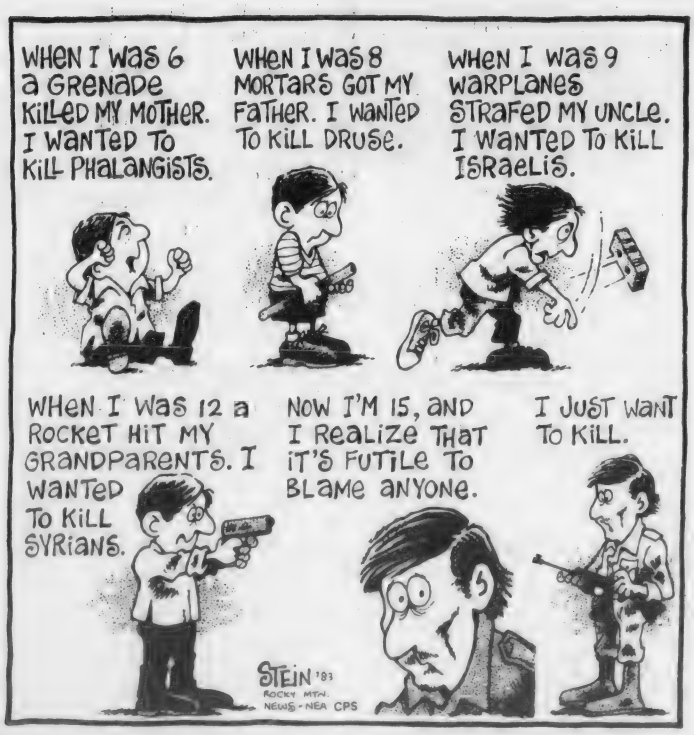
7:30 p.m. Basketball vs. Lynchburg - Home

Sunday, January 15

7:00 p.m. Vespers - CCM

Tuesday, January 17

7:30 p.m. Prelude Concert



8:15 p.m. Empire Brass Quintet Concert- Wilson Chapel

With the ushering in of the New Year, come new resolutions, new goals, great expectations for a prosperous and more successful year. This year, however, is somewhat different. 1984. An ominous feeling settles in when one repeats this date to himself. Instead of looking at the year that is ahead, one tends to look to "the moment." A strong desire to peek around imaginary corners to see what's coming is ever present. I realized once again the importance of the moment last Friday. As I was stepping out the door on my way to class, I received a phone call. The message was that my friend's eighteen year old sister was killed that morning. Her death: an unexpected moment in time that will change the courses of a lifetime for many people.

Although I never met the girl, her death touched me deeply, for by thinking about how I would feel if my own sister were to die suddenly in a car accident, I was able to feel some of the hurt my friend and that family were feeling. It is strange to know that at any moment the direction of one's life could change from a pre-planned course to one that was unforeseen or never considered. How does one cope with this frightening knowledge and instability? Is man resigned to be defeated by the unknown? That perspective would be hard to live under. One thing does exist, however, that quiets the fear - faith. Perhaps this is one reason why the students of Maryville College were drawn here. The college years, especially the Senior year, are some of the most unstable years of a person's life. Young men and women must decide to what they will dedicate their lives and must establish themselves in a competative, politically and socially confusing world. Therefore, during the college years, having access to spiritual guidance and comfort is essential. The students of Maryville College, a church-related college (as it is described in the first sentence under Maryville College Statement of Purpose in the Maryville College 1982-84 catalog), are facing unfulfillment in their search for spiritual support now.

The knowledge of Peter Vial's departure from Maryville College should have spurned instantaneous action toward calling another pastor. Yet, with the new term already started no interim pastor or permanent pastor has been found. The religious aspect of Maryville College is an important responsibility of the college toward its students. The calling of a pastor should not be further delayed, for the students cannot delay their lives.

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell

Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Business Manager ..... Kathy Fitzell

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and the College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service, and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Campus Leaders Selected

The 1984 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges" will carry the names of 15 Maryville College seniors who have been selected as being the country's most outstanding campus leaders.

Those named from Maryville are Lee Millar Bidwell and Karen Spence. Mrs. Bidwell, daughter of Mrs. Sandra Millar of Antioch, Tenn. currently resides in Maryville with her husband, Lawrence, and is a sociology and political science major. Miss Spence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Spence of Maryville is majoring in English at MC.

Other students from Tennessee named include Wilma Coleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Lee Coleman, Etowah; Sarah Jane Lindsay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Lindsay, Chattanooga; Bruce Pettit son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Pettitt, Nashville; Glennis Riedl, daughter of Mrs. Joan Nicoll Riedl, Knoxville; and John Rush, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Rush, Oak Ridge.

Also named were Margaret Andrews, Dover, N.J.; Tamara Cook, Elkton, Va.; Steve Ford, Glens Falls, N.Y.; Leslee Hay, Peekskill, N.Y.; Todd Honeycutt, Wayne, N.J.; Mary Hughes, Longwood, Fla.; James Kidder, Tokyo, Japan; and Martin Paluga, West Palm Beach, Fla.

Students are selected for "Who's Who" by an MC nominating committee and editors of the annual directory on the basis of their academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and potential for continued success. Nomination is limited to those students with an overall grade standing of 3.0 or better.

They join an elite group of students selected from more than 1,500 institutions of higher learning in 50 states, the District of Columbia and several foreign nations.

Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Recruiting Attracts Students And More

The new series of student recruitment publications which the Maryville College Office of Admissions is utilizing this year has won a national award for design excellence.

Stamats Communications, Inc., of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, creators of the new design, won a gold medal for the MC publications at the 13th annual conference of the University and College Designers Association held September 25-28 in Vail, Colo., according to MC Director of Admissions Larry West.

The award recognizes the effectiveness, quality and creativity in visual design of the series which carries the theme line, "Begin a life of richness with a Maryville education" and features the scenic foothills of the Smokies as the unifying design element.

Maryville's award-winning publications were chosen from among 1,500 entries, 175 of which were accepted for competition in 39 publication categories.

"Especially noteworthy was the fact that among those institutions whose entries won awards this year, we were the only college. The rest were universities," West explained.

He added that he is "pleased we were able to work with a firm which has a reputation like Stamats Communications, Inc. I feel this new literature will represent the College in a quality manner."

In addition to its award-winning work for colleges and universities across the country, Stamats Communications, Inc., produces a variety of marketing publications for hospitals and commercial industry. The firm includes complete editorial, design and production facilities in its Cedar Rapids headquarters.

The University and College Designers Association was formed in 1970 to promote the interchange of ideas and information related to the role of designers at educational institutions throughout the country.

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. Space, by James A. Michener. (Fawcett, $4.95.) The space program — skillfully blends fiction and non-fiction.
2. The One Minute Manager, by K. Blanchard & S. Johnson, (Berkley, $6.95.) How to increase your productivity.
3. Christine, by Stephen King. (NAL/Signet, $3.95.) A killer car is at large among a small town's high school set.
4. Foundation's Edge, by Isaac Asimov. (Ballantine/Del Rey, $3.95.) The struggle to keep civilization alive.
5. The Color Purple, by Alice Walker. (Washington Square Press, $5.95.) Winner of the 1983 American Book Award.
6. Growing up, by Russell Baker. (NAL/Plume, $5.95.) Baker recalls his boyhood and youth.
7. Valley of the Horses, by Jean M. Auel. (Bantam, $3.95.) Sequel to The Clan of the Cave Bear.
8. Mistral's Daughter, by Judith Krantz. (Bantam, $4.50.) The art world of the 20's and the fashion business of the 80's.
9. Garfield Sits Around the House, by Jim Davis. (Ballantine, $4.95.) More of the funny cartoon cat.
10. Life, the Universe and Everything, by Douglas Adams. (Pocket, $3.50.) Concluding volume in a trek through the galaxies.

Compiled by The Chronicle of Higher Education from information supplied by college stores throughout the country. Dec. 12, 1983

New & Recommended

Starburst, by Frederik Pohl. (Ballantine, $2.75) A carefully selected crew ventures out for the first time to another stellar system were no man had gone before...or so they thought.

Danse Macabre, by Stephen King. (Berkley, $3.95.) In King's most unusual masterpiece, he takes you on his personal tour of the dark ballroom of horror.

Life Reading, by Frank DeFord. (Penguin, $8.95.) Behind the scenes of the most popular ad campaign in TV history.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS/NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

Man And Wood Articulate

Wood sculpture of the human figure by Ronald G. Koehler, staff assistant and photographer at the Arrowmont School of Arts and Crafts in Gatlinburg, will be on display in January in Maryville College's Fine Arts Center Gallery.

Entitled "Articulation: The Figure," the exhibit is a collection of sculptured works which are individually composed of small units of wood. "Each wooden unit reacts and interacts with one another to curve and bend to achieve a new form and a hint of life," Koehler explained. "In this body of work, I am involved in the growth, exploration and expression of movement."

Koehler added that each piece of sculpture is a synthesis of the human form and articulation, or movement. "Images are not meant to be anatomically correct," he said, "I am concerned with the articulation of the figure and the resulting changes that occur."

The award-winning artist has shown his work in more than 35 exhibits in Arkansas, Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio and Tennessee. His work is included in both public and private collections in 14 states and three foreign countries.

Before coming to the Arrowmont School in 1982, Koehler taught sculpture at Delta State University in Cleveland, Miss., and sculpture and design at Memphis State University. He also taught art in public grade schools in Missouri and has participated in numerous workshops and art presentations.

Koehler earned the Bachelor of Science degree in art education from Southeast Missouri State University (SMSU) in Cape Girardeau in 1972. He completed the Master of Arts in Teaching degree in 1975 at SMSU and in 1980 the Master of Fine Arts degree in sculpture at Memphis State.

He has pursued further studies at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville and at the Hobart School of Welding in Troy, Ohio.

McNiell, continued from page 1

She has also previously served with the Blount County Community Action Agency coordinating public relations and program planning.

A co-founder of the Blount County Historic Trust, Inc., she served as the first president and was newsletter editor of that organization and wrote the successful National Register nomination and funding proposals for the Thompson-Brown House.

She was also a former member of the Blount County Public Library Board and was co-founder and the first president of the League of Women Voters of Maryville-Aloca.

She is a member of the Organization of American Historians, the East Tennessee Historical Society and the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

Dr. McNiell and her husband, Stuart P. McNiell, supervisor and director of federal projects with the Maryville city school system, live in Maryville. Their daughter, Helen, is a senior at MC. A son, Stuart III, lives in Nashville. They are members of New Providence Presbyterian Church.

Ladies Return Disappointed

Now that winter term has begun here at Maryville, the Lady Scots' Basketball team finds themselves in the midst of their 83-84 season. The only thing that separates the Lady Scots' disappointing 2-5 record from a respectable 4-3 is a mere three points.

The team began its season on an upnote with a win over Bryan 63-62 at the Bryan Invitational. The Ladies then lost the championship game against Southwestern by a score of 65-34. Key performances were turned in by Mimi Chesney (28 pts. total), Sara Covington (29 pts. total, 8 rebounds vs. SW) and Kathy Pennington (14 rebounds vs. Bryan). Mimi was also named to the all-tournament team. On the downside, the team lost the services of their most experienced point guard in Robin Simmons who is just now returning to limited action.

The team's third game of the season was a dismal 74-57 loss to Fisk with Sara Covington leading the way with 18 pts. and 13 rebounds. The Lady Scots then returned home to host the Maryville Invitational. The Ladies rolled over Warren Wilson in the first game 80-42, but ran into some trouble against Emory & Henry in the finals and lost 48-47 on a shot in the final seconds. Mimi Chesney (40 pts total) and Sara Covington (24 pts., 14 rebs. vs. WW) led the way for the Lady Scots with Pam Gunter grabbing seven rebounds against E&H. Both Mimi and Sara were named to the all-tourney team with Sara's selection being unanimous.

Just before Christmas break, the Lady Scots hosted North Georgia and were handed another loss 80-70. Once again Mimi Chesney (16 pts.) and Sara Covington (29 pts., 16 rebs) led the way.

The Ladies only game since returning from the break was a 55-53 loss to North Georgia. Maryville outscored North Georgia 50-48 from the field but lost the game on the free-throw line going only 3 for 10 while North Georgia went 7 for 10 from the charity stripe. Penny Head (12 pts.) and Mimi Chesney (16 pts.) provided the offensive surge for the Lady Scots, while Kathy Pennington led in the board-clearing department with eleven.

Injuries and a small squad size are two factors which have been plaguing and still continue to plague the Lady Scots. With Denise Penzkofer out for at least two weeks, and Robin Simmons still recovering from a serious back problem, the Lady Scots will have to rely on the services of only seven players including, Chesney, Covington, Pennington, Gunter, Head, Jenny Black and Trina Coggins-Pancher. The Ladies play on the road until the 17th when they return home. Come out and watch your Lady Scots play a little coast to coast.

Waters Volunteers Skill

Ronnie Waters of Maryville has joined the Maryville College basketball program as a volunteer assistant coach, Heach Coach Randy Lambert announced.

Waters, 27, has served as the assistant varsity coach at Heritage High School for the past five seasons. His responsibilities at MC will include on-the-floor coaching and game preparations as the first assistant to the varsity, according to Coach Lambert.

A native of Maryville, Waters graduated from Everett High School in 1974 and continued his education at Cleveland State and the University of Tennessee-Knoxville where he earned his B.S. degree in education in 1978.

In addition to his coaching duties, Waters taught science at Walland Middle School last year and at Heritage for four years prior to that.

"The Scots' basketball program is very fortunate to have Coach Waters as part of its organization," Lambert said. "Ronnie is a first-class young man. His coaching experience and expertise will be an invaluable asset to our overall basketball program and to Maryville College."

Quintet, continued from page 1

at Tanglewood.

In 1976, the Quintet became the first ensemble ever to receive the Naumburg Chamber Music Award and in 1980 won the Harvard Music Association Award. Career highlights include the ensemble's New York debut at Carnegie Recital Hall in 1976, a performance for Queen Elizabeth II during her visit to Boston and participation in the celebratory concert for former President Jimmy Carter's Inauguration. Their five European tours have taken them to such cities as Berlin, Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, Cologne, Oslo, Stuttgart and Frankfurt.

Since its founding, the Emprie Brass Quintet has led the way in performing new music and has commissioned works from such leading composers as Leonard Bernstein, Peter Maxwell Davies, Gunther Schuller, Ira Taxin, Earl Kim and Daniel Pinkham.

In addition, the group has shown a strong commitment to teaching by establishing a fellowship at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, and a scholarship at the Boston University Tanglewood Institute for an outstanding brass student;

Reserved tickets to the Jan. 17 concert cost $5 for adults, $4 for students and senior citizens and $3 for children under the age of six.

For information about reserved tickets to the Empire Brass Quintet concert and the Brass Festival prelude at Maryville College at 982-6412 in Blount County or 546-6912 in Knoxville.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 11 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, January 19, 1984

Who Gives You The Business?

By John Rush

Have you ever wondered who all those helpful people are in the business office and what their jobs entail? These eager workers work five days a week 8 to 5, and are in charge of the school's most important asset - money. Each person has a specific job that goes into keeping the college's money management on track with budget requirements. In charge of the department is Administrative Vice President Sidney Downey (who will be outlined in a future article).

Linda Stephens, works underneath Downey, and her job title is the Controller. Mrs. Stephen's main function is to monitor the budget and to be sure different departments do not overspend their limits. She approves all purchase orders and outside bill payments. Mrs. Stephens is also in charge of all college tax returns, short term investments, certificates and treasury bills, trusts, and the overall cash flow of the school. Mrs. Stephens has been with the college almost four and a half years. She believes her staff is one of the most qualified and, therefore, helps to make her job easier and more efficient.

Sharon Falls is in charge of all student accounts. Her list of duties include billings, refunds, and student insurance forms which involve everyone's tuition. If anyone has a question about tuition billing or insurance forms then Mrs. Falls is the one to see. Obviously Mrs. Falls is an important key around registration time. She is also a cashier and along with Diana Quagliana takes in all money.

Mrs. Quagliana's chief responsibilities are secretary for the office and accounting clerk. She is the assistant cashier and has previous experience in the banking field. She will take all loan payments and also cash checks. Most students know Mrs. Quagliana as the all important distributor of student payrolls.

Kay Pritchett is also an expert at her job responsibilities. Her main responsibility is the accounts payable of the college. She is in charge of paying all bills and makes sure every account is being paid. Mrs Pritchett has been with Maryville College for approximately two and a half years as have Mrs.Falls and Mrs. Quagliana.

Mrs. Billie Sue Howard is the office manager and is in charge of faculty/staff payrolls. She recommends job applicants for clerical vacancy and handles all faculty/staff insurance forms. Mrs. Howard has been with Maryville College for over fourteen years.

The senior member among the business office members is Mrs. Betty Eggers. who has been with the college for over twenty-six years. She is the bookkeeper of all purchase orders and bills and does all the posting of the ledgers. She also puts all financial statements on the computer which facilitates organization. Her knowledge of the college's business office functions is an invaluable asset to the department.

Another important person to the smooth functioning of the business office, although not on staff in the business office, is Julia Rop.

Julia Rop is the bookstore manager and post office supervisor. She reports all financial information and purchase requests to the business office. Mrs. Rop's job includes taking book orders, purchasing merchandise for the bookstore, and overseeing the student help in the post office. If you can catch Mrs. Rop she is always willing to answer questions and does an excellent job of representing Maryville College through merchandise choices.

Next time you go to the business office to cash a check, or pay a painful tuition installment, look around and appreciate the fine job that these people do. They always greet you with a smiling face and are always willing to answer all questions. These people are an important part of making Maryville College the institution that it is.

Anderson Considered For Wesleyan Presidency

By Marta Wittig
Echo Staff Writer

On Friday, December 13, President Wayne Anderson withdrew from the consideration of President at Ohio Wesleyan College. He withdrew before any decision was reached concerning his acceptance.

When asked why he sought a position at another college, Dr. Anderson replied, "I did not apply for it. The invitation came from Ohio Wasleyan." He would not give any further comments.

Ohio Wesleyan is a private Liberal Arts College with an enrollment of 1550 students. Their president, Dr. Thomas Wenzlan resigned last spring but agreed to stay until a new president could be found. Dr. Anderson's fellow candidate Dr. David Warren has been accepted by Ohio Wasleyan and is slated to start in March.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, Janaury 19

7:30 p.m. Men's Basketball vs. Lee - away

Friday, January 20

7:30 p.m. Ladies' Basketball vs. Centre College - away

7:30 p.m. Friday Night At The Movies:"Ragtime" - CIV

Saturday, January 21

1:00 p.m. JV Basketball vs. Draughon's - home

3:00 p.m. - Men's Basketball vs. Bryan - home

5:00 p.m. Ladies' Basketball vs. Bryan - home

Sunday, January 22

7:00 p.m. Vespers - CCM

Monday, January 23

7:30 p.m. Men's Basketball vs. Fisk - away

Tuesday, January 24

6:30 p.m. Ladies' Basketball vs. Fisk - home

Wednesday, January 25

9:20 a.m. "Fifty Years of the Tennessee Valley Authority" - CIV FAC Music Hall

LETTERS

Dear Ms. Fitzell

No program, person, or action at the college should be exempt from scrutiny or adverse criticism. Those who criticize ought to take seriously their responsibility to get straight any data upon which they base their complaints.

In re the Echo's editorial of January 12, please note:

1. any group that takes "instantaneous action towar' calling" anyone, especially a pastor, is a community of fools;

2. the college has, however, taken swift action to advertise the position, sift through dossiers which have come from respondents to the advertisements and from solicitation;

3. a number of candidates have already been on campus and have met with students, the search committee, and others, such as I, who have been asked by the proper staff members to help them in further securing of candidates.

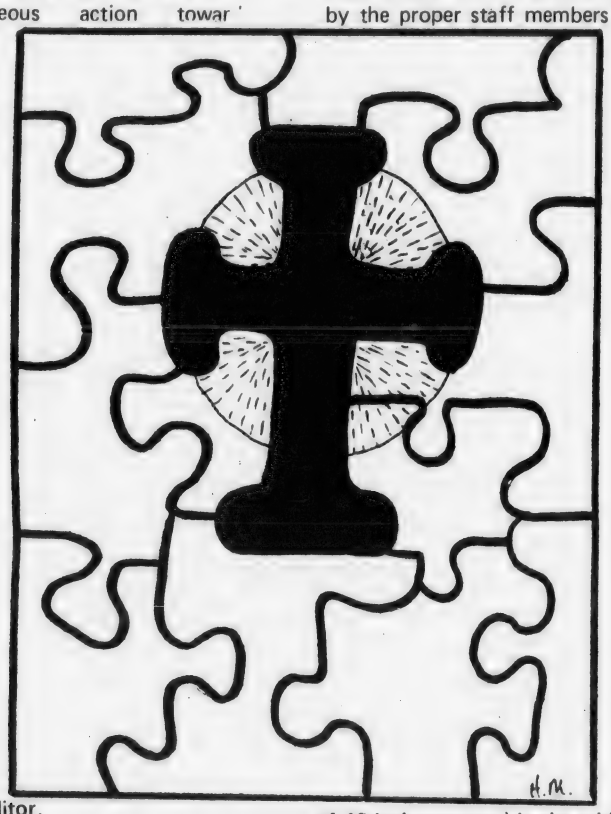
The college has moved more swiftly to fill the current vacancy in the campus pastor's office than it has for any such vacancy in my tenure at MC.

I am sure that, if you or anyone else has in mind a person who fulfills the requirements for the chaplain's position, who will perform the duties with excellence, and who is immediately available for the position, the search committee would be ecstatic to receive from you the name and phone number of that candidate.

Shalom,
David R. Cartledge

P.S. I will not comment on the theological and philosophical naivete which the rest of the editorial expressed.

Dr. Cartledge,



The P.S. to your letter is not only asinine but an immature ploy of condescension, of stab and retreat. Why even bother to say that you are not going to comment?

If your "non-comment" refers to the term "pre-planned" you may want to consider the fact that not everyone is hung up on the Calvinistic idea of pre-determination. Not for everyone are these two words synonymous. Did you plan any part of today yesterday? Surely you planned on being alive.

I realize that you may be able to extract every definition of every word ever written in religious texts, but faith comes from a different source. Jesus said that a child shall be the greatest in heaven, and no one is as "theologically naive" as a child. Perhaps the deeper ideas of the words in those books are the important things.

One's personal beliefs should not concern you unless they are being forced upon you or used in some dangerously disruptive manner. Neither of which abuses the editorial approached. Personal beliefs especially should not be subjected to such a shallow and senseless attack - an attack which makes a hypocritical mockery of your closing word.

Kathy Fitzell

Dear Editor,

It has been said many times that today's college students are successfully winning the Twentieth Century Hall of Fame award for the Most Likely to be Apathetic. Can we honestly argue the point?

I'm writing this letter to let you know that we have hope. And I never thought I would be saying it, but I think that hope rests on one man, Ronald Reagan. If Pres. Reagan does nothing else in his 4-year term, he may succeed in shocking us out of our apathy. That's right. We have a cause to fight. Get the Marines out of Lebanon NOW. The Arab-Israeli conflict is not our fight. The United States, as a superpower, has no business maintaining an armed peacekeeping force (A Reagan team of wildlife biologists and court jesters have recently determined that dove prefer nesting on the warm muzzles of 16-inch cannons.) in the midst of a conflict in which we openly support one of the adversaries, Israel. Syria is naturally feeling backed against the wall and will inevitably call in their allies, the Soviet Union. Men are dying and families are suffering needlessly. We can no longer stand for Reagan's patriotic brainwashing of America being God's crusaders against the evils of communism. Bonkers! Let Reagan take his paranoia back to the ranch.

Grenada, Lebanon, Central America. Where will it stop? Nov. '84 is too far away. Write your congressman. Write the President. Write your grandmother. Write anybody, write everybody. Get the Marines out of Lebanon and Honduras. We can fight now or we can fight later. Take your pick or hang the Apathy Award in full view.

Ed Welch

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fitzell

Assistant Editor ..... Kathy Fitzell

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Business Manager ..... Kathy Fitzell

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, student body, College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service, and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

MC Receives Unique Gift

The professional papers and library of the late Dr. Harold W. Henry, which span more than 20 years of research into American business management, have been given to Maryville College's Lamar Memorial Library.

The gift announcement was made jointly by MC's vice president for development, Robert A. "Archie" Ellis Jr., and Mrs. Exir Brennan, associate professor and director of the library.

Dr. Henry, a Blount County native and 1949 graduate of the College, was professor of industrial management at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville and one of the foremost researchers in the area of strategic management. He died this past May at age 56.

The gift includes Dr. Henry's entire collection of papers during his career as a professor and consultant in management, his notes as both a student and teacher, more than 1,000 clippings related to business management and back issues of major business journals.

Also included is a comprehensive library in strategic management, including a text Dr. Henry wrote on energy and management.

The gift comes at a particularly advantageous time for the College, Mrs. Brennan noted. During the 1982-83 academic year, the institution introduced a new major in management.

"This gift makes available to our students an enormous wealth of knowledge and research in this field," she explained. "Our students are already using the material."

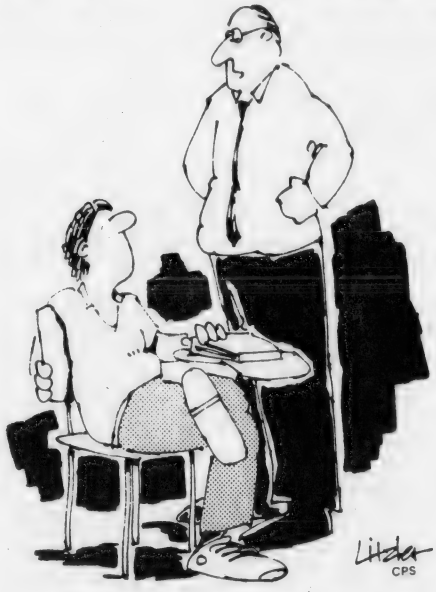
The gift was made to Maryville College partly because of Dr. Henry's long family ties with the institution. His great-great-grandfather was Gen. John Wilkinson, who came to Blount County as early as 1801.

Gen. Wilkinson's four sons--Edward Scott (Dr. Henry's great-grandfather), John Jr., Joseph Brady and Theophilus--all attended Maryville College, three of them under MC's founder, Dr. Isaac Anderson.

Dr. Henry's grandfather, Edward Lee Wilkinson, attended the Maryville College Preparatory School; and his mother, Carrie Wilkinson Henry, is a 1919 graduate of the College. His aunt, Catharine Wilkinson, who also graduated in 1919, taught French at the College for more than 50 years, the institution's longest teaching service.

Other family members who attended Maryville College include: Earl Wilkinson, uncle (class of 1929); Earl Henry, brother (1950); Patricia Henry Bleazey, daughter (1972); John E. Bleazey, son-in-law (1972); and Kelley Wilkinson Headrick, a first cousin of Dr. Henry's who is a student at MC now.

Dr. Henry's papers and library were given to MC also as a result of the efforts of Stephen A. LeMay, who joined the MC faculty this fall as instructor of economics. LeMay was a doctoral student under Dr. Henry as well as a close personal friend.



"Dr. Henry was a role model, particularly for the type of applied strategic management of which he was a master," LeMay explained. "My own research has been much influenced by Dr. Henry's."

LeMay is currently a doctoral candidate in transportation at UTK, with a minor in strategic management.

"Dr. Henry established an international reputation in the field of strategic management," LeMay continued. "He was one of the earliest to conduct research in this area and his work remains among the most comprehensive."

Strategic management, he said, is the area of manage-

See Henry, page 4

A LITTLE BIT EARLY IN THE YEAR TO START YOUR SENIOR SLUMP, MICHAEL.

Spring Into Acting

By Tommy Brown

Don Thomas, MC playhouse director, is currently getting together a cast and crew of over 50 students and staff for the spring Playhouse production of Dark of the Moon. The play is based on a Smoky Mountain folklore ballad about a witch boy who wants to become a human so that he can marry a girl from the town of Buck Creek. The story unfolds among the many characters in this small mountain village until the climax at an old timey revival.

The show will be presented as part of the Knoxville, Blount County Dogwood Arts Festival in April. Any member of the Maryville College community is welcome to audition for the show. The auditions for the chorus roles will be held on Thursday, January 19 at 4:00 p.m. in the Theatre. There are also many behind the scene jobs that need to be filled. For more information about the show, the audition process, or other jobs contact Don Thomas, Tommy Brown, or any Playhouse member.

Going To CIV Means Murder

The movie "Ragtime" will be shown at Maryville College on Friday, Jan. 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the MC Theatre as part of the College's winter Community Issues and Values series.

The film has historical value to MC and the community because it begins with Harry K. Thaw, the son of an early benefactor of the College, murdering Stanford White, a celebrated architect.

"Ragtime" is a 1981 release and stars James Cagney, Howard Rollins, Mary Steenbergen and Elizabeth McGovern.

The film and the remaining CIV's this term are free and open to the public.

On Wednesday, Jan. 25, Ken Greenwood, a member of Tennessee Common Cause, and Paul DeLeon, a member of the Tennessee Valley Authority Energy Coalition, will present a lecture discussing TVA's future role. Their talk, "Fifty Years of the Tennessee Valley Authority," is scheduled for 9:20 in the FAC Music Hall.

Dr. Russell Parker, professor of history at MC, will present a lecture entitled "An Assessment of Lincoln's Stature as President,"

See CIV, page 4

Ministerial Fund Established

A $25,000 scholarship fund has been established at Maryville College to honor the Rev. Earle W. Crawford and his wife, Helen Crawford, both of Wichita Falls, Texas, according to Robert A. "Archie" Ellis, Jr., MC's vice president for development.

The scholarship was established by Mr. and Mrs. Orion A. Daniel, also of Wichita Falls, who were members of that city's First Presbyterian Church when the Rev. Crawford was its pastor.

The Crawford scholarships will be given on an annual basis to deserving students, with preference to juniors and seniors planning careers in the ministry.

The Rev. Crawford was graduated from Maryville College in 1935. He holds graduate degrees from Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary and Princeton Theological Seminary. He was ordained to the ministry in 1938 in Knoxville.

He served pastorates at Kirkwood and Second Presbyterian Churches in Knoxville before serving as pastor at First Presbyterian Church of Wichita Falls. He retired from the church in 1978 after more than 28 years as pastor.

The Rev. Crawford now serves as chaplain of Presbyterian Manor, a retirement home in Wichita Falls built

See Scholarship page 4

Scots Suffer Close Defeat

By Chris Porter
Echo Sports' Editor

Since returning from winter break, the men's varsity basketball team has defeated Eastern Mennonite, 75-59, and Hampden-Sydney, 63-56, upping their record 6-4 for the season. Paul Mills was the lead scorer for the Scots, netting 18 points, with Dan "Stix" Kirkpatrick following closely with 17 in the game against Mennonite. Tom Robinson was the high scorer against H-S, hitting 18.

Because this is the second issue of The Echo to come out since the opening of the season in November, I have provided the following recap: MC lost to Centre, 56-71, with Kirkpatrick hitting 14, and Paul Mills with 13; MC lost to Oglethorpe, 53-56, with DeAngelo McDonald racking up 19; MC won against Warren Wilson in the Dr. Pepper Classic, 98-68, with Stix accounting for 21 and Tyrone Matthews hitting 18; also in the Classic, MC defeated Fisk, 61-54, Stix coming up with 18. MC defeated Emory & Henry 65-64, McDaniel hitting 25, including the game winning bucket; MC beat Centre 66-60, with McDaniel hitting 20. MC dropped two to Catholic, 71-75, and 63-71 in successive games.

The Men's Varsity Basketball team lost a close one to Lynchburg Saturday night, 48-45 in an ODAC game. The Scots came out of the locker room after halftime with a one point deficit, 25-24, and came back to lead by six before losing their momentum. Lynchburg caught up and traded goals with the Scots until they got the lead, 46-45. With eight minutes left, the Lynchburg offense began stalling tactics and held MC scoreless for the rest of the game. Lynchburg's Robbie Meyers hit two more free-throws to put the score at 48-45.

Coach Lambert said the loss was disappointing. "You can't expect to win shooting 33% (Lynchburg shot 48%) from the field or without scoring for the last eight minutes of the game," he said. MC's leading scorer was Tom Robinson, hitting 13, the only Scot in double figures for the day.

About the upcoming games against non-conference Lee College, Bryan College and Fisk University Lambert is hopeful: "We're getting a chance to work our starting line in practice, due to healing injuries. This will help our timing and improve offensive performance."

The Scots' next home game will be Saturday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. following the J.V. game at 1:00 p.m. Come out and support the Scots!

Ladies Drop Two

By Brian Rigell
Echo Sports Writer

The Lady Scots' basketball team finds themselves in a grim situation after losing their last two games, which brings their season record to 2-9. Turnovers seem to be the biggest problem the team has at this time with a total of sixty-two in the last two games.

On Thursday the squad travelled to Chattanooga to play Tennessee Temple and returned home with a 58-49 loss. Mimi Chesney with 14 points and 8 rebounds combined with Sara Covington with 14 points led the Lady Scots. On a down note, the whole team combined for a total of 37 turnovers which seriously hampered the Lady Scots' offensive production. The team continued to have its ball-handling problems on Saturday in Memphis against Southwestern. The Lady Scots turned the ball over 25 times in a game in which they were up by eight at the half only to wind up losing 53-44. However, all was not a lost cause, for Sara Covington played an excellent game with 21 points, 9 rebounds and 8 (that's right eight) rejections of SW shots.

The Lady Scots will play at home on the 21st against Bryan at 5:30 and on the 24th against Fisk at 6:30. They need your support, so come on out and watch your Lady Scots play some roundball.

Scholarship from page 3

by his former church. He is also active in higher education and civic affairs, having served on the board of Trinity University in San Antonio, the Menaul School in Albuquerque, N.M., and the Wichita Falls Boys Club and Child Welfare Board.

Orion A. Daniel, who established the scholarship with Mrs. Daniel, is a retired geologist. He earned his Bachelor of Science degree in geology from the University of Oklahoma in 1930. The Daniels live in Wichita Falls and have a son who resides in Charlotte, N.C.

Accept Challenge

Copeland Hall versus the Faculty, Staff and Administration in Volleyball Thursday, January 26, at 7:00 p.m.

If there are any interested Faculty, Staff or Administrators, please contact Mary Jane Burnette or Kim Compton in Copeland Hall room 402 or by Post office boxes 2077 or 2577.

There is a $.50 admission charge. Please come and join in the fun.

CIV from page 3

on Wednesday, Feb. 1 . This program will be presented at 9:20 a.m. in the Center for Campus Ministry.

The Georgia Chamber Consortium -- an oboe, cello and piano trio -- will present a concert featuring both solo and chamber literature from all periods. The 8:15 p.m. program will be presented in the FAC Music Hall on Tuesday, Feb. 7, as part of the 1983-84 Performing Artist Concert/CIV series.

On Friday, Feb. 10, at 8 p.m. Phyllis Boyens -- guitarist, singer, songwriter, and actress -- will perform traditional folk and labor music and her own compositions in the Center for Campus Ministry.

Dr. Bruce Carney, assistant professor of astronomy at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will present a program on "Other Worlds in Our Solar System." The lecture, sponsored by the Harlow Shapley program, is designed to present a modern view of the cosmos and strengthen interest in astronomy. This CIV is scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 15 at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

"The Atomic Cafe," a film relating the popular view of nuclear war in the 1950s, will be shown as the Wednesday, Feb. 22, CIV program. The film, made up of footage from government films and news clips, will be presented at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Elizabeth Thach and Jim Carpenter will close the winter CIV series with a presentation entitled "Land Between the Lakes." Thach will lecture on the TVA-owned historical settlement in Kentucky, Carpenter will discuss internship possibilities with the project. The program is set for Wednesday, March 7, at 9:20 a.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

Henry from page 3

ment concerned with long-range corporate planning.

"Dr. Henry studied 95 of America's top corporations and charted the strategic management of these businesses over a span of 20 years," LeMay explained. "This scope of research is truly unique in his field. He drew his research from actual corporate situations."

After graduating from MC in 1949, Dr. Henry went to the University of Kentucky where he planned to work on his master's degree in physics. There he met his future wife, Zerma Henry. The Henrys soon came back to Blount County where he taught at Everett High School in Maryville from 1950-52.

From 1952-60, Dr. Henry put his physics education to work at Oak Ridge where he was employed at Union Carbide. He finished his master's degree in industrial management at UTK in 1959.

Next he entered the University of Michigan where he earned his Ph.D. degree in business administration in 1965. In the meantime, he worked as a radiation physicist at the University of Michigan from 1960-64. Always the pioneer, Dr. Henry became one of the first certified health physicists in the country.

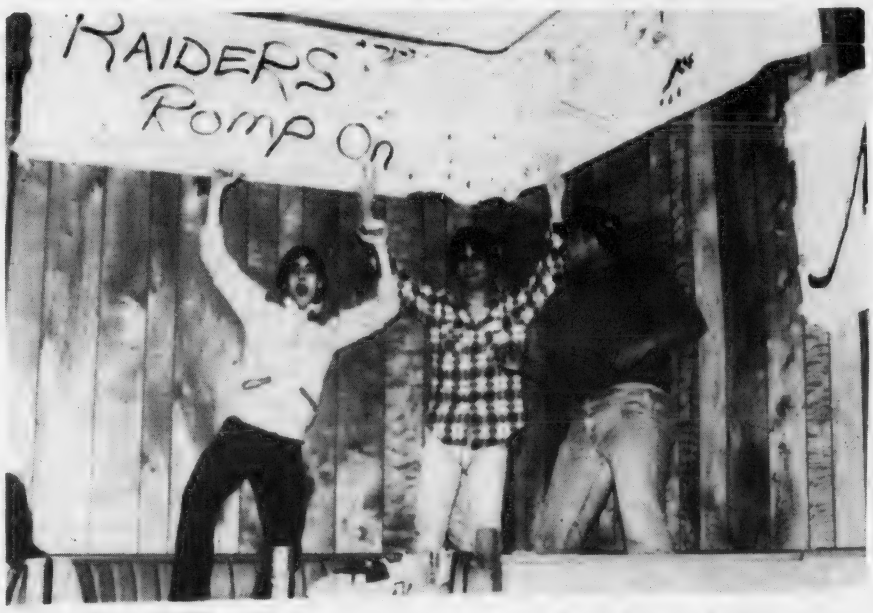
He taught briefly at Michigan before returning to UTK in 1965. He was associate professor and then professor of industrial management until his death this past spring.

The Highland Echo

Vol. 69 No. 12 | Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee | Thursday, January 26, 1984

Students Digest Info At Lunch

The nationwide Great Decisions program, the 30th annual foreign policy discussion program sponsored locally for the eight year by the Maryville College World Concerns Committee, will run for seven weeks.



Two discussion groups will meet each week throughout the program. One group will meet on the MC campus in the Proffitt Dining Room from noon to 1 p.m. each Thursday. The other group will meet at the Asbury Acres Retirement Center in Maryville from 4 to 5 p.m. on Wednesdays, beginning Jan. 25.

Stephen LeMay, instructor in economics at MC and former Russian specialist in Air Force Intelligence, led the initial discussion on Jan. 19 on the "USSR under Andropov."

On Jan. 26 Melba Petree, a junior at MC from Maryville who spent last fall term studying Spanish and living with a family in Mexico, will lead the discussion on "Central America, Mexico and US."

"South Africa" is the topic for Feb. 2. Dr. Ed Steinhart, a specialist in African history who formerly taught in Zambia and Kenya, and Rethabile Masilo, a junior at MC from Lesotho, a country entirely surrounded by the Republic of South Africa, are the discussion leaders for this session.

Scott Brunger, assistant professor of economics at MC who formerly taught and worked in West Africa, and Debbie McCarter Brunat, a freshman from Sevierville who is doing her Independent Study on "Capital Flows in the International Banking System," will lead the Feb. 9 discussion on the "International Debt Crisis."

Raiders' fans celebrate their team's decisive victory over the Washington Redskins on Superbowl Sunday.

The discussion on "Saudi Arabia and Jordan" on Feb. 16 will be led by Fahed Shawwa, MC sophomore from Amman, Jordan, and Ibrahim Al-Mutiwia and Abdulrahman Al-Abboud, both MC freshmen from Saudi Arabia.

Dr. Young-Bae Kim, MC professor of political science, will lead the discussion on "China and the U.S." on Feb. 23.

"International Drug Traffic" is the topic for March 1. Discussion leader is MC senior Scott Dixon from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., who is writing an Independent Study on "The Underground Economy in the USA" of which the drug trade froms a part.

Topics are covered in depth in the Great Decisions program book, available for $6 in the MC bookstore in Fayerweather Hall.

Following each week's hour-long meeting, participants will record their views on ballots provided in the program book. The ballots will then be sent to the Foreign Policy Association to be tabulated along with ballots from the Great Decisions program across the country. The results are disseminated among various levels of government for review by top government officials.

Student Poll
Is M.C. Too Conservative?

By Peggy Millsaps
Echo Staff Writer

The Random House College Dictionary defines "conservative" as "disposed to preserve existing conditions, institutions, etc., and to resist change"; "liberal" as "favorable to progress or reform."

Recently the Echo polled students to see how they define MC, as liberal or conservative, considering MC's size and location.

Respondents leaned heavily in favor of liberal. A succint, anonymous reply "liberal - that's good," was countered by an anonymous "too liberal" with no further explanation.

Arthur Wood, freshman, called MC "liberal - because of the liquor laws, co-ed dorms, and overall attitudes toward politics in general."

Kimberly Spargo, freshman, extended her definition of liberal and MC as liberal to include quality of instruction: "When I think of the word "conservative,' I think of 'stagnant' or 'incapable of effective change.' Maryville College is definitely not stagnant, for it is filled with professors full of vitality. . . I believe that MC is liberal because it has more vivacious professors than stagnant ones."

Those who defined MC as conservative did so with no further justification of their responses, although one student's definition ran the gamut: "Liberal hippie teachers from the 60's, conservative students."

Another student side stepped the issue altogether: "I don't think it can be classified as either."

Campus Calendar

Thursday, January 26

6:30 p.m. Ladies Basketball vs. Sewanee - home

Friday, January 27

Men's Basketball vs. Bridgewater - away

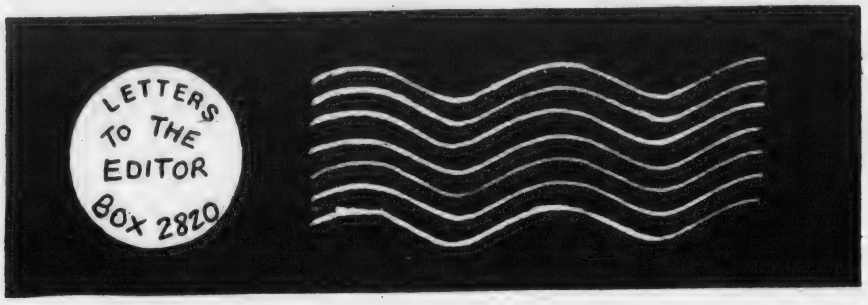
Saturday, January 28

Men's Basketball vs. Eastern Mennonite - away

Sunday, January 29

7:00 p.m. - Vespers CCM

Orange and Garnet night



Monday, January 30

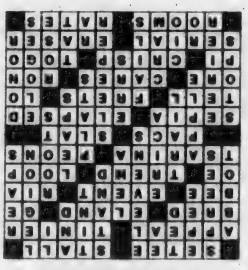
Men's Basketball vs. Washington & Lee - away

Wednesday, February 1

9:20 a.m. - CIV "An Assessment of Lincoln's Stature as President," - CCM

10:30 a.m. - Midweek Worship - Fellowship of Christian Athletes - CCM

Dear Editor and General Public,



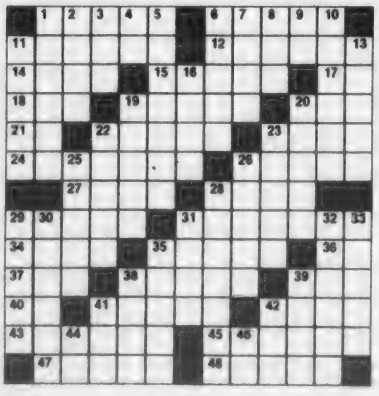
WAIT! Don't throw this paper on the ground our campus has a big enough trash problem and does not need a copy of the Echo to add to it. Everyday when I walk to class I cringe at the site of all the cups, beer cans, paper, etc. that has been impolitely deposited on the ground. Everyday there is more trash that has been dumped by some very inconsiderate person.

I've heard many excuses for litering such as there wasn't a trash can near-by or the philosophy that some person (usually said in a derogatory tone) is paid to pick up others waste. Such beliefs are very exemplative of our great American values and ideals. Americans are so busy pursuing money that they don't have time to take a minute out of their life and throw an ugly piece of waste away. Americans also boost their ever upward ego by believing that some "lesser" human being is following them around picking up all the trash they leave behind. These values are very, very poor ones that need to be changed!

I make a conscious effort to pick up as much trash as possible everyday I walk to class, but the next day there is always more to be picked up. But I keep on collecting even though at times it seems almost useless to do so. But I practice what I preach because I don't want to live in a sea of waste. I don't want outsiders to think that along with this campus, are a bunch of slobs. But every time I walk in the parking lot around the dorms, etc. I am appalled at the lack of consideration a majority of this campus has toward each other. I shudder to think that those inconsiderate people will someday be out in the "real world" and keep on polluting our country. The time to change is now.

So don't throw this paper on the ground. Don't toss your beer cans out of the car in the parking lot when a trash can is near-by. Don't toss that test you failed on the ground. Don't throw that candy paper aside. Don't grind that disgusting cigarette butt on the pavement. DO keep all trash with you until you come upon a trash can. Do keep those beer cans in a paper bag to be thrown away. Do pick up trash you see on the ground, even if it's not yours! Do take on responsibilities for keeping our campus and environment clean. Think of the community, not just yourself. It will make you feel better knowing you enhance the environment and others instead of being rude! Consideration for your fellow man won't hurt anybody. It sure fits into my plan.

Peace
John W. Rush



Puzzle Answer

CROSS WORD PUZZLE

FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS
1 Mediterranean vessel
6 Bog down
11 Plea
12 Smaller
14 Raised
15 African antelope
17 Earth goddess
18 Insect
19 Occurrence
20 Inlet
21 Digraph
22 Inclination
23 Noose
24 Alexandra, e.g.
26 Mexican laborers
27 Moccasins
28 Lath
29 Cuttlefish
31 Passed by 34 Narrate
35 Stews
36 Behold!
37 Mineral
38 Concerns
39 King Arthur's lance
40 Greek letter
41 Brittle
42 African region
43 Soap opera, e.g.
45 Pencil part
47 Quarters
48 Evaluates

DOWN
1 Frolics
2 Fencing sword
3 Man's nickname
4 Diphthong
5 Football teams
6 Remain erect
7 Shade
8 Conjunction
9 Chinese mile
10 Vast throng
11 Monastery head
13 Harvests
16 Girl's name
19 Heath
20 Cheers
22 Spoor
23 Jumps
25 Fruit
26 Real estate maps
28 Railroad car
29 Ceases
30 Weirder
31 Transgresses
32 Encomiums
33 Giver
35 Falls short
38 Stuff
39 Flower
41 Labor org.
42 Make lace
44 Artificial language
46 Sun god

The Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jenny Fizzell

Assistant Editor ..... Marta Wittig

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Photographer ..... Keith Moore

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, student body, College administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Student Opinion
ACC Does Not Work

Anyone closely connected with Maryville College these days can easily see that our present governing system, the All College Council (ACC), simply doesn't work. Why not? Many different people have presented many different reasons, but one recurring factor pops up: student apathy. OK. Now that we've found the problem, let's work on solving it.

What the students at Maryville College need is a little force -- a strict supervising hand. They don't use their rights now through the ACC, so they must not want them badly. If these rights aren't being used, why waste the time and effort trying to preserve them? Take them away. Throw them out the window. Send them flying. Why not? The students won't care.

The next step is to rid ourselves of the current president, Dr. Anderson. I have nothing against the man, but he's just too nice to be an administrator. We need a little more force behind the office . . . Perhaps we could persuade Idi Amin to take over. Surely he would; he's in exile and has no country. He needs a college to call home. He could establish a nice little military dictatorship and implement some of his more famous practices here at Maryville.

Once we have a president, we will need to establish a Board of Directors. That shouldn't be very hard. Let's see . . . how about some ex-KGB officers? Yes, they would be perfect! And it wouldn't be too hard to lure them away from their present jobs; after all, people will do anything if the money is right.

We will need a constitutional revision. The Board of Directors would have no trouble drawing up a document based on that of the Soviet Union. But wouldn't that border on democracy (CURSES! HORRORS!)? Of course not. The constitution would simply give all power to the president and the Board of Directors. Would the students have freedom? Of course they would have freedom-- to serve the college well and to live up to its standards of being dutiful, bland, apathetic people.

We will surely need a squad of enforcers to make sure the students don't step out of line. Ex-Salvadoran death squads would fill the position nicely. They would have orders to stalk and exterminate any student cuaght sledding down the Dorm I hill on cafeteria trays and ambush all secret society gatherings (because everyone knows that they are subversive and contrary to the College's philosophy).

What about lesser crimes? Violations of dorm quiet hours, talking in the library, and skipping classes require some sort of punishment. We could adopt the philosophies of Castro's prison system. You know, it's the one that says, "the less serious the offense, the greater the punishment." Ex-Nazi war criminals could be employed as guards and could implement new forms of torture. Maybe frequent beatings, unheated cells, and Chinese water torture would keep the prisoners in line.

Since Maryville is a religious school we would need a campus minister like the Ayatolla Khomeni. Yes, he would keep the sexes segregated, make the women wear veils, and eliminate drinking and drugs.

But what if the students don't like their new form of government? Well, there's always hope that they will start to care -- one way or the other. And the possibility of a revolution and return to the old system might just make them care. Maybe even enough to make it work the next time around.

Frazier Receives Award

Nickie Frazier, a Maryville College student from Kingsport, Tenn., has been selected to receive a 1983-84 Southern District American Alliance for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance (AAHPERD) Student Leadership, Scholarship Service Award.

Miss Frazier, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Frazier, is a senior physical education major at MC. A pitcher for the Lady Scots softball team, she is a two-year starter and captain of this year's team. Her other activities include serving as women's basketball manager and participating in various intramural sports.

Maryville College is representing the state of Tennessee this year as an award site. Only one institution from each of the 13 states which comprise AAHPERD is selected annually for the award.

The recipient, chosen by the physical education department, must be a deserving graudating (undergraduate) senior and must have demonstrated student leadership, scholarship and service to the department, university and profession.

Purpose of the award is to honor and reward a deserving student and also to encourage young professionals and sponsoring institutions to become active ly involved and committed to AAHPERD and the Southern District.

Miss Frazier will receive a certificate of honor, a two-year prepaid AAHPERD membership and subscriptions to various physical and health education periodicals for two years.

Paul Anagnostis, Amy Blanc and Helen Smith were revealed as Mr. and Miss MC. The announcement was made Saturday night during the high-pitched revelry of the Basketball Homecoming dance.

How Much Will M.C. Cost?

Tuition for the 1984-85 academic year at Maryville College will not increase, MC President Wayne Anderson announced

The only planned change in costs at Maryville next year is a moderate increase of $175 in room and board charges, Dr. Anderson added.

"It is very unusual for an institution not to increase tuition. However, the decision to maintain tuition at the 1983-84 level was reached in order to make the College even more attractive to students who seek the highest quality undergraduate education at a reasonable cost," he explained.

Coupled with the plans to maintain current tuition charges are those to provide "extremely attractive financial aid to assist with the expense of tuition, room and board," Director of Admissions Larry West commented.

"Based on the current year's pattern and after taking financial aid into account, it is estimated that the average cost to new students enrolling at the College next fall will be about $1,300 making Maryville College tremendously attractive in comparison with other institutions," West said.

The average student financial aid package for new students next year is projected to be $5,400 out of a total expense of $6,745, of which $4,300 will go for tuition costs, according to West.

Maryville College will continue to meet 100 percent of a student's financial needs as determined by the Financial Aid Form, he added.

Currently approximately 70 percent of all MC students receive some financial aid in the form of scholarships, grants, loans, campus employment or a combination of these. The College's Presidential Scholarship program offers three levels of academic awards, ranging from half-tuition to full direct cost.

For additional information, contact West at 615-982-6412, ext. 310.

Ladies Meet With Victory

By Brian Rigell
Echo Sports' Writer

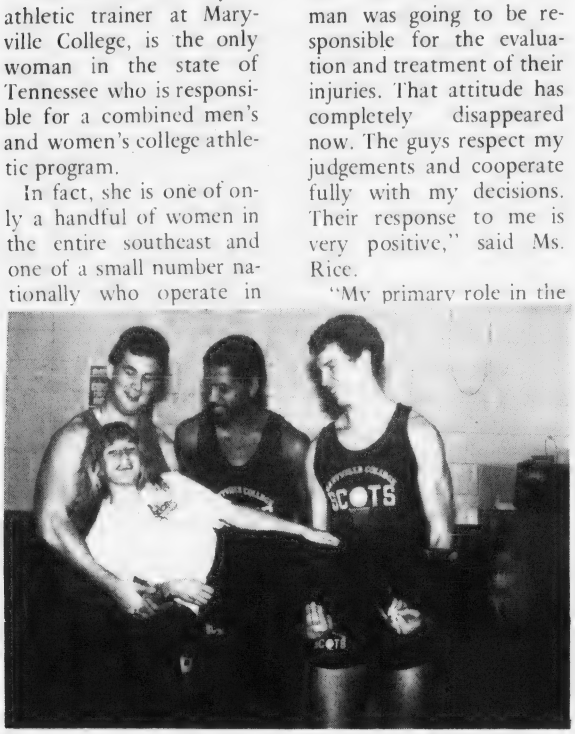
The Lady Scots' basketball team is feeling a lot better now that the digits in the win colmn have begun to move up. Improving their record from 2-7 (not 2-9 as reported last week-sorry, Ladies) to 4-8 has boosted the morale of the team a great deal.

The team squeezed by King 58-57 last Tuesday and only avoided another loss by forcing a jump ball in the final seconds. Sara Covington (15 pts.), Trina Coggins-Fancher (14 pts.), and Kathy Pennington (12 pts.) led the Lady Scots offensive surge.

On Friday the team travelled to Centre College and returned home with a 95-81 loss. Once again Sara Covington led the team with 21. Also in double figures were Mimi Chesney (20 pts.) and Penny Head (10 pts.).

The Lady Scots returned home to face Bryan for the Basketball Homecoming and came away 70-61 winners. Trina Coggins-Fancer led with 16. Mimi Chesney (15 pts.), Sara Covington (13 pts., 10 rebounds), Robin Simmons (10 pts.), and Kathy Pennington (10 pts.) aided the Maryville cause. Coach Brenda Cooper said, " It sure is good to win," and attributed the win to "making clutch free throws in the final minutes."

Future home games include Sewanee on the 31st and Lincoln Memorial University on the 2nd. The Lady Scots want to see you, so show up and let them know they've got your support.



Lady Scots improved win record by two over the weekend.

Rice - Outstanding in Her Field

Vanessa Rice, first-year athletic trainer at Maryville College, is the only woman in the state of Tennessee who is responsible for a combined men's and women's college athletic program.

In fact, she is one of only a handful of women in the entire southeast and one of a small number nationally who operate in this capacity, according to National Athletic Trainers Association personnel.

The positive attitude of male athletes toward MC athletic trainer Vanessa Rice is seen here as she has some fun with (L to R) football player Larry Winter and basketball players Deangelo McDaniel , and Dan Kirkpatrick.

Since August, 23 - year-old Vanessa Rice has had responsibility for the prevention and rehabilitation of sports-related injuries for nine different teams, which involve nearly one third of the student population at MC this year.

How have the athletes received her?

"When I first arrived at Maryville this past summer, a lot of the male athletes were uncomfortable with the fact that a woman was going to be responsible for the evaluation and treatment of their injuries. That attitude has completely disappeared now. The guys respect my judgements and cooperate fully with my decisions. Their response to me is very positive," said Ms. Rice.

"My primary role in the athletic department here at Maryville is to take every precaution to ensure the prevention and subsequent reoccurrence of injuries," said Ms. Rice.

A series of pre-season physical examinations is standard procedure for every athlete at Maryville. "Orthopedic surgeons perform joint stability tests and muscle strength tests in order to determine weaknesses that we can help strengthen at the beginning of the season."

"In addition, complete general physical examinations are given, and I do a series of flexibility tests on each athlete. I think that results from each of these three areas give us a good basis for preventative action."

Ms. Rice explained that once an injury does occur, an evaluation must be made to determine if the athlete is ready to participate in a practice or game situation. "Giving immediate and necessary care once an injury has occurred is a critical step in the rehabilitation process."

The new MC trainer is well qualified to give this immediate care. She holds a B.S. degree in health sciences from West Chester (Pa.) State College and the M.A. in health and physical education from Morehead State University.

She is also a certified Emergency Medical Technician and holds American National Red Cross certification in cardiopulmonary resuscitation and multi-media first aid. Her practical experience includes three years as a student trainer at WCSC and a year as a graduate assistant trainer at Morehead State.

While an intern at the Temple University Center for Sports Medicine and Science in 1982, she gained experience working with three professional athletes: basketball player Darrell Dawkins, then with the Philadelphia 76ers and now with the New Jersey Nets, and heavyweight boxers Pinklon "Pinky" Thomas and Randy "Tex" Cobb.

Having come to Maryville from a large university program, Ms. Rice believes there are several advantages to working as an athletic trainer at a small college.

"First there's not a lot of pressure to get the athlete back to practice as quickly, so there's more time for adequate recovery," she noted. "Also, the atmosphere here at Maryville has a low stress factor which keeps the athlete more relaxed and, therefore, less susceptible to injury. I think that each athlete receives more individual attention which is very important in maintaining and monitoring his or her health."

"Also, I feel as though I have strong support for the athletic training program from the administration and the entire coaching staff. Furthermore, the assistance and cooperation I've received from area doctors has been exceptional. When a problem develops, I feel like all I have to do is to pick up the phone to find a solution. They've all been extremely willing to donate their time."

Scots Dribble Over Bryan

By Chris Porter
Sports' Editor

The MC varsity basketball squad went 1-1 this week, losing at Lee College, 64-60, and blowing away the Bryan Lions, 90-

In the Lee game, Dan Kirkpatrick came up with 19 points to lead MC's scoring. Following were Tyrone Matthews with 11, and Paul Mills with 10.

The game was close, but due to some missed free-throws, the Scots were out-scored by two points per half.

The situation was a bit different here Saturday when the Scots put forth, according to Coach Lambert, "their best team effort of the season."

Throughout the game, the Scots dominated Bryan, leading 49-30 at the half. The Scots had 43 total rebounds as opposed to Bryans' 26, showing a clear dominance of the boards.

Tom Robinson, who, as Lambert put it, "played as if possessed," lead MC scoring with 21 points, and also lead in rebounds, getting 11. Kirkpatrick followed with 17 points and 10 rebounds; DeAngelo McDaniel hit 16 points, and Matthews hit 14. Lambert also praised Kirkpatrick for playing two excellent floor games.

Of the win, Coach Lambert commented, "I hope that will give us confidence to prepare for our first long ODAC road trip."

After playing Fisk College in Nashville, the Scots will travel to Bridgewater, Eastern Mennonite, and Washington & Lee. They will need to win the conference games, if they want to be considered ODAC contenders.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 13 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, February 2, 1984

Aid down $2 Billion During Reagan Era

WASHINGTON, D.C. (CPS)

Financial aid for college students has plummeted 21 percent - over $2 billion - since the Reagan administration took office in 1980, according to a just-released study by the College Board.

From a high of $18 billion in 1981-82, the amount of financial aid available for students has dropped to a low of just over $16 billion for the current academic year.

"And that $2 billion decline is even greater when inflation is taken into account," notes College Board spokeswoman Janice Gams. "Aid had been cut by one-fifth in inflation-adjusted terms."

Much of the decline is due to cuts the Reagan administration and Congress have made in Social Security benefits for college students, stricter limits on Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) eligibility, and a post-Vietnam War drop in the use of veteran's benefits.

In addition, the study reports "a switch in the trend from grants to loans which has been remarkable," Gams says.

In 1970-71, for instance, grants accounted for nearly two-thirds of all financial aid, while loans and work-study benefits accounted for the other third.

By 1975-76, grants constituted over 80 percent of all financial aid expenditures, loans 17 percent, and College Work-Study three percent.

For the current year, however, loans and grants each account for 48 percent of student aid, and College Work-Study the remaining four percent.

At a time when college financial aid experts are growing increasingly concerned about the level of long-term debt college students are incurring, the decline in the amount of available grant money promises to have far-reaching implications.

At the same time, "the early 1980s have seen a major change in the relationship of costs, income and aid for college," the report says. "Adjusted for inflation, costs have increased, but income and financial aid per full-time equivalent student have not."

"Thus," the study concludes, "in contrast to what can be said generally about the past two decades (when income and financial aid awards actually stayed ahead of college costs), college has become relatively more difficult for families to afford in the 1980s."

But the results of "Trends in Student Aid: 1963-83" should also "be put in the context of how much financial aid has really grown over the past years," Gam suggests.

The federal role in financial aid has indeed swelled in the last two decades, from 40 percent to 80 percent of all aid assistance.

Financial aid from all sources -- federal, state, and institutions -- has skyrocketed from only $546 million in 1963-64 to $4.5 billion in 1970-71 to a high of $18 billion in 1981-82, the study says.

Except for the last three years, student aid increased five times faster than college spending in the last 20 years.

Tuition and room and board at private schools has increased from $2105 to $8537 in the last two decades, while the cost of attending a public school rose from $1026 to $3403 over the same period, the study says.

Ladies Swamp Sewanee

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots are continuing their winning ways on the basketball court and as a result they find their record at 6-8. The team picked up two wins this week, on at home and one on the road.

The Lady Bulldogs from Fisk came to town Tuesday and went back home with a 59-52 loss. The game, which according to Coach Cooper was "very physical", might be better described as a controlled mugging - which sometimes made roller-derby look like a non-contact sport. Kathy Pennington, injured on the first play of the second half, is just now returning to action.

On Saturday the squad travelled to Bryan to take on the Lady Lions and managed to pull out a closee one 64-61. Outstanding peraged to pull out a close aged to pull out a close one 64-61.

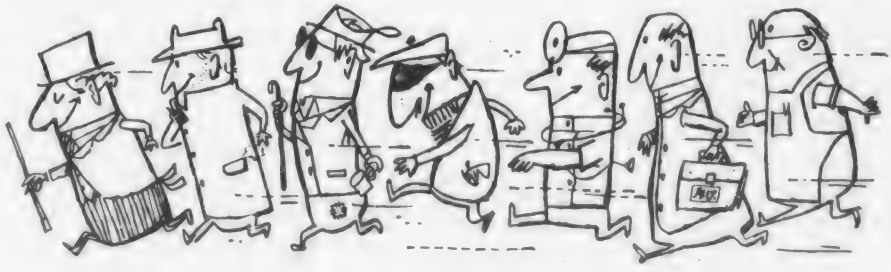
Outstanding performances turned in by the Lady Scots include Pam Gunter (9 pts., 13 rebs. vs. Fisk) and Trina Fancher (23 pts., 14 rebs. vs. Bryan). Coach Cooper described Pam's effort as "an excellent game" and had nothing but praise for Trina's effort which she said was "the best game Trina's ever played."



Selective Service

Administrator Donald Elberly believes that by 1990 all 18 year-olds will be subject to a draft, but will get to choose between serving in the military or in a community or nationwide non-military project.

Eberly suggested the Peace Corps, or working in hospitals, day care centers and nursing homes might be among the alternatives.

He says the draft might be necessary to bring down high youth unemployment levels.

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, meanwhile, vetoed a bill that would have denied state student aid to students who hadn't registered for the draft.

EDITORIAL

American Students don't know what they are missing. In developing and third world countries, student activists have been harassed, arrested, tortured and assassinated. Students have been denied the right to organize and participate in academic governing bodies.

As they struggle alongside their peoples for "peace, disarmament, national independence, democracy, social progress, the reform and democratization of education,and respect for students rights," we languish in apathy, ignoring the rotting foundations of our country.

We cannot justify our apathy with excuses - there are none. If we are to be authentic human beings, we must shed the malignant coat of apathy and put on action. Don't wait for others to learn to swim in the waters of conflict; it may be too late to save you when they do.

the Highland ECHO

Editor ..... Marta Wittig

Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Photographer ..... Keith Moore

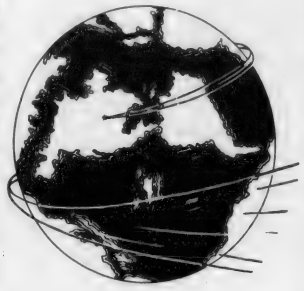
Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

ABROAD!

By Peggy Millsaps

Picture yourself as a pub worker in Dublin, a baker in Munich, a bartender in Cambridge, or a hotel clerk in Berlin. Such wistul aspirations need no longer be confined to fantasy. If a "working vacation" abroad appeals to you, consider the resources of the council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE).

CIEE is, the largest student travel organization in the United States. Their Work Abroad program, the only of its kind in the U.S., operates in conjunction with cooperative student organizations abroad to help students obtain temporary jobs in Great Britain, Ireland, France, New Zealand, and Germany.



Aside from a program fee of $60, the student's only significant expense is airfair- an expense that can be reduced by the Councils' special student and youth fares.

Once abroad, students are on their own. The student receives a work permit and handbook containing general information on jobs and housing, both of which students are expected to find on their own. Jobs are largely unskilled, at about the same level as vacation jobs in the States. But program participants say that the sense of challenge and independence they gain offsets any initial apprehension at not having a pre-planned job and housing arrangement.

Living abroad temporarily under these conditions is an adventure, to say the least, and certainly not for everyone. But if waitressing in London or picking fruit in Avignon appeals to you more than frying hamburgers in the States, write for further information and application forms to:

CIEE, PR-WA, 205 East 42nd Street, New York, NY 10017

(See CIEE's catalog in Career Planning and Placement).

FEATURE

By Mike Bell

Did you ever wonder who the helpful people in the Registrar's office and the Financial Aid office are and what kind of jobs they do?

Ms. Susan Whitehead is the Registrar's Assistant. She has been working in the Registrar's office since July 1978. She began working at MC in 1975 in the Development Office. Ms. Whitehead's job includes handling of the grades and transcripts. "I like my boss and my job well enough," she says "to commute from Clinton (70 miles) everyday."

Mrs. Margaret Miller began work at MC in the early 60's. She worked for nearly 20 years in the Registrar's Office before retiring. Two years ago, Mrs. Miller began working part time in the registrar's office handling the CIV records and non-credit CE courses.

Ms. Martha Hess has been working at MC since August of 1974. Her job is to keep a permanent academic record of the college. This includes registration, dean's list, probation list, and uation. Ms. Hess says she enjoys working and interacting with the students and faculty.

The Registrar's office suggests that students read the college catalogue and schedule carefully. Using these as reference books, students could find answers to most of their questions.

As you walk into the Financial Aid office, the first person you meet in Ms. Jeanie Shill. She has been working as Financial Aid Assistant for a year and a half. Her responsibilities include dispersing the emergency loan funds and processing the GSL(Guaranteed Student Loan) applications. When asked what she enjoys about her work, Ms. Shill replied, " I like the college setting and meeting students."

Dan Perkins has been working as Director of Financial Aid since February 1979. He states that "The purpose of financial aid is to help students meet the cost of a college education." It is Mr. Perkins job to administer federal,state, and institutional aid programs.

Mr. Perkins offers these hints for successful financial aid application: Be sure that the proper form is completed by the deadline. Also, students should be aware of the different types of aid available and the necessary forms needed to apply for it.

Echo Ear

Go For It, Ant Man!

D.C. & P.H. (and D.) - Finally!

H.M. - Want a new shirt?

Vic - I've made no dangerous calls - M

Scholarship Bank

College students expecting to need financial aid or summer employment are urged to write now to The Scholarship Bank. According to the director, Steve Danz, private financial aid donors consider applications on a year-round basis and now is the best time to start looking for fall 84 aid. The Scholarship Bank will send each student a printout of up to 50 sources of aid that appear just right for each student based on his/her response to a questionnaire sent by the bank.

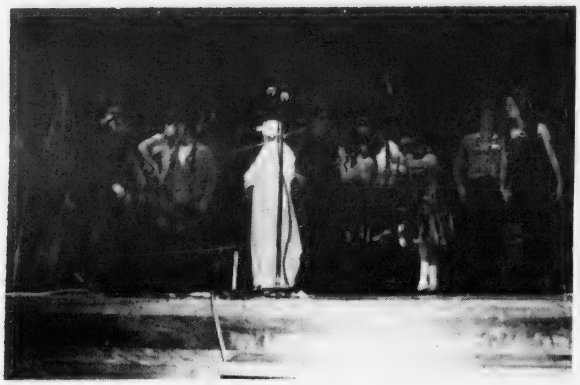
The Scholarship Bank is the largest organization in the U.S. devoted to finding private financial aid for students, and each year receives 10,000 requests for such information. According to the director, the bank supplements the work of the college financial aid office by finding private funding sources such as from civic, trade, educational and industry groups.

This year the bank has added 2,500 new summer employment jobs and urges students who wish to find summer work in their chosen professional fields to write for information. The director recently announced the introduction of a new computer, Victor 9000, to handle scholarship data and give students free yearly updated information.

Students with financial need should send a business-size, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 10100 Santa Monica Blvd, Los Angelos, CA. 900-67.

CAMPUS NEWS

By Marta Wittig



Dr. E. Fowler, Professor of English, with Brian McFarland, Maryville College Alumnus, are filling interim position of campus minister until a permanent one is approved. There are presently two candidates for the position, slated to begin March 9, one of which will be approved this week by Dr. Anderson.

Fowler began her educational career with her Bachelor's degree in Biology. She then went on to get her Divinity Degree from Vanderbilt University and her Masters and Ph.D. from the University of Tennessee in American Literature. Of her interim position as minister here, she says, "I'm happy to be here," adding that it's nothing new, and something that she's been doing for years.

Brian McFarland, assisting in the transition of ministers, will be staying until the first of May, after which he'll probably go to seminary. Commenting on Brian's position, Dr. Fowler says, "He's very happy to be here since this is the kind of work he may go into."

Orange and Garnet Night

By Teresa Hurst

Maryville College's traditional Orange and Garnet Night, Sunday, January 29, was a panorama of fun, excitement, and talent. Nick Vendetti and Chris Porter, masters of ceremonies, kept the show rolling with various bits of humor. Harry Harter, Robert Ramger, Leslie Nier, Larry West, and Wayne Anderson judged the acts. Results will be announced at a later date.

Kevin Robinson opened the show with his own "All My Tunnels", a crossover piece which was dedicated to Sandy Brennan. Trent Gilmore and Sonja Gilmore sang a duo of "I Celebrate My Love For You." Toko Masilo sang a song from the musical "Cats". She was accompanied on the piano by Trent Gilmore. Laura Hart sang "My Father's Eyes", with Don Brickey accompaning on piano. John Wright then exhibited his talent by singing "Ribbon in The Sky", accompanied by Trent Gilmore on piano.

Jim Stetnor provided comic relief with a joke. Brian McFarland was next on the agenda with a song he composed himself. The song is as of yet untitled, but it entailed moving about and traveling. "Dr. Wonderful" Wayne Anderson one of the judges, had his own act to contribute to the ensemble of talent. His act included several campus men being "changed" by several campus women. The next act consisted of a group called "Two Mice and a Friend" who sang a song about dead animals for their fish who had died this year. Then Lisa Van Divort signed to "Papa Can You Hear Me?", a song from Barbara Streisand's "Yentle."

... photographs by Keith Moore...

TKO, a lively, talented band knocked 'em out with some "kicking music", which consisted of "Talking in Your Sleep" and "Johnny Be Good." John Wright and Sonja Gilmore then sang a testimonial of "Lord Lift Us Up Where We Belong" which was accompanied by Trent Gilmore on piano. Peggy Sackett presented "Touch Me in The Morning" and was also accompanied on piano by Trent Gilmore. The next act, which did not quite get off the gound, was by "The Mask" and was entitled "July 16th, 1945-?" Well, maybe next time!

Nick Venditti passed some time by listing the top four heroes. Among those (in order) are Gandhi, Mr. T., Martin Luther King, Jr., and Jesus Christ.

"Why Not" then took the stage with their performance of "Can't Get Enough of Your Love", "Give Me Three Steps", and "Come Together". To wrap it up, TKO returned featuring Kevin Brown with some rapping. As an encore, Jeff Lee, of TKO, roused the crowd with "Hang Fire."

What To Do

By Amy Waggoner

What's the matter, Johnny? Got the mid-Winter Term blues? Hey, I know a way to get you cheered up. Let's go to Casa's for a Why Not. Oh - you don't have the money or gas to go all the way to Knoxville? Well, let's go to Sportsman's or the Beer Queer and get a brew. Still don't have the money, huh? What do you have the money to do? Nothing. OK. Look around - there are a lot of things in and around campus to do for free, believe it or not! Just use a little brain power and imagination. In case you're having problems getting started, here's a list of suggestions:

-Spend a night ghost hunting in Anderson Hall.
-Go to the Greenbelt and feed the ducks.
-Take a twilight walk in the College Woods.
-Go roller skaing or skateboarding down the corridors of Sutton.
-Watch the sunset from the faculty lounge windows in Fayerweather.
-Drag a friend along on a relaxing run.
-Go fly a kite.
-Play a practical joke on the person you love to hate.
-Watch a full moon or the stars from the field behind Lloyd.
-Write a poem or a love letter for Valentine's Day.
-Watch a good, steamy soap opera.
-Communicate with a friend.
-Think of 100 ways not to study.
-Perfect your imitations of various faculty and staff members.
-Read a short story.
-Lust over your favorite Playboy or Playgirl centerfold.
-Go jump in a lake.
-Give somebody a hug.
-Whatever you do, don't study!

Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble

Blues guitarist Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble will be performing at the University of Tennessee's Alumni Gym on Sunday, Feb. 5, at 8:00 P.M.

Stevie's Texas-based blues style has been compared with Jimi Hendrix and Eric Clapton. In the last year he has broken into the music scene in a legendary performance for the Rolling Stones, followed by an invitation to tour with David Bowie last summer.

Vaughn and Double Trouble became the first act without a recording contract to perform at the Montreux Switzerland Jazz Festival in 1983. There he met Bowie, and went on to play lead on "Let's Dance".

But he's not new to the industry. Born and raised in Dallas, he is the younger brother of Fabulous Thunderbird guitarist Jimmy Vaughn. After working the local blues scene, he left home and school at 17 and moved to Austin. His influences were Albert King, B.B. King and Ray Charles. His first album, with Double Trouble members Tommy Shannan and Chris Layton, "Texas Floor", was released last summer. It drew rave reviews and has catapulted the band from local to national acclaim.

Opening for Stevie Ray Vaughn and Double Trouble will be the Heart Fixers. Atlanta's number one bar band features the extraordinary blues guitar talent of Tinsley Ellis and the vocals of Chicago Bob Nelson.

Tickets are available at the UT Central Ticket Office at $5.00 for students and $7.00 for the general public.

The show is sponsored by the Campus Entertainment Board. For more information please call 974-5455.

ORDER YOUR VALENTINE

Tell your Sweetie(s) that you care with a V. Day "personal!" Just drop your message in Box 2820, with 25¢ attached, and it will be printed in a special V. Day issue. Submit as many as you like... the Deadline is Monday, February 6, 5:00 p.m.

Thanks!

Echo offers classified ads

The Echo is beginning a new personals/classified advertizing section with its next issue. The classified section is designed to help those buying or selling books, supplies, rugs, records, rides, typing skills, and other miscellaneous goods and services. The personals section is available for those extending congratulations (for birthdays, engagements, or awards), get-well wishes, or other announcements. Unless this service is abused, it will be offered free of charge; but please, try to keep the ads short (2-3 lines) and in good taste. The classified/personal section will observe a strict deadline of 10:30 am Monday. Anything coming in after that time will not appear until the next week. Ads may be placed in P.O. Box 2820, brought up to the Echo office (2nd floor Fayerweather Hall), or given to the editor.

"Thriller"

By Amy Waggoner

"I heard not a sound consciously. It seemed, rather, that I heard or felt somebody approaching. . . Suddenly I heard - or felt - a whisper, an unearthly hollow tone as one might hear in a cistern or huge metal tube. And through the door it came.

"It" is the only word I can use, for it had no definite form or shape. It seemed to be the contorted figure of a man and yet such a man was never seen upon this earth. A faint phophorescent glow emanated from its being and large gleaming eyes, set deep in two black voids, stared ahead, attempting to pierce the stygian darkness and peering searchingly into every nook.

I cannot say that it walked, for it seemed to float through the doorway, and a white flimsy mantle trailed behind in the breeze of its passing, serving to accentuate more than air or eeriness than to all earthliness to the form . . . "

Sounds like a paragraph out of a Stephen King novel about some supernatural happening somewhere far away, right? Well, it isn't. The excerpt was taken from a story by Weldon Hina, called "Whiskers." What makes "Whiskers" so unusual, though, is that it was written not about some creepy place in New England or a damp, musty castle in Europe, but about Anderson Hall. That's right - the Anderson Hall on the Maryville College Campus. Mr. Hina graduated from Maryville in 1932, and "Whiskers" was published in Focus, the alumni newsletter, in November, 1975.

According to legend and "Whiskers," the ghost of Anderson Hall is an old man whose leg was amputated, presumably during the Civil War, in another building on campus, and he was brought to Anderson to recover. A caretaker had promised to find the old man's leg and bring it to him, but apparently never did; the ghost, therefore, walks the corridors of Anderson searching for his lost leg.

Looking up at the pitch black windows of the third floor at night, any skeptic easily gets an uncertain feel- about the building, "It is so old - it could easily house a ghost." "Don't worry; I don't believe in supernatural phenomena, either - in the daytime." But when darkness falls and evil spirits come out to play. . . well, it's very difficult to say, "I don't believe in ghost."

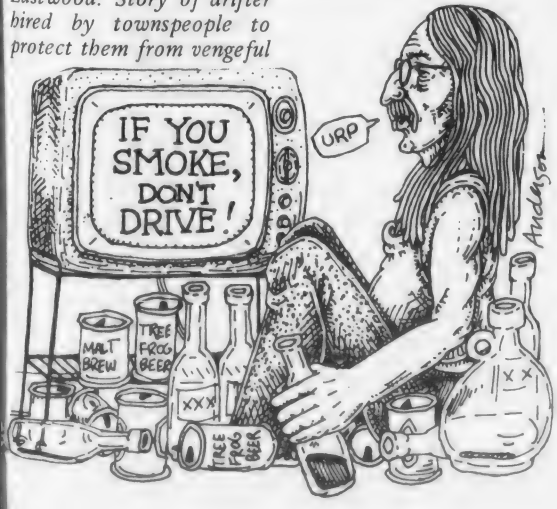
Since no one is in Anderson at night, we should all be safe - unless there are other ghosts on campus. And there are stories. After a girl committed suicide on the 4th floor of Pearsons, residents have reported hearing her walk the halls. The 4th floor was destroyed by fire in 1972, but student still report hearing the girl walk around on the ceiling at night. It's pretty harrowing at 2:00 a.m. when the rest of the dorm is soundly sleeping and only the non-human, the inhuman, and you are awake!

Legend has it that a boy and girl still walk the kissing steps in the dead of a foggy, moonless night. Morningside, the apartment building in the woods, is supposedly haunted by the ghost of Mrs. Walker, the original owner, and students reported seeing apparitions on the second floor of Davis Hall.

Of course, no one in his right mind would believe in ghosts on campus unless he sees them for himself-in the dead of night.

Photo by Tara Wey.

Saturday at the Movies WKCH 43 TV



8:30 AM - BOMBA THE JUNGLE BOY - Title of specific film TBA.

1:00 PM - THE GHOST & MR. CHICKEN, (1966). Don Knotts. Knotts stars as a would-be reporter seeking the big scoop.

3:00 PM - HIGH PLAINS DRIFTER, (1973). Clint Eastwood. Story of drifter hired by townspeople to protect them from vengeful outlaws who have just been released.

8:00 PM - ELMER GANTRY, (1960). Burt Lancsaster, Jean Simmons. Lancaster joins evangelist Jean Simmons, exploiting her touring show.

11:00 PM - HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, (1959).Peter Cushing, Christopher Lee. Conan Doyle Spellbinder.

Winter Beauty Alert

As winter weather fast approaches, don't hibernate! Take the time to adapt your beauty habits to the cold, wind and snow.

"Severe changes in weather conditions and air temperature can effect your pretty appearance," says Ralph Porto, president of Hazel Bishop Cosmetics, "so it's necessary to take extra precaution to avoid a weather-beaten look."

Here are some winter beauty tips from the experts at Hazel Bishop Cosmetics. . .

Your Face: Winter skin holds less moisture, and cold air drys it further. Winter weary complexions can try this steam treat: fill a basin with steaming hot water and sprinkle in a handful of loose camomile tea or other herbs. Loosely drape a towel over your head while steaming your face over the hot water for five to ten minutes. When done, splash with cold water. Be sure to cleanse your face at least one-half-hour before you intend to leave the house, it's less drying. And remember, moisturize often.

* Lips need protection too! All weather conditions rob your lips of their natural moisture, leaving them dry and chapped. Because your lips do not contain oil producing glands, make a conscious effort to keep them protected. You can minimize dryness with an application of No-Smear lipstick or Hazel Bishop's Naturally Clear Lipstick with vitamin E and sunscreen for extra protection.

Your Hands And Feet: Gloves and mittens alone won't keep your hands soft and pretty throughout the winter. Your best hedge against splits, cracks and ragged, dry cuticles is to keep your hands well-manicured. A do-it-yourself manicure will look like the real thing if you take the time to do it right. Start with a base coat to make your nails more resistant to breakage and to increase the longevity of your manicure; it also works as a smooth base for your polish. Then apply Hazel Bishop Porcelain Glaze chip-proof nail color. Be sure to apply a top coat to protect your nails from unexpected chips and for a professional, finished look. The skin on your hands is especially thin and prone to dryness and chapping. A monthly treat to condition hands, nails and cuticles is a one-half-hour soak in a pan of warm olive oil.

* Legs and feet need special care after being tucked away in woolen socks and knee-high boots every day. In addition to your weekly pedicure routine, try a special feet treat to keep your soles smooth and soft; apply petroleum jelly to the tops and bottoms of your feet, cover with cotton anklets and climb into bed. Your feet will be baby soft in the morning.

Your Body: Dress against the cold! Pay particular attention to your extremities on bitterly cold days and don't be embarrassed to wrap your muffler or turtleneck right up to your eyes covering your super-sensitive cheeks and nose.

* The shock to your skin between the extremes in temperature from outdoors to indoors or vice versa sets the dehydration process in motion and causes dryness and flakiness all over the body. Therefore, bathing at night is best because your skin then has time to replenish natural protective oils. Be sure to cleanse with lukewarm rather than hot water and limit baths to fifteen minutes.

Sports

The joy of victory and the agony of defeat were in evidence on Thursday night, January 26, when the Maryville College Faculty Staff volleyball team successfully answered the challenge of the Copeland Hall Raiders.

For a while it appeared as though the staff was lured into a trap. Copeland came out on the floor with a fully equipped team, including knee and elbow pads. They even had varsity cheerleaders. These violations were protested but since the outcome of the game would not be changed by a ruling the protest has been dropped. Another point of controversy was the decision to count the game in the conference win/loss column.

It wasn't until the last point of the last game that a decision was made to count it as a conference game.

The game began with one sided scoring by Copeland. It was obvious that the stress and strain of managing their important jobs was showing in the Fac/staff team's performance. The pivitol point in the game came as a result of the Staff Cheerleaders performing their Super Cheer "The Inverted Pyramid". This rallied support for the team and they played on to victory with vigor.

Copeland used a 3-3-3- offense. Although there were super individual performances, the team seemed to lack cohesiveness and at time choked under pressure. Fac/Staff was in a 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, 1, with a weak side zone defense formation. The strategy was to put Linda Stephens in a weak side zone defense influence thereby lulling Copeland into thinking that they could score in that area. Copeland was unable to counter that defense, and throughout the game they fell victim to Linda's weak side illusion. The M.V.P. was unanimously awarded to Linda for her tenous weak side zone performance.

Norma Edmondson was the stellar server of the game. Her zero G serve was all but impossible to return. She was runnerup in the M.-V.P. catagory.

Since there was no return match clause in the agreement it is not likely Copeland Hall will get during this season. The only land Hall will get reveng land Hall will get revenge

HOUSE OF HAIR
321 High Street
Maryville, Tennessee
982-HAIR

HOUSE OF HAIR -- SPECIAL

Exclusive to Maryville College Students . . . Permanents between the hours of 4 and 8 p.m. are only $24.95 with Student I.D. card.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, February 2

5:30 p.m. Ladies Basketball vs. Lincoln Memorial University. Home.

7:30 p.m. Men's Basketball vs. Roanoke, Home.

Saturday, February 4

Ladies Basketball vs. Bryan College at Dayton

Men's basketball vs. Oglethorpe, at Atlanta

Fool Tourney
Movies

Sunday, February 5

3- 5:00 p.m. Art Gallery Reception, FAC.

7:00 p.m. Vespers Service.

Monday, February 6

J.V. Basketball vs. Cleveland State at Cleveland.

Tuesday, February 7

5:30 p.m. Women's Basketball vs. Tennessee Temple. Home

7:30 p.m. Men's Basketball vs. Emory & Henry. Home.

8:15 p.m. The Georgia Chamber Consortium FAC Music Hall.

Wednesday, February 8

10:30 a.m. Midweek Worship. Communion Service, Dr. Fowler and Dr. Howard.

7:30 p.m. Fellowship of Christian Athletes

Help Your Heart

American Heart Association

Hostility and Heart Disease

Hostility may be a key aspect of the "Type A" behavior profile — the hard-driving, impatient person who is at higher risk than others of having heart attacks, said Redford B. Williams, Jr., M.D., at a recent American Heart Association meeting.

Not all Type A's get heart attacks, but in studies at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, NC, over the last seven years, Type A patients showed more severe coronary heart disease than others. And the Type A's who scored high on an experimental "hostility" scale from the standard personality assessment questionnaire, the Minnesota Multiphasic Inventory (MMPI), had a particularly high rate of heart disease reported Dr. Williams, associate professor of medicine and professor of psychiatry.

Dr. Williams studied the records of 255 physicians who had taken the MMPI 25 years earlier, while in medical school. Those who scored low on the hostility scale had a less than three percent heart attack rate during the ensuing 25 years, compared with more than a 12 percent rate for those with higher range hostility scores — nearly a five-fold difference. Their death rates from all causes followed this same pattern, being lower among the low-hostility men.

Numerous researchers are investigating the mechanisms, by putting Type A's and the more calm Type B individuals through stressful experiments in laboratories. Type A's show larger boosts in blood pressure, and larger increases in blood levels of epinephrine and cortisol, the adrenal hormones that cause blood vessels to constrict, Dr. Williams said.

The Duke researchers found, among Type A men given simple arithmetic problems, physiologic and hormonal reactions similar to those seen in emergency and fight-or-flight situations.

Dr. Williams

Excessive levels of the adrenal hormones and of testosterone, the male sex hormone, have been implicated in animal studies in the hardening and narrowing of arteries.

Further studies are necessary to determine if the higher hormonal responses observed so far in some Type A persons are causative factors in heart disease, Dr. Williams said. If susceptible people could be identified early, then preventive measures could be taken to save their lives.

the Highland ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 14 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, February 9, 1984

NEW DIRECTOR

Dianne Perry Ledford has been named director of community services and camps and conferences at Maryville College, MC Vice President for Development Robert A. "Archie" Ellis Jr. announced today. Her appointment was effective Feb. 6.

Mrs. Ledford is no newcomer to MC. She formerly served the College as program coordinator in the Office of Continuing Education and Community Services from August 1980 to July 1982.

In her new position, she assumes the community services responsibilities formerly handled by Dr. Sara McNiell, who was named director of continuing education at the College in December.

Mrs. Ledford will direct the use of campus facilities by community individuals and groups. She will also schedule and handle the logistics of conferences and summer camps which the College hosts.

"These responsibilities were among those Mrs. Ledford handled in her former position with the College," Ellis commented. "We are very pleased to have her back on campus. She brings with her the ability and creative energy to effectively direct the College's ongoing community services."

Mrs. Ledford graduated as valedictorian of her Seymour High School class and received her bachelor's degree with honors in three years from the University of Tennessee-Knoxville (UTK).

Before coming to MC in 1980, she taught English at Farragut High School and before that worked in the alumni affairs office at UTK.

Mrs. Ledford was a substitute English teacher at William Blount and Maryville Junior High Schools until last February when she and her husband, Mike Ledford, former head baseball and assistant football coach at MC, moved to Livingston, Ala., where he joined the football coaching staff of Livingston University.

She also joined the university staff serving as personal secretary to the vice president for information services for six months.

Financial Aid Month

Gov. Lamar Alexander proclaimed February as Student Financial Aid Awareness Month to increase awareness of the programs offered to assist students with financial need

This is the fourth annual state proclamation for the recognition, according to Susan Ikerd, state chairman of the project and assistant director of financial aid at Austin Peay State University. Tennessee Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators and Tennessee Student Assistance Corporation are working together to promote awareness during the month.

"The idea is to share information about the types of aid available -- federal, state, and institutional," Ms. Ikerd said. "Literally thousands of students depend on financial aid to allow them to complete a degree."

According to Ruth Vincent-Cox, assistant executive director for Tennessee Student Assistant Corporation, $152 million in federal grants and aid went to students at 151 public and private institutions for 1983-84.

Equipment Donated

Edward G. Bush, a 1972 Maryville College graduate and chief laboratory technologist at Bristol (Tenn.) Memorial Hospital, recently donated several pieces of scientific equipment to the College's biology and chemistry department.

The gift of the items, which have a combined value of $5,000, was announced jointly by Vice President for Development Robert A. "Archie" Ellis Jr. and Dr. Robert J. Naylor, chairman of the biology and chemistry department.

In the process of upgrading the hospital lab, several pieces of equipment were no longer needed. Bush then made donations of the items to MC, Naylor explained.

"Ed Bush has demonstrated a creative and generous method of support for Maryville College," Ellis commented. "These gifts will enhance the quality of learning for students and stregthen the resources for our faculty in the biology and chemistry department."

The equipment includes a Hitachi spectromphotometer, a Beckman densitometer, a Picker gamma scintillation counter, a Coleman colorimeter, a Haake temperature regulator, an IEC centrifuge and a Beckman pH meter.

"Donations of this kind can have an important impact in strengthening the College's academic programs without straining small departmental equipment budgets," Dr. Terry Bunde, associate professor of chemistry, explained. "Part of the problem we face in Sutton Science Center concerning gifts to the department is that people think we would not want nor use older equipment, but this is not true. If someone donated an old pH meter that worked, as Ed Bush has done, it releases money to be spent on other equipment we need more desperately."

Dr. Bunde added his appreciation to Bush for the gifts, saying, "It shows his continuing support of the College and the biology and chemistry department in particular."

Campus Calender

February 10

Men's Basketball vs. Lynchburg at Lynchburg, VA, 7:30 p.m.

Women's Basketball vs. Millsaps at Jackson, MS, 7:00 p.m. (CST)

Mardi Gras Dinner

8:00 p.m. Mountain women's Cooperative String Band, CCM

February 11

Men's Basketball vs. Hampden-Sydney at Hampden-Sydney, VA 7:30 p.m.

Women's Basketball vs. Judson College at Marion, ALA, 3 p.m.

7:00 p.m. Cocktail Party at Pearsons $1.00

9:00 p.m. FEBRUARY FANTASY, $2.50, labeled Bar. BE THERE!

February 12

Movies

February 13

Men's Basketball vs. Roadnoke at Roanoke, VA 7:30 p.m.

February 14

Happy V.D.!

Women's Basketball vs. King College at Bristol, 7:00 p.m.

February 15

9:20 a.m. Dr. Bruce Carney, CIV - FAC Music Hall

10:30 a.m. Midweek Worship Rev. Vickie Mykles

Value of Education

"The contribution of human capitol to the productive process is developed by a process and investment (which means simply the sacrifice of current resources for future returns) incurred in the formal education system and through on-the-job training, and this investment yields its returns over the lifetime of the individual concerned."
Professor Harry Johnsion

What are you using your education and, more succintly, thousands of dollars for at Maryville College? Are you building the foundation for your future by developing skills and thought processes? Or is Maryville a post-adolescent holding ground post poning the real world of jobs and debts?

T.W. Schultz and W.A. Lewis, 1979 Nobel Prize winners in Economics, theorize that both formal and informal education represent important types of investment. If schultz were writing this, I'd venture to say that he'd ask readers to review their investment in Maryville College in terms of time and money and set that result next to a list of lifetime goals.

How does it measure up? One might say that ole MC could be scratched off. Anyone who does just enough homework to get by doesn't need to be here. That person is wasting precious time and money and making poor use of the investment resources at Maryville. In fact, going to college is probably interferring with that person's education. A possible response would be, "Well, what else am I supposed to do?"

We suggest that you take responsibility for your life and education. Someone is paying 430 dollars, plus expenses, per course for you to attend college. Earn it.

For starters, try to get a good paying job in order to save money to go to school. Tough assignment? Too bad. That's the real world. After a year or so of full-time work and bills, what have you saved? Enough to go to school and get a better job? Dream on. Ask people who have tried it. If they did indeed make it, they'll tell you it was hard.

There are less drastic ways to evaluate and appreciate your investment in Maryville College. One is to talk to people in the field you'd like to get into. Another is to get off your duff and become an active member of the Maryville College Community. Participation in extra-curricular activities is not only good clout on resumes, but a foolproof way to get to know people.

Evaluating your total liberal arts education as an investment for the future will help you put your life and activities into perspective as well as put you in charge of your life. Be a responsible investor in your life - for today and for your future.

the Highland ECHO

Editor ..... Marta Wittig

Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Photographers ..... Keith Moore
Tara Wey

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

A policy here at Maryville College has caused a great deal of concern among hall residents since the fall term began. Many believed the situation would improve, but it has instead gotten increasingly worse. I believe it has reached an extreme condition of unfairness and confusion in Copeland Hall. I am referring to the policy that does not require resident staff members to inform the accused students at the time of a write-up that they have been written-up.

I feel this practice to be in very poor taste on behalf of the staff members as well as the involved administrators. Ever since I was a freshman I have looked up to R.A.'s and S.A.'s because I felt them to be carefully selected on the criteria of good academic standing, leadership ability, as well as some counseling skills. Today I feel as if they are the last people in the world I would go to with my problems much less take their advice.

Many staff members in Copeland act as if they were chosen for their inability to make decisions with any confidence or haste. It seems that, being the outstanding students that they are, they would be able to discern when a warning is in order or when a write-up needed. If they make the decision to report students they should feel justified enough to tell them at that time that they are doing so. When a police officer pulls a speeder over, he does not merely inform him that he was speeding at so many miles per hour -he also issues either a ticket or a warning. That is the law. This should also be the policy at M.C., but since it is not, I would like to urge staff members to stop and think next time they write someone up and show some simple courtesy and integrity in dealing with your fellow students. I believe the R.A.'s and S.A.'s still have the potential to be leaders on a larger scale than just here at M.C. Don't jeopardize your future opportunities by forgetting that leaders lead only as long as followers follow!

Evelyn Sowell

Sunbelt Jobs

by Peggy Millsaps

A tempting salary or just-right entry level position isn't always what compels a young person, after graduation toward a particular job. Most students, as they scatter, diplomas in hand, can visualize themselves in a particular locale as much as in a particular job. And for some, the locale is as important as the work itself.

With that in mind, the Echo will feature a weekly column, Geographical Jobs. detailing various regions of the country and overviewing their size, advantages and disadvantages, and employment opportunities. These features are in no way intended to be exhaustive - further information is available in Career Planning and Placement.

In general, the sunbelt, as of 1982, has been the area of greatest population expansion and job openings. Older cities in the North east and Midwest, meanwhile, have been shrinking, according to 1980 census figures.

Unlike older factory towns such as St. Louis, Cleveland, and Detroit, smaller and medium-sized cities are prime opportunity areas in the early 1980's. These include San Jose, El Paso, Houston, Dallas, San Diego, and San Antonio as well as Austin, Charlotte, Raleigh, Tuscon, Tulsa, Beaumont, Fort Lauderdale, Columbia, and Orlando.

Despite some signs that migration to the "sun cities" may be slowing, the sunbelt continues to be an employment hot spot in the 80's.

Next week: largest metro areas.

Reaffirmed

Maryville College's accreditation has been reaffirmed by the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

"We are delighted with this vote of confidence and the Southern Association," said Ed Best, chairman of the MC Board of Directors. "This achievement reflects well on Maryville College's fine faculty, staff and administration, all of whom should be commended for this outstanding accomplishment."

Maryville was reaccredited by the Southern Association following an extensive self-study process initiated in 1981.

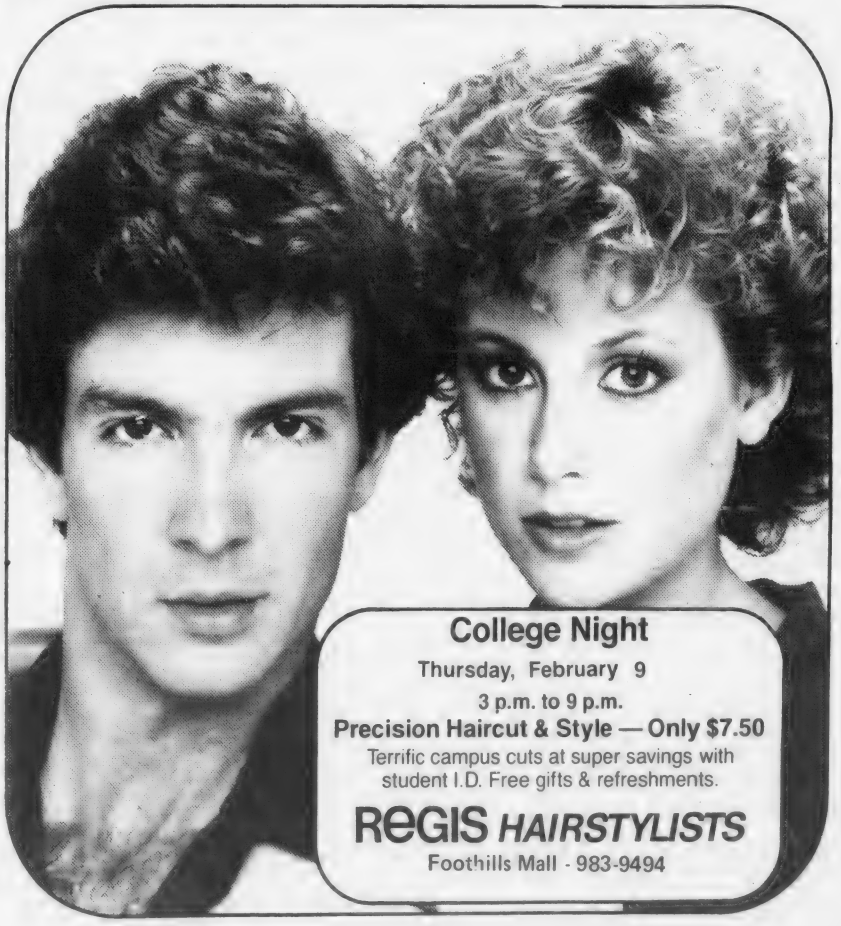
Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, professor of English, directed the self study which analyzed the College's organization and administration, education program, financial resources, faculty and research, library, student development services and physical resources.

Jerry Waters, professor and chairman of the Division of Behavioral Sciences and Human Services, served as director of the steering committee, and numerous other faculty and staff played central roles in the study.

The College's extensive self-study report was completed in October 1982 and members of the visiting committee of the SACS were on campus last February.

Institutions receiving reaffirmation of accreditation were announced at the SACS recent meeting in New Orleans.

The SACS evaluation team visits the MC campus every 10 years as part of the reaccreditation process.



Gallery Opens

I urge you to go to the Fine Arts Building to see the refining of imagination. Open your eyes to color and form as your hands ache to touch and shape the creations of Sandy Blain and Clare Verstegen.

"Skyrunners," by Clare Verstegen, is the name for kites beyond the norm. Of her work Verstegen says that it is an "exploration of color and pattern."

As Verstegen's work colors the sky, Sandy Blain's work shapes and molds the earth into contemporary ceramic art. The form offers the opportunity for the exploration of inside and outside surfaces and space," Blain comments. "The imagery is related to the circus - that ponderous spectacular event which allows the artist to enter a world of wonder."

Architectural Digest

"Did you hear the news?"

"About what?"

I heard they're going to redecorate the dining hall."

"You're kidding! I don't believe it. It sure needs it, but it'll never happen."

Sound familiar? Well, don't believe it! Andy Strickland, Dobbs House manger, says renovation on the dining hall interior should be starting very soon.

Dobbs House Food Service has committed itself to putting, $25,000 into renovation of the dining hall, provided that MC furnishes the labor.

Some of the changes to occur include new carpeting in the eating area, new window blinds (not curtains), new wall covering and repainted trim and posts.

Another visable change will be the removal of the individual drink counters. The new beverage counter will also be replaced.

The alcove area will be divided into three meeting areas. This way, the various student and faculty organizations can hold lunch meetings without interruption or the bother of moving the portable partitions.

The dish return area will also take on a new look. Andy plans to have a wall built around the area and to install rollers for students to slide their trays back to the dishwashers. The "dishmen" will break the tray down into its components to save students time.

Since a lot of the work is time consuming and may interfere with meal schedules, most of the heavy work is planned for spring break. But don't worry - as soon as the work on the Morningside house is completed, we should start seeing some changes.

Andy is excited about this project and hopes the students will be, too. He says, "Design and look of the cafeteria only go so far - it really comes down to the food."

He wants your comments - just use the "Sound Off" cards provided. And do Andy a favor, - BE POLITE.

Continued from page 8

tine served as priest when the Emperor Claudius was recruiting soldiers for his wars. Because the men didn't want to leave their wives and girlfriends, Claudius was outraged and declared that no more marriages would be performed and all engagement were to be cancelled.

Still another story tells of a priest imprisoned for helping Christians. This Valentine, supposedly, was put to death by Claudius for curing the jailor's daughter of blindness. Another version of the same story says Valentine fell in love with the jailor's daughter and sent her letters signed, "From your Valentine."

Whatever the origins of the holiday, Americans traditionally commemerate February 14 by sending, in the quaint words of the 1926 Book of Holidays, "missives of amatory significance." Early valentines were often simple gifts of bouquets; later, lacy valentines and heart-shaped candy became popular. Other valentines were more lavish: the Duke of Richmond presented Miss Stuart with a jewel worth 800 pounds.

Early commercial valentines, in the 1830's and 40's were made of fine paper and decorated with satin, ribbon and lace and usually sold for high prices. Miss Esther Howland is credited with creating the first distinctive American valentines in 1830. She imported lace and fine paper which her brothers marketed as "Worcester" valentines. These popular items earned Miss Howland the considerable sum of $100,000 annually. Valentines of the Gay Nineties were gaudy creations of spun glass, mother or pearl, imitation jewels, and silk fringe.

Such excess has yielded today to spirited valentines that feature Garfield, Snoopy or Ziggy, as well as traditional red-hearts-and-paper-lace cards. The origins of Valentine's Day is uncertain and the trappings of valentines have changed throughout the years, but the message of the holiday is clear and consistent: "I Love You."

Encounters of the Third Kind

by Amy Waggoner

'Twas the night before Tuesday,
And all through the hall
Not a creature was stirring,
And we had a ball.

Ghost hunting on campus-
But where could we go?
We snuck into Anderson
So no one would know.

The darkness was ghastly,
The stairways they creaked,
The shadows were dancing,
The floor - it did squeak.

The windows were shaking,
The wind - it was blustering,
While all of our courage
We had been mustering . . .

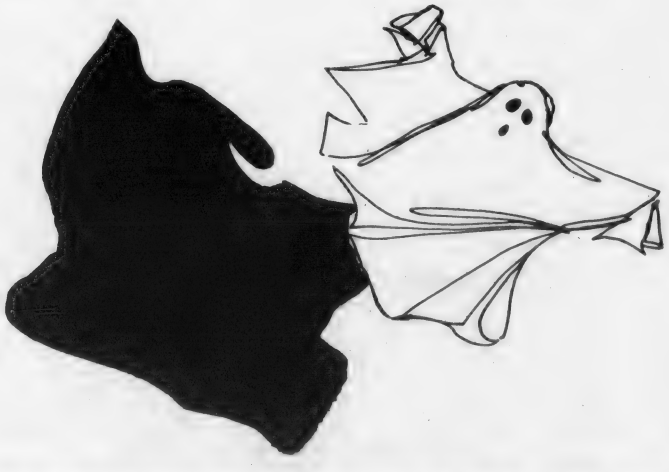
When in through the doorway
There came a great sight
That left we four girls
Paralyzed from fright.

"It's him," whispered S.
"It's Whiskers!" said Glo.
As a figure appeared,
It was White as the snow.

Swiftly toward us he came,
His tattered clothes flowing;
His shackles were rattling,
His beady eyes glowing.

He had only one leg,
The other, a stump.
He limped through the darkness
With an awful, "Thump, Thump."

We crouched in the corner;
Hearts pounding loud,
Then Whiskers lunged forward,
Wrapped in a shroud.



"No!" Tara screamed.
"You'll never get us!"
We fled through the cobwebs
And stirred up the dust.

Through the hallway we plunged,
And we felt his hot breath;
We fell through the darkness,
Waiting for death.

A hand on my shoulder -
And then I awoke.
"Let's go home," cried Helen,
"Before we all croak."

We dashed through the door
As the town clock struck five;
We only thank God
That we made it alive.

Home again, home again,
Ain't no big deal;
It was only a dream -
Or was it all real?

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In

THE ECHO EAR

Echo Ear

M.P. - It is true you don't like to French Kiss?

A.B. - How's ABBA doing lately?

S-I think we're (way) past "Hello" now. "How are ya?" - Sparky

"S.S. and E.W. - Good luck on the 1/2 M Sat. - T.W."

ACC

A new proposal to be submitted to the ACC will call for the formation of an Intra-Hall Judicial Council. The proposal is sponsored by the ACC Committe on Residential Life and Community Standards.

When asked about the specific purpose of the proposed council, John Rush, committe chairperson, said, "The purpose of this board is to hear cases which involve residence hall violations committed by students who are not residents of the hall where the infraction took place."

Rush outlined the salient points in the structure of the Board. These include two elected representatives from each dorm and a commuting representative serving with a non-voting resident director who would serve on a three-month basis in order not to overload his or her schedule.

Rush added that at present, any intra-hall infractions are dealt with in the Dean's Office. The new council would help clear the Dean's Calendar for other matters. The RL/CS committee is asking that the new Council be included in the 1984-85 Student Handbook.

The RL/CS Committee is now looking into other problems, including the painting of crosswalks and speed bumps, the acquisition of more trashcans for the dorm areas, the possibility of outdoor basketball courts, and stricter enforcement of parking rules. Also being investigated are the placement of fire extinguishers in laundry rooms and more lounge furniture for the dorms.

Other committe members include Margeret Andrews, Sharon Crane, Mark Mixner, Jody Mullen, Melissa Parks, and Donna Whittum, The Residential Life and Community Standards Committee represent you. They would appreciate your input.

IT'S THAT TIME OF THE YEAR AGAIN!!! IT'S TIME TO CHOSE...

THE EDITORS FOR THE ECHO, THE CHILHOWEAN AND IMPRESSIONS!

TO BE QUALIFIED FOR THE EDITORSHIP OF THE ECHO, THE STUDENT MUST BE A RISING JUNIOR OR SENIOR WITH A CUMULATIVE G.P.A. OF AT LEAST 2.5 FOR ALL COLLEGE WORK, IN ADDITION, SHE/HE MUST HAVE AT LEAST THREE TERMS OF EXPERIENCE ON THE STAFF OF A COLLEGE NEWSPAPER, WITH ONE OF THOSE ON THE ECHO STAFF.

QUALIFICATION OF THE EDITORSHIP FOR THE CHILHOWEAN ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Rising sophomore with a cumulative G.P.A. of at least 2.5 for all college work. Some experience on the staff of a college annual or similar publication.

QUALIFICATION OF THE EDITORSHIP FOR IMPRESSIONS ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Some experience on a staff or a newspaper or literary magazine.

The position is open to all students except for freshman who have cumulative G.P.A. of at least 2.5 for all college work.

THE APPLICATIONS CAN BE PICKED UP IN THE OFFICE OF STUDENT AFFAIRS. THESE APPLICATIONS MUST BE FILLED OUT AND RETURNED TO THE OFFICE OF STUDENT AFFAIRS BY FEBRUARY 17th.

Where To Go

How long has it been since you've seen a really good movie? Pretty long? Well, the Christmas season always brings with it the best movies of the year.

If you are a little short on funds, the Dogwood Theater in Midland Center has bargain matinees on Saturdays, Sundays and Monday and Tuesday nights for $1.50.

"Terms of Endearment," starring Shirley McLaine, Debra Winger, and Jack Nicholson, is now showing at the Dogwood. The movie is neither a comedy nor a drama. The viewer feels , rather, almost every emotion while watching it - anger, sadness, humor, love - All the emotions come through with intensity that we rarely experience through a movie. Even if you pay the regular $2.50 admission, "Terms of Endearment" is worth it.

Mountain Women's Band

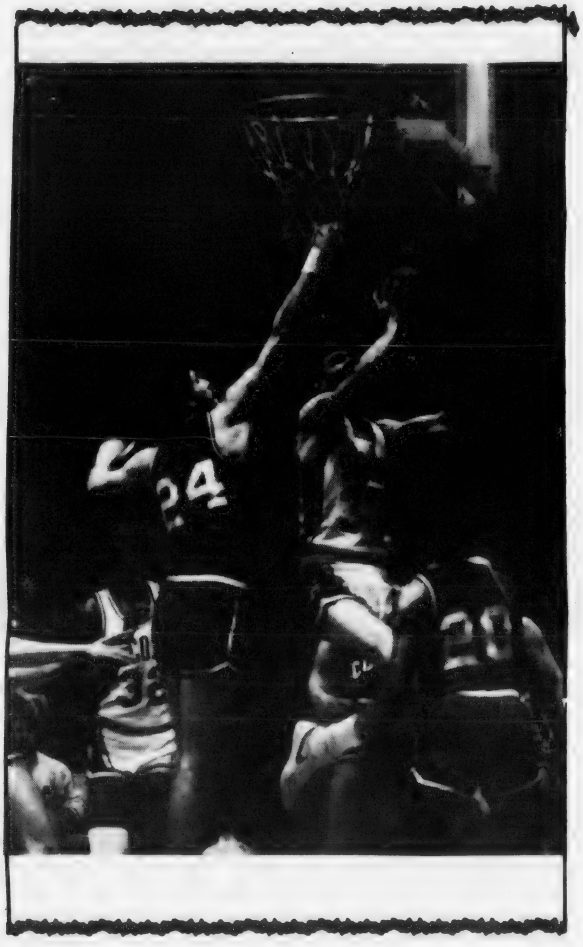
by Tara Wey

The Mountain Women's Cooperative String Band will play Friday, Feb. 10, as part of the CIV series. The concert, in place of singer Phyllis Boyens, will begin at 8 p.m. in the Center for Campus Ministry.

The band, made up of six women from western North Carolina, will perform traditional old-time vocal instrumental music of the Southwestern Applachian mountains.

These women learned to play and sing the music in the tradition of the early settlers - by ear. They recognize the importance of preserving this facet of early Appalachian life by learning it and passing it on to others both orally and aurally.

All of their music remains unwritten, except for hymns which have been recently recorded on paper.



The six band members play fiddle banjo, mandolin, autoharp, guitar, Appalachian dulcimer, European hammered dulcimer and string bass.

The members include Christa Bridgeman, Suzanne Daley, Elean Diana Miller, Mary Hungbaum, Joan Moser and Lou Therrell.

The band is a non-profit organization that performs an average of once a week, usually in the western North Carolina area.

Sports

Scots Ruin Roanoke

by Chris Porter

In what could be considered no less than an outstanding game on MC's part, the Scots shuttered no. 2 (That's number two nationally, sports fans) Roanoke undefeated record, handing them a 64-58 defeat.

DeAngelo McDaniel, who acquired one of the nets in a post-game celebration, also got away with 22 points and 15 rebounds, putting forth, in Coach Lamber's words, "a tremendous individual effort." Dan Kirkpatrick also hit double figures, netting 15 and rebounding nine.

Lambert, perhaps with more than a little modesty said, "We had a really good team effort."

The game began close and stayed close throughout the first half with Roanoke edging ahead most of the time, but the Scots got the last bucket of the half, putting them up 33-32.

The teams remained close for the first few minutes of the second period, but this time the Scots were on top. At the twelve-minute, MC got up 45-40, setting the pace for the rest of the game.

"Defensive intensity was as good as we've had all year," Lambert commented after the game. "Paul Mills directed our offense with few mistakes."

Indeed,the Scots made very few mistakes. Roanoke shot only eight free-throws, while MC capitalized on 28 of 40 free-throws. The Scots also dominated the boards, grabbing 39 rebounds to 28.

Lambert thanked the crowd, saying, "Our corner definitely inspired us in the second half. That was the most involved group of spectators I've every witnessed at Maryville College."

The men's varsity squad didn't fare as well on the road this week as they did at home. The Scots travelled to Oglethorpe College in Atlanta only to be defeated 63-51.

Leading scorers for the Scots included DeAngelo McDaniel with 17 points, Paul Mills and Dan Kirkpatrick with 10 a piece. Guard Tom Robinson did not dress out.

A favorable aspect of the game is the fact the Scots didn't miss a foul shot, gaining 15, but shooting from the field was off.

Ladies Basketball

by Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots Basketball team handed out and received their fair share of abuse last week as they rolled over Sewannee and then were crushed by LMU. The Ladies, now 7-9, are working hard to achieve a 500 record which hopefully will be attained soon.

Sewanee rolled into town Tuesday, and the Lady Scots deflated the visitor's spirits with a 59-40 loss. Sara Covington (23 pts. 18 rebs.) and Mimi Chesney (11 pts.) led the Maryville attack.

Things did not go so well Thursday, however, when LMU soundly defeated the Lady Scots 78-51. In a run-and-gun type shootout, Sara Covington (21) and Trina Fancher (10) led the Maryville effort, but LMU just out ran and out-gunned the Lady Scots squad.

The Lady Scots' last home game is Feb. 18th against Centre at 3:00. So come on out and get caught up in that Lady Scots Fever.

Rebuttal and Reply

by Brian Rigell and Rick Carver

News Flash! Copeland vs. Faculty/Staff Volleyball Game Protest Upheld! The Office of the Commissioner just announced that the protest filed by Copeland coach Rick Carver has been upheld. When interviewed, Carver gave the following reasons for the protest action, reasons stated in Section 103, paragraph 4, section 7 of the Conference Rule Book on display at Conference headquarters on the continent of Atlantis:

1) All teams must have nicknames (we were the Steelers, not the Raiders, as previously reported);
2) The use of professional athletes is strictly prohibited (Coach Saylor is considered a professional, and although he did not play, he did participate in cheers and on-court coaching);
3) The use of props are forbidden during cheers as is the highly dangerous inverted pyramid;
4) All faculty must still retain conference eligibility;
5) At least three women must be playing on the court at all times;
6) MVP voting must be performed by both teams;
7) Attempted bribing either before, during, or after the game is cause for reversal of outcome (where's the hot water?).

Coach Carver went on to add that the post-competition drug tests administered to each athlete showed positive results from each faculty/Staff player. Although refusing to comment further, Carver did mention the possibility of such foreign substances as Geritol and the highly addictive One-A-Day.

The conference has ruled that the faculty/staff has until the end of the term to defend their title or be stripped of it. Coach Carver said, "I appreciate their cooperation, but these numerous infractions are just too much to overlook, and I hope they have the intestinal fortitude to take us on again."

GOOD LUCK
SATURDAY,
SCOTS
MARYVILLE COLLEGE

FLOWERAMA
FOOTHILLS MALL
NEXT TO SEARS
Valentine's Day Special
ROSES - DOZEN - 24.95 PAPER WRAPPED
29.95 BEAUTIFULLY BOXED
34.95 VASE ARRANGED
ORDER TODAY 982-3310

admissions

By John Rush

The most important administrative department at Maryville College is Admissions. The staff is dedicated to counseling top students and encouraging them to attend school here. Larry West, who has been at Maryville four years, heads the admissions staff.

Mr. West's main job is supervising his staff and working on different strategies to attract students to MC. He is chairman of the Admissions and Standing Committees of the ACC. (The ACC determines the criteria for admission and arbitrates cases of academic probation). West is also responsible for keeping track of the Admissions budget and working with the English language program.

Leslie Nier is assistant director of Admissions and Financial Aid and dividies her work between the two offices, travelling in East Tennessee to recruit students and being responsible for the college work-study program. Norma Edmondson, also an assistant director of Admissions, trains new admissions staff members, is becoming involved in admissions research projects, and travels in different states such as Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Georgia, and Alabama.

Terry Whittum and Alan McTier are admissions counselors. Whittum, besides being Copeland's resident director, is on the road recruiting students from Florida and Western Tennessee, as well as students interested in music. McTier travels to Southern Florida, North Carolina, and the Atlanta and Tri-Cities areas. He also counsels students affiliated with various churches and is the staff sponsor for intervarsity.

Because prospective students are located all over the world, Annabell Libby is in charge of seeking alumni willing to recruit these students. She contacts alumni in different areas and asks them if they would counsel future students or attend college fairs.

Finally, Jeanne Bright and Jean Clemens are in charge of sending out school information to prosepctive students. Mr. Bright receives daily mail and sends initial information out. Ms. Clemens is responsible for the CPT machine which prints form letters and keeps students' addresses. Both Ms. Bright and Ms. Clemens are involed in departmental statistical reporting.

Director West believes that his staff does an excellent job and that they are dedicated to Maryville College. But, he adds," the best salesmen are the students here now." He encourages all Maryville students to actively seek out friends to attend the College and help keep Maryville the fine institution it is.

Enthusiasm On The Way

by Julie Humpert

"Let's dance. Put on your red shoes and dance. Let's sway while the color lights up your face. Let's sway through the crowd to an empty space."

It's all happening this Saturday night. Why not slide on over and check out the February Fantasy festivities? A pre-Fantasy bash, sponsored by Pearsons, will help get things hopping. It's a cocktail party from 7:00 - 9:00 p.m. $1.00 will get you inon the action on Pearson's second $1.00 will get you in on the action on Pearson's second floor.

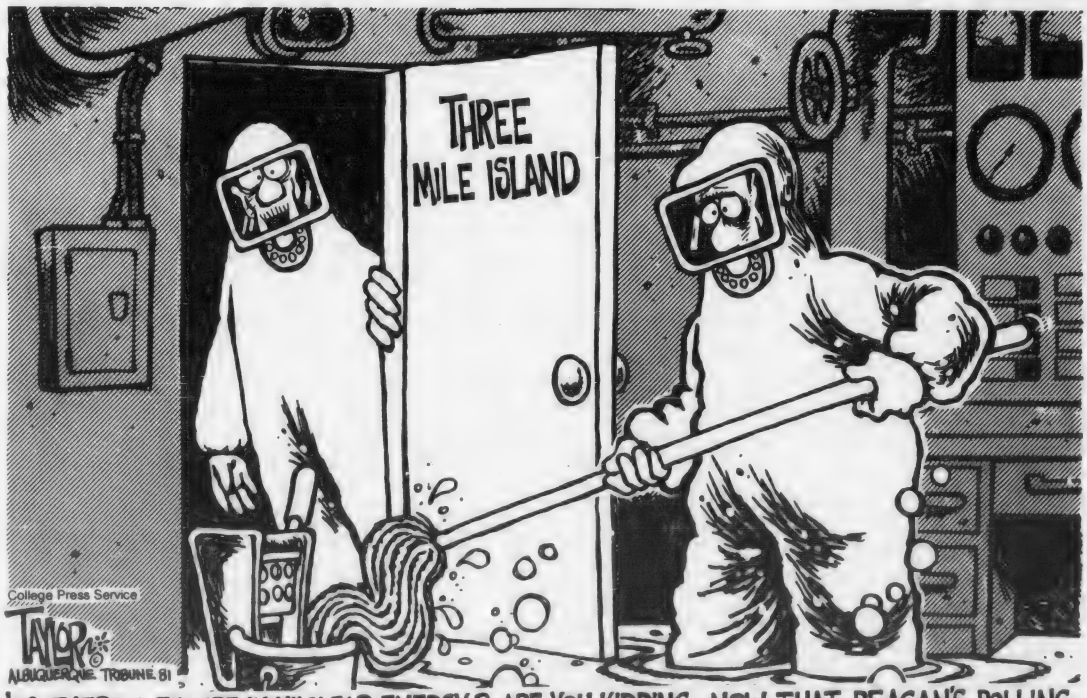
At 9:00 p.m., two-step it downstairs to the annual February Fantasy Dance, sponsored by the Student Activities Committee. Just $2.50 lets you swing while enjoying a labeled bar. D.J. Ed Ropp from WGAP will be spinning the tunes until 1:00 a.m.

Don't forget that it's a classy affair. This means dress up or dress out! Costumes are optional. You may rent one from the Playhouse Association's large collection. There is a $10.00 deposit with $5.00 back when you return the costume.

It's hip to be hopping where everything's happening. See you there Saturday night, February 11!



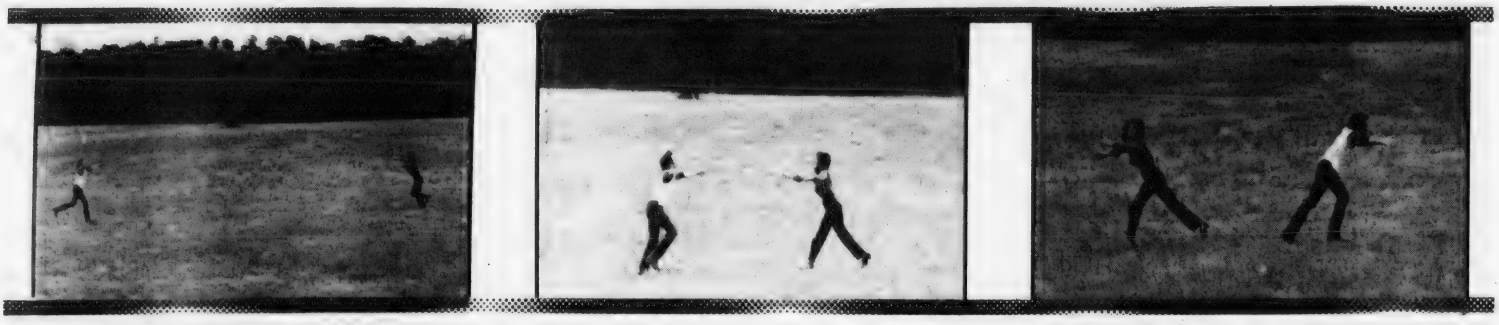
Snack Bar Hours
Starting Monday,
8a.m. — 11p.m.

NO NUKES

Americans are in the wake of a long string of disaster movies including "On The Beach," "Dr. Strangelove," and, of course, "The Day After." "The Day After" bothered me, but not the way it was supposed to. How threatening can life be, in, of all places, Kansas, the Land of Oz? And, of course, nothing could have lived up to the media-hype of that muclear disaster. But my question is, can you really believe every thing's so disastrous when you still have commercials and station breaks? Well, forget it. The flaws were numerous, to say the least, and that's saying enough.

Now, thank the dieties, we have available to us through the Community Issues and Values program what is said to be the best movie made on the subject "Atomic Cafe," a movie perhaps secondary only to "Testament"

We are all invited to have our belief suspended without interruption (no station breaks) on February 22.



'IS THERE A FUTURE IN NUCLEAR ENERGY? ARE YOU KIDDING-NOW THAT REAGAN'S ROLLING BACK THOSE PESKY SAFETY REGULATIONS WE'LL HAVE PLENTY OF WORK TO KEEP US BUSY!'

CUPID'S CORNER

Vol. 1 No. 1 Tuesday, February 14, 1984 VALENTINE'S EDITION

HAPPY VALENTINES DAY

KISSING

by Pam Matthews

What Better time to discuss some romantic facts about kissing than in the month of February. Kissing probably began accidentally around 4,000 years ago when a pair of East Indians who were affectionately rubbing noses discovered that the pressing of lips together was a lot more pleasurable.

It was only a matter of time until the pastime of kissing found an appreciative audience among the Romans in the first century B.C. When Romans were not occupied with kissing, they were busy inventing words to describe it. For example, the Latin word osculum (from which we derive the word osculation) came to signify a kiss between friends while the word basium (the origin of the word buss) was a kiss reserved for lovers.

In the 1800's, an English explorer fell in love with a young African woman and attempted to kiss her in order to win her heart. Having never been kissed,she fled he would eat her alive!

Kissing has come a long way since then. Today, many romantics hunger for the kisses of their loved one. Sweet hearts kiss on Valentines Day and under the mistletoe at Christmas.

On and off the silver screen, kissing has become so engrossing that it has set world records. In the 1940 movie You're in the Army Now, actors Regis Toomey and Jane Wyman let their kiss linger for a record of 185 seconds. According to the Guiness Book of World Records, a young couple from Singer Island, Florida, kissed nonstop for 132 hours, from February 14-19, 1980. James Whale of Metro Radio, New Castle upon Tyne, England on September 22, 1978 kissed 4,094 girls in 8 hours - a rate of 1 per 7.11 seconds.

As one can see, kissing has become more than just a passing fancy.

History

by Peggy Millsaps

"For this was Saynt Valentine's Day," wrote Chaucer in "Parliament of Fowls, when every Foul cometh ther to choose his mate."

Contrary to romantic legends of a martyred St. Valentine for whom the holiday was named, the 1983 Encyclopedia Americana speculates that the custom of "lovers exchanging affectionate messages and gifts" on February 14 arose in the late Middle Ages from the belief that birds chose their mates on that day.

The legend of a sole St. Valentine, patron saint of lovers, is problematic. Valentine of Rome, a priest, was said to have been martyred in 269 during Claudius the Goth's ordered persecutions. A second Valentine, alledgedly bishop of Terni, was thought to have been marytred on that day as well. Or, perhaps, one Valentine was shuttled between Rome and Terni for execution and two cults arose in the confusion. In either case, the late Middle Ages custom of sending affection notes on that date is now thought to be coincidental.

Other sources date the origin of Valentine's Day to third century Rome when ravenous wolves prowled outside the city. The Romans celebrated a February feast in honor of the god Lupercus who was thought to protect shepherds and their flocks.

Later Christian priests may have changed the pagan Feast of Lupercalia to St. Valentine's Day to commenorate any one of eight Valentines said to have been martyred on February 14. These Valentines, whose existence historians doubt, were purportedly scattered throughout Spain, Africa, Belguim, and France.

Other Valentine legends abound. One story says a Valen-

continued on page 6

Lummy - Be My Valentine - Anal

B.D. - If you don't love me, I think I'm gonna barf. Love Kim

Dear Lisa - I want to thank you for the past year, It has been one of the most exciting and happiest time of my life. Happy Anniversary and Happy Valentines Day. Love Kevin Schooks -- Well, it's been 11 months will you (still) be my valentine? Love, me.

Novio Mio, Remember That One thing! Give Me Some Juice - Your Admirer

Hey Sellout! You're always on my mind . . . Will You Be My Valentine? T.Q.M.

COMING SOON TO THE DOGWOOD & FOOTHILLS CINEMA:

Double Feature: Adventure of DonJuan and American Gigolo - starring Jerry Waters

Annie Hall: featuring Dr. Cartlidge and Exir Brennen

Casablanca: with our own Don Thomas as Rick.

Dr. Strange Love or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb: starring Jim "Slim" Pickens, Dean Bolden & Scott Brunger

Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex But Were Afraid to Ask: with Bob Ramger and Judy Sumner

Endless Love: with Teresa Welch and Tommy Brown

Gone with the Wind: with Art Bushing as Ashley, Charlotte Beck as Scarlett, Carolyn Blair as Melanie, and Don Thomas as Rhett

The Quiet Man: with Robert and Sherry Bonham

Superman: with Stephen LeMay as Clark Kent

The Graduate: Sharon Crane as Mrs. Robinson and Bryan McFarland in the title role

Double Feature: The French Lieutenant's Woman and Tess starring Karen Schafer

On Golden Pond: with Sallie and Victor Schoen

Grease: with Kim Sperry as Sandy and Paul Anagnostis in the role Travolta made famous.

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 15 | Maryville College | Friday, February 17, 1984

Calendar

February 16

7:30 p.m. Men's Basketball vs. Washington & Lee. Home.

February 17

Freshman Class "Noisy Evening."

February 18

3:00 p.m. Women's Basketball vs. Center College. Home.

7:30 p.m. Men's Basketball vs. Bridgewater, Home.

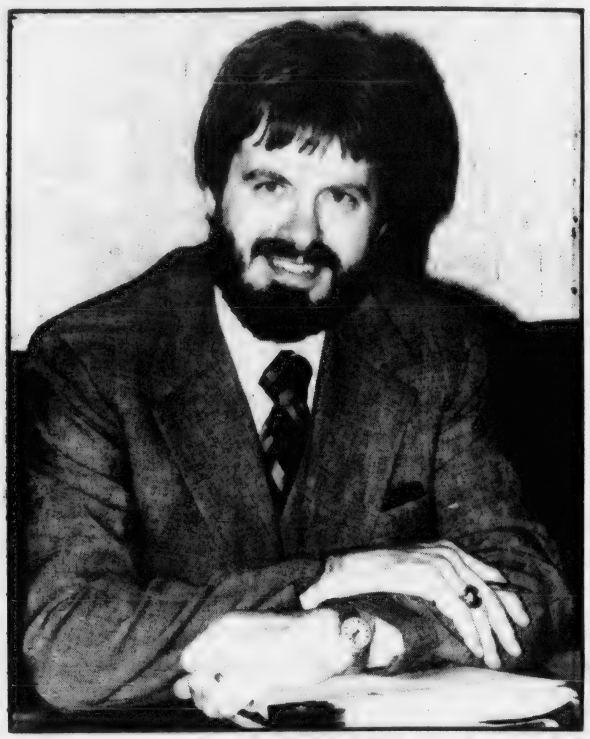
February 19

4:00 p.m. Faculty Recital Mr. Hoffecker, FAC.

"100 Days" for Senior Class at House in the Woods, R.S.V.P.

February 20

February Meetings begin.



February 21

Game- Faculty/Staff vs. Students.

February 22

9:20 a.m. "The Atomic Cafe" FAC Music Hall, CIV.

New Campus Minister

The Rev. Earl M. Rash, pastor of Kirk Hills Presbyterian Church in Knoxville since 1979, has been named Chaplain at Maryville College, effective March 12, President Wayne Anderson announced today.

Rash replaces the Rev. Peter A. Vial who resigned the position in December to accept a church pastorate in Kansas.

Rash,38, will have responsibility for the College's religious life program which includes two weekly worship services--Sunday Vespers and Mid-Week Worship on Wednesday morning, special seminars, Bible study and other fellowship activities, and counseling for the campus ministry.

He will also chair the College's Religious Life Council, a steering group composed of the chairpersons of the World Concerns, Worship and Religious Programs, and Community Outreach Committees.

The new chaplain graduated from Glade Valley School, a Presbyterian high school in North Carolina. He earned the B.A. degree from Presbyterian College in Clinton, S.C., in 1967 and the Master of Divinity degree from the Louisville Presbyterian Seminary in 1971. Since 1980 he has done graduate work in educational and counseling psychology at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville.

Before assuming his present position, the Rev. Rash was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Greenfield, Tenn. and Sharon Presbyterian Church in Sharon, Tenn., for three years.

From 1971 to 1975 he served as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Huntsville, Tenn., and co-pastor of Wartburg (Tenn.) Presbyterian Church and Lancing (Tenn.) Presbyterian Church.

Rash spent the 1969-1970 academic year in Zaire, Africa, as a seminary intern for the Board of World Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U.S.

Active in religious and community organizations, the Rev. Rash is moderator of the St. Andrew Presbytery; chairperson of the Presbyterian Appalachian Broadcasting Council and of the Morgan-Scott Project, an ecumenical project to deal with community concerns; and a member of the board of the Knoxville United Ministries.

He is also a member of the Emergency Food Helpers, the Fund-Raising Committee for Knoxville College and the Knoxville Interdenominational Christian Ministerial Alliance.

He has worked with the Council on Aging, done committee work in the presbytery and synod in missions, Christian. Education and youth ministry, and served as a counselor and resource person at Camp Ozone and Camp Walden Creek. He is also a scoutmaster for the Boy Scouts of America.

The Rev. Rash and his wife, the former Ellen York of Huntsville, live in Powell with their three children, Jessica,6, Jean Marie, 8, and Corey, 7.

The Rev. Rash's parents are Sherman and Leava Rash of Sparta, N.C.

February Meetings

Maryville College's 108th annual February Meetings, set for Wednesday through Sunday, Feb. 22-26, this year will focus on the theme, "To Run and Not Be Weary – Stamina for Faith"

This year's theme is based upon Isaiah 40 and will emphasize the development of spiritual discipline in the community of faith and in light of Yahweh's demand for social justice.

Four guest speakers will join seven MC faculty members in lecturing and conducting seminars, discussion sessions and worship services related to this theme during the five-day religious emphasis program.

The guest speakers are Dr Lee Humphreys, professor of religious studies and director of the Learning Resource Center at the University of Tennessee-Knoxville; Agnes (Mrs. Clinton) Marsh, vice president of the National Executive Committee of the United Presbyterian Women; the Rev. Patricia Devoe, pastor of Pleasant Hill United Methodist Church in Maryville; and the Rev. John Stuhl, a 1976 cum laude graduate of MC who is pastor of New Covenant Presbyterian Church, Knoxville.

MC faculty members participating in the Meetings include: Dr. James Bloy, professor of music and chairman of the fine arts department; Dr. Scott Brunger, assistant professor of economics; Dr. Terry Bunde, associate professor of chemistry; Dr. David Cartlidge, professor and chairman of the religion and philosophy department; Robert Ergenbright, assistant professor of music; Leslie Nier, assistant director of admissions and financial aid; and Dr. David Yu, professor of religion and philosophy.

All February Meetings events, which are free and open to the public, will be held in the Center for Campus Ministry unless otherwise indicated. The complete schedule is as follows:

Wednesday, Feb. 22

7p.m. Opening services led by Dr. Lee Humphreys; Music by Robert Ergenbright and Dr. James Bloy; Topic: "Shalom."

Thursday, Feb. 23

12:30 p.m. Lunch in Proffitt Dining Room followed by "table talk" led by Agnes Marsh.

4 p.m. Seminar led by the Rev. John Stuhl; Topic: "Morass Jungle and Desert– Adventures in Wilderness Environment."

Friday, Feb. 24

7:30 a.m. Breakfast in Proffitt Dining Room followed by "table talk" led by the Rev. Pat DeVoe; Topic: "Our Spiritual Journeys."

9:20 a.m. Seminar led by Dr. James Bloy and Dr. David Yu; Topic: "Learning from Eastern Religions."

2:30 p.m. Seminar led by Dr. Scott Brunger and Dr. Terry Bunde; Topic: "Running and Not Being Weary."

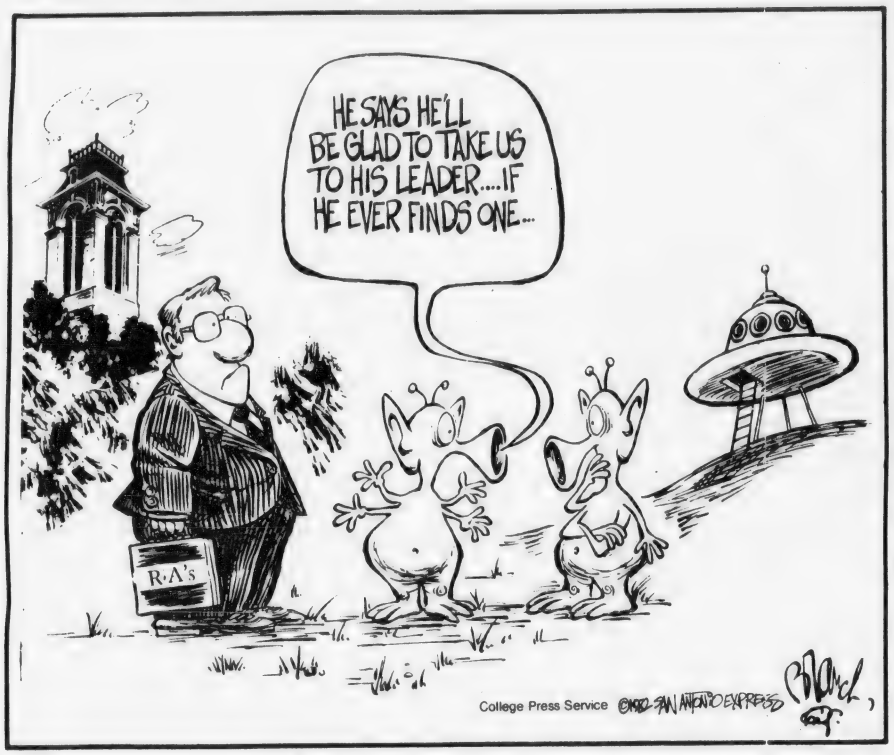
7 p.m. The film "Chariots of Fire" followed by discus-

Cont. page 3

Well, our wildest dreams have come true. Someone has climbed out of the slime of apathy to protest silent arrests - excuse me - people being written up "in abstentia".

If this practice is indeed being practiced, it is evidence of a warp in our judicial system - one that cannot continue very long.

I recant - it cannot continue if the students are determined that it should not continue.



Am I beating a dead mule?

Shall we march?

How about a revolt. We could organize (snicker), rally (yawn), and raise a massive stink (grunt).

And then, after the exodus out of our beds . . .

Ed.

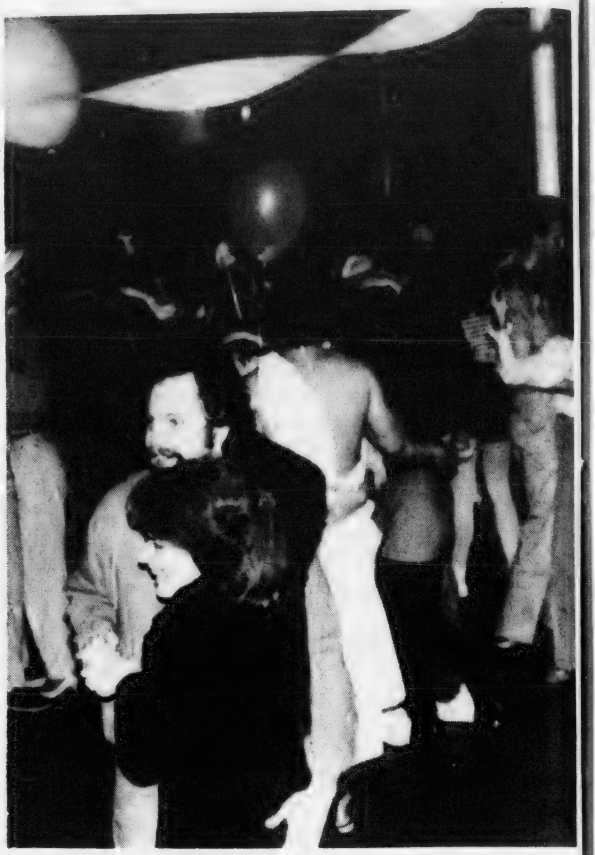
Advanced Decomposition

The jukebox is filled with morphine,
And I rest in a dinette coffin
While I drink my drinks of caffeine.

In my veins runs a solution of saline
I thought I'd leave here more often.
The jukebox is filled with morphine.

My body is cased in plasticene,
I thought my mind would soften,
While I drink my drinks of caffeine

My limbs have begun to daydream
Of a vat of mud to tromp in;
The jukebox is filled with morphine.



Its liquid sounds pump through a sound screen;
I wish that I was not in Boston,
While I drink my drinks of caffeine.

My unhappy form is a sardine
In a coffin that I am lost in.
The jukebox is filled with morphine,
While I drink my drinks of caffeine.

Associates

With Apologies....

To Joe; the Echo withdraws the phrase "Beer Queer"

Basketballs for student use are available in the See Jack Grantham, Betsy or the monitor. I.D. card is necessary.

The weight room, basketball courts, and raquetball courts are also available for student use. Coach Saylor calls students "the first concern," and says if you have any problems in the gym, just speak to him.

In the future, Coach Saylor hopes to add more equipment to the gym.

ECHO

Editor ..... Marta Wittig

Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Photographers ..... Keith Moore
Tara Wey

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

New Minister:
Enthusiasm on the Way

by Ed Welch

Experience and enthusiasm are coming our way. Rev. Earl Rash, presently serving a church in Powell, TN, has been hired as the new chaplain and will begin work after spring break.

Rev. Rash has some exciting goals in mind for MC. First, he says that he is interested in stirring up religious involvement of not only the students but also faculty and staff. He has visions of bringing together the different religious groups on campus for retreats and regular meetings. He stresses the importance of a community that understands people of different beliefs without pushing critical judgements.

From his visits to our college, Rev. Rash said he saw a lot of commitment from students and faculty who get involved with community issues and world-wide events. He specifically mentioned VIM involvement, missions programs, and the jail ministry.

The graduate from Louisville Seminary also brings an interest in counseling to the college. Presently he is taking graduate courses in counseling at the University of Tennessee. He has also been active in pastoral counseling in an interracial community and leading social programs such as the clothes closet, food pantry, and hunger programs.

Rev. Rash has some unique international experiences to offer. While in seminary, he spent a one year internship on the mission field in Zaire, Africa. He also has a definite world outlook after adopting two Filipino children two years ago. This experience points toward sensitivity to people of different cultural backgrounds. He says that he is interested in increasing the involvement of international students and other minority groups.

Unity and community would be the best words to describe Rev. Rash's goals for MC. He is anxious to get to know students, faculty, and staff on a personal basis. He frankly states, "I'm excited."

Questron

CORPORATION

America's newest and fastest-growing nationwide corporation invites you to earn next year's tuition before June.

If you are energetic, outgoing, ambitious, and you enjoy meeting new people, we may just have the opportunity you've always wanted.

Work part-time or full-time.

Set your own hours.

We need Local Representatives and Area Coordinators.

For continuing students, this expands into a highly-lucrative summer position, which flexes back in the fall to fit your academic schedule.

Many permanent positions are available nationwide, as well.

This is a rare and unique ground-floor opportunity which probably will not repeat, once the necessary personnel have been acquired.

To apply, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope. Application form and information will reach you by return mail.

Questron Corporation
Suite 204
2012 Grove Avenue
Richmond, VA 23220

Echo Ear

Kip- Don't boop us, we'll boop you!
Muffy and Mindy

© SCW INC

Pearson's is now accepting applications for private investigators to enforce the visitation policy.

Hey Bunny - What's wrong with wearing a jersey?
Blanche

Pencil Head - Ha!Ha! We're spending Spring Break in the Big Apple. T.B. Wop-Wa Kiki and Corki

Hick took the last trick with the ace of puppy's feet then we all had neighborhood ice-cream. Clever! Oh brother , clover!
the Packlett

Welcome to the world Master Whittum!

Congratulations Wendy & Bruce! M.B.

To my anonymous giver of roses: Thank you so much for brightening my week!! E.B.S. P.S. Who are you?

Happy Birthday, Tyrone! Love, Sara.

"Hey Dipstick! Done any harmonizing with the wolves lately?!"

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In
THE ECHO EAR

Metro Market

Whether an English major who spends days at a non-taxing job and nights drafting the Great American Novel, or a computer science major who dreams of programming by day and taxiing at night to a ballet or symphony orchestra, most graduates face early on the decision of whether or notto work in or near a large city.

Cities of central importance to a particular area, cities that are the center of a certain trade or activity, or cities with a large bustling population are classified as metropolitan areas. And given these credentials, "metros" are, not surprisingly, centersof great job opportunities.

The three largest metro areas in the U.S. are New York, New York; Los Angelos, California; and Chicago, Illinois. Almost unanimously, dwellers rank cultural opportunities and night life as the highest source of satisfaction in these areas.

New York, population 9 million, is the largest U.S. metro area. Manhatten, population 1.4 million, has the highest concentration of jobs in the country. While cultural opportunities are a source of satisfaction to dwellers, less satisfying are municipal government, the school system , safety, cleanliness, and community participation. Greatest employment opportunities are in accounting, business administration, computer science, chemical, electrical or mechanical engineering, and engineering, generally. Prospects are also good for chemistry and science majors.

Los Angeles is the second largest metro area in the U.S. with a population of 7.2 million. Los Angeles ranks high for night life and singles' social life, less highly for public transportation, social services, and community participation. Best job opportunities are in accounting, business administration, computer science, electrical and mechanical engineering, and other engineering fields. Prospects are good for science, chemistry and physics majors.

Chicago is the third largest metro area with a population of 7 million. Cultural opportunities, night life, and social life rate highly, and public transportation is more favorably regarded than in any other city. City dwellers are concerned with safety, but not to the extent of cities such as Detroit or New York. Best employment opportunities are in accounting, business administration, computer science, chemical, electrical, and mechanical engineering, and engineering, generally. Outlook is good for chemistry, physics, and science majors.

Next Week: Large metro areas, northeast and midwest.

Cont. from page 1

sion led by Dr. David Cartlidge

Saturday, Feb. 25

3 p.m. "Physical Exercise for Spiritual Renewal" led by Leslie Nier

Sunday, Feb. 26

7 p.m. Communion services to conclude the Meetings led by the Rev. John Stuhl

February Meetings, an annual tradition at MC since 1877, are planned by a special committee of administrators, staff, faculty, and students. Funding for the Meetings comes from the John Vant Stephens Jr. Fund, established by Mrs. Stephens to provide a Christian influence for worthy youth and to perpetuate the loving memory of her husband, a Presbyterian minister and MC board member for 30 years who died in 1964. Both Dr. and Mrs. Stephens graduated from the College in 1915.

For more information on February Meetings, call the MC Center for Campus Ministry on weekdays at 982-6412, ext. 299.

**

NutraSweet News

by Pam Mathews

Americans love to consume sweet foods, but do not like the calories associated with sugar. Because of this, it has been difficult for the food industry to satisfy our collective sweet tooth. In 1969, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) banned the use of cyclamate as a sugar substitute because of its carcinogenicity. Only Congressional action prevented the agency from removing saccharin from the market for a similar reason. Aspartame, commonly referred to as NutraSweet, was first approved by FDA in 1974 for use in such food items as powdered beverages, puddings, dessert toppings, gelatins, cold cereals, and as a table top sweetner; however, it was never marketed because of challenges over the substance's safety and validity of G.D. Searl and Company's, producer of aspartame data. On July 15, 1981, aspartame was once again approved by the FDA. Now the same questions are popping up as in 1974.

Aspartame has been in existence since 1965. A scientist at the Searle laboratories in Skokie, Ill. accidentally discovered its sweetness while doing research on new ulcer drugs. Aspartame, was first synthesized by the big British company, Imperial Chemical Industries.

Aspartame's basiccharacteristics seem almost too good to be true: it tastes amost exactly like sugar but without the bitter aftertaste of saccharin; it has only a tiny fraction of sugar's calories, and it is 180 times sweeter than sugar. This crystaline white substance, however, costs $85.00 per lb. while sugar is a mere $.29 per lb. and saccharin is $4.00 per lb.

Aspartic acid and phenylalanine, amino acids that are normally found in humans, are the major components of aspartame. Both amino acids are attached to a methyl- ester, a type of structure representing a natural flavoring agent found in fruits and vegetables. Aspartame, when consumed, is metabolized in the same manner as any food substance would be in our bodies.

One of the major drawbacks of aspartame is that it is hazardous to victims of phenylketonuria (PKU), a genetic defect in which the body cannot metabolize the amino acid phenylalanine. The condition, if not treated in the offspring of carriers within days of birth, causes mental retardation and death: thus, all products containing aspartame must bear such a warning. Phenylalanine may also cause mood changes and sleep disturbances.

The other amino acid component, aspartic acid, has not been immune to scrutiny, either. Questions have been raised to the possibility that aspartic acid might cause nerve and brain cell damage in laboratory rats when given in high concentrations.

Because of its nonresistance to heat, aspartame is not used in cooked or baked food. When the decomposition of aspartame occurs, such substances as methanol (wood alcohol), formaldehyde, and formic acid, are produced, all of which are poisionous to nerve and eye tissue

According to Dr. Terry Bunde, Associate Professor of Chemistry at MC, aspartame does not pose much of a problem, except to PKU victims. "Miniscule amounts of methanol and other substances are found in aspartame, but there is not enough to cause any harmful side effects. A glass of milk has more phenylalanine than a soft drink sweetened with aspartame," he explained. "When it decomposes, aspartame loses its sweetness, which makes it somewhat unpalatable."

The use of aspartame is not limited to the U.S. Belgium, Canada, England, France, and Luxembourg have also approved it. Thus, the world-wide approval has added a new chapter to the continuing saga of sugar substitutes.

Basketball

by Chris Porter

During this week, our Scots are on their final road trip of the season. They are facing three ODAC teams on this trip, and because of their sixth-place standing in that conference, the importance of picking up some wins is obvious. The ODAC tournament is coming up fast, and the Scots have already dropped a game to fourth-place Lynchburg at this writing.

The only information that came in from that game was the box scores, so here they are:

MC (76), Ketron 3 2-2 8, Austin 2 2-2 6, Mills 2 3-5 8, Burnett 4 6-6 14, Jackson 3 0-1 6, McDaniel 5 2-2 12, Matthews 2 8-11 12, Kirkpatrick 5 1-1 11. Totals 26 24-30.

Lynchburg (92), Becourvarakis 1 5-6 7, Cheatham 5 1-2 11, Downer 3 1-2 7, Mark 5 2-3 12, Clark 7 0-0 14, Myers 9 7-11 25, Bryant 2 4-6 8, Mazurek 2 4-4 8. Totals 34 24-34.

As evidenced by these boxes, Tom Robinson, who had a 50-50 chance for playing in this game, was not in it. (T.R. had spent some time in the hospital last week due to an illness.)

The Scots play their last regular season games here, facing Washington & Lee on Thursday night, and playing Bridgewater on Saturday night. The ODAC tourney gets underway on Feb. 21.

Fighting the Flu

by Peggy Millsaps

Unseasonably warm, blustery days tempt many of us to discard winter woolens for shorts, sleeveless shirts, and extra time outdoors. Unfortunately, the past few balmy days have coincided with numerous cases of both the common cold and the flu on campus and in the surrounding community. To protect yourself from an ailment even more serious than spring fever, here's what you should know.

No definite link has been established between getting chilled and wet and catching a cold. Fatique, however, chilling, wet clothes, and irritants in the air lower the body's resistance to cold viruses. Symptoms of the common cold include sore throat, runny nose sneezing, headache, fatigue, and chills. Most colds run their course in 3-10 days. Standard treatment - you've heard it before - means bedrest, if necessary, high intake of juice and water, a simple, nutritious diet, avoidance of irritants such as tobacco smoke, and ingestion of aspirin or antihistamines.

If the common cold is a mild, contagious virus, influenza is more serious and more contagious. The usually sudden onset is characterized by chills, fever, headache, general malaise, loss of appetite, body aches, and sometimes nausea and vomiting. Sneezing and runny nose are less prevalent than with a cold, but coughing, hoarseness, and fever are more severe. Treatment consists of 24-28 hours bed rest even after fever abates, high intake of water and fruit juices, light diet, and antibiotics to control secondary bacterial infection.

While no one can prove a definite connection between sprinting barefoot on an uncommonly warm February day and contracting a cold or, worse, the flu, common sense suggests bodies bundled up in winter clothes and warmed by indoor heat for the past several weeks should be exposed only gradually. By all means enjoy these sporadic bouts of warm weather, but watch your diet, avoid fatique, and save your skimpiest clothes for a later date.

Stay well.

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 16 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Friday, February 24, 1984

EMPRESS OF THE AIR, Dolly Jacobs, performs incredible aerial acrobatics high above the arena floor in the all new 113th Edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus at the Knoxville Civic Coliseum Tuesday March 13 through Sunday March 18. See story on page 8.

To Be or Not To Be...ACC

by John Rush

Is the All College Council an effective means of campus governance? This is the core question being studied by the ACC Task Force Evaluation Committee, appointed by President Wayne Anderson. The group is meeting regularly to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the present system, as well as possibilities of a new governance system.

The group consists of faculty members Dr. Fowler, head of the task force, Dr. Howard, Dr. Waters; administrators, Terry Whittum, Jane Richardson, Sid Downey; and students, John Rush, Robert Loray, and Elizabeth Goodier.

The committee lists as the strengths of the present ACC the committee structure; equal representation of students, faculty, and administration; election process and effiency; and the co-chairman position. The weaknesses of the ACC are the group's lack of information, confusion of responsibilities, and the system's susceptibility to manipulation by a few.

Suggestions followed for a better governing body. Terry Whittum drew up a student senate idea in which students would have a collective voice. This, hopefully, would alleviate the rampant problem of student apathy. The group studied other college's handbooks to look at other governing systems.

The group plans to stimulate interest of students, faculty, and administration to help create a functional governing system. Helpful input or criticism can be addressed to any committee member.

MC Places -AUBURN

by Amy Waggoner

Two delegations of Maryville students attended the Southeastern Invitational Model United Nations held at Auburn University February 9-11.

Led by Dr. Young-Bae Kim, Professor of Political Science at Maryville, the student delegates from Maryville College were selected on the basis of their performance in the Model U.N. Security Council during Interim. Representatives included Liz Dishman, Hubert Dixon, Jeff Silver (all representing Czechoslavakia), Kevin Brown, Steve Courtoy, Angela Kirby, and Neal McBrayer (representing Uganda).

During the first two days the delegates met in one of four assigned committees - Economic and Social, Special Political, Political and Security, or Security Council - to debate important resolutions on issues such as nuclear proliferation, human rights, and South Africa. All delegations met on the last day to discuss and vote on the resolutions passed earlier.

The Maryville delegations performed well. Individual awards were given to Angela Kirby, Outstanding Speaker for her work on the Economic and Social Committee, and Neal McBrayer, Honorable Mention for his performances in the Securtiy Council.

The Uganda delegation placed second in the Middle Powers category, while the Czechoslavakia delegation placed third in the same category.

Maryville College as a whole placed second overall, just behind Stetson University.

Maryville's overall showing was excellent, since Maryville was the smallest school at the competition. Other schools competing included Tuskeegee Institute, the University of Alabama, and the University of Tennessee.

CHALLENGE GIFT

Retired businessman and Maryville College alumnus Algie Sutton of Birmingham, Ala., has made a $100,000 challenge gift to MC which could result in $300,000 for the College, MC President Wayne Anderson announced Wednesday.

Sutton, who previously contributed $500,000 on a matching basis with the College's alumni for MC's Sutton Science Center in the 1960s, has challenged alumni and friends to match his gift on a two-to-one basis.

"This generous gift from Algie Sutton, who has already made extraordinary contributions to Maryville College, will help meet a critical need of the institution, namely, the expenses of renovating the residence halls," Dr. Anderson said.

"Algie Sutton's gift will also greatly enhance our efforts to complete the College's Toward Century III fund-raising campaign," Robert A. "Archie" Ellis, Jr., MC vice-president for development, added.

Sutton's gift brings the total raised to date to $10,660,000 in gifts and pledges to the ambitious $11.5 million capital gifts campaign, according to Ellis.

Campus Calendar

February 24

Cheerleader Spaghett Dinner
7:00 p.m. Chariots of Fire, CCM

February 25

9:00 p.m. Coffee House, Lloyd.

February 28

7:30 p.m. MACCO/Jeffrey Solow - cellist, Chapel.

February 29

CIV- TBA

EDITORIAL

Dear Editor,

As the running revolution is spreading across America, Maryville College is standing and watching, but not joining in. Although there is growing interest on campus in running – both men and women – the college administration has dropped the track program, once again, at MC. The students will not have the opportunity to run track this spring because of the current athletic program's structure.

Maryville College used to have championship track teams which competed against UT and other large schools – and won! But those days are long gone, along with the other winning sports teams. The reason for the decline of the quality of sports at MC is partially due to certain administrative decisions. Presently, the college has taken a less aggressive role in fielding winning teams and establishing a solid, well-rounded athletic program. The athletic teams are trying to compete without adequate support from Anderson Hall.

There are many reasons why athletics should be promoted more at Maryville. First, a winning sports program makes students develop pride in their school. Remember MC's home field winning streak in football? Remember how good it felt when this year the basketball team defeated Roanoke College (no. 2 in the nation)? Second, a winning sports program is a great promotional ticket to attract students. American society is sports-crazy and enjoys supporting and being a part of a winning team. Third, more students would lower tuition cost, which in turn would allow more funding for the school to use in all areas. Last, a quality education and a winning sports program go hand-in-hand. No educational institution should attempt to focus on one particular area more than on others, but it should attempt to develop well-rounded students--both academically and athletically.

The means of achieving these four goals is difficult but not impossible. The first and most important factor is budgeting. The athletic department is run on a very low budget. If the budget was increased, MC could hire quality coaches. On the division-three level, a coach can make the difference in a winning or a losing team. Good coaches in turn will attract quality student athletes who can play more than one sport. This would help the total athletic program. Then it would be possible to establish a complete athletic program which would include a track team and possibly many other sports. By having more sports to compete in such as track, the students will become better "all-around" athletes.

The recent dropping of the track program should have never happened. The administration will attempt to claim that there is little interest on campus in track – nothing could be further from the truth! They also will claim that there is not enough money to support a track team – this is also hog wash! If a worthwhile effort had been taken, track would still exist at MC. Some believe that the athletic program is better off now without track, but it actually is hurt because it is incomplete.

Track should be included in the athletic program at Maryville for many reasons. First, it is a low-cost sport. Basically, all the team needs is running shoes and the athletes could purchase these themselves. Compared to "major " sports, a track budget is very small. Second, track is a "lifetime" sport . One can run for the rest of his life, unlike many other sports. Third, more students can participate in track meets than in many other sports because a team can enter more athletes in each event. The athletes don't have to be "starters" to participate. Last, the health benefits of track are greater than in most sports. This is not to take anything away from other sports, because any sports activity is better for one than no sports participation at all. But the health benefits per-time-spent are higher in track than in most sports.

In conclusion, Maryville College needs to reevaluate the athletic program. More funds need to be provided to foster the benefits which a successful athletic program can provide. More "lifetime" sports need to be encouraged because of the long-term benefits and low-cost which would be available to more students; an excellent example is track. The current situation of the sports program is similar to one trying to paddle upstream without a paddle. Why not give the athletic program a paddle? Then MC athletics will move on and progress like it should -- into a complete winning program.

Sincerely

Samuel C. Hill III

ECHO

Editor ..... Marta Wittig

Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Photographers ..... Keith Moore
Tara Wey

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

CONFUSED CLASS ??

This year's freshman class is a bundle of contradictions – it's for school busing, against the legalization of marijuana, slightly more liberal than last vear's freshman class, and yet more concerned with making money -- according to UCLA's just-released national survey of freshman attitudes.

"Probably one of the most significant finding of this year's survey was the concern student voiced about grading in high school being too easy," says Kenneth C. Green, associate director of "The American Freshman" survey, which has been conducted annually since 1966 by the University of California at Los Angeles' Graduate School of Education. It is the biggest survey of its kind.

Students' concern that their high school grading systems were too easy "shows that the national concern over academic quality is not limited to educators and policy experts," Green says.

Over 58 percent of the 254,000 students surveyed at more than 480 colleges felt their high school grades were inflated, compared to 54.5 percent last year.

At the same time, students' high school grades declined for the third year in a row. Only 20.4 percent of the students earned "A" averages in high school, compared to 20.8 percent last year and 23.3 percent in the peak year of 1978.

This year's frosh are also more supportive of busing to integrate schools. For the first time in the history of the survey, over half the students are pro-busing.

Only 36.9 percent of the students support increased military spending, compared to 38.9 percent last year.

More students are for a national health care system and greater government efforts to protect the government.

Nearly half the freshman class of 1970 said married women "belong in the the home." Only 24.5 percent of this year's entering class maintains the same attitude towards women, the study shows.

Overall, more students -- 21.2 percent compared to 20.7 percent last year -- label themselves as "liberal" or "far left" in their political attitudes, while the students labeling themselves as "far right" or "conservative" dropped from 19.4 percent to 18.7 percent.

"Middle of the road" continues to be the most popular lable, endorsed by 60.3 percent of the incoming students.

"But we're finding that more than ever, the traditional labels of liberal, conservative, and middle of the road are not necessarily predictive of student attitudes on certain issues," Green notes.

For instance, fewer students support the legalization of marijuana, greater government vigilance in protecting consumers, or more government-run energy conservative programs.

More students than ever before are interested in making money and "being well off financially," the survey shows.

And the number of students concerned with "developing a meaningful philosophy of life" hit an all time low of 44 percent, down from 46.7 percent last year and 83 percent in 1967.

Business continues to be the most popular major, although the number of students interested in an engineering degree dropped for the first time in several years, from 12 to 10.8 percent.

The number of students interested in teaching rose for the first time in 15 years, from last year's all-time low of 4.7 to slightly over five percent.

"The trends in our data are reflections of the national economy," Green speculates. "The days of the college degree by itself bringing an assured future are gone, and we are seeing that reflected in students' choice of majors and career goals."

Exodus

by Pam Mathews

Shakespeare's immortal words from his play Romeo and Juliet, "Parting is such sweet sorrow," can be applied to the departure on February 29 of Mrs. Exir Brennan, Associate Professor and Director of the Library at MC since 1980. Her new employment is in St. Louis, Missouri where her husband also has a new job. She will be working in the Missouri Court of Appeals as a Law Librarian.

"I'm certainly going to miss Maryville College," she replied. "The staff here is a close knit, supportive group of people. It's been a honor working with them as well as with the students and faculty.

'I love the challenge of academia and the interacting with students and faculty. They're irreplaceable," she continued. "I've been proud to be a part of this institution and what it stands for."

When asked about her new job, she stated, "I'm looking forward to it. I plan to take some of the philosophy that I used at Maryville College and apply it to my occupation as Law Librarian. I'm also looking forward to living in St. Louis. It's a very beautiful and historically rich city that has many cultural opportunities."

In closing, Mrs. Brennan extended the invitation to visit herself and her family in St. Louis. "You could look under Missouri Court of Appeals in the telephone book and I'm sure that you'll be able to contact me."

The college community is losing a valuable asset and will certainly miss her.

NO SHORTAGE

The much-anticipated teacher shortage of the future may not come to pass, a just-released study suggests.

About one of every ten of the nation's college-bound high school juniors and seniors is considering entering the teaching profession, the survey of some 4300 students found.

Given enrollment projections and estimates of how many teachers will be leaving the field, "we're going to have to have 12-to-14 percent of the high school population enter teaching," says John Mangieri, dean of Texas Christian's education school and a co-author of the study.

The study, which Mangieri conducted with University of South Carolina Prof. Richard Kemper, found that only about nine percent of the high schoolers were "very interested" in becoming teachers.

"Where the study gets somewhat optimistic," Mangieri says, "is that 24 percent of the students said they were 'somewhat interested.' Well, what does 'somewhat interested' mean? I don't know. But if some of those kids enter the profession, we may well have an adequate supply of teachers."

Of the people currently in college, only of of 20 plans to become a teacher.

A March, 1983 study by the American Association of Colleges for Teachers Education predicted schools will be able to fill only 96 percent of their vacancies by 1985, and only 80 percent by 1990.

Mangieri contends the most important factor in attracting more students to the profession is offering higher starting salaries.

The current average starting teacher salary is $13,000 to $14,000 a year.

He is designing a study now to find out just how much schools would have to offer to attract more teachers. "My guesstimate to get some of the brightest and best students involved in teaching would be to offer starting salaries of $20,000 to $25,000."

COMPUTER STUDENTS MAY BE PREPARING FOR A PHANTOM JOB MARKET, STANFORD PROF. HENRY LEVINS WARNS.

Levin says most high-tech jobs don't require more than a high school diploma to get, and that there'll be a very small demand for programmers in the future.

Levin says many computer manufacturers in other parts of the world get along with illiterate assembly line workers.

He advises getting a liberal arts education to be safe.

WORK ABROAD!

"My summer work in London was the most satisfying experience of my life. Immersed as a part of the society, among the work force, facing the same problems of inflation and bureaucracy, one cannot help but come to understand how a culture, a people can differ -- in attitudes, outlooks and assumptions."

This was the assessment of one student who participated in the Work Abroad program sponsored by the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE), the largest student travel organization in the United States.

Now in its fourteenth year, the Work Abroad program is the only one of its king available in the U.S. It cuts through the red tape to help thousands of students obtain temporary work in Great Britain, Ireland, France, New Zealand, and for the first time in 1984, Germany. With the assistance of the Council's cooperating student organizations in each country, participants discover that finding a job abroad is no more difficult than at home.

Apart from a modest program fee of $60 ($80 for Germany), the only significant cost to the student is the airfare -- and even that expense may be reduced by special student and youth fares available through the Council.

". . . work abroad is a tremendous learning experience; one is enriched with relationships with fellow workers and the adventure of supporting oneself," reported another student who worked in a Paris boutique.

The jobs are primarily unskilled -- in restaurants, stores, and hotels -- but salaries should more than cover the cost of room and board. Some participants save enough money out of their earnings to treat themselves to a vacation once they stop working.

Employment found by participants in the past includes work as chambermaids or porters in London's West End, as a hot air balloon crewmember in Burgundy and as a wool presser in New Zealand.

The program is limited to students 18 years of age or older. For more information and application forms, write or phone: CIEE. PR-WA, 205 East 42nd Street, New York, NY 10017, (212) 661-1414; or 312 Sutter Street, San Francisco, CA 94108, (415) 421-3473.

DIRECTORY LISTS SUMMER JOBS

BARNSTABLE, Mass.—The seaside resort areas of Cape Cod, Massachusetts and the off-shore islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard are experiencing a growing problem in finding enough college workers to adequately service a rapidly expanding tourist industry.

This summer Cape Cod and the Islands will be offering over 55,000 good paying jobs to college students and teachers. Many of these jobs require little or no prior experience.

Because it is impossible to fill these jobs with local residents, most of whom make up the year 'round work force, it is necessary to draw from other geographic areas to satisfy this seasonal need.

Jobs for Students and Teachers

The Cape Cod Summer Job Bureau gathers all pertinent facts on available summer employment and publishes this information in a concise Job Directory which is available to college students and teachers by February 1st each year.

Names and addresses of individual seasonal employers are listed in separate job categories from bartenders to yacht crews.

The Job Bureau is a service agency, and therefore charges no fees to employers or employees.

An easy-to-use job application form, which is now familiar to the local employer, is included with the Directory along with important tips on how to land a good summer job.

Housing Information Included

This year the Job Directory has a section devoted to seasonal housing which lists addresses of people who lease rooms, efficiencies, cottages, apartments, and group rentals.

A useful reference map of the area is included as is a summary of educational opportunities for college credit, and cultural classes in the arts.

For a copy of the 1984 Directory send $3 (includes 1st Class Postage & handling) to: Cape Cod Summer Job Bureau, Box 594, Barnstable, MA 02630.

AS A GROUP, STUDENTS WITH TEACHING DEGREES DID BETTER IN LABOR MARKET THAN OTHER GROUPS OF GRADUATES, THE NATIONAL CENTER FOR EDUCATION STATISTICS SAYS.

In a survey of how grads did in 1978 and 1981, NCES found that new teachers in those years enjoyed better luck finding jobs in their fields, getting full-time work and lower unemployment rates than other groups of bachelor's degree recipients.

Also, the number of new teachers dropped 23% from 1978 to 1981.

75% of the grads in both years, however, got teaching jobs.

Midwest Metros

by Peggy Millsaps

In addition to New York and Chicago, there are fourteen large metro areas in the United States, each with a population of one million plus. Among these older, industrialized sections are the North-East and Midwest cities such as Boston, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, and St. Louis. Here's a look at lifestyles and job opportunities of each.

Boston, MA is the sixth largest metro area with a population of 3.9 million. Boston rates highly for cultural opportunities, recreational facilities, and restaurants, less highly for municipal government and public transportation. Best job opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, and chemical, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Prospects are good for chemistry and science majors.

Cincinnati, OH is the twenty-seventh largest metro area with a population of 1.4 million. Residents rate the city highly for municipal government, cultural opportunities, restaurants, safety, and community participation, less highly for public transportation. Best opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, chemical, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Prospects for chemistry and science majors are fair, but not as good as in Boston.

Cleveland, OH is the seventeenth largest metro area with a population of 1.9 million. Cleveland rates well for cultural opportunities and restaurants, not as well for cleanliness, safety, community participation, and singles' social life. Best opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, and chemical, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Prospects are fair for chemistry and science majors.

Detroit, MI is the fifth largest metro area with a population of 4.4 million. Due to the loss of jobs in the automobile industry in 1980, the area is still struggling to recover. Dwellers do not rate highly the quality of life in the city or suburbs. Recreational facilities, restaurants, and the school system are rated mildly positively; social services, safety, community participation and social life for married people rate rather low. Best job opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, and chemical, civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Outlook is fair for chemistry and science majors.

Philadelphia, PA is the fourth largest metro area, with a population of 4.7 million. Resident's attitudes toward cultural opportunities and restaurants are favorable; less favorable toward the municipal government and community participation. Best opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, and chemical, civil, electrical, and

continued page 7

coupon
$2 OFF any LARGE or MEDIUM PIZZA
Coupon must be presented.
Not valid with any other offer.
Godfather's Pizza
501 CUSICK ST. MARYVILLE 983-6800
Good at Maryville location only.

COY CO-EDS

"Ten years ago, I would have expected all kinds of angry people outside my office, throwing things and yelling," reflects Jim Korris, an executive at Universal Studios.

In January, Korris' company advertised in some 150 campus newspapers nationwide for the chance to see pictures of college women with good bodies.

The venture was noteworthy not just for the number of women who responded -- about 100 pictures a day arrived at Universal during the month -- but for the almost complete absence of protest from the nation's campuses.

The ad read:"Wanted: Good Looking Coeds to appear in female roles in a new tv series LEGMEN."

It then instructed interested women to send photos to Universal, which would get to keep the pictures.

The ad, observes Denise Kohn, managing editor of the student newspaper at North Texas State, "was probably sexist," but it drew "no negative response" from readers when it appeared in the paper.

Kohn did run a "tongue-in-cheek" story about the ad because "everyone here found the ad humorous."

At Georgia State, there was "no reaction, other than that of one person I know of, and (she) liked the idea of being in a tv show," recalls Donna Mitchell, business manager of the Signal.

Katie Lutrey, business manager of The Metropolitan at Metropolitan State College in Denver, also detected "no outside reaction. We kidded about it in the office, but there was no outside reaction."

At Pima Community College in Arizona, Aztec Editor Russ Fortuna never heard a peep about the ad.

'I read the Aztec, and I didn't even notice that ad," says June Davidson of the college's Women's Center.

Apparently the only campus in the nation that even questioned the ad was the University of Wisconsin, where the ad slipped into the Daily Cardinal by mistake.

The ad arrived in the office during a time of "great pressure," recalls Editor Charles Mortell, and the distracted staff failed to consider its message. When the ad appeared, four people called to ask if the Cardinal had changed its policy against publishing sexist advertising.

The Cardinal hadn't, and published an editorial subsequently apologizing for running the ad.

"On the average, Madison students are more liberal than most," Mortell explains. Their sensitivity to the issue of valuing women's worth by their bodies "is something to be proud of."

The feminist sensibility, says Harry Sherman, who helped write the ad and whose College Media Placement Service distributed it to the college press, is "always a concern."

Sherman denies the ad insulted women. "If it did, we would get complaints. I think it's great we don't get complaints."

"We put the ad out with a clear conscience," adds Korris, who is in charge of promoting "Legman," which is about two male college students who do the legwork for a private investigation firm.

But "I suppose the ad could have read 'photogenic' instead of 'good looking,' " he notes.

Universal plans to hire as many as 20 college women per episode, mostly as walk-ons, Korris explains.

He says the studio wanted fresh female faces because the Los Angeles talent pool offers mostly "ingenues who play older" than they are.

"Casting for young looks," he says, "is a constant problem."

Universal got plenty of new faces to review. About 1000 of the applications it received were forwarded to the casting department.

"You wouldn't believe how many applicants wrote on their pictures 'I have great legs,'" Korris says with some dismay. "We weren't looking for just great gams."

VARIATIONS ON THE THEME OF MACHISMO

BY ROLANDO PÉREZ BETANCOURT
Columnist for Granma daily

THERE ARE several species of the "homo macho" family still around this beautiful island of ours, though they are fortunately headed for change. There's the macho through and through, the pure troglodyte (or Stone-Age vintage type) whose shackles rise at the mere mention of the "weaker sex." Liberation? Equality? Parity social responsibility? Grrr....

The pure troglodyte's idea of the perfect woman (according to him the only one that should exist) is the one whose skull, instead of having a brain, serves as a pot of beans and rice (no fancy dishes), a broom and a washtub (he's not in favor of washing machines). The more ignorant and dependent on him she is, the better. She will then turn to her cave lord, for he is the font of all things: "Nine times nine? Eighty-one. Who discovered Cuba? Why Columbus, of course, back in 1492. Don't worry your little head about it. As long as I know the answers, you got no problems. Don't waste your time reading books. There's a world of things to be done right here at home. A world, you hear?"

Then there's the theoretician type, a mixture of Schopenhauer and bar expert, who has been around. "I've got experience, buddy, you can say that again. The only way to treat women is to be sweet and loving today and beat the hell out of them tomorrow, even if they ain't done nothin', just so they'll know who's the man around." This type of troglodyte is willing to make "conceptions" with the personal stamp of the sharp observer: for example, he's not against women dentists, but he has his tooth pulled by a strong male fist. Women computer operators? "Well, if there's nobody else, okay, but I'll take a man any time. More brains, faster thinking. After all, women are the cooks in the home but in the restaurants who are the kings of international haute cuisine? The chefs, man, the chefs!"

The theoretical troglodyte is always looking for the ideal woman, a mixture of loving mother concerned for her children's well-being, diligent housewife, first-rate cook, vanguard domestic worker and alluring, murmuring movie siren under the late-night moon and stars. This is what the troglodyte goes on demanding...but without giving anything in return.

The closet troglodyte distinguishes himself for his long harangues at work, in the bar or on the street corner as to the woman of our times, macho-free, helped by a loving husband like him...and who, when he heads "home, sweet home," no sooner opens the door than the public facade drops and he lets out a grrr....

Casting

Creators of a soon-to-be published national directory of talented youth are sending out a call for fresh young faces who need help in pursuing professional modeling or performing careers.

The directory, its publishers say, will provide photos and data for casting directors and agents seeking talented individuals under 25.

Melba Huber, creator of the directory, says there's a current exodus from both Hollywood and New York by producers and directors who envision greener pastures elsewhere. "Most states have recognized the economic boost that comes with a feature film," says Huber. "As a result, acting opportunities are being created for local talent as extras, in bit parts, or even in starring roles."

Huber helped launch the career of 1983 Tony Award winner Betty Buckley, star of the Broadway smash, "Cats." After spying Buckley in a Miss Texas pageant, Huber arranged an audition that was to propel the actress from college to Broadway, where she's since appeared in "1776" and "Promises, Promises." She's also played the mother in TV's "Eight Is Enough" and had a role in the film, "Tender Mercies."

From Hollywood to New York, over 1,000 casting directors and agents will receive complimentary copies of the directory. Listings range from $45 to $120 dependent upon whether the model or talent wants 1, 2, or 5 photos published. The publication of the directory is scheduled for late April or early May.

For more information, write National Young Talent Directory, Melba's, Inc., P.O. Box 3664, McAllen, Texas 78502, or call (512) 686-3996. Break a leg!

February Meetings Underway

by Ed Welch

February Meetings are off and running. Opening worship was Wednesday; seminars and fellowship will continue through Sunday, Feb. 26th. Everyone from all denominations and religious faiths are welcome to attend these unique meetings.

Following this year's theme of "Run and Not Be Weary-Stamina for Faith," the Rev. Pat Devoe will be speaking on "Our Spiritual Journeys" at breakfast Friday. The session will begin at 7:30 a.m. in Proffitt Dining Room. Rev. Devoe has a special interest in meditation and deepening spiritual life. Dr. Harry Howard and Tony Volkadov will introduce her.

Then, if you are not weary from the breakfast session (and let us hope you won't be), run over to CCM for a 9:20 session with MC's Dr. James Bloy and Dr. David Yu. They will speak on "Learning from Eastern Religions." Dr. Bloy recently spent time at Harvard University studying Eastern Religions, and Dr. Yu, being from China, has first-hand insight into the subject. Exir Brennan and Tommy Brown will introduce the speakers.

As a sideline to this session, the MC community will want to come bid farewell and good luck to Exir Brennan, the head librarian. She will be leaving MC to join her husband and take a job in St. Louis. Come join the college in saying thanks to Mrs. Breannan.

After the 9:20 seminar, the running slows down until 2:30 when Dr. Terry Bunde and Dr. Scott Brunger lead a discussion on the peace movement and world missions. Donna Davis and Jim Kidder will do the introductions.

To illustrate some physical and spiritual running, the movie "Chariots of Fire" will be shown on a widescreen at 7 p.m. at a location to be announced. Dr. David Cartlidge will lead a discussion following the movie.

After an inspiring day on Friday, everyone is invited to join Leslie Nier on Saturday for some physical running and exercise. She will lead a session on "Physical Exercise as a source of Spiritual Renewal" at 3 p.m. in the gym. Dr. Bob Ramger and Leslie Boand will assit her.

The closing worship service for February Meetings will be Sunday Night at 7 p.m. in the CCM. Rev. John Stuhl of New Covenant Presbyterian Church in Knoxville will lead a communion service. Dr. Brunger and Bryan McFarland will join Rev. Stuhl in the leadership of the service.

February Meetings has been a special time at Maryville College for over one hundred years. It is a time to worship, to learn, to fellowship, to sing, and to grow as a supportive college community. Join in the celebration and make this year's meetings a time to remember.

ITS THAT TIME OF THE YEAR AGAIN!!! ITS TIME TO CHOSE...

THE EDITORS FOR THE ECHO, THE CHILHOWEAN AND IMPRESSIONS!

TO BE QUALIFIED FOR THE EDITORSHIP OF THE ECHO, THE STUDENT MUST BE A RISING JUNIOR OR SENIOR WITH A CUMULATIVE G.P.A. OF AT LEAST 2.5 FOR ALL COLLEGE WORK IN ADDITION SHE/HE MUST HAVE AT LEAST THREE TERMS OF EXPERIENCE ON THE STAFF OF A COLLEGE NEWS-PAPER, WITH ONE OF THOSE ON THE ECHO STAFF.

QUALIFICATION OF THE EDITORSHIP FOR THE CHILHOWEAN ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Rising sophomore with a cumulative G.P.A. of at least 2.5 for all college work. Some experience on the staff of a college annual or similar publication.

QUALIFICATION OF THE EDITORSHIP FOR IMPRESSIONS ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Some experience on a staff or a newspaper or literary magazine.

The position is open to all students except for freshman who have cumulative G.P.A. of at least 2.5 for all college work.

THE APPLICATIONS CAN BE PICKED UP IN THE OFFICE OF STUDENT AFFAIRS. THESE APPLICATIONS MUST BE FILLED OUT AND RETURNED TO THE OFFICE OF STUDENT AFFAIRS BY FEBRUARY 17th.

Good News.... More Improvements

by Rick Carver

In case you've been wondering if Maryville College decided to stop progressing toward the future - don't.

Several renovations and improvements, in addition to the remodeling of the dorms, have been undertaken. The encapsulating of the asbestos in Lloyd dormitory is now complete and new carpet has also been added. The Samuel T. Wilson chapel is the recipient of a new airconditioning system. According to Mr. Bill Slater, Director of Maintenance, the air conditioning system consists of a pipeline that is connected to the large chiller in Sutton Science Center. Mr. Slater commented that the new system should be economically efficient because it deals with the flow of cold water as the cooling agent.

More building improvements are on the way in efforts to keep MC in tune with the changing times.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.00 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12:45 2:55 5:05 7:15 9:25 Footloose PG
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00 • TOM SELLECK • LASSITER R
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00 MICHAEL CAINE IN Blame it on RIO R
1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15 See it with someone you trust. Unfaithfully Yours PG

Echo Ear

"Where's the warrior without his pride?" A.A.

What has the Island Girl done with her malamute?

Hey duds at the back table How was the graveyard Sunday Night? - Spanky

E.B.S. - You're welcome. Who I am is not important. That you know I care about you is important. - AGOR

Season Winds Down

SPORTS

Men's Basketball

by Chris Porter

A breakdown on defense and a thirty-foot jump-shot at the buzzer spelled defeat for the Scots last Wednesday night against Emory and Henry, 64-62. E-H hit the shot in the last second of overtime in a game that shouldn't have been close.

The Scots, tired from their long road trip to Virginia, where they came off 1-2 (beating Hampden-Sydney and bowing to Lynchburg and a rejuvinated Roanoke team), were not ready for this against against the ODAC's last place team. James Austin didn't even play because of flu. T.R. played with a shirt under his uniform. Stix was on his way to recovery, hitting 7 field goals and 3 free-throws. Ditto for DeAngelo, who hit for 17, also. Tyrone was hot with 12. So what happened? The long road trip, especially with the epidemic travelling along, took its toll.

The Scots were ahead most of the game (except the end, of course). The score at the half was 35-27. No problem. The second half looked good for awhile, but E-H started to penetrate the zone, while tightening their man to man coverage.

At the 5-minute mark, the Scots held on to a 54-52 lead. Paul Mills hit 2 F.T.s, but E-H hit a jumper. T.R. got caught walking, and E-H capitalized on the possession, tying it at 56. The teams traded two more goals, and the Scots had the ball for the last two minutes but could not break the tie.

When E-H scored the first bucket in the overtime period, Tom Bill told me that the first team to score in OT won 90% of the time. The Scots came back to tie it up again, but with six seconds left, E-H got the rebound from a missed foul shot and put up a Hail Mary shot from at least 30 ft. that ended the game. Coach Lambert put it this way:

"We just didn't have the shots when we needed them."

Scots Whip Washington

The Scots looked better against Washington & Lee, handing them a 72-64 defeat. Stix and DeAngelo were hot again, each hitting for 21 in this one. Mills and Ray Burnett both got off, getting 8 apiece. Tyrone got 6 and James got 4.

The defense, as a whole, looked better than they did against E-H. They had 32 rebounds and 11 steals.

This is not to say that the Scots had an easy time of it. There was more than a little excitement near the end. W&L's defense, in man coverage, starting picking up Mills' pivot and the fast breaks that resulted from two steals put W&L within 4 points with three minutes left. Memories of the night before haunted the small but spirited crowd; the Scots, however, were not scared - they were determined to win.

Burnett hit an inside jumper. The Scots got the ball back and McDaniels hit one. W&L got another bucket, but Burnett hit the final one, putting the Scots up by eight.

Ladies Basketball

By Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots Basketball team has come alive for the latter half of the season by winning their last five games in a row, thus improving their record to 12-11. The Ladies are gearing up for a tournament appearance at Sewanee this week. The team opens up against Fisk on Thursday and must win in order to play on Friday and Saturday.

A quick recap of the last seven games starts with a 79-64 loss to Tenn. Temple with Sara Covington (19) and Trina Fancher (16) leading the Lady Scots. An 89-66 loss to LMU followed with Sara Covington (25), Mimi Chesney (15), and Kathy Pennington (14) providing the offensive punch for Maryville. The Lady Scots then rebounded with a 65-52 win against Millsaps, and they have not lost since. Mimi Chesney (17), Trina Fancher (16), and Penny Head (12) combined offensively for the Lady Scots' cause. The team went on to squeeze by Judson 52-51 with Kathy Pennington (12) and Trina Fancher, Mimi Chesney, and Sara Covington adding ten apiece to lead Maryville. The team continued its winning ways with a 63-54 win over King, courtesy of Sara Covington (15), Mimi Chesney (14), and Penny Head ((11). Sara (21), Penny (10), and Kathy (10) combined to lead the Ladies in a 59-42 victory over Sewanee. In their final home game of the season, the Lady Scots played some outstanding roundball enroute to a 74-69 victory over Centre. Sara (20), Penny (18), and Trina (16) lead the Lady Scots' offensive charge.

Saying goodbye is always difficult, but the Lady Scots extend best wishes and good luck to seniors Jenny Black and Nickie Frazier. It's been a pleasure, Ladies! So ends the '83-'84 season mechanical engineering. Outlook is good for chemistry majors and science majors not in chemistry or physics.

OLD TIMERS

continued from page 4

St. Louis, MO is the twelfth largest metro area with a population of 2.3 million. Residents rate well cultural opportunities, recreational facilities, and social life for married couples. Best opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, and chemical, civil, electrical, and mechanical engineering. Next best opportunities are in chemistry and sciences other than chemistry or physics. Next Week: New England and Mid-Atlantic regions, small cities and towns; metro employment prospects for humanities majors.

Final Victory

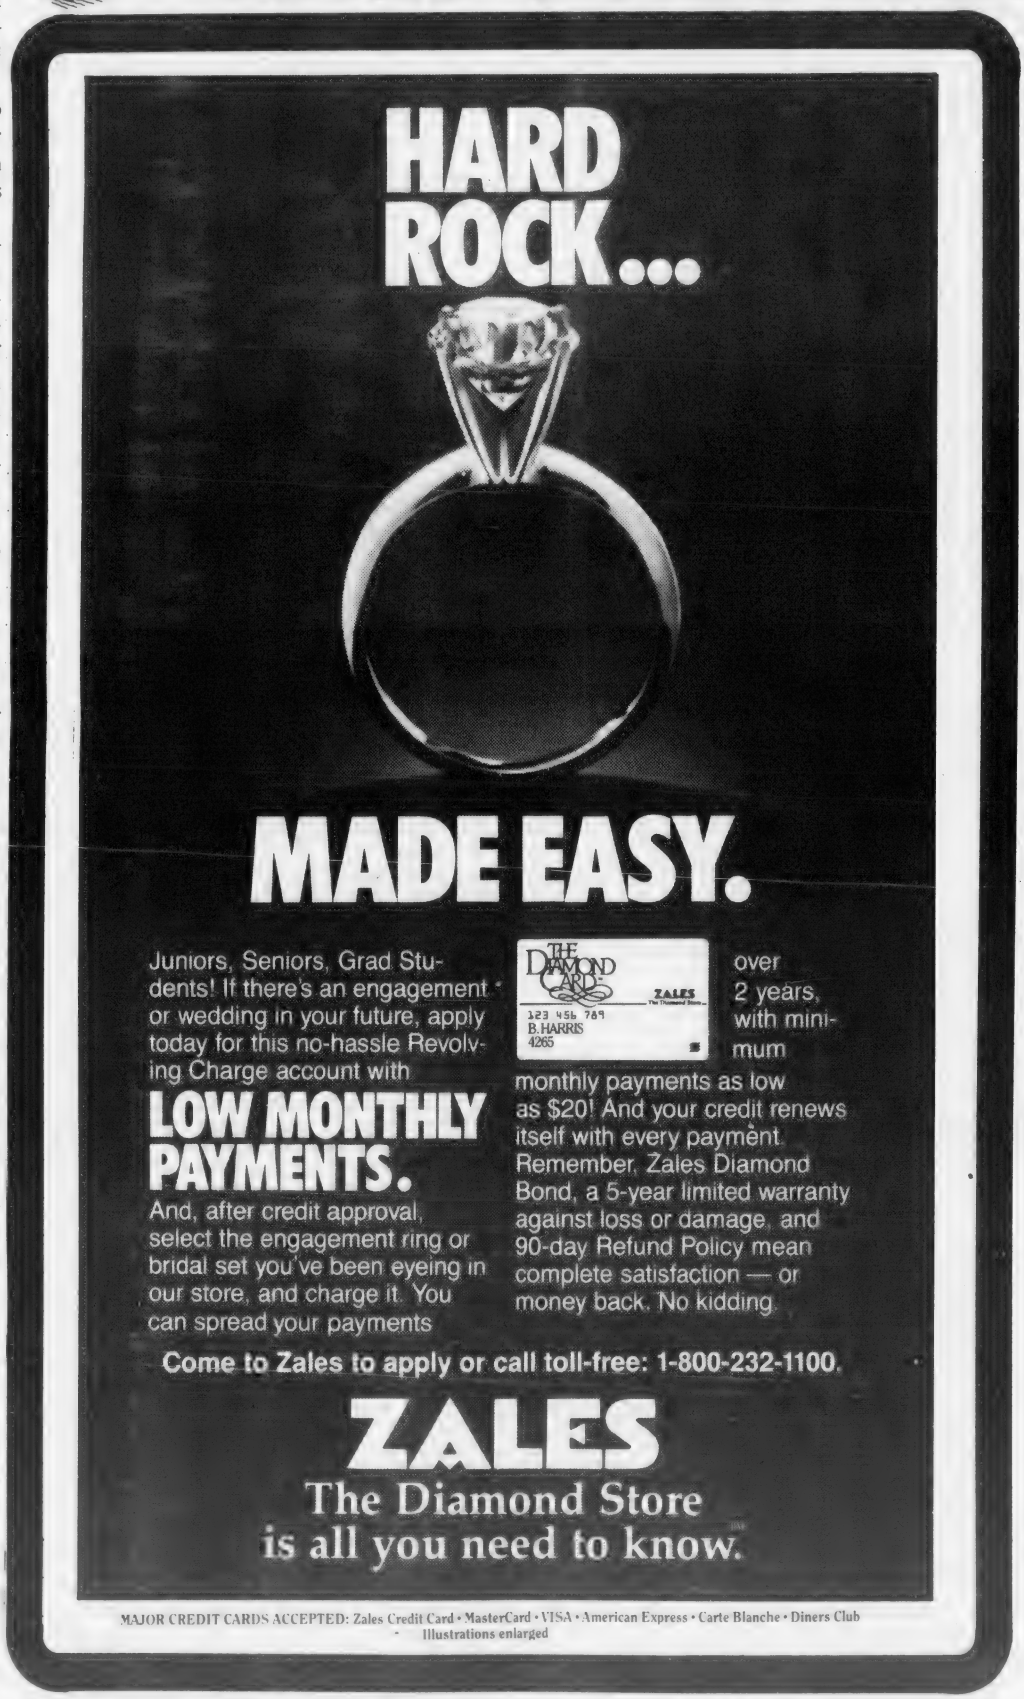
The Scots played their final game of the season - and won- against Bridgewater College last Saturday night. The game was never in doubt as the Scots whipped them soundly, 86-55. McDaniel, this time, had 23 points to his credit, leading the scoring for the Scots. Here's the rest of the scoring: Mills, 14, Burnett, 12; Todd Jackson, 9; Matthews, 8; Stix, 6; Austin,6; Ketron, 4; Blair, 4. That's a lot of scoring.

The defense had a field day, grabbing 48 rebounds to a dubious 26 by the visitors. The steals also went in the Scots' favor. They got 11, while Bridgewater had 6.

The Scots put on an excellent performance last Saturday night, but this week they have to travel to Virginia to compete in the ODAC tourney. Last seen, the Scots were headed for Washington, D.C., for their game against Catholic University. If they win, they get to play their next game on a neutral court. Good luck to our Scots.

CIRCUS!

People would stare at beautiful Dolly Jacobs even if she weren't suspended high in the air over the arena floor performing her balletic aerial heroics. But Dolly Jacobs wasn't content to be earthbound and admired for her good looks. She worked diligently to create the most spectacular Roman Rings displays in over four decades of Circus artistry.



Dolly's incredible act, usually shunned by women because of its physical rigors, is a highlight of the thrill-filled 113th Edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus, produced by Irvin Feld and Kennth Feld and coming to Knoxville's Civic Coliseum on Tuesday March 13 for 12 startling performances through Sunday March 18.

Never satisfied with her own ethereal efforts, Dolly Jacobs recently added a breath-taking new finale to her act -- a somersault dismount from the rings! This involves a risky mid-air passage from the rings -- with no net-- to grasp a rope by which she descends from her airy perch. An extremely dangerous feat, Dolly brought the trick out of 40-year retirement to climax an already sensational performance.

A true child of the Circus, Dolly is the daughter of the beloved veteran clown Lou Jacobs. Her rare beauty and classic style, coupled with the sensational control she exercises over the demanding steel circles, have made her a natural successor to the legendary Lillian Lietzel, the charismatic beauty of the 1920s who had been the unchallenged Queen of the Roman Rings.

Other incredible performers in this edition of The Greatest Show On Earth include the greatest wild animal trainer of all time--Gunther Gabel Williams in three exciting displays. This season marks the Circus debut of America's favorite pussycat, The Pink Panther who keeps popping up in the most unexpected places. The Carillo Brothers hop, skip and jump along a 40-foot-high 5/8-inch steel strand and The Fearless Bauers execute flawless exchanges on swaypoles 70 feet above the arena floor. Also two exquisite troupes of the Flying Espanas perform feats of derring-do on the flying trapeze.

Tickets for the exciting new 113th Edition of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus are now on sale at the Coliseum Box Office and Ticketron Outlets in all area Miller's Stores in Knoxville, Maryville and Oak Ridge. Ticket prices are $7.00 and $8.50 including tax with $1.00 discounts for children under 12 for selected performances. All seats are reserved.

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 17 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, March 1, 1984

LEGISLATION Better Schools Program

by Pam Mathews

Education has become one of the primary concerns of the American public. During the past year, a deluge of reports have described a nation with diminishing basic skills, a deteriorating ability to compete with a high-tech rival such as Japan, and a drastic drop in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores.

Here in Tennessee, the General Assembly recently passed legislation to upgrade education's faltering stance. The Better Schools Program, as proposed by Governor Lamar Alexander a little over a year ago, seeks to remedy the education ills in Tennessee and to possibly be a model for the rest of the United States. Florida, too, has recently passed similar legislation dealing with education reform. Gov. Alexander's Better Schools Program is based on ten points, with the Master Teacher Program at its core.

The first point of action is that of basic skills which established 1,300 skills in math and reading, 680 of which are required to be learned. Every child, except those who are severly handicapped, is required, by the year 1990, to pass a basic skills competency test before starting the ninth grade.

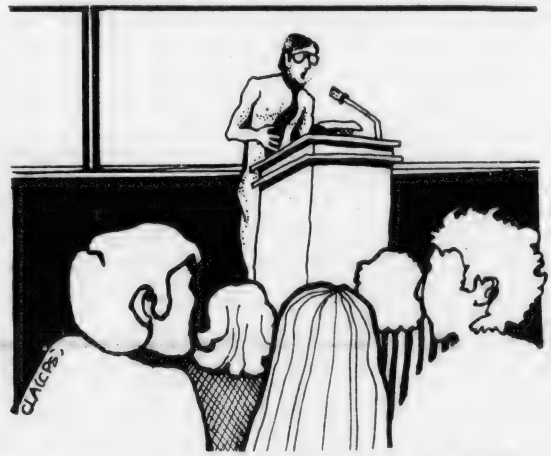
The next point emphasizes that every child should have some knowledge of basic computer skills before the ninth grade.

All children are obligated to enter school at the kindergarten level, according to the third point.

The requisite of one math credit and one science credit is doubled under the fourth point.

In order to reward academic excellence and not just athletic excellence, the fifth point stresses the formation of special residential summer schools for gifted juniors and seniors in high school.

The redefinition of high school vocational education curriculum in order to move closer to the occupations of the 80's and to provide the essential equipment is the concern of the sixth point.



Under the seventh point, referring to classroom discipline, is the creation of alternative schools for students who disrupt the classroom. The seventh point also includes the support of state-paid liability insurance for teachers and other school personnel.

According to the eighth point, the Adult Job Skill Training Plan would be placed under a board of regents, because the 40 community colleges, technical institutes, and area vocational schools in Tennessee should have a single overall management. The primary reason for those over 21 returning to school is to renew basic skills, and learn computer skills or new job skills.

The ninth point accentuates centers of excellence at universities by providing sufficient funding for first-rate programs and improved support for better teaching and research.

The final and most important point is that of the Master Teacher/Master Principal Program. The Master Teacher Program supplies something that currently is non-existant in most school systems: a career ladder that provides opportunities for advancement and incentive pay. These four steps of the career ladder are: apprentice, professional, senior, and master. The apprentice teacher is at the first rung of the career ladder. A teacher rewarded professional status will earn $1,000.00 more than the average teacher currently makes. A senior teacher will be paid $2,000 more by the state for a ten month contract and $4,000 more for an 11-month contract. This means that a ten year teacher who earns $16,669 will receive an increase up to $20,669 a year. The final rung of the career ladder is master teacher status which requires that a teacher has a minimum of thirteen years experience. A teacher earning this status will also have other responsibilities such as evaluating other teachers in different school districts.

Financing for the Better Schools Program will be collected from a 5 1/2% amusement tax and a 1 cent increase in the sales tax.

Apply Now

Beginning next week, the Office of Student Affairs will be accepting applications for the positions of residence hall RA s and SA s

To qualify, students must be of upper class standing and must have a GPA of 2.5. Other qualifications are listed in the application packet. Interested students, further, must secure references by a faculty member and be interviewed by at least two chosen committees.

"Student Affairs takes the job of RA s and SA s seriously," says Bruce Guillaume, director of the Institute of Lifestyle Development. "We look at it as a job and want quality people who look at it the same way."

Application deadline is March 30.

Campus Calendar

March 1

7:00 p.m. Faculty/Staff vs. Copeland at Basketball Main gym, $.50.

8:15 p.m. Tracy DePue-Senior Recital, piano. FAC Music Hall.

March 2

NCAA Tournament. TBA.

March 3

NCAA Tournament. TBA.

Scot's Baseball vs. Cumberland College, Away.

9:00 p.m. BSA Dance.

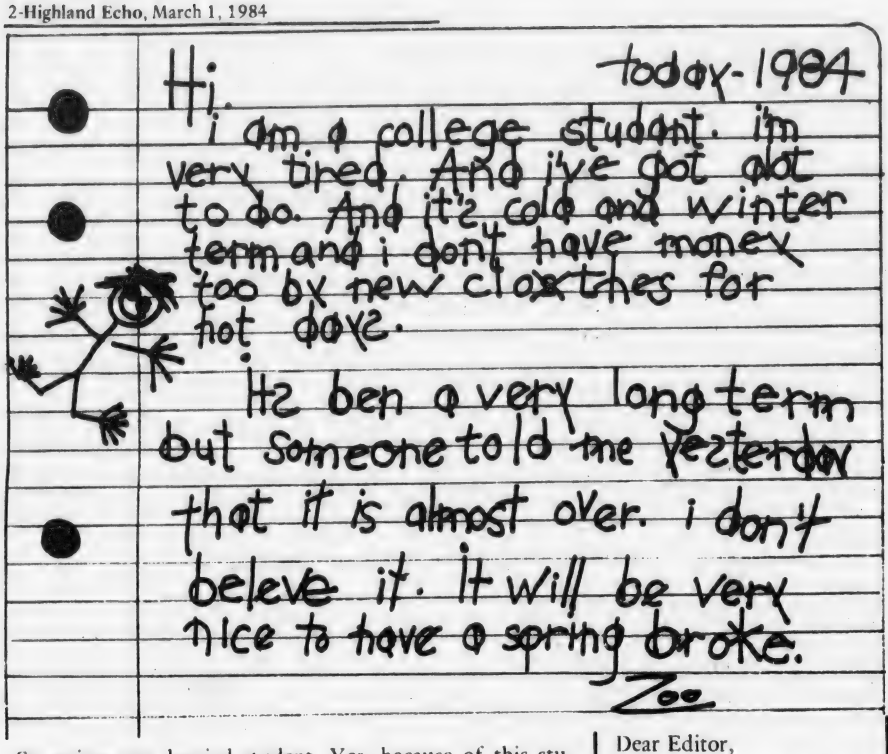
March 4

1:00 p.m. Men's Tennis vs. Lynchburg College. HOME.

March 5

Scot's Baseball at Bryan College Tournament. Away.

March 7



Ash Wednesday

9:20 a.m. CIV - Elizabeth Thach and Jim Carpenter, "Land Between the Lakes," FAC Music Hall.

10:30 a.m. Intervarsity Christian Fellowship leads Ash Wednesday Service.

Scot's Baseball at Bryan College Tournament. AWAY.

Pre-Season Outlook: page 4

So writes one harried student. Yes, because of this student's love for and great devotion to school, he/she is a wasted human being.

Much the same carnage is created by drugs, sex, alcohol, and sometimes even rock 'n' roll. But check the price differential. They create the same effect, yet are much cheaper than school.

I recommend, along with the Bored of Health and the General's Surgeon, that for your physical and financial welfare, you give up school for Lent.

I know -- it will be very hard to do this. However, I am not without suggestions. In order to buffer your withdrawal symptoms, I advise you to take the inexpensive route to destruction in the form of drugs, sex, alcohol, and rock 'n' roll; then, very slowly, begin to decrease your daily dosage, until you reach the prescribed maximum of "moderately excessive".

Indeed, you may miss they joy of midnight homework sessions and the twilight of the library, but I'm sure you'll soon realize that the rejuvenation of your spirits is well worth the cost, however great it may be.

What's that? You've been on this program for years?

Ed.

ECHO

Editor . . . . . Marta Z. Wittig
Assistant Editor . . . . . Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor . . . . . Chris Porter
Photographers . . . . . Keith Moore
. . . . . Tara Wey
Artist . . . . . Helen McNeill

FINE PRINT:
Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Letters

Another manifestation of the negative effect that Maryville College has received since the building of the Smokey Mountain Highway extension has arisen to the current scene. I am speaking more precisely of the condition of the roads on the college campus. Day after day, hour after rush hour, traffic from the town permeates campus roads, which are currently the most expedient routes while highway work is in progress. Add to this overburdening of traffic the lot of government road vehicles, which displace the existing college roads to the point where they are intolerable to drive on. Potholes abound near the exit to Crawford Street, and the other roads are beginning to show wear also. These gaping holes not only throw off the alignment of many vehicles, they are annoying to drive over.

Simply put, it is the fault of the new highway extension that the college has become a thorough fare. It is because of the added wear of abnormal traffic that these potholes have arisen. Therefore, it is the duty of the highway department to rectify this situation to tie-over until the completion of the highway. The safety and comfort of Maryville traffic depends upon this.

Nick Venditti

Dear Editor,

Recently, some attention has been given to the occasional practice of RA/SA members not immediately notifying students that they have been "written up" for a violation.

In principal, I agree. Students should be notified when they have been written up. However, there are circumstances when it is in the best interest of all parties involved not to immediately notify the student.

The first circumstance is when a student has become angry, unruly, antagonistic towards authority or has the potential to become violent. In cases like this, staff members are trained to defuse the situation as quickly as possible. Notifying the student that he is written up can only lead to escalating an already difficult situation.

A second circumstance occurs when a Resident Director tells a staff member to write up a student for a violation. This happens when a staff member reports an incident to the R.D. which the staff member may feel is a minor offense. However, the R.D. may have prior knowledge that other members have had to warn the student about the same violation. At this time, the R.D. may decide that action is called for, and the student is then written up by the staff member.

The third circumstance is probably the most common. Staff members are students doing a difficult job. We sometimes forget that they are subject to the same pressures and frustrations of all students. Staff members do, occasionally, have "bad days," and on those days, by not immediately writing up a student, it gives them the chance to calm down and look at the situation more objectively.

It is clear to me that there must be some flexibility concerning this issue. Staff members should notify students immediately, that they are being written up, whenever possible.

Students must realize that staff members have to do their job and everyone is not always happy when they do.

Of course, if we had no violations, no one would be written up, and we would not have this problem.

Sincerely
Terry Whittum

Jobs? Where

by Peggy Millsaps

Six states make up the New England region of the country: Connecticut, Maine, Massachusettes, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont. Best job opportunities, collectively, in this area are in accounting, business, computer science, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical, and other engineering, and chemistry, physics, and other sciences

New Jersey, New York, and Pennsylvania comprise the mid-Atlantic region. This area's best job opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical, and other engineering, and chemistry, physics, and other sciences.

Humanities and other majors needn't despair at the seeming paucity of jobs other than business, computer science, or engineering listed in previous columns. Jobs for other majors do exist; the trick is finding them.

Career Planning and Placement has tips and information on identifying and developing job-related skills and preparing resumes for humanities majors. CPP sources such as William J. Burney's Where the Jobs Are lists specific employers of non-business and - science majors. In the 80's tight job market, every edge counts.

Next week: medium-size Midwest metro areas.

Go Fly A Kite

by Amy Waggoner

NEWS FLASH! A new, previously unknown cure has been found for the dreaded Winter Term/Research Paper disease. The new cure is relatively inexpensive and can take place in only one afternoon. It will leave you refreshed, relaxed and ready to tackle even the biggest term paper, special project, book review, or Independent Study.

What is this new miracle cure- a new drug? No. A new drunk? No. A hit man to take care of the offending teacher? No. The new miracle cure is kite flying. No, your eyes are not playing tricks on you; I said kite flying.

Most drug stores and dime stores have a large selection of kites to choose from. At the two stores we surveyed, Walmart and Sky City, choices ranged from Superman, Mr. T., and GI Joe to Garfield, Smurfs, and Snoopy.

The initial investment will cost no more than a few loads of laundry - kites are available for $1 - $5, and string costs only about $.59.

Other than the kite and string the only other equipment necessary is a friend for some company (or yourself, if you'd prefer solitude) and a wide-open space with few trees and power lines. Now you're ready to get high on kite flying.

We Ran: To Run And Not Be Weary

by Ed Welch + Ciretta Carpenter

February Meetings 1984 are over, but the events live on for the participants. It was a time of exploring one's faith in an effort to maintain stamina and hope in a confused and often weary world.

Lee Humphries, director of religious studies at the University of Tennessee, started the meetings at the opening worship service. In a colorful manner, Mr. Humphries presented a message on the Biblical idea of "shalom." He emphasized the importance of viewing God as a parent in the Old Testament, rather than as God, the warrior king. In the parent analogy, God loves every woman and man without restrictions or conditions. The knowledge of this ever-lasting love enables man and woman to freely live up to their potential.

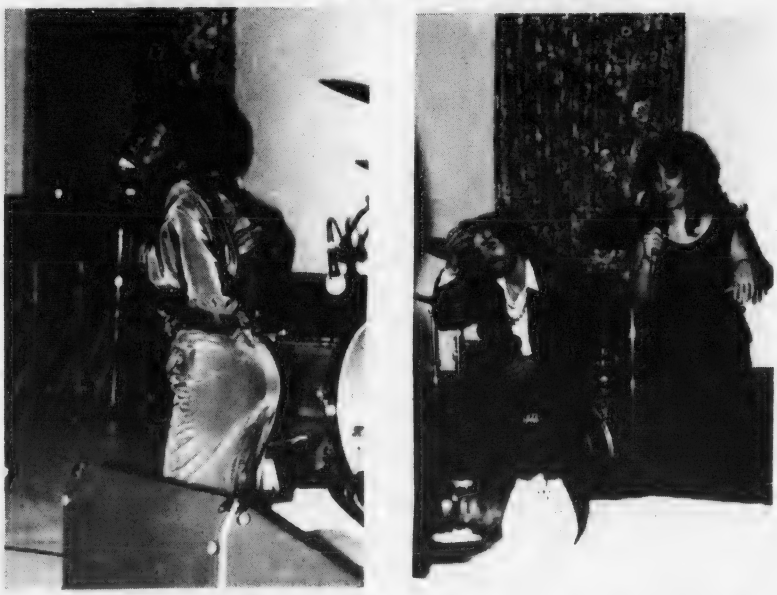
At the Thursday noon seminar, Agnes Marsh expressed her views on the question, "Why me, Lord?" She stressed the need for spiritual stamina so that we can continually fight for peace through justice. She made a strong call for everyone to become Christian patriots, which means fighting for global justice and shedding regional loyalties.

Rev. John Stuhl lead an afternoon seminar on "Morass, Jungle, and Desert Adventures in a Wilderness Environment." The discussion centered around ways of dealing with tension and stress in the world. One method of doing this involves the willingness to accept responsibility for one's actions and knowing oneself in order to make good decisions.

On Friday, February 24, Rev. Pat DeVoe opened the meeting early with a breakfast session on "Our Spiritual Journeys." She pointed out the need for spiritual retreats in order to gain energy for life's struggles. To feel "God's nudgings" one needs to develop a spiritual peace through meditation, retreats, and solitude.

Dr. James Bloy and Dr. David Yu were next on the agenda with a presentation on "What We Can Learn From Eastern Religions." Based on a study period at Harvard University, Dr. Bloy gave some perspectives on Buddhism and Eastern methods of meditation. Dr. Yu introduced Confusianism and Taoism from his own personal experiences. One interesting thing he mentioned was the strong emphasis on the family in these religions. Dr. David Cartlidge was present to share some ideas on what we can learn from Islam and Hinduism.

The closing worship service for February meetings was a communion service led by Rev. Stuhl. He spoke on "Sources of Our Strength," and specifically mentioned the knowledge and realization of God's presence as the chief source. This presence is symbolized in the taking of communion. Dr. Cartlidge and Dr. Scott Brunger participated in the leadership while music was provided by the Maryville College choir and Bryan McFarland on guitar.



Dr. Brunger and Dr. Bunde took part in the presentation of "To Run and Not Be Weary", a segment of February Meetings.

Dr. Brunger interpreted his own resurgence of faith through his experience in Dahomey, Africa.

Citing I Corinthians 13, he related his time spent in that part of Africa and the examples of faith and possibility that surrounded him. One such example was the harmony of faiths he found in the family he lived with. The head of the family had two wives, one Christian, the other Moslem. The family (including 13 children) celebrated both faiths, an intense example in the power of respect and cooperation.

Dr. Bunde continued this "faith journey" with his own thoughts and experiences. He chose the also familiar Micah 6:8. Speaking of his "ten months, twenty-four days and eleven hours" worth of Viet Nam and one actual "running" conversation in Boston several years ago, he lent those present his understanding of weariness and energy. Considering the call to ". . . act justly, . . . love tenderly, and to walk humbly with your God", he saw his own responsibility as first, to develop a social awareness of the world, and second, to consider where we draw the energy to be active people in the world. Having gone through a conversion from a sense of hopelessness to faith in self and the ability to bring about necessary change to a "broken world," he spoke specifically to the "twenty-two year -olds" present and concluded, "If you're thinking about where you'll be in ten years, I can tell you, you'd be surprised."

Coffee House Charmers

Pre-Season Outlook:

Baseball

1984 BASEBALL ROSTER

NO	NAME	CL	HT	WT	POS
1	Human, Mike	FR	5'6"	155	OF
4	Keller, Don	SR	5'10"	160	3B,2B
5	Etchison, Eric	FR	6'3"	190	C
6	Carver, Rick	SO	5'10"	155	P,2B
7	Saylor, Steve	JR	6'0"	185	P
9	Jenkins, Kevin	SO	5'10"	170	CF
10	Humphries	SO	5'11'	175	2B
11	Frazier, Jeff	SO	5'7"	170	SS
12	Moyer, Pat	JR	6'2"	200	P,3B,C
14	Johannsen, C.	SO	6'2"	195	OF
15	Murr, Tony	SO	6'2"	185	P,1B
17	McGovern, L.	JR	5'11"	175	P
19	Priest, Brad	SO	5'10"	190	3B
20	Brand, Ric	SR	5'9"	180	SS-OF
21	Mulkey, Bo	FR	6'2"	175	SS
24	Hadden, Steve	FR	6'1"	245	P-1B
25	Ramsey, R.	SO	5'11"	185	1B
41	Allison, Matt	SR	6'2"	190	OF
42	Rohan, Mike	JR	6'2"	170	P

Confident, scrappy, enthusiastic players should produce an improved competitive baseball team. At least that's what first year Head Coach "Skip" Sawyer projects for the 1984 Maryville College Fighting Scots.

"Our primary goal is to be competitive in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (O.D.A.C) this season, which will be extremely tough as always," Sawyer noted. "Because of the distance to be traveled, we had to schedule a series of double headers with conference opponents, which will require sustained effort in order to win consistently," he added.

Leadership will be provided by returning starters Pat Moyer, junior from Hialeah, Fla., sophomore Rick Carver from Rome, Ga., and sophomore Kevin Jenkins from Gainesville, Ga., who will serve as team captains.

Tony Murr, a second year player from Heritage High School in Maryville, is expected to contribute needed depth to thepitching staff as well as other infield positions. Junior Mike Rohan, Clifton Park, NY., Les McGovern, junior from Orlando, Fla., and Steve Saylor, junior from Maryville, are expected to provide stability for the pitching staff.

An inexperienced pitching staff should be offset by solid, consistent base hitters. Sawyer is counting on Murr and freshman Eric Etchison from Lexington, Ohio, to provide strong hitting. Etchison will also assume catching duties.

Glenn Humphries, second year student from Knoxville Catholic High School, Don Keller, senior from Bradenton, Fla., Ronnie Ramsey, sophomore from Manassas Park, Va., and Moyer will provide the Scots with an experienced infield.

The outfield should be anchored by Jenkins and Chris Johannsen, a N. Miami, Fla., sophomore.

Despite the loss of 12 letterman from last year's squad, Coach Sawyer expects overall improvement due to a better team attitude and overall team talent at each position.

"There should be no gaps in terms of ability in the lineup this season. With a more competitive schedule, team attitude has been excellent. The players expect to win," he said.

Tennis

No direction to go but up . . .

The Maryville College tennis team faces the 1984 season with the prospect and assurance of an improved record after suffering through an 0-14 season last year.

Third year Head Coach Pat Dyer feel that the addition of four new players, including two Floridians, will give substantial depth to this year's squad.

Freshman Mike Hill was conference champion his senior year at Lyman High School, Orlando, Fla. "Mike shows considerable potential as a tennis player," Dyer said. "He should provide a significant and immediate boost to the program."

Glenn Stout, junior from Rocklodge, Fla., is also expected to contribute. Quy Huyng, Knoxville, and Chinwhan Cho, Tehran, Iran, should also add depth to the roster.

David Raulerson, Bristol, Martin Paluga, West Palm Beach, Fla., and Jim Kidder, Tokyo, Japan are returning senior lettermen who are expected to provide leadership and balance.

The men's tennis season opens March 4 as the Scots host Lynchburg College at 1 p.m.

"Because of the limited number of games scheduled in comparison to the majority of our opponents, playing time will be restricted," Coach Dyer noted. "This could really hinder us in post season O.D.A.C. Tournament play."

. . . improvement is certainly within sight,though.

1984 MEN'S TENNIS ROSTER

PLAYER	CLASS	HOMETOWN
Chinwhan Cho	FR	Tehran, Iran
Mike Hill	FR	Longwood, FL
Quy Huyng	FR	Knoxville, TN
Jim Kidder	SR	Tokyo, Japan
Bart Mize	FR	Cookeville, TN
Martin Paluga	SR	West Palm Beach, FL
Dave Raulerson	SR	Bristol, TN
Glenn Stout	JR	Rocklodge, FL

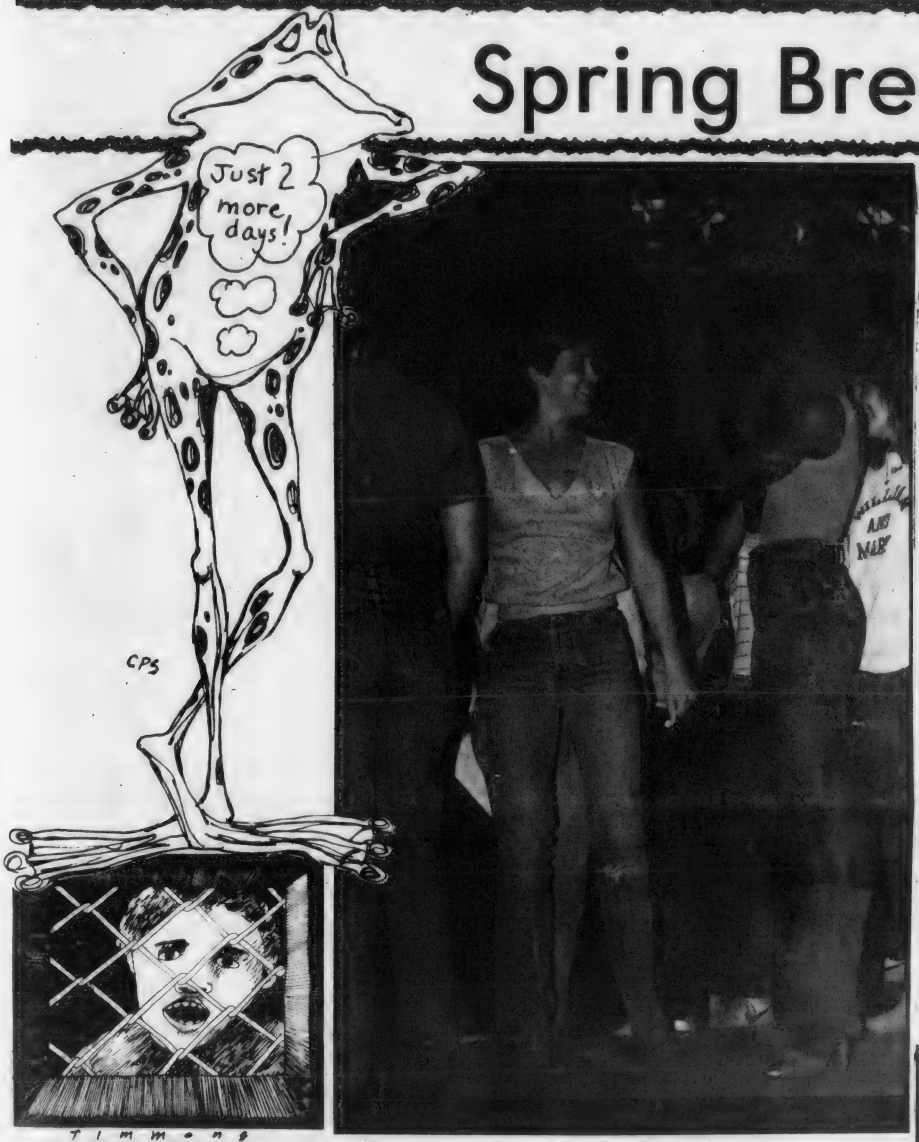
It's Over!

by Brian Rigell

It was all over in a matter of four seconds. The rest of the thirty-nine minutes and fifty-six seconds of Thursday night's game between the Lady Scots and the Lady Bulldogs of Fisk seemed inconsequential as April Manning from Fisk threw up a shot that fell in at the buzzer to lead her team to a 60-59 victory over Maryville. Coach Brenda Cooper described the shot as, "from one step over the half-court line" and "miraculous."

In a game that seemed full of controversy from the opening jump ball, the Lady Scots put out a good effort only to have a victory snatched away from them on what many consider a fluke play. Coach Cooper was not at all pleased with the quality of officiating, but she added that the team had many chances to win, but could not seem to put the game away.

Perhaps two of the most damaging calls were a foul called on Sara Covington on a play where the Fisk player tripped of her own accord and which was Sara's fifth foul, and a disagreement between officials on the last shot of the game - whether or not the shot should have been counted. Unfortunately for the Lady Scots, it was. "Our main problem," said Cooper, "was our free throw shooting in that we missed too many," She added that missing four one-and-one opportunities in the last part of the game did not help at all.



Overall, Coach Cooper considered the season a fairly successful one, ending with a 12-12 record. She commented, "There were a lot of new players this year, and they all gained experience which will help us next year. It was a team effort," she continued, "it's difficult to choose one outstanding player since they all contributed to the whole program."

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.00 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12 45 2 55 5 05 7 15 9 25 Footloose PG
1 00 3 00 5 00 7 00 9 00 • TOM SELLECK • LASSITER R
1 00 3 00 5 00 7 00 9 00 MICHAEL CAINE IN Blame it on RIO R
1 15 3 15 5 15 7 15 9 15 See it with someone you trust. Unfaithfully Yours PG

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 18 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, March 8, 1984

Spring Break Issue

Great Decisions: Albert Gore

by Pam Mathews

As part of the Great Decisions program currently being conducted at MC, Congressman Albert Gore, Jr. of the 6th district in Tennessee, spoke at the Feb. 27 meeting in the FAC Music Hall. The topic of discussion focused on arms control and U.S. security.

Congressman Gore considers arms control the number - one priority facing the U.S. and mankind. "We need to recognize the magnitude of the challenge that faces us," he said. "The two super powers are poised to destroy each other and all life with them. We must make the idea of nuclear war obsolete. Some believe that this is impossible, but I don't."

According to Gore, the fear of a first strike is one of the key elements fueling the arms race. "It's demonstrated at every stop along the way," he said. "The fear of one side striking first has pushed it along the way."

Gore explained that two major technological developments pushed the arms race "onto a new plateau of insanity. One development was increased accuracy, making it possible to fire a weapon that could hit a small or specific area. The second development was multiple war head missiles. When combined with high accuracy, multiple war head missiles made it possible for the nation striking first to have a tremendous advantage."

To help alleviate the issue of a first strike, Gore suggested," the most sensible thing to do is to work out an agreement where it would be impossible to gain an advantage from a first strike. The arsenals should be restructured so that a first strike would be a disadvantage."

continued p. 6

Catholics on Campus

by Ed Welch

Who wants to get "religioned"? The opportunities are growing fast in a variety of ways.

A Catholic Mass was held Wednesday, Feb. 29th by Father Mike Divini, a priest from John 23rd on the UT campus. Ciretta Carpenter reports that Father Divini, after witnessing a large turnout of thirty-five students, pledged to return to MC once a month to hold mass, beginning after break. In addition, Father Divini invited all interested students to attend mass at John 23rd in Knoxville.

The opportunities for religious involvement on campus are growing for spring term. The Worship and Religious Program Committee is offering four informal study groups. Leaders and topics are: (1) Donna Davis (I) - "How to Deal with your Feelings," (2) Elizabeth Fowler- discussion of the book The Friendship Fiction, (3) Scott Brunger - "Go Ye Into All the World," and (4) Rev. Earl Rash- a Bible study to be announced. All students, faculty, and staff are invited to participate in these study groups.

Finally, Rev. Earl Rash will be taking over full-time chaplain responsibilities after spring break. Join the MC Community in extending a warm welcome to him and his family.

Campus Calendar

March 8

11:00 p.m. Late night brunch, Pearsons Dining Hall.

March 9

FINALS

Scots Baseball vs. Milligan Away.

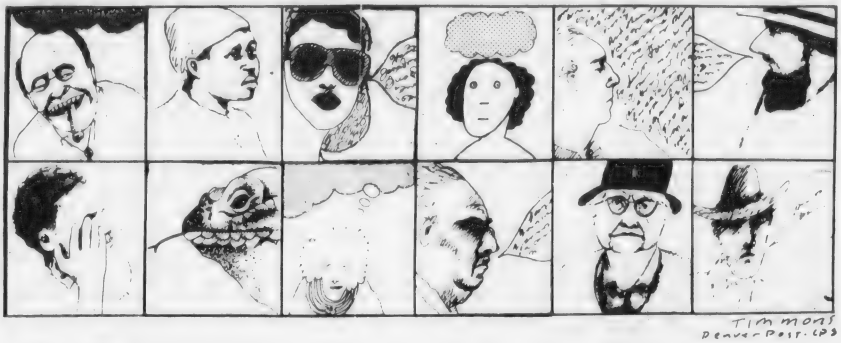
March 10

FINALS

Dorms close at 5:00 p.m. EXODUS!!!

March 11

Scots Baseball vs. Bridgewater College, HOME



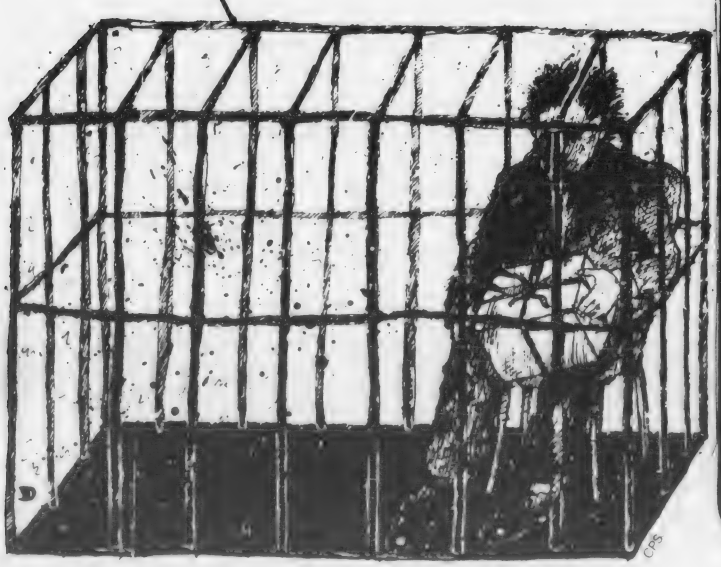
1:00 Men's Tennis vs. U. of Pittsburgh, HOME

March 18

2:00 p.m. Dorms re-open for Spring Term

OVER-THE-HILL GANG
OUT - PACES
MAD BOMBERS
79 - 78
STORY PAGE 7

Editorial



DEAR READER.

If you are a student, I am sure that you can RELATE. I'm, simply, overwhelmed. And even though we are students of every background and major, we are unified by Trauma.

In recognition of this trauma, I am writing a no-hassle, thought-free editorial so that you, the reader, may be a responsible citizen and read the editorial — WITHOUT FAILING!

Interpret the illustrations at your leisure.

-Ed.-

ECHO

Editor ..... Marta Wittig

Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps

Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter

Artist ..... Helen McNeill

Photographers ..... Keith Moore
Tara Wey

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Notes From All Over

U.P.I. finds enrollment applications at a number of pricey private colleges are up.

Surveying 36 private colleges, UPI found the schools are sifting through an average 10% more applications than they got last year.

Private college enrollment overall went up during the 1983-84 academic year after a 4% decline during 1982-83.

The '82-83 decline was largely attributed to widespread fears that financial aid for students was drying up.

Arizona greeks tried to raise money for skin cancer research by selling sun reflectors. . .

Police Arrest Freshman Dorm Climber.

U. New Hampshire police watched as freshman Daniel Hartman climbed 10-story Williamson Hall "because it was a challenge."

As he descended, they arrested him, eventually freeing him a $350 bond.

Harvard Exiles Student Editor Who Wasn't a Student.

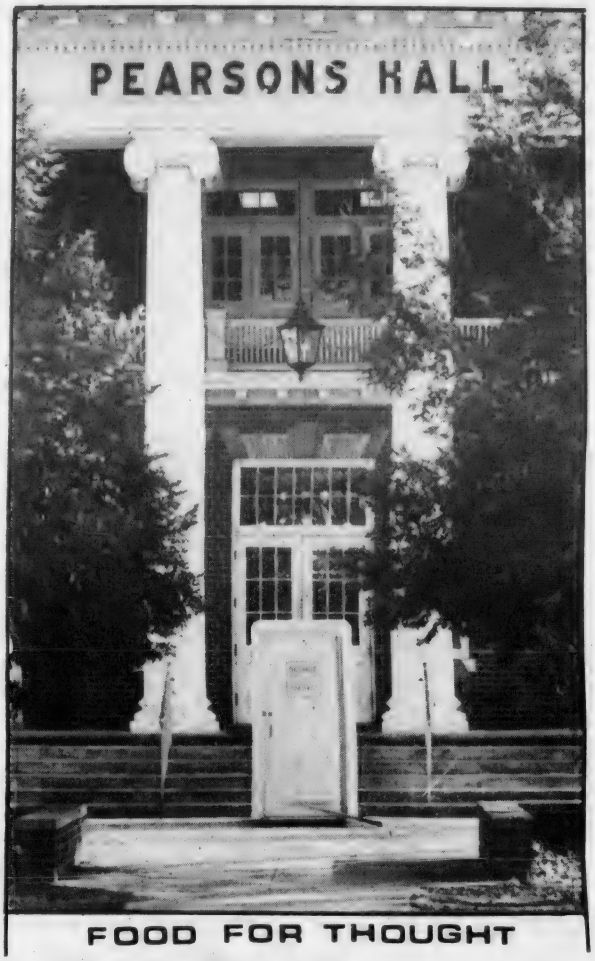
Dean Archie Epps forced Joel Goodfader from the editorship of the Harvard International Review, and ordered him off the Cambridge campus.

Staffers apparently didn't know Goodfader wasn't a student, either.

U.Georgia System Chancellor Vernon Crawford Blames Rock 'n Roll and TV For Illiteracy.

Speaking at a press meeting, Crawford said tv and rock 'n roll "are robbing so much of the time that earlier generations of young people spent reading. I think it's fair to say that language is going down the tube."

Despite a Sit-In, Amherst axes its Fraternities.



Citing "quality of life" issues, Amherst College "discontinued" the fraternities, effective next June.

Amherst's faculty voted in November to abolish the eight houses, to which about 16% of the student body belongs.

An Amherst spokeswoman said some of the houses had been guilty of "sort of outrageous behavior" in recent years, including incidences of hazing and "wild parties that sort of leaked into the town."

California debates adopting its own bill denying state aid to draft evaders

Introduced in late January, the bill would prohibit state schools from helping unregistered students secured aid.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Captivating Colors

The Knoxville Watercolor Society opened its current art show with a splash of color. On Sunday afternoon, March 4th, people experienced the latest in the world of watercolor hanging in our own gallery!

The artists' styles vary from frame to frame, both in technique and subject matter. For the traditionalist, works such as "Woodrow's Cow" by Margaret Scanlon stand polished and well-defined. The surrealist may take a sip from the wineglass in Mary Masa Bolten's "Dining Out At Lilitha's". The vibrant blending of colors in the "Distant Shore" by Arlene Goff captivates anyone leaning toward the abstract. The splashing creativity of works such as "Paper Cows II" by Margaret Scanlon fascinates all.

The gallery, located in the Fine Arts Center, is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays. This exhibit will be showing until March 30th. Come and experience the splash of watercolor for yourself!

Geographical Jobs-Midwest

by Peggy Millsaps

The Midwest section of the country is comprised of two regions: East North Central (the "Great Lakes" states) and West North Central (the "Plains" states). This section has four medium-sized metro areas: Akron, OH, Dayton, OH, Omaha, NE, and Toledo, OH.

Akron OH -- total metro population, 657 thousand. Dominated by the tire industry which is struggling to recover from 1980 employment declines. Best job opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, and electrical and mechanical engineering.

Dayton OH – population 833 thousand. Best opportunities are in accounting, business (advanced degree), computer science. Outlook is fair for the engineering fields.

Omaha NE -- population 582 thousand. Safety and community participation rate fairly highly; cultural opportunities, night life, recreational facilities and social life rate less highly. Best job opportunities are in accounting, business (advanced degree), and computer science. Outlook is fair for engineering and science fields.

Toledo OH – population 781 thousand. Residents rate recreational facilities and safety most favorably; night life and social life less favorably. Best opportunities are in accounting, business (advanced degree), computer science, chemical, electrical, mechanical, and other engineering, and chemistry and science.

Next issue: East and West North Central regions, small cities and towns.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.00 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

12 45 2 55 5 05 7 15 9 25
Footloose PG

1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 9:15
Seven Doors to Death

1 00 3 00 5 00 7 00 9 00
The Power

12:30, 2:45, 5:00, 7:15, 9:25
Against All Odds

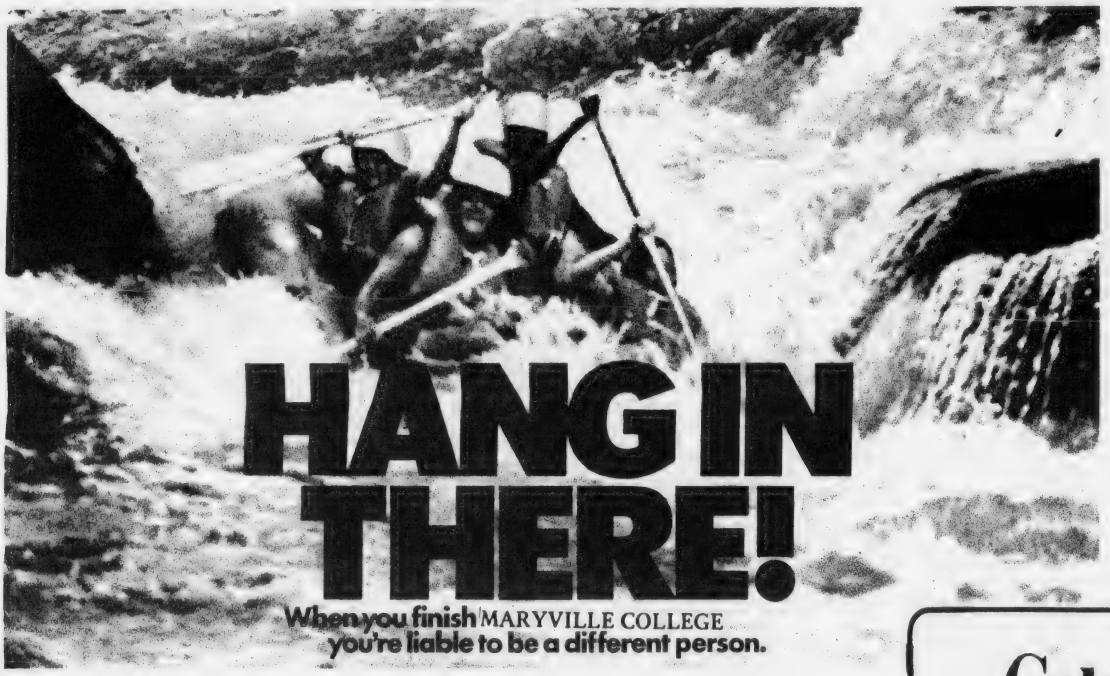
KNOXVILLE AUDITIONS
Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey
CLOWN COLLEGE
1:30 p.m. Thursday March 15
KNOXVILLE CIVIC COLISEUM

Spring Break Hits MC Campus

-ZOO-

Maryville College Campus Security has been inundated with reports of mass insanity. Psychopathic behavior is the norm as students crank out final papers and cram for exams.

There are reports of riots between frustrated students and demanding instructors. Gov. Lamar Salamander, when asked about the situation, said, "I've been monitoring the situation since the beginning of the term, and things are getting a little hysterical." He continued, "Foreseeing these difficulties, we planted several professional mob control people as teachers and administrators. No one has noticed the change."



Salamander warned students not to provoke the professors, since only he knows which professor is or is not an agent.

Further, he said that "most of the teachers are armed. We sponsored a weapons class in December and had 95% of the college's instructors and administration present."

In order to safely survive finals, students are urged to wear sheet metal under several layers of clothing. Not only will this impede any aggressive action from the students, thereby not provoking trigger-happy professors, but it will also protect the students from any violent action from the frustrated instructors.

It's Time...

-FLASH-

That thick black X on the calendar isn't all that tells you it's Almost That Time. The body, diligently pushed and coaxed through ten long weeks of balancing equations, debating US foreign policy, and explicating Emily Dickinson's poetry, has subtle ways of telling students they need a break, and need it fast.

You know it's time for spring break when . . .

. . . you find yourself wearing swim clothes to bed.

. . . your contact lenses dry out from excessive reading and pop out of your eyes like seeds from a pod.

. . . the smell of suntan oil intoxicates you more than a love letter does.

. . . you've stopped rhapsodizing about the intangible benefits of a college education.

. . . you'd rather listen to the Police than your language lab tapes.

. . . you think of home more often - longingly.

. . . you'd rather plan a panty raid than write a term paper.

. . . the breeze that stirs your dorm room curtains begins to smell like the sea.

. . . David Letterman has never seemed funnier.

. . . the thought of your litttle brother and family dog drives you to tears.

Outward Bound is more than a trip of high adventure.

It's discovering yourself. Learning that you're better than you think you are.

And finding out how to work with others.

Come join us on a wilderness trip of excitement and self-challenge.

You may come back a better you.

Maryville College is more than a high adventure trip.

It's discovering yourself.

Learning that you're not above failing.

And finding out that none of your friends are either.

Come join us on a bewildering trip of Masochism and self-denial.

You may come back - if you're lucky.

Coke adds life to...

ORANGE BOWL SNACKS

"Located in the Foothills Mall"

Don't Pack... Your Cucumbers

-FLASH-

If you think Mom presided closely over your packing for college, you can bet she'll be as keenly aware of everything you unpack for spring break. Now, we all know things accumulate at college that would be certain to raise some eyebrows back home. Therefore, with each student's best interest uppermost in mind, the Highland Echo offers these tips on what not to pack for spring break.

Don't pack maps of panty raid routes through Pearsons.

If Dad's a conductor for your hometown symphony orchestra, and Mom is the prize soprano in the Church Choir, you'd best leave your vintage Sex Pistols albums behind.

Leave behind your carefully shredded new wave clothes, as well. Mom would go nuts compulsively repairing them.

You have the best collection on campus of "adult" magazine centerfolds? Leave it behind.

It's probably not in your best interest to take home the white rats you saved from certain death at Sutton.

Best left safely stashed are those photos of you the time you got a little wild at someone's party and dashed in front of the camera wearing a wristwatch – and nothing else.

Leave behind the gallon-capacity mug you won at a beer drinking contest.

Leave behind pin-ups of David Lee Roth in black leather and chains and pin-ups of Boy George, period.

Don't pack your collection of buttons and badges, most of whose slogans are unprintable here.

Furthermore, don't tempt fate by packing scarves and sweaters. Toss in a swimsuit and sunglasses and hope for the best. Clean your wallet of any pictures of your campus loves. It wouldn't do for hometown sweethearts to catch sight of those. Nor should you pack first drafts of Independent Study chapters, for reasons which we hope are understood.

Have a great trip.

Mangled Movies

by Ciretta Carpenter

Movies to See Over Spring Break:

All the President's Men

Starring Wayne Anderson, Archie Ellie and Al Perkins

History of the World
Starring Arda Walker

Bringing Up Baby
with Donna and Terry Whittum and Timothy Joel as "Baby"

Angels with Dirty Faces with Nathan "Smurf" McIntyre

Woman of the Year
starring Sharon Crane

The Man Who Would Be King with Hubert Dixon III

and

EXODUS
featuring the college community

Literary Lingo

by Amy Waggoner

Well, here we are once again. The thought of Spring Break, fun in the sun, etc. is still obscured by Winter Term burnout and failure of exams. Ah, yes, the last week of Winter Term always presents some interesting situations.

We all know by this time to ask not For Whom the Bell Tolls; it tolls for we. We need all the help we can get by exam week. Have you ever noticed how many people fill the Sunday night Vespers and Mid-Week Worship services around this time? Since they are such a treat, perhaps they should be renamed The Divine Comedy. And those A's that we miss out on because we flunk finals, Paradise Lost.

By the time this week's over (after another term paper and three finals,) I'll be in The Dead Zone for most of Spring Break. The best laid plans Of Mice and Men will fall by the wayside after The Sound and the Fury of that last night before finals.

Have you ever really thought about finals? Somebody must have invented them during the Inquisition as a form of torture. Even Richard III couldn't have thought up anything worse. No wonder the colleges have the highest suicide rates. Romeo and Juliet had it easy compared to us. Heck, all they had to deal with was one simple Love Story; we have to deal with The Grapes of Wrath if we fail.

Echo Ear

Hey Linda--Hello, Hello.
Is there anybody in there?
Just not if you can hear me.
Is there anyone at all?
O.K., O.K., O.K.--
Just a tiny little pin prick.

Who wants to rape who?

BB--Don't open the door!

Do you have YOUR paper done?

OK, Penguin Face! (Blow, Blow).

Happy Birthday, Baby Huey -
You're not getting better, you're getting older!

Love, your sister

TRAUMATIC TEACHER BLUES -zoo-

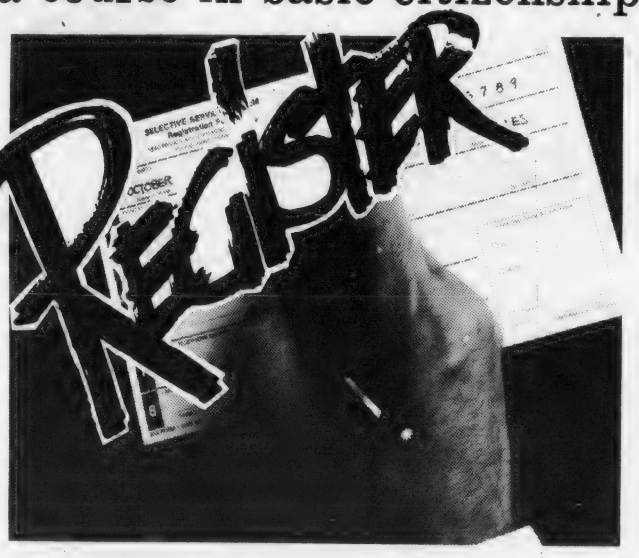
Oh, I woke up this mornin' with a pencil in my ear.
Oh, I woke up this mornin' with a pencil in my ear.
Sometimes I wonder if I'll ever get out of here,
I've got the low-down, sad-clown, traumatic teacher blues.

Oh I woke up this mornin' with a nightmare on my mind.
Oh yes I woke up this mornin' with a nightmare on my mind.
I failed another class -- my parents had me doin' time,
I've got the Sing-sing, death-row traumatic teacher blues.

Oh, I woke up this mornin' and I couldn't find a man.
Lord, yes I woke up this mornin' and I couldn't find a man.
My mind is all disfigured from the stuff I've had to cram,
I've got the I'll get 'em they'll regret 'em traumatic teacher blues.

CARNAGE

continued from p.1



Gore's proposal, a Comprehensive Strategic Arms Control Agreement between the US and the Soviet Union, would substitute multiple war head missiles with single war head missiles.

Gore believes that relations with the Soviet Union may thaw. "Now that the uncertainty of who's in charge has ended, chances of reaching somekind of an agreement are a little brighter," he said. "Of course, there will be other obstacles to overcome."

Gore chairs the Select Intelligence Committee of the House of Representatives and serves on the Energy and Commerce Committee and the Science and Technology Committee. He is a leadingDemocrat with the Reagan Administration on arms control and disarmament. When Senator Howard Baker retires, Gore will be running against Victor Ashe, a Republican State Senator, for the vacated seat.

--Saturday after 5 p.m.

Men. . . Sign up for a course in basic citizenship

There's no homework — no quizzes — just a lot of credit.

When you register with Selective Service, you're fulfilling a very important obligation to the USA...making yourself a part of our nation's preparedness.

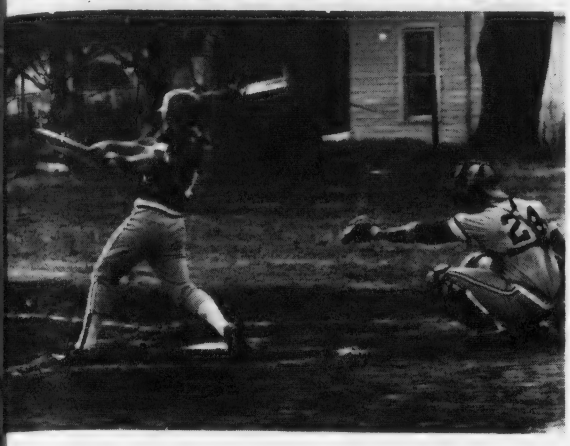
And it only takes a few minutes of your time.

So if you've been putting off Selective Service registration, go the post office now and fill out the form.

It's Quick. It's Easy. And it's the Law.

Presented as a Public Service Announcement

Mayhem III– Title



The men's intramural basketball season wound down to a close this weekend. When the dust settled at the end of the championship tourney, Mayhem III was once again the undisputed champion of the league.

This is the third consecutive year that Mayhem III has won the coveted MC Men's IM Basketball Championship. They were led by Coaches Randy Lambert, Ronnie Waters and John Dunlap. Other key players included Coach Skip Sawyer, Shannon O'Brien, William Delaney, Dan Bouch and Vernon Golden.

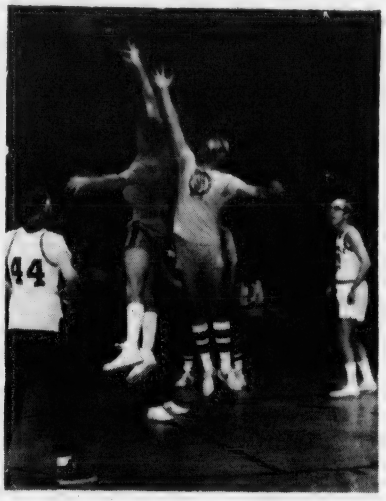
Here's how the tournament went:

Mayhem III	vs.	Los Matadores
52		40
Bookit	vs.	TKO
50		35
	Consolation Round
TKO	vs.	Los Matadores
59		55
	Championship Round
Mayhem III	vs.	Bookit
56		48

SPORTS

Scots Split Double-header

by Chris Porter

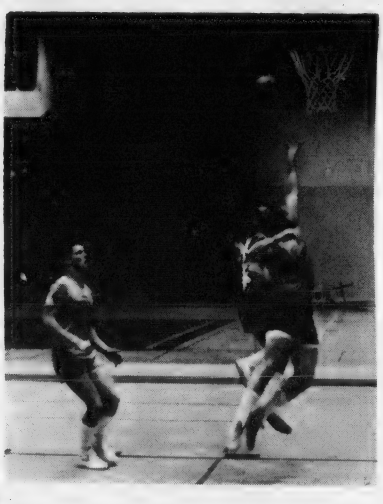


The MC baseball squad opened its season Friday in a double-header against NAIA Division I Cumberland College. The Scots won the first game, 5-3, but lost the second one, 4-1.

Mike Rohan pitched all seven innings of the first game. He allowed only five hits and one earned run. He is also credited with five strike outs. Offensively, the hitting was good for the Scots. Mike Human (2-4 on the day) and Tony Murr each had two RBI's.

Rick Carver started the second game on the mound and Steve Hadden relieved him in the fifth to finish. Overall, the pitching wasn't so bad, with the two of them giving up only eight hits. Carver gave up two home runs and Hadden gave up one. The other run came from a RBI on one of the HR's.

Mike Human was responsible for the only run of that game. He got to first on a single, advanced to second on a wild pitch and scored on an error.



The Scots were supposed to travel to Bryan College in Dayton, Tennessee for a tournament, but it looks as though the rain will postpone the departure for another day. The other teams in the four-team tourney are Bryan, Bethel College and Tiffin College.

OVER-THE-HILL GANG

DETONATES

Gun Bombers

by Brian Rigell

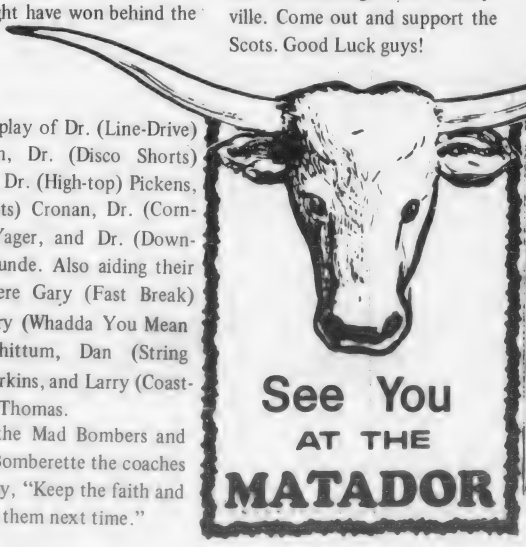
When all was said and done, and the buzzer went off last Thursday night in the gym, the count stood Over-the-Hill Gang 79 to the Mad Bombers' 78. By some miraculous stroke of luck, the faculty/staff squad had managed to defeat the guys (and girl) from Copeland.

However, all is not as rosy as it seems. Mad Bomber coaches Rick Carver and Van Conners were in seclusion until today when this reporter was able to gain an exclusive interview with them. Carver and Conners disclosed that once again they had to file a protest with the league front offices due to the infractions committed by the Over-the-Hill Gang.

These infractions include: 1) use of technicolor uniforms to distract the Mad Bombers (Dr. Ramger and his heart covered boxer shorts stood out as a prime example), 2) use of illegal defense (you can't use six players on the court at the same time when the rules state that five at a time is the limit, 3) use of deceitful ploys (you should have seen the number of times the faculty injured themselves and then fell down next to a Mad Bomber, thus leading the referees to believe that the Mad Bomber had committed a foul), 4) use of illegal substances (when the oxygen used by the Over-the-Hill Gang was analyzed it was discovered to have a vaporized compound of Geritol, Polident, One-A-Day, and the mind-altering Haley's MO).

The coaches also added that the shady shift of players engineered by the faculty/staff promoters was a breach of good faith. After having promised not to use any members of the P.E. department, the promoters managed to slide Bobby (Ace-in-the hole) Saylor and Skip (In-Your Eye) Sawyer into the game. Coach Saylor was absolutely devastating with his from-the-ankle hook shot, and Sawyer was just as awesome with his wheeling and dealing. However, it accomplished the Over-the Hill Gang nothing, for the league has ruled that the protest is valid and that the rematch shall be signed for spring term.

Coaches Carver and Conners said that it was a shame for the Over-the-Hill Gang to bend the rules to such an extent, because they might have won behind the inspired play of Dr. (Line-Drive) Anderson, Dr. (Disco Shorts) Ramger, Dr. (High-top) Pickens, Dr. (Stilts) Cronan, Dr. (Cornbread) Yager, and Dr. (Downtown) Bunde. Also aiding their cause were Gary (Fast Break) Neir, Terry (Whadda You Mean Foul) Whittum, Dan (String Music) Perkins, and Larry (Coast-to-Coast) Thomas.



To all the Mad Bombers and the Mad Bomberette the coaches wish to say, "Keep the faith and we'll get them next time."

Tennis Trauma

The MC men's tennis team opened their season on Sunday against Lynchburg (last years ODAC champions). This was both their first match and their first ODAC match. Unfortunately, the Scots lost 0-9. The team is coached by Pat Dyer and is composed of Chinwhan Cho, Mike Hill, Quy Huyins, Jim Kidder, Martin Paluga, Dave Raulerson and Glenn Stout.

Mike Hill played a good match against Lynchburg's no. 1 player Buzz Frye. Frye has been the ODAC singles champion for the last three years. Scores for their match were 7-5 and 6-0.

The next match will be Thursday the 8th against the University of Pittsburgh here at Maryville. Come out and support the Scots. Good Luck guys!

MAD BOMBERS

Be A Clown!

If you are interested in a comedic career, Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus wants you when The Greatest Show on Earth comes to Knoxville this month!

Circus officials today announced plans for auditions for the famed Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Clown College to be held Thursday, March 15, at 1:30 p.m. on the arena floor of the Knoxville Civic Coliseum. The Circus will be appearing at the Knoxville Coliseum from Tuesday, March 13, through Sunday March 18.

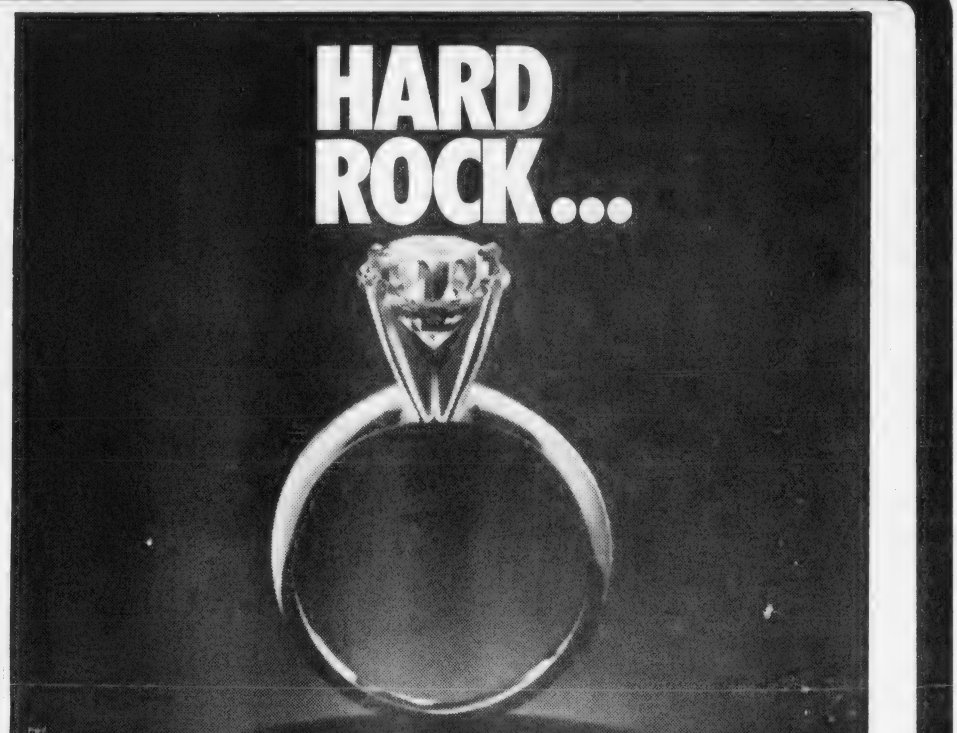
No Advance Appointment Required

Knox-area comedy talents need no appointments for consideration - just show up at the Coliseum at 1:30 on the 15th - says Boss Clown Wayne Sidley. All who try out will be considered for admission to this "Institute of Higher Hilarity," the only institution in the world dedicated to perpetuating the fine art of clowning. Founded in 1968 by Irvin Feld, Chairman of the Board and Producer of The Greatest Show on Earth, Clown College in Venice, Florida offers a ten-and-one-half week annual session which includes courses in make-up, pratfalls, slapstick, unicycling, pantomine, improvisation, juggling, acrobatics, movement, trampoline, stiltwalking, prop construction, and arena choreography.

Clown College tryouts will not need make-up, costumes, or props. Their talent will be judged by the Circus Boss Clown who will be looking for improvisations, quick physical reactions, sense of timing, and evidence of serious motivation and desire.

Top Clown College Graduates are awarded contracts to become performing members of the famed Clown Alley of the Greatest Show on Earth. Many others have parlayed their newly acquired skills and knowledge into stage, screen, and television careers.

Clowning for The Greatest Show on Earth is an exciting and exhilarating life. The ability to make people laugh and to earn their love and applause is a rare and precious one. The road to Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Clown College is a difficult one, but if you think you have what it takes, Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus would love to see you at the auditions. There is a minimum age requirement of 17 for all interested candidates.



Will spring be too late to find the job you want?

Maybe. That's why you need to explore your opportunities now. Intercristo's unique job matching service will show you where you can serve the Lord by working full-time in a Christian organization. Positions you probably won't hear about through other sources. Whether you'll graduate and launch a career or you'll need summer work, Intercristo gives you a head start in your job search. Contact Intercristo today.

Call Intercristo today toll-free:
(800) 426-1342
Alaska, Hawaii or Washington State:
(206) 546-7330

Intercristo
The Christian Career Specialists
P.O. Box 33487
Seattle, WA 98133

a division of CRISTA

Juniors, Seniors, Grad Students! If there's an engagement or wedding in your future, apply today for this no-hassle Revolving Charge account with

LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

And, after credit approval, select the engagement ring or bridal set you've been eyeing in our store, and charge it. You can spread your payments over 2 years, with minimum monthly payments as low as $20! And your credit renews itself with every payment. Remember, Zales Diamond Bond, a 5-year limited warranty against loss or damage, and 90-day Refund Policy mean complete satisfaction — or money back. No kidding.

THE DIAMOND CARD ZALES
123 456 789
B HARRIS
4265

Come to Zales to apply or call toll-free: 1-800-232-1100.

ZALES
The Diamond Store
is all you need to know.

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED: Zales Credit Card • MasterCard • VISA • American Express • Carte Blanche • Diners Club
Illustrations enlarged

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 19 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, March 29, 1984

Spring Vespers Services

Religious Life at Maryville College is planned and ready for spring term.

The Sunday Evening Vespers Services have been scheduled as follow:

March 25 - Chaplain Earl Rash

April 1 - Hymn Singing with the Black Student Association (BSA) and Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FAC) and Intervarsity Christian Fellowship (IV)

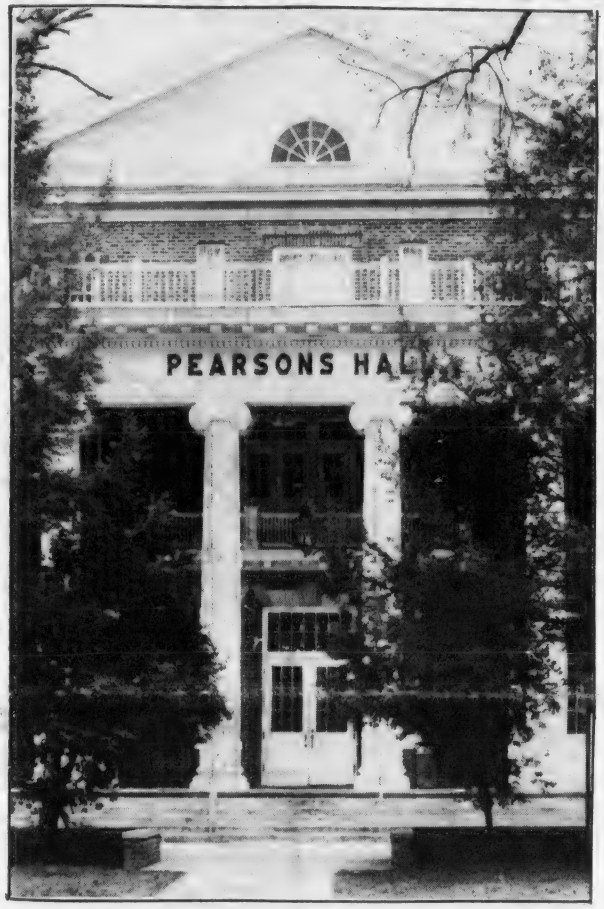
April 8 - Bryan McFarland

April 15 - Dr. Harry Howard

April 22- "After Easter, What?" Ed Stueckle

April 29 - Emmans Walk, Dr. E. Fowler, Ciretta Carpenter, Bryan McFarland

May 6 - Look Rock, Ed Welch



May 13 - Ann and Scott Brunger

May 20 - Installation of the Rev. Earl Rash as college chaplain.

May 27 - Baccalaureate

Pearsons To Close For Repairs

by Peggy Millsaps

Pearson's, upperclassman dorm, will be closed next year for renovations.

Pearsons Hall, upperclassman co-ed dormitory, will be closed next year for repair and renovation, Sharon Crane, Student Affairs, said last week.

In response to residents' reports of "multiple physical problems" in Pearsons, Sid Downey, administrative vice president, and Dean Jane Richardson decided to close the hall at the end of this school year. First floor dining hall will remain open.

Newly renovated Lloyd hall will accomodate displaced Pearsons residents. Sharon Crane feels access to Lloyd once again will improve student life. "As a programmer, I am incredibly biased in favor of Lloyd," she said. "Without Lloyd, activities like Superbowl Sunday couldn't happen. I'm glad to have it open again."

Interior changes in Lloyd include carpeting, refinished furniture, covered chairs, and new drapes. Plans are being made for design and color scheme of the front lobby.

ACC Action

by Glennis Riedl

At the ACC meeting on March 7 the council approved two new majors: computer science/mathematics and computer science/business. These majors will go into effect in the 1984-1985 academic year. To accomodate these new majors, three new computer science classes will be added and three others altered.

In other business, Dr. Fowler reported on developments in religious life on campus. Already plans have been laid for next year's February Meetings. It is hoped that February Meetings will be placed on the school calendar so that it will be incorporated into the academic life on campus.

The next ACC meeting will be on April 4 at 2:30 in Anderson 304.

SCOTS ARE HOT!

Check the SPORTS Spot, pp. 7-8

Campus Calendar

Thursday, March 29

2 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Lincoln Memorial U. at Harrogate.

7 p.m. Gloria Anaple, Junior Recital - Voice, FAC Music Hall

Friday, March 30

3 p.m. Softball vs. Tennessee Tech at Cookeville.

Saturday, March 31

1 p.m. Baseball vs. Emory and Henry College, HOME

TBA Softball vs. Tusculum Tournament at Greeneville.

8:15 p.m. Foothills Chorale, FAC Music Hall.

Beach Party in Davis, Beer In Cans Only. Sexy Legs Contest.

Sunday, April 1

2 p.m. Kite Flying Derby, field behind Lloyd.

3-5 p.m. Art Gallery Reception

7 p.m. Vespers

Monday, April 2

1 p.m. Softball vs. Martin Jr. College, HOME

1:30 p.m. Baseball vs. Lynchburg College, HOME

2:15 p.m. Men's Tennis vs Carson-Newman at Jefferson City.

Tuesday, April 3

2 p.m. Women's Tennis vs. University of the South, HOME.

7 p.m. Melony Teffertellers, Organ Recital, FAC Music Hall.

Wednesday, April 4

10:30 Mid-Week Worship.

9:30 p.m. Rachel Schlafer "Story Through Song." CIV at CCM.

2 p.m. Men's Tennis vs. Emory and Henry College HOME

3 p.m Softball vs. Tusculum, HOME

Thursday, April 5

2 p.m. Women's Tennis vs. Brevard at Brevard, N.C.

2 p.m Men's Tennis vs. Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate

Boycott Beer

Boycott Coors Beer.

There is a rapidly growing organization of conscientious consumers boycotting Coors.

William Coors, in speaking to minority business owners said, "It's not that the dedication among the blacks is less; in fact, it's greater. They lack the intellectual capacity to succeed, and it's taking them down the tubes."

I don't want to call him a racist pig, so I won't. I won't buy his beer. And I urge you to not buy it, either. I also urge you to write David Sickler, National AFL-CIO coordinator of the Coors Boycott Committee to see what else you can do.

I'm incensed that Americans have fought so hard for equality, only to be set back by one man's ignorance.

Please stand against Coors and racism.

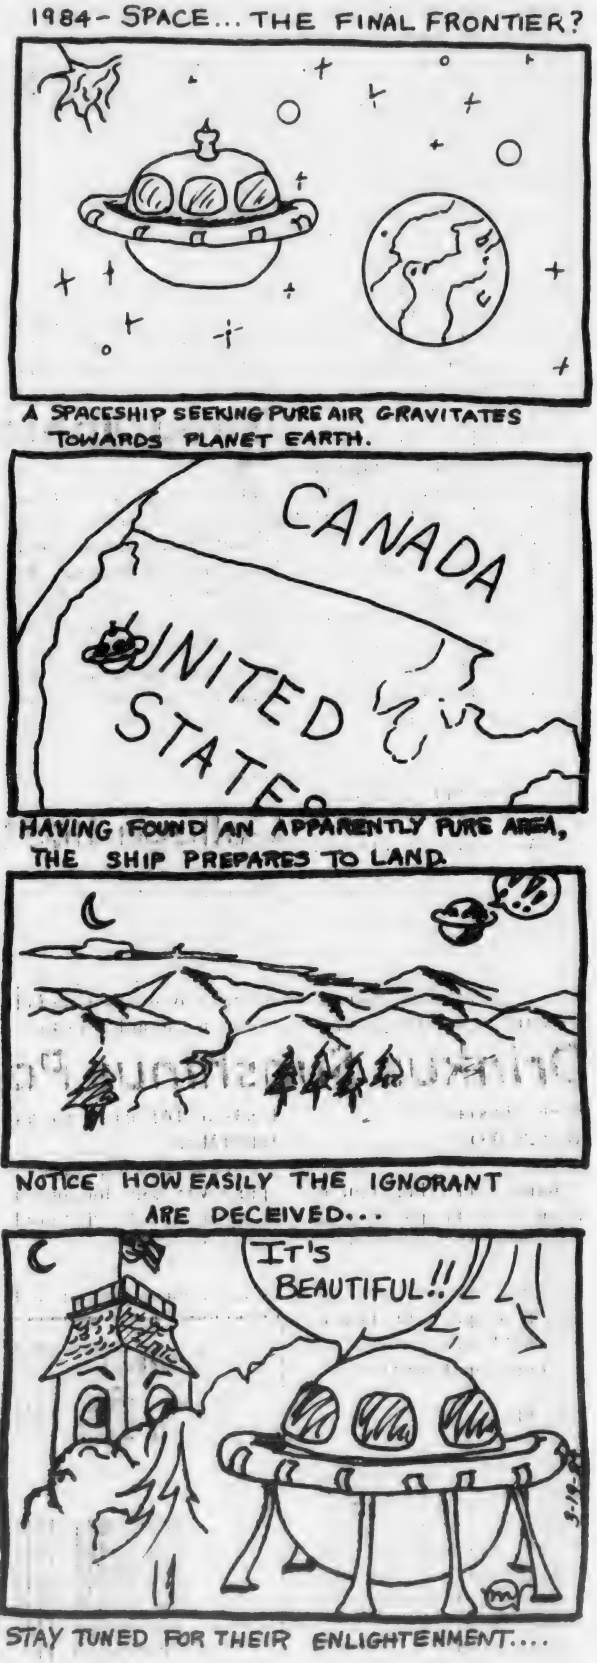
We are all equal.

Ed.

Dear Editor:

As you may be aware, there are many boycotts against the Adolph Coors Company of Golden, Colorado.

Coors spends a tremendous amount of money on our nations college campuses in an attempt to formulate students' taste buds for their brands of beer.



Before students give their lucrative patronage to Coors, it might be beneficial to study the attitudes and practices of this company.

If you are interested in more details of why so many groups of Minorities, Unions, Churches, Colleges, Women's Groups, Elected Officials, Environmentalists and concerned citizens boycott Coors, please send for additional information.

We have available on request, documentaion, affadavits and a report by the California Public Interest Research Group (CAL-PIRG), who spent months investigating the charges against Coors.

If your campus should desire to join the Coors Boycotts, a motion or resolution can be passed by your Student Council. For further information, please call (213) 387-7281.

Sincerely,
David Sickler,
National AFL-CIO Coordinator
Coors Boycott Committee

ECHO

Editor ..... Marta Wittig
Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographer ..... Keith Moore and Tara Wey
Business Manager ..... Michael Crawford

STAFF WRITERS

Julie Humpert, Tara Wey, Brian Rigell, Amy Waggoner, Pam Matthews, Ciretta Carpenter, Ed Welch, Mary Hughes, Wilma Coleman.

Letters, comments, or inquiries are welcomed and should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee, 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration.

The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Hiring Surge Predicted

Results of a new Employment Outlook Survey by Manpower Inc., worldwide supplier of Temporary Help, indicate a sharply rising employment trend as the nation enters the second quarter of the year.

Of the more than 11,400 U.S. firms polled in the study, 30% say they intend to increase their present workforce during the quarter ahead. The figure is the highest projection recorded by the quarterly survey in five years. An equally significant finding of the poll is that only 5% of U.S. employers plan to decrease hiring in the quarter ahead, the lowest workforce decrease factor every recorded by the survey.

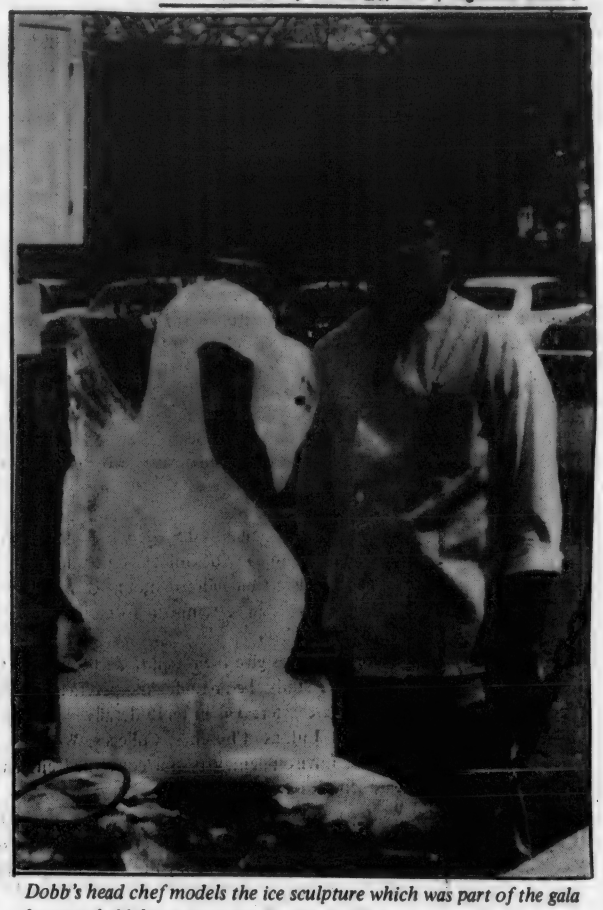
"The hiring outlook is as bright and strong as we've seen it at any time since 1978," said Manpower President Mitchell S. Fromstein. "The jobs are developing rapidly, across the board and across the nation."

Fromstein said he expected labor shortages to develop by early summer, particularly in the white collar clerical skills. "The recovery seems to be more rapid than in former post-recession periods," said Fromstein. "Some part of this hiring activity is due to the severity of the recession cutbacks; another part has come about through the growing addition of office automation equipment and systems; and the balance is just rapidly expanding production. Together, these elements are impacting heavily on staffing requirements."

The most notable increases are projected by both Durable and Non-Durable goods manufacturers and by those businesses related to Building and Construction. In the three categories combined, approximately 40% of employers nationally say they will increase their workforce while less than 5% will trim staff, a favorable ratio of 8:1.

Hiring projections are sharply above both last quarter and the second quarter of last year in virtually all sectors of the economy and in all geographic areas, with Southern states showing slightly higher figures than the national average and the Northeast indicating slighlty lower levels.

Among manufacturers of Durable goods, 37% say they will add to their workforce while only 5% plan decreases; manufacturers of Non-Durables, likewise, indicate a 30% increase with 5% planning reductions.



Wholesalers and retailers indicate that 32% will increase hiring while only 4% will decrease.

The Finance, Insurance and Real Estate sector predicts 27% of the firms will add to their staff while 7% will decrease. Service industries indicate that 29% will add people while 6% will cut back.

Geographical Jobs

Five states comprise the East North Central region of the country: Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Wisconsin. Best opportunities, collectively, in this area are in accounting, business administration, computer science, and chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical and other engineering. Outlook is fair for chemistry, physics, and other science fields.

The seven states of the West North Central region are Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota. Best opportunities are in accounting, and business administration. Outlook is fair for computer science, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical, and other engineering, and chemistry and other sciences. Next week: South and West, large metro areas.

Dobb's head chef models the ice sculpture which was part of the gala banquet held for prospective Presidential Scholars.

College hosts first Scholarship Weekend

High School honor students applying for the Presidential Scholars Program at Maryville College visited campus Friday and Saturday as part of the College's first Scholarship Weekend.

A total of 53 applicants, including 10 from Blount County, and their parents learned about the College and the prestigious scholarships which are based solely on academic merit.

This year, for the first time in the program's seven-year history, Maryville will award three levels of Presidential Scholarships: distinguished scholar, which covers full direct costs (tuition, room and board and fees); honor scholar, full tuition; and achievement scholar, half tuition.

These scholarships are renewable up to four years, as long as the student maintains the required grade point average.

As part of the selection process, a two-member faculty committee interviewed each candidate during his or her visit this weekend. The College will announce scholarship recipients in April.

The College's Office of Admissions sponsored the Scholarship Weekend which included a reception with entertainment by MC students on Friday evening in the Center for Campus Ministry and a banquet on Saturday in the Margaret Ware Dining Room on campus. Prospective students and their parents were also given tours of the campus and the Blount County area.

Those high school students attending came from nine states, including Tennessee, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina and Ohio.

Current Presidential Scholars, members of the Student Foundation and selected campus leaders helped the admissions office with planning and entertainment for Scholarship weekend.

Drinkus Sunshinus Partii Hits Campus

by Amy Waggoner

Dear Dr. Drip,

Recently our College went on spring break, and just about all my friends went south while I headed north. When we got back to school, I discovered that they had all changed - they look so different! What's the matter?

Worried in Maryville, PA.

Dear WIMP,

Your friends are experiencing the dreaded Drinkus Sunshinus Partii (DSP) syndrome, otherwise known as spring break disease. Unfortuantely, the disease does not run its course for about six more months.

Although summer officially begins on June 21, its arrival is hearalded on college campuses throughout the nation by outbreaks of DSP during the last half of March.

Three unmistakable symptoms appear with DSP: discoloration or darkening of the skin, growth of a beer gut, and shedding of skin, especially around the nose area. Sometimes a general lack of energy for scholarly activities follows the initial outbreak.

Unfortunately, WIMP, you can do nothing to cure your friends of this disease. Sometimes one big snow will put DSP into remission for a couple of weeks, but your best bet is to let the disease run its course. In September your friends will be fine. As you for, I advise plenty of bed rest, alcohol, and sunshine. With a little luck you might catch it, too, before spring term ends.

Cafeteria Rumors

by Julie Humpert

You probably heard rumors that there were to be some changes made in the cafeteria while we were away for Spring Break. Well, not much visible work has taken place, but behind-the-scene preparation has been going on for awhile.

Why hasn't the work started before now? According to Sidney Downey, Administrative Vice President, "We want to start from the top and work our way down, but the materials have arrived in the opposite order." The actual renovation will begin before the first of April.

The Maryville College Maintenance Staff will do most of the work. Some of the major alterations to take place include new ceiling tile; new wall coverings; new carpeting; blinds to replace the curtains; one complete unit for drinks; and a roller system for tray return.

We will see a noticeable difference in our cafeteria soon!

Notes From All Over

IOWA OFFICIALS MOVE TO BREAK' A GAMBLING 'RING AT A SMALL CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

Sioux County prosecutors say they'll eventually charge 12 students at small Northwestern College in Orange City with bookmaking and running a gambling operation.

MARYLAND IS 'LOSING GROUND AGAINST CHEATERS' SAYS ANTI-CHEATING ENFORCER.

Judicial Programs Director Gary Pavela says the school's 3-year campaign against cheating hasn't left "the situation any better than it was" when the campaign began.

"Our public image," he concedes,"may be somewhat better than the reality."

In recent weeks, one survey found that 50% or the Indiana Univ. students admit they've cheated.

Another study claimed 78% of the students at the Univ. of Delaware have cheated.

MORE FRATERNITIES FALL INTO TROUBLE.

A new Mexico State student has sued Sigma Alpha Epsilon at Univ. of Texas at El Paso because its members allegedly beat him during a visit to UTEP.

And prosecutors have charged Tau Gamma Theta members at Cal State-Chico with crimes in connection with a pledge's death last September.

Univ. of Florida police, moreover, recently announced they've charged 6 U.F. Pi Lambda Phi members with the gang rape of a 17-year-old girl last September.

The six students claim the girl was "a willing participant" in the group sex.

'MYSTERY PROF' PAUL CRAFTON GET 6 MONTHS FOR FRAUD IN CONNECTION WITH SIMULTANEOUS TEACHING JOBS.

Crafton was found to be teaching 3 different subjects at 3 different campuses under 3 different names last spring.

All told, he's taught at 9 campuses under 9 names in the past few years, and submitted 79 job applications to 55 schools.

CAL-BERKELEY MOVES TO PROTECT CAMPUS STRAY ANIMALS FROM RESEARCH.

In December, a prof and grad student conducted experiments on a stray cat they found on campus, but subsequent disciplinary actions were stymied because the campus had no rules specifically forbidding the practice.

Berkeley has now written new guidelines for animal research on the campus.

Boy George and Culture Club had to cancel their April concert at Iowa State because a tractor pull contest scheduled the coliseum first.

Notre Dame Food Services cooks say $20,000 it spent for a copy of Yale's cookbook was "a waste of money" because "a lot of the recipes just won't work."

C.I.A. RECRUITER DALE PETERSON SAYS STUDENTS ARE BREAKING DOWN DOORS TO JOIN THE AGENCY.

Peterson says campus recruiting, which used to be marred by picketing at best and violent confrontations at worst, has been going great for the agency this year.

He attributes the change to a resurgence of patriotism.

Poems Needed

Publisher Lincoln B. Young of Knoxville, TN, invites poetry manuscripts for a book to be titled THE AMERICAN MUSE - A Treasury of Lyric Poetry, which will be published in 1984 and will include work by classic and contemporary writers.

Poems of any length, any style, and on any subject, will be considered. No payment will be made for any poem, nor will poets by asked to pay a fee or to purchase books as a condition or acceptance. The book will be copyrighted, but each poem will remain the property of its author.

Manuscripts, accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope, should be sent by May 15 to: FINE ARTS PRESS, P.O. Box 3491-R, Knoxville, TN 37927.

Awards Program For Summer Research

The National Endowment for the Humanities has announced a unique grants program for individuals under 21 to spend a summer carrying out their own non-credit humanities research projects. The Younger Scholars Program will award up to 100 grants nationally for outstanding research and writing projects in such fields as history, philosophy, and the study of literature. These projects will be carried out during the summer of 1985. The application deadline is September 15, 1984.

Award recipients will be expected to work full-time for nine weeks during the summer, researching and writing a humanities paper under the close supervision of a humanities scholar. Please note that this is not a financial aid program, that no academic credit should be sought for the projects, and that competition for these grants is rigorous.

For guidelines, write to:

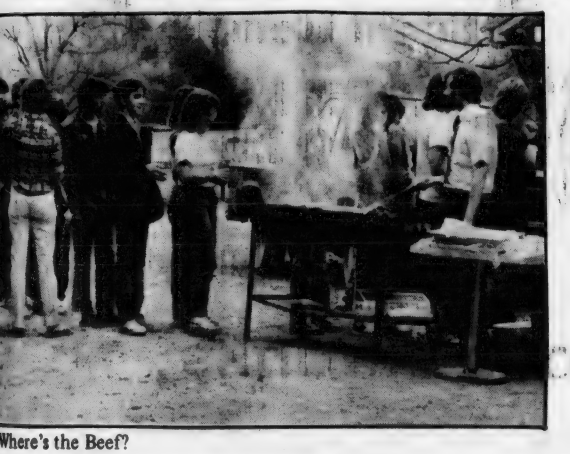
Younger Scholars Guidelines
CN, Rm. 426
The National Endowment for the Humanities
Washington, D.C. 20506

rinking Age May Rise

Legal Drinking Age -- The full nate passed a resolution asking nnessee's congressional dele- ion to support establishment a uniform national drinking e.

Legislation which raises the legal drinking age from 19 to 21 in Tennessee is pending action in the State and Local Government Committee.

Something Personal To Say?



Whisper It In
THE ECHO EAR

J.G. and K.R. - If he showed up for the date then it's got to be "Wedding Bells are Breaking Up That Old Gang of Mine" - B.R.

Hey Peach Cheeks - Was your birthday peachy?

Sonja - Hi no. 303

Moe- Would you ever want to have McDonald's after a doctor's appointment? - Mrs. T.

Where's the Beef?

Coke adds life to...
ORANGE BOWL SNACKS

ORANGE BOWL
"Located in the Foothills Mall"

R.A./S.A. Applications Due March 30

PICK UP AN APPLICATION IN THE OFFICE OF STUDENT AFFAIRS!

NO PHOTO AVAILABLE

No pictures are available of the dance because our photographer could not get in. The Echo staff members now have press passes. Passes have been okayed by Student Affairs. If you want an event covered, let them in free.

Resolutions of a Panic-Ridden Senior

by Peggy Millsaps

You know the type: the senior for whom four years of college have entailed considerations no more serious than building the biggest beer-can pyramid on campus or selecting a walkman. And when imminent graduation catches these students, as inevitably it must, the goof-off senior now facing the twin infernoes of comps and the job market suddenly becomes as ascetic and resolute as a Medieval scholastic monk.

Some of these seniors' noble and short-lived resolutions include vows to . . .

. . . write resumes rather than love letters.

. . . listen to tapes of interview tips rather than Van Halen.

. . . stop dressing like a hopeful new wave rock star.

. . . stop reading Mad magazine for the Wall Street Journal.

. . . wear shoes instead of sneakers.

. . . allot eight hours daily for comp study, including weekends.

. . . learn to swim-pronto!

. . . pass all language requirements.

. . . sit up attentively during class lectures and stop dreaming of the beach.

. . . modify plans to "leave an impression" on MC to something less than acts of vandalism.

You can easily spot these panic ridden, suddenly well-intentioned seniors: they are the ones striding purposefully about campus with set faces, armloads of books, copies of What Color is Your Parachute? and walkmans strapped to their waists.

DO SOMETHING WILD!

Adopt a wild horse or burro from the U.S. Government
For details, write:
Bureau of Land Management
350 S. Pickett Street
Alexandria, Virginia 22304

A public service of this publication.

Get An I.D. Card

Along with backpacks and guidebooks, students are traveling to just about every corner of the world with their "second passport", the International Student I.D. Card. It's the discount Card that makes travel on a shoe-string possible.

Available exclusively through the not-for-profit Council on International Educational Exchange, the Card entitles students as young as 12 years of age to exceptional fare reductions, discounts, price-cutting coupons, reduced museum admissions as well as automatic accident and sickness insurance. Over one million student travelers around the world take advantage of the Card every year while pursuing the fun of study and adventure.

International Student I.D. Card holders, under the age of 31 years, are offered exceptional airfare discounts, sometimes as much as 60% on select regularly-scheduled commercial flights. Available exclusively through the Council, this network of bargain fares includes trans-Atlantic and transPacific routes as well as intraEuropean and Europe to Asia, Africa and Australia flights.

As the only internationally recognized proof of student status, the International Student I.D. Card entitles student travelers to discounts in 50 countires. For the convenience of cardholders, the Card comes with an informative I.D. Discount Guide, which describes in detail discount programs in every participating country. In addition, the Guide contains several pages of discount coupons for local sightseeing, sporting activities, folkloric programs, boat trips and wilderness tours.

Any junior high, senior high, college, university or vocational school student at least 12 years of age is eligible to apply for an International Student I.D. Card. Students must be enrolled in a program of study leading to a diploma or a degree at an accredited secondary or post-secondary educational institution during the current academic year. To obtain the I.D. Card for 1985, students must be enrolled during the 1983-84 school year for either fall, spring, or summer sessions.

Students can apply for the Card by requesting an application from any Council office of Council-appointed issuing offices on 370 campuses across the nation. The cost, $800, automatically includes accident/sickness insurance for all travel outside the U.S., a benefit potentially as valuable to the traveling student as reduced air fares and other major discounts.

Among its many services, the Council maintains an International Student I.D. Card Scholarship Fund financed from sales of the Card. Now in its 4th year, the Fund awards travel subsidies to students in service or study projects in the world's developing countries. To date, a total of $35,400 has been awarded to 54 students. U.S. high school and undergraduate students who are planning a study program or service project in the developing nations of Asia, Africa, or Latin America can consult with CIEE for further details and application forms.

Established in 1947, the Council on International Educational Exchange is a private, not-for-profit membership organization dedicated to international education and student travel. Since its founding, the Council has expanded its membership to 164 colleges, universities and youth-serving organizations throughout the U.S.

In addition to developing and administering programs of international educational exchange, the Council provides information services, publishes periodicals, brochures and books; organizes conferences, seminars and workshops; and plans projects which offer assistance to individuals, colleges, universities and other organizations on matters of international education.

Council maintains travel offices in the following locations w students may purchase the International Student I.D. Card.

Council Travel Office:	Address:
San Francisco	312 Sutter Street, San Francisco, 94108, (415) 421-3473
Los Angeles	1093 Broxton Ave., Los Angeles, 90024, (213) 208-3551
San Diego	UCSD Student Center B-023, La Jo CA 92093, (619) 452-0630
San Diego	4429 Cass Street, San Diego, 92109, (619) 270-6401
Berkeley	2511 Channing Way, Berkely, 94704 (415) 848-8604
Long Beach	5500 Atherton, Suite 210, Long Be CA 90804
Seattle	1314 Northeast 43rd Street, Sea WA 98105, (206) 632-2448
Boston	729 Boylston Street, Suite 201, B ton, MA 02116, (617) 497-1497

SNACK BAR SPECIALS

New Lunch Specials $1.9

Get a Cruiser Cup for just $.79 filled with your Choice of drink!

New Lunch Specials $1.95

Monday - Cheeseburger, Fries, and Small Drink
Tuesday - Chili Dog, Fries, and Small Drink
Wednesday - Chicken Sandwich, Onion Rings, and Small Drink
Thursday - Salad Plate and Small Drink
Friday - Fish Sandwich, Onion Rings, and Small Drink

Remember:
Corn Flakes - $1.09
Oreo Cookies - $1.25
Peter Pan Peanut Butter - $1.35

For those Special Occasions, order CAKES and COOKIES from the food Service, DOBBS.

SPECIALS

SPORTS

OBINSON DOES AFRICA

Tom Robinson, a Maryville ollege sophomore from Kingsrt, will not be working at bastball camps this summer with ew York Knicks' guard Ernie unfeld or his former high hool coach, the legendary uck" Van Huss. Instead, T.R., his friends call him, will tra to Uganda, Africa, to help reabilitate the sport of basketball d witness for Christ in this ife-torn African nation.

Robinson, a 6'4" guard for the ryville Scots, has been selectto participate in the Global treach Basketball Project ne 2 through July 28. Purse of this project is to use rts as a channel for helping st morale among Uganda's ung people and their families that physical and economic nstruction efforts in that ntry can be effective.

asketball was selected bese it was the fastest growing rt in Uganda before Idi Amin ne to power in 1971 and eliated it. Now that he has fal the government and people trying to rebuild, but many ndans are too sick, hungry, emotionally broken, Robinexplained.

lobal Outreach hopes to edy this by restoring the rt of basketball in the high ools while demonstrating "concern, love, unity and cooperation which God can bring to people of different races and tribes."

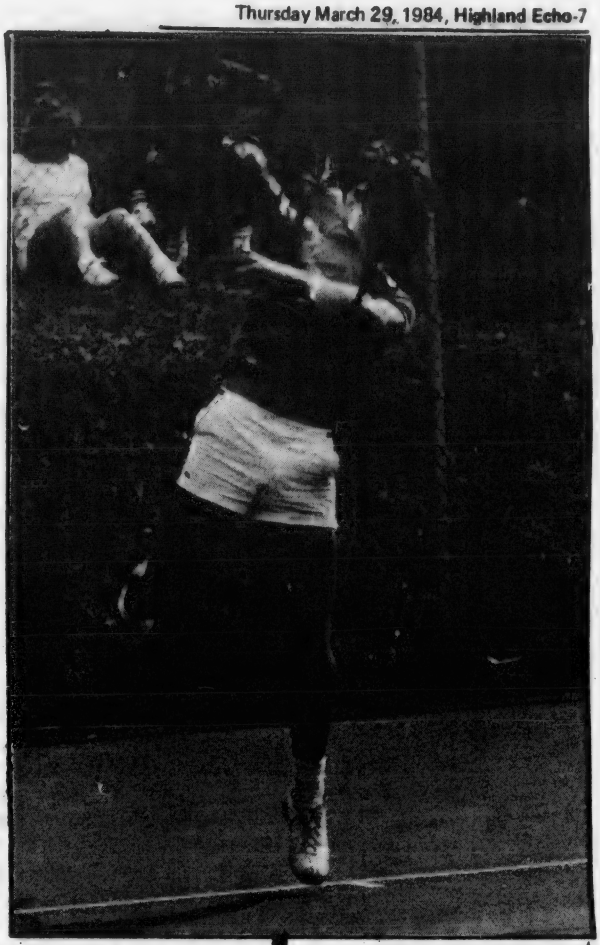
Robinson learned of this mission opportunity from Webster Carroll, a Ugandan missionary who is organizing 10 teams of 10 players each to witness and play and teach basketball in Africa this summer. Robinson's coach at Kingsport's Dobyns-Bennett, Van Huss, encouraged his former player to participate in the project.

Robinson will spend a week in Birmingham for orientation and practice before flying to Nairobi, Kenya, vai Atlanta and Amsterdam, Holland. The group will travel by van from Kenya to Uganda for the six-week project.

Participants will spend two weeks at each group of high schools, helping develop a new varsity basketball team to represent that school and participate in a basketball tournament at the end of that period.

While there, the American players will also visit town and bush churches on Sundays to sing, teach Sunday School, give their testimony, preach, and to fellowship.

When the group leaves Africa, they will leave with the schools new basketballs, uniforms, courts, and goals, along with a living witness of their Christian faith.



In explaining why he decided to join this effort, Robinson said, "I felt that God wanted me to use the ability I have as a basketball player to help spread the message of Jesus overseas."

The MC player finished fourth in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference in assists and was in the top 10 in free throw shooting until hospitalization for the flu and a torn ligament cut into his playing time.

Robinson plans to work out with his Maryville teammates and study the Bible to prepare for his trip.

The MC sophomore is the son of William and Mildred Robinson of Kingsport, both Maryville College graduates. His father grew up in Maryville, and his brother, Bill, is orchestra director for the Maryville City Schools System. An aunt and uncle, Peggy and Jack Mobley, are also Maryville residents.

Each participant is expected to raise his own funds to cover round trip air fare, land travel, and food. Several individuals in Kingsport are already raising funds for Robinson's trip. Others interested in helping may send donations to First Baptist Church, Church Circle, Kingsport, TN 37660.

Mike Hill pumps another one over the net, beating Covenant in a tough match.

Men's Tennis

by Chris Porter

The Men's Tennis Team got their first win this weekend over Covenant, 6-3. Coming back from a 9-0 loss to Division I Pittsburgh, the Scots played a good game Saturday and there were many good surprises, according to Coach Dyer.

Singles winners on Saturday were: Mike Hill 1-6, 6-4, 7-5; Dave Raulerson 6-1, 6-1; Quy Huyng 6-1, 6-2; Chin Cho 6-1, 7-5; Bart Mize 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

In doubles matches Quy and Chin won 6-1 and 6-2.

Coach Dyer was pleased with the team's performance on Saturday, and especially with Quy and Chin who accounted for three wins between them. At this writing, the Scots are headed to Tusculum for a match there.

Women's Tennis

haron Wood, former Lady t, returns to Maryville Col as head coach of the 1984 nis team which begins play ch 20 at Tusculum College reeneville.

This is definitely a rebuilding for our tennis team," said ch Wood. "We're attempting ay the foundation for a pro that, hopefully, will be petitive in the very near fu ."

wo primary developments year will provide necessary erstones for improvement.

his is our first year as a ber of the newly formed men's Intercollegiate Athletic ference (W.I.A.C.) under the A. This should give us a ure of added incentive and tion. Also, we're actively recruiting tennis players for the first time ever this year," Coach Wood explained.

Maria Irwin, junior from Elizabethton, and Kathy Balent, sophomore from Panama City, Republic of Panama, are the only two returning players from last season.

Kay Julian, senior from Knoxville, is the number two ranked singles player. She will team up in doubles with the number one singles player, first year student Nancy Koehl. Ms. Koehl and Jackie Osborne are both graduates of William Blount High in Maryville.

Freshmen Kathy Priest, Mooresville, N.C. and Pam Gunter, Rossville, Ga., will provide additional depth to the roster.

"Our lack of experience is probably going to prove to be a serious liability in terms of compiling a strong record this season," Coach Wood noted. "We certainly hope to improve last year's record of 4-5, and with the talent we've acquired, I expect to be able to do that."

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES
All Seats $2.00 Everyday Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
9-7-8395 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12:45 2:55 5:05 7:15 9:25
ROMANCING THE STONE
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:10
THE PRODIGAL
(No Bargain Matinees)
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
POLICE ACADEMY
12:30, 2:45, 5:00, 7:15, 9:25
TANK

SPORTS

Karen makes the action hot for the Lady Scots.

Softball with Style

The season has begun, and even though the Lady Scots Softball team dropped their first two games, they are showing great promise, according to Pat Ballard. "All the mistakes we made that led to our losses were ones that we can correct," he said. He pointed to such areas as hitting the cutoff and limiting the number of errors committed as things to be worked on.

LMU rolled into town Saturday after crushing another team the day before by at least twenty-five runs in both games. The Lady Scots put up a valiant effort, but the Lady Rail Splitters were not to be denied as they won 12-2 and 15-5. In the first game the Lady Scots mustered only two hits in sixteen trips and came up with five hits in twenty-five attempts in the second one. The general consensus,however, is that the Lady Scots played much better than anyone expected.

The team, in its first year as a fast-pitch sport, has eleven fast-pitch dates scheduled with four more remaining home dates. The schedule also includes three slow-pitch dates with one at home. Home games in the near future include April 2 against Martin Jr. College at 1:00 and April 4 against Tusculum at 3:00. Home games are either played at Sandy Springs or Everett Park.

Coach Ballard is looking to his returning players Nickie Frazier (capt.), Kandy Schram, Kay Ju-n, Penny Head, and Mimi Chesney for leadership and savvy. New players on this year's squad include transfers Nanette "J.R." Grillone and Denise Penzkofer along with Belle Ferguson, Sherrie Farmer, Alicia Oller, Stacy Davis, Theresa Taylor, Nancy Koehl, Wendy Guice, and Karen Read.

Opponents this year include LMU, Tenn. Tech., Tusculum, Martin Jr. College, and Morristown in the fast-pitch schedule. The slow-pitch opponents include Hiwassee, Milligan, and teams in the conference tournament in Danville, KY.

The motto for this year is "Softball with Style" and the Lady Scots are trying to live up to that image. So, the next time you see a scheduled home game, come out, catch some rays, and lend your support to your Lady Scots.

Baseball

by Chris Porter

Last Saturday, the Scots split a doubleheader with Eastern Mennonite (ODAC), 5-4 and 8-7. Steve Hadden pitched the opener and had a good day except for the second inning. With the bases loaded, E M C hit past 2nd and put two runs on the board. A sacrifice fly advanced the base runners to 2nd and 3rd, and a line drive scored one and a squeeze play bunt put the Scots four runs behind.

The Scots got a run in that inning when RonRamsey and Pat Moyer got hits and Don Keller got hit, thus loading up the bases. Rick Carver got the RBI on a sacrafice fly. In the third inning, Pat Moyer hit a home run that scored Rick Brand, who was pinch running for Eric Etchison.

In the bottom of the third, Chris Johannsen walked, advanced to 2nd on a wild pitch. Glen Humphreys hit a single up the middle that scored Johannsen.

EMC got one more run in the 7th, but the Scots tried to come back and got one run via a good hustle by Moyer who out-ran the throw from short stop to 1st. Moyer stole and advanced, and scored on a bunt, but the Scots couldn't keep the rally going and came up short by one.

Mike Rohan started pitching the second game and Steve Saylor came in to pitch the last two. The Scots got off to a rough start and were down by one in the top of the third, and another run walked in. Rohan came back to strike out two remaining batters.

The Scots jumped ahead in the bottom of the 4th when Moyer hit a double and Saylor scored him on a triple. Johannsen walked and then Humphreys hit a sacrafice bunt that scored Saylor (who was pinch hitting).

EMC got three runs in the 6th, but the Scots had a rally of their own that inning. Rick Carver h... a double and advanced on a s... rafice and subsequently score... Humphreys scored on a miss... tag. Kevin Jenkins scored on ... sacrafice and Mike Hum... scored on a wild pitch and t... Scots were ahead 7-5.

EMC came back to tie it, b... in the bottom of the 7th, Sayl... hit a double and Carver walke... Johannsen got on when EM... 3rd baseman bobbled the ba...

Next, Humphreys got on vi... fielder's choice, but advanc... Jenkins hit the final sque... bunt that scored Carver a... ended the game.

The Scots, at this writing, ... 6-5 on the year.

Robyn Bouch, Bonnie Bouch, Mark Ferrell, Jim Huenke, Brian Gray, and Jenny Walker watch a tense moment at Saturday's baseball game.

The Blount County Tennis Association donated a tennis net to Maryville College in appreciation for the college's allowing the community to use the courts. Tennis pro Jack Murphy put the net up in February.

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 20 Maryville College Trial Edition Thursday, April 5, 1984

Circle K Hosts Convention

by Pam Mathews

Maryville College Circle K Club, along with the Maryville-Alcoa Kiwnis Clubs, sponsored the 28th Annual Kentucky-Tennessee District Convention held at the Airport Hilton March 30 - April 1. Total attendance at the convention was 190, with MC having 100% of its members attending. Kevin O'Reilly and Paula Walton were convention chairpeople, and both received recognition and gifts for their outstanding achievement as chairpeople of the convention.

Circle K International is the world's largest collegiate organization and is sponsored by Kiwanis International. Each Circle K club is assisted by a local Kiwanis club. Through this collegiate service organization, members strive "to alleviate the needs of the less fortunate through self-less service and support."

Activities at the convention included a dance, workshops, awards banquet ceremony, a talent show, and a farewell brunch.

Those who were involved in workshops from MC Circle K Club included: Beth Goodier - chairperson of the Projects workshop, dealing with the Big Brother/Big Sister program; Nancy Jones - Hospice program; Lynn Davis and Irma Young - Deaf Interpreting, the former chairperson and the latter a member of the MC faculty.

Others participating in different aspects of the convention were Chris Lilley - Invocation of opening ceremony; Lisa Burger-National Anthem of opening ceremony; Todd Honeycutt, Pres. of the MC Circle K Club-Greeting of the convention attendants at opening ceremony; Amy Neary - Talent Show and Chairperson of the Oratorical contest; and Chris Lilley - Talent Show.

Speakers at the Convention included John Easley, Vice Pres. of Circle K International, David Kelly Immediate Past Pres. Circle K International and Brad East, Governorof the Kentucky-Tennessee District.

At the awards ceremony, MC Circle K Club received the Single Service Award for having the best project in the Ken-Tenn. district, and placed 3rd in the Gold Division Achievement Award. They also received a Ten-Ten-Thirty Patch for their banner because membership increased ten percent from last year.

Receiving honorable mentions were Paul Walton as Secretary for the MC Circle K Club and were Paula Walton as Secretary for the MC Circle K Club and Bill Stroud, Kiwanis Advisor.

The convention was closed with a Farewell Brunch and the installation of the 84-85 District Board.

FUN IN THE SUN

Work Continues on Willard

by Teresa Welch

In the midst of all the construction on and around campus, the restoration of Willard House is one project that delights the College community.

The house, built in 1860, is a prime example of mid-Victorian architecture and has been recognized as an historical landmark.

Previously the president's residence, Willard House is tentatively seated to house an alumni center or perhaps a center for development, continuing education, or other offices, according to Archie Ellis, Vice-President for Development.

The Tennessee Historical Commission granted $30,000 in funds for the restoration, to be matched by Maryville College. MC alumni more than met the matching requirement with $40,000 in gifts.

The total $70,000 will go toward the exterior work to be completed by August 31. Interior work is planned for next year.

Restoration, in contrast to renovation, calls for returning a building to its original state. For Willard House, restoration calls for replacing the slate roof tile by tile.

In assessing the damage to the house, Sid Downey, Vice-President for Administration and MC Treasurer, agrees that the roof is perhaps the greatest concern in restoring Willard House. It is certainly the most expensive.

In the chimney, disintegrating mortar has caused dangerous instability. The entire chimney system is to be reconstructed and restored, as are the rotted porches. Window frames must be repaired to support the original stained - and leaded glass windows.

Both Ellis and Downey are pleased with the positive feedback they have received about Willard House. Downey appreciates especially "all the support the project has gained from students, alumni, and friends of the college.

Student and student groups are invited to support the restoration of Willard House. If you or your group would like to help out with landscaping, painting, or cleaning, see Sid Downey in the business office.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, April 5

2 p.m. - Women's Tennis at Brevard College, Brevard, N.C.

2 p.m. - Men's Tennis at LMU Harrogate, TN

Friday, April 6

1 p.m. (CST) - Softball at Martin Jr. College, Pulaski, TN

7:30 p.m. - Baseball vs. Roane State, Sandy Springs park.

Saturday, April 1

1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Tennesee Tech, Sandy Springs Park (doubleheader)

9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Lip Synch and Battle of the Bands contests - Alumni Gym.

Sunday, April 8

7 p.m. - Vespers in the CCM

8 p.m. - CIV - "Hibakushia: A Love Story from Japan," Modern Times Theater of NYC. Wilson Chapel.

Monday, April 9

2 p.m. - Baseball vs. Mars Hill Baseball Field (Doubleheader)

3 p.m. - Softball vs. Morristown. Sandy Springs Park.

Tuesday, April 10

12 noon - Presidential Scholars Luncheon Proffitt Dining Room

2 p.m. - Women's Tennis at University of the South, Sewanee, TN

7:30 p.m. - MACCO Concert. Wilson Chapel.

Wednesday, April 11

9:20 a.m. - CIV - "The Scarlet Letter." FAC Music Hall.

10:30 a.m. - Mid-week worhsip in CCM.

7:00 p.m. - CIV - Episode 2 of "The Scarlet Letter," FAC Music Hall.

Grant for International Students

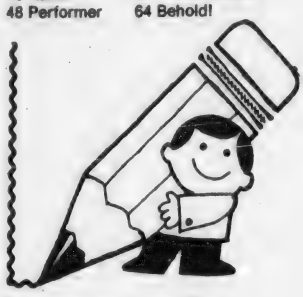
Mary Lib Jackson, an MC alumna, has made a $75,000 pledge, to be paid to the College in equal installments over a five-year period, to fund community programs, guest speakers, student programs and other services for the College's expanding international student enrollment.

Mrs. Jackson, a 1946 MC graduate, is a member of the College's Board of Directors. She also serves on the steering committee for the Toward Century III fund drive and is a past president of the Maryville College Alumni Association.

Her husband, the late Robert C. Jackson also attended MC. He worked for Lambert Brothers Materials Company in Maryville for 18 years before joining with local businessman Carle Davis to purchase Harrison Inc., a Blount County construction firm.

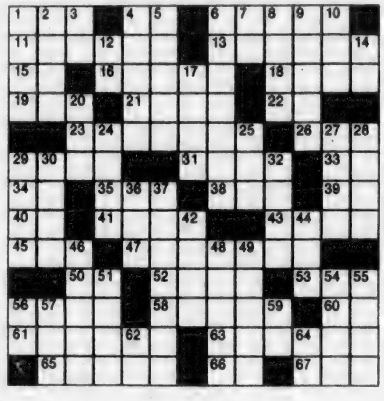
Editorials

Well, we got the bad news two weeks ago; Pearsons Hall is closing its doors to residents next year. Students reacted as expected, with anger and other emotions. Now that the initial shock has passed, it is possible to stand back and take a more objective look at the situation.



Of course residents don't want to leave – the atmosphere in Pearsons is different from that in any other dorm on campus; it's unique. Besides, moving to another dorm is a real pain.

It's about time something is being done about Pearsons. People living there have been trying for ages to get something done about the problems. The plumbing leaks, the windows sound as if they'll fall out at the first big gust of wind, the walls are almost paper-thin, and the noise is sometimes unbearable. Now the administration plans to fix these problems – and residents are COMPLAINING?!?



Yes, moving out of Pearsons will be inconvenient, but it's necessary if we are to save it from a fate like Carnegie's.

ACROSS
1 Resort
4 Pronoun
6 Cabinet-maker's tool
11 Showy decoration
13 Bodies of water
15 Preposition
16 Pope's veil
18 Smooth
19 Church bench
21 Auricular
22 Compass pt.
23 Commanded
26 Hurried
29 Possessive
31 First man
33 Note of scale
34 Hypothetical force
35 Weaken
38 Large bird
39 Part of "to be"
40 Symbol for tellurium
41 Weaken
43 Melody
45 Organ of hearing
47 Expands
50 Man's nickname
52 Keen
53 Supplement
56 Jason's ship
58 Provide and serve food
60 Babylonian deity
61 Insect
63 Egg dish
65 Worms
66 Rupees: abbr.
67 Harvest goddess

DOWN
1 Halt
2 Evergreen tree
3 Article
4 Roman tetrarch of Galilee
5 Flush with success
6 Go before
7 Chinese distance measure
8 Main streets: abbr.
9 At no time
10 Before
12 Conjunction
14 Symbol for tin
17 Unit of Italian currency
20 Emerged victorious
24 Remainder
25 Obstruct
27 Wolfhound
28 Title
29 Speck
30 Mental image
32 Speechless
36 Succor
37 Noblemen
42 Lamb's pen name
44 Employ
46 Rants
48 Performer
49 Abounds
51 Parcels of land
54 Retain
55 Dines
56 Hebrew month
57 Female ruff
59 About
62 French article
64 Behold!

PUZZLE ANSWER-P. 4

© 1983 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

The HIGHLAND ECHO will be sponsoring a

LIP-SYNCH CONTEST

at this Saturday night's Dance!

contact box 2820 to enter.

ECHO

TRIAL EDITION

Editor . . . . . Amy K. Waggoner
Supervising Editor . . . . . Marta Wittig
Assistant Editor . . . . . Pam Mathews
Business Manager . . . . . Mike Crawford
Sports Editor . . . . . Rick Carver
Photography Editor . . . . . Keith Moore
Layout Editor . . . . . Brenda Gillespie

Letters, Comments, or inquiries are welcomed and should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN 37801.

Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the Editor, staff, and/or College Administration.

The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

COUPON

Yield to temptation... at Swensen's

HOT FUDGE SUNDAE.
America's favorite! Lots of good old-fashioned rich vanilla ice cream covered all over with delicious Hot Fudge and then topped with real whipped cream and a cherry! Always served with a Swensen's wafer, too. Try one—today!

Friday, April 6 is MARYVILLE COLLEGE Night!

BUY ONE
Hot Fudge Sundae
GET ONE FREE
Foothills Mall Only

Limit one coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with any other Special or Promotion. Not valid where prohibited by law.

1983 Swensen's®

COUPON

EXTRAORDINARY PEOPLE

Dr. Beck Enjoys Scholarly Pursuits

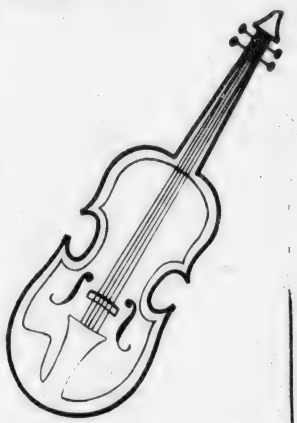
"I am obnoxious to each carping tongue/Who says my hand a needle better fits, A poet's pen all scorn I should thus wrong,/ For such despite they case on female wits: /If what I do I prove well it won't advance, / They'll say it's stol'n or else it was by chance."

From "The Prologue" 1650
Anne Bradstreet

Successful women, or rather the reception of successful women, has come a long way since Anne Bradstreet's time. Dr. Charlotte H. Beck, a Maryville College professor of English, is proof of this in our midst today. Outside school surrounding, Dr. Beck is involved in several writing associations and endeavors. She is the vice president of the Tennessee Phililogical Association, a group devoted to the writing of scholarly papers. As a member of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association, Dr. Beck organized and will participate in a "special session" about Randall Jarrell.

Last year Dr. Beck published a book on this Nashville-born poet entitled Worlds and Lives: The Poetry of Randall Jarrell. An article on Randall Jarrell and Gerard Manley Hopkins is still in press and soon to be released in the Hopkins Quarterly. Not sure where or when publication will take place, Dr. Beck awaits word on yet another article about Randall Jarrell and Robert Penn Warren. Her "dream in the making" is the idea of a new book, entitled The Fugitive Legacy.

With all these pursuits, Charlotte Beck still finds time to enjoy gourmet cooking and dining with her husband. They also attend many musical concerts, particularly operas. If there is still a moment or two free, Charlotte Beck enjoys swimming and gardening. "I don't know how much of it is actually gardening, considering the obstacles and things in our yard," she says.



MAACO Winners to Perform

Five winners in this year's Maryville-Alcoa College- Community Orchestra's annual concerto competition will perform as featured artists with the orchestra on Tuesday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m. in Wilson Chapel.

John Dent, trumpet, winner in the pre-collegiate competition, will perform Riisager's "Concertino for Trumpet and Strings." Dent is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dent and a student at Maryville High School. His father is a professor in the Math Department at Maryville College.

Other winners include Danny Brian of Knoxville, piano, playing Liszi's "Totentaz"; and vocalists Janis Cunningham and Terry Wilson, both of Maryville performing "Un Di Felice," "Ah, Fors E Lui," and "Sempre Libera" from Verdi's "La Traviata."

Tickets for the April 10 concert are $5 for adults, $4 for students and senior citizens, and $3 for children under six. Tickets are available from the Maryville College Office of Development.

Hibakusha at MC

Modern Times Theater will perform HIBAKUSHA: A LOVE STORY FROM HIROSHIMA at Wilson Chapel on the campus of Maryville College in Maryville on Sunday, April 8 at 8 p.m. This will be considered as a CIV credit.

HIBAKUSHA had a highly successful off-Broadway run last season. THE NEW YORK TIMES called it "a saga of love and courage . . . the acting is as impassioned as the writing." IN THESE TIMES said: "HIBAKUSHA assembles a wide, vivid cast of characters -- old and young, beggars and businessmen, mothers, teachers, industrialists and activists. Drawing from meticulous research, the play is a affecting vision of our future- the intimate future of families, children and lovers that is rarely subject to speculation under the shadow of the arms race."

HIBAKUSHA was performed throughout the New York City area for some of the thousands of people who came for the June 12 Peace March and the UN Special Session on Disarmament; scenes from the play were broadcast on National Public Radio. Last fall, Modern Times Theater toured the Midwest and California; THE SAN FRANCISO CHRONICLE called HIBAKUSHA "wondrously gripping theater, poetic and artful."

Modern Times Theater is an independent multi-racial theater company based in New York City. Founded in 1977 by two veterans of the San Francisco Mimi Troupe, the company has a strong and unique performing style and an audience as diverse as America.

Tickets for HIBAKUSHA are available at the following locations: in Marvville by calling 982-9272(Highland Presbyterian Church) or at Maryville College, Office of Community Services 982-6412, ext. 222; in Knoxville by calling 577-3335. Co-sponsors of the event are Maryville College and the Peace Committee of Union Presbytery. A minimum donation of $4 per ticket is requested, however student will be admitted free of charge. Proceeds from the sale of tickets will help support the summer study tour of the Soviet Union and Europe to be made by five members of New Providence Presbyterian Church. Churches are urged to bring their youth groups and to make a donation to support this event.

Beach Party Rocks Davis

by Heidi Weiffenbach

Have you ever been to a beach party in Tennessee? Well, you have if you went to the one in Davis Hall last Saturday night. Blue seas, sunny skies, and tropical palm trees were all a part of the setting- even if they were only made of construction paper. The beach scene was complete only with the addition of sparkling sand, which was none other than glitter, of course.

The beach party was a campus activity sponsored by the Davis Hall Council whose members inlcude Jody Mullen, Tanya Mitchell, Mary Cornwell, Ann Ritter, Eleanor Nelson, Amy Ralston, Kathy Byron, and Lourdes Couce. The D.J.'s for the party were Lucky Macy, Greg Metcalf, and Mike Wilcox. Thanks to everyone who made the beach party a success!

SNACK BAR SPECIALS

New Lunch Specials $1.95

Get a Cruiser Cup for just $.79 filled with your Choice of drink!

New Lunch Specials $1.95

Monday - Cheeseburger, Fries, and Small Drink
Tuesday - Chili Dog, Fries, and Small Drink
Wednesday - Chicken Sandwich, Onion Rings, and Small Drink
Thursday - Salad Plate and Small Drink
Friday - Fish Sandwich, Onion Rings, and Small Drink

SPECIAL OF THE WEEK:

12 Pack of COKE or Diet COKE
Now only $3.12
Regularly $3.79

For those Special Occasions, order CAKES and COOKIES from the food Service, DOBBS.

Dobbs
DOBBS HOUSES INC

SPECIALS

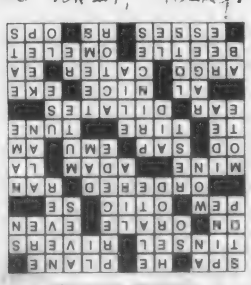
SPORTS

Baseball Team Splits

by Van Connors

On Saturday, March 31, the Fighting Scots split a double header with Emory and Henry. The first game was a close contest, which saw the Scots drop a 4-2 decision. Steve Hadden led the Scots with a fine pitching performance on the mound, giving up only one earned run.

The second game saw the Scots come alive with a 9-1 victory. Everything seemed to fall together as Maryville managed to score in every inning but the 6th. Steve Saylor took care of the pitching chores, breezing through the EH lineup to chalk up the win. Mike Human led the offensive surge for MC with hits in the game.



Of the season so far, Coach Sawyer had his enthusiasm up and commented, "I think we're about to start rolling." When asked about the downfalls the team faces, Sawyer said, "The games we've played better are when we have more people backing and supporting us."

Now, with a 6-7 record, we begin to see the Scots baseball team taking off, so come out and support the Fighting Scots as they ascend to greater heights.

GO FOR IT, MOLLY!

Puzzle Answer

Women's Tennis

by Rick Carver

The women's tennis team had a rough week, dropping two matches to Tennessee Wesleyan and Lincoln Memorial University.

The TW contest was a tough, hard-fought 5-4 loss. Winners for Maryville were Nancy Koehl and Kay Julian in singles, and the combination of Kathy Balent and Pam Gunter in doubles. In addition, Nancy and Kay also won as the number one doubles team.

The next day, the Lady Scots were forced to play without the services of Maria Jo Irwin and Kathy Balent. The absence of the number 3 and 4 performers proved to be critical, as the Lady Scots could manage only one win on the day. That victory belonged to Pam Gunter at number 5 singles.

The Lady Netters are still going strong, however. There is a strong team unity, and the desire is there for the makings of a successful season. Look for continued improvement in the Lady Scots tennis team.

KOEHL HURLS NO-HITTER

by Brian Rigell

The Lady Scots softball team went to the well four times this past week and although they did not come back with much, they did manage to bring home a win and the first no-hitter in the softball team's record. The team lost twice to Tenn. Tech. and once to Tusculum, thus bringing their overall record to 1-5.

On Friday the Lady Scots travelled to Cookeville to take on Tenn. Tech. Maryville dropped the first game 13-10, but rallied to win the second one 5-1 behind the no-hit pitching of Nancy "Hose" Koehl.

On Saturday the squad left for the Tusculum Tournament at 7:00 a.m. after having gotten back the night before at 11:00 p.m. For a while it looked as though the Lady Scots would not be affected by the late night and early morning hours they keep, but "van lag" finally caught up to them, and they dropped two games. Maryville opened up against host Tusculum and started out with a 4-1 lead in the second but soon found themselves down and unable to rally, and they lost 11-5. The next team that the Lady Scots faced were the girls from Tenn. Tech. It was a close one with Tenn. Tech up 2-1 going into the fifth, when the bottom dropped out and Maryville was touched for six runs. Tech won the game by the score of 12-1.

Coach Ballard was at a loss for an explanation except for the fact that the team looked and probably felt sluggish after all their travelling. He is, however, pleased by many things. These include the nice looking Lady Scots poster that came out this week, Nancy's no-hit victory, Belle Ferguson's leading the team in RBI's with seven, and Kandy Schram's batting average which leads the team at .461.

The coaches and team wish to thank the baseball coaching staff for all their help and hints. A thanks also goes out to Sarah Bailey, Pam Gunter, and Karen Spence for making the trip to Tusculum on Saturday. Also thanks to Coach Saylor and Bob Kirkland for coming out at 6:30 Saturday morning to work on the van. A great big THANKS and special mention go to Danny Bouch and Brian Gray who made both trips this week and were there to jump start the van when it quit. Way to be, guys!

The team will have played twice at home by the time this is printed. The next home game is April 9th against Morristown at 3:00 p.m. Come out and help the Lady Scots K.A. All the Way.

Men's Tennis

by Rick Carver

The men's tennis team lost a tough match on Tuesday, March 27th. The much improved squad from Tusculum downed the Scots 7-2, on the strength of a 6-0 sweep in singles play. The Scots won the doubles side of the contest, however, with the no. 3 doubles duo, Whinnwan Cho and Quy Huyntt, taking a 6-3, 6-1 decision, improving their record to 2-0. The number two doubles Dave Raulerson and Bart Mize grabbed the other Maryville win by coasting to a 6-1, 6-4 decision. Coach Dyer said he was pleased with the doubles play of the Scots, but of the overall contest, Dyer said, "We had a lot of close matches, but it doesn't count unless you win them."

Coupon
ITALIAN VILLAGE
YOU'VE TRIED THE REST
NOW TRY THE BEST
$1 OFF ANY PIZZA
Foothills Mall

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.00 Everyday Till 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12:45 2:55 5:05 7:15 9:25
ROMANCING THE STONE
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:10
WHERE THE BOYS ARE
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
POLICE ACADEMY
1:30, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30, 9:30
UP THE CREEK

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 21 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, April 12, 1984

"Dark of the Moon"

The Maryville College Playhouse will close its 1983-84 season with the drama "Dark of the Moon" as a tribute to the 50th anniversary of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Performances of this play, an adaptation of a Smoky Mountain folklore ballad, are set for Friday and Saturday, April 20-21, and April 27-28, at 8:15 p.m. and Wednesday, April 25, at 2:45 p.m., all in the MC Theater.

Don Thomas, instructor of speech and theater at MC, will direct this production, which is one of over 40 events in the Blount County Chamber of Commerce's Dogwood Arts Festival.

Eric Greaser and Dianne Bonyadi, both juniors at MC, are cast in the play's leading roles as John the Witch Boy and Barbara Allen. Greaser is a pre-engineering major from Geneva, Switzerland, and Miss Bonyadi is an English major from Beach Haven, N.J.

Donald Thorne, a seventh grade science teacher at Halls Middle School, will play a supporting role as Conjure Man. Thorne has previously worked with both the MC Playhouse and Playful witches taunt John the Witch Boy, played by Eric Greaser of Geneva, Switzerland, in this scene from the upcoming Maryville College Playhouse production of "Dark of the Moon." This tribute to the 50th anniversary of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park opens Friday, April 20.

Holy Services

As the lenten season draws to a close, final preparations are being made for Holy Week.

A Maundy Thursday Communion Service (no mid-week worship on Wed. this week) will be held in the Center for Campus Ministry (CCM) April 19, at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. (Religious trivia time: Who knows the meaning of "Maundy"? Well, thanks to Rev. Rash, I'll tell you. The word was originally translated from the Latin word "Mandatum," which refers to Jesus' commanding the people to observe communion as a symbol of the new covenant to "Love one another" [John 13: 34]).

Dr. Dean Boldon and Dr. David Cartlidge will serve com-

cont. p. 2

Dr. Fowler Publishes Book

Elizabeth T. Fowler's book is the result of a three-year effort by the Holston Conference Women's History Task Group chaired by Margaret Wilcox.

Holston Women: A Journey of Faith is a pilot project in the United Methodist Chruch, the first history authorized by a Conference to reclaim stories of individual women, not just those connected with an organization. This project has received substantial financial support from numerous individulas as well as Holston Conference's United Methodist Women, Commission on Status and Role or Women, Council on Finance and Administration, and the Women's History Project of the General Commission on Archives and History. Published by Tenpenny Press and printed by the Kingsport Press, Holston Women: A Journey of Faith sells for $6.25 plus $1.25 postage and may be ordered from Mrs. W.C. Fraley, 7535 Beaver Ridge Rd., Knoxville, TN 37921.

Parks Wins TEA Don Sahli Scholarship

cont. p. 2

Melissa Walker Parks, a junior history-secondary education major from Maryville, has become the second Maryville College student in two years to win the top education scholarship in the state of Tennessee.

Mrs. Parks has been awarded a $400 Don Sahli Scholarship by the Tennessee Education Association for the 1984-85 academic year. The awards were announced last Friday in Nashville.

The pretigious scholarships are awarded to four Student TEA members on the basis of academic excellence, demonstrated leadership abilities, economic need and demonstrated interest in joining the teaching profession.

The awards honor Dr. Donald G. Sahli, TEA executive secretary from 1963 until 1976 and were established in 1971 "to help advance the cause of education as Dr. Sahli did both in and beyond the classroom."

Mrs. Parks graduated from William Blount High School as valedictorian in 1980. At Maryville College she is a Presidential Scholar and serves as vice president of the MC chapter of the Student Tennessee Education Association.

The MC junior was one of only two student delegates from Tennessee selected to attend the annual Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) district meeting in Atlanta in February.

1984 MC Phonathon, April 9-19, Monday-Thursday 6:30-9:30 p.m., Fayerweather Hall - 206.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, April 12

2:00 - Women's Tennis vs. Lincoln Memorial University.

Friday, April 13th

8:15 p.m. FAC Concert - Janice Meyerson in the Music Hall.

Saturday, April 14

3:00 Women's Softball vs. Tennessee Tech. University.

8:00 - Coffee House, Alumni Gym, Tommy Brown & Nick Venditti, MC.

Sunday, April 15

Palm Sunday

7:00 - Vespers with Dr. Harry Howard.

Monday, April 16

2:00 p.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Sewanee.

Wednesday, April 18

9:20 a.m. CIV - "The Land Trust Movement" with Marie Cirillo, FAC Music Hall.

Just 46 Days Until Graduation

YOU ARE ALL FOOLS

All of the miserable folk who did not attend the moving experience of "Hibakusha" Sunday night, have missed a once-in-a-life-time educational opportunity. The insight into the devastating effects of nuclear warfare given by the Modern Times Theater group allowed me to make a decision about where I stand in the nuclear arms race.

Previous to this experience, I was unsure about nuclear arms; I was neither pro nor con. Although I have yet to achieve perfect knowledge, I am well on my way towards becoming an anti-nuclear activist.

Sunday I was transported to the spiritual cataclysm of Hibakusha: explosion-affected person or people. And now I am Hibakusha through empathy. But I do not want to become Hibakusha in reality.

You have all heard the grisly stories about the terror of nuclear war. They're all true, but they miss the mark of experience. It's hell. And survivors of the bomb will tell you so.

Studies have shown that many Americans believe that there will be nuclear war within the next ten years. Join me and thousands of other in the race for life: the fight against nuclear arms.

Campus Dumping

Dear Editor,

Once again it's time to complain about trash. But this time it's not about the inconsiderate people who throw trash everywhere on campus. It's about this school's, Maryville College, policy of dumping campus waste in the woods. Several months ago at the ACC meeting, which is rarely attended by students, President Anderson calmly explained that the trash dumped in the woods, which included old ceiling tiles, remmants of Copeland, chairs, brush, etc., would be removed as soon as possible. Before the student forum, around the same time as the ACC meeting, I was stopped by Donna Davis, assistant to the President, and asked about this dumping problem. They did not have a clue! Some people have said that dumping was authorized by the former Vice-President of Administration and he would try to clean it up as soon as possible. So I went away from the meeting feeling as if I had done something productive for Maryville College.

But the other day several students came up to me and said maintenance men were still dumping trash in the woods. At the recent ACC meeting President Anderson once again calmly explained that the trash is being put back there temporarily till it can be taken to the dump. How often can he continue to say this and get away with it? If trash is loaded up on the truck, why destroy the beautiful fields next to the woods by heavy trucks, when it could be taken to the dump. Surely the extra $2.00 gas isn't that important. Maintenance is on a tight schedule, but it will take more time to reload the trash (if it will even happen) and take it to the dump.

Students, faculty, and staff have to unite and demand that the trash be taken out. Every year I've been here at MC all I've heard is there is not enough money to meet student ideas. Right. What about the near 11 million in Toward Century III? We're being robbed of a nice campus while money is being miserly kept. This is a community issue and it needs community action.

Peace

John Rush

"Study Breaks"

Zoo

The pink, juicy piece of gum
That makes my study Break;

Juicy, pink, glistening sweat
That makes my jaws soon
Ache.

Cheap thrill - it's best;
Oh, nectar sweet,
A mere three cents a shot.

Short endurence,
15 minutes,
The longest ever got.

Eternity is squeezed into
That little lump of Joy.

It fills a sometimes nagging lack-
An effervescent
Toy.

Services, cont.

munion at the specified times. Although no formal order to worship is planned, everyone is invited to stay as long as they wish.

The Good Friday Service will be held in CCM, April 20th, starting at 10:30 a.m. The theme of the service will focus on the last seven words Jesus spoke from the cross. Leaders in the service will include Charlie Parsons, Bryan McFarland, Ellie Gilmore, Dr. James Bloy, Mitch Van Meter, Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, and Rev. Earl Rash. Even if you are not one of the leaders, you are certainly invited to be a participant. See you there.

"Moon", cont.

productions for each.

The 30-member cast for "Dark of the Moon" also includes seven ares MC students: Eleanor Nelson, Tom Scott, Donald Xiques and Peggie Sacket, all from Knoxville; Leanna Cate from Clinton; and David Marcum and Maelea Morrison from Maryville.

Cast as witches in the play are Tracy Depue of Houston, Texas; John Wright, Rome, GA; Jessie Kane, Pearisburg, Va., Jim Kidder, Tokyo, Japan; Greg Metcalf, Tampa, Fla; Lori Suggs, Summerville, Ga.; and Jill Lucke, Cincinnati, Ohio.

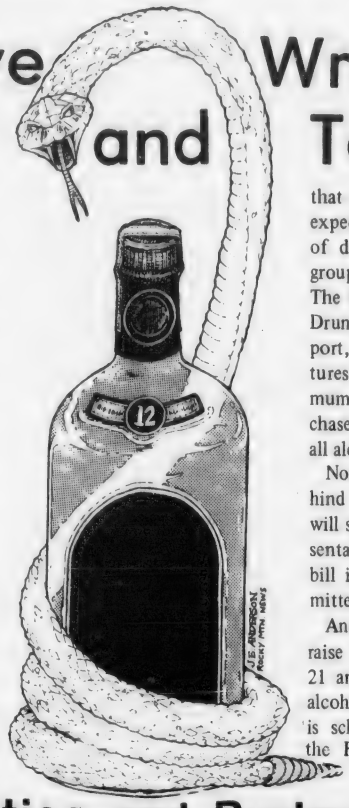
The townspeople will be played by Teresa Welch of Kettering, Ohio, Kevin Robinson, Big Stone Gap, Va.; Barbara Morrow, Wilmette, Ill.; Jeff Hollar, Rockwood, Tenn.; Michael Crawford, Savannah, Ga.; Phil Finney, Jasper, Ga.; Sara Covington, McColl, S.C.; Traci Fraser, Ft. Myers, Fla.; and Manny Rodrigues, Joe Longo and Jeff Collins, all from the Miami, Fla., area.

Tickets for "Dark of the Moon" are $4 for adults and $2 for students, children and senior citizens. The Wednesday, April 25, matinee performance will cost $1.

For more information or for tickets, call 982-6412 (Maryville) or 546-6912 (Knoxville).

ECHO

Editor . . . . . Marta Wittig
Assistant Editor. . . . . Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor. . . . . Chris Porter
Photographer. . . . . Keith Moore and Tara Wey
Business Manager. . . . . Michael Crawford



STAFF WRITERS

Julie Humpert, Tara Wey, Brian Rigell, Amy Waggoner, Pam Matthews, Ciretta Carpenter, Ed Welch, Mary Hughes, Wilma Coleman.

Letters, comments, or inquiries are welcomed and should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee, 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration.

The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Legislative Wrap-Up: Alcohol and Tennessee

Nashville--By a vote of 29 to 0, the State Senate gave final approval this week to a bill raising the legal drinking age in Tennessee from 19 to 21.

The drinking age bill had been debated in the Senate for over a year but there was no substantial change made in the bill except for an amendment which exempts 19- and 20- year olds who are serving in the U.S. Armed Services from the proposed law.

Gallup poll released a report last January showing that 77% of Americans surveyed favor raising the legal drinking age to 21. In another study titled The Effect of Raising the Legal Minimum Drinking Age on Involvement in Fatal Crashes, it was reported that "Any single state that raises its drinking age can expect the nighttime fatal crashes of drivers of the affected age groups to drop by about 28%. The Presidential Commission on Drunken Driving, in a final report, has urged all state legislatures to raise to age 21 the minimum age standard for the purchase and public possession of all alcoholic beverages.

Now with a major victory behind it, action on the measure will shift to the House of Representatives, where the companion bill is bottled up in a subcommittee.

Another bill which would also raise the legal drinking age to 21 and establish $3.5 million in alcohol rehabilitation programs is scheduled to be heard after the Finance, Ways, and Means Committee begins proceedings on the budget.

Nashville -- The State Senate voted this week to give judges the discretion to sentence first time DUI (driving under the influence) offenders to serve five days of community service work in lieu of the current two day jail terms.

Under the bill, those convicted of drunk driving on the first offense only, would serve a minimum of five days working in a program such as picking up litter on the highways. The legislation was introduced after many county officials urged lawmakers to find another way to punish first offense drunken drivers due to severe overcrowing in our county jails. It was also reported that in some cases, police are not stopping and judges are not sentencing DUI offenders because there is no room in county jails without releasing more dangerous criminals.

This bill would still impose a strict punishment on first time offenders by making them serve their sentence out in the community for all to see and by changing their "time" from nonproductive hours to productive hours.

Humanities and Business

In lieu of Geographical Jobs, with its emphasis on technical degrees, the Echo substitutes this week an article specifically slanted for the liberal arts graduate.

How does the study of humanities - fields like English, history, philosophy and foreign languages - build such a strong foundation for a career in business? It develops strengths that scientific or technical training alone seldom provides.

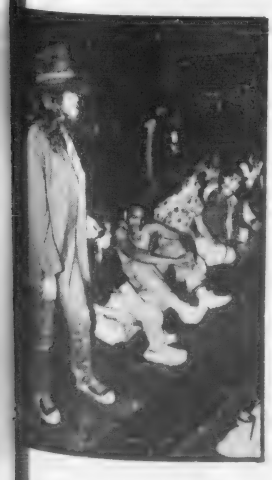
There is "a central place" for the humanities graduate in business. So concluded sixty top corporate and academic leaders at a 1983 conference in Princeton, New Jersey sponsored by the Association of American Colleges (AAC) and the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH).

* Judgment
* An historical sense
* Knowledge of other languages and cultures
* Recognition of ethical issues
* Interpersonal abilities
* Communication skills
* Intellectual flexibility
* A capacity for interpretive and creative thinking

In a complex, changing business environment, an investment in these qualities can offer important long-term returns. Students in the humanities are well advised to acquire basic business skills - in accounting and finance, for example. But as broadly educated graduates they are better prepared for a lifetime of work than are students who have narrowed their studies to secure a first job.

For more information: Association of American Colleges, 1818 R Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009

Reprinted from the Black Collegian, March/April 1984



Contaminated Water

In response to a recently released study linking high incidence of childhood leukemia in Woburn. Mass. to contaminated area water supply, Sen. Kennedy, in his monthly "Letter to Massachusettes," called for "redoubled efforts" in Congress on the toxic waste issue.

The two-year , comprehensive study, released February 8 by the Harvard School of Public Health, confirmed Woburn residents' suspicions that eight cases of childhood leukemia were attributable to contaminated water. Statistically, the small city should have reported no more than one case.

"The Environmental Protection Agency must move quickly to clean up the thousands of toxic waste sites in Massachusetts and across the nation." Sen. Kennedy writes. Congress must recognize that merely cleaning up the sites is not enough. In communities like Woburn, the toxic waste may be contained or removed, but when this activity is completed, the victims still remain -- innocent parents and children who have been seriously ill or whose life expectancy may be shortened because they happened to live in a particular area."

Sen. Kennedy sponsors in the U.S. Senate a bill for medical compensation for victims of toxic waste - related illness.

Echo Ear

D.J.R.: We are climbing to the top and we dare not stop. K.M.K.

Gus: Get the Goony Goo Goo Mobile ready to go. Remember Baltimore, Incoming, Stall #1, Buck 31, and the Bird. (Silver Finger)

To all of my drunken friends who are torn between between two lovers: Ha-ha! M.W.

Let's hear it for the Boy (George)!

Y-Knot Victorious

Students (MC and otherwise!) turned out in full force for last Saturday's Battle of the Bands Dance in the alumni gym.

Brew flowed, lights flashed, and bodies gyrated as Tempest Fugit, Y Knot, and Playtime Thriller cranked out solid rock'n' roll in 40-minute sets.

Between sets, intrepid students took to the microphone and slung on "air" guitars for the lip synch contest. Hubert Dixon, in chains and black leather, roused the crowd with a "Rebel Yell," Michael Crawford, resplendent as Adam Ant, did a quick "Strip," followed by Becky Sanders' "Stroke," and Mike Howell's rowdy "All Hell's Breakin' Loose." (And so it was, by that time!) The Molly Kennedy Band, a sizable ensemble accompanied by a couple of exuberant audience members, walked/danced away with first prize for Let's Hear It For the Boy."

Y Knot, Battle of the Bands Heavyweight Champ, will return for May Madness weekend. We'll hear from Tempest Fugit again the week end after.

SPORTS

Ladies Roll On

The Lady Scots softball team played the same team four times last week and managed to win all four games. The Lady Scots, now 5-5, have reached th 500 mark for the first time in the career.

Martin Jr. College came to town Monday, and the Lady Scots won twice by scores 15-11 and 8-7. The second game was a barn burner which saw the Lady Scots score twice in the bottom of the seventh with two out to win. The scheduled games against Tusculum were washed away with the rains on Wednesday and have since been rescheduled.

On Friday, the Lady Scots left at 7:30 a.m. to travel to Pulaski to take on Martin. The Lady Scots roared out in the first inning and never looked back. Maryville won the first game 15-7 and then came back to roll over Martin 11-1 in six innings to take the second one. The Lady Scots were a happy but tired bunch when they got back after midnight on Friday.

Coach Ballard was pleased by all four wins especially the last two. "Our girls showed no signs of Van-lag" he said, " and they went out and took it to Martin." He was quick to praise both Kandy Schram and Nancy Koehl who picked up the wins against Martin on Monday and Friday, respectively. Team leaders as of this week include Kandy Schram with a .464 batting average and 8 RBI's followed closely by Denise Penzkofer batting .433. Other offensive leaders include Nancy Koehl .314 and Belle Ferguson (8 RBI's). Defensive leaders include Mimi Chesney, Nancy Koehl, Denise Penzkofer, and Kay Julian, all with fielding percentages over .900.

The Lady Scots will have played twice at home (Monday vs. Morristown & Wednesday vs. Tusculum) before travelling to Harrogate to play LMU Friday and taking on Tenn. Tech. at home Saturday.

Lady Scots Fever . . . catch it!

Tennis

The Tennis Team had a rough match with Carson-Newman, with one player in the lab and two others sick, the Scots had to forfeit one singles match and one doubles match. The final score was 9-0.

The men's team will play Roane State here on Thursday and will travel to King's College Friday, and then to the Emory & Henry classic this weekend, playing a total of four matches in three days. Good luck to our Scots!

Baseball

Scots look to ODAC

The Scots had a rough weekend, dropping three non-conference games to two tough teams. Mike Rohan pithced 9 2/3 innings against Roane St. Friday night at Sandy Springs, and Steve Hadden came in to help in the 9th. Both teams did a lot of hitting and the short fences of the park saw five home runs - including one a piece by Tony Murr and Pat Moyer. The Scots kept up through most of the game, but in the end the Roane St. bats were just too much and the Scots took a 14-10 defeat.

The Scots dropped two Saturday against Tennessee Tech. Pat Moyer pitched the first seven (he also caught for the second game) and managed to hold the hard-hitting scholarship batters to 4 runs. The Scots offense, though, couldn't generate any momentum and were held scoreless.

Les McGovern started the second game, but the Tech. batters were warmed up and started ripping line drives everywhere. Steve Saylor took over for two and Rick Carver finished up the game that ended on the 10-run-rule at the end of six 15-4.

The offense did better against T.T.'s second pithcer. Two runs came in in the second inning when Moyer and Keller walked and Chris Johansen and Rick Carver hit successive singles to drive in two. In the 3rd, Rohan, running for Moyer, scored from 2nd when 'Bo' dropped a Texas-leauger in front of the right fielder. In the 4th, Chris Johannsen got hit with the ball, Carver ripped on up the middle for a single and Jenkins hit to Tech's pitcher who didn't know what to do with it. With the bases loaded (and one out) Eric Etchison hit a sacrifice fly that scored Chris, but the inning and the rally came to an end after that.

The Scots will put these non-conference games behind them when they leave for ODAC conty at the end of the week for a six-day road trip that includes games against Hampden-Sidney, Washington & Lee and Catholic.

All Seats $2.00 Everyday Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS

972-8499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

12:45 2:55 5:05 7:15 9:25
ROMANCING THE STONE

1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
WHERE THE BOYS ARE

1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
POLICE ACADEMY

1:30, 3:30, 5:30, 7:30, 9:30
UP THE CREEK

SNACK BAR SPECIALS

New Lunch Specials

Monday: Stuffed Tomato, with Chicken Salad, and sm. Drink, $2.25

Tuesday: Chicken Strips, Fries, and sm. Drink, $1.95

Wednesday: Cold Salad Plate and sm. Drink, $1.95

Thursday: Stuffed Avocado with Shrimp Salad and sm. Drink, $2.35

Friday: Fish Sandwich, Onion Rings, and sm. Drink, $1.95

12 Pack COKE $3.12
compare to $3.69 locally!!

For those Special Occasions, order CAKES and COOKIES from the food Service,

Dobbs
DOBBS HOUSES INC

SPECIALS

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 22 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, April 19, 1984

Sunrise service

Ed Welch

Where will you be on the morning of April 22nd when the cock crows bright and early at 5:55 a.m.? If you aren't at the amphitheatre in the College Woods, you'll be missing something special.

The traditional Easter Sunrise Service will begin as the sun peeps over the ridge at 5:55 a.m. Rev. Earl Rash will give this year's message, "Experiencing the Resurrection." Other leaders in the service will include senior Mary Hughes, juniors Lesley Boand and Ed Welch, and professor Bob Ramger. The MC Concert Choir will provide music for this festive occasion.

After the service, coffee and doughnuts will be served to the college community in the House-in the Woods (thank you, Sharon). As usual if the torrential rainfall, the service will be held in Wilson Chapel.

On Easter Sunday night, freshman, Ed Steuckle will lead the Vesper Service, "After Easter, What?" The service is at 7 p.m. in CCM.

Celebrate!

"The People Are Very Friendly"

Pam Mathews

The third and latest visit of Ms. Janice Meyerson, mezzo-soprano, has ended. Ms. Meyerson is the 1983-84 Alcoa Foundation Affiliate Artist, a program presented through MC. Her final performance in this area was April 13.

The following day she returned to her residence in New York City to prepare for a six-week tour in Europe. "No matter how famous you are, you have to travel a lot," she said. She also mentioned that she has visited Europe, South America, Canada and Mexico on several occasions.

Ms. Meyerson, a native of Omaha, NE, received her Bachelor of Music Degree from Washington University in St. Louis and her Master of Music from the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. The honors and recognition she has received include being a finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Competition and receiving the Martha Barred-Rockefeller Foundation Grant.

"I receive a great deal of satisfaction from my profession. It's nice that I can make a living at something that I enjoy so much," she remarked.

During her three visits here, she performed at several public functions, schools, senior citizens centers, and at MC. Her accompanist was Dr. Robert Bonham, Associate professor of music at MC. During January, she sang the National Anthem at a MC Basketball game. "I really enjoyed that," she said. "It's been so long since I've watched a basketball game."

When asked if she would return to this area, she replied that she hope to in the future. "The people are very friendly and warm here. I've made many friends. Plus, the scenery is beautiful-especially now."

MC once again has its own golf course. Six holes have been built from the "cereal bowl" (or what's left of it) to the back field by the grave yard. The holes are mostly par threes and fours, and the hole by the grave yard is a par five. The course is a little coarse, but playable, of course.

A Raquetball Tournament will be held in the P.E. building from April 27-29. Registration fee for MC students is $5.00 and $10.00 for the general public. Register in the P.E. office.

Phonathon underway

Maryville College's annual phonathon fund-raising drive is currently underway with a goal of $27,000 in gifts and pledges, according to Phonathon Coordinator Jeannie Gibson.

More than 75 faculty and staff members, students, alumni and friends of the College will volunteer their time to place telephone calls to more than 3,500 MC alumni throughout the nation, including those living in Blount County.

The phonathon began Monday night, April 9, and runs through Thursday night, April 12. It continues next week Monday through Thursday nights. Volunteers make the calls between 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. from a bank of phones in the College's Institute for Lifestyle Development office in Fayerweather Hall.

Alumni this year are being asked to give specifically toward the interior renovation of Willard House, the historic 1891 campus structure which was once the president's home.

Ellis also noted the phonathon is part of the College's $11.5 million Toward Century III capital fund-raising campaign.

"Alumni have greatly contributed to the TCIII campaign, with 37 percent of alumni giving in the last fiscal year. MC alumni giving has doubled in the past two years," he added.

Phonathon volunteers are asking alumni to contineu their support of the College and the TCIII campaign, which is in its final stages.

The phonathon riased more than $25,000 for the College last spring.

EQUIPMENT DONATED

Communications

Rohm and Haas Tennessee, Inc. has given Maryville College a wide variety of laboratory equipment and materials valued well in excess of $6,000, according to Robert A. "Archie" Ellis, Jr., MC's vice president for development.

The gift was made through the efforts of Richard Van Sickle, president and plant manager of Rohm and Haas Tennessee and member of the MC Board of Directors since the spring of 1983.

The equipment and materials include two dual-channel strip chart recorders, several variable power supplies and stirring hot plates, a high vacuum station and a large assortment of ground glass laboratory ware, according to Dr. Robert Naylor, chairman of the College's biology and chemistry department.

"This equipment and material certainly enhances the flexibility of the analytical and organic labs," Dr. Naylor explained, "it also greatly broadens the range of possibilities for independent studies by students where specialty glassware is essential."

In thanking Van Sickle and Rohm and Haas Tennessee, Dr. Naylor noted, "Gifts of this magnitude make a considerable contribution to our ability to provide out students with first-rate laboratory facilities."

Campus Calendar

Thursday, April 19

10:30 a.m. - Maundy Thursday Communion Service led by Dr. Dean Bolden, CCM.

1:10 p.m. - Maundy Thursday Communion Service led by Dr. David Cartlidge, CCM.

2:00 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Tennessee Wesleyan, HOME

7:00 p.m. - CIV "Brother Sun, Sister Moon"

Friday, April 20

10:30 a.m. - Good Friday, service CCM

2:00 p.m. - Men's tennis vs. Lincoln Memorial University, HOME

8:15 p.m. - "Dark of the Moon" opens.

Saturday, April 21

2:00 p.m. - Men's Baseball vs. Fisk University

8:15 p.m. - "Dark of the Moon," Theatre

Sunday, April 22

6:00 a.m. - Easter Sunrise service, College Woods

7:00 p.m. - Sunday evening Vespers, "After Easter. What?"

Tuesday, April 24

2:00 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Brevard

3:00 p.m. - Women's softball vs. Milligan

Wednesday, April 25

10:30 p.m. - Midweek Worship, "Voluntters in Mission" with Tommy Brown and Bryan McFarland.

2:00 p.m. - Men's Baseball vs. Randolph-Macon (2)

2:00 p.m. - Men's tennis vs. Roane State

2:45 p.m. - "Dark of the Moon" Matine $1.00, Theatre

7:00 p.m. - CIV "A Man for all Seasons," FAC Music Hall

FAC photo exhibit

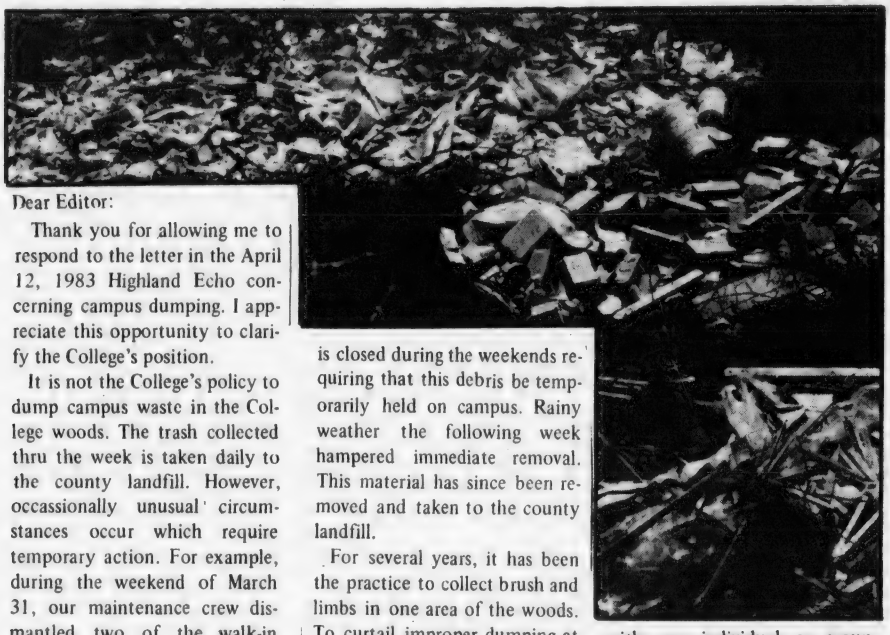
Photographs can tell a story through actions and expressions of its subject. This is true of the photojournalism exhibit in the FAC gallery featuring the works of Tilman Crane of the Daily Times Michale Patrick of the Knoxville New-Sentinel, and Hugh Lunsford. Joe Stewardson and Kevin Snicks, all of the Knoxville Journal.

Entitled "Alice and Friends," the exhibit comprises approximately 100 photos of human interest subjects and will run through April 27.

In conjunction with the exhibit, the five photographers will conduct a photojournalism seminar at 6:00 p.m. Wednesday, April 25 in the FAC Lounge. Both the seminar and reception following the seminar is free and open to the public.

DUMPING DIALOGUE

John Rush's letter to last week's Echo concerning the trash in the woods and back field area raised considerable concern among the administration. Last Friday, the day after JR's letter appeared, Dr. Anderson, Sid Downey, Bill Slater, and Lee Stephens held a meeting to discuss alleviating the problem. A letter of response has apparently been drafted for publication in an upcoming Echo.



The initial dumping of old cooler parts and broken blocks from renovated buildings, as both Slater and Downey agreed, was due to the chaotic rush to clean up the appearance of the campus before the arrival of students last fall.

Since then, other refuse (JR pointed out examples) that Slater and Downey said didn't belong there was dumped on top of the pile, presumably for convenience's sake.

The cleanup plan has already gone into effect. Loose trash has been removed by the maintainence crew. The natural refuse (branches, leaves, and clippings) is supposed to be buried in a culvert and allowed to decompose. The rest will be removed when conditions permit.

Since everyone involved pleaded ignorance concerning this situation, it must be concluded that JR's letter triggered a response from the staff and motivated them into action. It is true that some people (both students and staff) knew the situation in the back field. The letter was successful in alerting everyone to the problem and proves that a well-gounded letter is actually effective in drawing attention to and correcting adverse situations on campus

Chris Porter

Dear Editor:

Thank you for allowing me to respond to the letter in the April 12, 1983 Highland Echo concerning campus dumping. I appreciate this opportunity to clarify the College's position.

It is not the College's policy to dump campus waste in the College woods. The trash collected thru the week is taken daily to the county landfill. However, occassionally unusual circumstances occur which require temporary action. For example, during the weekend of March 31, our maintenance crew dismantled two of the walk-in coolers in the dining hall in preparation for the installation of new coolers on Monday, April 2. This dismantling produced several truck loads of debris. Unfortunately, the county landfill is closed during the weekends requiring that this debris be temporarily held on campus. Rainy weather the following week hampered immediate removal. This material has since been removed and taken to the county landfill.

For several years, it has been the practice to collect brush and limbs in one area of the woods. To curtail improper dumping at this site in the future, we will schedule frequent inspections of the area.

I trust that this letter helps to clarify the situation. I would be happy to discuss this further with any individual or group within the Maryville College community.

Sincerely,
J.Sidney Downey
Vice President for Administration

Sam prepares to excavate one of the mine shafts in front of the FAC.

The T.T. Alexander Prize shall be awarded to the student who submits to the contest the best paper which he or she has prepared for a class in regular course work or in Independent Study, or which he or she has written for the contest. Papers submitted must have the endorsement of a faculty member in the following department, divisions, or courses at MC: Religion and Philosophy, Social Sciences, Psychology, Humanities 390, and Science 250.

The subject of the paper shall be in one or more of the following areas: The relationship of philosophical or theological enquiry to social issues; the application of such enquiry to social issues: the consequences of social, theological, or philosophical problems for religious doctrine; the consequences of religious doctrine upon social thinking or social science method.

All full-time degree students at Maryville College shall be eligible for the contest. The contestants must be full-time students when the contest is held.

Papers shall not exceed 25 typewritten pages in length; the papers must be submitted in typewritten form.

The deadline for the submission of papers shall be May 1 of the year of the particular contest.

Letter to the editor

Dear Editor:

According to the editorial in the Echo's April 12th edition, I suppose one would say that I am very fortunate in that I am not one of the "miserable folk" since I did attend "Hibakusha."

I suppose I should begin by saying I do agree with one point the editor made: the Modern Times Theater presented the audience with an excellent performance. However, that is exactly what it was - a performance. A "performance" is a public presentation or exhibition to invoke an emotional reaction. A "performance" is not the actual victims of a nuclear holocaust or the real issue of the arms race.

Most people do not appreciate being called a "fool" just because they do not attend a specific performance or because they do not jump on every emotional band-wagon that comes along. I believe it is irresponsible and an abuse of publicly visible position for an editor to make judgemental and derrogatory remarks about the reader's character based on his/her opinion of a theatrical performance. An editor does have the right to express an opinion but not to make an illogical conclusion that since people did not attend a specific performance 1) said people are not interested in nuclear war issues, 2) said people are not informed because they did not attend this performance, and 3) therefore, said people are "miserable folk" and "fools."

I, for one, believe that the nuclear arms race issue involves a lot more than merely stating that I am "in the race for life" or that I am not. As human beings inhabiting this planet, I believe we can safely say that we are all in the race for life. While reading the editorial I wondered if the editor had been present at the speech by Rep. Albert Gore, Jr., which focused on the U.S. involvement in the nuclear arms talks. Rep Gore explained just how complex the issue of disarmament agreements are. I am proud of the fact that most Americans are intelligent, informed citizens. All of us have heard the horror stories of Hiroshima. (For the facts, I would suggest the editor read Hiroshima by John Hersey for documented experiences.) We all have heard the odds for a nuclear war in our lifetime. We all have heard the projections of what survival would be like. But, we all have also heard and read of the agonizing details that our representatives in the talks have had to deal with.

I am in the race for life, but I realize it will mean more than carrying a picket sign or merely saying that now, based on a reaction to a theatrical performance, I am an anti-nuclear activist. It will mean a commitment of years to hope, hard work, involvement, frustrating deliberations, and prayer before a solution is reached. I only wish that the editor would have tried to influence the reader to make such a commitment through positive persuasion rather than intimidation and condescending remarks.

Dianne Ledford
Director of Community Services
MC

Editor's note: It was not the intention of the editorial to provoke the wrath of the gods, but to inform the often apathetic student body that they missed a good performance!

Dark of the Moon opens Friday night at 8:15

HIGHLAND ECHO

Letters, Comments, or inquiries should be directed to Box 2820 MC, Maryville, TN 37801. Opinions expressed don't necessarily belong to anyone. The Echo is a member of CPS and is printed by the Times.

Editor..... Marta E. Wittig
Asst Editor..... Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor..... Chris Porter
Photographers..... Keith Moore, Tara Wey
Bus. Manager..... Michael Crawford
STAFF WRITERS... J. Humpert, T. Wey, B. Rigell, A. Waggoner, R. Matthews, C. Carpenter, E. Welch, W. Coleman

Geo Jobs: Sunbelt Metros

Peggy Millsaps

Metro areas overviewed this week are scattered throughout the fast-growing Sunbelt.

Atlanta, GA, population 1.9 million (total metro area) rates highly for restaurants, night life recreational facilities, acceptance of newcomers, and social life for married couples. Best job opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical, and chemistry and other sciences.

Dallas -- Fort Worth, TX also rate highly among residents for restaurants, night life, recreational facilities, cleanliness, safety and social life. Best opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, electrical, mechanical, and other engineering, and chemistry and other sciences.

Washington, D.C. population 3 million, rates highly for cultural opportunities, restaurants, and social life; poorly for the school system. Best opportunities are in accounting, business, computer science, chemical, civil, electrical, mechanical, and other engineering, physics, and other sciences.

Next Week: South, medium-size metros.

Echo Ear

To all my friends in Copeland: Face it, guys, life is no picnic-- None of My Affairs Dept.

Hey Hillbilly: Santa never made it to New York. Rudy never showed up. The city is snowed in and all the people traded their green Camaros in for sleds. Yogi Bear is on restriction and needs to take a "TIME OUT"!

Chase

Duck Hunters: Quack, quack! Had any feathered friends come to call on you lately? - AW

So you were throwing a tire, huh? HA!! Just sounds like a rough night to me. --ZCO

The scene -- Gatti's. So why do I hear sirens? Must be jailbait . . .

Parents Weekend A Success

Ciretta Carpenter

Maryville College students kept busy entertaining visiting parents this weekend. Saturday afternoon revealed a sneak preview of the spring Playhouse offering "Dark of the Moon." The presentation was as perfect as one could expect a week from opening night. The cast is too large to note here, but the audience became quite caught up in the plight of John the Witch Boy (Eric Greaser) and Barbara Allen (Diana Bonyadi), only to be left hanging until the play unfolds in its entirety.

Then it was off to dinner, where Sharon Crane's Playmakers delighted parents and students with a few number from their in-the-works production of "Godspell."

Saturday night was the last Coffee House of the year, and several seniors emerged from the back of the room for their final contributions. Laura Hart, Toko Masilo, Jessie Kane, Maelea Morrison, and Lisa Van Divort gave the gift of song to the group gathered in the Alumni Gym. Trent Gilmore (that keyboard master) accompanied Lisa, and Danny and Laura Cartlidge paired up once again to croon "Suddenly". Jina Radozycki signed a beloved Fogelberg tune, and then paired with Bryan McFarland to tell of Claudius, an eagle Brian met in Alaska. Tyrone Matthews and his crew sang a medly that won instant applause. There was also a mysterious "air band" with white noses. Bryan paired with Gerald Burnett to tell us about "Rufus," followed by "Girls Just Wanna Have Fun" interpreted by Lisa Van Divort and Ciretta Carpenter. The evening ended with Trent tickling the ivories while John Wright filled the room with his wonderful voice. And last, but not at all least, Tommy Brown and Nick Venditti (of Sons of Italy fame) were the gracious and entertaining emcees.

Cramming For Comps

by Amy Waggoner

Seniors, the official word is out. Studying for comps now does no good. An exaggeration? Perhaps. But according to several professors, students should have begun studying at the beginning of their senior year.

Dr. John Nichols, associate professor of mathematics, says, "Studying now, three weeks before comps, is not useless. Students would have done better to have started ier, though."

Unfortunately, seniors cannot approach May 3 and 4 with such nonchalance. Even the mention of that "four-letter C-word" instills fear in the hearts of the fearless and panic in even the coolest disposition.

The philosophy behind this single obstacle to graduation is simple: Comps are designed to make sure that no student graduates from Maryville College without a working knowledge of his major field of study.

Dr. Walker suggests that students, especially those with majors in the humanities, review freshman textbooks as well as old notes and exams from each course.

Other methods of cramming for comps include sleeping with a book or notes under your pillow, carrying books around at all times, sudden conversion to fervent Christianity, and listening to lecture tapes instead of Led Zepplin on an ever-present walkman.

Professors and the Department Head for each major are willing to help students on the brink of panic (after all they don't want you here an extra year any more than you want to be here).

In short, to all you Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors: Study now! And to all you Seniors: CRAM!!!

To graduate or not to graduate - that it the question
Whether tis nobler for the mind to suffer
The stings and arrows of outrageous exams,
Or to take arms against a sea of teachers,
And by opposing end them?

You've tried the rest... ITALIAN VILLAGE Now try the Best!

Mon. 23 Let us make your blue Monday brighter.
MEATBALL PARM. Reg. $2.80
Special $2.10

Tues. 24 PIZZA FESTIVAL
$1.00 off any large pizza
(any other coupon not valid with this offer)

Wed. 25 Calzone
Italian turnovers filled with your choice of cheese & ham or sausage, peppers, & cheese -- spinach, pepperoni & cheese
Reg. $2.30 Special $1.95

Thurs. 26 There are subs and subs, but nothing comes close to our subs . . .
Your choice of meat with Provolone cheese, crispy lettuce, ripe tomatoes, onion, hot peppers, seasoned with our super sauce.
$.50 off any of 'em

Fri. 27 LEAVE IT TO US . . .
4 oz. of loin steak chopped with onions on the grills, Melted Mozzarella cheese, topped with our homemade tomatoe sauce The way Grandma taught us.
$.50 off any of 'em

Sat. 27 Just come on in & watch us make you a beautiful pizza!
Salad $1.39 -- UNBEATABLE

Sun. 29 Show us your church bulletin and we'll give you $1.00 off any size pizza
10% off any sub

Call ahead for a fast pick-up of your order 983-9776 - Our professionals will be glad to serve you.

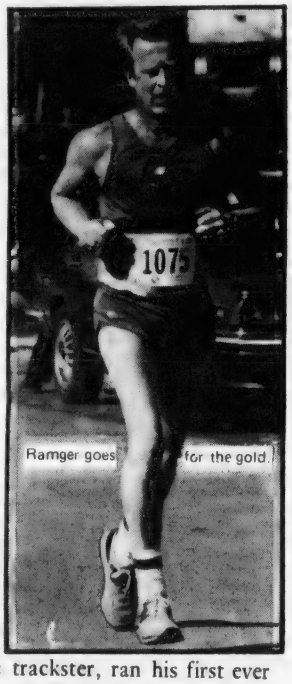
CONSOLIDATED THEATRES (All Seats $2.00 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM)
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977 4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12:45, 2:55, 5:05, 7:15, 9:25
ROMANCING THE STONE
1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
POLICE ACADEMY
1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 7:15, 9:15
ANGEL
2:00, 4:30, 7:00, 9:30
GREYSTOKE

SPORTS

Baseball

Chris Porter

Coach Sawyer rightly called last weekend's trip to Virginia "a disaster" after the team encountered a funeral, a rainstorm and a broken van and only played two of their six scheduled games.



Sawyer said that the trip started out all right, but the difficulties started piling up. When the Scots faced Hampden-Sydney (the school from which Sawyer recently graduated). Coach Fulton's team was psyched up, but the Scots played them close. Rohan pitched the first game and the Scots were on top, but H-S came back in the bottom of the 7th to beat them 5-4. Moyer pitched a four-hitter in the second game, but the Scots weren't able to mount an offense and lost 3-0. "We left twenty men on base in two games," said Sawyer. "We hit all right, but we just couldn't get them in."

A member of the Washington & Lee squad died in a fraternity fire last week, and because the team wanted to attend the funeral, their coach cancelled the game. The coaches are negotiating a re-schedule.

The Catholic game was also cancelled due to rain in Washington, D.C. "The team got to see the capitol," said Saywer, "but that's not good compensation for saddle sores." That game may also be re-scheduled.

On top of that, our new sports van broke down, once again, in the vicinity of Johnson City Sunday night, and the Scots didn't get in until about 6:00 Monday morning.

"I'm still optimistic," said a tired Sawyer. "We've got to reschedule some of these last games to meet our ODAC Tournament eligibility requirements."

William Delaney, MC's lone trackster, ran his first ever 100-meter race in last weekend's Wendy's -Dogwood Relays. He ran against many NCAA greats: James Barham (former Rule H.S teammate) and world record holder (9.-93) Calvin Smith of Alabama. Backham won the race in 10.04. Delaney, who said he got a bad start, finished fourth in his heet.

Tennis

The men's tennis team lost some tough road games last week. Quy Huyhn was the only winner (6-2,6-2) in the Scots 8-1 loss against Roane State Thursday.

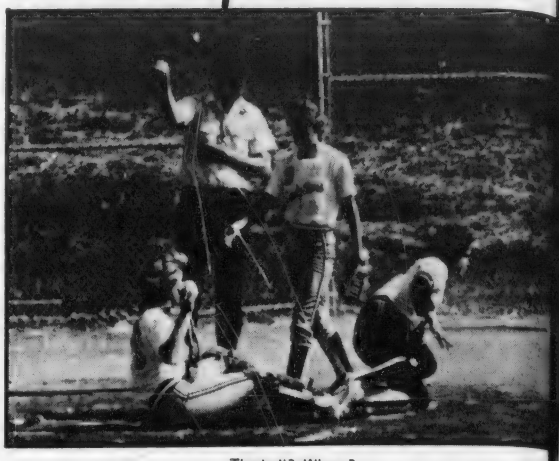
The Scots did a little better Friday, splitting singles 3-3 in a match against King, but three doubles defeats lost it for the Scots. Winning in singles matches were Mike Hill (6-3,7-6), Dave Raulerson (4-6,7-5,6-4) and Quy (6-2,6-2), whose individual record is 3-3.

On Saturday, the Scots were supposed to play a tri-match at Emory & Henry, but rain shortened the match and the teams Emory & Henry, but rain shortened the match and the teams only played singles. The Scots lost all of the singles matches, the only player to split sets was Mike Hill with a 6-7,7-5,6-1 loss.

Monday's rained out game is typical of MC sports this spring. The tennis team has been rained out three times this month. Cutting their schedule from 17 to 12 games. If the sun ever comes out, the Scots will play King College here on Wednesday and then travel to Sewanee on the 24th. They will play home, again, on the 25th against Roane St. and then leave for Lexington, VA for the ODAC tournament at Washington & Lee. Come out and support the Scots!

Ladies Earn Respect

Brian Rigell



The Lady Scots softball team found the going a bit rough this week, but they opened some eyes and earned a lot of respect. The record for last week was 1-5 bringing the season record to 6-10.

The games scheduled against Morristown on Monday were rained out and have not been rescheduled. Wednesday the Lady Scots played host to Tusculum. Maryville jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first inning and held it until the sixth when Tusculum tied the score. Then the visitors crossed the plate five times in the seventh to win the game 8-3. In the second game, the Lady Scots were up 3-1 going into the sixth when Tusculum scored three times and went on to win 4-3.

Friday the squad travelled to Harrogate to take on the girls from LMU, and although LMU won both games by scores of 13-6 and 11-1, the Lady Scots showed that they could play with the best and no doubt earned some respect. Saturday brought Tenn. Tech and not one but two cliffhangers. In the first game, Tech was up 12-8 in the bottom of the seventh when the Lady Scots put the scare into them by scoring three times and threatening again with runners on first and second before Tech was able to stop the rally.

However, the Lady Scots were not to be denied. In the second game, Tech roared out to a 8-0 lead before the Lady Scots could get their act together and score five times in the fourth. The game was close at eight all going into the seventh. Tech scored once making it 9-8, but the Lady Scot erupted for two in their half to win 10-9. How 'bout them Lady Scots!

Although Coach Ballard was not pleased by the team's record this past week, he was happy with some individual performances. He mentioned Stacey Davis' going two for two with three RBI's as a pinch hitter along with the tremendous job the outfield put in. In left, Kay Julian came through with seven RBI's and a batting average of 307 for the week. In center field Penny Head made some outstanding catches, especially a beautiful one against Tech to anchor the defense. In right field, Theresa Taylor stepped in and played like she had been there all year to help the Lady Scots' cause. Ballard said, "I think we definitely showed some people that we're not a team to be taken lightly."

The ball? Where?

See You

AT THE MATADOR

SNACK BAR SPECIALS

New Lunch Specials

Monday: Stuffed Tomato, with Chicken Salad, and sm. Drink, $2.25

Tuesday: Chicken Strips, Fries, and sm. Drink, $1.95

Wednesday: Cold Salad Plate and sm. Drink, $1.95

Thursday: Stuffed Avocado with Shrimp Salad and sm. Drink, $2.35

Friday: Fish Sandwich, Onion Rings, and sm. Drink, $1.95

12 Pack COKE $3.12
compare to $3.69 locally!!

Try our freshly ground coffee!!!

Dobbs
DOBBS HOUSES INC

SPECIALS

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 23 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, April 26, 1984

Take the plunge. Come see "Dark of the Moon."

Archives: Out of the Closet

Tara Wey

Open house for the newly reorganized Maryville College Archives and Museum was held Wed., April 25 from 3-5 p.m. in the basement of Thaw Hall.

Some highlights of the museum exhibits include a collection of Civil War items donated by W.R. Carter; some world war I artifacts donated by Lt. Howard Wilson, the son of President Samuel Tyndale Wilson; various items donated by missionaries in the 1920s and 30s, including some donated by J. Edward Kidder, Jim Kidder's grandfather; and a collection of birds carved out of wood donated by E.E. Wrinkle in 1945.

The Archives is a collection of written information and photographs dealing with the history of MC. Among the various types of information are past Chilhoweans, Highland Echos, MC bulletins and a newspaper clipping file. If you're not into spending hours reading about MC's past, the collection of old photographs is a good way to quickly review the history of the college.

The collection, previously stored in a closet in the special collections room of the library, was initially begun in the mid 1960's by Virginia Turrentine, with the help of Dottie Crawford and Lynn Ann Best. Last summer former library director Exir Brennan took an interest in [illegible] tored collection and had it moved to its new location. Mrs. Carol Roberts, audio-visual librarian, assistant cataloguer and now, archivist and museum curator, took charge of the museum and archives materials.

Jim Kidder has been working since fall cleaning up the museum's relics as well as Becky Sanders, who helped during winter term. In addition to these students' help, Margaret Hanson, the acting library director, who has been a volunteer librarian at MC for the past several years, has also helped Mrs. Roberts prepare the archives and Museum for its reopening.

If you would like to visit the Archives and Museum to check out some of the relics or catch up on MC's history, just stop by the library and ask for Mrs. Roberts. She will be happy to let you into that special room hidden down in the basement of Thaw Hall weekdays 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. except Thuursdays 8 a.m. -1 p.m. and 7 p.m. - 10 p.m.

CAMPUS CALENDAR

Thursday, April 26

3:15 p.m. - Board of Directors Open Forum.

Friday, April 27

8:15 p.m. - Lisa Skeen, Organ. Sr. Recital in FAC Music Hall.

Saturday, April 28

2:00 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Centre College, Away.

TBA - Men's Tennis in O.D.A.C. Tournament.

TBA - Softball Conference Tournament.

1:00 p.m. - Baseball vs. Cumberland College, Away.

Scholarship Auditions for rising Soph., Jr., and Sr.; FAC Music Hall.

8:15 p.m. - "Dark of the Moon," Theatre.

9:00 p.m. - Sock Hop Dance in the Alumni Gym.

Sunday, April 29

7:00 p.m. Vespers: "Emmaus Walk" with Dr. Fowler, C. Carpenter, and B. McFarland. CCM.

Wednesday, May 2

10:30 a.m. - Midweek Worship with Dr. Bolden and International Students.

TBA - Baseball O.D.A.C. Tournament.

2:00 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Roane State, Away.

Balanced Diet

by Peggy Millsaps

Those tri-colored pie charts detailing percentage of carbohydrates and protein strategically placed in the cafeteria are not idle decorations or part of some covert propaganda campaign. Rather they are part of an independent study designed to educate students about the food they eat and hopefully affect a more healthful diet change.

Sophomore John Dunlap, a PE major, put the charts up in cooperation with Bruce Guillame, director of the Center for Lifestyle Development, Sharon Crane, Student Affairs, and Andy Strickland, Dobbs House manager. Bruce, who wanted to inform students about their diets, initiated the idea.

John's study will involve random surveys over a period of time to see if the charts help make students more aware of the nutritional value of food and to see if the charts influence student's food choice.

The charts will stay up indefinitely for each succession of new students. John's first survey should be out this term.

John thinks the general public is more aware of what constitutes a good diet as a result of the 80's health boom. But he feels most students are not aware of their nutritional content to their diet. His study will help determine to what extent prominently displayed nutritional information affects students' diets.

And contrary to all the hackneed jokes about the quality of institutional food -- "Mystery meat again!" - John feels that under Dobbs House management of the cafeteria, students, properly informed, can have a balanced diet.

Jesse Jackson - Democratic Hopeful: Meet the.... President??

Kevin Brown and Peggy Millsaps

Large welcoming committees from Knoxville and Aloca greeted Jesse Jackson as he and a small entourage alighted at McGee-Tyson airport Saturday night.

Jackson, his mother, and her small committee followed press representatives and Secret Service agents out of Jackson's twin propeller plane. Cheers erupted when Jackson stepped from the plane.

Noting signs held by Tyrone Matthews, Vernon Golden and others trying to salvage the Martin Luther King Community Center, Jackson walked over and spoke about today's economy. He feels the economy oppresses the poor and, in essence, allows the rich to get richer while the poor get poorer.

Jackson's address at the Knoxville College Easter sunrise service was more emotional than political. He spoke more on world unity and integration than on his campaign.

Later that morning Jackson arrived at Alcoa Middle School to a small turn out. Addressing Reagan's reform policy, he said, "Today people say Mr. Reagan has bettered our economy. Well,

continued p. 9

photo by Deangelo McDaniel

Another One Bites The Dust

"Hi! My name is Snow Job the clown! What's yours?"
"Uh-What's today's date?"
"Yesterday. What's your name?"
"Harvey Washed Out Sr."
"Interesting. So-you have a job and wife and kids? And how are they?"
"No-uh-I-uh-um- c-can we change the subject?"
"What's the matter, kid, cat got your tongue?"
"Well, uh, no. It's just that -"
"It's just that they all died and you'd rather not talk about it. Right? Well, sorry to hear that. You the only survivor? How'd they die?"
"No-no. You've got it all wrong. You see, I'm a senior and -"
"So, where's the junior? Dead? Divorced? What's the scoop?"
"No-see-I'm a senior in college." (lamely put).
"Oh. I see. Well, excuse me! So, how are classes? (thud) . . . "Harvey. Harvey . . . Harvey Washed out Senior! Are you O.K.? Speak to me! . . . Oh my god! He's dead!"

And so it goes. One by one, panic stricken seniors are dropping dead. Dr. Zigzagbottom, Ph.D. has postulated that the cause of death may be directly related to comps. If so, I urge you to write to your congressman to put a stop to these senseless deaths, by abolishing comps before it's too late. Barring that, suicide or its cousin, studying, may be your only way to avoid certain death. Beware.

-200-

Season's Greetings!

Campus Conduct: Are You A Criminal?

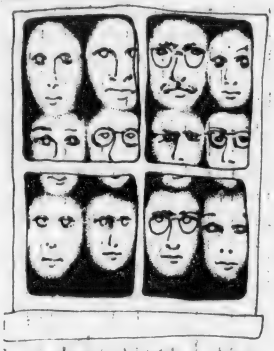
Southwest-Missouri State University senior Jim McWilliams got a big surprise several weeks ago when campus security officers abruptly cornered him, and announced they were charging him with a crime.

The crime: He'd helped a friend distribute "The Southwest Rag," an offbeat paper the campus officials claim contained defamatory and obscene remarks about administrators and students.

While the McWilliams case might be an extreme example of how administrators on many campuses are moving aggressively to control student behavior more closely than any time since the early 1960's, it is far from the only one.

Last week, for instance, administrators at the nine-campus University of Florida system announced they're considering toughening their student conduct code.

In recent months, colleges have gone to court to try to reinforce their rights to punish and suspend students, invalidate diplomas, withhold transcripts and impose disciplinary penalties without providing students with the same due process they'd get in public courts.



Pennsylvania, Kent State and Michigan, among many others, are also reviewing and looking to toughen their student conduct codes in meetings this month.

Notre Dame, Southern Methodist, Idaho, Baylor and Washington, to name just a few campuses, have banned or plan to ban all drinking as a way to help control student behavior.

Over the last year, countless other schools have tightened rules on student drinking by requiring students to register and get approval before throwing parties.

And this school year, a surprising number of colleges has begun handing out stiffer penalties to fraternities for a range of misdeeds, some of which used to be routinely dismissed with a "boys will be boys" attitude.

Ohio State has became so strict in enforcing its students conduct code that the student judicial review board now has cases backed up into next summer.

At Western Illinois, administrators last month banned overnight guests of the opposite sex from campus dorms.

The crackdowns and rules, of course, are reminiscent of the days when colleges actively regulated all kinds of student behavior, from sex to how they dressed.

"There are still a lot of administrators who'd like to return to the days when they ruled campuses with an iron hand, and you didn't breathe without them knowing it," says Bob Bingaman, field director of the United States Student Association.

Administrators themselves say fear, not hunger for power, is what's driving them to rein in their students.

With more judges holding schools themselves liable for student drinking accidents, rapes and other crimes, many colleges are just trying to make sure their students don't get them into legal trouble, says Tom Goodale, vice chancellor for student affairs at the University of Denver.

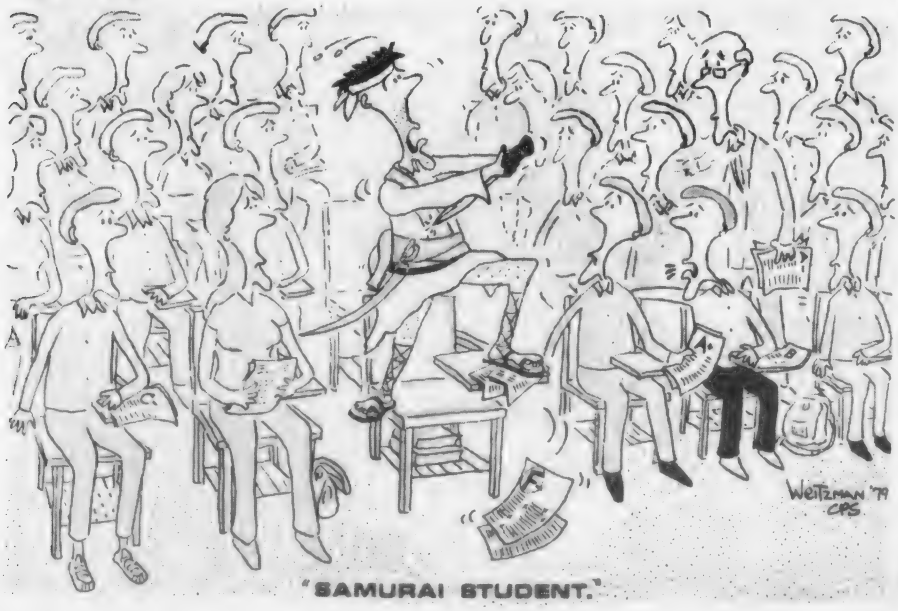
A former student currently is suing Denver over an injury he received in an accident at a campus fraternity house.

"Schools are very scared by the cost of liability, about pressure from the public," Goodale explains.

"A lot of concern over student discipline is happening because of efforts by students themselves," Bingaman adds.

"I think there is definitely a more conservative trend and more concern for students to be treated like adults and act like adults," observes Mary Anne Besterbreurtje, who is overseeing Florida's conduct code review.

But regulating students' behavior in their room, recreation, and even reading matter isn't often confused with being treated like adults, and some administrators worry prospective students might be offended by it.



"There's real conflict in clamping down on discipline and making the campus as attractive as possible for students," Goodale says. "But the problem (of liability) is progressing, and schools can't ignore it."

Students shouldn't ignore the impact the national crackdown could have on their constitutional rights, adds Alan Levine, co-author of the American Civil Liberaties Union's "Handbook

continued p.3

And With Them SAMURAI STUDENTS

For more information on joining the Samurai Student Club, please see any Senior Class member.

"SAMURAI STUDENT."

ECHO

Editor . . . . . Marta Wittig
Assistant Editor. . . . . Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor. . . . . Chris Porter
Photographers. . . . . Keith Moore and Tara Wey
Business Manager. . . . . Michael Crawford

STAFF WRITERS

Julie Humpert, Tara Wey, Brian Rigell, Amy Waggoner, Pam Matthews, Ciretta Carpenter, Ed Welch, Mary Hughes, Wilma Coleman.

Letters, comments, or inquiries are welcomed and should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee, 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration.

The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Notes From All Over

HENRY KISSINGER PULLS OUT OF A THIRD CAMPUS APPEARANCE

He refused to show up at a symposium at Tufts after seeing leaflets handed out the week before.

The leaflets traced Kissinger's involvement in Vietnam, Chile, and Central America

In a statement withdrawing from the appearance, Kissinger said he wanted a discussion, not a confrontation.

The week before, 52 were arrested in a protest of Kissinger's address at Texas. Kissinger earlier pulled out of a South Florida lecture when faculty and students organized teach-ins about some of Kissinger's policies

SPRINGTIME ON CAMPUS BIZARRO

*Police arrested two Iowa State students for trying to steal a 20-foot balloon replica of a Busch beer can.

*Cal-Davis housing officials ordered two dorm residents to drain a hot tub they'd built from a used horse trough and old pool parts in their dorm room over spring break.

*Painting an Arizona State building for the first time in 15 years, workers disturbed a huge bee colony, which then buzzed an Air Force ROTC class before settling on the classroom window in a layer about an inch thick.

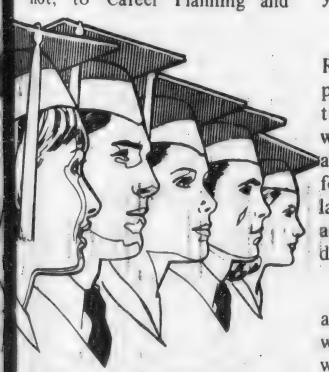
*Ohio State students returned from break to find a Hissing Bull Snake, normally not found anywhere near Ohio, had spent the last two weeks living in the nearly-empty main library. No one knows where it came from,

*A Berkeley student slipped and fell 40 feet while trying to put a Mickey Mouse mask and hands on the face of a campus tower clock. The student suffered minor injuries, but now faces vandalism charges.

*Two Illinois State students on a drunken dare stole a decayed arm from a University of Illinois mausoleum, took it back to their campus, and planted it so that it was partially visible in the soil of the ISU quad. They could be charged with grave robbing, punishable by a $1000 fine and a year in jail.

ILLINOIS SAYS IT'LL PUBLISH THE NAMES OF STUDENTS WHO DON'T REPAY GUARANTEED STUDENT LOANS

The Illinois State Scholarship Commission says it'll start publishing defaulters' names in newspapers around the state.



The commission currently has about 7800 names to publish. It'll send the full list to big dailies, and smaller lists, divided by regions and zip codes, to smaller papers.

I've Got An Interview

Peggy Millsaps

Spring has seen once again the return of that old nemesis of the soon-to-be-liberated senior: job interviews. Dutifully nascent graduates shed jogging clothes for three piece suits and "I Luv Muryville" tee-shirts for smart business dresses to file, often as not, to Career Planning and Placement for their trial by fire. And most weather the ordeal surprisingly well. Why? They've learned the art of interviewing.

Whether you're a sophomore interviewing for a summer resort job or a senior going for "the Biggie," a few pointers can help you shine in interviews:

1) Be informed about the job. Read annual reports, brochures, publications, company literature. Never go into an interview with vague or misguided notions about the job you're applying for. (Use your reading to formulate a few intelligent questions about the company or job to ask during the interview.)

2) Dress appropriately. Jeans are okay on campus, but they won't make it in the business world. Conservatism and good taste are your best guides.

3) Be on time. You won't make much of an impression breezing in as if you had other or more important things to do.

4) Practice interviewing. Learn how to shake hands firmly, make direct eye contact, and listen and respond with enthusiasm. Be prepared to present your skills as if you were selling a product (yourself) and answer such questions as, Where do you want to be five, ten years from now? What do you know about our company? Why should we hire you?

5) Muster up your self confidence. Be informed about the company and the contribution you can make. Accept a few jitters as normal and proceed as if you were in complete control. With a little know-how, you can be!

Risa, Karen, Jo, Julie, and Tara - N-N-Now. from Jess

These are all just momentary Witticksizooms.

How do I love thee, pubis Herricliquous? Let me count the ways! - Oh-I can't.

King of the Juice

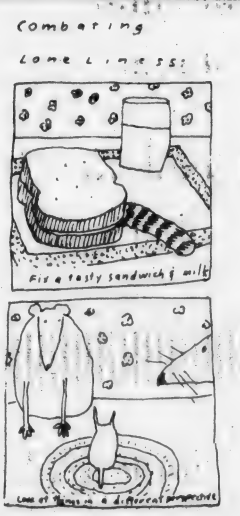
Echo Ear

Did you hear about Mr. Faker? He fakes absolutely everything. I mean, everything . . . like (um) even (um) . . .

Hi Mom! wish you were beer - I mean here.

"I just love breakfast at Charlies - Dunkin'Doritos and EVERYTHING (ha-ha)

"Too much responsibility kills the creative instinct" - Valdar of New Orleans



I'm telling you - It's just too much fun. W.M.

Photos

Reprints of pictures seen in the Echo are available:

8X10 - $2.00
5X7 - $1.00
3X5 - $.50

Available

From p. 2

on the Rights of Students."

"Often, there is a tendency to put due process aside in order to get on with discipline," he says.

"Not just in college administration, but in hospitals, prisons, anywhere someone is charged with discipline (violations), they always find it difficult to enforce (conduct codes) when you have to observe due process," he says.

Levine, however, doesn't see all the efforts to control student behavior as a return to "in loco parentis," the legal doctrine that gave colleges the right to act "in the place of the parent" through the 1960s.

The doctrine, he explains, has been discredited, and probably couldn't withstand a lawsuit today.

See You
AT THE MATADOR

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES
All Seats $2.00 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4399 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12:45, 2:55, 5:05, 7:15, 9:25
ROMANCING THE STONE
1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
POLICE ACADEMY
1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 7:15, 9:15
WEEKEND PASS
2:00, 4:30, 7:00, 9:30
GREYSTOKE

Don't Panic! Just 32 Days til Graduation

Baseball

by Chris Porter

The Scots lost two games in a double header against Tennessee Wesleyan in Athens last Thursday, 16-5 and 10-0. TWC (19-5) won both games by the 10-run rule at the end of the five innings.

Pam Page started the first four of the first game and Steve Hadden relieved him. Mike Roman likewise pitched four when Rick Carver relieved him.

Offensive highlights included Steve Saylor's home run in the first game. Chris Johannsen hit 3 for 4 on the day and Kevin Jenkins hit 3 for 5.

"They were the best team we've played all year," said Coach Saywer of the Division I TWC squad.

The Scots play here this Saturday at 2:00.

Women's Tennis

By Brian Rigell

According to Lady Scots Tennis coach Sharon Wood, the 1984 Lady Scots season is one of rebuilding. However, Coach Wood is very pleased with the foundation that she is laying for next year. "We have definitely layed a good foundation and if I can get a couple of recruits, then next year should be the best in a long time," said Wood optimistically.

With only two returning players from last year's program (Maria Irwin-Jr. and Kathy Balent - soph.), it is not difficult to imagine the team's lack of court experience. The squad is overcoming this problem through lots of hard work and good talent. Freshmen Pam Gunter and Nancy Koehl are leading the team with records of 2-2 each. Also rounding out the freshman contribution to this year's squad is Jackie Osborne. Both Nancy and Jackie are local recruits from William Blount: Kay Julian (sr.) and Kandy Schram (jr.) are also on the team with Kandy filling in whenever one of the other ladies is unable to make it. Nancy and Kay are number one and players respectively with Kathy and Maria number three and four and Pam and Jackie five and six. For those of you who do not follow, numbers one-three play first, then four-six, and for doubles one and two play together with three and four pairing up, while five and six become partners. A contest consists of nine matches (six singles - three doubles) and is won when one team scores at least five victories.

This year's schedule has been altered frequently due to rain, which also accounts for the team's record 1-3. Coach Wood who is thinking of investing either in an ark or indoor courts said, "Our record would have been a lot better without the rain. We've had four of our dates rained out so far this season."

Future home matches include Roane State on April 30th and Sewanee on May 1st. The team is spending most of this week gearing up for the WIAC Tournament in Danville, KY on the 26-th and 27th of this month. Coach Wood summed it all up by saying, "I'm really pleased with the hard work that everyone has put in this year, and we hope to improve as the season progresses and I have no doubt that we will."

From p. 1

three years ago the governement deficit was over 30 billion dollars: now it is over 200 billion dollars."

In a rally speech against Reagan's approach to solving U.S. crises, Jackson stated that all the country's poor, as well as blacks and minorities, would benefit from [illegible] economic [illegible] "Shame on pain in this country," he said, implying that no one should trod on the less fortunate.

Jackson also took a stand on dership brought the country to its present condition and that he has the leadership to bring the nation back to the ideology of which its founders dreamed.

Card Capers

by Amy Waggoner

Friends spending much time in my room lately will notice something on my desk that never seems to disappear. A typewriter? Nope. Reference books? Nope - a deck of cards.

While contemplating life, love, and Maryville College lately, I came to a startling conclusion: nothing preserves one's sanity like a deck of cards (except maybe a coloring book).

Think about it. Those 52 pieces of laminated paper can keep even the most frustrated, hyperactive bio major occupied for hours. What other pastime - excluing those that are illegal, immoral, fattening, or cost over $1.00 - can calm you down or pick you up and clear your mind enough to get through the rest of the day?

About the only thing cards can't do is help you get revenge on your roommate. But your mind has to be racing toward something all those hours spend with cards. Suffice to say, you'll have plenty of time to think up revenge.

The only activity I would advise against is building card houses, unless patience and a steady hand are qualities you possess in abundance. Those easily frustrated need not even attempt it.

Playing cards serves one important function which we students must not forget: it helps keep us from studying. After all, isn't that what college is all about?

FLOWERAMA
FOOTHILLS MALL
NEXT TO SEARS
Affordable flowers
Corsages - $3.99 & up Boutonniere - $1.49 and up
Hair garlands & nosegays - $10.00 and up
ORDER TODAY 982-3310

Coke adds life to...
ORANGE BOWL SNACKS

"Located in the Foothills Mall"

HIGHLAND ECHO

Vol. 69 No. 24 | Maryville College | Friday, May 11, 1984

Campus Calendar

Friday, May 11

7:00 p.m. - CIV- Movie "Barry Lyndon." Theater

Saturday, May 12

12 noon - Peace Walk

After Peace Walk - Movie: "Woodstock." CCM

9 p.m. - BSA dance. Pearsons

Sunday, May 13

Mother's Day

7:00 p.m. - Vespers, led by Ann & Scott Brunger.

After Vespers - Movie: "Woodstock." CCM

MAACO Children's Concert. Wilson Chapel. Time TBA

Wednesday, May 16

9:20 a.m. - Senior CIV. Theatre.

10:30 a.m. - Midweek Maryville College Concert Choir. CCM

6:30 p.m. - Film on Peace and non-violent demonstration with talk by Drs. Pickens and Bunde. Library Fiction Room.

Thursday, May 17

6:30 p.m. - Film on peace and non-violent demonstration with talk by Drs. Pickens and Bunde. Library Fiction Room.

Friday, May 18

5:30 p.m. Dinner outside on Pearsons Patio with open mike peace rally.

10:00 p.m. - Movie: "Stopping History." Thaw Hall

For Sports Banquet Story,

SEE PAGE 4

TRAILWAYS OFFERS DISCOUNT

Trailways Lines, Inc. today announced a special round-trip fare for students of only $69. The discount is available from over 125 colleges and universities across the United States and may be used for travel to any destination served by Trailways Lines, Inc. and participating Trailways carriers nationwide. To claim their discount, students must present the special newspaper coupon and their student ID when purchasing their ticket. Round-trip travel must be completed by September 15, 1984.

"Students can go home now and come back next fall for next to nothing," said Tom Kissell, Trailways' director of passenger sales marketing, "And we are also offering discounts on shipping services, so the extra clothes you brought piece by piece from home and the books you purchased while on campus, can all go home together.

According to Genevieve Mathieu, Trailways' director of package express marketing, the special shipping discounts are offered on regular package express and on Redibox service. "On any shipment students can save 20% and the regularly priced $11.95 Redibox, $1," she said. The Redibox is a cardboard container which measures 15" x 15" x 12" and once purchased can be used at any time to ship from one Trailways location to another. The price includes both the carton and transportation. Rediboxes can be purchased at the terminal. To take advantage of these shipping discounts students must have the special newspaper coupons and their student ID when paying.

Additional coupons will be available at participating Trailways locations; all coupons must be used by June 30, 1984. "You just can't beat Trailways' 'Student Aid' program for good value," concluded Kissell.

For more information on Trailways students discounts, contact your local Trailways terminal.

COMMENCEMENT

Dr. Ernest L. Boyer, author of the widely acclaimed book entitled "High School," a report on secondary education in America, will deliver the address at Maryville College's 165th annual commencement.

Set for Monday, May 28, at 10:30 a.m., commencement will be held on the campus lawn between Anderson and Pearsons Halls.

Dr. Boyer is one of two individuals to receive honorary degrees at commencement. The College will award him the honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree. John M. Templeton, an investment counselor and chartered financial analyst from Nassau, Bahamas, will receive the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

A noted educator, Dr. Boyer is president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching in Princeton, N.J., and senior fellow of the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University.

Before joining the Carnegie Foundation in 1980, he served as the 23rd United States commissioner of education, administering a $12 billion federal budget.

In 1983, Dr. Boyer was selected by his peers in a national survey as the nation's leading educator. For five years, he has been listed by the U.S. News and World Report magazine as one of the top educators in the country.

From 1970-77, he was chancellor of the State University of New York (SUNY), one of the largest university systems in the nation with 64 institutions and more than 350,000 students at that time.

Three U.S. presidents have named Dr. Boyer to serve on national committees. These have included the National Commission on the Financing of Postsecondary Education, the President's Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs, and the President's Commission on Foreign Language and International Education.

He holds honorary degrees from 78 colleges and universities in the United States and in 1971 was awarded the President's medal from Tel Aviv University in Israel.

John M. Templeton is president of the Board of Trustees of Princeton Theological Seminary. He also served as president of the Templeton World Fund Ltd., and is a member and past president of the Chief Executives Organization.

A Presbyterian elder, Templeton is a member of the International Academy of Religious Sciences. He authored the book, "The Humble Approach," which was published in 1982 by Seabury Press and Wm. Collins & Sons.

New Dean of Admissions

Larry M. West, director of admissions at Maryville College since 1980, has been promoted to dean of admissions, MC President Wayne Anderson announced today.

West directs and coordinates all student recruiting and admission at MC and supervises a staff of eight in the Office of Admissions. He also oversees the College's office of Financial Aid, directed by Dan Perkins, and MC's Center for Intensive English Language Study, Directed by Dan Valentine.

"Larry West's promotion is a well-deserved one," Dr. Anderson said. "He brings extraordinary professionalism, energy and creativity to the College's admission effort."

Since coming to Maryville in 1980, West has moved the Office of Admission into several new directions, including the successful Alumni Admissions Program, directed by Annabelle Libby. Through this program, a network of MC alumni has become effective in representing the College to prospective students across the country.

West also chaired the College's Enrollment Planning Committee which recently redefined the institution's geographical recruiting area and made various recommendations concerning admissions.

Students on campus have also taken a greater role in the admissions office by serving as guides and student hosts for visiting prospective students and their families.

This summer, West will convene the annual meeting of the Presbyterian college admissions officers organization at Austin College in Texas. He is program chairman of the group.

West came to Maryville from Westminister College in Missouri, where he served as director of admissions from 1977-80. He also directed the admissions office at Oklahoma's Phillips University from 1974-77.

He has served as assistant director of admissions at Baylor University and Southern Methodist University, both in Texas.

A native of Waco, Texas, West earned both the Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts degrees in English at Baylor University. He holds memberships in the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers and the National Association of College Admissions Officers.

NO Legalization?

Most college students now oppose legalizing marijuana, a new survey of student attitudes has found.

Two out of every three college students oppose the legalization of marijuana, Newsweek On Campus discovered in a survey of some 500 students nationwide.

In a comparable college survey taken in 1975, 52 percent of the American college student body favored legalizing use of the drug.

Now, 52 percent of 1984's students have used marijuana. In 1979, the number was 64 percent.

"That information is comparable with our field studies and high school surveys which indicate drug use is declining in the younger population," says Edgar Adams with the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) in Washington, D.C.

Students are using far fewer drugs than their counterparts of the late sixties and early seventies, Adams says, primarily because of the health hazards associated with frequent use.

"The perceived harmfulness of marijuana use is increasing. Sixty-three percent of the high school students surveyed last year said there was great risk in smoking marijuana regularly, compared to only 35 percent who felt that way in 1978," he notes.

Although the generation that made drugs popular during the sixties and seventies will continue to show higher levels of drug use for some time, Adams says, today's students use illegal substances in a more restrained, less frequent way, even though many of them may have grown up seeing their parents use drugs.

Overall, marijuana use reached its high point in 1979, Adams says, when 39 percent of the Americans in the 18-to-25 age group reported they were currently using marijuana.

By 1982, the last year for which statistics are available, that figure had dropped to 27 percent.

Over half of the students who use pot or other drugs do so for fun and recreation, the new Newsweek on Campus survey shows. Thirty-two percent of the respondents use drugs to relax and 20 percent "to be sociable at parties."

College may even cause students to use fewer drugs, according to the study.

Eighty percent of the students say they started using drugs before entering college. Over 60 percent of the students say they use fewer drugs than before coming to campus.

Yet, excluding alcohol and cigarettes, marijuana is still the drug of choice on campus, followed by cocaine, barbituates, amphetamines, LSD, PCP, and heroin.

Cocaine's rise in popularity may simply mean more people have tried the drug, not necessarily that more people are using it regularly, Adams says.

Adams believes cocaine is too expensive for students to use regularly.

Indeed, the Newsweek on Campus survey found that sixty-eight percent of the students surveyed say they don't spend any money to get their drugs.

Twenty-two percent of the students spend under $25 a month, and fewer than seven percent spend more than $25 a month.

Twelve percent of the students have worried about being too dependent on narcotics.

Students in the Midwest are most opposed to legalization - 72% – while only 56% of the students in the West oppose legalizing pot, the survey found.

Editor's note: As most of you probably realize, people who respond to surveys do not form a proper reflection of the student body. Therefore, results of this study are inconclusive. Draw your own conclusions.

ECHO

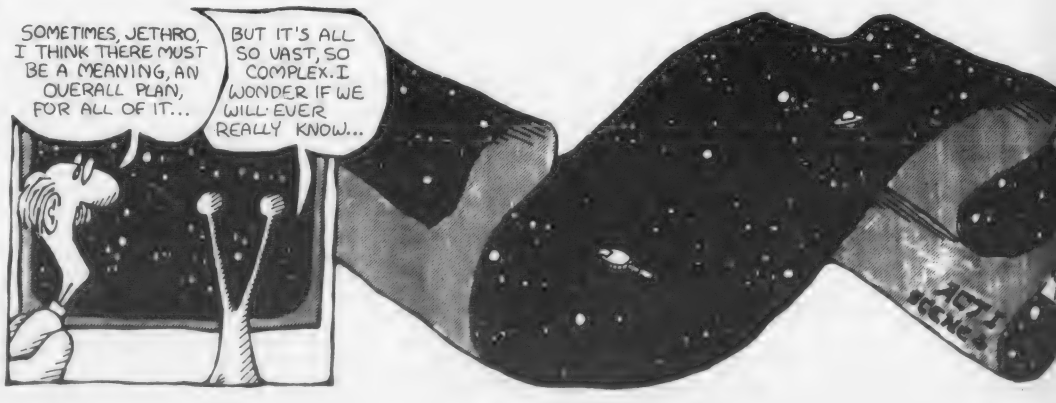
Editor ..... Marta Wittig
Editor-in-Training ..... Amy Waggoner
Assistant Editor ..... Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor ..... Chris Porter
Photographers ..... Keith Moore and Tara Wey
Business Manager ..... Michael Crawford

STAFF WRITERS

Julie Humpert, Tara Wey, Brian Rigell, Amy Waggoner, Pam Matthews, Ciretta Carpenter, Ed Welch, Mary Hughes, Wilma Coleman.

Letters, comments, or inquiries are welcomed and should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee, 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration.

The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.



To Supporters of Peace;

Poverty and lack of time are permanent conditions of college life. Nevertheless, I hope you are still considering walking in or donating to the Peace Walk. Thus far there are about 35 people who are going to make the walk. Many of you, I know, will not have a spare moment between now and the summer. That's fine. In place of your time would you please consider making a small donation? At $.10 a mile you can make a much appreciated investment of $1.00 in peace. For a little more than what most of us spend in the snack bar in a few days - you can help work for international peace.

You can make your donation directly through the business office or you can sponsor a peace-walker. If you already have sponsored somebody or made a donation: Thank You for your support! There will be a sheet in the business office to sign when making a donation. That way, those who are attending peace conferences this summer (with the help of your money) can send you a thank you note. No donation is too small.

If today is any indication, the monsoon season has given way to sun for a while. I hope you will join us this Saturday at 12:00.

Peace,
Charlie Parsons

ILL LITERATE

by Peggy Millsaps

At the risk of wrenching the earth from its axis, I submit, with all due respect, reverence, subservience, etc. etc., that being an English major has done me naught but ill. Oh, I don't mind reading variorum editions of Shakespeare or explicating Emily Dickinson's poems to the last enigmatic noun. I don't even mind looking up 16e (again and again) in Harbrace. But when my personal life or leisure hours are adversely affected by my academic pursuits, I begin to find the merits of being an English major open to question.

Case in point: last Sunday, with comps safely behind us and free time becoming a real possibility once again, a friend and I lolled at our ease among a litter of soda cans and pizza remains to catch a late-night movie. When Barbara Streisand strolled onto the screen as an early 1970's housewife stymied by a cramped apartment and two boisterous children, did we settle back for two hours' happily passive entertainment? Nay. We stiffened like guard dogs menaced by an intruder: what recurring images and themes seemed to be emerging early?

I looked for a pad to jot down ideas; my friend scrambled for her dog-eared Holman Handbook to Literature and looked up "drama." More characters appeared on screen: achieving professor-husband, giddy, meddling mother. Dramatis personae! Pens scratched, Holman riffled. Streisand splattered a cockroach with her bedroom slipper - insect imagery! Streisand fantasized that she was the mistress of a Cuban revolutionary and had toppled the Statue of Liberty with dynamite - impending psychosis! Meddlesome mother prematurely announced Streisand's third prenancy at a dinner party; Streisand shoved mother's face into a triple-layer cake - elements of realism! ("No, no," my friend corrected. "Naturalism." I dutifully made a note on my steno pad.)

When the children scrawled in crayon on their father's dissertation pages and he flew into a rage, my friend said, with well-learned academic rhetorical pomp, "I think the significance of crayon imagery in this context cannot be overlooked." I was dazzled by her insight.

By this time we were in a snit. We had dutifully noted characters, imagery, and emerging themes. What was to be the denouement of this cinematic epic? The movie concluded with Streisand's leaving her husband and kids at a carnival while she taxied off to "oh, anywhere" that beautiful afternoon. She put her head out the window to deliver the climatic line that would resolve the tangled plot threads and roundout the emerging theme: "Bye, honey. I love you."

"Love you'"?? We looked at one another incredulously. Where was the impending psychosis? The resolution to earlier plot complications involving cock roaches and crayons? What was the significance of setting, tone, theme? What, for crying out loud, was the pivotal motif?

We felt cheated. Of what significance was our education, what kind of English majors were we when we couldn't explicate what we had definitely concluded was an (ahem) piece of avant garde symbolic - naturalistic early 19-70's cinema?

"Thank you for watching 'Up the Sandbox," the announcer blared. "This light-hearted comedy starred Barbara Streisand and . . ."

Light-hearted? Comedy? A blush crept up my friend's face and I felt my own cheeks redden. "It was a comedy," my friend said, devasted. "Just a bit of goofiness - a funny movie," she wailed. "A comedy," I repeated, stunned. "I thought- I mean - themes, you know - terribly important - and imagery - I - I . . ."

Pedantry, you see, has its price. We sat grim as gargoyles through a movie that should have split our sides, afraid to crack a smile lest we miss a significant symbol. Why? Because the English department has conditioned us to look for the thematic significance of an alarm clock's buzz.

Tonight we are watching the conclusion of "The Last Days of Pompei." We are not looking for historical themes or symbolic parallels between a crumbling, decadent society and its devastation by an earthquake. No, we are just going to laugh at a light-hearted comedy featuring men in short skirts. We won't be had this time.

Too Much Stress?

by Amy Waggoner

Here we are again, in the midst of Spring Term, the most -- wonderful?!? -- time of the year. The sun always shines; it never rains. What's that? It's been flooding? Nah. You're just seeing things. The sun has been shining for a week now and almost everyone has a gorgeous tan.

You really think it has been flooding? You got your kayak out of storage to paddle to class?!? You must be under too much stress. Good old stress, that end-of-the-year affliction. What would we do without it?

I personally think that stress does not really exist at all. The Center for Lifestyle Development just had to think up some reason why, at about the seventh week of Spring term, students resemble zombies more than they resemble people.

What's the problem with this "stress" thing? Everyone knows that college students have an easy life . . . adults even envy these carefree days. We are free to do anything we want, as long as we work around the 2 term papers, 3 exams and 1 book report due in the next three weeks. Just think of all those hours between now and May 25 . . . the thought is enough to frazzle anyone's nerves.

Well, we must still deal with this nonexistent phenomenon. Some ideas spring quickly to mind: Book burning, "Samurai Student" behavior, punching holes in walls, etc. Feel free to try anything.

This article was supposed to offer suggestions, but I suddenly realized that I, too, have become a zombie. If you have any suggestions for me, send them to box 8758, Maryville College, 37801.

Concert Sunday

Music from a rubber hose and a funnel? A drinking straw and a pop bottle?

On Sunday, May 13, at the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra's Children's Concert, musicians will use ordinary household items to demonstrate how instruments produce music.

The theme for the concert, which is scheduled for 3 p.m. in the Maryville College Wilson Chapel, is "Instruments of the Orchestra," and the program will include music written just for the string, woodwind and brass families.

The concert will feature two soloists in Vivaldi's Concerto for Two Violins and Strings: Bill Robinson, concert master and teacher of strings in the Maryville schools, and Melinda Hoffecker, violinist in the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra.

The woodwinds will perform Gounod's "Petite Symphony" and the brass section will perform short works by Premru and Susato.

The entire orchestra, which is directed by David Hoffecker, assistant professor of music at MC, will conclude the concert with a performance of "Finlandia" by Sibelius.

Tickets for the May 13 Children's Concert cost $5 for adults, $4 for students and senior citizens and $3 for children under 6 and are available from the MC development office.

For more information or to buy tickets, call 982-6412 (Maryville) or 546-6912 (Knoxville).

A little bit of sunshine

by Ed Welch

The monsoon season may have started in East Tennessee, but the MC Playmakers provided "a little bit of sunshine" with their very unique production of "Godspell." For an hour Sunday afternoon students and staff forgot that it was raining and enjoyed a humorous and heart-warming production.

The unique thing about the MC "Godspell" was that it was to a large extent written and directed by the student ensemble members. Sharon Crane, the staff director, said the cast members rose to the occasion of creating their own dialogues and actions. She said this was the "best working ensemble in a number of years."

Sharon also expressed thanks to Terry Whittum as music director of the Playmakers. Other musicians helping Terry were Senior Tracy Depue, freshman Kevin Robinson and '83 graduate Gerald Burnette.

Other playmakers in the production were graduating seniors Jim Kidder, Tommy Brown and Joe Longo, juniors Teresa Welch, Diane McDaniel and Gloria Anaple and sophomore Kathy Balent.

Joining next years playmakers will be Trent Gilmore, John Wright, Cindy Clayborn, David Marcum, Sonja Gilmore, and Kevin Robinson.

I think the MC community would join Sharon Crane in saying that she was "pleased as punch" by the Sunday afternoon production. Good job, playmakers. Thanks for a rainbow in the midst of a flood.

COLOR PLUS

Color prints and slides in 1 hour

Complete darkroom supplies

Monday - Saturday 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m. - 6 p.m.

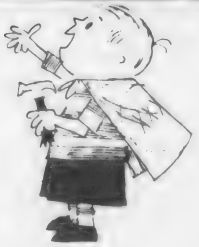
One Hour Photo & Camera Shop
Red Rood Shopping Center
Maryville, Tennessee 37801

All Seats $2.00 Everyday Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS

977-5399 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 9:15
HARDBODIES

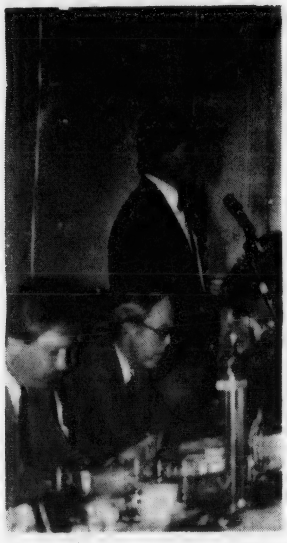


1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
THE NATURAL

1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
BREAKIN'

1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15
SIXTEEN CANDLES

The Echo needs a typesetter for the '84-'85 school year. This is a paid position. Inquire in box 2478.



SPORTS BANQUET
And the winner is...

- Communications-

Maryville College recognized 27 student athletes at its annual All Sports Banquet Monday night on campus.

Nickie Frazier, senior physical education major and captain of the Lady Scots softball team from Kingsport, was named winner of the sixth annual J.D. Davis Outstanding Athlete of the Year Award.

Also receiving special recognition was Sara Covington, a junior recreation major from McColl, S.C., who was recently named to the NCAA Div. III All South Region and third team All American Basketball teams by the American Women's Sports Federation.

Other award winners included:

FOOTBALL
Most Valuable Player -- Defense: Paul Anagnostis, jr., Hialeah, FL
Most Valuable Player -- Offense: Matt Otto, soph., Pompano Beach, FL
Coach's Award: Scott Cinnamon, soph., Knoxville (West High)

SOCCER
Most Valuable Player: Rethabile Masilo, jr., Nairobi, Kenya
Most Improved Player: Steve Courtoy, soph., Tampa, FL
Coach's Award: Wade Wright, fr. Marietta, GA

VOLLEYBALL

Most Valuable Player: Leah Gross, jr., Hollywood, FL
Most Improved Player: Theresa Taylor, fr., Miramar, FL
Coach's Award: Kandis Schram, jr., Hudson, FL

MEN'S BASKETBALL
Most Valuable Player: Deangleo McDaniel, jr., Moulton, AL
Most Improved Player: T.R. Robinson, soph., Kingsport, TN
Coach's Award: Tyrone Matthews, jr., Decatur, GA & Paul Mills, soph., Knoxville
Chairman of the Board (Best Rebounder): Dan Kirkpatrick, soph., Miami, FL

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Most Valuable Player: Sara Covington, jr., McColl, SC
Most Improved Player: Penny Head, soph., Joelton, TN
Coach's Award: Jenny Black, sr., Vonore, TN

BASEBALL

Most Valuable Player: Eric Etchison, fr., Lexington, OH
Most Improved Player: Glenn Humprhies, soph., Knoxville (Catholic)
Defensive: Glenn Humphries, soph., Knoxville
Offensive: Eric Etchison, fr., Lexington, OH
Coach's Award: Tony Murr, soph., Maryville (Heritage)

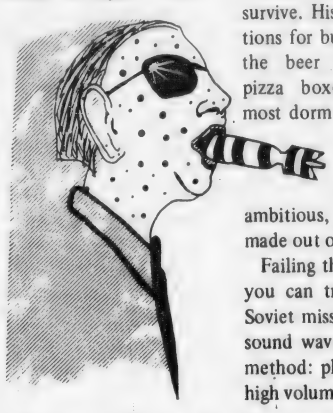
MEN'S TENNIS

Most Valuable Player: Mike Hill, fr., Longwood, FL
Most Improved Player: Glenn Stout, jr., Rocklodge, FL

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Most Improved Player: Pam Gunter, fr., Rossville, GA
Most Improved Player: Kandis Schram, jr., Hudson, FL
Coach's Award: Jackie Osborne, fr., Maryville (William Blount)

SOFTBALL



Most Valuable Player: Nancy Koehl, fr., Louisville, TN (William Blount)
Most Improved Player: Theresa Taylor, fr., Miramar, FL
Outstanding Defensive Player: Penny Head, soph., Joelton, TN
Outstanding Offensive Player: Kandis Schram, jr., Hudson, FL and Denise Penzkofer, jr., New Port Richey, FL

The MC cheerleaders were also recognized at tonight's All Sports banquet.

SAVVY SURVIVORS

Are college campuses ready for a wave of jokes about what to do after the big one drops?

Kit Keifer, anyway, is betting they are. His recently-published "Post-Nuclear Collegian" (Halfcourt Press, 199 pages, $7.95) addresses "the important question: how will you as a collegian be able to have a good time after nuclear war?"

First, Keifer notes, you must survive. His book offers instructions for building shelters out of the beer cans and discarded pizza boxes scattered around most dorm rooms. For the more ambitious, ther's the shelter made out of beer kegs.

Failing that, Keifer shows how you can try to repel oncoming Soviet missiles by creating dense sound waves. His recommended method: playing Def Leppard at high volume.

He addresses the queston of what to wear,what classes to take, what extracurricular activities to pursue and what lines to use to approach members of the opposite sex (i.e., "have you ever thought that our job now is to perpetuate the species?" or "Don't worry. The radiation made me sterile").

Nuclear war may not seem like obvious fodder for comedy to most people, but when Keifer got the idea for his book, "it was like the holy city opening up," he says.

Ahead of him he could visualize immediate publicaiton, wealth ("I didn't write it not to make money") and fame --maybe even an appearance on The David Letterman Show.

Peace Week Begins Saturday

Maryville College's peace and Justice Week begins this Saturday, May 12, and continues through Friday, May 18. Sponsored by the Peace Education Task Force (PETF), the week is designed to educate students about world peace, nuclear war, and non-violent protest.

The week begins on Saturday with the peace walk to raise money to send delegates to the Russian and European Peace Seminars. After the walk, a movie "Woodstock" will be shown in the Center for Campus Ministry. For those who miss this showing it will be shown again on Sunday after Vespers.

Also on Sunday, Dr. Brunger and his wife, Ann, will lead the Vespers service.

Drs. Pickens and Bunde will lead a discussion and show a film on peace and the art of non-violent demonstration Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 6:30 p.m. in the Fiction Room of the Library. This should be a good one.

Friday will have the student body eating dinner outside once again, this time for the open mike rally. Afterward, a film "Stopping History" will be shown. This film shows students how they really can change the course of nuclear war.

Come on out and get invovled in Peace and Justice Week - unless you'd rather be standing around on Ground Zero in the future.

SNACK BAR
Weekly Special
ROAST BEEF
SANDWICH, LARGE FRIES, & LARGE COKE
$2.25

TRY THE NEW PLANTERS MUNCHIES!
Zest 64¢
Granola Bars 30¢
Hunts Snacks 39¢

For those Special Occasions, order CAKES and COOKIES from the food Service,

Dobbs
DOBBS HOUSES, INC
SPECIALS

Mur'vull Express

Vol. 69 No. 24 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Thursday, May 3, 1984

Fractured Fairy Tales

by Amy Waggoner

Alright, boys and girls, it's story-time with Uncle Shelby! That's right. Today we're going to hear some old favorite fairy tales with some new twists. What's that? you don't want to hear fairy tales? Well, you're going to anyway because these are ones that you can relate to. Ready now? Here we go . . .

Once upon a time there were two children named Hansel and Gretel. In our version we'll call them Sid Downey and Linda Stephens. One day a nice lady named Dean Richardson invited them to her gingerbread house. Do you know who that lady was? That's right! and since you know the rest of the story, we'll go on to the next one . . .

Snow White. Do you know the story of Snow White? Of course you do. And the title characters real name is Dr. Sumner. The seven dwarfs? Why, Drs. Ramger, Bunde, Naylor, Dent, Nichols, Pickens, and Waters, of course.

One of my favorites is the Little Engine That Could. Toward Century III program could be the load, with that old fund-raiser himself, Dr. Anderson trying to make it up that mountain. I think I can, I think I can, I think I can . . .

Do you like the story of Cinderella? Me too. Dr. Beck is perfect for the part! As for the handsome prince -- Mr. Bushing himself. What's that about the wicked stepmother and the stepsisters? Well, I don't want to get into too much trouble, so I'd better stop there.

Now, I think I hear your mother calling you to go play in the traffic. You wouldn't want to make her mad, so go ahead and come back tomorrow for another story time.

May Madness

by Pam Mathews

This being my first year at MC, I was dumbstruck when someone mentioned May Madness. Thus, I set out on a journey through the wilds of the campus, seeking the elusive truth. From Thaw to Hall 1, from Pear's son to Ander's son I went . . . but no one could divulge the answer I was pursuing. Alas, I went to Charlie's to drown my sorrows, when who should appear but that infamous MC alumnus, Mr. R.C. Nile.

"Oh, Mr. Nile, can you tell me what May Madness is?" I asked.

"Sure, but you can call me C, or you can call me R, or you can call me RC or you can call me C. Nile, or you can . . . "

"OK,OK. I'll just call you C. Nile. Now, will you please answer my question?"

"Uh, what was that question again?"

"What is May Madness?" I replied.

"Well, if my memory doesn't fail me, it occurs right after Seniors have finished their comps. Everyone turns himself into lunatics by the light of the full moon."

"Aren't you confusing them with werewolves?" I asked.

"I don't remember what werevolves are," he replied.

"It's not important. Can you please continue?"

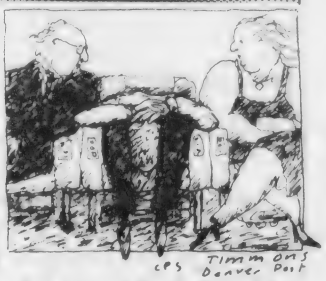
"Now what was that question again?"

"What is May Madness?" I asked again.

"It was a time when the resident around here would bolt their doors and lock their windows in my day. They wouldn't dare step out of the house during May Madness. Now no one even cringes with fear when you mention it. Everything has gone downhill since then."

"How so?" I queried.

"Well, it was chaos, a free-for-all. We used to have this mud hole which no one would go near, unless they wanted to suffer the consequences. We would drag people into it -- kicking and screaming. We also used it for a tug-of-war contest between the women, the wimps, and the football players. One year the football players were beat twice, but that was the last one. I guess they turned chicken, afraid that they might lose face again."



"I see what you mean. We wouldn't have any problems finding mudholes around here. We've got plenty of potholes that would be perfect. At least they would be put to some good use," I answered.

"Yeah," he continued. "We had a lot of fun in those days. There were Whopper and pie eating contests, to see who the biggest pig on campus was; there were egg tosses, greased pole climbing contests, bed spring races, parades of fools, and lots of other dumb stuff. Those were the good old days."

"Thanks, Mr. C. Nile for helping me find the truth about May Madness," I said with gratitude.

"What was the truth I helped you find?" he asked.

"Never mind," I answered. With a beer in his left hand, he hobbled off into Charlie's.

Campus Calendar

Thursday, May 3

6:30 p.m. - All-campus meeting in the Proffitt Dining Room. ACC candidates will be present to state their views about ACC & answer questions from the audience.

Friday, May 4

9:20 a.m. - CIV - Alpha Sigma recognition ceremony, with an address by Dr. E.B. Smith, professor of History at the University of Maryland. Wilson Chapel.

2:00 p.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Tusculum College. Tennis Courts.

ACC Election - vote during break (Fayerweather lobby), lunch, & dinner (Pearsons lobby).

5:30 p.m. - Oink and Ale. Pearsons Patio.

Saturday, May 5

Baseball - O.D.A.C. Tournament. Harrisonburg, Va. Time TBA.

2:00 p.m. - Women's tennis vs. Tusculum College. Tennis Courts.

9:00 p.m. - Spring Fling Theme this year is Roaring Twenties. Costumes available at Theater.

Sunday, May 6

3:00 p.m. - "Godspell" presented by the Playmakers. In front of Thaw Hall

7:00 p.m. - Vespers. Look Rock.

Wednesday, May 9

10:30 a.m. Mid-Week Worship. CCM.

7:00 p.m. - CIV - The Epworth Singers. CCM.

HOW NOW

I am Don Quixote, picaroe, picador of windmills, comps and swimming exams; able to subdue even the most monstrous professors with a single blow of my trusty No. 2 lead pencil.

I am a true renaissance student, capable of remer self - became so immersed in his reading that he spent whole nights from sundown to sunup and his days from dawn to dusk in pouring over his books, until, finally, from so little sleeping and so much reading, his brain dried up and he went completely out of his mind.

His studied became his life, and having lost himself, he turned to that which he read. A terrible fate indeed - one which awaits every over-zealous senior. Comps are not, by any means, the end of the world. Keep them relative.

markable feats: I can fail a quiz, a paper, and a test in a single day; I can procrastinate and push aside even cluding Infernal statistics; I can dodge the horrible blows of ferocious foreign languages with an adeptness which defies the focus of the eye; I can elaborate upon the erudite ease with which I continue to avoid expulsion - indeed my loquacity astounds the most astute listener - for days without end.

I am a one-time, fun-time, maybe even sometime hopeful graduate of this illustrious academy.

How now? We shall not fail! But beware! Remember how I became Don Quixote? Miguel de Cervantes comments that my for-

How now? Shall we fail? Be aware! A Renaissance student is a terrible creature who often leaves invention creativity to fall aside as he seeks to indulge his expurgated sense in things pure and classical; not deigning to mingle with those around them. Do not neglect the people around you in your efforts to become scholarly. To appropriate an old but well-tuned phrase, If you have not love, you are nothing but a clanging symbol.

How now? We've 25 days until we - graduate?

Marta Wittig

ECHO

Editor . . . . . Marta Wittig
Editor-in-Training . . . . . Amy Waggoner
Assistant Editor. . . . . Peggy Millsaps
Sports Editor. . . . . Chris Porter
Photographers. . . . . Keith Moore and Tara Wey
Business Manager. . . . . Michael Crawford

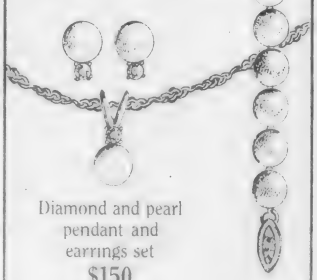
STAFF WRITERS

Julie Humpert, Tara Wey, Brian Rigell, Amy Waggoner, Pam Matthews, Ciretta Carpenter, Ed Welch, Mary Hughes, Wilma Coleman.

Letters, comments, or inquiries are welcomed and should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville Tennessee, 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration.

The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Pearls.
A gift of timeless fashion.



Zales, the world's largest jeweler, has a large selection of wisely chosen pearl jewelry

From $40

When you shop at Zales, you shop with confidence. Because Zales 90-Day Refund Policy is your assurance of satisfaction. She'll love a gift of pearl jewelry from Zales. For the fashion. For the quality. For the loving thoughts you've wrapped them in. So what are you waiting for?

Pearl strand from $249

Stud earrings, 14 karat gold from $40

Diamond and pearl pendant and earrings set $150 (Each, $75)

Ask About Revolving Charge!

ZALES
The Diamond Store™
is all you need to know.

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED: Zales • MasterCard
VISA • American Express • Carte Blanche • Diners Club • Illustrations enlarged

Jump Into Madness

by Julie Humpert

What is this madness
Arriving with Spring
Toenails turn red
And a tan everything?

Caravan to the mountains
Coolers, frisbee, and ice
Men predict weather
With a throw of the dice

The sun rays are warmer
Fans are switched on Breeze through the window
With the breaking of dawn

Classes drag longer
Comps have arrived
You go over your notes
Til you think you have died

Facts and figures surround you
You have to escape
Jump into the madness
This weekend - Go Ape!

On Friday - a picnic
With roast pig and beer
And bands with live music
At 5:30 be here!

Then Saturday - move it
To the Great Gatsby Fling
With labeled bar and great food
Roaring 20's - do your thing!

On Sunday it's outdoors
To watch a play near Thaw Hall
"Godspell" is a musical
Enjoy the sunshine!Enjoy it all!

Questions & Response

April 26-28 the Board of Directors of MC was on campus for their annual spring meeting. On April 26, an Open Forum was conducted so that students would have an opportunity to air complaints or to make suggestions. The topics discussed included the pothole problems, student help in the summer being paid bi-weekly instead of monthly, a public phone in the Sutton Science Center, handicapped ramps, and the swimming test.

Maryville College will offer two new majors in computer science, beginning next fall, following action by the College's Board of Directors at the group's semi-annual meeting on campus this past weekend.

The Board approved the College's offering combined majors in computer science/mathematics and computer science/business. Previously Maryville offered only a minor in computer science.

The Board also approved eliminating the opera-musical theatre major under the Bachelor of Music degree and instituting instead a major in music-theatre leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree.

This action brings to 25 the number of major fields of study offered at Maryville.

"The addition of the two combined computer science majors will enable Maryville College students to receive first class training in this vital technology," MC President Wayne Anderson noted. "Further, these additional majors will ensure that the College will reamin competitive with other institutions of higher learning as demand for computer science courses increases."

In other action, the directors approved a 1984-85 budget of $5,775,000, an increase of 9.8 percent over last year's budget. Next year's budget reflects no tuition increase for the first time in 10 years and only an 8 percent increase in room and board fees.

The MC Board also heard a report on the College's innovative plans to air condition three campus auditoriums, using an existing cooling system.

College maintenance crew members are currently working to lay underground pipes to tie Wilson Chapel, the MC Theatre and the Fine Arts Center Music Hall to the air conditioning system in Sutton Science Center.

Through the use of a secondary closed loop chill water system and small secondary pumps in each auditorium, the College plans to alternate cooling the four buildings as needed during the summer months.

Estimated cost of the project is $25,000 and does not involve purchasing any new and expensive air conditioning systems.

The College and community groups will benefit from having these additional auditoriums available all year, the directors were told.

A total of 28 directors were present for the Spring Board meeting.

Walk For Peace

Ed Welch

Your help is needed! In a world filled with international tensions and the ever-present possibility of nuclear destruction, global peace must be a goal of all conscious Americans. And in order to bring about peace, global understanding is of primary importance.

This summer, the Maryville community has the unique opportunity to send three people to the Soviet Union and one person to Europe. This peace seminar to Russia is two weeks long and involves about two hundred Americans. The Russian peace delegates are Dr. Terry Wade, Charlotte Mostwill, and John Weston, Jr.

The European Peace Seminar is five weeks long and the participants will visit Northern Ireland, Hungary, Germany, England, and Switzerland. Tennessee's representative is Janie Limone, a recent graduate of Maryville College.

The delegates need your support in order to raise money for the trips. How can poor college students help? It's easy. Get sponsors and walk ten miles to promote global peace. It is our future, and it's up to us to preserve it.

Those interested in walking should contact Charlie Parsons (Box 2632). The walk is slated for Saturday, May 12th.

CHOIR MAKES HISTORY

An 83-voice joint College-community choir will present the first performance in the United States of a modern edition of Antonio Lotti's "Mass in A" on Tuesday, May 8, at 8:15 p.m. in Maryville College's Wilson Chapel.

The MC Concert Choir, members of the St. Andrew's Episcopal Choir and the local Foothills Chorale, directed by Robert Ergenbright of the MC music faculty, will sing this work which dates from 1736-1740.

The work has been performed previously, most notably in a German series. Hugh S. Livingston, Jr., Blount County native and now a composer and music editor with the Roger Dean Publishing Company, a division of the Lorenz Corporation of Dayton, Ohio, recently found the "Mass in A." He gave the work to Fredric Woodbridge Wilson to put into modern notation.

A 1969 graduate of Maryville College, Livingston then contacted the College about doing the first national performance of this modern edition that goes back to the original Latin.

Tickets for the May 8 concert cost $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens. Children will be admitted free of charge.

For more information, call 982-6412 in Maryville or 546-6912 in Knoxville.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES
All Seats $2.00 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-3499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
7:15, 3:15, 5:15, 9:15
HARDBODIES
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:10
DOGS OF HELL 3-D
1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
BREAKIN'
1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15
SIXTEEN CANDLES

SPORTS

Softball

by Brian Rigell

The 1984 season has ended for the Lady Scots softball team, and it was a great finish. The Ladies played eight slow pitch games last week and went 4-4. They also ripped through the competition at the WIAC tournament and bourght home the first place trophy.

The week started with a split against Milligan at home on Tuesday, with Milligan taking the first one 5-4 before the Lady Scots bounced back to win 6-4 in the second. On Wednesday the team travelled to Hiwassee to challenge the Lady Tigers' 30-2 record. Unfortunately, the Lady Scots' effort fell short as a result of the outstanding place-hitting done by Hiwassee.

The Lady Tigers took both games by scores of 13-1 and 6-0.

On Friday the Lady Scots began play in the conference tournament and when all was said and done and the dust had cleared, they were tied for the conference title and brought home the hardware. The team dropped the first game to Berea, but managed to win the next three against Asbury (7-4), Centre (17-1), and Transylvania (6-2). Three Maryville players were named to the All-Tournament team - Nancy Koehl, Penny Head, and Denise Penzkofer. Way to be, Ladies!

Outstanding performances were also turned in by Theresa Taylor, Mimi Chesney, and Kandy Schram. Coach Ballard praised the whole team by saying, "Everyone played well, and a few of our girls probably had their best game of the season during the tournament."

Two players who deserve special recognition are Nickie Frazier and Kay Julian. Both Nickie and Kay are seniors. Nickie pitched all eight slow pitch games and made outstanding plays on some shots hit right back to the mound. Kay played a strong and consistent left field all season, and had seven put outs in the last game. You'll be missed, Ladies!

Other people deserving special recognition include excellent grounds keepers (Coach Saylor, Shannon O.Brien, and Danny Bouch) along with the athletic training staff (Lance England and Jeff Sims). Also a special thanks to all the fans who made it to the games - Thank for your support!

Faculty Honored

The Maryville College Board of Directors granted promotions and tenure to four members of the College's faculty during its semi-annual spring meeting held this past weekend on campus.

Promoted to the rank of professor was Dr. Charlotte H. Beck. Victor R. Schoen was named associate professor. Tenure was granted to Dr. William F. Pollard and Dr. Marilyn Pollio.

ECHO EAR

Hey, Yogi!

Good luck this week - You can do it - We both know that. So go to it and prove us right, Huh?!! Love, Boo Boo

To Seniors taking comps: "The oxen are slow, but the earth is patient." Rah!

Good luck with comps, Boo Boo!

Hey animalettes! How 'bout Thursday nite at Casa's . . . or do you want to do the bunny hop instead? Long Island Tea

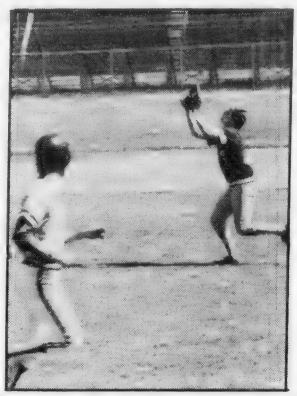
Dot, Susan, Evelyn & Dr. W -
I forgot to tell you; You've all signed up for another conference! This Saturday (April 5th) at Urpula Univ. be ready by 7 a.m. - usual place.
. . . And . . . Uh . . . Have Fun, guys - It'll be a good experience for all of you! -- A Fellow "Orator"

Baseball

by Chris Porter

The Scots last two games to ODAC leader Randolph-Macon (14-0) in the conference last Wednesday. MC had a chance to split with Randy-Mac in the last inning with the tying rum on base and the big hitter coming up, but they couldn't capitalize for the two runs needed to tie!

Pat Moyer pitched the first one and got help from Steve Saylor in the 6th. Randy-Mac got off to an early start, nailing three runs in the 1st and one both in the 2nd and 3rd. The final was 7-2.



The Scots were hitting but once again, they couldn't get the RBI's. The one bright spot in the hitting department occurred in the bottom of the 6th when Eric Etchison pounded a double to left-field and Moyer got a two hit and two-run homer.

Mike Rohan pitched the second game. The defense looked better in that game, holding R-M to only four runs. Etchison did his usual outstanding job at catcher taking a shot from a runner in the 4th to guard the plate from a run.

The Scots, scoreless through five innings, got two in the 6th. Moyer and Rick Carver got hits and Tony Murr walked to load the bases. The Randy-Mac pitcher walked Ron Ramsey and Moyer walked in . Carver scored on a fielders choice hit by Kevin Jenkins, but the inning and the rally ended before the Scots could get another run.

Only two runs down, the defense came up with a double-play and Etchison caught a pop-fly to keep Randy-Mac scoreless.

Offensively, however, the Scots failed to come back in the bottom of the 7th. Saylor got a base when the R-M first-baseman pulled his foot, but Etchison popped out and Moyer struck out after him. With two outs, Carver, the tying run, walke but Murr fouled out to end t game 4-2, with the Scots the losing end.

At printing, the Scots ha left for Lynchburg, VA whe they will open their ODA tournament play. It's a do die situation for the Scots a we would like to wish them luc in their tournament bid.

Donna's Flowers
401 Washington St.
Maryville, TN 37801
982-0006
10% discount on all corsages boutonnieres

COLOR PLUS
Color prints and slides in 1 hour
Complete darkroom supplies
Monday - Saturday 9 a.m. - 9 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m. - 6 p.m.
One Hour Photo & Camera Shop
Red Rood Shopping Center
Maryville, Tennessee 37801

SNACK BAR SPECIALS
New Lunch Specials
Weekly Special
9 in. pizza and med. Coke $2.00
Cheer $1.18
Cup-a-Soup $.95
Planters Snack Cans $1.16
Coke & Diet Coke- 12 pack only $3.12
regularly $3.79
Try the new display of Hostess snacks
For those Special Occasions, order CAKES and COOKIES from the food Service,
Dobbs
DOBBS HOUSES INC
SPECIALS

The Highland Echo

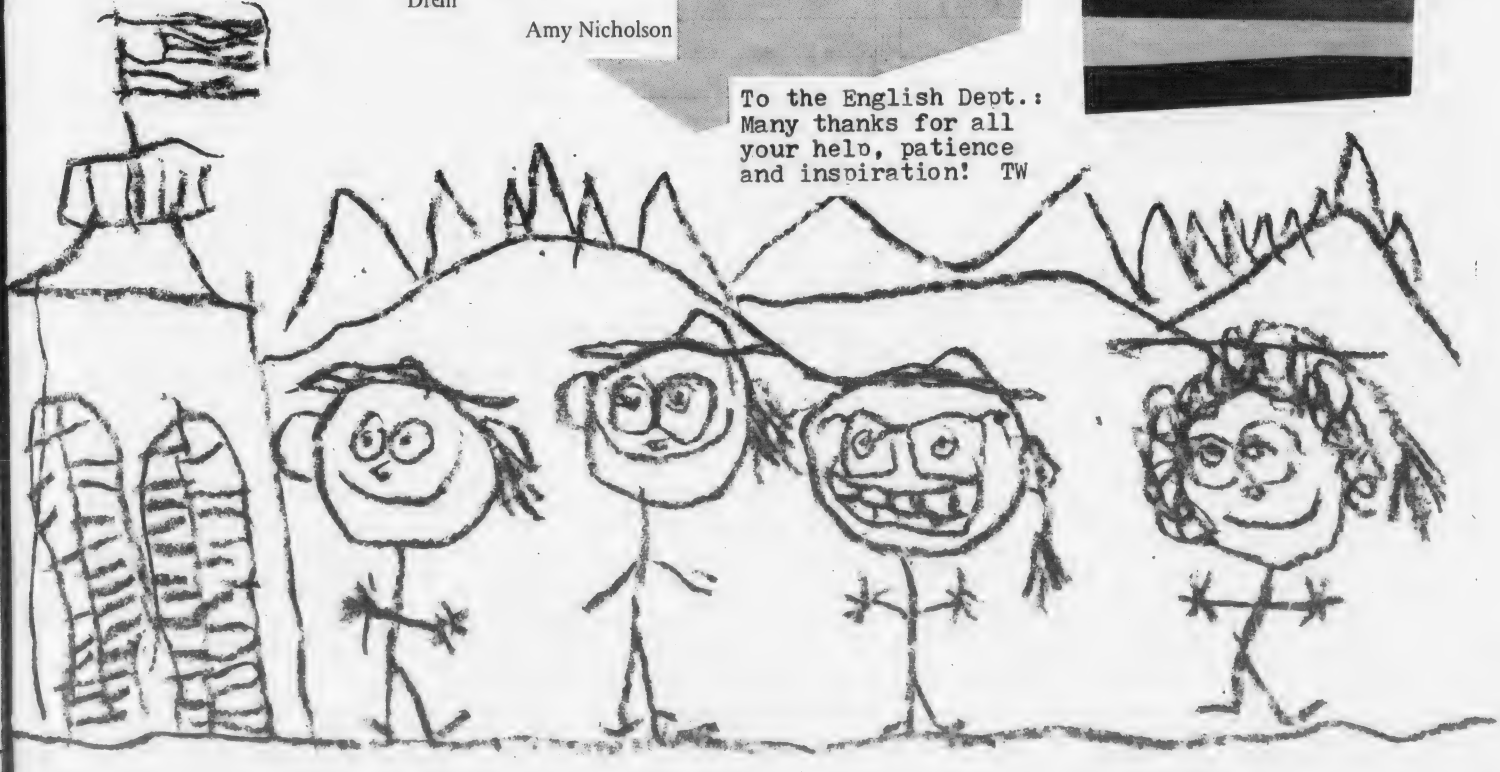
Vol 59 No. 25 Maryville College Friday May 25, 84

Next Saturday, May 26th – two days before our Commencement exercises - I will meet with hundreds of returning alumni. If they are like alumni who have returned in previous years, they will tell me how much their Maryville College education has meant to them -- what a profound difference it has made in their lives.

When you return in the future, I hope that you will be able to say the same thing. I hope you will be able to report on a happy and successful life - due, at least in part, to the solid foundation established at Maryville College.

Like graduates in previous classes, you have paid a substantial price at Maryville College. This is true not only in terms of tuition, but in terms of commitment time, energy, discipline and application of your talents. And, it is now about to pay off for you.

Congratulation!
Wayne Anderson



"What we need is Adult Education . . . "

"Breakdown - go ahead & give it to me!" - The Refugees

Scopin', gotta go scopin!! Live for the day - Carpe Diem

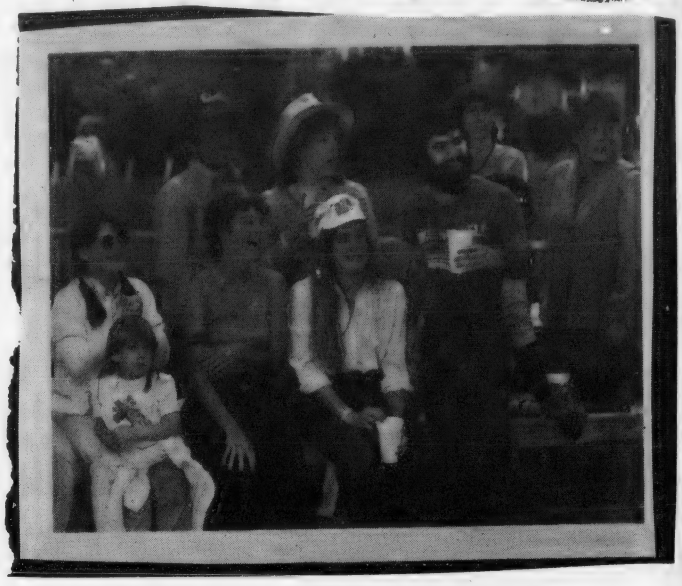
Amy Nicholson

To the English Dept.: Many thanks for all your help, patience and inspiration! TW

HIGHLAND ECHO

AN Allegory

Once upon a time, there was a kingdom, Echophillus, in which there dwelled a princess-of-sorts who was in great distress. Her castle was under seige by a ferocious monster, one which would be satisfied only by her blood. Although the circumstances were dire, the princess managed to send out a plea for help. After much waiting and when her resistance was almost gone, a rebel, child of a distant kingdom, came upon the beseiged castle and heard the now faint cry for help.



The rebel, armed with only ambition, for he had very little experience in the area of ferocious monster killing, set forth to do battle. The ferocious monster, however, blazed out of Echophillus when he saw his adversary, leaving his prey and her nearly demolished castle behind. The rebel rushed to the side of the ailing damsel, only to hear her parting words, "Preserve the castle."

Well, the rebel gave the princess a royal burial and set about the immense task of refortifying the keep. First he sent messengers to his hometown to rally aid. He then gathered the ancient counselors of Echophillus about him for advice. Their message was clear. To rebuildthe castle, he must care about Echophillus. He must rally the people by being relevant and to the point, but he must retain a sense of humor. And he must be creative.

Shortly thereafter the messengers returned with an army of workers who were not only strong, but were endowed with the virtues of the counselors Together, the rebel and his friends worked to rebuild and improve the ancient castle.

Thus they labored diligently until one day when a messenger arrived at the castle with important news: the rebel and some of his friends were desperately needed at home and could they be there by May 29th? Because of his exhaustion, the rebel was glad to leave the keep with his also-tired friends.

But as the time arrived for his departure, the rebel began to reflect upon his experience in Echophillus. He realized that, although he was indeed tired of working on the castle, he had become close to it and was loathe to leave it. Upon consultation with his closest friend and co-worker, he discovered that he was not alone in his sadness. Time, however, did not slow, and the day arrived for his departura "Goodbye everyone! I have enjoyed it all," were the last words they heard as the rebel's dragon carried him and his friend into the dawn.

Included in the cast were the rebel: Marta Wittig the Counselors: Mr. S. LeMay and Dr. Blair, without whom the architectural design of the castle would never have happened.
the closest friend: Peggy Millsaps, to whom I owe more than words can say for her good advise and willing spirit.
the other friends: Amy Waggoner, page and eternally patient in the storms of my decisions;
Brenda G., a fountain in the desert of work;
Chris Porter, who spoke the language of the natives effectively and freely;
Brian Rigell, who was always on time, and faithful to his work;
Ed Welch, high priest of tabernacle affairs and matters of apiritual import;
John Rush, the backseat radical;
Julie Humpert, who's quiet but funny voice gave real panache to the interior design;
ciretta Carpenter, who added joy and laughter to the statues of the gods;
Tara Wey, the perspective and focus of the castle's eye as well as its reporter;
Keith Moore, page to Tara and apt progeny of her art;
Mike Crawford, keeper of the treasury and tax collector;
Pam Mathews, a strong and willing worker;
Terri Roberts, without whom, literally None of this would be possible.
the dragon: Mr. LeMay's car!

Photos by Keith Moore and Deangelo McDaniel
Art and Layout- Marta Wittig.

Printed by the Times

Hope for the best, but prepare for the worst. Learn from yesterday, but live for today and hope for tomorrow. (Thanks, Mom!)

"A weed is but an unloved flower."
FF

FRIDAY MAY 25

I wish to extend my congratulations and best wishes to the graduating seniors in the Class of 1984. I am proud of the collective achievements of this class while at Maryville College. I hope each person takes to his or her future career a sense of pride and strengh from the knowledge that MC has imparted to its seniors a firm foundation for a lifetime of learning.

Jane Richardson
Dean of Students

My job is to shed the light, not to master it! Have Consideration for your fellow man! John Rush

The Light at the End of the Tunnel is usually the headlights of an oncoming train.
Jim Kidder

"The sun'll come up, tomorrow!"

To the dog-ladies: it's been nice knowing you! Write me?

P.S. I think I'll stay on the West Coast this summer; it's saner there.

To all the girls from 3rd floor Davis 1980: I love all of you--you know who you are!
Lisa

/
DS: Oh, wasn't it fine? But ain't life a brook?

To Sharon Crane: May the Lord forgive you for all you've done to all the people here--you know not what you do. A graduating senior.

Commissioned eloquence seems to me tortuous, so I'll avoid that route and get right to the point (Strunk and White would back me up , I think):

1) Like most worthwhile things, MC yields only what you put into it. A little personal effort can make this a fine place to grow.

2) The campus-wide concern for peace has helped alleviate much of mine and others' "atomic anxiety." I'm greatful for that.

3) Finally: to CC I will endless pens and reams of paper for both her rapport with the Muse and her extensive correspondence. (Good luck with Impressions next year.)

To AW I will the persistence and inspiration to keep the Echo going next year.

To CK I will my teeny-bopperish affection for Boy George--not that he needs it, but because he is one of the few who would appreciate it. (Keep in touch!)

To MW I say simply "Thanks." For everything.

G.O.4 is dissolved but in body, not in spirit. PM

From Sharon Crane, Director of Residence Life and Student Programming:
" Remember the all-night movies in the lobby of Lloyd.
"What's the game plan and deal with it?
"How many times did they yell 'Porter's in the dorm!'?
Parting thoughts would be from Jackson Browne: "Why Don't You Stay Just a Little Bit Longer?"
"All right, bye, bye. (Remember the movie)."

HIGHLAND ECHO

LAST WORDS

"Brian?"
"Yes, Bob,"
"I want to spill you!"

A.K.W. - You are wonderful - don't ever stop saying, "Why not".

Last words (or a graduating Senior's final thoughts upon a most significant occasion)

By Peggy Millsaps

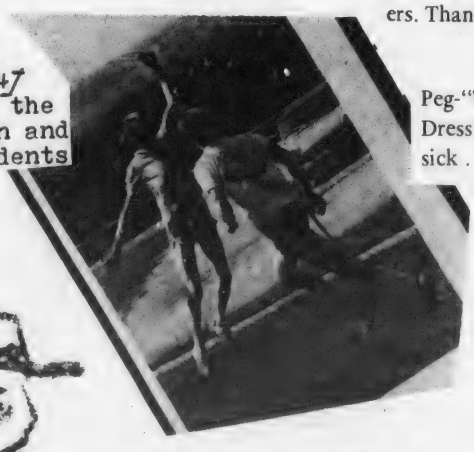
"Okay, gang," I say to the cardboard boxes and trunks surrounding me like a ring of wolves, ravenous square mouths stretching open. "This is it. You'll never be stuffed with collegiate paraphenalia again. You may be covered with contact paper and recycled as coffe tables in a budget apartment or given to a friend when her cat's "due date" approache but never, never agian will you bear posters, pennants, Smurf alarm clocks, orange and garnet jerseys, spiral notebooks, ye low highlighters, white out, dilapidated Cliff notes, Psychedelic Furs al bums, or independent study guides. No,never again will you be called on to serve duty in a college dormitory."

Saying that, I realize I could become emotional. But Kleenex are in short supply (I alloted that portion of my budget to extra stamps) and besides, nothing is more insufferable than a Senior who spent a solid portion of her college years wishing she were somewhere else (anywhere--hiking through Zanzibar, exercising thoroughbreds at Belmont Park, sweeping cigarette butts frm the Rolling Stones' rehearsal hall) becoming absolutely maudlin about finally getting her wish.

Still, now that I'm actually going to be Somewhere Else very soon, I no longer find the Indians' sentiments upon embarking on the Trail of Tears entirely alien to my experience.

Friends ask, " So, how's it feel to be cutting out soon? Great, eh?" they boom. "Betcha can't wait to get rid of all those books. Just think- no more independent study!"

"You must really be proud," a super-achieving uncle assures me. "Nothing for you to do now but go out there and conquer the world." "Oh, and think of this, dear," says an aunt who wouldn't be caught dead in uncoordinated shoes and purse. "Now you can have decent furniture and a real color scheme. No more barrack's life in the dorm."



But I keep the hesitancy provoked by such comments to myself. Instead, I smile and offer "you bet;" or some other pleasant banality.

Daily P.O. Box Flower - Giver are Happiness breeders. Thanks!

Beaver Cleaver is a genius- Steve Sipple

From Martha Hess, Registrar:
"I hope that they /the class of 1984/ will be active in the Alumni Association and will recruite students for MC.

Peg-"Wow! Look at that Dress!" "I'm going to be sick . . .

"Support bastard futilism" Dr. Walker & Kratz English History Class, Sophomore year!

FRIDAY MAY 25

(cont'd)

The truth is, I'm not so sure how I feel about impending color schemes or even giving up independent study--much less, conquering the world. (Tall order for one who can barely keep her room clean!) Contrary to what I've told everyone else and what I've thought myself a few times, being here hasn't been all that bad.

True, I bitterly regret that my peak concentration hours coincide with peak tanning hours and so I've had to give up tanning for reading Milton. And I will never entirely discredit having to study for a Japanese exam with missing the John Cougar concert. And I know my not seeing the cars, furs, and paste jewels of "Dynasty" for the past several weeks is directly attributable to my being embroiled in East Asian studies this term.

But I've gained some things in the long run, I think. I am as proud of my newly typed, pleasingly thick independent study as Rodin must have been at the unveiling of the Thinker. And there have been times, reading Milton on the balcony with the scent of (someone else's) coconut suntan oil and the sound of (someone else's) taped music wafting up when I believed with all my heart the old adage that the pen is mightier than the sword. And living in a pre-fab space with only a bed, a desk, a dresser, and my own ingenuity to create a livable environment has taught me that home is where you make it (and where you plug in your stereo).

I wouldn't have said all this the week of comps, of course. Then all I wanted was twenty-fours' recuperative sleep and a ticket home. But I learned something there, too: that cramming is an art, that long-term memory is about as reliable as a lifeboat that leaks, and that knowing enough about your major to write about it articulately for two days is not an unreasonable requirement.

So, what are my, the presumably enviable Senior's feelings upon this mon umental occasion of "cutting out?"

In a word, mixed.

"C'mon, you all . . . you know I like to be dominated."

Angie & Heidi - shoot for the C's! We love you. - Mary & Amy

I'm dead for him.

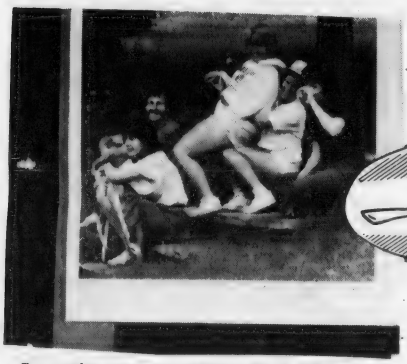
As Zoo zooms into destiny, she remembers the MC keeper.

To "Og" I leave Saturday full of leisure, joy, money and beer . . . "What's wrong? you been fighting?" MW

"Remember kids, when writing MC term papers, regularity counts."

Remember the cafe coffin of morphine.

HIGHLAND ECHO



Brian: thanks for puting up with so much for so long. You've been a good sport about every thing. I'll miss you and your sour pout.

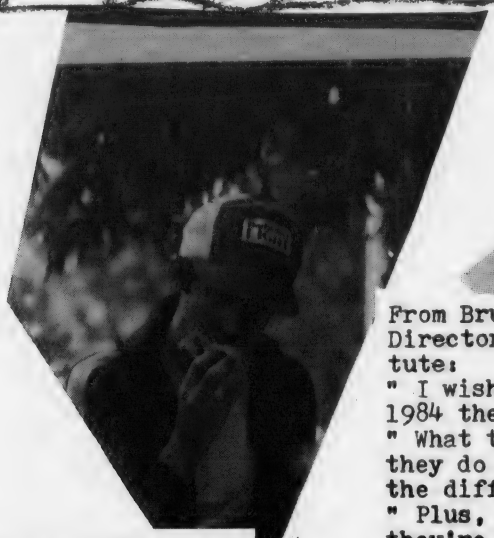
Sister Village Voicer: How can I say adieu when I'll be beating NY's sidewalks and looking for your doorway? vvp-SWF

When you came to Maryville College, you probably were more talented than you realized, less self-assured than you wanted to appear, and not at all sure how you should commit your life. I hope your years here have helped you discover all you are able to do, given you the courage to be yourself, and prepared you to serve a hurting world.

Al Perkins

To the class of 84--Party & enjoy life. Lori--keep the faith. It will all work out. Son't forget all thos great times, expecial ly spring break. Kim be--thanks for always listening. Don't wor ry, I won't forget al those drinking study sessions. Laurie, Ki Carol, Jenni, Lisa, Mary Lea--good luck i whatever you do, Kee in touch. Roxanne--Good Luck! You'll need it. Al--thanks for being such a good friend. I'll never forget you! I now leave for a new life, but I won't forget good ole MC. Margaret Andrews.

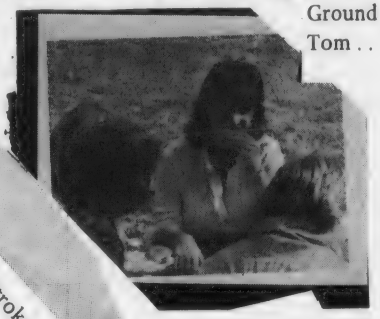
Constance: Lunch will never be the same without your spot checks. You've been a treasure and a nice study break. Have a good life& a good ....



To John Wright: Dance, Dance, Dance! Sing, Sing, Sing! But most of all, be happy. Remember: Blount County Blunt _____. Love, Lisa

Chandra: Be good, stay on your diet, and no more late night emergencies! Good luck next year and always. Thanks for all your wise insight. Love, Lisa

Carol and Laurie: Remember, "Morning comes when you call," so "Keep on shinin'" !! Love ya, Lisa



My Children have been wonderful to me! Thanks!
Mama

Have a good life. Make the most of everyday.

Wilma

Ground Control to Major Tom . . .

"Stroke me, Stroke me"

From Bruce Guillaume, Director of the Institute:
" I wish the class of 1984 the best.
" What they do and how they do it makes all the difference.
" Plus, as long as they're concerned about quality, they will excell in their goals."

Here's to toga parties - Flannigans - Darrly's - Carol at Darryl's - the Ladies at Doodle's - the pictures at Hawkeye's Corner - the "Cold water" at the "Y" in the mountains - climbing trees during May Madness - Broken light bulbs at Spinning Wheels - Later Days to Maryville College. - Almost Forgot - Here's to Chip-n-dales men.

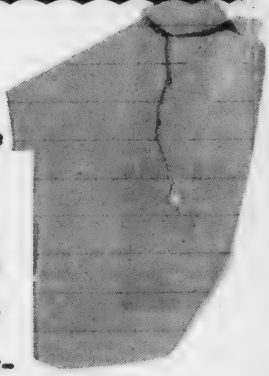
Chip

As you anticipate the future, may friendships and experiences at Maryville College linger, yet may you have the courage to face future challenges with excitment and enthusiasm. "Give the world the best you have and the best will come back to you." May God guide and watch over you so that your life is filled with happiness and success.

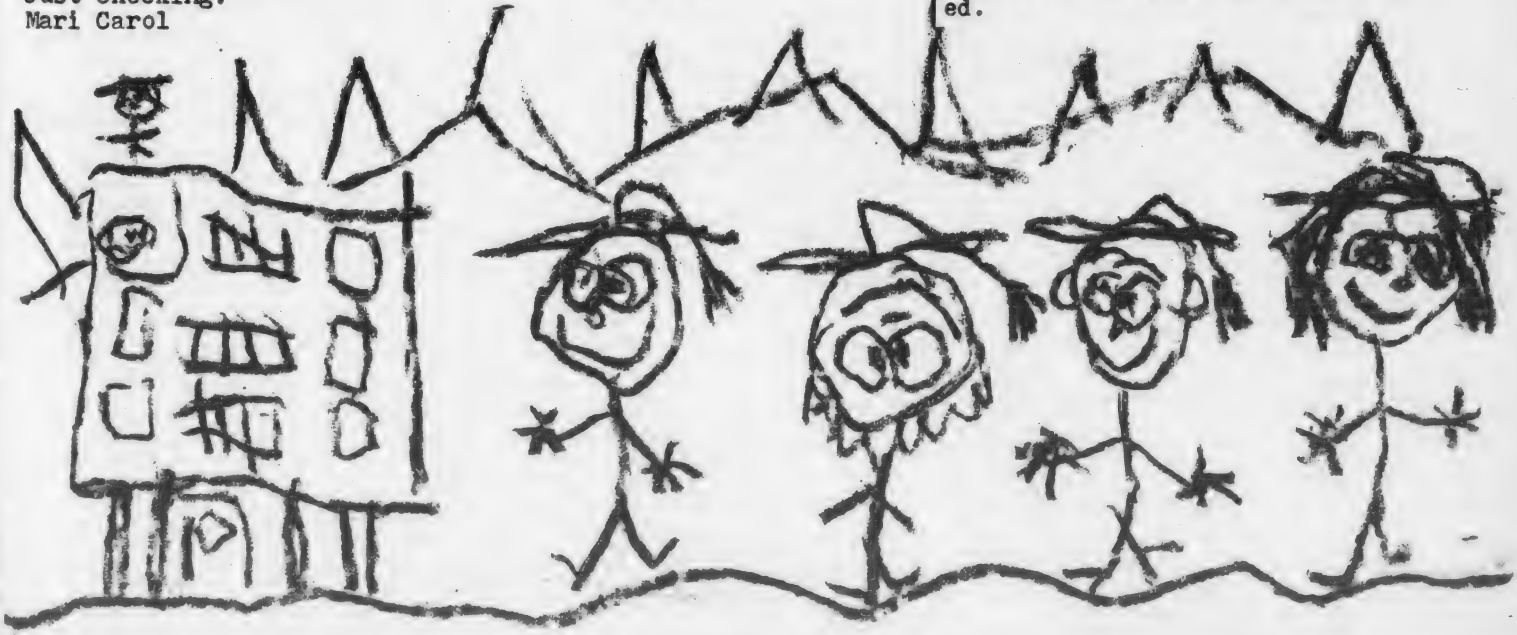
Best Wishes,
The Admisssions Staff

To my polygamist friends: Remember it as a Rite of Passage. Now we became Innocents Abroad! HA

Paul Mills - We'll miss those heated nights in your room,
From THE BLOB (A., W.,& M.)



R.C.--Adam Ant lives!



"Study break?, Sure come by at one."

B.H. The Cloud has now come down to earth - or is t that you have soared to meet it? Anyway, it's nice to be able to go inside to play at last.

To Trent Gilmore I will: more self-confidence in your abilities, more aggressiveness, and the inner strength to stand up for who are and what you believe in. Always remember: That's not it!! Sing forever, Trent, and don't let anyone ever tell you you're not special. You are loved.

Gail: What's the definition of cohesive??
Just checking!
Mari Carol

GOOD BYE ECH

"We Don't Need No Education . . ."

T.W. You're heart. I believe in you. M.W.

To Dr. Blair I leave bubble-gum memories.

E-um. Backgammon? I'm going to miss your rapid-fire smile. Be true to yourself. Me-um.

You win, you some some! Tom

MLD: It'll take a-while, but angry grey eyes cool down. Ireland's still in, unless, of course, there's something else you've forgotten to tell me? MCJ

To my fellow Ben Hornsby, magic fingers baby! - Amy Nic

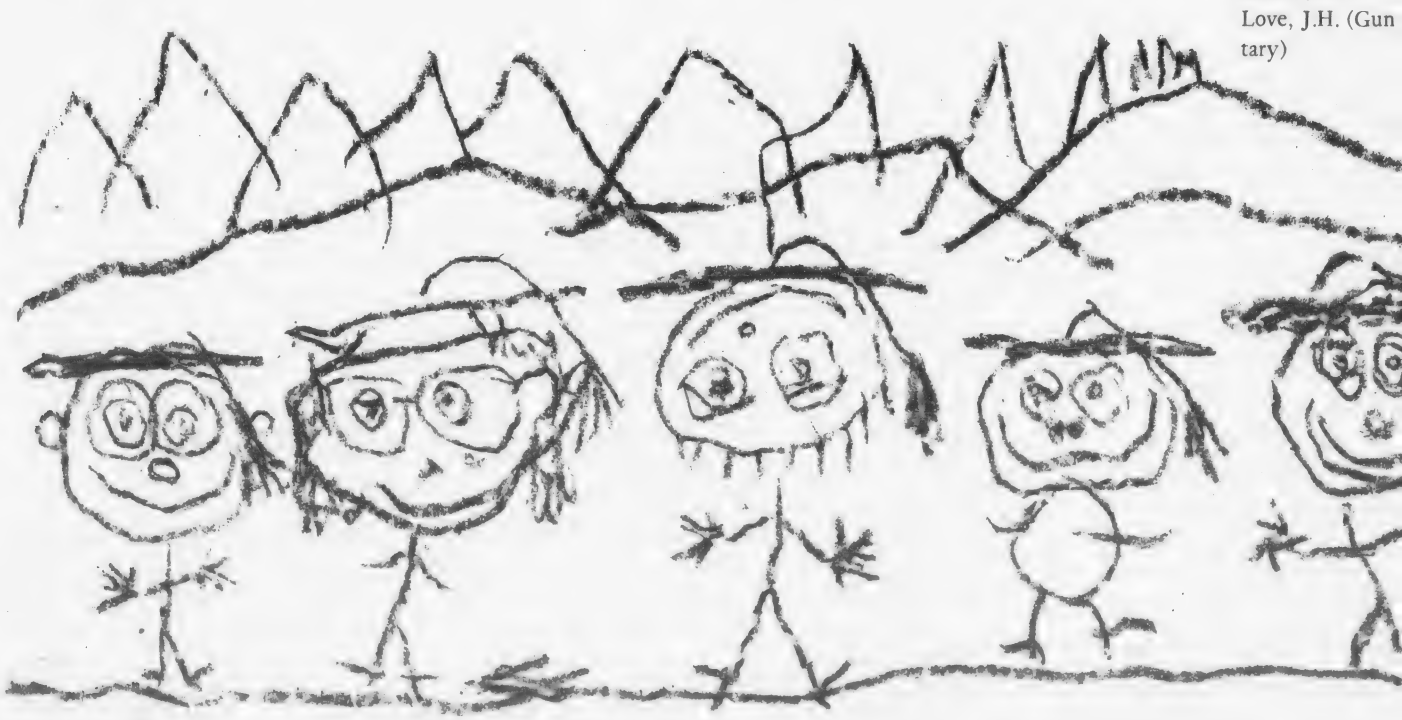
Jenni: What can be said? We made It! We have so many "remember when's"?!! Through the good and the bad-- thanks. I love you. The best to you always. A fellow mountain girl.

To all the different roommates over the four years, Susan, Kim, Caroline, Laurie, and Jenni: truly you have all been individuals in your own right. Shoot for the stars, girls! Love, Lisa

Goodbye friends and loved ones,
Goodbye trees, goodbye Magic & friends
Goodbye sidewalks
Goodbye trenches
Goodbye Pearson's Food
Goodbye Hollywood
Goodbye my baby
Goodbye on shoes at Wal-Mart
Goodbye Cruel World.

Anonymously,
Goodbye

As I pass through the Gates of Maryville one last time I have several memories I will always cherish. The gourmet cuisine served by our expert cooking staff, the well-kept dormitories, the core courses that made me into a well-rounded person, and the beautiful women of Maryville College. In the corrupted words of General Douglas MacArthur - I shall not return.



"Life is like a can of beer - you want to drink it all the time."

To all my Buddies: Good luck, and have lots of fun next year. I hope that the love and friendship continues to grow between you next year. T-Dub Buffy, Bufford and Myah-heads reign forever. That for cause that why! J.D.

"Test tomorrow? Okay. Let's have a study group meeting at 10 o'clock. I'll buy the beer!"

J.L. (Gun Club We'll always be sive members. about you! Love, J.H. (Gun tary)

1984 - 1985

the highland echo

Vol. 70, No. 1 MARYVILLE COLLEGE FRIDAY' September 21, 1984

New Faculty Arrive

by Pam Mathews

The new faces on campus this fall will not solely be composed of Freshmen and transfer students. Included will be seven new faculty members here at MC.

Joining the Department of Languages and Literature are Drs. Susan Schnieble, assistant professor of Comparative Literature, and Edwin Lee Conner.

In 1971, Dr. Schnieble received her Bachelor of Arts dealing with Germanic languages and literature from Emmanuel College in Boston, her home town. At Rutgers University, she earned her Master of Arts degree in 1975. She completed her Ph. D. degree with honors in 1981 at the University Enlangen Nuremberg in West Germany. During May of 1983, her book based on her dissertation, The Reception of Herman Melville in German Criticism, 1847-1933, was published.

Completing requirements for his Ph. D., Mr Edwin Lee Conner is from Vanderbilt University. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree in English with honors from the University of the South at Sewanee, in 1968, and his Master of Arts degree in Southern Literature in 1976 from Vanderbilt.

Mr. Connor

The two appointments in the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation are Dr. Thomas L. Cronan III and Ms. Marlene Annette Sack. Dr. Cronan is the new chairman of the department, replacing Edith Largen. Ms. Sack will be an instructor.

Ms. Sack

Dr. Cronan transferred to MC from the Citadel in Charleston, SC where he was an Associate Professor in the physical education department last year. He received his Bachelor of Science degree in physical education at Louisianna State University in 1965, and his Master of Education degree in physical education at Northwestern in 1968.

Dr. Cronan stated that he is impressed with the student body. "They're friendly and seem to be well-mannered, courteous, and bright."

Prior to joining MC, Marlene Sack was a faculty member at State University of New York at Cortland and the Thompkins Cortland Community College.In 1973, Ms. Sack received her Bachelor of Arts degree in physical education specialization in Marshall, Minnesota, and last March she obtained her Master of Arts degree in Recreation, Parks and Leisure Studies from the University of Minnesota.

Other appointments to the MC faculty are Alicia Greenberg, assistant professor of business, Dr. Eileen Riordan, associate professor of biology, and Jiansheng Wu, and instructor in computer science and mathematics.

Mrs. Greenberg graduated summa cum laude from American University in Washington, D.C. in 1977 with a Bachelor of Science in accounting. Presently a candidate for the Doctor of Business Administration degree in accounting at UTK, she taught there as a graduate assistant and also received her Master of Accounting degree from UT in 1983.

"I'm pleased with how every one cares about the turning out of well-educated people here," she stated. "It's a pleasure to be part of the academic atmosphere."

Dr. Eileen Riordan comes to MC from Saint John's University in Collegeville, Minnesota. In 1946, she received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Emmanuel College. In 1956, she earned her Master of Arts degree in zoology with specialization in entomology at Madras College in Madras, India. She received her Ph.D. degree in biology at Boston College Graduate School of Arts and Sciences in 1976.

"I feel very much at home here. People have been welcoming." Dr. Riordan said.

"I wish to communicate my enthusiasm and spirit to the students, and I also hope to learn from them as well as them learning from me."

Jiansheng Wu was a teaching assistant at Clarkson College in Potsdam, N.Y. prior to coming to MC. She received a Master of Science Degree in Mathematics and Computer Science at Clarkson College. At SUNY-Binghampton, she graduated with the distinction of earning a Bachelor of Science degree in computer science and also graduated with high honor from Tompkins Cortland Community College in Drysden, N.Y. receiving an Associate of Science degree.

Dr. Riordan

Ms. Wu said that she liked Maryville College and the community. "The campus is so pretty, and the people are friendly, too," she said. "People in the area also seem to care about Maryville College."

MC would like to extend a warm welcome to the new faculty joining the college community.

Ms. Wu

Campus Calendar

Friday, Sept. 21. . . . . Lady Scots Volleyball vs. Tusculum, 5:30 p.m. Movies sponsored by Peace Education Task Force. 7:00 p.m. Snack Bar

Saturday, Sept. 22. . . . . Soccer vs. Vanderbilt, 2:00 p.m. Football—Scots at Bridgewater Volleyball—Covenant Tournament. First day of Autumn

Monday, Sept. 24. . . . . Volleyball at Carson—Newman, 6:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept 25. . . . . Mid-Week Worship, 9:15 a.m., CCM.

Wednesday, Sept. 26. . . . . Volleyball vs. University of the South, 6:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 27. . . . . 11:15-CIV, Doug Marlette, political cartoonist. FAC Music Hall. Rosh Hashbanah

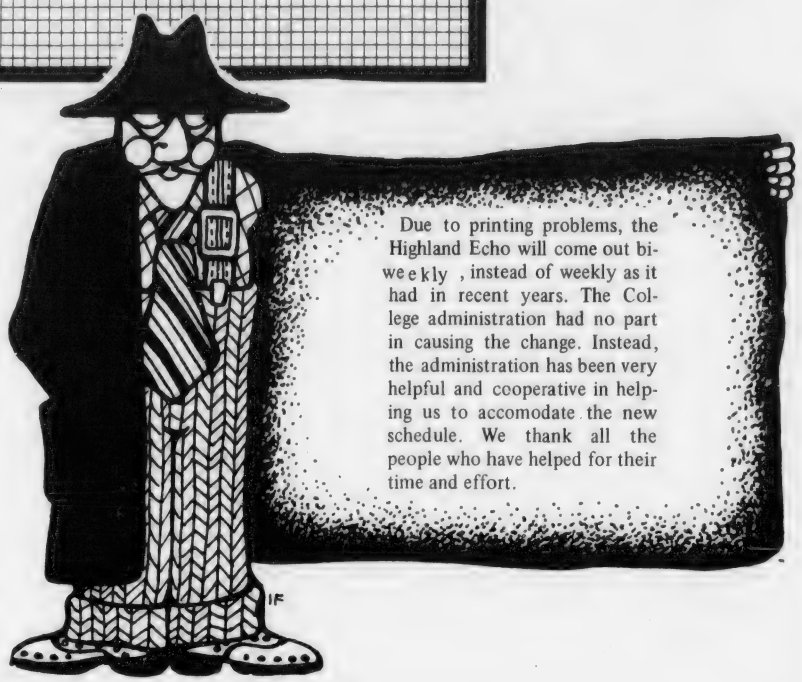
Friday, Sept. 28. . . . . Soccer at Eastern Mennonite, 3:30 p.m. Volleyball, MC Invitational, 5:30 p.m. Pep Rally, Time and Location TBA.

Wednesday, Oct. 3. . . . . ACC retreat, 3:30 p.m.

Thursday, Oct 4. . . . . 11:15-CIV film, "Strangers and Kin." FAC Music Hall.

Editorial

It's an interesting job, this editorial position. I planned all spring and summer to be organized about getting the ECHO out every week. After, all, if you're organized enough, what can go wrong? Forgive me; we are all naive at one time or another, but I just happened to be a little more naive than most.



Oh, the usual problems cropped up: trying to find stories and writers, trying to get the ECHO office ready for human habitation, broken typewriters, broken typewriters. . . and. . .more broken typewriters. For the most part these small crises are not very hard to handle.

I did begin to worry a bit, though, when a not-so-unusual problem cropped up. We had a problem getting the paper printed, and as we mulled over possible solutuions, I worried a little more.

Last week, though, we came to a decision about the paper. We are experimenting with the relatively new idea of having an eight-page, bi-weekly ECHO. Hopefully, we will be able to put out a paper of much more quality than we otherwise would have been able to do.

This decision to publish a bi-weekly newspaper was not the result of any administrative moves or budget problems; it was a practical solution to some very real crises. We do feel that the ECHO will be much better off for it.

Now I can take a breather and just go back to dealing with broken typewriters. . . .

Due to printing problems, the Highland Echo will come out bi-weekly, instead of weekly as it had in recent years. The College administration had no part in causing the change. Instead, the administration has been very helpful and cooperative in helping us to accomodate the new schedule. We thank all the people who have helped for their time and effort.

Something
Personal To Say?

Whisper It In

THE ECHO EAR

The Highland Echo

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF.....AMY WAGGONER
ASSISTANT EDITOR.....PAM MATHEWS
SPORTS EDITOR.....RICK CARVER
COPY EDITOR.....TERESA WELCH
PHOTO EDITOR.....KEITH MOORE
BUSINESS MANAGER.....MIKE CRAWFORD
TYPIST.....KATHY HARRILL
STAFF.....JULIE HUMPERT,
CIRETTA CARPENTER,
ED WELCH,
ED STUECKLE,
BRIAN RIGELL,
LISA HARVEY,
NANCY JONES,
LAURA HART.

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to The Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, TN, 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo are not necessarily those of the editor, staff and/or College administration.

The Highland Echo is a member of the College Press Service (CPS) and is printed by the Maryville—Alcoa Daily Times on environmentally safe, biodegradable paper.

Work Together

Recently we have heard many complaints from students about the changes in policy at the library, especially the changes in library hours. These students do have some valid points. The library closes one hour earlier on weeknights, and is open only three hours on Saturday afternoons, a cutback of fully fifty percent.

The cutback on weeknights is almost negligible, for students have fourteen hours in which to do their library research; however, the Saturday cutback does make a big difference. At a time when we suddenly have more classes thrust upon us, and therefore less time to spend in the library each day, Saturdays become crucial for those who must do time-consuming research work. Particularly as students enter their Junior and Senior years and must face major research papers and Independent Studies, they realize the need for Saturday research sessions.

The library staff, needless to say, has a less than enviable position; they seem to be caught in the middle. The library is understaffed, and the staff wants to be available all the time for students. Unfortunately, they were forced to choose either to have a librarian on call at all times when the library is open or to be open longer hours and at times be staffed only by students.

We can see why the staff decided in favor of fewer hours, for it is important that help be available for students who need it. Perhaps the students and staff could cooperate on solving these problems. We suggest that the library might be able to remain open a little longer and, during those least-used hours have only student help. This is merely one suggestion; others might be more practical.

The library staff wants to help the students as much as possible, so we suggest cooperation of students and staff for a compromise solution.

MC Receives Scholarship Grants

Maryville College has received an additonal grant of $25,000 from the Charlotte W. Newcombe Foundation of Princeton, N.J., for scholarship support at the college, Robert A. "'Archie" Ellis Jr., MC Vice President for development announced.

Of the $25,000, MC will use $15,000 to provide current scholarships for the upcoming 1984-85 academic year.The remaining $10,000 will be added to the Charlotte W. Newcombe Endowed Scholarship Fund established at the college last year with $10,000 from another $25,000 grant, Ellis explained.

Karen Shafer, a senior sign language interpreting major from Asheville, N.C., this fall will receive the first scholarship from this endowed fund.

This latest grant brings to $65,000 the total MC has received from the Charlotte W. Newcombe Foundation since 1982.

The Foundation provides scholarships for students from economically depressed areas and/or minority students attending selected institutions which are related to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The Foundation makes grants only to ,'e instituitons and not to individuals.

Maryville is one of 14 Presbyterian Church-related institutions of higher education which have received from the Foundation grants totaling $359,000. The colleges selected must serve populations of minority and/or economically disadvantaged students and have limited resources available for scholarship aid.

Grants in this program are made in recognition of the late Mrs. Charlotte W. Newcombe's life-long commitment to the Presbyterian Church and her interest in church-related colleges.

A native of Philadelphia, Pa., Mrs. Newcombe never attended college because of impaired vision but sent the children of many of her friends to college. She established the Charlotte W. Newcombe Foundation to continue her scholarship gifts after her death. She died in 1979.

The Tennessee Division of Robertshaw Controls Company Knoxville, through its Charitable and Educational Trust Fund in Richmond, Va., has established a scholarship endowment for science and engineering students at Maryville College.

MC Vice President for Development, Robert A. "Archie" Ellis Jr. announced that Robertshaw Controls has pledged to give a total of $15,000 over a 10-year period to fund the endowment which will provide scholarships for students in the College's Dual Degree Engineering Program.

"We are extremely grateful for this generous support from Robertshaw Controls Company," Ellis said. "This new endowment will enable Maryville College not only to provide financial assistance to current students majoring in science and engineering, but also to attract more young people interested in careers in these important fields."

Through cooperative arrangements with the Georgia Institute of Technology and the University of Tennessee-Knoxville, Maryville College students can combine extensive preparation in the liberal arts with professional training in engineering, Ellis explained.

Students who complete the five-year Dual Degree Program earn the B.A. degree from Maryville and the B.S. in engineering degree from either Georgia Tech or UTK.

Robertshaw Controls Company manufactures thermostats for automobiles and is the number one supplier for several major auto companies. Approximately 1,400 people now work in the Knoxville Plant which has been in operation there since the early 1900s.

In the News

Sharlene Wells, a Mormon Sunday school teacher, was crowned Miss America on Saturday, Sept. 15. She says she has no skeletons in her closet.

Princess Diana gave birth to another boy, Henry Charles Albert David, on Sept. 15.

Hurricane Diana ripped through Florida and South Carolina last week, forcing residents to stay in emergency shelters and doing extensive damage to property.

The United Auto Workers Union struck 13 General Motors Corp. plants over contract disputes when their previous contract expired on Sept. 14.

In Tuscon, Ariz., Air Force Capt. Dennis Reimer, 30, was arrested and charged with leading a burglary ring. He was evaluated and psychiatrists said he was mentally disturbed. Reimer was commander of a Titan nuclear missile crew.

Knoxville city school officials said Tuesday that the city school system pays maintenance crews more than it pays its teachers with bachelor's and master's degrees.

Fall Play Announced

by Teresa Welch

The MC Playhouse and Playmakers will present a joint production of "Alice in Blunderland," November 9, 10, 14, 16, and 17. The play is a musical parody of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland."

Written by LEGACY, Inc., an interfaith, non-political action group, "Alice in Blunderland" uses whimsical but satiric characters to present a subtle plea for world peace.

Despite some skeptics' claims that the play is dangerously political in its urging a nuclear freeze, LEGACY spokesmen are optimistic that they can plant a seed of Christian concern for the world through "Alice." The characters and songs are humorous, but powerful.

The play is intended to combat apathy about peace issues rather than to challenge any social or political standpoints. During her journey through Blunderland to find the truth, Alice encounters battling superpowers, politicians, profiteers and businessmen, and learns their views on the issue of fairy dust.

Only the rabbit seems to understand the threat of fairy dust and he tries to explain the danger to Alice. Alice grows through her visit to Blunderland, and she must ultimately return to her own world and share her understanding.

If you would like to help on a technical crew for the show, positions are still available.

CF Week Begins

Charlie Daniels, Tennessee's own country music star is serving as the 1984-85 Honorary Chairman for the Tennessee Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. The goal during National CF Week, September 16-22, is to alert parents of young children to the vital importance of early detection of CF. At stake could be their child's breath and life.

Cystic fibrosis is America's number one inherited killer of children and young adults. It suffocates and starves the body by producing a thick, sticky mucus that clogs the lungs and impairs digestion. Symptoms of CF are an unusually salty taste to the child's skin, a major early warning sign of CF. Other symptoms are: recurrent wheezing, persistent cough, pneumonia more than once, excessive appetite along with poor weight gain and clubbing or enlargement of the fingertips.

Research and treatment techniques have helped prolong the lives of people with CF, but there is still no test to identify the approximately 10 million Americans who are carriers of the gene. Scientists are working on genetic answers, as well as a prenatal test to identify CF in an unborn child.

During National CF Week, the Tennessee Chapter will focus on fund-raising activities and public education. In conjunction with CF Week, Bike-A-Thons, Radio-Thons, Jail Bails and other special events will be held statewide on September 15 and September 22 to kick off the Foundation's Fall CLC.

For more information about CF, please contact the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, Tennessee Chapter, at 4004 Hillsboro Road, Suite 229, Nashville, Tennessee 37215 or phone: 1-800-824-5061.

Task Force Active

by Ed Welch

Are you registered to vote? Do you know how to vote absentee if you are not a Tennessee resident? Are you familiar with the terms "contras" and "Sandinistas"? Are you concerned with nuclear arms proliferation? Do you even care? Well, if you do, and if any of the questions have you stumped or interested, the Peace Education Task Force may be for you.

The Peace Education Task Force educates the college community on peace-making issues and promotes political involvement. In the past, this non-partisan group has sponsored and supported peace rallies, lecture series, and even peace educationtrips to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Already this year, the Peace Task Force has activities planned. On Oct. 1-4 in Montreal, N.C., there will be a peace seminar concerned with problems in Central America. Then, on Nov. 8-10, Dr. David Cartlidge and others will be directing a seminar on incorporating peace studies into college activities. Also, the Task Force hopes to enable students to witness the Victor Ashe/ Albert Gore debates in Nashville in early October.

The Peace Education Task Force needs student involvement. Interested students are encouraged to see Dr. Jim Pickens, Sharon Crane, Kati Tabor, or Ciretta Carpenter. Be on the alert for meetings It could make a world of difference.

Who were those masked people?

The Office of Student Affairs announces the start of a new program at Maryville College, the "Staff Member of the Month" award. Nine awards will be given this year to the outstanding staff member from any department on campus.

This month's award goes to Sharon Crane, Director of Residential Life/Student Programming. Sharon is a 1974 graduate of Maryville College. She and her husband, Tillman, are residents of Maryville.

Dear Diary . . .

by Laura Hart

It's almost 12:30 a.m. I decided to take a break from the mega reading and watch a little T.V. Well, Johnny wasn't on, so I flicked the channels around and I FOUND SOMETHING TO WATCH. . .

Oh, no, not again, one of those missionary programs showing the starving people. I've seen that kind of program over and over again. I usually turn it off, because I don't want to know about their pain or how bad it is. They're so far away. When the program ends, I won't hear about it again. I'm not obligated to do anything.

How horrible to think like that , I know, and I'm guilty of it. There are always reasons to NOT do something and then there are reasons to DO something.

Tonight I finally decided to sit through the program. How much longer could I run away from it anyway? I'm sorry to say it was what I expected. . .malnourished children with their ribs showing, infected eyes with puss seeping from them and thousands travelling for miles miles to get food or medical help, usually both. The food wasn't always there though; it had run out. There was despair around every corner and yet with it there was a ray of hope, but death was right behind it.

I've decided not to run away this time. Heck, I can do without something each month. Nothing is that important to me, except saving a life.

P.S. I just called World Vision (1-800-423-4200). Ahhh, what a feeling. I've done something worthwhile, all right!!

Circle K

Teresa Welch

Circle K is a campus and community service organization affiliated with the Maryville and Alcoa Kiwanis Clubs. Amy Neary, recording secretary for Circle K, says membership is growing and encourages anyone to get involved.

The club's Big Brother/Big Sister program, in which members befriend needy children in the community, received first-place honors for club project at last year's regional convention. The club plans to continue this program and will also launch some new programs during 1984-85.

A dance-a-thon for Muscular Dystrophy is in the works and the group plans to rotate shifts helping out at the Alcoa Recycling Center.

On campus, Circle K plans to work on clearing up the grounds of Morningside, the old Walker home in the college woods. The picnic area is again suffering from disuse, so Circle K hopes to clear it and strive to keep it clear by promoting its use by campus groups.

This year's Circle K officers are: Kevin O'Reilly, president; Paula Walton, vice president; Amy Neary, recording secretary; Sharon Pimm, corresponding secretary; Lenida Hawkins, treasurer; and John Hiedelberg, historian.

Circle K is a rewarding, and enjoyable, experience. If you want to learn more, feel welcome to attend any meeting (every Thursday at 7 p.m. in Fayerweather 201), or contact a Circle K member or officer.

Library Changes

The Lamar Memorial Library announces the following changes in audio-visual (AV) services. Saundra Stephens has been appointed Audiovisual Assistant, in charge ot reservations and equipment. Reservations should be made 48 hours in advance, from 8am to 12N, with Miss Stephens (ext.257).

As in the past, there is no charge for class-related use of AV equipment. Recreational use is subject to rental fees ranging from $3.00 for a cassette recorder to $10.00 for a videocassette recorder. The fees, lower than those charged by commercial firms, will help defray maintenance and repair costs for equipment. Borrowers are responsible for damage or loss.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.25 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15
"UNTIL SEPTEMBER" (R)

1:00, 3:00, 5:00
SEVEN MAGNIFICENT GLADIATORS (PG)
7:00, 9:00
EVIL THAT MEN DO (R)

12:45, 2:50, 4:55, 7:00, 9:05
ALL OF ME
STEVE MARTIN
LILY TOMLIN
PG

1:00, 3:00, 5:00
"THE WARRIOR AND THE SORCERESS" (R)
7:00, 9:00
PURPLE RAIN R

The Salon that makes the difference...

SCHMIDT & designers

Serving Men & Women

Offers You a
SCOTTY DOG DEAL

20% OFF
Any Salon Service

When you present your MC I.D. Card

Conveniently located in the Greenbelt Village
Next to Sky City

Appointments taken, but not necessary

983-8428

Owned and managed by an MC alumnus

Sports

Charlie Hustle does it again!

Scots Kick Into Soccer

by Rick Carver

Third year Coach Gary Leventhal has concluded a successful recruiting campaign with 8 hand-picked, quality players for his 1984 soccer team. Leventhal had nothing but praise to say for his squad and commented that this year's team is made up of "the most mature, most skilled, and best all-around student-athletes ever to play soccer on this campus."

The backing of this team comes from some tremendous Atlanta talent. Key performers in their first year at MC are transfer fullback Danny Clark, freshman midfielder Adolpho Prieto, freshman fullback Walter Walsh, freshman forward Scott Williams, and freshman defender Adrian "A.D." Jordan.

Returning to support these standout newcomers are such stellar performers as two-time all ODAC midfielder Rethabile Masilo, sophomore Quy Huynh, sophomore sweeper Wade Wright, and sophomore goaltender Eric Deziel, who returns to MC after competing with the Canadian Olympic team. Leadership will be supplied from co-captains Quy Hunyh and Rethabile Masilo. Coach Leventhal said he expects his team to be better than last year's squad and figures to shoot for a record of at least .500.

The home opening loss to the University of the South on Sept. 8th has not slowed the team's progress toward a successful season. The 3-0 verdict was not indicative of the future outcomes of 1984 MC soccer.

The Scots were without the the services of Adolpho Prieto and Wade Wright, who were out due to injuries. Also, the pressures of the first game on the youthful team caused a few minor mental lapses that were crucial to the outcome. However, the hopes of the 1984 soccer team remain high, and the future remains optimistic.

The MC soccer Scots lost their second game of the season on Friday, September 14th, falling to a tough University of Tennessee-Chattanooga 2-1. The Scots' record now stands at 0-2 for the season.

Although MC outshot UTC, only one goal counted, that coming late in the second half when sophomore Mike Wilcox found the net. Assisting Wilcox with a good cross-over pass was center forward Rethabile Masilo.

The Scots will hope to chalk up a win in their upcoming games. The Scots next face Oglethorpe University on September 19th, and play host to Vanderbilt University on the 22nd.

Scots Cage Tigers

by Rick Carver

The 1984 Maryville College Fighting Scots stormed onto Honaker field on Saturday, September 15th, and held on to a 13-12 upset win over ODAC rival Hampden-Sydney.

The Scots took the opening kickoff and immediately started to crank out yardage against the favored Tigers. However, the Scots fumbled and Hampden-Sydney recovered. Then the aggressive defense of the Scots forced H.S. to cough up the ball, and free safety Jeff Briggs pounced on the loose pigskin to keep the MC offense in business. Under the field direction of QB Glenn Humphries, the Scots continued to roll as MC showed H.S. that they had come to play.

The Scots finally got on the scoreboard with 9 minutes left in the second quarter when QB Manny Rodriguez hit William Delaney on a 28 yard touchdown pass. Steve Saylor split the uprights on the point after and MC led 7-0.

With 5:28 left in the half, Rodriguez found Delaney again, this time for a 54-yard touchdown. The half ended with MC claiming a 13-0 lead.

Hampden-Sydney began its march in the 4th quarter, and closed the gap to 13-12. The 2-point conversion try failed, and with 20 seconds left to play, victory seem eminent. The Tigers' last hope was to try an onside kick, but the ball rolled into the sure hands of MC captain Shannon O'Brien to seal the win.

Key performers on offense for the Scots were running backs Roger Scarbro and Jeff Seagle, who paced an effective rushing attack that was aided with the fine work of center Ronnie Ramsey and guard Kevin McKee. Jeff Silver was also an important factor both offensively and defensively, as his 20 yard fake punt converted a crucial 4th down, and his booming punts constantly put H.S. in poor field position.

The MC defense, which held the Tigers to 70 yards total offense in the first half, was led by linebacker Bob Aucker (1 interception and 1 fumble recovery), FS Jeff Briggs (1 interception and 1 fumble recovery), LB John McCleod (1 interception), and SS Jeff "JR" Frazier (1 interception).

The Scots' next game is Saturday, Sept 22nd at Bridgewater. The Scots then return home on the 29th to face Baptist University of Atlanta.

Volleyballers Ready for Action

by Brian Rigell

Preparation for the 1984 volleyball season began in mid-July as the coaching staff sent each Lady Scot a pre-season conditioning program. The program alternated weight training and running in an effort to ensure that the team returned in the best of shape.

On August 22nd, along with the rest of the fall sport athletes, the Lady Scots reported back to campus to begin two weeks of intensive workouts. Under the watchful eye of Coach Sharon Arrington (the new Lady Scots basketball and softball coach), morning practices were conducted in either the pool (for agility and quickness) or the weight room (for strength). Afternoon practices were overseen by second year head coach Brenda Ott. Working around freshman orientation, staff schedules, and various injuries, Coach Ott concentrated on the basics of volleyball for the first week. The Lady Scots then moved on to some of the more complex aspects of the sport such as offensive and defensive positioning and strategy during the second week.

The past two weeks have been spent trying out various combinations of players on the floor in an attempt to come up with the best six players to start.

Coach Ott has a tough decision to make between returning players and new members of the team. Veterans include seniors Kandy Schram and Denise Penzkofer along with sophomores Sherrie Farmer, Belle Ferguson, Jo Gourd, Theresa Gray, Wendy Guice, and Alicia Oller. New members include sophomores Dee Dee Davis and Lourdes Couce along with freshmen Karla Beard, Lisa Harvey, and Heather McCall. Coach Ott has high hopes of using everyone on the squad to improve last season's record of 15-15.

A scheduled tri-match against Cumberland and Vanderbilt on the 13th was cancelled, as was a home match versus Cumberland on the 15th. However, the Lady Scots did not sit idly by. On the 15th, the faculty men-consisting of Drs. Bunde, Cartlidge, Cronan, Dent, Pickens, Ramger, Waters, and Yager-scrimmaged the Lady Scots in a best of five match. Both sides showed that they were there to play, but the Lady Scots took the first game before the faculty men rallied to take the second one. A small crowd then watched the Lady Scots battle tooth and nail to win the next three games and take the match 4-1.

The team would like to thank the following people: Coach Arrington for her help in pre-season camp; Kandy Schram for all her hard work over the summer making sure that things were ready for the season; and the faculty men for their time and effort. Also, best wishes to Coach Ott and Dave Ammons who were married Sept. 1. Congratulations to both of them!

Although the schedule is not finished, the home-opener was slated for the 18th against King College. More home matches are scheduled for the coming weeks, so look for notices announcing the dates and times. See you there!

SCOTS
MARYVILLE COLLEGE

Gist Joins Staff

by Rick Carver

Randy Gist, former basketball standout at Knoxville's Holston high, has been named assistant men's basketball coach at Maryville College, MC Athletic Director Bobby Saylor announced.

In addition to assisting MC Head Basketball Coach Randy Lambert, Gist will serve as equipment manager for the health, physical education, recreation and athletic department at the College.

"The Scots' basketball program is very fortunate to have Coach Gist as a part of its organization," Coach Lambert said. "Randy is a first-class young man. His coaching experience and expertise will be an invaluable asset to our overall basketball program and to Maryville College.

The 27-year-old Knoxville native was named All KIL and served as co-captain of the Holston basketball team before his graduation in 1975.

He attended Tennessee Wesleyan College, the University of Tennessee and Georgia State University where he earned the B.S. degree in marketing in 1981.

Gist served as head coach of the now defunct Knoxville Express semi-pro basketball team.

He has coached and worked in Don Devoe's basketball camp at UT and the Ernie Grunfield Basketball Camp at Maryville College.

The new MC assistant has also coached in the Knoxville YMCA's City Recreation League in which his team won the city championship.

Gist has been a substitute teacher in the Knoxville city schools system and was an assistant manager in environmental control with an Atlanta firm.

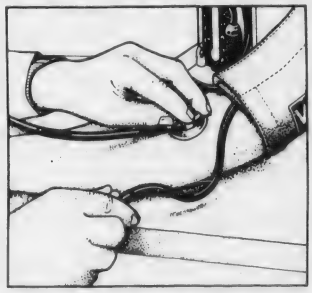
Help Your Heart

American Heart Association

Check your blood pressure

High blood pressure can cause stroke, heart attack, kidney damage and more. It can shorten your life. But high blood pressure can be treated and controlled with your help.

Everyone has blood pressure. Without it, the blood couldn't circulate in our bodies. Blood pressure in your arteries changes from day to day, even from moment to moment. It goes up when you get excited, and down when you rest or sleep. These changes in pressure are perfectly normal.



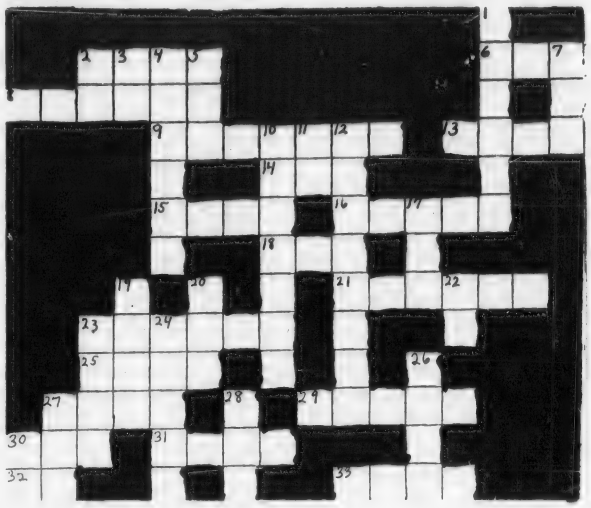
What is high blood pressure? In some people, certain arteries may clamp down. This makes it harder for blood to pass through, and pressure builds up as a result. If it goes too high and stays that way, it is called high blood pressure.

We still don't know what causes most high blood pressure, but research scientists are working hard on the problem. While they don't have the final answer, yet, they do have some important leads.

If your parents have had high blood pressure, there is a good chance you have it or will develop it. And if you have it, your children may develop it. Children should have regular blood pressure checkups just like adults.

Help your heart! Have your blood pressure checked at least once a year. It's the only way to find out if you have high blood pressure. There usually are no early signs to warn you. That's why high blood pressure is called the silent killer.

Call your doctor, clinic or nearest health center to make an appointment to have your blood pressure checked. A rubber cuff, something like a bandage, is wrapped around your upper arm. The cuff is filled with air until it squeezes the artery in your arm. Then the air is slowly let out of the cuff. At the same time, a doctor listens with a stethoscope as the blood rushes through your artery. He also watches a measuring gauge which tells him your blood pressure.



If you have high blood pressure, it can be treated and controlled. But it takes two to do it: you and your doctor. By cooperating with your doctor you can live a long and normal life.

Your doctor may prescribe pills. Keep taking your medicine as long as he says you should. Your doctor may also put you on a low-fat, low-salt diet. If you are overweight, it's important to lose the extra pounds and keep them off. The extra weight puts a strain on your heart. Smoking cigarettes does too, so don't smoke. Your local chapter of the American Heart Association has information on how to stop smoking and on high blood pressure.

CLUES

ACROSS

2. Captain of his arc.
6. Card game.
8. ? the Southern Blue.
9. ? Pursuit.
13. 1983 Administrator of the year.
14. Holiday ? .
15. MC's conference.
16. MC caterer.
18. Draw
21. 1984 Gold Medalist.
23. ACC co-chairman.
25. ? upon a time.
27. A sport.
29 Quarterback ? .
30. ? Abner.
31. "For the longest ? ."
32. Ante meridiem.
33. Go for the ? .

DOWN

1. Ferraro's hometown.
2. Direction.
3. Either.
4. Lights-camera- ? .
5. Feminine possession.
7. Choose.
10. Jackson's ? Tour.
11. Indiana (abbr.)
12. First and eighth MC Presidents
17. ? ball.
19. Ducks on the ?
20. Eat (past tense).
22. Touchdown.
23. Athletic no-no.
24. Go ? !
26 MC Chaplain.
27. R. D.
28 . Echo Editor.
30. 1984 Olympic city.

Trivia Time

1. What's the largest lake in the world?
2. What country offered Albert Einstein its presidency in 1952?
3. What's the national sport of Canada?
4. Who narrates the Sherlock Holmes stories?
5. What's the most popular ice cream flavor in North America?

Poet's Corner

Back to school
Dig it, eh?
Three tests already
And bills to pay.

The ol' tan is fading
The afternoon is hot
My body's in class
But my mind is not.

Looking toward Saturday
Catch up on some sleep
Can't forget to do laundry
Clothes-a mile deep.

Not now, Teacher,
I gotta run
Fifteen minutes for lunch
Ain't loads of fun.

This afternoon-practice
Wish I could take a nap
"Mom, send some brownies
I'm tired of institution crap"

Tonight when it's quiet
And I lay down to sleep
I'll forget about college
And watch the moon creep.

by Julie Humpert

A Day in the Life...

by Nancy Jones

"Keep your head down and your butt up!" That's this week's quotable quote. It has its origins in the Great Tubing Adventure that took place last Saturday up in the mountains. Tubing, in case you don't already know, is the leisurely activity of sitting in a truck tire inner tube while going with the flow of the river—over, around, and through, (sometimes under) the rocks and rapids— until you get wherever you're going (which is usually nowhere in particular). We bounced around and floated down and around the Little River which snakes through the Smokeys. It was quite a lot of fun, especially considering I had never been tubing before. (My deprived childhood has become an equally deprived adulthood.)

I decided that going down the traditional and conventional way was A Bit Boring, so I went down a series of rapids face first instead. (Actually, I hit a rock sideways, flipped off the tube, was carried away by the current, ricocheted off a few rocks here and there, and was finally beached up on a boulder some 50 yards down stream.) Then there was the time Amy got caught up in a rather fast current, picked up a little too much speed, and hit a rock head on. Instead of being dumped, she got stuck on the rock in a nearly vertical position. Being the clever sort I sometimes am, I saw in this situation the opportunity to become Famous, so I decided to be a Hero and set out on the Rescue of Amy. I got to her just in time to apply a vice-like grip to her shoulder as she flipped over backwards and disappeared underwater. At this time I seized the opportunity to be a Coward and promptly applied a vice-like grip to the very rock that had just let go of Amy, so as not to follow her on her Underwater Exploration of the Little River. A few moments later, (which I'm really sure was a few hours later), I saw Amy's soggy head pop up about 25 yards down the river. Yes, she has lived to tube again. I, on the other hand, was still stuck on the rock, (not only by my vice-like grip, but also by the rock which was eating my tube—it was wedged in a crevice). Eventually the rock and I made a deal, I would let go of it and it would let go of me, so I did and it did and we have both gone on to live happily ever afterwards.

Oh, the phrase does have an important meaning, especially to the Novice Tuber. The thing to remember and never forget while ricocheting off rocks and bouncing off boulders is to keep your head down, (to avoid being scalped by low hanging tree branches), and keep your butt up (to avoid the Accumulation of Massive Abrasions and Contusions in the Area of the Derriere— from rocks that hide just under the surface of the water). All things considered, it was quite an Enjoyable Adventure. Much like Winnie-the-Pooh in his book Winnie the Pooh as a matter of fact. (Chapter IX of course, "IN WHICH Piglet is Entirely Surrounded by Water".) Remember when Piglet was in Very Great Danger during the Terrible Flood, being trapped in his house for days and days while it rained and rained in the Forrest? Well, remember when Pooh Bear did a Very Courageous thing by rescuing Piglet with Christopher Robin? Well, in the first part of the rescue, when Pooh was going to get Christopher Robin who lived at the top of the Forrest, he floated there in The Floating Bear, which,, you will remember, was the Hunny jar Pooh so cleverly converted into a ship. But, as Pooh explained, it wasn't just an ordinary sort of boat. Sometimes it was a Boat and sometimes it was more of an Accident. It all depended. (Depended on what?) On whether Pooh was on top of it or underneath it. Which is what tubing is all about anyway.

ANSWERS:
1. The Caspian Sea
2. Israel
3. Lacrosse
4. Dr. Watson
5. Vanilla

the highland echo

Vol. 70, No. 2 MARYVILLE COLLEGE FRIDAY October 5, 1984

Students React to Semesters

by Teresa Welch

Asked how she felt about MC's new sememster system, Nancy Jones replied, "I won't discuss it. It gives me indigestion. It causes cognitive incongruity, which produces an unbalanced emotional state which, in turn, produces a tremendous physiological disruption in my big toe. Wacka-do!"

Nancy has been able to keep her sense of humor in facing the schedule change; many others are feeling overwhelmed and frustrated by the new semester calendar after four weeks.

But semesters in themselves are not the problem. The real difficulties seem to lie in adjustment and in our particular daily schedule. Perhaps we have been spoiled by the 10-3-10-10 calendar of past years. Many students have expressed that, more than disliking semesters, they were simply pleased with the old calendar. Cindy Claborn regrets that "we've lost some of our uniqueness."

Ideally, an average five-class load should not be a great obstacle for students. In the adjustment process, however, it appears that some, such as Steve Courtoy, feel they have "the same amount of homework for the three classes, plus that much more for the other two." It may be that teachers are having adjustment problems as well.

Restructuring lectures, syllabi, and mind-sets into a semester calendar will take patience and understanding from students and faculty alike. Adjustment to the broad calendar change cannot happen overnight.

Nor can adjustment to the daily schedule happen overnight. As will anything brand new, it still has kinks to be worked out, such as lunch—enough said?

Gone are the built-in breaks for such things as class meetings and CPP career seminars. In fact, for students involved in Weekly Worship and CIV, the only planned slot of free time falls during the Thursday E-hour faculty luncheon.

Student opinions about the new calendar do cover a broad range of feeling. Returning freshman William Delaney is very pleased with the system, saying, "There's a longer time to learn. We can cover the material at a slower pace." Senior Susan Jennings, on the other hand, "really can't think of anything good about it."

Most of the students' negative opinions are based in the daily schedule and the adjustment process. Given time, effort, and minor schedule revisions, MC can have a successful semester system, though radicals like Donald Xiques may always shout "I'm really $H_2NCO(NH_2)$-ed off. I don't have time to fall asleep in chemistry any more!"

Faculty Honored

Dr. Russell D. Parker, professor of history and secretary of the faculty at Maryville College, has been named chairman of the Department of History, MC Academic Vice President Alfred Perkins announced today.

The new departmental chairman came to MC in 1964 as a history instructor and was elevated to assistant professor in 1966. He was promoted to associate professor in 1969 and to professor in 1979.

Since 1972, Dr. Parker has served as secretary of the faculty and also coordinates the College's Committee on American Studies, a multi-disciplinary minor program in American Studies. Last spring he was named the College's Outstanding Teacher for the 1983-84 academic year.

A Caryville, Tenn., native and graduate of Lincoln Memorial University, Dr. Parker earned his B.A. degree in 1949. He received M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Tennessee in 1951 and 1966.

The MC history professor was selected to attend a National Endowment for the Humanities seminar at the University of Illinois in the summer of 1973. The following summer he spent eight weeks studying in West Africa at a Phelps-Stokes Ethnic Heritage Seminar.

In 1976 Dr. Parker published "The Black Community Company Town: Alcoa, Tenn., 1919-1939" in the Tennessee Historical Quarterly."

The author of numerous publications, he was inducted into the Literary Hall of Fame at LMU in 1982. This past February he presented a Community Issues and Values Series lecture at MC on the topic, "An Assessment of Lincoln's Stature as President."

He currently belongs to both the East Tennessee and the Southern Historical Associations.

Dr. Parker and his wife, June, live in Louisville. They have two daughters, Elaine and Annette.

Dr. Parker succeeds Dr. Arda S. Walker who retired at the end of spring term, following 36 years of service to MC as a teacher and 22 as departmental chairman. Dr. Walker is continuing to teach history on a part-time basis.

Campus Calendar

Friday, Oct. 5
5:30 pm–6:30 pm – Oktoberfest Dinner sponsored by Senior Class. Dining Hall.

Saturday, Oct. 6
8:00 am – 12 noon – Campus Cleanup Day for Faculty, Students, and Staff.
1:30 pm – Football vs. Washington & Lee
2:00 pm – Soccer at Warren Wilson

Tuesday, Oct. 9
9:15 am Morning Worship. CCM
4:00 pm Soccer at Berea College
6:00 pm Volleyball at Berea College
8:15 pm Foothills Chorale Concert FAC Music Hall.

Thursday, Oct. 11
11:15 am CIV Bauco van der Wal, International Director of the Anne Frank Center, Amsterdam. FAC Music Hall.

Saturday, Oct. 13
Football at Centre College. Time TBA.
2:00 pm – Soccer vs. Hampden-Sydney
9:00 pm – 1:00 am –Dance sponsored by Lloyd Hall.

Sunday, Oct. 14;
8:00 pm Orange and Garnet night. Wilson Chapel;

Monday, Oct. 15
5:30 pm Volleyball at King College

Tuesday, Oct. 16
9:15 am Morning Worship. CCM

Thursday, Oct. 18
11:15 am CIV Dr. Don Reinbold. "Seismicity of the Southern Appalachians." FAC Music Hall.
Board of Directors Meeting.
5:30 pm – 6:30 pm "Create Your Own Burger" Night. Dining Hall.

The Echo needs you! We invite all interested students to join our staff. We have positions for writers, proofreaders, layout staff, and production staff. No, you don't have to pass a test, you just need to be responsible, willing, and have a desire to write or help out. We strongly urge everyone to join!

Editorials

Thanks, Norma

Although editorials are not usually the easiest things in the world to write, this one may prove to be especially difficult. It seems that words from the heart come out less easily than those from the head.

Maryville College is a very special place. When one thinks about what it means to be a student here, he surely sees many different images. The excellent education students receive, the beauty of the mountain surroundings, the grinding and clanking of bulldozers early in the morning, the five minute lunch breaks—all of these go into making Maryville College "an enviable environment."

After each student has graduated and gone his own way, however, he will not remember the clanking of bulldozers, nor A-hours, nor five minute lunch breaks. He will remember the real Maryville College: the wonderful people.

Last summer I had the pleasure of meeting and working for one of the "real" people of Maryville College, Norma Edmondson. As the summer drew on and I got to know Norma a little more, I realized that she was one of the special people at MC who make it more than just another school somewhere in the sticks.

I had the pleasure of watching as the admissions staff prepared for the new school year and saw the excitement grow as it drew nearer. I saw the growing anticipation as each admissions counselor prepared for the arrival of the students he or she had gotten to know and help with the decision to attend MC.

During the course of the summer, Norma always would tell me about "her kids" and what neat people they were, and I thought it was pretty neat that she cared so much about them. One of the most special things about Norma was that even after "her kids" got to campus and settled in their new environment, she was always available to them; they never became just another student.

When the school year began, I began to see Norma not as just another former boss, but as a real friend. I popped into her office when things weren't going well, when things were going well, and sometimes just to say hello and maybe talk a little while; she was never too busy to listen. Many other students stopped in to see her from time to time, and she always made everyone feel welcome.

I sometimes thought it would be nice to be one of "Norma's kids" because she cared so much about them. Now I realize that I was one of "Norma's kids"——all of the students who knew her were——because she cared so much about all of us.

Thanks, Norma.

Letters

Dear Editor,

It has come to my attention recently that Norma Edmondson is no longer with Maryville College. She was an admissions counselor here for the past six years. The reason for Dr. Anderson's decision was, as I understand it, the number of students recruited recently. I know that I, as well as other students recruited by Norma, find this difficult to believe.

Norma took the time to answer my questions about Maryville when I was still considering other colleges to attend. She seemed to care about me and I count her as one of my major reasons for attending Maryville. And in working with her on the Admissions Phone-a-thon last year, I found that she did her best to answer the questions of prospective students. I personally feel that she did her job extraordinarily well.

I find Dr. Anderson's decision a mistake and count it in the line of others made by this institution.

Sincerely,
Chris Lilley

Dear Editor,

This week I was sadly informed of a friend's departure from this college. Norma Edmondson, Assistant Director of Admissions for the past two years and admissions counselor for the past six, is just that- a friend.

Norma had always been available to students, providing a listening ear when we needed to talk. She took her job seriously, shown in the way she "kept up" with her students. She always kept her spirit up and worked hard, despite the difficulties that may have come with the job. Norma was always seen at campus events and activities, a practice that some administration & staff have failed at.

After two years of working with her, I came to find a real friend in her and realize how seriously she considered her work.

Norma, you have many friends here who will miss you and support you in whatever you do.

Sharon Pimm

Echo offers classified ads

The* Echo is beginning a new personals/classified advertizing section, with its next issue. The classified section is designed to help those buying or selling books, supplies, rugs, records, rides, typing skills, and other miscellaneous goods and services. The personals section is available for those extending congratulations (for birthdays, engagements, or awards), get-well wishes, or other announcements. Unless this service is abused, it will be offered free of charge; but please, try to keep the ads short (2-3 lines) and in good taste. The classified/personal section will observe a strict deadline of 10:30 am Monday. Anything coming in after that time will not appear until the next week. Ads may be placed in P.O. Box 2820, brought up to the Echo *office (2nd floor Fayerweather Hall), or given to the editor.

the Highland ECHO

Editor-in-chief. . . . . Amy Waggoner
Assistant Editor. . . . . Pam Mathews
Editorial Assistant. . . . . Teresa Welch
Sports Editor. . . . . Rick Carver
Photo Editor. . . . . Keith Moore
Typist. . . . . Kathy Harrill
Business Manager. . . . . Mike Crawford
Staff Writers. . . . . Julie Humpert
Brian Rigell
Lisa Harvey
Nancy Jones
Wade Wright
Laura Hart
Staff Artist. . . . . Chris Lilley

The Highland Echo accepts signed, responsible comments from students, faculty, and staff. Names will be withheld upon request, but unsigned letters will not be published.—ed.

Dismas Works with College

by Tommy Brown, Special Correspondent

Dismas House of Blount County is beginning its second year of operation with the goal of strengthening its ties with Maryville College. These goals include adding four more students as house residents, making the home a comfortable and inviting place for students to get away from campus, and offering students the opportunity to do their parts as members of this community.

The House in Blount County provides a community atmosphere in which ex-offenders can successfully become contributing members of society. Dismas, Inc. has a similar house operating in Nashville in association with the Vanderbilt community. The association with the Maryville community is very important to the idea of Dismas House. Without the student participation, the house becomes just another halfway house, another institution.

Currently the house, which is located on the corner of Broadway and Cates Street, is the home for four ex-offenders, one student, the director, and assistant director.

Dismas House is an extension of the college itself. Students can use it as a place to get away for a little while. Students are welcome anytime to come down, to visit, study, and even get a good, home-cooked meal. By taking advantage of what Dismas can offer to students, they will be helping Dismas House be the community that it should be.

Several students are already a part of the Dismas community. They have come down for meals, they've even cooked meals at the house. Charlie Parsons is currently the only student living at the house, but several others have expressed interest. Dismas House wants to expand the community of students who utilize the house.

If you are interested in finding out more about Dismas House, contact Tommy Brown (Box 2046), Charlie Parsons (Box 2632), Jane Richardson, Harry Howard, or Earl Rash. Any of these people will be glad to tell you about it. You're also very welcome to come to the house anytime. If you come for dinner or if you'd like to cook, give Tommy a call at 984-8751. Remember that you've got a home away from campus.

The Salon that makes the difference...

SCHMIDT & designers

Serving Men & Women

Offers You a SCOTTY DOG DEAL

20% OFF

Any Salon Service

When you present your MC I.D. Card

Conveniently located in the Greenbelt Village Next to Sky City

Appointments taken, but not necessary

983-8428

Owned and managed by an MC alumnus

Freshmen Enrich MC Life

by Lisa Harvey

This year's freshman class, consisting of only 121 students, has some outstanding statistics when it comes to test scores and high school class rank. Dean of Admissions Larry West partially attributes these statistics to the newly restructured Presidential Scholars Program. He feels that the new program attracts students who are more competitive than those in the past.

The amount of money awarded to this year's Presidential Scholars is the same as to last year's, but the amount has been dispersed among fewer students. For the last several years, twenty-five half-tuition scholarships have been awarded. This year, two scholarships were given which cover full direct costs (tuition, room, and board). In addition to these top two scholarships, seven full-tuition and eight half-tuition awards were given.

For the past several years, according to Larry West, the admissions objective has been to seek quality rather than quantity. Although he feels that the school has been successful in this task, he says that MC hopes to recruit a larger class for next year and the years following.

Of this year's freshmen, 62 are from the Volunteer State, 15 come from Florida, and 13 come from Georgia. Five students represent foreign countries, and 4 each come from Maryland and North Carolina. The rest of the class is distributed as follows: Alabama,3; New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, 2; Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, South Carolina, Louisianna, Illinois, West Virginia, and Kansas,1. Let's go freshmen!

The Student Programming Committee announces a new award, the "Student Programmer of the Month." The award will be given each month to the student who has made the outstanding contribution to Student Programming. September's award goes to Sophomore John Heidelberg. John will receive a Mr. Gatti's pizza and a pitcher of beverage for his efforts. Good work, John!

Campus Clean-up

by Lenida Hawkins

Do you enjoy studying on the campus lawns? What about relaxing under the shady trees? Are you proud of your campus? Or are you embarrassed at all the litter and debris so carelessly thrown about? If your answer is yes to any of these questions then read on.

Beginning on Saturday, October 6, the Maryville College faculty, staff, and students are being urged to join in an effort to beautify our great campus. From 8a.m. until 12 noon those interested in helping with the clean up will meet at Bartlett Hall where cleaning tasks and locations will be assigned. Some of the duties may include raking and weeding, as well as trash pick up. Refreshments will be provided.

The idea for the campus clean up came from the Office of Student Affairs and a number of other offices. Dean Richardson explained one reason for the plan. She said that when the heat is turned on at the plant it will require three of the college grounds maintenance workers to watch over the operation and keep it running. But even with the lack of grounds people the college is doing its part to keep the campus in order. Dean Richardson reported that every morning that President Anderson is in town he makes a tour of the campus and points out any areas that require improvement. Every effort is made to remedy any problems.

The college works hard to keep the campus tidy, but everyone's cooperation is needed as well. Dean Richardson hopes that a campus clean up day can be organized about twice a semester. So come on folks! This is our campus. Let's show we're proud of it by helping out on Saturday. Clean up our campus and keep it that way!

Hudson named to position at MC

Thomas F. "Tom" Hudson, 1983 Maryville College graduate from Hughsonville, N.Y., has been named assistant director of development for the College, MC Vice President for Development Robert A. "Archie" Ellis Jr. announced today.

In his position with the College, Hudson will serve as editor of "Focus," the MC alumni tabloid; coordinate Homecoming and Alumni Weekend activities for the alumni office; and help write news releases for the communications office.

"As a Maryville graduate and former editor of the campus newspaper, Tom is already familiar with the College and the community. This knowledge, coupled with his talents as a writer and administrator, will make him a valuable asset to the MC staff. We are indeed fortunate to have him back at Maryville," Ellis said in announcing the appointment.

Following his graduation from MC with a B.A. degree in religion, Hudson worked briefly for International Business Machines Corporation in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., before taking a newspaper position in Wappingers Falls, N.Y., in December 1983.

In this position, which he held until joining the MC staff this fall, Hudson was chief staff writer, columnist and photographer for the "Southern Dutchess News," staff writer, columnist and photographer for the "Beacon Free Press" and staff writer and photgrapher for the "Spackenkill Sentinel."

While a student at MC, Hudson served as assistant editor, editor and advisor for the MC weekly newspaper, "The Highland Echo," and as selection editor for "Impressions," the campus literary magazine. He also edited the MC "Manual of Governance" in 1982.

Active in musical and theatrical groups, he served as a member of the College's Highlander Band, Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra (MACCO), MC Playhouse and the Playmakers theatrical troupe for which he performed and wrote scripts.

Hudson was assistant director of the Blount County Summer Playhouse production of "Blythe Spirit" and the MC Playhouse production, "God's Favorite," and served as announcer for numerous special campus events.

He was elected president of Xi Rho chapter of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia professional music fraternity and was on the board of advisors and public relations director for MACCO.

Other activities included membership on the residence hall staff and the All College Council Ad Hoc Governance Review, Ad Hoc Academic Calendar Review, and Worship and Publications Committees. He also participated in intramural athletics.

In 1977 Hudson was ordained a ruling elder in the United Presbyterian Church and has served on the Board of Session for the Hughsonville Presbyterian Church. While at MC, he was a member of the choir and active in the Highland Presbyterian Church.

He was named an Outstanding Young Man of America in 1982.

MC WINS AWARD

Maryville College's wood-fired steam boiler and fuel handling system is one of 10 energy-saving projects from Tennessee selected to receive a National Award for Energy Innovation.

Secretary of Energy, Donald Paul Hodel, recognized the MC project, along with others from across the United States yesterday afternoon in a special awards ceremony in Washington, D.C. MC Director, Eunice Lockhart-Moss of Washington, D.C., accepted the award for the college.

The U.S. Department of Energy sponsored the National Awards Program for Energy Innovation, a joint state and federal endeavor to spotlight unique conservation and renewable energy projects and to share them with others. The program is part of Technology Transfer '80s, a DOE effort to encourage the sharing of energy-saving accomplishments and technologies.

The award-winning MC system, which burns factory waste wood residues, consisting of sawdust and chips, saved the College approximately $221,768 in energy costs last year.

The wood burning system was tested in the spring and summer of 1982 and first put into operation on campus for the 1982-83 heating season.

The original idea for such a system came from Ernest Koella, Jr., a Rockford Manufacturing Company executive and MC director who suggested the College investigate the use of wood residues from forest products industries as a possible fuel replacement.

His suggestion led to collaboration with the Tennessee Valley Authority, who along with the DOE and the PEW Memorial Trust, provided initial funding for the project.

Something Personal To Say?

Whisper It In

THE ECHO EAR

Dr. Jerry E. Waters, professor of psychology and chairman of the Division of Behavioral Sciences and Human Services at Maryville College, is serving as president of the Knoxville Area Psychological Association.

Dr. Waters was elected last year to serve a one-year term as head of this regional professional organization for psychologists in the Knoxville area. He assumed office this summer.

A 1957 graduate of the College, he has taught at MC since 1963. He holds the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Kentucky.

The History Department is sponsoring a career discussion on Friday, October 5 at 1:30 P.M. in the Thaw Hall lounge. Jean Jones and history faculty will present career opportunities for the history major. Come and consider your future in a challenging field.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.25 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

THE BEAR
GARY BUSEY
PG

1:00, 3:00, 5:00 7:00, 9:00
HOT MOVES
PG-13

1:00, 3:00, 5:00 7:00, 9:00
ALL OF ME
PG

Irreconcilable Differences
PG

Classified Ads

Any interested students contact Leslie Nier with the number of the job you are interested in.

Student needed to do telephone soliciting in the evenings and Saturday mornings. M, W, F, Sat. or T, Thurs., Sat. T1

Babysitter needed. Will pick up students with no car. Pay $3 per hour. B2

Presbyterian Church in Knoxville needs attendants for its nursery on Sunday evenings, 6:30p.m.–9:30p.m. B3

Babysitter needed days and weekends for children ages 6 mo., 3 yrs., 5 yrs., 7 yrs. Will work around student's schedule. B5

Babysitter needed for children ages 3 mos., 2 yrs., 5 yrs. Th, F, Sat., Sun., M nights, 4-10p.m. Pay negotiable. Someone with transportation preferred. B6

Interior decorator's assistant needed. Art major preferred. D1

Occasional babysitter needed for children, ages 4½ and 7 years. B1

Nursing home needs several waitresses. 3 or 4 evenings per week 4:30p.m.–6.30 p.m. N1

Nursing home needs orderly for 15 hrs. per wk. N2

The Universe, Id Escapes Me

by Mike Howell

The psychiatrist looked at the man reclining on the couch with a mixture of boredom and professional chagrin.

"Tell me about the recurring dream you mentioned on the phone."

The man worked his lips slowly but silently, obviously agitated, then voiced, "I-I'm afraid."

"I understand, but the dream may help us to get to the root of the problem. . .you want to get to the root of the problem, don't you?"

"Yes, of course."

"O.K., just start at the beginning and take your time." The doctor's voice was calm, endearing.

The man began, "In my dream I walk slowly toward a shadowed, misty wood. I reach the timber's edge. Silver tendrils of moonlight pull me through ageless columns of trees, into the forest's gaping maw. I stop, drinking great quaffs of the night wind as it whispers across my face. I realize I am alone, yet I am not the sole entity within these woods. This is land primordial, where the elements walked as gods walked, heeding the call of early man as he sang and died in honor of nature's sanctity. This is the land where spirits whispered forgotten knowledge to fledgling man. I hear those whispers now. Imperceptible. Then muted, then resonant, ringing (my ears are splitting), thunderous. My screech of pain echoes the spirit's cry; they join. . . . All is silent once more. They are inside me--my soul hides them. The dream ends."

The doctor spoke, "This is very interesting. From your dream I think we can assume a serious conflict between your superego and id--"

The psychiatrist's voice was no longer audible. Only "id". Id. Id. ID. The word tapped some secret channel in the man's brain.

Immediately his visage changed. No longer was he afraid. No longer did his eyes seem scared or bewildered. Now they resembled some mutated cross between St. Francis of Asissi and X, the Man with X-ray Eyes, for therein burned the cold fire of twisted fanaticism.

"Now I understand!" he gasped. "The veil is lifted from my eyes! Even as we speak the balance shifts. A new age is upon us---a mystical age, an age where myth becomes reality and reality becomes untruth. Behold the youth of today for they are the survivors of tomorrow! Only they have intuitively embraced the eldrich id of distant past. Magic, pure and impure, permeates the air by way of music, dazzles the sight on silver screens, overwhelms the mind in countless tomes of writ--Belief is the key!"

Suddenly the man's voice grew strained yet louder, ever louder, until he leapt to his feet and screamed in hellish crescendo, "And I am the seas, the sky, the sun and moon---I AM THE DOORWAY!"

The psychiatrist reeled backward. He watched as behind the couch, reality cracked slightly open. Shapes. A throng, a legion of bestial shapes--ancient, dark, joyous---spilled onto the shag carpet and beyond.

Echo Ear

LD- Do the years ever change?

Weez- Thanks for the smiles. ANT

J.A.- Thanks for being such a great person. JN

Heidi- Ease up on yourself and enjoy! M

LN- Miss you and wish you were here.AIM

Jessica- Gone on any secret spy missions lately? YOUR COHORT

Congratulations to all my new buddies! I'm glad you're here. Miss B.

Lesley- Running again. Ain't it fine: AKW

TDW- I'm a Pepper now. Thanks! And Happy Easter. . . . Amy K.

PCG- Happy Friday, Happy Weekend

KO & PW- It's about time! LD

Cindy- Don't get lost in the woods.

MK- Still wanna go to Fla.? MC

LH & KH- Let's go to Colorado. LD

Where do you go when neither place is right?

LH- Wanna go play with the maluks?

Where's Herbie?

NEW SNACK BAR MENU

CREATE YOUR OWN DELI SANDWICH

with Roast Beef
Turkey
Ham
Bologna
Salami

6 choices of Cheese
Rye, Whole Wheat, Onion Roll,
Sub Roll, or White Bread

No charge for Lettuce or Tomatoes

BREAKFAST ADDITIONS:

Bagels & Cream Cheese
English Muffins

YOU ASKED FOR IT

Tossed Salad
Fresh Fruit
Tuna Salad & Chicken Salad
Potato Salad
Cole Slaw

Present this coupon and receive a

Free Medium Drink

with the purchase of any

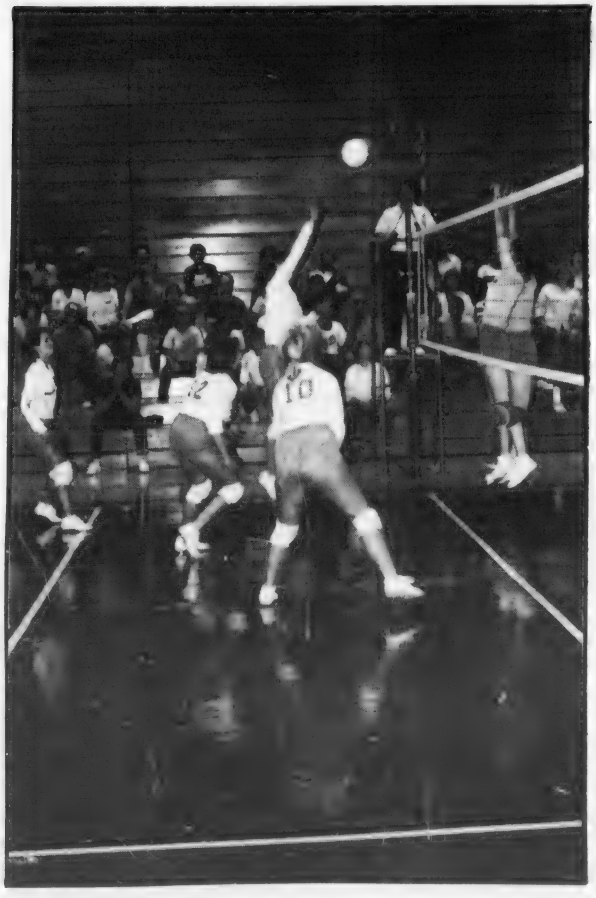
DELI SANDWICH

Dobbs
DOBBS HOUSES, INC.

Sports

Lady Scots Spike Opponents

by Brian Rigell



It's just after 5:00am on a Saturday (Sept.22) morning, and I'm standing in the shower wishing that it was all just a dream and I could roll over and sleep for another six hours. The blast of cold air that greets me as I step from the warmth of the bathroom into the hallway lets me know that I'm not dreaming, and so begins another roadtrip. In fact, it's the first roadtrip for the 84 volleyball season and before it's all over many thoughts and ideas will have crossed my mind and here are just a few.

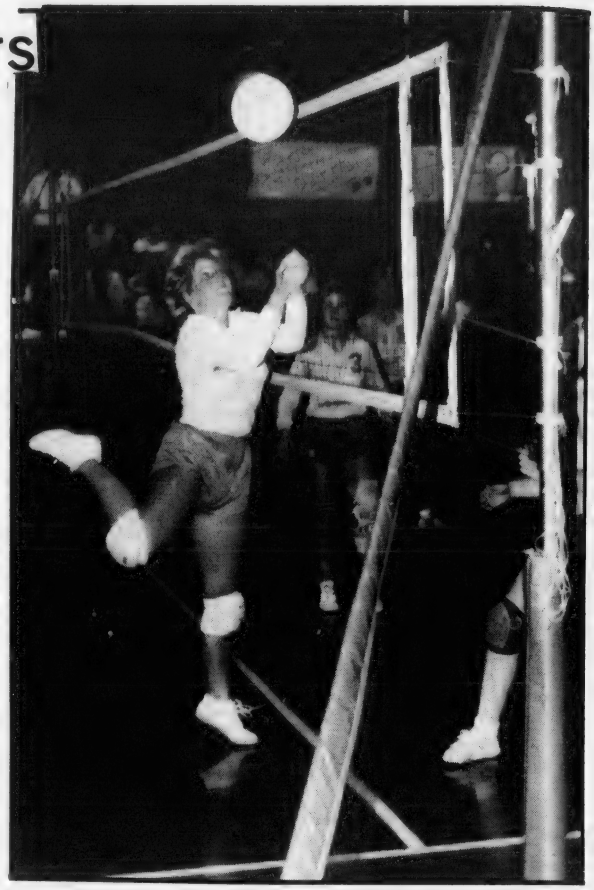
I get out of the dorm by 5:20 which is not too bad considering that we're leaving at 5:30 and I still have to get the training equipment ready and in the van, for today along with my normal managerial duties, I've also been given the job of team trainer.

As I get to the gym Coach Ott-Ammons is just pulling up in the van and only one of the girls is waiting to go. About 5:45 after cramming 14 people in a 12 passenger van and checking our fan car loaded with Danny, the Neary sisters and Lisa Penzy's friend from UT, we officially begin our roadtrip. Today we're travelling to Chattanooga to play in the Covenant Invitational

One of the nicer things about these early morning roadtrips is that they're usually pretty quiet ones. By the time we reach Lenoir City everyone's either asleep or reflecting about one thing or another. My thoughts are on the two losses that we've already experienced at home this season (King on Tuesday 18th and Tusculum on Friday 21st). What's done is done, and we can't change that, but hopefully we've learned something about ourselves and we can benefit from that.

As we reach Chattanooga, the van comes to life. The wake-up call is usually delivered by John Cougar or the Footloose soundtrack via Wendy's music box. As we drive through the city toward our final destination of Lookout Mtn., we munch on our breakfast of danish from the dining hall.

If you've never been to Covenant, it's an experience. To get there you have to drive up the mountain, leave Tennessee, enter Georgia, and somewhere along the line get back in Tenn. before you get to the college. Going up isn't as bad as coming down, though, because you don't really think much about brake failure or run-away trucks knocking you over the edge while you're driving on the inside lane.



Our first game is scheduled for 9:00 and we get there in plenty of time to stretch out and get ready for the contest. Tenn. Temple, our first opponent, has a good team, with one player who is especially tough. The whole team proves to be tough as we drop two games in a row and lose the match.

We have a long break since we are not scheduled to play again until after lunch, so we come down off the mountain and look for a place to eat. As we walk into the restaurant, we draw the usual stares and glances that greet us wherever we go. I guess a group of 14 isn't something that most restaurants see everyday, and for that I'm sure they're glad. Pound for pound I'd say female athletes (especially volleyball players) eat just as much as any other athletes and in some cases maybe more.

After lunch we're scheduled to play Covenant, Huntington and Ogelthorpe. Game scores are as follows: Covenant–2 MC–1, Huntington–2 MC–0; Oglethorpe–2 MC–1. Huntington runs a very strong offense and their win is a good one, but Covenant and Oglethorpe both are teams that we could have beaten but we just couldn't get it together long enough to pull it out.

As the team showers, Coach and I load the van and spend some time thinking about the matches and trying to come up with an idea that will help turn the team's fortune around. As the team struggles out in groups of two or three the disappointment is clearly written on their faces. I'll be very happy when that disappointment is replaced by the joy of victory and I hope it's very soon in coming.

Rides back from road trips are very interesting times indeed. the trip is split in two phases–post-competition depression if we lost followed by some rowdiness about halfway back, or complete rowdiness when we win. These return trips also give us time to learn about the new players and their personalities, along with a chance to catch up on what's going on the lives of everyone else on the team.

The closer we get to home, the noisier the van gets. Everyone is glad to see familiar sites, but I sweat that the sign that says it s 18 miles from Lenoir City to Maryville has got to be wrong. A very happy but tired group off-loads around eight that night infront of the gym. The one thing that goes through my mind after every one has left and I walk to the post office is a line from Jackson Browne's song "The Pretender" which sums up most of my feelings at the end of every road trip—"We'll get up and do it again. . .Amen."

. . .And so we did, but this time it wasn't so early, and we played at home. On Friday the 28th and Saturday the 29th Maryville was the sight of the annual Maryville Invitational. In all, seven teams competed with Carson-Newman defeating King in the finals.

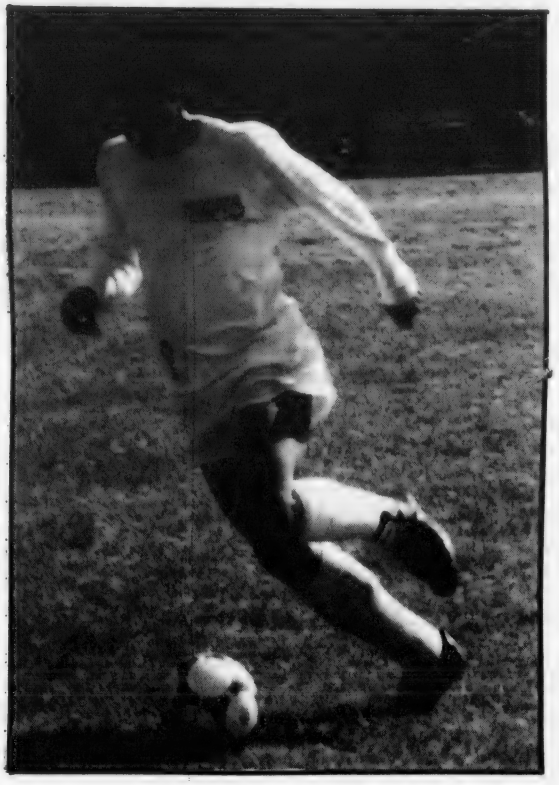
The Lady Scots started the tournament on an off note by losing to Carson-Newman, Bryan, and King on Friday and Covenant on Saturday before bouncing back to beat Emory & Henry and Milligan on Saturday. Some of the matches could have gone either way, especially the one against Bryan. The whole tide of the match was affected by a close judgement call on a Bryan dink that was ruled legal in spite of what appeared to be a throw.

A highlight for the Lady Scots was the naming of Denise Penzkofer to the All-Tournament Team. In both tournaments that the Lady Scots have played in this year, Penzy has been named All-Tournament. Way to be Waa!

Other scores of the week show the Lady Scots losing to Carson-Newman on Monday and Sewanee on Wednesday.

Coach Ott-Ammons is pleased that the team is finally playing together, but she still wants to work on on-court communication and movement. She especially wanted to thank everyone who helped make the tournament a success. Without them, it wouldn't have been possible.

Soccer Team Wins

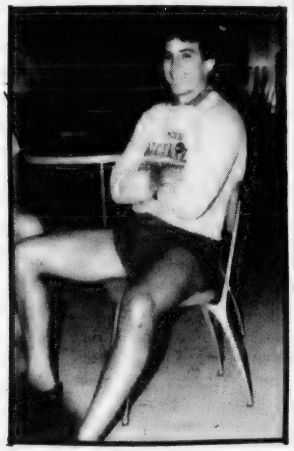


by Wade Wright

On September 19th, MC won its first soccer match of the 1984 campaign as the Scots beat Oglethorpe University 2—1. MC dominated the physically aggressive contest and proved to be in a much higher class than their opponents. Adrian "A.D." Jordan scored the Scot's first goal, and Danny Clark scored the game winner on a penalty kick in the final minutes of the game.

The Scots' next match was against Vanderbilt University. Vandy expected to win easily, but found the underdog Scots to be the real fighters. In fact, MC scored first on a goal by Quy Huynh and led 1—0 at halftime. The Commodores pushed the play in the second half, and sent a barrage of shots at MC goalkeeper Eric Deziel. Finally, with only 10 minutes left in the game, Vanderbilt rallied for three quick goals and outlasted the Fighting Scots, 3—1.

The Scots took to the road on Friday, September 28th, and won the first ODAC game in MC soccer history. The Scots faced the physical Eastern Mennonite Royals, and eventually won in double overtime by the score of 1—0. Danny Clark scored on a penalty kick with 1:54 remaining for the win. The Scots' defense was outstanding in the contest and shut down the Royals' offense.



MC then traveled to Lexington, VA., to face the Generals of Washington and Lee on Saturday Sept. 29th. The Scots put together a fine demonstration of defense and counter attacks, but suffered from fatigue and lost 1—0. MC battled to the finish, but were unable to penetrate the Generals' goal.

The soccer team now stands at 2—4 on the year and will travel to Warren Wilson College on October 6th for their next match.

Paul's Actions Speak

by Rick Carver

"Actions speak louder than words. . .and he proved that," is the phrase that All American candidate Paul Anagnostis considers to be his ultimate compliment. And so far in his football career at MC, he has done nothing to discourage anyone from saying otherwise.

The 5'11" 195 pound senior from Hialeah, Florida, has indeed lived up to his goal and accomplished much more. In addition to being a four year starter in the defensive backfield, Anagnostis has been named to the ODAC all conference team the past two years. In 1984, as co-captain of the Fighting Scots, he is not only a cinch to be all ODAC for three consecutive years, but is being considered for All-American Honors as well.

The average athlete would consider an all conference recognition a satisfactory achievement and sit back and rest on his laurels, but not Anagnostis. He continually strives to be the best and considers his recognition as one of the nation's elite performers to be both an honor and a responsibility. He humbly admits that the All-American status is his highest honor, but commented, "To be All-American you have to stick out above the crowd by making things happen all the time."

As for football at Maryville, Anagnostis said he wanted to be part of an improving organization. With his goal finally being realized, Anagnostis believes that the majority of the credit should go to Coach Saylor. The honesty and positive attitude that Saylor displays often rubs off onto his players.

Anagnostis attributes his success in athletics and in the classroom (he maintains a 3.3 g.p.a.) to God. "God gets credit for everything that's happened to me," he said. "I'm constantly thanking God for the ability to have fun doing something I love to do."

As for the future, Paul would love an opportunity to achieve his dream of playing pro football. Whether or not that happens, Anagnostis will look back on his illustrious career having learned from his football experiences. "Football has taught me how to be a disciplined person. I've learned that teamwork is getting things done and attitude is most important to solving goals."

Until the day he hangs up his helmet for the final time, he will continue to work hard and perform to the best of his ability. And the next time you are at a MC football game, take a good look at number 41. He'll be doing a lot of talking---not with his mouth, but with his shoulder pads.

Scots Thrash Baptist

by Rick Carver

On Saturday, September 22nd, the MC Scots took their 1—0 record to Harrisonburg, Virginia, to face the Bridgewater Eagles. Even though the Scots were heavily favored, they came back to Maryville with a blemish on their record as Bridgewater won 7—6.

Ironically, the Scots lost the game by the same way they had won the previous week—on a failed two point conversion try. The Scots only score came with 1:23 remaining, when QB Manny Rodriguez found Jeff Silver open in the end zone. MC then went for the win and the two point conversion, but failed and dropped to 1—1 overall. Standout performers for the Scots were DE Rocky Wyler, SS Paul Anagnostis, and Linebacker Bob Aucker.

The Scots were not content with a .500 winning percentage and returned to the friendly confines of Honaker Field on September 29th to trounce Baptist University 37—0.

The Scots started scoring in the first quarter when a vicious hit by FS Jeff Briggs forced the Baptist receiver to bobble the ball into the hands of Jeff Craney and set up the MC offense. Then John McLeod, subbing for a hospitalized Steve Saylor, booted a 41 yard field goal to make the score 3—0.

In the second quarter, MC improved its lead to 17—0 on two impressive touchdown drives. First, QB Mike Human connected with fleet-footed Pat Foster for a 28 yard touchdown. Four minutes later, tailback Danny Mathis crashed the goal line from three yards out.

The second half continued to prove prosperous for the Scot offense. In the third quarter, tailback Mike Maddox dove across the goal from the one to increase the lead to 23—0. Jeff Seagle plunged into the end zone later in the quarter and the count of the romp stood at 30—0.

The Scots concluded the game's scoring when, with seven seconds remaining in the contest, Maddox went airborne again for another one yard touchdown run.

While the MC offense was doing the damage on the scoreboard, the defensive unit also did some damage on its own. The aggressive, intense attack of the Scot defenders battered and bruised Baptist all afternoon and caused numerous turnovers. Leading the assault were Rocky Wyler, Tommy Swager, John McLeod, Bob Aucker (who snared his 2nd interception of the season) , Paul Anagnostis, and Jeff Briggs. The defense allowed Baptist only 63 total yards and caused six turnovers on the day.

The Scots' next contest is Saturday, Oct. 6th, against Washington and Lee on Honaker field.

Poet's Corner

BACKWOODS, TENNESSEE

Country road
Endlessly drifting in search of
A purpose

Hardly travelled Expored even less; no one takes time
To know

Its twists and turns
Lull the traveller into security
A pattern

Suddenly surprising
No longer predictable, swiftly changing
Unnerves him

The casual wanderer
Stops. Weary, afraid to press on Too much trouble

But for the persistent
Rewards lie not only at the end, but
In the journey.

Jeremy

Here at college
What is time
But as scarce as an A
And thin as a dime?

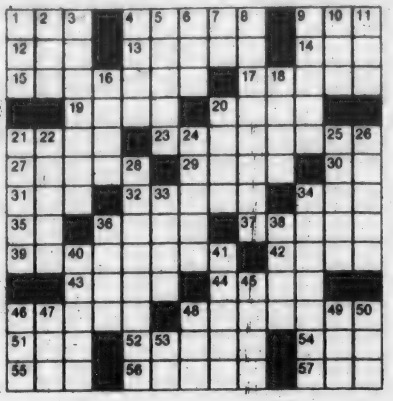
Here in the classroom
We watch moments close
When you're last in the lunch line
Cold quiche tastes gross.

Here in the library
The clocks are fast
No matter how hard I work
I always leave last.

Here in the dorm
The lights are on late
We study and forget
How to recreate.

Here at college
I did sleep once
But had to catch up on studies
For months and months.

Julie Humpert



NIGHT SKY

The day is done
The night is here
The stars all shine
In a great swirling sphere,
As morning approaches
We all dream
Our heads all boil
And they produce steam,
Life is peaceful
So is the night
Look in the sky
What a beautiful sight.

R. Bennett

1 Dance for Gene Kelly
4 Precipitous
9 Armed conflict
12 Broadcast
13 Dance for Charo
14 Reverence
15 Frowns
17 Follows
19 Ball dress
20 Catches
21 Brave one
23 Laws
27 Turkish decree
29 Disturbance
30 Negative
31 Male sheep
32 Fence steps
34 Tavern
35 Conjunction
36 Sacred image
37 Cubic meter
39 Calculated
42 Prophet
43 Badly
44 Harvest
46 Street show
48 Sadden
51 Southwestern Indian
52 Loop
54 Greek letter
55 Spread for drying
56 Brief
57 Stitch

DOWN
1 Label
2 Be ill
3 Playbill
4 Cook slowly
5 Mountain lakes
6 Abstract being
7 For example: Abbr.
8 Vegetables
9 Blouse
10 Shoemaker's tool
11 Legal matters
16 Timber
18 Border on
20 Metal fastener
21 Man's name
22 Expunge
24 Threefold
25 Habituate
26 Sedate
28 Edible
33 British Conservative
34 Eyes: Slang
36 Capri, e.g.
38 Former Russian ruler
40 Ventilated
41 Garment
45 Fencing sword
46 Wheel track
47 Brunched
48 Click beetle
49 Pronoun
50 Seed
53 Digraph

A Day in the Life...

by Peggy Millsaps

It was not a pretty picture. There I was, a new college graduate with a hard-earned degree in English (yes, English--I never said I was particularly pragmatic), facing the summer unemployed. Time, Newsweek, Vogue, The New York Times, and Cat Fancy, among other elite publications, had not deigned to reply, even sneeringly, to my application letters.

By the time I returned to my folding metal chair with my orange-and-garnet-ribboned degree, I was in no position to be choosy about how I earned my daily bread. I had, Lord knew, school loans to repay and an expensive cosmetic habit to support. Besides, my immediate goal was not to make a significant contribution to the world of letters, but to purchase a designer bathing suit. I was ready, as they say, to do anything (within ethical bounds, but I was wavering a bit on that) for a buck.

Feeling a little smug (I was, after all, a college graduate) as well as a little dejected (I was, after all, unemployed), I pounded the pavements of my hometown looking for "help wanted" signs. The grim result was an injustice comparable to an innocent man's being sentenced to prison: the only work I could find (I cannot distinguish an egg turner from a flyswatter) was in a fast food restaurant.

To protect the guilty, I shall not name the establishment that granted me financial sanctuary during those lean weeks. Suffice to say, I had to learn fast to supplement my knowledge of flower imagery in D.H. Lawrence's prose with knowledge of the exact number of cupped slaws a fish tub will hold and how long it takes an unwatched draining ketchup bottle to overflow.

Management was dubious about hiring me, to say the least. I had never worked in a restaurant. I did not know how to run hot tap water. I had never mopped a floor. I could not name, at the drop of a hat, the varieties of edible fish in North American waters. I had, furthermore, consulted a Harbrace when filling in the application and had written my previous work history in Homeric couplets.

"Please," I told the young (and, I now say, marvelously benevolent) manager, "I'm desperate."

"Do you promise to uphold and revere this establishment above and beyond Edgar Allan Poe?"

I hesitated a single beat. "I do."

"You're on."

Thus began my stint as a polyester-clad, name-tagged, cloc[illegible]-punching, bona fide hash-slinger. Comprehensive exams were a cinch (and how I looked on them with nostalgia!) compared to what I now faced:

how was I to know (being exclusively carnivorous) the difference between cabbage and lettuce?

the chemical composition of simulated tartar sauce?

that the weight of an industrial mop was incompatible with the strength of my arms?

that a "butler" was for sweeping crumbs into, not for waiting on customers that, as I dimly understood, was part of my job)?

Take my word for it, I was called a "dingy" (by management, personnel, and customers) more times in a single day than Vera on "Alice" ever heard in a month of rehearsals. It is my belief that an encyclopediac knowledge of significant works of English literature and a intuitive grasp of the fine art of shredding carrots cannot co-exist in the same cerebrum. And restaurant management does not love English majors who cannot dish french fries with the same facility with which they discourse on Ernest Hemingway.

Nonetheless, after a summer of a veritable jungle of table legs to be swept and mopped under and cabbages the size of Grendel's head, I have a shameful confession: I lead a double life. By day, I'm a journalism intern happily ensconced in an Anderson office, typewriter keys clattering under my fingers; nights, I metamorphisize into Super Cashier and enter the world of bus tubs, formica tops, fry vats, and wilting parsley.

Financially, I am bound to my polyester uniform a bit longer. But there is coming a day, I know, when my love of the yellowed tome pompously titled, Being the Annotated Bibliography of the Complete Works of George Chapman will rear its head like an avenging Leviathan (hey--I like that), and I will cry, "Are these the hands that launched a thousand term papers? Nay, they shall not labor in vain in a tub of fish," and I will, as they say these days, walk.

But if nothing else, this job has improved my character (it has also nurtured my neuroses, but that's another story): my first purchase with my first paycheck was not a designer bathing suit. It was a newly revised Merriam-Webster Unabridged Dictionary.

That, I think, is poetic justice.

Trivia Time

1. What German author first proposed the idea of the superman?
2. What's known as "The Most Exciting Two Minutes in Sports?"
3. In what country did Venetian blinds originate?
4. What did the Wicked Witch of the West write in the sky over Emerald City?
5. What animal is considered to have the highest blood pressure?

ANSWERS
1. Nietzche
2. The Kentucky Derby
3. Japan
4. "Surrender Dorothy"
5. The giraffe

the highland echo

Vol. 70, No. 3 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Friday, October 19,1984

Affiliate Artist Chosen

by Pam Mathews

Recognized for his versatility in both classical and contemporary repertoire, tenor Carroll Freeman has been named as the 1983-84 ALCOA Foundation Affiliate Artist. He will be sponsored by the ALCOA Foundation with assistance from the National Endowment for the Arts and presented locally through MC.

At the Edinburgh Festival in 1983, Freeman made his European debut with Opera Theatre of St. Louis in Stephen Paulus' " The Postman Always Rings Twice." His other engagements during the 1983-84 season were at the Houston Grand Opera for " Il Barbiere de Siviglia" and "Peter Grimes," including debuts with the Kentucky Opera, Boston Concert Opera, and the symphony orchestra of St. Louis, Spokane, and Portland. Last March, he made his Avery Fisher Hall debut, located in New York City, with Musica Sierra in Handel's "Solomon," and debuted with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in May. During the summer, Freeman performed the role of Hot Bisquit Slim in Benjamin Britten's "Paul Bunyan" with the St. Louis Opera Theatre.

Freeman's New York City Opera debut in 1982 was in "La Traviata" as Alfredo, and he also worked with the company in "La Grande Duchese de Gerolstein."

His recent performances have included "The Merry Widow" and the American premiere of Busoni's "Aileichino" with the Houston Grand Opera, "La Grande Duchese" with the Miami Opera, "Die Fledermaus" with Portland Opera, and numerous productions with Rong Beach Grand Opera, Minnesota Opera, and the Lyric Opera of Kansas City.

Freeman, born in Memphis, started his professional singing career with the Columbus Boys' Choir, which toured the United States, Canada and Japan. At the age of 12, he was soloist with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic, New York City Opera, and the "Bell Telephone Hour" on NBC-TV.

From the University of Southern Mississippi, he received his Bachelor of Music degree. Freeman, a winner of several competitions that include the Metropolitan Opera Regional Auditions, the Dallas Morning News Dealey Awards, and the San Francisco Opera Auditions, was added to the Distinguished roster of Affiliate Artists Inc. in 1982.

His visits to this area are scheduled for January 14-28 and March 4-18. Freeman will be accompanied by Sallie Schoen, Associate Professor of Music at MC.

Work continues

by Teresa Welch

The exterior restoration of Willard House is complete, thanks to contributions from the MC alumni and a grant from the Tennessee Historical Commission.

But the job is not yet finished. Before the house can be reopened as an alumni center and housing for the Alumni Relations and Community Service Offices, the interior must be restored and renovated as well.

Inside Willard House, the first floor is to be completely restored to its original state to comprise reception and dining areas for the center. Plans also include renovation of the second floor to provide offices and probably a conference room. Guestrooms and storage are slated for the third floor.

$75,000 was spent on the exterior work completed this fall. Projected plans for restoration, renovation, and a maintenance endowment require an additional $500,000. To help raise funds, gift and memorial opportunities are being offered potential Willard donors.

Historically, the house was erected in 1891 to serve as the presidents' residence, which it did until 1951. The College used Willard House for rented faculty housing and adjunct dormitory space from 1951 until it closed in 1979 due to high maintenance and heating costs.

The house has not been altered structurally and remains a prime example of Victorian architecture. Once restored, Willard House will be an ideal location for the Alumni Center in its historical and sentimental value to Maryville College and its alumni. The house will truly be a showpiece for Maryville College.

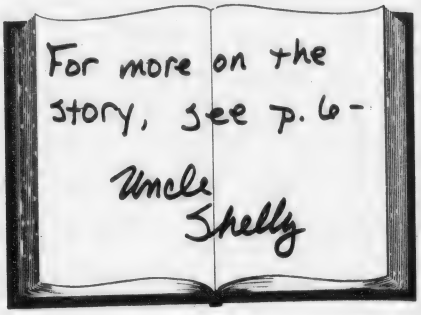
Campus Calendar

Friday, October 19
Volleyball-Milligan tournament. Away
3:00 p.m. Soccer at Millsaps
7:00 p.m. Pep Rally. Victory Hill
7:00 p.m.–11:00 p.m. Movies in the Snack Bar
8:15–Founder's Day KSO Band Concert. Music Hall

Saturday, October 20
Volleyball–Milligan Tournament. Away
11:00 a.m.–Soccer at Rhodes College
1:30 p.m.–Football vs. Millsaps

Tuesday, October 23
9:15 a.m.–Morning Worship. CCM
6:30 p.m.– Volleyball vs. Bryan
7:30 p.m.–MACCO concert. Wilson C[illegible]el

Thursday, October 25
11:15 a.m.–CIV "Invention in the Age of Relief." FAC Music Hall.
6:00 p.m.– Volleyball vs. Sewanee & Temple (Away)



Friday, October 26
4:00 p.m.–Soccer vs. Roanoke
Popcorn Night–Dining Hall

Saturday, October 27
Football at Randolph–Macon. Time TBA
11:00 a.m.–Volleyball vs. Carson-Newman
2:00 p.m. –Soccer vs. Lynchburg
9:00 p.m.–1:00 a.m. Dance sponsored by Jr. class. Pearsons Dining Hall.

Tuesday, October 30
9:15 a.m.–Morning Worship. CCM
6:30 p.m.–Volleyball vs. Bryan and Trevecca. Away.
8:15 p.m.–Concert choir. Music Hall

Wednesday, October 31.
3:00 p.m.–Soccer at Tennessee Tech
Halloween Party–Dining
7:00 p.m.–11:00p.m.–Phi Mu Alpha Haunted House. FAC

EDITORIALS

Trouble In Magic Kingdom

All right, kiddies, it's time for another story with that world-famous storyteller, Uncle Shelly. You remember Uncle Shelly, don't you? He's that nice man who told you all the fairy tales last year. . .remember Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs? Hansel and Gretel? Ah, yes. I thought you would.

Today, kiddies, Uncle Shelly is going to tell you a new story—one that you probably have not seen or heard before, but one that you will probably recognize anyway.

Once upon a time, a long time ago and very far away from here. . .

—What?!? Yes, Chris, even before the slaves!

. . .An entire race of people lived in harmony in a wonderful land. This was not just an ordinary home, though; this was a magical kingdom. Do you want to hear about its magic? Sure. I thought you would.

This kingdom was a beautiful place, all green in the summer and orangeredyellow in the fall. When people came to visit, they all said, "My, what a pretty place. I think I'd like to live here." And so they did.

All the people were happy in their new home for a while after they arrived. They enjoyed the freedom and friendliness of all the other people in their home. . .until the magical powers began to work on them. You see, the funny thing about this kingdom was that once the people were here they found that they could not leave.

Johnny and Susie came to their new home one day in September with big dreams, looking at everything through orange and garnet colored glasses. They had time for work and time for play as well. The thing they enjoyed most, though, was that no one in their wonderful new home told them what they could or could not do. All they had to remember was that if they were good little children they could leave after four years and get good jobs with great salaries—all because they lived in this wonderful new home.

After a few months, though, Susie's orange and garnet colored glasses began to fade to a pale yellow and pink. She realized that she still had no mirrors in her wonderful new home to dry her hair in front of. "That's ok,"she thought. "I have no outlets in my house to plug my hair dryer into anyway."

Johnny tried awfully hard to keep up Susie's spirits. "Just stick it out, Susie, for ten weeks,"he used to tell her. "Then you'll be able to find a new home where you'll be happier."

At the end of the ten weeks, Susie tried to find a new home, but alas, they all told her that she would have to spend even more time there, and four years was just about all Susie could stand. She finally decided to grin and bear it for a while. After all, how bad could things get?

Now, the rulers of this kingdome were two scholarly men, King Wayne the Wonderful and Prince Alfred the Great. When King Wayne and Prince Al noticed many people with Susie's complaisant attitude, they decided to take firm control. With broad smiles on their faces and ill-designed proposals in their hands, they explained to the serfs that, instead of being taxed intensely for ten weeks at a time, they would be taxed a little less intensely for a longer period. . .say fifteen weeks.

Over the anguished cries of the serfs and the somewhat less-than-enthusiastic reception from the lords, the switch was made. "You'll get used to it." they were told, "and the you'll be so happy that you'll hardly remember what the old government was like." But they could not get used to it.

And somewhere along the way, things began to go wrong. Some serfs began to talk of revolution and a new way of life. King Wayne and Prince Al paid no attention to the internal rumblings, however, because they had periodically run into problems such as this before, and they knew that no one would follow through.

Well, King Wayne and Prince Al were right. . .the revolution never happened. Instead the dissatisfied serfs began to look for means of escape from their frustrations. Some floated their way down the creek in the forest in a bottle. Others burned their way through the walls of the kingdom. Others just faded away.

Eventually word leaked out to people looking for a home in which to spend four years or so. Little by little, the numbers dwindled, until finally King Wayne the Wonderful and Prince Alfred the Great were the only inhabitants of their fairy land.

Here our story ends, kiddies. Uncle Shelly hopes you have enjoyed it. We'll get together for another story some other time, ok?

the Highland ECHO

Editor-in-chief. . . . . Amy Waggoner
Assistant Editor. . . . . Pam Mathews
Editorial Assistant. . . . . Teresa Welch
Sports Editor. . . . . Rick Carver
Photo Editor. . . . . Keith Moore
Typist. . . . . Kathy Harrill
Business Manager. . . . . Mike Crawford
Staff Writers. . . . . Julie Humpert
Brian Rigell
Lisa Harvey
Nancy Jones
Wade Wright
Laura Hart
Staff Artist. . . . . Chris Lilley

The Highland Echo accepts signed, responsible comments from students, faculty, and staff. Names will be withheld upon request, but unsigned letters will not be published.—ed.

MC Students SADD

by Pam Mathews

You're out on a Friday or Saturday night with some of your friends at one of the local night spots. You are having a good time, escaping the pressures of college, and having several beers or drinks to erase your problems for a few hours.

Soon, the alcohol is coursing through your body, causing you to feel good. Now everyone wants to go back to the college. Even though you drank maybe one too many beers, you drive since you feel all right and in control.

Will you make it to MC or become another alcohol-related traffic accident statistic?

Each year excessive drinking is involved in 2/3 of all alcohol related traffic fatalities; the other 1/3 of alcohol-related accidents involve social drinkers driving after a spree, and young drivers who are learning to drink at the same time that they are learning to drive.

Recognizing these startling statistics, a group of students at MC are trying to establish a Students Against Drunk Driving (SADD) chapter here on campus. SADD is more commonly associated with high school groups, but chapters on college campuses are starting to increase due to the awareness of accidents caused by mixing drinking and driving.

Bruce Guillaume, Director of the Institute for Lifestyle and Development is helping find contacts in order to establish the foundation for a SADD chapter at MC. "It's not an organization, but rather a group of students that can talk about problems or assist others with their conflicts, " he stated. "Anyone is welcomed to join."

Students interested in becoming involved with SADD can get incontact with Bruce Guillaume at his office in Fayerweather or can leave a note in his MC box, 2893.

By getting involved, you may help prevent a MC student from ending up as another fatality statistic because of an alcohol-related accident.

The Salon that makes the difference...

SCHMIDT & designers

Serving Men & Women

Offers You a SCOTTY DOG DEAL

20% OFF

Any Salon Service

When you present your MC I.D. Card

Conveniently located in the Greenbelt Village Next to Sky City

Appointments taken, but not necessary

983-8428

Owned and managed by an MC alumnus

Women Work Out

by Lisa Harvey

Hey Ladies! Have you been wanting to tone up those muscles? Are you intimidated by the football players in the weight room? Are you worried because you've never lifted weights before? Are the health spas too expensive for your budget? If you answered "yes" to any or all of these questions, the women's weightlifting is for you!

Women's Weightlifting was started by MC's Athletic Trainer, Vanessa Rice, because she knew there was a great deal of interest on campus, because she feels the weight room has gotten a bad reputation with women (they feel intimidated by the room), and because in the past there was no program for women.

So far, about 15 women have become involved with the program, and Vanessa feels that it is encouraging to see that they are "sticking with it." The program is individualized, but Vanessa warns that it is necessary to have a partner at all times for safety reasons.

The program is easy to start, as Vanessa shows each participant the proper way to lift and set up an individualized program based on skills and strength. It is possible, however, for those who are more experienced to set up their own program. (Again, a lifting partner must be used, no matter what the experience level.)

There are specific times when the weight room is open only to women, but everyone is welcome during regular weight room hours. "Ladies' Nights" are Monday, 6-7 p.m., and Wednesday and Friday, 7-8 p.m.

Any ladies who are interested in this program should see Vanessa Rice, Athletic Trainer. She ll help get you started on your way to a more toned-up body!

MACCO Concerts Set

Bach, brass and bluegrass will highlight the 1984-85 season for the Maryville-Alcoa College-Com munity Orchestra (MACCO).

The six-concert series this year will feature return engagements by two popular groups, the McLain Family Band from Berea, Ky., and the Empire Brass Quintet, Quintet in Residence at Boston University in Massachusetts.

The McLains, who have taken their bluegrass music to the stages of the 1982 World's Fair in Knoxville, the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville and Carnegie Hall in New York, will join MACCO in concert on April 13. The internationally acclaimed Empire Brass Quintet, equally at home on U.S. and European stages, will perform on Ferbruary 22 as part of the second annual MC Brass Festival.

The Foothills Chorale and the MC Choir will join the orchestra to present the Bach "Magnificat" as part of MACCO's annual Christmas Concert on December 2.

Other scheduled concerts in the 1984-85 series will include a pops concert on October 23, featuring soloists Terry Wilson and Janis Cunningham, winners of last year's concerto competition; this year's annual Concerto Concert on February 11; and the annual Children's Concert, this year featuring Mozart's "Toy Symphony" with children as soloists, on May 5.

Again this year concerts are set earlier in the evening or in the afternoon for enjoyment by the whole family.

Season tickets for this series will go on sale next week at Maryville College.

New this year is a family season ticket which costs $45 and allows up to four immediate family members to attend all six concerts.

Adult season tickets cost $25 each, a savings of $9 over individual concert prices. Also for sale are senior citizen/student season tickets for $15, a $7 savings, and tickets for children under 6 for $12, a $4 savings.

Student Opinions

Last Spring Term, a questionnaire on Student life was given to all students registered at Maryville College. In all 108 students answered the questionnaire regarding all areas of life at MC. Some interesting results are as follows:

*Students reacted against establishing fraternities and sororities on campus by a vote of 49-34, with 21 people having mixed reactions.

*Students responded positively to the presence of international students on campus.

*A majority of students appreciate the role of organized athletics on campus.

*A majority of respondants were happy at MC (Yes–75, No–7, Mixed feelings–26).

*In general, students felt OK about our facilities but mentioned a strong need for updated library materials,a central place for social interaction (new or remodeled Student Center), and better financial support of the athletic programs.

*Some reasons why students leave MC include academic difficulty, course scheduling, costs, social adjustments, and size or type of school.

*Some students expressed displeasure with administrative and faculty actions last year.

What would you like to see in the paper? We need suggestions to make your paper, the Highland Echo , better! Drop suggestions in Box 2820. We want student input!

Near to Perform

by Julie Humpert

Many concerts are purely for pleasure–a time to sit back and "groove on the waves." How about trying a concert that encourages and challenges you to be a part of a movement? A movement for international peace.

Those in the east Tennessee area will have a rare opportunity to share in such a concert with Holly Near on Sunday, October 21, at the Bijou Theatre in Knoxville. From teacher to songwriter, singer, and activist, Holly's message through music challenges audiences to take a stand for human rights.

In this fund-raising performance for the Laurel Theatre Restoration Project, Holly Near will be backed by Trapezoid. This gifted four-person ensemble offers rhythms from a hammered dulcimer, harp, violin, guitar, mandolin, and cello.

The concert will be interpreted for the hearing-impaired by Susan Freundlich, who incorporates mime and dance into her interpretations.

Tickets are $7.00 in advance and $8.50 at the door. Tickets can be purchased at the following locations: Jubilee Community Arts Office, Bijou Ticket Office, Nature's Pantry Market, the U.T. Central Ticket Office, all Cat's Records locations, and through members of the Peace Education Task Force.

For additional information contact Terry Holley at (615) 922-8240 or Jubilee Community Arts at (615) 522-5851.

The Peace Education Task Force encourages you to attend!

Echo Ear

Hey Boss Hogg: There was a population boom in Hazard County. Bo & Luke have more brothers. Roscoe

J.S. –If we didn't know better, we would think you didn't like us. Odd Couple. You must be Rick's friend?

K.J.–How is your balloon? R.

Hey J.–Have you taken any showers lately? R.

Congratulations Stumpfs! Luv ya & Good luck

It's Howling time again!

Herbie's been exposed!!!

K.E.O.– My name is Talking Tina and I don't like you!

Classified Ads

Any interested students contact Leslie Nier with the number of the job you are interested in.

Opening in the dishroom/dining hall 11:45–12:45, daily. C1

Student needed for immediate opening in the library. Will involve some physical work. Hours, flexible. L1

Babysitter needed. Will pick up students with no car. Pay $3 per hour. B2

Presbyterian Church in Knoxville needs attendants for its nursery on Sunday evenings, 6:30p.m.–9:30p.m. B3

Babysitter needed days and weekends for children ages 6 mo., 3 yrs., 5 yrs., 7 yrs. Will work around student's schedule. B5

Babysitter needed for children, ages 3 mos., 2 yrs., 5 yrs. Th, F, Sat., Sun., M nights, 4-10p.m. Pay negotiable. Someone with transportation preferred. B6

Interior decorator's assistant needed. Art major preferred. D1

Occasional babysitter needed for 2 children, ages 4½ and 7 years. B1

Positions available for full and part-time delivery persons. Must be 18, have a car and insurance. Must be willing to work weekends. Flexible days and hours. Apply in person at Domino's Pizza, 407 W. Broadway.

Buy $40.00 of merchandise and receive a free

SCOTTY DOG SWEATER

Martha Lee

Since 1950

Foothills Mall

Portrait Premiere

Maryville College will unveil a portrait of President Emeritus Joseph J. Copeland done by Knoxville artist John Kelly on Friday, October 19, as part of Founder's Day activities at the College.

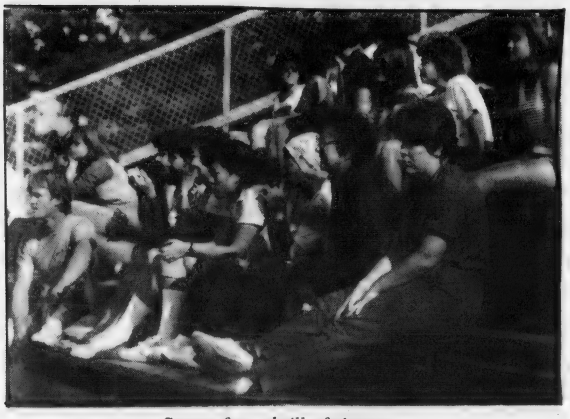
The MC Board of Directors and other invited guests will attend the unveiling of the newly completed portrait at 4:30 p.m. in Thaw Hall where the portrait will remain on permanent display. A reception honoring the College's seventh president will follow the unveiling.

Dr. Copeland, who retired in 1977, served as president of Maryville for 16 years and before that was a director for nine years.

Before coming to MC, he was pastor of Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville from 1952 until 1961. Prior to that he held pastorates in his native Texas and Oklahoma.

During his tenure as president of Maryville, more than $7 million in new facilities were constructed, including the Sutton Science Center, three residence halls, the physical education building and the remodeling of Pearsons Hall.

While at MC, Dr. Copeland was also active in state and national educational and Presbyterian-related organizations. He is listed in Who's Who in America.



Since his retirement from MC, Dr. and Mrs. Copeland have been living in their retirement home, Upper Windover, near Gatlinburg, Tenn., except for brief periods away when he served interim pastorates in Wichita Falls, Texas, and Atlanta, Ga.

The College commissioned 32-year-old Knoxville native John Kelly to paint the portrait of Dr. Copeland. Kelly, whose family belonged to Second Presbyterian Church when Dr. Copeland was pastor there, spent some two months on the project.

The 1970 Webb School graduate is the son of Mrs. Evelyn K. Kelly of Knoxville. He spends four to five months working in this area but now divides his time between Knoxville and New York City where he has his own art studio.

Kelly has done portraits of many Knoxvillians and three years ago did one of Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander which now hangs in the Tennessee State Museum.

The young artist will attend the Copeland portrait unveiling on Oct. 19.

Soccer fans thrill of victory

Do you have questions about Maryville College history, procedures, etc? Ask the Echo! Drop questions in Box 2820 and we will try to answer them in our new feature, "Ask the Echo."

College Life

by Ima Dodo

My mailbox is empty–
But that's okay.
I don't want to hear from anyone anyway!

Lunch hour's too short–
But that's alright.
My blue jeans are already way too tight!

Classes are boring–
But I don't care.
It gives me time to just sit and stare!

Dorm life is crazy–
But I don't mind.
It gives me a chance to really unwind!

Pauk and Harbrace–*
They cause no dismay.
I don't read them anyway!

Freshman Inquiry–
It's no scare.
I get away with whatever I dare!

Bills to pay–
They're no threat.
I can handle being deep in debt!

Classes are tough–
But I can take it.
If I don't know the answers I'll just fake it!

College life–
It's not so rough.
But, hey, okay, enough's enough!

Pauk and Harbrace: Two ridiculous books required for all freshmen. Also known as "a waste of money."*

Changes Announced

Jim Lamb is the newly appointed defensive coordinator for the 1984-85 MC football team, replacing Pat Dyer. He joined the staff on August 13, coming to MC from Frankfort High School in Kentucky where he had been a math teacher and head football coach.

Mrs. Doris Holbert has joined the College staff as secretary to the Office of Student Affairs and the Center for Campus Ministry. She will be located in the student affairs office.

Jeanie Webb has returned on a part-time basis as secretary for The Institute for Lifestyle Development. Jeanie is located in the student affairs office.

Randy Gist from Knoxville will be assisting Randy Lambert in men's basketball and replacing Jack Grantham as equipment manager in the HPER department.

Richard Earl from Knoxville and Ralph Mirando from Maryville will be assisting in football in volunteer positions.

Sharon Arrington is the new women's basketball and softball coach and director of the intramural program. She is filling the softball position relinguished by Pat Ballard, who has assumed the role of recruiting coordinator for all of our varsity sports, along with his other responsibilities in the athletic department.

David Cartlidge has been appointed women's tennis coach, in addition to his 1984-85 academic responsibilities.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.25 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 7:15, 9:15
Thief of Hearts (R)

1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
Rockober Blood (R)

1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
ALL OF ME PG

1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 7:15, 9:15
SONGWRITER R

PRINCE AL'S DEGREE

October 5, 1984

To: The faculty

From: Al Perkins

At the All-College Council meeting yesterday several students reported that they and/or some of their friends were having difficulty adjusting to the new class schedule. These reports served to confirm comments from individual students that began to surface last week. As a result of the earlier comments, several of us have tried to discover (1) the nature and extent of the problem and (2) what steps might be suitable to alleviate it. After conversations with a variety of students, faculty, and administrators, the following conclusions seem to emerge:

1. The perception of a problem is sufficiently widespread to call for some attention.
2. The difficulty seems to be centered among upperclass students, especially those of less-than-average ability. Freshmen apparently are not having such problems, nor are the generality of average-to-superior upperclassmen.
3. The minority who are having problems seem to need help in changing study patterns and making more effective use of time.
4. Among those who feel increased pressure, there is a belief that some faculty have used the changed calendar to increase course demands. Many of you will recall that, in discussions of the calendar change, students were repeatedly assured that the change was not intended to increase the workload. Every indication I have confirms that the faculty have kept faith with that commitment. Nevertheless, an uncounted number of students still feel that the load has increased.

Adjustment to a new pattern of doing one's work inevitably involves some strain, not just for students but for all of us. It is clear that many of you have been sensitive to this fact, and have been helping students adjust from the beginning of the term.

What might each of us do now to ease students' concerns? Let me suggest three things. First, try to provide reassurance and encouragement whenever possible. All of us know that the calendar and course load are not really unusual, but some students may need to be reminded that millions of their peers are studying under similar circumstances, and that they too can prosper under this system. Second, help individuals with time management and study techniques if that seems appropriate. If the problem seems deep-seated or beyond your capacity, refer the student to Bruce Guillaume. Third, consider using a bit of class time to raise the question of pressure in your class. Some anxieties might be relieved as a result. You might also use the time to explain that though course material is packaged differently, the course itself has not become more demanding.

In determining what steps to take, you obviously will and should rely on your own good judgment. Learning to deal with change is not easy, but it may be one of the most valuable lessons our students learn here. I have no doubt these temporary dislocations will soon be overcome. For all your efforts toward that end, I am grateful.

AP:JH

SPORTS

Lady Scots Revamp

by Brian Rigell

I'm sitting in the library on a Sunday night at about seven o'clock, and I'd rather be in my room watching T.V. or reading more of the Steven King novel I just bought, but I have forced myself to come here to write an article for the Echo about the volleyball team. Deadline was at six, and once again I've missed it—situation normal for me.

Two weeks have passed since I last sat down to play sports journalist and so many things have happened with the volleyball team it's hard to remember them all, but here goes.

Friday, October 5th—on the road—Tusculum. The first thing that comes to mind upon entering their gym is that their alumni should donate some money for the construction of a new facility. I've seen high school gyms that were bigger and more modern than this one. The rafters hang down so low that they are considered in play and at least twice a game a ball is hit into the rafters, either winding up ten feet away from the nearest player, or rebounding straight down on top of the player who just touched the ball. Not the best environment to play in, and despite a valiant Maryville effort, they (Tusculum) take us in three straight games. Once again the agony of defeat is our companion on the way home.

Coach Ott-Ammons decides that on Monday we're going to go over a 5-1 offense which will hopefully enable us to cover the court better on defense and still provide a fairly strong offense.

Tuesday, October 9th—the team is off to Berea, Ky. to play in a tri-match against Berea and Asbury. Lady Scots prevail and bring home two victories! Evidently the new strategy is paying off. Coach is pleased that the team is able to "rally from a substantial deficit and win, and to gain an early lead and hold on to it."

THRILL OF VICTORY, TAKE US HOME!

The week ahead is highlighted by the Milligan Tournament on Friday and Saturday. It was at last year's tournament that the team first experimented with a 5-1 and proved it to be successful by taking second place. Although not guaranteed, the Lady Scots stand a fine chance of repeating or bettering last year's performance. However, the thing that is first and foremost in everyone's mind is winning some more games and then going on from there. Go, Ladies, go!

The MC soccer Scots improved their record to 3–7 Saturday Oct. 13th as they defeated the Tigers of Hampden Sydney College. The 2–0 win was the second ODAC win for the Scots this year. A first half goal by an aggressive Chris Laisy and a second half goal by Julio Pesiri propelled the Scot's attack.

The Cross Country Club has begun practicing for the 1984 season. Members of the team include Danny Bouch, Rick Carver, Jim Shook, Sarah Schaefer, and Linda Sistar. Mr. Stephen Lemay will serve as coach/advisor to the club. The club's first match is scheduled for November 4th in Knoxville. Other tentative meets include possible matches with King College, Milligan College, and Bryan College. Anyone interested in participating in the club should contact Mr. Lemay in Thaw 203C or Box 2841.

Tigers Win Series

The Detroit Tigers won their first World Series since 1968 on Sunday, October 15, beating the San Diego Padres 8-4 in Game Five. When the Tigers finally uncorked what had been billed as the League's most potent offense, they did it not with power and flash, but with amazing regularity and consistency.

Alan Trammel batted .450 for the series and earned the MVP award in the process. Kirk Gibson had five RBI and powered two home runs, as well as scored a tie-breaking run from third on a sacrifice fly.

Key points in each of the Tigers' victories in the series came on homers: Larry Herndon's in Game One, Marty Castillo's in Game Three, Alan Trammel's in Game Four, and those of Kirk Gibson and Lance Parrish in Game Five.

Seemingly destined to win it all this year, the Tigers won 35 of their first 40 games, but did not blow their big lead under the pressure of the season. The Tigers ended the season with a club record 104 victories, the most in baseball, as well as a major league batting title, when they scored 829 runs and hit 187 home runs for the season.

Scots Valiant in Loss

by Rick Carver

The football team's record fell to 2-3 after losses to Washington and Lee and Centre College.

On October 6th, ODAC foe Washington and Lee came to Honaker field and although the Scots led for most of the game, the visiting Generals came away with a 24-14 win. MC took an early lead when QB Mike Human hit WR William Delaney on a 20 yard touchdown pass. Steve Saylor then split the uprights on the PAT and the Scots led 7-0.

W&L then battled back to tie the game at 7-7. In the second quarter, MC regained the lead when Human found an open Jeff Silver in the endzone for a touchdown. Saylor was again perfect on the point after to make the score 14-7. W&L kicked a field goal to end the half with the score 14-10 in favor of the Scots.

MC held its lead throught the third quarter with its tough defense that was led by linebacker Bob Aucker and strong safety Paul Anagnostis. However, in the fourth quarter, the General's offensive attack wore down the Scots defense to score twice late in the game for the win.

On October 13th, the Scots journeyed to Danville, Kentucky to face the Centre College Colonels. Once again, the Scots got the early lead when TE Chris Johannson snagged a Manny Rodriguez pass and rumbled 62 yards for a touchdown. The only other offensive drive on the day for the Scots came late in the third quarter when Rodriguez scampered into the endzone on a quarterback bootleg play. Unfortunately for the Scots, the drive was too little and too late as Centre dominated for a 35-13 win.

The Scots hope to rebound from these setbacks in their next game on October 20th, when they play host to Millsaps College.

Kandy gives 100%

Schram: Outstanding Athlete

by Rick Carver

While the verdict may still be out on the best female athlete at MC, the winner of the nicest and most personable female athlete on campus is Kandy Schram. The senior recreation major from New Port Richey, Florida, participates in three sports—volleyball, softball, and tennis, and adds a touch of her personality to each sport.

Schram came to MC in the fall of 1980 with the intention of playing sports. She certainly has done what she intended to do in her four years at MC. As evidence, she has won 2 coaches' awards and a most improved player in volleyball, the best offensive award in softball, and the most improved player award in tennis.

As for the sports she competes in, Schram said volleyball is her favorite. She commented that volleyball was more challenging and involved more thinking than softball or tennis. The excitement of the game is another reason why volleyball is her favorite. "The greatest feeling is to set a ball and have it killed," she said.

While Kandy is indeed a great individual performer, she is probably even better at being a team player. She is currently serving as captain of the volleyball team for the second year. She sees her role to be a leader and to help her teammates.Not only does she strive for personal bests, but her goals in athletics also revolve around the team. In tennis, her goal is to have a winning season. In softball, it is a trip to the Nationals for the team. And perhaps the biggest goal is in volleyball –she hopes to go to the Nationals like she did her freshman year. "I want the freshmen to experience the Nationals like I did as a freshman. There is nothing like that feeling. You're on cloud nine the whole way."

Schram gives much of the credit for her personal development to former MC volleyball coach Sharon Brown. "Miss Brown made me appreciate athletics and instilled a feeling of pride in me that just doesn't quit." She also commented that all of her MC coaches have helped her along the way. Along with pride, Kandy has developed a spirit of competitiveness and experienced emotional highs from sports.

As for the future, she is uncertain to exactly what lies ahead. She either plans to attend graduate school or seek employment, but added, "I would like very much to coach volleyball on the collegiate level." One thing is certain, however, she will be good at whatever she does.

Next week: Penzy's determination fires up the team to win.

Poet's Corner

Central American Blues

Thousands of leadened raindrops,
Shower helpless little crops.
There's light from the revolution—
But the reign never seems to stop.

Armored lions roam the jungle,
A woman and torch their guide.
An eagle soars above—
The lamb and the dove have died.

The natives beat their drums,
Hoping northern tribes will hear,
"The bear won't get our honey—
It's the guerillas that we fear."

Salty tears, red streams, purple hearts, shattered dreams.
Smokey skies, mourning eyes, nations cry, money buys.

Hate and greed, forgotten steeple, facts and stats, forgotten people.
Peace and love, dusty now,
stop the machine, don't know how.

Pretends defends,
neighbors, friends.
Tragedy, hypocrisy,
man kind? make amends!

Statues and Crosses continue to weep,
an eagle flies in contradiction, until Life is given a chance and killing a benediction. (Por favor)

Frank Fisch

Jim

I thought of you today
as every day,
And the memory of you
So completely filled
my heart/mind/body
and soul
That I was overwhelmed
by the nearness of you,
And took comfort in it.

To A Friend

The words run freely in my mind
yet paper,
the limp sheets set in front of me, erase my thoughts as though they were never there.
And I make so many futile attempts to express
those emotions of appreciation, that are so strongly built within me.
You've shown just what a friend can be,
yet I cannot help but feel afraid,
for though I feel,
and appreciate your sensitivity
and care,
I wonder if I am not building something that is not there.
And now as I write my appreciation for what you have so far given,
I cannot help but crave more of your attention, and I worry
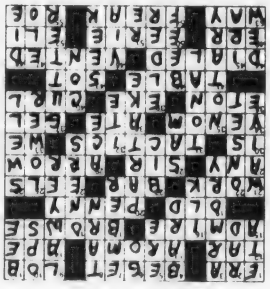
that my greediness
will only cause you to turn away.



ACROSS

1. Epoch
4. Sire
9. Tennis shot
12. Pave
13. Odor
14. Mock
15. Adore
17. Scan
19. Aged
20. Cent
21. Chore
23. Ban
24. Moray (pl.)
27. Some
28. Mister
29. Pointed missile
30. Verb (form of be)
31. Plan (pl.)
33. Plural of I
34. Poison
36. Eat (p.t.)
37. Jelly
38. Coat
39. Squeeze
40. Twist
41. Desk
43. Drunk
44. Tune in (p.t.)
46. Aired
49. Mistake
50. Scary
52. Yale
53. Course
54. Oddity
55. Fish eggs

DOWN

1. 7th Letter, Greek Alphabet
2. Frightened (Early Eng.)
3. Military Depot
4. Poet
5. Before
6. Depart
7. Ash
8. Lake
9. Attorney
10. Ceres mother (Gr.)
11. Drone
16. Type, Sort
18. Burden
20. Indulge
21. Cede
22. Origin
23. Lighter
25. Cut back
26. Bloat
28. __ ___ Spade
29. High card
31. Relation between tones on scale
32. Inhabitant (suf.)
35. Certifier
37. Ditch
39. Senior
40. Trick
42. Squabble
43. Hunt
44. Morning Moisture
45. Ireland Military Organization (abbr.)
46. By way of
47. Rock Group
48. Decrease
51. Concerning

Reach Out and Touch

Recently I did a training session for CONTACT, a telephone counseling ministry. Those who call the number usually do not have anyone with whom they can really share problems and frustrations.

I began to wonder, "How many people on campus need someone to whom they can reach out for help, just someone to listen to problems, frustrations, emotions?" Many students turn to R.D.'s, R. A.'s, professors, roommates, or friends. Yet, how many who need it, for some reason do not turn to someone? They do not have close friends; they have failed to enter a social circle. Perhaps they come from another country, or do not have the social skills necessary to make friends quickly.

Those sensitive to this need may notice someone in your class or your dorm who may need a friend. A friendly open greeting to that person, a few open ended questions such as "How's it going?" or "How was your weekend?" may open some doors that allows a person to share themselves.

As chaplain, I have the charge to be that sensitive listening ear. I also have it as my personal concern. I hope you also not only feel the need to reach out for help from your friends, but also to "Reach out and touch someone" by your caring attitude.

Earl M. Rash
Chaplain

I'm dreaming of the Great Pumpkin
Just like I do this time each year.
When he brings nice toys
To good girls and boys
Who wait for him to appear.
I'm dreaming of the Great Pumpkin
With every Pumpkin card I write.
May your jack-o-lanterns burn bright
When the Great Pumpkin visits you tonight.

---With sincerest apologies to Irving Berlin

The Echo accepts submissions of poetry from faculty, staff, and students. Individual authors retain all rights, and publication in the Echo does not disqualify potential submissions to Impressions. We will return original copies on request.

the highland echo

Vol. 70, No. 4 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Friday, November 2, 1984

MC To Host Conference

by Pam Mathews

Peacemaking and the nuclear threat are two issues of concern for the United States and the world. These issues have to be reckoned with in order to retain the earth as we know it today.

On Nov. 8–10, Maryville College will be the site of a conference, in what could possibly become a continuing series. "Swords into Ploughshares: The Colleges' Responsibility?" a peace studies conference is sponsored by the Peacemaking Program and the Office of Higher Education of the Presbyterian Church (USA). With paper presentations and discussions, major presentations across disciplines, and a keynote address and reflection, the conference will delve into the peace studies issues.

Natural Science, Social Science, and Humanities disciplines as well as administration will be represented by professors and administrators from various colleges. In addition, student representatives from each school will also attend.

Dr. Terry Bunde, Associate Professor of Chemistry at MC, will present a paper examining the chemical side of nuclear war as well as the human aspect.

Other speakers at the conference will include Dr. Mitsou Okamoto, Professor of Peace Studies, Shikoku Christian College, Japan; Dr. Yehehall Mohan, Associate Professor of Sociology, Stillman College, Tuscalooska, AL; Dr. Robert Maydole, Professor of Philosophy, Davidson College, Davidson, NC; Dr. Albert Badre, former President, Beirut University, Beirut, Lebanon, Dr. Michael Pearson, Professor of Sociology, University of North Carolina/Charlotte; Dr. William Gay, Professor of Philosophy, University of NC/Charlotte; and Dr. Ron Crossley, St. Andrew's Presbyterian College, Laurinsberg, NC.

Dr. Ruth Schmidt, President Agness Scott College, Decatur, GA, will deliver the keynote address, followed by discussion moderated by Dr. Wayne Anderson.

Participating in a "point-counterpoint" discussion will be another MC faculty member, Dr. Scott Brunger, Assistant Professor of Economics. The purpose for this discussion is to raise issues on the relationships among the corporate state, international corporations and Third World people.

According to Dr. David Cartlidge, chairman of the MC Religion Department, the participation of colleges has exceeded his expectations. "At first, we only expected 20 colleges to participate, but now there are 25 colleges planning to come. Colleges from as far away as Wisconsin have showed interest in attending," he said.

Dr. Cartlidge also mentioned that because of the increased attendance, there may be a shortage of rooms available. Any students interested in sharing their room with a student from one of the colleges participating can contact Diane Ledford in the Community Services office.

Dr. Cartlidge emphasized the need for this conference since, while looking through various college catalogs, including that of MC, he could find nothing dealing with peace issues. He hoped that the conference would help rectify this problem.

He further stated, "It is an honor for MC to host the first conference in what hopes to be a continuing series." He also wished to thank Dr. Anderson "who has given tremendous help."

A schedule of activities and times will be posted. The schedule of events will also be included in the "On Campus Today" announcements.

Everyone is encouraged to attend and share in this valuable experience.

Dr. Jim Pickens and Nick Venditti give yet another Jabberwocky-repellant wall hanging its final coat of fairy dust in this scene from the upcoming "Alice in Blunderland," to open Nov. 9 on campus.

Playhouse Presents Alice

by Teresa Welch

Rehearsals are well under way for the MC Playhouse and Playmakers' 1984-85 season opener, "Alice in Blunderland."

Performances are scheduled for November 9,10,16, and 17 at 8:15 in the college theatre, according to director Don Thomas. Sharon Crane of MC Student Affairs is co-director.

The play is a musical parody of Lewis Carroll's classic, "Alice in Wonderland." Written by LEGACY, Inc., an interfaith, non-political action group, "Alice in Blunderland" uses whimsical but satiric characters to present a subtle plea for world peace. The script is humorous but powerful.

During her journey through Blunderland to find the truth, Alice, played by Diane McDaniel, encounters battling superpowers, politicians, profiteers, and businessmen to learn their views on the dangerous substance known as fairy dust.

Only the Rabbit, played by John Wright, understands the threat of fairy dust and tries to explain the danger to Alice.

Other cast members include: Teresa Welch as the Cheshire Cat who directs Alice in her journey; David Marcum as the puffed up Prime Minister of Blunderland; and Beth Allison, Cindy Claborn, Maelea Fiore and Karen Shafer as the high-falutin' flowers.

Kim Compton and Louise Donahue portray Tweedledum and Tweedledummer; Dr. Jim Pickens and Nick Venditti play fairy dust entrepreneurs; and Jeff Wallace takes on the guise of the crafty Caterpillar.

MC alumnus Gerald Burnett plays Dr. Carpenter, the brains behind the money making schemes of the Walrus, played by Jim Stevener.

Michael Crawford, Sonja Gilmore, Phil Finney, and Peggie [illegible] the [illegible]st Gnomes, while Beth Allison, Greg Metcalf, Jocelyn Neary and Steve Sipple play a family of middle-class blue-collar Oysters.

Cindy Claborn doubles as the Oyster Chairperson, and several children of the MC faculty and staff will also join the cast for "Alice in Blunderland."

All tickets will be $2.

Positions are still open for backstage and technical personnel. Interested parties please contact Maelea Fiore or the theatre office.

Campus Calendar

Friday, Nov. 2
Homecoming weekend (see Homecoming Happenings).

Saturday, Nov. 3
Homecoming weekend (see Homecoming Happenings).

Sunday, Nov. 4
Recuperation Day. All day. All over campus.

Tuesday, Nov. 6
9:15 a.m. Morning Worship. CCM.
7:30 p.m. Two-piano recital. Music Hall.

Thursday, Nov. 8
Conference on Peace Studies begins at MC.

Friday, Nov. 9
8:15 p.m. Playhouse Production, "Alice in Blunderland." Theatre.
8:15 p.m. John Kamitsuka, pianist, Music Hall

Saturday, Nov. 10
8:15 p.m. Playhouse Production, "Alice in Blunderland."

Tuesday, Nov. 13
9:15 a.m. Morning Worship CCM.

Wednesday, Nov. 14
John McCutcheon, Si Kahn, Susan Freundlich [illegible] mance. TBA.
7:30 p.m. Student Recital. FAC Music Hall

Thursday, Nov. 15
11:15 a.m. CIV–Dr. Alan Pulsipher, "Economic Outlook for the Tennesse Valley." Music Hall
11:30 Comprehensive Exams for Seniors
8:15 p.m. CIV–John Paul, organist. FAC Music Hall.

EDITORIALS

Merci, Gracias, Thank You

The last two weeks at Maryville College have been interesting ones, to say the least. In those two weeks we have seen students go from silently frustrated to angry and vocal to optimistically working toward making MC back into "an enviable environment."

Since we have all spent the past two weeks looking at the bad things about Maryville, it is time that we began to look at the good things about the college and its people.

Sometimes we get so caught up in the hassles, pressures, and pleasures of everyday life that we forget about the people who keep the college running smoothly. Ironically, when these people do their jobs well, we are less likely to notice simply because things do run more smoothly. I would like to say a big "THANK YOU!" to all these people who do so much for us.

THANK YOU to all the secretaries in all the offices on campus. Thanks for making appointments with administrators for us, for acting as go-betweens, and for the countless things you do for us that we students do not see.

THANK YOU to all the switchboard operators in Anderson Hall. Thanks for getting those important messages to us.

THANK YOU to all the ladies in the Business Office. What would we do without you when we must cash a check at 4:55 on Friday afternoon?

THANK YOU to Matt Cragle for setting up the sound equipment for all the dances. Your 2–3 hour preparation is greatly appreciated.

THANK YOU to Mrs. Rop for keeping the post office and bookstore running smoothly. Although most of us rarely get mail, it is nice to know that if, by some miracle, we were to get a letter, you would make sure it got in our box.

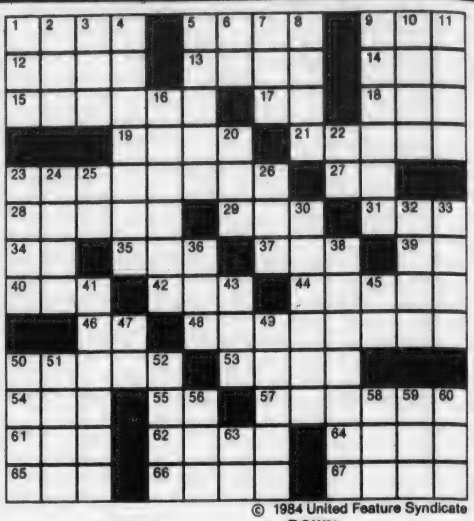
THANK YOU to the library staff for making it as easy and painless as possible to do term papers. Thanks especially to Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. Park for going out of your way to help and always having a smile for us.

THANK YOU to Cookie in the print shop. Although most students do not come in contact with you very often, those who do realize your contribution to the college.

THANK YOU to Coach Arrington for the intramural program. You are helping to produce "well-rounded college students."

THANK YOU to Jean and Jeanne in the Admissions office mailroom. Without you, none of us would be here right now—literally!

THANK YOU to the housekeeping staff. You ladies really help to make life much more pleasant for us, and we appreciate it.



THANK YOU to Susan Whitehead in the registrar's office. It's not easy to keep things running on Registration day or to always be around when we need a quick schedule change, but you always seem to manage it.

THANK YOU to Andy for trying to relieve the monotony of meals with special days and menus.

THANK YOU to the cheerleaders who try to keep morale up on campus. Goodness knows we need it.

Lastly, a big THANK YOU to Dr. Anderson for the way you handled the unsettling campus situation. We really appreciate your efforts.

Thanks once again to all these terrific people. MC wouldn't be the same without you.

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

ACROSS

1 Desert dweller
5 Strike
9 Timid
12 Float in air
13 Comfort
14 Beverage
15 Punctuation mark
17 That man
18 Male sheep
19 Snare
21 Retains 23 Persevere
27 Diphthong
28 Old-womanish
29 Negative
31 Flap
34 Kind of type: abbr.
35 Abstract being
37 Openwork fabric
39 Chinese distance measure
40 At present
42 Small child
44 Measuring device
46 Apart from
48 Dealt secretly
50 Last
53 Encounter
54 Goal
55 Above
57 Handles
61 Consumed
62 Evaluate
64 Disturbance
65 Rocky hill
66 Goddess of discord
67 Portico

DOWN

1 Viper
2 Fish eggs
3 Swiss river
4 Easily broken
5 Style of automobile
6 Note of scale
7 Hard-wood tree
8 Sly look
9 Thoroughfare
10 Pile
11 Sweet potatoes
16 The East
20 Play on words
22 Apiece: abbr.
23 Son of Adam
24 To and upon
25 Symbol for nickel
26 Vast age
30 Mollify
32 Toward shelter
33 Flying creature
36 Drunkard
38 Seesaws
41 Marvel
43 Scottish cap
45 Initials of 26th President
47 Note of scale
49 Apportions
50 Exploit
51 Toward and within
52 Entice
56 Equality
58 River island
59 Also
60 Music: as written
63 Agave plant

Puzzle Answer

I would like to take time to recognize a department that sometimes gets overlooked and taken for granted. Maryville College is very fortunate to have a well operated Athletic Training department. Vanessa Rice and all the student trainers work very hard to keep the athletes healthy and to minimize inquiries. I know from experience that they try to help an injured athlete, (and even a non-athlete) as much as they can to recover from an injury.

Sometimes people forget that the trainers are not miracle workers and can heal one with the touch of a hand. They put up with a lot of complaining people everyday, and do a great job of it.

I just wanted these people to know that their work and effort are not going unnoticed and is deeply appreciated.

Thank you,
Dee Dee Davis

the Highland ECHO

Editor-in-chief ..... Amy Waggoner
Assistant Editor ..... Pam Mathews
Editorial Assistant ..... Teresa Welch
Sports Editor ..... Rick Carver
Photo Editor ..... Keith Moore
Typist ..... Kathy Harrill
Business Manager ..... Mike Crawford
Staff Writers ..... Julie Humpert
Brian Rigell
Lisa Harvey
Nancy Jones
Wade Wright
Laura Hart
Staff Artist ..... Chris Lilley

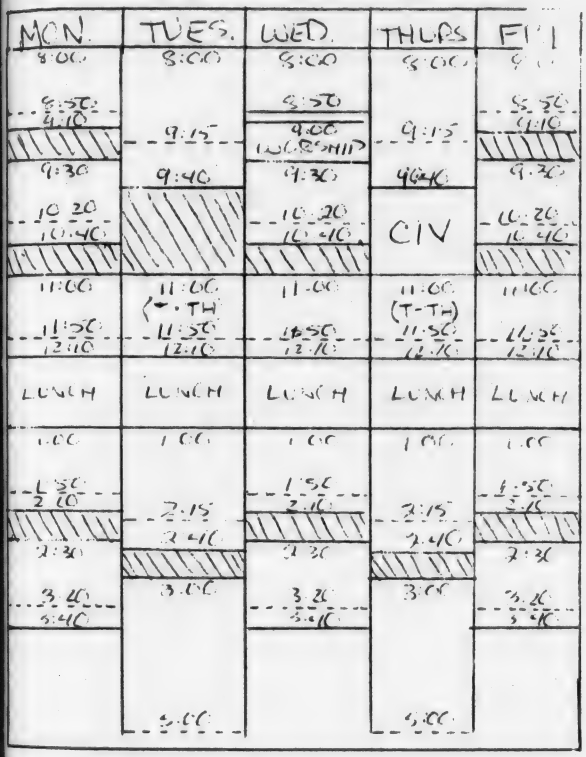
The Highland Echo accepts signed, responsible comments from students, faculty, and staff. Names will be withheld upon request, but unsigned letters will not be published.—ed.

To the editor:

The following is a proposal for a daily schedule which could replace our current schedule.

Under this proposal, the total number of class meetings is equal to the present schedule, but the optional day has been removed. Class ending times vary according to number of credit hours per course (i.e., a 3 credit B-hour class would end at 10:20, while a 4 credit B-hour class would end at 10:40).



Ample time is allowed between classes to socialize, finish exams, prepare for upcoming classes, or talk with professors.

This proposal seems to be more flexible and more relaxed than the one we are presently working under. At the time of this letter, major flaws are not apparent.

I would like to encourage other concerned students to take the time to create a workable class schedule and to present their suggestions to the ALC.

Also, thanks to the members of the faculty, staff, and administration who have taken the time to look over this proposal and offered valuable feedback.

Brenda Gillespie

The award for October's "Student Affairs Staff Member of the Month" goes to John "J.P." Pritchard.

J.P., whose parents were missionaries, was born and grew up in Zaire. He came to MC after 3 years as a manager of Pizza Hut in Maryville and is now taking classes toward a business degree.

J.P. and his wife Barb, a graduate student at the University of Tennessee, are currently RD's in Lloyd Hall, and John is chairman of the Elections Committee of the All-College Council.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
12:45, 2:50, 4:55, 7:00, 9:10
BODY DOUBLE R
1:15, 3:15, 5:15, 7:15, 9:15
Body Rock PG-13
1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
FIRSTBORN
TERI GARR
PETER WELLER PG-13
1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
TERROR IN THE AISLES R

Perkins studies courses

"Nothing is being crammed down anybody's throat," says Academic Dean, Dr. Alfred Perkins refering to the ALC's proposed calendar and curriculum changes.

Dr. Perkins is concerned that students be familiar with the proposals. He also stresses that the ALC only recommends and proposes.

"These proposals are reviewed by the faculty and the ACC-they can be rejected, approved, tabled, or sent back to the ALC."

According to the dean, the Task Force and the ALC examined both the present trimester calendar system and the semester type system for "plusses and minuses."

"It was the judgement of the ALC that the semester system had more plusses."

Dr. Perkins lists these seven factors as plusses for the semester system:

1. Certain disciplines will find the longer 15 week term helpful.

2. The shorter 10 week term of the trimester system creates pressure on some students. The 15 week term of the semester system would help to relieve some of this pressure.

3. The trimester system lends itself to schedule conflicts. With more class periods and two terms instead of three, such scheduling conflicts (such as problems scheduling a Science Thought course or Fine Arts) would be relieved.

4. The present trimester calendar is so different from the calendars of other schools, that any kind of exchange (faculty or student) is extremely difficult. With a semester system or a calendar more similar to those of other schools, such exchanges would be facilitated.

5. Though not a major factor, energy conservation cannot be overlooked. As the college pays $28,000/week at present for heating oil during the winter, it would be economically sound to close down the school for a week during the winter, as the semester system provides.

6. Students would receive an extra week off for Christmas and would get out a week earlier in the summer. This should prove to be an advantage for students who work over Christmas break and during the summer.

7. Outside colleges and agencies (such as the Veterans' Administration) have trouble understanding the present trimester calendar and course credit system. A switch to the semester calendar/credit hour system would be helpful to those dealing with such agencies or transferring to or from MC.

Dr. Perkins states that "not a single student at MC. . .will have to take an additional course because of the [proposed] calendar change."

He also adds that fears that the school will be "making money" from the [proposed] change are unfounded.

"There will be a different way of computing cost for the credit hour system. . . . . I don't think it will cost any student more. . . ."

The Highland Echo, Thursday, March 5, 1981

Dear Editor,

To those one hundred and forty eight students who signed our letter of support please convey this letter of thanks which was sent to them today from a very special man.

To the Maryville College Young Republicans:

I wish there were words to convey adequately how much it means to me to hear from college students like you—especially during these challenging days. Your warm message of support has filled me with renewed resolve to work and fight for the goals we share: a renewal of faith in God and our country and a rededication to the values of family, work, peace, and freedom that made our country great. Please accept my heartfelt appreciation. God bless you.

Sincerely,
Ronald Reagan

On behalf of Roxanne Durham, Ed Steuckle and myself, I would also like to thank the students who helped us four weeks ago in our vote registration drive.

Sincerely,
Tom Scott

The Office of Student Affairs announces a temporary change in the Nurse's hours on call for Maryville College. For the next 2 weeks, the nurse will be in Monday-Friday, from 4:45-7:00 p.m. Dr White's hours remain unchanged, Tuesday nights by appointment only.

This new schedule is experimental. Please let the Office of Student Affairs know if these hours are better than the old morning hours.

From the minutes of the Full Board Meeting, October 19, 1984: "By motion duly made and seconded, the Board of Directors expressed appreciation to students, faculty and administration who are working together to ease the transition of the new academic calendar and daily class schedule. The Board urged the College community to continue to listen and respond to one another in a spirit of cooperation and commitment that will lead to resolution of issues and realization of our common purpose.

HOMECOMING

Sara Covington, a Recreation major from McColl, South Carolina, would like to make recreational therapy her career. This year she was named to the All-America team in basketball, and she also enjoys softball, volleyball, tennis, and bowling.

Amy Blanc is a Business Administration major from Jefferson City, Tennessee. She would like to have a career in business, marketing, or sales. Amy's activities include cheerleading, playing soccer, participating in intramurals, and membership in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

In Pursuit Of Homecoming

by Lisa Harvey

Gloria Anaple, from Cincinnati, Ohio, is a Music/Vocal major. Her long term goal is to perform professionally in music including studio, theater, opera, and teaching. Her hobbies and activities include playing the guitar, singing in the choir, Playmakers and Intervarsity.

For those of you who've been wondering what "Trivia: The Maryville College Edition" is and why it's part of MC's Homecoming, here's the deal: legend has it that Leslie Nier, Terry Whittum, and Sharon Crane had a vision of a giant Trivial Pursuit game last summer. When Tom Hudson, the new Assistant Director of Development, (yes, another one of "those" titles) arrived at the end of August, it was decided that the game would contain only Maryville College Trivia and that it would be incorporated into Homecoming in some way.

Well, the idea developed into a complex plan for a giant Maryville College Trivia game which would include current students, alumni, and faculty & staff as participants. It was felt that this would help bring the three groups closer together. (Isn't that what Homecoming is all about?)

The gameboard is being masterminded by Terry Whittum. It will be centered on the basketball court in Alumni Gym and will, as far as anyone knows, be the largest Trivia gameboard in existence. Each space will be poster-sized, and a giant die will be used. The board will be very similar to the actual Trivial Pursuit board, but the categories will be different. The pies will be carried by "pie-holders" (students, who else?).

The six categories for the MC Edition will be: Sports; Arts & Literature; Presidents, Faculty and Staff; Student Life; Architecture & Geography(according to Tom Hudson, this is "a fancy name for Buildings and Grounds"); and Trash & Treasure, a "potluck" category.

The questions are divided into three types: "trick" questions, hard questions, and easy questions. (i.e. When is Founder's Day? When was Willard House built? When was the MC Alumni Association organized?, etc.) Some of the questions have been submitted by the faculty & staff, but most are being formulated by Tom Hudson, who is using such sources as Dr. Lloyd's History, Dr. Wilson's History, old annuals, old Highland Echo issues, catalogues, admissions brochures, and "other easily verifiable facts" (things happening now, etc.).

The rules are basically the same as for the "real" Trivial Pursuit game. There will be a 45 second time period, however, in which to answer, and the game will last one hour only. The team with the most pies at that time will win. The "Official Question Readers and Judges" will be Tom Hudson and Sharon Crane. The decisions of the judges will be final.

The trivia game will begin as soon as the football game is over, in Alumni Gym, which is also where the barbecue is to be held. It should be a lot of fun, slightly absurd, and definitely unusual, (as well as educational, of course), so everyone come on over to the gym after the Scots win the football game and cheer on your favorite Trivia Team!

CANDIDATES

Adrienne Ramsey, from McMinnville, Tennessee is a Business Administration major and Psychology minor. She would like a career as a retail fashion buyer. Adrienne enjoys "making friends, listening to music, collecting stuffed animals and Music Boxes, and being happy."

Julie Humpert is an English major in the writing track, and also has a minor in interpreting for the deaf. The Fort Mitchell, Kentucky native would eventually like to write for a major magazine and someday publish her poetry. Julie enjoys "jazz, poetry, clouds, soccer, playing guitar, changing flat tires. . .oh, and stamp collecting."

Keep on Truckin'

by Sarah Ferguson

Homecoming week is here and excitement is rising on campus. A lot of this excitement can be attributed to a new attraction in the Homecoming Parade this year called a Spirit Truck. No, not a Spirit duck, a Spirit Truck.

A Spirit Truck is a small Chevy pick-up decorated with the spirit of Maryville College. The trucks are being supplied by Charles West Chevrolet and can be reserved by any group on campus, such as a club, an organization, a class or a dorm. Suggestions for decoration are balloons, posters, streamers, and lots of our two favorite colors–orange and garnet! The trucks will be judged on originality by the alumnae board and the winners will receive a fifty dollar prize.

So grab a truck (they're much easier to decorate than a duck) and start decorating!

One of the biggest events of the year at Maryville College is happening this weekend. Do you know what it is!? Are you excited, "psyched" for a good time? There are a lot of activities planned of which you better be aware, so you can really jump into all of the fun!

Friday, Nov. 2

4:30p.m. On-Campus Homecoming parade. Stan Alumni Association President, will be Grand Marshal.
Executive Alumni Members judging,
$100 for best hall float
$50 for best spirit truck

5:30 p.m. Dinner outside (weather permitting)

7:30 p.m. Homecoming Bonfire and Pep Rally on "Victory Hill"

Immediately following–Coffee House– Alumni Gym

Saturday, Nov. 3

9 a.m. Soccer game–Scots vs. Birmingham Southern

10 a.m.–5 p.m.–MC Harvest Crafts Fair–P.E. Building

11 a.m.–Guided Tour of renovated residence halls and Willard House.–begins at CCM.

11:30 a.m.–1 p.m.–lunch–lawn between Thaw Hall & P.E. Building

1:30 p.m.–Homecoming Football Game–Scots vs. Emory & Henry.
Helium balloon tunnel
1960's teams here
Homecoming Court

4:30 –6 p.m. "Trivia Maryville College" in the Alumni Gym.

4:30–6:30p.m.–College/Community Barbecue–Alumni Gym.

9:00 p.m.–Homecoming Dance –Pearsons
$2.50 per person
Casual, but nice
Tyrone Mathews & Bruce Blaisdell–D.J. s

Relax! Have a Great Time!

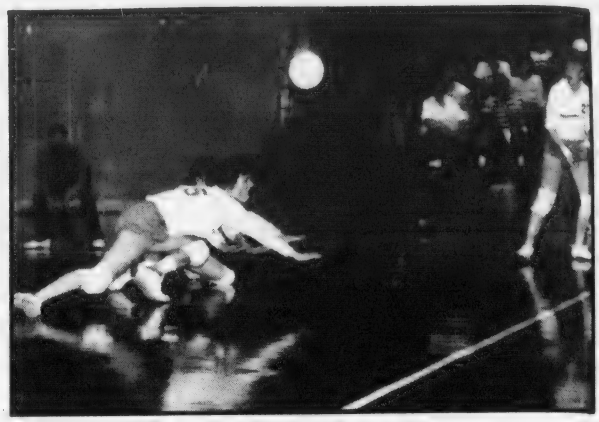
Kim Sperry is a Business Administration major and Psychology minor from Cleveland, Tennessee. She would like to have a career in some type of public relations and management. Kim's activities include aerobics, cheerleading, intramurals

SPORTS

Scots Impressive In Loss

by Rick Carver

The football team's record fell to 2–5 for the 1984 campaign with losses to Millsaps College and Randolph–Macon College recently.



On October 20th, the Scots faced the Millsaps Majors on Honaker field. Millsaps was heavily favored coming into the game, but just barely slipped away with a 14-13 win. In the first half, Millsaps opened the scoring with a first quarter touchdown to lead 7-0. Then, in the second quarter, the rains came, both in the form of precipitation and another Millsaps touchdown. The half closed with the Majors holding a 14–0 lead.

In the second half, the Scots came out fighting and shut down the Majors' offensive attack with a fine defensive effort that was led by freshman noseguard Doug McCarty. The Scots' offensive unit also penetrated the Millsaps goal line late in the third quarter when Roger Scarbro scampered for a touchdown. Steve Saylor's extra point cut the lead to 14-7.

In the fourth quarter, when all of MC's hopes seemed dim, QB Manny Rodriguez hit TE Chris Johannson for a 60 yard completion to put the ball deep in Millsaps territory. A crucial fourth down catch by wide receiver Patt Foster followed to keep the Scots in business. Then with 1:07 remaining to play, Rodriguez hit Jeff Silver for a touchdown. The Scots went for a 2-point conversion and the win, but the conversion failed and Millsaps held on for a 14-13 win.

On Saturday October 27th, the Scots traveled to Ashland, Virginia, to face Randolph-Macon College. The Scots jumped on the scoreboard first with a touchdown run by Manny Rodriguez. The lead was short-lived, however, as the nation's 9th-ranked team trounced the Scots. At the half, the score was 33–6 in favor of Randy–Mac. The Scots defense got tough in the second half, allowing the yellow jackets only 3 more points, but the efforts came too late and RMC won 36–6.

The Scots' next game is November 3rd vs. ODAC foe Emory and Henry on Honaker field.

Athletics Not Just For Athletes

Now that the school year has gotten well under way at Maryville College, intramurals have begun once again. Ah, yes: there's nothing like getting together with a few friends for a game of volleyball, basket ball or water polo.

Yes, you really did read that sentence correctly. I said water polo. The intramural program is being revamped this year under the direction of the Physical Education department and women's basketball coach Sharon Arrington.

The PE Department this year is really striving to give students a wide variety of activities to choose from this year, according to Coach Arrington. Along with the regular volleyball, basketball and softball activities, the program will include raquetball tournaments, indoor soccer, water polo, and perhaps flag football.

Instead of having seasons run 6-8 weeks in each of three sports as had been done in the past, the seasons will run 3-4 weeks for six or more sports.

The IM volleyball season is now in progress. A racquetball tournament with both singles and doubles categories will be held one weekend in early November, and the basketball season will run from late November through the end of the term.

Water polo will be played on weekdays during Interim, while indoor soccer is scheduled for Saturday afternoons during January and February.

The softball season will run from the end of March through April, and another racquetball tournament will be held the first or second weekend in March.

Coach Arrington maintains that an obstacle to having a good intramural program at Maryville is the lack of student participation. "We want students who want to get out here, exercise, and have fun," she said.

Intramurals are a fun, relaxing way to relieve some of the stress that comes from everyday life at MC, and the programs are there, just waiting for students to participate. "We've got the facilities. We've got the program. We've got the willing volunteer help. Now we need the students. After all, the students are who these programs are for," said Coach Arrington.

Anyone interested in more information about intramurals should contact Shannon O' Brien, Sarah Covington, Larry Winter, or Coach Arrington.

Enter The Twilight Zone

by Brian Rigell

Consider for a moment a Sunday afternoon in the month of October. It has been raining most of the day and the sky is still somewhat overcast. Enter stage right a small band of happy travellerswho are on their way to a supposedly wonderful afternoon of merriment and awesome display of talent. In fact, this small band has entered into that dimension that is beyond all others, and before this journey is over it will lead them through. . . .

O.K., so maybe I'm not Rod Serling and it was not The Twilight Zone, but last Sunday I learned something about our volleyball program here at MC and the one over at UT.

Comparitively speaking, there's not that much difference and for all the hoopla and carrying on that usually accompanies Division I programs, I'm just as happy with the one here at dear ole' Maryville. It was nice to travel over to UT with our coach and three of our players to watch the Lady Vols take on the Lady Bulldogs from Georgia, and we all would like to thank Dr. and Mrs. Cronan for their hospitality.

It was also nice to sit back and watch as other teams showed us that they too had to struggle at times before being able to get it together. However, it was especially nice to know that for all the money expended by those two schools in recruiting and keeping their players that our girls here at Maryville have just as much–if not more–determination and dedication when it comes to volleyball

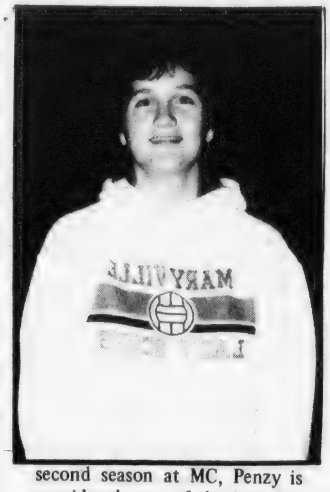
It was that sense of desire that led the Lady Scots to a record of 6–5 for the last two weeks. At King, the Lady Scots defeated Bluefield and then lost to King.

In the Milligan Tournament, the Ladies defeated Elon, Emory & Henry, and Milligan to take first place in the pool play, but suffered a loss to Georgetown to be eliminated from the finals bracket.

At home, Maryville picked up a win against Tennessee Temple, but lost to Bryan and Carson-Newman.

At Sewanee, the Lady Scots defeated Tennessee Temple, but then lost to the host team.

Most of the losses have been close ones, with the Lady Scots winning a game before their opponents can take the match. Comments from officials and other coaches tend to recognize a change for the better over earlier matches.



Coach Ott-Ammons is pleased with the change and says that on their best days, most of the Lady Scots can produce just as well as (and in some cases better than) their opponents. She has high hopes that the team will be both physically and mentally ready and motivated for the WIAC conference championship in Memphis on Nov. 8-10 after the team's last regular season tri-match against Bryan and Trevecca in Dayton on Oct. 30th.

The Lady Scots are 2–2 in conference play and have a good chance to do well if they prove up to the task. Best of luck, Ladies!!

Penzy On The Loose

by Brian Rigell

If you're ever out in the mountains sometime and hear a growl from the bushes, you'll probably be concerned about a bear, but you're still pretty safe because if worse comes to worse you can most likely run and hide somewhere. However, if you ever find yourself on a volleyball court and hear a growl from the other side of the net, then you'd better know that you're in deep trouble, for the only thing known that growls on a volleyball court is a Penzy on the loose. And heaven help you, 'cause when Penzy's on the loose there just ain't no place to hide.

Just who is this creature that strikes fear into the hearts of all those who oppose her? Well, to you and me she's known as Denise Penzkofer, a senior from the Tampa, Fla. area. In her second season at MC, Penzy is considered one of the best hitters that the volleyball program has seen.

Penzy's talents are not only limited to the volleyball court, as she is also a member of both the basketball and softball teams. Although she was redshirted for basketball last year due to an injury, she bounced back for softball and was co-offensive player of the year as well as anchoring the defense at third base and in right field.

When asked why she transferred to Maryville from Montreat–Anderson College (two year) in N.C. instead of going to a place such as Purdue, N.C. State, Clemson, and Florida State (all schools which showed some interest in recruiting her), Penzy said that MC was her choice for a variety of reasons. Included in those reasons were its size–"I wanted to go to a small school," and the reputation and attitude concerning volleyball.

"Purdue wanted me for softball, but didn't have a volleyball team, and since I like volleyball the most, I knew that I couldn't go there."

"Also, I'd heard about Maryville College's volleyball program and its success and I was really pleased with the positive attitude that the administration and school community exhibited toward the program.

"I also liked Maryville because of the facilities and the beauty of the campus."

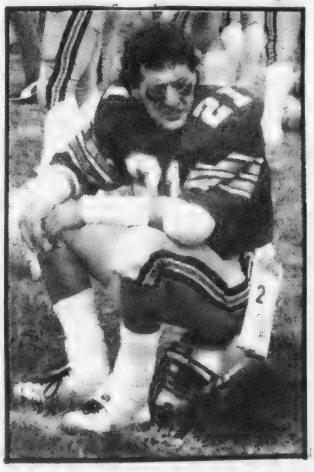
A physical education major who is also earning her teacher's certification, Penzy finds little spare time. Between schoolwork and athletics, she's usually pretty busy. Add to this schedule the responsibility of being an intramural official and a secretary in the HPER department, and what little free time she has slowly dwindles away.

A busy schedule does not deter Penzy from enjoying two of her favorite hobbies: running and rock climbing. One of her biggest thrills this year was to compete in the Run for Liberty Road Race in Oak Ridge.

For her immediate future, Penzy wants to go to graduate school and work on her Master's degree and then her Doctorate. Somewhere down the road she sees herself coaching, but right now she's happy being a player.

So what is the prediction for this young lady who can spike a volleyball so hard that the opposing team members have to dive on their faces to even make a play (or maybe a prayer that they don't get hit)? Well, let's just say that if she works as hard for the rest of her life as she has done to get to this point, there just won't be a limit to her success.

O'Brien: Mr. Clutch



by Rick Carver

Quiz time: Who has played in 35 straight Maryville College football games, hasn't scored a touchdown in four years, but is one of the most reliable players in key situations for the Fighting Scots? If your guess was Shannon O'Brien, then you were right. The 5'11" 175 pound Sr. co-captain of the 1984 Scots has been the clutch player in pressure situations since arriving at MC.

O'Brien came to MC as a transfer from Western Kentucky University in 1981. He saw more playing opportunities at MC and felt he could be a contributing factor to the Scots football team. Now, four years later, O'Brien is co-captain of the Scots and is one of the team's top individual performers.

Of being captain, O'Brien calls it his greatest honor. He also views his captain status as a big responsibility with the duties of keeping a relationship between coaches and players and motivating the team being the primary functions of his job.

As an individual performer, O'Brien will never get the credit he deserves in terms of his value to the team. As he comments, "I've never really had the outstanding season." By this he means that when the final statistics are compiled, O'Brien is rarely among the leaders in yards, receptions, or touchdowns. He is however, an outstanding performer in a manner that too often goes unnoticed. O'Brien does the little things that most fans don't see, but the "little" things help his teammates accomplish the outstanding statistics that people do notice.

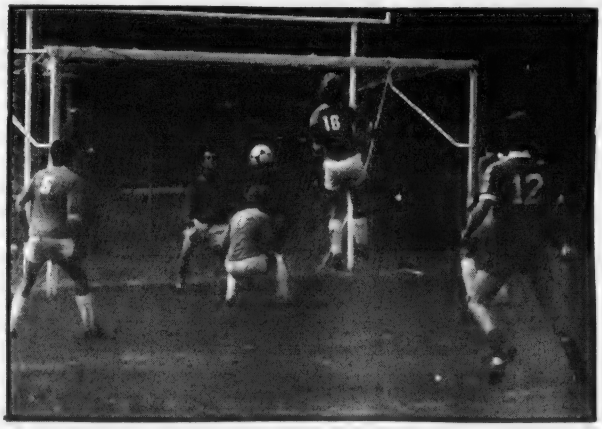
The average player has trouble accepting a role such as O'Brien's. He admits that accepting his unglamorous role was hard, but he has adjusted well, and commented,"Making the catch on third and long, that's my touchdown."



As for pressure, O'Brien thrives on clutch situations. He has no fear of wanting the ball to come his way in tight circumstances, and wishes he had more opportunities to help his teammates in the clutch. "It doesn't bother me," he said of pressure. "I want the glory for the good that I do and I expect blame when I'm at fault." This attitude is what makes O'Brien the quality player that he is.

O'Brien feels he has achieved a feeling of comradeship and team unity from his playing days. In the future, he plans to attend Vanderbilt University and be a graduate student coach for the Commodores. After obtaining a post-graduate degree, O'Brien would like to coach at the collegiate level. He commented that he "would love to start" his coaching career at MC and perhaps move up to be a head coach at a major university.

If one thing is certain in Shannon's future, it is that when the chips are down, players will come to him in the clutch. And based on past performances, the results should be successful.

Close But No Cigar

by Wade Wright

The Maryville College Soccer team traveled to Jackson, Mississippi, to face the Millsaps Majors on October 19th. In a close game, the Scots lost 1–0 on a Major goal in the last minute of play.

The following day, the Scots challenged Rhodes College in Memphis. MC, playing with one man down because of Danny Clark's ejection from the game, turned in another fine performance. The Scots created scoring opportunities all day, but failed to score. Rhodes scored with two minutes remaining to claim a 1–0 victory.

On the weekend of October 26th and 27th, the Fighting Scots came to Honaker field with a 2–1 record in the ODAC and a chance to claim the conference championship. They faced Roanoke College first, and the Maroons dissappointed the Scots with a 4–0 win. The Scots played well in the game, but the 17th ranked Roanoke club proved to be too much.

With the conference title lost, the Scots got a chance to play the role of spoiler against Lynchburg College. Again, the Scots played well and got close, but Lynchburg came away with a 2–0 win.

The soccer team will face Birmingham Southern College at 9 a.m. on Honaker field on November 3rd for their next match.

To Sing Or Not To Sing

by Peggy Millsaps

Forget the false distinctions that seek to divide the world into opposing camps—white, black; rich, poor; male, female; Democrat, Republican; cool, un-cool. With true humanitarian spirit (and a little personal bias), I submit that there is really only one distinction among human beings: those who can sing (or think they can) and those who cannot (and know it).

You know the ones who think they can: as children they invariable sang rather than recited their abc's. From school-yard see-saws they belted, top volume, "and Bing-O was his name-O: ," "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," and proceeded undaunted through "The Candy Man."

As adolescents they became more brazen still, prancing through their homes playing invisible guitars and screeching heavy metal hits, crooning torch ballads to their sweethearts' photos (or, worse, to their sweethearts), and barraging carloads of friends with one-man Top 40 concerts.

These are the adults who can be heard Sunday's from the back pew to the pulpit. Who volunteer to sing at weddings. Who murmur (but quite audibly) lull-a-byes to their children. Who, at Christmas, compete with Bing Crosby for knowledge and repeated renditions of favorite carols. Who actually sing, rather than

I, myself, like driving on deserted country roads in a car with a faulty muffler and the radio blasting at a decibel level that rivals the Jacksons' concerts. Then and only then do I indulge in that gift denied me since birth.

Timorously, hesitantly, and with great trepidation, I sing.

What would you like to see in the paper? We need suggestions to make your paper, the Highland Echo , better! Drop suggestions in Box 2820. We want student input!

Poet's Corner

My eyes return from searching.
October 1st.
Late summer green is muddy, slowly dripping into trunks thick with sap, turning leaves turning, catch some sight of me, bleeding colors from my eyes before fall leaves, falling, hit ground hard, tumbling over roots, stones, history, back into the land.

by Julie Humpert

The fire burns dim slowly dying
as the woodpile
soon diminishes
The blaze has long been gone and left the coals smoldering in the bleakness
of the evening
A few sparkles flash brightly determined to survive
the cold winter night.

LD

1. What Russian master spy lived in the U.S. under the name Emil Goldfus?
2. What's the point value of the outer bullseye on a dartboard?
3. What are the six murder weapons in the game of Clue?
4. Who defended the Boston Strangler?
5. Which of the five senses develops first?

Answers

1. Rudolf Abel
2. Twenty-five
3. Candlestick, knife, lead pipe, revolver, rope wrench
4. F. Lee Bailey
5. Smell

Kick off the weekend with a Domino's Pizza

Don't miss any of the football action this weekend. Domino's Pizza will deliver a hot, nutritious pizza to your door in 30 minutes or less at no extra charge.

Use the coupon below and you won't have to take timeout to cook.

Limited delivery area.
©1980 Domino's Pizza Inc.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.

Fast, Free Delivery
983-0000
407 W. Broadway

DOMINO'S PIZZA

Free Pepperoni!
Free pepperoni on any 16" large pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 11/15/84

Fast, Free Delivery
407 W. Broadway
Phone: 983-0000

DOMINO'S PIZZA

$2
Off any 16" Price Destroyer™
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 11/15/84

Fast, Free Delivery
407 W. Broadway
Phone: 983-0000

DOMINO'S PIZZA

$1
$1.00 off any size pizza.
One coupon per pizza.
Expires: 11/15/84
Fast, Free Delivery
407 W. Broadway
Phone: 983-0000

DOMINO'S PIZZA

009248

$3
off any two 16" pizzas.
Must be delivered at the same time to the same address.
Expires: 11/15/84

Fast, Free Delivery
407 W. Broadway
Phone: 983-0000

DOMINO'S PIZZA

the highland echo

Vol. 70, No. 5 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Friday, November 30, 1984

College Harmful to Student Health

College classes can give students harmful doses of stress and pressure, according to a new University of Utah study.

In many college classes "there is an overemphasis of grades" and other academic requirements that put "unnecessary" pressure on students, says David Spendlove, one of three Utah medical instructors who conducted the study of professional, graduate and undergraduate students here.

Withholding grades and test scores, publicly posting grades, and not clearly defining what kind of performance is expected of students create needlessly high levels of anxiety among students, the study reports.

"A lot of times it seems like teachers enjoy hiding things from students, trying to make it as difficult as possible for them to learn," Spendlove says.

"This is not teaching. It's just hurting the students," he adds.

"Many students have stress because they feel they have no control" over their academic lives, says study co-author Claire Clark.

Stress, she adds, is "a discomforting response of a person in a particular situation."

"Not all stress is negative," Clark says. In fact, "the right amount of stress is positive because it is motivating."

But too much stress can damage students' learning abilities, she adds, causing them to become frustrated and out of touch with their schoolwork.

Frequently, stressed-out students overstudy or study minute details, missing the "big picture" of a class, the study says.

But good instructors, the researchers note, can eliminate much of the excess stress that plagues students.

For one thing, "teachers should emphasize excitement about a subject rather than competition," says Spendlove. "Excitement is much more rewarding."

Instructors also should mingle with their students, and get to know them as people, he says.

"By socializing with students,' Spendlove explains, "faculty make themselves more approachable, more human."

And instructors should encourage students to socialize with each other, too, by allowing advanced students to tutor beginners, the study suggests.

Students also should know early in the class what is expected of them, the study says.

Clark adds it is vital for instructors to give feedback to students so they have some idea of their performance level.

Conference Studies Peace

by Pam Mathews

"Of course, we didn't end the nuclear threat, but it's one step in the right direction," stated optimistically by Dr. Dave Cartridge, director of the peace studies conference "Swords into Ploughshares: The College's Responsibility?" held at MC last month.

Dr. Cartlidge was pleased with the outcome of the conference. "There was real good substantive exchange in regard to the various papers presented. Many of the participants requested copies of the papers presented at the conference, which is a good indicator of the quality of the papers." He also mentioned that copies of the papers will be available in the near future.

"Another significant aspect," Dr. Cartlidge continued, "is that we began to get a clearer picture as to the extent of interest already established for peace studies and conflicts. There are 20 universities and colleges currently offering degrees in peace studies.

"The key to this is that by realizing that the policies of violence are no longer useful and building this into college curriculums, peace studies will eventually trickle down into secondary schools and later to the elementary level. We'll be able to integrate it into the whole educational system."

He wished to extend his deepest gratitudes to Dianne Ledford, director of community services, Diane McDaniel, assistant director of the conference and religion major here at MC, Rev. Earl Rash, campus minister, and the students "for the terrific help that they have given."

He also wished to thank Dr. Terry Bunde and Dr. James Pickens for their hard work in making this conference a success.

"We need to get the world to look at alternative solutions before we exhaust our human potential in an unending search for military superiority to the point where nothing human is left," concluded Dr. Cartlidge rather ominously.

EDITORIALS

IT'S BEEN A TOUGH YEAR....

Dear Editor,

It's been a tough week for liberals, women, people from New York, Democrats, Italians who are also female and from New York, etc., etc., etc.. Tuesday night I publicly (and sarcasticly) announced: "I forsake America."

Like most Democrats, I was surprised by that electoral landslide of Election Day 1984. The deadliest moment came when the newscaster announced that New York had forsaken its own and given its electoral votes to Reagan-Bush instead of their own home-grown Ferraro ticket. It was at this precise moment that I shed a tear and renounced the state of my birth and all five boroughs (not just Queens).

I think I was in an anti-conservative coma for a few days because the next thing I remember is a seminar session of this week's Peace Conference here on campus. The topic was "A Moral Evaluation of Nuclear Deterrence" led by Mr. Robert Maydole. In this session, Mr Maydole categorically abolished any semblence of faith one might have in nuclear buildup as a deterrence.

The argument presented the "Paradoxes of Deterrence." First, there is the Paradox of Intention. This discusses the possibility that no one would ever dream of using nuclear weapons. This is curious, by the way, because if the world would recall, they have already been used. The only difference is that we have chosen to paradoxically call this historical event "Victory over Japan" day.

Second, Mr. Maydole pointed out, is the Paradox of Pointless Retaliation, which I trust is self-explanatory.

Next, we have the Paradox of Suicide. The scenario was put forth that if the USSR was to bomb our missile sites, what would/should we do? Should we bomb their silos? No, they would be empty, and this would be pointless. Should we, then, bomb their cities? This too would be pointless and suicidal. It would logically follow that if the USSR were to choose to bomb out missile sites, they would use their land based (more accurate) missiles. If we, in turn, bombed their cities, they would launch again with their less accurate other-than-land-based missiles. Either way, it is certain that retaliation would be suicidal.

Finally, there is the Paradox of Wrongful Intention. This is basic and all-important. Whether it is "US" or "THEM," we must recognize in our own hearts and minds that it is wrong to destroy.

And so, Mr. Maydole proposed disarming. Logically, he theorized that the chances for total destruction compared to limited destruction vary greatly when considering mutual build-up versus even one-sided disarming. (Mr. Maydole suggested that we replace the USSR with the US in these considerations.)

It was a tough time for idealists in that room. There were some who didn't buy the disarming answer. They said it was too idealistic. Maybe they were right. I kept thinking that a hundred years ago or so the idea of a weapon that could guarantee one's ability to annihilate one's enemy was very idealistic. But, being a Democrat from New York whose teeth felt like they'd recently been kicked in, I didn't open my mouth.

Also as part of the conference, Dr. George Conn led a worship service where he retold a parable by Kierkegaard. It went something like this: There was a crowd taking their seats in a theatre. A clown came out to center stage, arms flailing, trying desperately to tell the audience that they must leave the theatre quickly because of a dangerous fire that had started. Try as he might, the audience took it all as a colossal joke and imagined the end of the world this same way. . . someone would be trying to warn the inhabitants of some grave danger, which the collective body of humanity would roar at, taking it as a joke.

Without skipping a beat, or taking so much as a half-second pause, Dr. Conn quickly echoed the words of our recently re-elected President, saying: "I have just solved the problem of the Russians. . . the bombs start in five minutes!"

I have just returned from the Playhouse production of Alice in Blunderland . As I was leaving, someone said ". . .it makes you want to write letters." So, I sat down to write this letter-turned novelette. . .for some who might have missed something pertinent this past week. It has been a tough week for a lot of people, and it promises to be an even tougher four years, especially for those who believe that Peace is Disarming.

Ciretta Carpenter

"You really missed something!"

I told a friend who didn't make it to the play a couple of weeks ago that everyone on campus should have seen it. I didn't go so far as telling him that he was a fool for not going, but he missed one of those rare experiences. . .a chance to learn about himself, others, and the world around him without a lot of pain or hassle.

I went to "Alice in Blunderland" not knowing what to expect. If anything, I expected a "heavy" activist play. In any case, I wasn't prepared for what I got.

As it turned out,"Blunderland" is a satiric masterpiece to appreciate, no matter what political beliefs you hold. Except for the introduction, the play makes no mention of tanks, guns, or nuclear war. Fairy dust is the most potent weapon in the play.

You can believe anything you want to about nuclear war or Reagan or Democrats or tanks or guns or Republicans or flowers or bunnies or oyster conventions, but Blunderland's message shines through. It is to look at yourself. Find out what you believe in. Then fight for it.

I believe in mountains, rivers, and stars, so I'll fight for mountains, rivers, and stars. If you believe in peace, fight (figurately, of course) for peace. If you believe in yourself, fight for yourself.

We can't ignore the lessons in Blunderland. If we really care, apathy doesn't have a chance.

Getting involved is worth the price if the prize is valuable to you. Even the rabbit would agree: it's worth it.

the Highland ECHO

Editor-in-chief.....Amy Waggoner
Assistant Editor.....Pam Mathews
Editorial Assistant.....Teresa Welch
Sports Editor.....Rick Carver
Photo Editor.....Keith Moore
Typist.....Kathy Harrill
Business Manager.....Mike Crawford
Staff Writers.....Julie Humpert
Brian Rigell
Lisa Harvey
Nancy Jones
Wade Wright
Laura Hart
Staff Artist.....Chris Lilley

The Highland Echo accepts signed, responsible comments from students, faculty, and staff. Names will be withheld upon request, but unsigned letters will not be published.—ed.

ACC Minutes

John Pritchard, Chairman of the Elections Committee, brought a proposal that Neal McBrayer and Rick Carver replace Hubert Dixon and Eleanor Woodfin as ACC junior representatives. The Elections Committee's recomendations were approved, and Co-Chairman Anderson welcomed Donald Dove as freshman representative.

Dean Perkins of the Academic Life Council informed the Council of the ALC's work agenda. He also reported that the ALC will meet weekly to discuss a special agenda concerned with problems that have surfaced during this term.

Dean Richardson reported that the Student Life Council is working on a proposal involving the Judicial Board.

Chaplain Rash reported on various projects of the Religious Life Council. He informed the Council that this year's February Meetings will be led by Rev. Ed McNulty, and the theme will be "Christian Values and Media."

Eddie Forbes, Pamela Mathews, and Neal McBrayer were approved to participate in the Tennessee Intercollegiate Student Legislature in Nashville, Nov. 15-18.

Complete Minutes of this meeting are posted at the Community Bulletin Board and outside the Student Center.

NO MORE ACC

"College governance should be re-examined. . . Specifically, the current academic life council and all college council should be studied. . ."

April, 1983
Southern Association of Colleges and Schools

How many of you know that a committee is working right now to establish a new system of student government to replace the ACC? Many students I've talked to had no idea that anyone is even working on the problem.

The quote beginning this section was taken directly from a report sent to President Anderson by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, requiring that something be done about the ineffective All College Council.

No matter what happens in other administrative matter, we will be given another governance system, most likely a Student Senate. The organizers of the Task Force are open for student suggestions.

Students at Maryville College need to work with the Task Force, not only giving them suggestions, but also giving them support and enthusiasm. These people representatives of students, faculty, and staff– are working hard to give us a voice in MC affairs and we will no longer have to say, "No one is listening to us!"

For those who would rather sit back and let others work out a system, rest assured that something will be done, whether it be with student assistance or not. Have patience, though. The ACC wasn't developed overnight, and neither will its replacement be.

We must be enthusiastic, supportive, and patient, so that everything else will fall into place.

SENIORS

Senior Candids for the yearbook need to be taken by December 10th (no later!) in order to be published. Please contact Victor Oakley 2547 or Brenda-2174. Soon. Thanks!

–An open invitation to Maryville College Students–
Come on down to Dismas House at 212 Cates St. for food and fellowship. Become part of the Dismas family. Call Tommy Brown at 984-8751 or through Box 2046.

NATIONAL COLLEGE NEWS

Hundreds of Sam Houston State U. students waved syringes, shouted pro-death penalty slogans and chanted "We're Republicans" outside a Texas prison as officials executed killer Thomas Andy Barefoot by injection.

Louisianna State officials banned three "sexually explicit" student works from a campus art show, but then said bowing to a minister's demand to cancel a Halloween night Culture Club concert on campus would be "censorship."

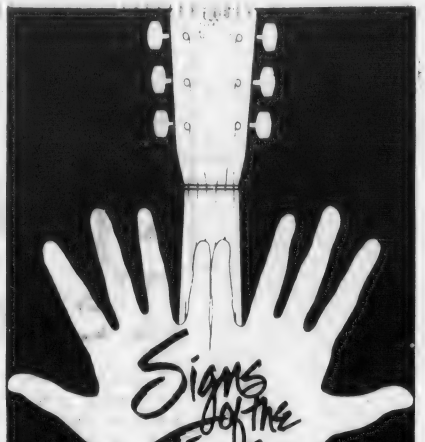
Indiana U. students, following Brown and Colorado, may vote to have officials stock cyanide pills to use in case of nuclear war.

Cal State-Hayward's student government will launch a campaign to get a new sports nickname to replace The Vampires, which students narrowly approved over The Zucchinis in a vote last spring.

U. Wisconsin's absurdist student government is letting any student "with the craziest, strangest, funnest, most creative idea" be President For A Day.

About two-thirds of U. Colorado's student voters turned down a measure to ask the health service to stock cyanide pills to hand out to students in the event of nuclear war.

ASU administrators first stopped the General Union of Palestinian Students from displaying a poster of an Israeli flag with a swastika on it because it led to a fight on ASU's Cady Mall, but then said lawyers had told them they couldn't stop the display.



Last week undaunted U. Minnesota officials told student William Wineger to remove a swastika from his dorm window.

When Wineger complained he was being singled out, officials serarched three dorms for other political signs, found exactly one (a Reagan-Bush poster), and forced the student to remove it.

In a letter to faculty and staff, university President Thomas K. Hearn, Jr. said a committee is studying the effects of Wake Forest's "bargain" tuition image on its efforts compete for students with Duke, Virginia, North Carolina– Chapel Hill and North Carolina State.

Two years ago a consultant suggested George Washington U. raise its tuition to polish its image as a "prestige university," but after much student reaction, GWU decided to keep tuition levels in line with costs, not public relations concerns.

Student Affairs Staff Member of the Month for November is Mary Ann Wise. Mary Ann is the dorm mom for Hall 1. Congratulations!

Laura Hart

Something extraordinary occurred at the Maryville College theatre on November 14. If you were part of the audience that Wednesday evening you enjoyed the songs and signs of three friends: John McCutcheon, well-known folkmusic artist; Si Kahn, nationally known as an organizer, songwriter and performer; and Susan Freundlich, one of America's foremost sign language interpreters.

If one walked into the theatre not knowing any one of these people, he surely knew who they were when he left.

John McCutcheon displayed an impressive amount of talent. He not only sang but acted, signed, and played a variety of instruments, such as the guitar, fiddle, autoharp, and dulcimer (an instrument with wired strings of "graduated lengths, played with two padded hammers").

When one hears the eloquence of this harmonic instrument, he naturally feels the melodic flow of each note. It was an experience in itself. This instrument was nearly extinct at one time but John has been regarded as a central figure in reviving new interest in it.

John has recorded such albums as Winter Solstice and Fun Times at Our House.

When he is not recording his own songs or working with artists such as Paul Simon, Holly Near and Johnny Cash, John leads workshops on folklore at universities, works with other traditional musicians around the world, and uses his talents towards social justice issues.

Si Kahn, a long time friend of McCutcheon, has worked over 20 years in the American South with the civil rights movement as an organizer for trade unions and citizens movements, and a political activist.

He has written two books, How People Get Power (1970) and Organizing: A Guide for Grassroots Leaders (1982). As a musician, he has appeared throughout the U.S. and has 500 folk songs to his credit.

Susan Freundlich has used her sign language abilities to open cultural doors for those who are hearing impaired. She has interpreted concerts for dozens of artists including Holly Near, Pete Seeger, Emylou Harris, and Tom Chapin. In 1982 the documentary film "See What I Say," which Susan co-conceived and was featured in, was nominated for an Academy Award.

Throughout her adult life Susan has been involved in helping the deaf better understand and communicate with the world around them.

The program included some very personal material and reflected the hopes, the joys, and the sorrows of other people and their way of life. . .

"Everyone is Nicaragua" was dramatically interpreted by Miss Freundlich. In essence it stated "when one suffers, we all suffer."

"Children of Poland" was written and sung by Kahn about his grandfather's days in Poland. It was delightful and humorous.

"Christmas in the Trenches" was written and sung by McCutcheon, and it conveyed the sadness of war and how no one ever truly wins. . . .

These are only a few of the numerous songs that were beautifully performed by McCutcheon and Kahn, but Susan Freunlich's combination of American Sign Language, mime, and dance gave those songs an added beauty and new life. She opens up a cultural experience for the hearing impaired and provides a new visual dimension for the hearing.

As the final moments of the concert were about to close, the audience of both hearing and deaf joined in signing. . .

Come darkness
Come light
Where are we bound
Come morning
Come night
Here is my home.

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.25 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM
FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER
1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15
Supergirl PG
1-3-5-7-9
A CHRISTMAS STORY
THE TERMINATOR R
THE RAZOR'S EDGE PG 13

TRYOUTS FOR SPRING PLAYHOUSE PRODUCTION DANCE/CHORUS ENSEMBLE MONDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1:00 p.m. THEATRE

Particulars: The dance/chorus ensemble will be the featured part of the spring show (Production April 19, 20, 27, 28). Dance rehearsals will begin immediately on a limited basis.

1. You do not have to have prior dance experience.
2. You do not have to sing.
3. We will work around interim and choir trips.
4. There will be no direct interference with senior comps.
5. You may try out for other parts in the show.
6. Wear loose clothes for the auditions.

IF YOU HAVE ANY QUESTIONS SEE DON THOMAS.

Fairview PeeWee & Midget Football Team would like to thank Scott Cinnamon and Paul Anagnostis for speaking at their banquet this year. Both young men did a fine job with some down to earth advice for everyday living. Maryville College should be very proud of these two fine athletes. Again, THANKS Scott and Paul and best of luck in the future.

Bill Pritchett, coach

Supreme Court Upholds Tennessee Law

A court okay of a law forcing Tennessee students to prove they've registered for the draft before they can enroll at a state school could mean students in other states soon may have to prove it, too, draft opponents say.

But at the same time, the U.S. Department of Education last week said students' honesty in signing military registration forms has been so complete the department won't require colleges to prove their students' registration in order to get student aid.

Until now, students' signatures on a form swearing they'd registered for the draft had been proof enough that they'd actually signed, but as of January 1, colleges themselves would have been responsible for proving students who wanted federal aid had registered.

Tennessee's new law requires students to sign forms certifying they've registered with Selective Service just to enroll in a state school, much less to qualify for federal student aid.

As a result, Memphis State University refused to let 19-year-old Thomas Vogel start classes because he refused to sign the compliance form.

Vogel then sued the university and the state, claiming the law unconstitutionally involved the state in enforcing federal Selective Service laws.

Pointing to a controversial 1984 Supreme Court ruling upholding the Solomon Amendment—the federal law which requires students to prove they've registered for the draft before they can get federal financial aid—U.S. District Judge Thomas Wiseman recently approved the Tennessee law.

"As the nation's defense goes, so goes that of the state," Wiseman ruled.

No one is sure how much such laws help. "I don't believe we've ever found a nonregistrant because (he) refused to sign a college compliance sheet," says Selective Service spokeswoman Joan Lamb. "There is no requirement for colleges to do anything like turn over the names of students who don't sign a compliance form."

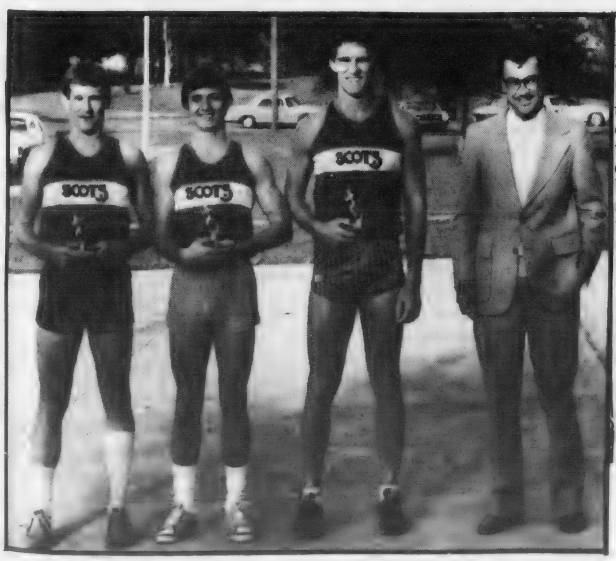
In fact, the Selective Service has prosecuted only 17 of the estimated 500,00 nonregistrants, Lamb adds.

Both Lamb and the Education Department say they're impressed with the number of students who have complied with the registration law and the Solomon Amendment.

Edward Elmendorf, assistant secretary of education, last week said he was so impressed with students' "honesty" that he was relieving colleges of the chore of proving students were telling the truth when they signed their compliance statements.

Still, registration opponents say they expect more states will keep trying to link college to the military in other ways.

A number of states—Massachusetts, Maine, Pennsylvania, California, and West Virginia among them—already have toyed unsuccessfully with laws to keep nonregistrants from getting state aid, says Nora Leyland, a spokeswoman with the Committee Against Registration for the Draft (CARD).



"I foresee more states enacting Solomon-like bills trying all kinds of aid and access to draft registration," she says. "It's not going to automatically happen in every state because the political horizons are so different. But I think some states will definitely try."

The Selective Service's Lamb, however, doubts such state laws will affect many students.

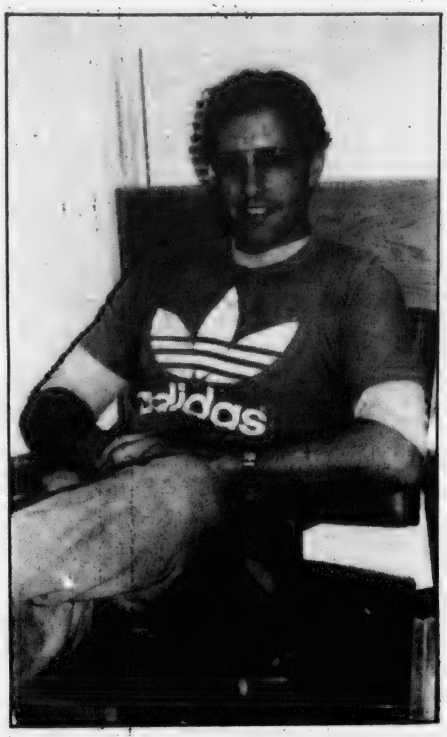
"The Solomon Amendment was terrifically helpful (in getting students to register)," she says. "We saw a tremendous jump in registration in the fall when many students were returning to school and applying for aid."

SPORTS

CC Off and Running

On Sunday, November 4th, the Cross Country Club ran their first race of 1984 at Lakeshore Mental Institution in Knoxville. The team of Rick Carver, Dan Bouch, and Jim Shook climbed their way through the mountainous hills of the 6.2 mile course to capture seventh, eighth, and eleventh places overall. The combination of the three finishes added up to 26 points, which was good enough for the team to take home second place laurels in the open (18-29) age group. In addition to the student achievement, Coach Steve Lemay finished in 5th place overall, and was on the second place team in the senior age group. All in all, it was a good day, as the club won four trophies. The next activity for the club is a scheduled 5K race on November, 17th.

Soccer



by Wade Wright

The Scots soccer team rebounded against Centre after suffering a disappointing homecoming. The Scots lost 6-1 to Birmingham Southern. The lone Scots goal was scored by Charlie Gumula in the 1st half. The team showed its ability to comeback in the second half by dominating the play. But luck was not on the Scots side and they failed to score.

The final game of this season was played against Centre College in Kentucky. The Scots opened up the scoring in the 1st half with two goals from A. D. Jordan, who had assists from Chris Laisy and Wade Wright. The 1st half ended with the score 2-0 in favor of the Scots. With a late 2nd half surge by Centre, following the ejection of Adolpho Prieto and a Centre player, the score was tied at 2-2. Following a brief intermission, the teams took to the field again to play two 10 minute overtime periods. A.D. Jordan got his 3rd goal of the game when he scored off a corner kick. But luck was not on the Scots' side. In the second period of overtime, Centre got a penalty kick. With the score tied again at 3-3, the game began to get physical. There were numerous goals that eventually provided Centre with the final chance at goal. After a free kick at midfield, the Colonels scored with one minute to go. The game ended 4-3.

Thus ends another soccer season. But if the last game was any indication of the future, the Fighting Scots are a team to watch. The team would also like to thank and congratulate the two seniors, Chris Laisy and Mack Paschall, and wish them all the luck in the future.

Dunlap Looks to Future

by Rick Carver

In most cases, the role of student assistant coach belongs to some charity case senior who has a broken leg and cannot participate, but is such a great guy to have around that the head coach appoints him as "student coach." That's in most cases. However, here at MC we have someone who, through integrity and personal dedication, adds a new meaning to the position of "student-assistant coach." His name is John Dunlap. "He's the most dedicated full-time, part-time coach I've ever seen" commented Athletic Director Bobby Saylor.

Dunlap, a junior from Syracuse, N.Y., began coaching at Boca Raton Academy in Florida.

He came to MC in the fall of 1982 to play in one or more of the sports in which he excelled in his high school days. He realized that he would have a greater impact on more people and on his career if he assumed the role of coach, so he decided to turn down playing for long range goals. "I see it as a great opportunity to gain experience to accomplich my future goal of becoming a head coach on the collegiate level someday," Dunlap said of the transition.

Dunlap said his main goal in coaching is to help others. "I want to better myself to help other people better themselves," he said. He also feels that coaching is right for him as a career, because "you get a lot more than a paycheck. My greatest reward is watching someone better themselves through my efforts."

This isn't to say that Dunlap sees the coaching profession to be perfect. "I still feel like playing, and I haven't gotten my full fill of playing," Dunlap remarked. "I get frustrated because I want to be in on the action." But Dunlap has learned how to handle his frustrations of being a coach and credits his development as a coach to former MC coach Pat Murphy and Coach Saylor. "I've learned how to give more, to be more concerned with other people, and I've become aware of the emotions of others, which helps me realize my own emotions," Dunlap said. "Now, I get a feeling of personal satisfaction if I can teach someone not to do the things that I did wrong as a player."

The impact that Dunlap has made on MC players cannot be measured by wins and losses or mere statistics. It can be measured only through the feelings of his players and his coaching peers. For now, Dunlap is satisfied with his role as a student assistant coach. "A lot of players come to me with their problems. I feel more like a friend instead of a coach," he replied. His actions and words of wisdom he has spoken to several of the athletes will probably be only a small portion of the success that is in store for him in his career. As evidence, Coach Saylor adds, "He has contributed tremendously to the program, is a good coach, and will be an outstanding coach in the future."

Lambert Predicts Winning Season

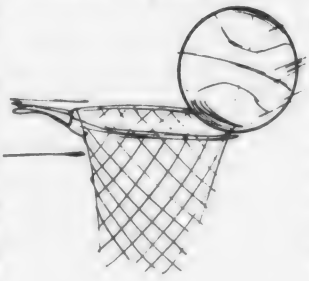
by Rick Carver

Coach Randy Lambert's 1984-85 Maryville College basketball team is headed for a second place finish in the ODAC this year, according to an ODAC press conference held recently. Whether or not the Fighting Scots can live up to this prediction remains to be seen, but if pre-season workouts are a good indication, then Coach Lambert feels his team can do even better than in the past, due mostly to experience.

He also mentioned that the team has established high goals for the '84-85 season. Winning more than 15 games, winning the ODAC, and obtaining an NCAA bid for post-season play are three of the prime targets that the Scots will be shooting for.

Lambert sees mental discipline and an intense attitude as major keys to the season. "Mental discipline will be the key," he said. "Physically, we're there; we have experience and depth. We need to increase our intensity."

The point guard spot will be manned by 6'0 jr. Paul Mills. Mills was second in the ODAC in assists last year with a 4.2 average per game. Backing up Mills will be fr George Lancho.



The starting number two guard in the Scots lineup will be 6'4" Tom "T.R." Robinson, who averaged 8.6 points per game in the 1983-84 season. Transfer Scott Warden and fr. Jeff White will also see action at this position.

6'5" Ray Burnett will start at small forward, while 6'3" James Austin and soph. Jeff Ketron provide relief. The Scots have 6'5" Deangelo McDaniel returning with his 16.5 p.p.g. scoring average.

The other post man will be Dan "Sticks" Kirkpatrick, who was 3rd in the ODAC with an average of 8.3 rebounds per game last year. 6'5" sr. Tyrone Mathews, 6'9" Robert Walters, and 6'4" Dennis Varhol will be the big reinforcements. Others to see action for the Scots will be transfer Tim Hammond, soph. Steve Tensi, and fr. Marc Shalkowski. The team will be led by tri-captains McDaniel, Mills and Robinson.

Coach Lambert also stressed a need for better support from the MC community.

So come out and support the Scots as they shoot for greater heights.

All-ODAC

Two Maryville College football players have been named to the 1984 All-Old Dominion Athletic Conference team.

MC senior Paul Anagnostis, strong safety for the Fighting Scots from Hialeah, Fla., was selected for All-ODAC first team honors for the second consecutive year.

Anagnostis, 5-foot-11, 195-pounds, was a four-year starter for MC and served as team captain the past two seasons. He was named to the All-ODAC second team his sophomore year.

Named second-team All–ODAC this year was senior Brian Gunter. The 6-foot-3, 233-pound offensive lineman from Chattanooga was a three-year starter for the Scots.

Go Get 'em, Ladies!

by Brian Rigell

Step aside George Plimpton, for I, too, have made the transition from writer to athlete and have lived to tell about it. One night last week I was invited to attend a practice session of the Lady Scots Basketball team and here's what I found out.

The Lady Scots are going with a new look from top to bottom this year. First year head coach Sharon Arrington has brought an enthusiastic "go out and get 'em" attitude to the program that will definitely be an advantage. Assisting Coach Arrington this year will be Nickie Frazier. Nickie has spent the last few years working with the team, and is a definite plus to the program.

Coach Arrington has a small but well experienced team. Seniors on this year's squad include Sara Covington, Mimi Chesney, Robin Simmons, Jenny Black, and Denise Penzkofer. Penny Head and Cindy Blair are the two juniors on the team, with sophomores Nancy Koehl and Pam Gunter rounding out the squad.

Coach Arrington is very positive about this year. She transfers her positive attitude to her players and places a lot of responsibility on their shoulders. "I have high expectations for this year and I tell my players that they are given the responsibility, but along with that they know that I've got confidence in them."

The schedule for this year looks to be a tough one with powerhouses such as Belmont, LMU, and Tenn. Temple included. In fact, only seven of the nineteen opponents faced by the Lady Scots are either conference or Division III teams. Other conference coaches have predicted that if the Lady Scots do well this season, they could be invited to participate in the NCAA Tournament.

Coach Arrington admitted that she has come to Maryville with a winning attitude. "I think the team was shocked when I got out on the court and got in their faces when they messed up, but they're used to it now.

During the practice session, Coach Arrington stopped play many times to point out and correct mistakes. However, what impressed me the most was when she stopped play and praised a player for making the proper move. A winning attitude produces a winning program, and as Coach Arrington said, "We may not win every game, but they'll know we came to play."

VB Closes Season with Tourney Win

by Brian Rigell

The voice spoke from the darkness and commanded "write." "But what shall I write?" was my question. "Write that of which you know," was the reply. "Shall I write of our latest conquest?" I asked. "So be it."

And so it was. On Thursday the 8th, the Lady Scots started on a long road trip to Memphis to participate in the first WIAC volleyball tournament. After arriving late Thursday afternoon, the team practiced Thursday night in the gym at Rhodes College.

Friday morning brought competition from Sewanee. The Lady Scots were looking for their first win over Sewanee this year, and although it took three games, the Lady Scots emerged victorious.

In the afternoon, Maryville faced Fisk and Berea. It took only two games for each match as the Lady Scots rolled over the competition and ended the day 3—0.

On Saturday, the Lady Scots started with Ashbury. To put it mildly, it was probably the best, most hard fought, and controversial match of the tournament. Asbury roared out and took the first game and was well on its way to winning the second one. Serving for match point at 14—9, a Maryville spike was touched by an Asbury player. The referees did not call the touch and gave Asbury the match.

At about the same time all hell broke loose on the Maryville side of the court as the players on court and everyone on the bench yelled for the touch call. The referee asked the line judges, the touch was confirmed, the point was taken back, and Maryville was awarded the side out.

The Lady Scots were able to tie the game and the score seesawed back and forth with Asbury serving for match point at least four more times before Maryville rallied and won the game 18-16. The Lady Scots roared out and took the third game and the match 15—4.

The next match was against Rhodes and the Lady Scots stumbled and lost the match in two games. Coach Ammons was none too pleased with the but thought that it did serve to bring the team back down from the emotional high it had been riding after defeating Asbury.

"I think the loss made us want to win in the finals all that much more and we realized that we couldn't let up in our concentration," she said.

The finals found the Lady Scots facing Sewanee once again, and Maryville was able to win in two games without much trouble. I want you all to read that again! LADY SCOTS WIN THE TOURNAMENT!!

Coach Ammons was really pleased and commented "Everyone played well. We were a totally different and much better team out there than the one that started the season."

Both seniors Kandy Schram and Denise Penzkofer were named to the All Tournament Team. Way to be, Ladies!

Ladies on the Rebound

by Brian Rigell

First year head Coach Sharon Arrington has had a rough season already, and her Lady Scots have only played two games. Losing the season opener by two in overtime and then getting stopped by a thirty-six point margin in the second game of the season could cause problems for any coach. However, Coach Arrington is not worried, for she's confident that the team can rebound quickly and start playing some winning ball.

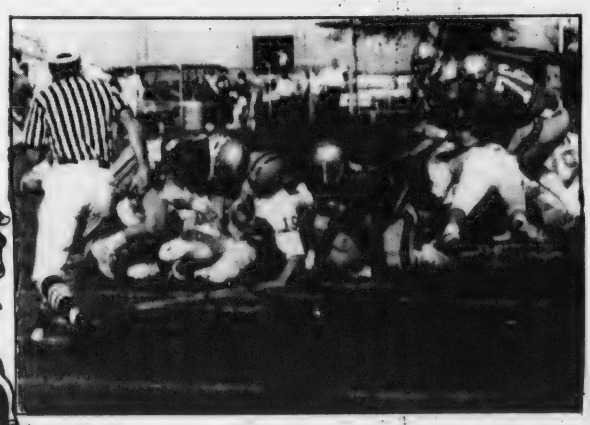
"Right now we're facing the toughest part of our schedule if you take everything into consideration. The season's just started, most of the team's been tired from schoolwork and not having any breaks, and this is the first chance I've really had to see the team work against real competition.

I look for us to play our best ball after Christmas when the girls are only worried with one class and can concentrate more of their time and efforts on basketball."

The Lady Scots started the season on Sat. Nov. 17th against Centre at home. Maryville roared out to an early first half lead and were up 42-31 at intermission. Centre came out in the second half and chipped away at the Lady Scot lead and were able to tie the game at the end of regulation time. Centre was able to pull out a victory 77-75 in overtime.

Coach Arrington commented, "The girls ran the game I wanted them to. We were fast breaking and passing and finding the open man to shoot. I'm not too happy that we lost, but they showed me that they can play the type ball that I went and that is what I wanted to see."

Unfortunately, all the potential shown in the first game seem to go out the window in the second game.



The Lady Scots stayed with Belmont for most of the first half, but Belmont pulled away to a 38-23 halftime lead and continued to run up the score in route to a win. Coach Arrington attributes the loss to the team's inability to run the game the way she she had practiced. "We dribbled the majority of the game and it hurt us. We've got to work on passing the ball more. Also one of our problems was keying too much one person. We need to realize that everyone needs to pull their own weight and not rely on one player to carry the team."

Standout performances were turned in by Sara Covington (31 & 24 pts.), Penny Head (17 pts each game), and Mimi Chesney (12 pts vs Centre).

The Lady Scots last home game before the Christmas break is Dec. 5 against LMU. Let's be there!!

SCOTS CLOSE OUT SEASON

by Jim Shook

The Maryville College football team can hold their heads high after the final game of the 1984 campaign. The Scots had a fine year and played much better than their 2-7 record would indicate. One of the highlights of the year came on opening day when the Scots downed Hampden—Sydney 13-12. With this burst, the team played the rest of the year admirably, losing many games by very small margins. With a few crucial breaks throughout the year, the team's record could have been much better than it was.

On November 3, Emory & Henry came into town to participate in the 1984 Homecoming game. Although the game was one-sided, the Scots, clad in their brand new orange jersies supplied by the cheerleaders, never gave up. Their lone touchdown came when Glenn Humphries, sidelined earlier in the year due to a shoulder injury, entered the game and scored on a five yard run.

The season came to a close for the Scots on November 10 in Washington, D.C. The team traveled to the nation's capital to play Catholic University and were defeated 48-0. However, the score is outweighed by the optimism for next year. The team will lose only three seniors: Brian Gunter, offensive lineman; Paul Anagnostis, strong safety; and Shannon O'Brien, wide receiver. This year's team was a young team without much experience. With this season under their belts, they should excell to greater heights next year.

In the Swim

by Peggy Millsaps

I cannot pinpoint the beginning of my morbid fear of water. Way before I ever heard of the sinking of the Titanic or saw "Jaws 3-D," my very soul recoiled in dread at the thought of my confronting more water than a small rain puddle or an eight-ounce glass accomodates. How I survived the womb is one of life's impenetrable mysteries.

As a child, I would stand at the pool's edge and see not a shimmering mirror of cool, clear water through which to glide effortlessly as a trout. I saw, rather, acres of concrete beneath the water and life guards strategically positioned to avert (if they could) disasters of unspeakable magnitude. Worst of all, I saw the Deep End–luridly beckoning like a subterrainean slime bog in a fantasy novel, crawling with tentacles, and lined with razor-edged rocks.

As a teen-ager, I assiduously avoided pool parties, or forced to go, spent the trying time poolside, minutely inspecting my nail polish or feigning sudden crippling. But one cannot fool people endlessly by demurely dangling one's toes in the shallow end of a pool and saying, with languid ennui, "Excuse me, but I've become so sated with swimming."

It came as no small shock to me, as a naive and unsuspecting transfer student, to learn that my B.A. in English was contingent not only upon successful completion of all course work, composition of a dazzling independent study, and full mastery of comprehensive exams, but passing a swimming test as well.

Talk about a Renaissance student! This was hardly my idea of a liberal education. Swimming suddenly became the bogie man of my senior year, the bane of my existence.

My advisor and I stopped talking altogether about GPA's, graduate study, and career possibilities. We talked nervously, instead, about the elementary back stroke, the front crawl, finning, sculling, and treading water. She looked at me archly whenever I passed her office. "Well?" was all she'd say. "I'm working on it," I'd assure her.

With false bravado, I took a crash beginning swimming course. And found–oh, all right– that I wasn't a "constitutional non–floater." And that–okay, okay–the water would support me if I lay back on it. And that–I relent–it is possible to hold one's breath and lie face down in God's own H_2O without grave and disastrous consequences (like drowning).

But can I swim?

Look, I'm working on it, okay?

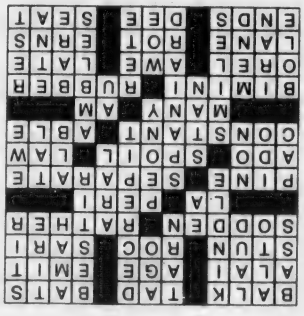
Poet's Corner

Cat in the Window

Relaxed, reclined,
A vision of repose,
She rests in a square of sunlight
On the smooth marble sill––

Fluid body, tawny tipped,
Toasted like a marshmallow,
Creamy white underneath,
And smooth.



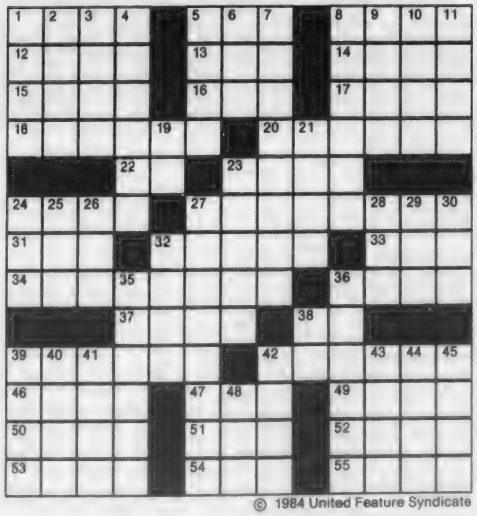
Slanting eyes, blue as jewels,
Regard me languidly.
Tail-tip twitches imperceptibly:
I know you hear me.

At her feet
A vase of tulips blooms––
Red, and topping their stems
Like bright flags.

Peggy Millsaps

Echo Ear

CC–Cried over your favorite h??? lately?
RN–Latest campus gossip? Nothin' goin' on here! JC
Angie–It's Nutcracker time again. . .Good Luck. Or is it Break A Leg? Your Buddy
SD–How many students have you talked to? Good job. . .Keep it up! ACS
Jessica Jade–Cute name. Double figures tomorrow. Go Lady Scots!
LN–Thanks for your help. Things are definitely looking up. You're right about Cool Whip. AKW
MJ–At least it smells good. . . .
Pudge–I really like your ears!!! Especially when they're in Pigeon Forge and Gatlinburg!! Love, K



Puzzle Answer

ACROSS

1 Pitcher's miscue
5 Youngster
8 Blinks: colloq.
12 Turkish regiment
13 Mature
14 Send forth
15 Stupefy
16 Fabulous bird
17 Hindu garment
18 Saturated
20 Preferably
22 Note of scale
23 Persian fairy
24 Evergreen tree
27 Part
31 Fuss
32 Vitiate
33 Ordinance
34 Regular
36 Competent
37 Indefinite amount
38 Before noon
39 Bahama islands
42 Masseur
46 City in Russia
47 Veneration
49 Tardy
50 Path
51 Decay
52 Sea eagles
53 Goals
54 River in Scotland
55 Chair

DOWN

1 Game fish
2 Singing voice
3 Praise
4 Ignite
5 Mountain lake
6 Time gone by
7 Worn out
8 Rouse to action
9 Oriental nurse
10 Weary
11 Arouse
19 Babylonian deity
21 Sea in Asia
23 Flower
24 Moccasin
25 Artificial language
26 Negative prefix
27 European
28 Priest's vestment
29 Hindu cymbals
30 Female sheep
32 Mr. Laurel
35 Facial expressions
36 Wanders aimlessly
38 Symbol for gold
39 Tree trunk
40 Country of Aisa
41 Repair
42 Nerve network
43 Reveal
44 Sicilian volcano
45 Remainder
48 Sorrow

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Term Paper Time

"And don't forget, your term papers are due day after tomorrow. I know all of you have been working diligently all along and will really have great papers to turn in (evil sneer)."

"Term paper???" "What'd he say?", "What term paper?", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)".

These words have a familiar ring every quarter about this time as students are reminded (or informed for the first time) of the due date for their typewritten, double-spaced, one-inch margined, minutely footnoted, carefully researched (?), triple-bibliographed, totally meaningless TERM PAPER.

Exactly what is a term paper?

A term paper is something that 95 per cent of the students write the night before, 4.5 per cent write the morning of the day its due, and the remaining .5 per cent work on it all quarter. (The last figure may be a little high.)

A term paper is a good way to get expelled on plagarism charges for not footnoting periods.

A term paper is finding out that 28 of your 29 sources in the library have been checked out and the remaining one source is being repaired.

A term paper is running out of erasable typing paper at 3:30 in the morning with your paper due in exactly four and one half hours.

A term paper is writing a grammatically correct, completely perfect in form research theme and then forgetting to put your name on it.

A term paper is measuring to make sure that the staples exactly divide the margin into thirds.

A term paper is all your friends going to Shakey's while you have to go to the library.

A term paper is the electricity going off in the dorm when you have an electric typewriter.

A term paper is misspelling the teacher's name and then not being able to figure out why you got a "D".

Believe it or not, some people actually love term papers.

People with stock in the No-Doze Company love term papers.

People that wrote an "A" term paper in high school on the same subject that they have to write a paper on now love term papers.

ECHO! ECHO

VOL. 70

#6

MISSING

' he replied.
ed that educa-
a top priority
e, for the most is not the one omb, but "the brightest minds.
leas, we must
, and to have must have a foundation," l also stressed
of increasing ıcation rather called a story that his grandfather once told him.

long way to go. Perhaps if he [Dr. King] were here, we would See KING, p. 6.

In the Swim

by Peggy Millsaps

I cannot pinpoint the beginning of my morbid fear of water. Way before I ever heard of the sinking of the Titanic or saw "Jaws 3-D," my very soul recoiled in dread at the thought of my confronting more water than a small rain puddle or an eight-ounce glass accomodates. How I survived the womb is one of life's impenetrable mysteries.

As a child, I would stand at the pool's edge and see not a shimmering mirror of cool, clear water through which to glide effortlessly as a trout. I saw, rather, acres of concrete beneath the water and life guards strategically positioned to avert (if they could) disasters of unspeakable magnitude. Worst of all, I saw the Deep End–luridly beckoning like a subterrainean slime bog in a fantasy novel, crawling with tentacles, and lined with razor-edged rocks.

As a teen-ager, I assiduously avoided pool parties, or forced to go, spent the trying time poolside, minutely inspecting my nail polish or feigning sudden crippling. But one cannot fool people endlessly by demurely dangling one's toes in the shallow end of a pool and saying, with languid ennui, "Excuse me, but I've become so sated with swimming."

It came as no small shock to me, as a naive and unsuspecting transfer student, to learn that my B.A. in English was contingent not only upon successful completion of all course work, composition of a dazzling independent study, and full mastery of comprehensive exams, but passing a swimming test as well.

Talk about a Renaissance student! This was hardly my idea of a liberal education. Swimming suddenly became the bogie man of my senior year, the bane of my existence.

My advisor and I stopped talking altogether about GPA's, graduate study, and career possibilities. We talked nervously, instead, about the elementary back stroke, the front crawl, finning, sculling, and treading water. She looked at me archly whenever I passed her office. "Well?" was all she'd say. "I'm working on it," I'd assure her.

With false bravado, I took a crash beginning swimming course. And found–oh, all right– that I wasn't a "constitutional non–floater." And that–okay, okay–the water would support me if I lay back on it. And that–I relent–it is possible to hold one's breath and lie face down in God's own H_2O without grave and disastrous consequences (like drowning).

But can I swim?

Look, I'm working on it, okay?

Poet's Corner

Cat in the Window

Relaxed, reclined,
A vision of repose,
She rests in a square of sunlight
On the smooth marble sill--

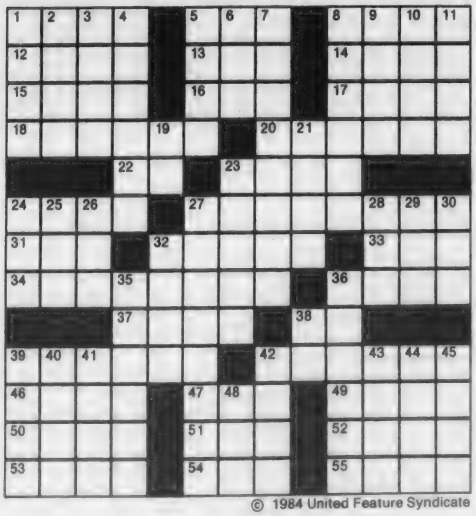
Fluid body, tawny tipped,
Toasted like a marshmallow,
Creamy white underneath,
And smooth.

Slanting eyes, blue as jewels,
Regard me languidly.
Tail-tip twitches imperceptibly:
I know you hear me.

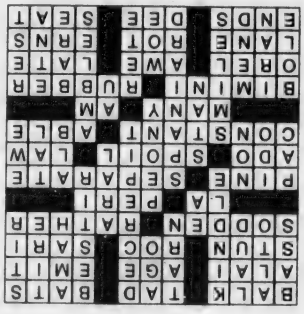
At her feet
A vase of tulips blooms--
Red, and topping their stems
Like bright flags.

Peggy Millsaps

Echo Ear



CC–Cried over your favorite h??? lately?
RN–Latest campus gossip? Nothin' goin' on here! JC
Angie–It's Nutcracker time again. . .Good Luck. Or is it Break A Leg? Your Buddy
SD–How many students have you talked to? Good job. . .Keep it up! ACS
Jessica Jade–Cute name. Double figures tomorrow. Go Lady Scots!
LN–Thanks for your help. Things are definitely looking up. You're right about Cool Whip. AKW
MJ--At least it smells good. . . .
Pudge–I really like your ears!!! Especially when they're in Pigeon Forge and Gatlinburg!! Love, K



ACROSS

1 Pitcher's miscue
5 Youngster
8 Blinks: colloq.
12 Turkish regiment
13 Mature
14 Send forth
15 Stupefy
16 Fabulous bird
17 Hindu garment
18 Saturated
20 Preferably
22 Note of scale
23 Persian fairy
24 Evergreen tree
27 Part
31 Fuss
32 Vitiate
33 Ordinance
34 Regular
36 Competent
37 Indefinite amount
38 Before noon
39 Bahama islands
42 Masseur
46 City in Russia
47 Veneration
49 Tardy
50 Path
51 Decay
52 Sea eagles
53 Goals
54 River in Scotland
55 Chair

DOWN

1 Game fish
2 Singing voice
3 Praise
4 Ignite
5 Mountain lake
6 Time gone by
7 Worn out
8 Rouse to action
9 Oriental nurse
10 Weary
11 Arouse
19 Babylonian deity
21 Sea in Asia
23 Flower
24 Moccasin
25 Artificial language
26 Negative prefix
27 European
28 Priest's vestment
29 Hindu cymbals
30 Female sheep
32 Mr. Laurel
35 Facial expressions
36 Wanders aimlessly
38 Symbol for gold
39 Tree trunk
40 Country of Aisa
41 Repair
42 Nerve network
43 Reveal
44 Sicilian volcano
45 Remainder
48 Sorrow

Puzzle Answer

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Term Paper Time

"And don't forget, your term papers are due day after tomorrow. I know all of you have been working diligently all along and will really have great papers to turn in (evil sneer)."

"Term paper???" "What'd he say?", "What term paper?", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)".

These words have a familiar ring every quarter about this time as students are reminded (or informed for the first time) of the due date for their typewritten, double-spaced, one-inch margined, minutely footnoted, carefully researched (?), triple-bibliographed, totally meaningless TERM PAPER.

Exactly what is a term paper?

A term paper is something that 95 per cent of the students write the night before, 4.5 per cent write the morning of the day its due, and the remaining .5 per cent work on it all quarter. (The last figure may be a little high.)

A term paper is a good way to get expelled on plagarism charges for not footnoting periods.

A term paper is finding out that 28 of your 29 sources in the library have been checked out and the remaining one source is being repaired.

A term paper is running out of erasable typing paper at 3:30 in the morning with your paper due in exactly four and one half hours.

A term paper is writing a grammatically correct, completely perfect in form research theme and then forgetting to put your name on it.

A term paper is measuring to make sure that the staples exactly divide the margin into thirds.

A term paper is all your friends going to Shakey's while you have to go to the library.

A term paper is the electricity going off in the dorm when you have an electric typewriter.

A term paper is misspelling the teacher's name and then not being able to figure out why you got a "D".

Believe it or not, some people actually love term papers.

People with stock in the No-Doze Company love term papers.

People that wrote an "A" term paper in high school on the same subject that they have to write a paper on now love term papers.

ECHO! ECHO

VOL. 70

#7

MISSING

," he replied.
zed that educa-
a top priority
ple, for the most
is not the one bomb, but "the brightest minds.
ideas, we must ds, and to have e must have a c foundation," nd also stressed
of increasing ducation rather called a story that his grandfather once told him.

long way to go. Perhaps if he [Dr. King] were here, we would

See KING, p. 6.

In the Swim

by Peggy Millsaps

I cannot pinpoint the beginning of my morbid fear of water. Way before I ever heard of the sinking of the Titanic or saw "Jaws 3-D," my very soul recoiled in dread at the thought of my confronting more water than a small rain puddle or an eight-ounce glass accomodates. How I survived the womb is one of life's impenetrable mysteries.

As a child, I would stand at the pool's edge and see not a shimmering mirror of cool, clear water through which to glide effortlessly as a trout. I saw, rather, acres of concrete beneath the water and life guards strategically positioned to avert (if they could) disasters of unspeakable magnitude. Worst of all, I saw the Deep End–luridly beckoning like a subterrainean slime bog in a fantasy novel, crawling with tentacles, and lined with razor-edged rocks.

As a teen-ager, I assiduously avoided pool parties, or forced to go, spent the trying time poolside, minutely inspecting my nail polish or feigning sudden crippling. But one cannot fool people endlessly by demurely dangling one's toes in the shallow end of a pool and saying, with languid ennui, "Excuse me, but I've become so sated with swimming."

It came as no small shock to me, as a naive and unsuspecting transfer student, to learn that my B.A. in English was contingent not only upon successful completion of all course work, composition of a dazzling independent study, and full mastery of comprehensive exams, but passing a swimming test as well.

Talk about a Renaissance student! This was hardly my idea of a liberal education. Swimming suddenly became the bogie man of my senior year, the bane of my existence.

My advisor and I stopped talking altogether about GPA's, graduate study, and career possibilities. We talked nervously, instead, about the elementary back stroke, the front crawl, finning, sculling, and treading water. She looked at me archly whenever I passed her office. "Well?" was all she'd say. "I'm working on it," I'd assure her.

With false bravado, I took a crash beginning swimming course. And found–oh, all right– that I wasn't a "constitutional non–floater." And that–okay, okay–the water would support me if I lay back on it. And that–I relent–it is possible to hold one's breath and lie face down in God's own H_2O without grave and disastrous consequences (like drowning).

But can I swim?

Look, I'm working on it, okay?

Poet's Corner

Cat in the Window

Relaxed, reclined,
A vision of repose,
She rests in a square of sunlight
On the smooth marble sill––

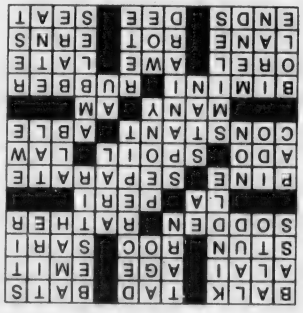
Fluid body, tawny tipped,
Toasted like a marshmallow,
Creamy white underneath,
And smooth.

Slanting eyes, blue as jewels,
Regard me languidly.
Tail-tip twitches imperceptibly:
I know you hear me.

At her feet
A vase of tulips blooms––
Red, and topping their stems
Like bright flags.

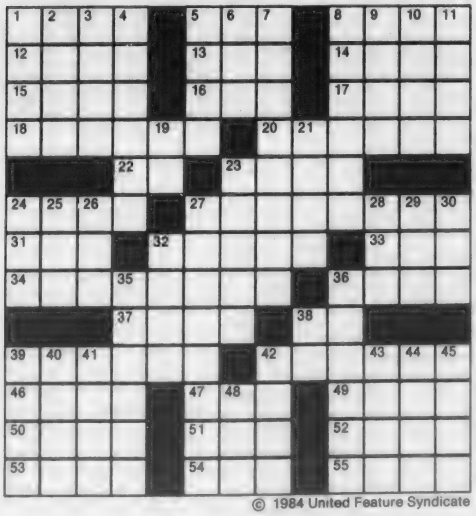
Peggy Millsaps

Echo Ear



CC–Cried over your favorite h??? lately?
RN–Latest campus gossip? Nothin' goin' on here! JC
Angie–It's Nutcracker time again. . .Good Luck. Or is it Break A Leg? Your Buddy
SD–How many students have you talked to? Good job. . .Keep it up! ACS
Jessica Jade–Cute name. Double figures tomorrow. Go Lady Scots!
LN–Thanks for your help. Things are definitely looking up. You're right about Cool Whip. AKW
MJ–At least it smells good. . . .
Pudge–I really like your ears!!! Especially when they're in Pigeon Forge and Gatlinburg!! Love, K

ACROSS



1 Pitcher's miscue
5 Youngster
8 Blinks: colloq.
12 Turkish regiment
13 Mature
14 Send forth
15 Stupefy
16 Fabulous bird
17 Hindu garment
18 Saturated
20 Preferably
22 Note of scale
23 Persian fairy
24 Evergreen tree
27 Part
31 Fuss
32 Vitiate
33 Ordinance
34 Regular
36 Competent
37 Indefinite amount
38 Before noon
39 Bahama islands
42 Masseur
46 City in Russia
47 Veneration
49 Tardy
50 Path
51 Decay
52 Sea eagles
53 Goals
54 River in Scotland
55 Chair

DOWN

1 Game fish
2 Singing voice
3 Praise
4 Ignite
5 Mountain lake
6 Time gone by
7 Worn out
8 Rouse to action
9 Oriental nurse
10 Weary
11 Arouse
19 Babylonian deity
21 Sea in Asia
23 Flower
24 Moccasin
25 Artificial language
26 Negative prefix
27 European
28 Priest's vestment
29 Hindu cymbals
30 Female sheep
32 Mr. Laurel
35 Facial expressions
36 Wanders aimlessly
38 Symbol for gold
39 Tree trunk
40 Country of Aisa
41 Repair
42 Nerve network
43 Reveal
44 Sicilian volcano
45 Remainder
48 Sorrow

Puzzle Answer

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Term Paper Time

"And don't forget, your term papers are due day after tomorrow. I know all of you have been working diligently all along and will really have great papers to turn in (evil sneer)."

"Term paper???" "What'd he say?", "What term paper?", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)".

These words have a familiar ring every quarter about this time as students are reminded (or informed for the first time) of the due date for their typewritten, double-spaced, one-inch margined, minutely footnoted, carefully researched (?), triple-bibliographed, totally meaningless TERM PAPER.

Exactly what is a term paper?

A term paper is something that 95 per cent of the students write the night before, 4.5 per cent write the morning of the day its due, and the remaining .5 per cent work on it all quarter. (The last figure may be a little high.)

A term paper is a good way to get expelled on plagarism charges for not footnoting periods.

A term paper is finding out that 28 of your 29 sources in the library have been checked out and the remaining one source is being repaired.

A term paper is running out of erasable typing paper at 3:30 in the morning with your paper due in exactly four and one half hours.

A term paper is writing a grammatically correct, completely perfect in form research theme and then forgetting to put your name on it.

A term paper is measuring to make sure that the staples exactly divide the margin into thirds.

A term paper is all your friends going to Shakey's while you have to go to the library.

A term paper is the electricity going off in the dorm when you have an electric typewriter.

A term paper is misspelling the teacher's name and then not being able to figure out why you got a "D".

Believe it or not, some people actually love term papers.

People with stock in the No-Doze Company love term papers.

People that wrote an "A" term paper in high school on the same subject that they have to write a paper on now love term papers.

ECHO! ECHO

VOL. 70

#8

MISSING

ıg," he replied.
ısized that educa-
be a top priority
ople, for the most ın is not the one
t bomb, but "the
ıe brightest minds.
t ideas, we must nds, and to have we must have a nic foundation,"
and also stressed
ce of increasing education rather called a story that his grandfather once told him.

long way to go. Perhaps if he [Dr. King] were here, we would

...G, p. 6.

In the Swim

by Peggy Millsaps

I cannot pinpoint the beginning of my morbid fear of water. Way before I ever heard of the sinking of the Titanic or saw "Jaws 3-D," my very soul recoiled in dread at the thought of my confronting more water than a small rain puddle or an eight-ounce glass accomodates. How I survived the womb is one of life's impenetrable mysteries.

As a child, I would stand at the pool's edge and see not a shimmering mirror of cool, clear water through which to glide effortlessly as a trout. I saw, rather, acres of concrete beneath the water and life guards strategically positioned to avert (if they could) disasters of unspeakable magnitude. Worst of all, I saw the Deep End–luridly beckoning like a subterrainean slime bog in a fantasy novel, crawling with tentacles, and lined with razor-edged rocks.

As a teen-ager, I assiduously avoided pool parties, or forced to go, spent the trying time poolside, minutely inspecting my nail polish or feigning sudden crippling. But one cannot fool people endlessly by demurely dangling one's toes in the shallow end of a pool and saying, with languid ennui, "Excuse me, but I've become so sated with swimming."

It came as no small shock to me, as a naive and unsuspecting transfer student, to learn that my B.A. in English was contingent not only upon successful completion of all course work, composition of a dazzling independent study, and full mastery of comprehensive exams, but passing a swimming test as well.

Talk about a Renaissance student! This was hardly my idea of a liberal education. Swimming suddenly became the bogie man of my senior year, the bane of my existence.

My advisor and I stopped talking altogether about GPA's, graduate study, and career possibilities. We talked nervously, instead, about the elementary back stroke, the front crawl, finning, sculling, and treading water. She looked at me archly whenever I passed her office. "Well?" was all she'd say. "I'm working on it," I'd assure her.

With false bravado, I took a crash beginning swimming course. And found–oh, all right– that I wasn't a "constitutional non–floater." And that–okay, okay–the water would support me if I lay back on it. And that–I relent–it is possible to hold one's breath and lie face down in God's own H_2O without grave and disastrous consequences (like drowning).

But can I swim?

Look, I'm working on it, okay?

Poet's Corner

Cat in the Window

Relaxed, reclined,
A vision of repose,
She rests in a square of sunlight
On the smooth marble sill––

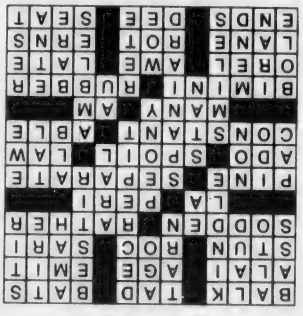
Fluid body, tawny tipped,
Toasted like a marshmallow,
Creamy white underneath,
And smooth.

Slanting eyes, blue as jewels,
Regard me languidly.
Tail-tip twitches imperceptibly:
I know you hear me.

At her feet
A vase of tulips blooms––
Red, and topping their stems
Like bright flags.

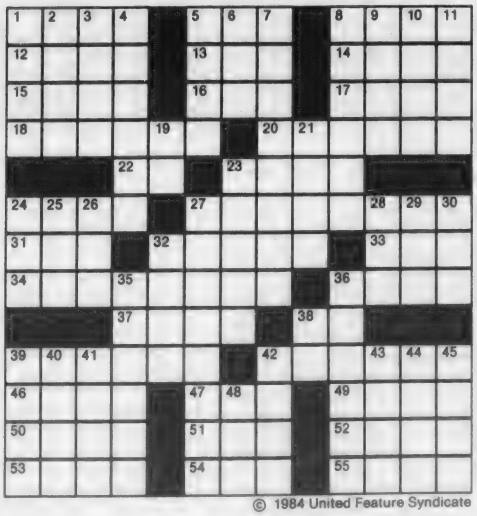
Peggy Millsaps

Echo Ear



CC–Cried over your favorite h??? lately?
RN–Latest campus gossip? Nothin' goin' on here! JC
Angie–It's Nutcracker time again. . .Good Luck. Or is it Break A Leg? Your Buddy
SD–How many students have you talked to? Good job. . .Keep it up! ACS
Jessica Jade–Cute name. Double figures tomorrow. Go Lady Scots!
LN–Thanks for your help. Things are definitely looking up. You're right about Cool Whip. AKW
MJ–At least it smells good. . . .
Pudge–I really like your ears!!! Especially when they're in Pigeon Forge and Gatlinburg!! Love, K

ACROSS



1 Pitcher's miscue
5 Youngster
8 Blinks: colloq.
12 Turkish regiment
13 Mature
14 Send forth
15 Stupefy
16 Fabulous bird
17 Hindu garment
18 Saturated
20 Preferably
22 Note of scale
23 Persian fairy
24 Evergreen tree
27 Part
31 Fuss
32 Vitiate
33 Ordinance
34 Regular
36 Competent
37 Indefinite amount
38 Before noon
39 Bahama islands
42 Masseur
46 City in Russia
47 Veneration
49 Tardy
50 Path
51 Decay
52 Sea eagles
53 Goals
54 River in Scotland
55 Chair

DOWN

1 Game fish
2 Singing voice
3 Praise
4 Ignite
5 Mountain lake
6 Time gone by
7 Worn out
8 Rouse to action
9 Oriental nurse
10 Weary
11 Arouse
19 Babylonian deity
21 Sea in Asia
23 Flower
24 Moccasin
25 Artificial language
26 Negative prefix
27 European
28 Priest's vestment
29 Hindu cymbals
30 Female sheep
32 Mr. Laurel
35 Facial expressions
36 Wanders aimlessly
38 Symbol for gold
39 Tree trunk
40 Country of Aisa
41 Repair
42 Nerve network
43 Reveal
44 Sicilian volcano
45 Remainder
48 Sorrow

Puzzle Answer

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Term Paper Time

"And don't forget, your term papers are due day after tomorrow. I know all of you have been working diligently all along and will really have great papers to turn in (evil sneer)."

"Term paper???" "What'd he say?", "What term paper?", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)", "(Obscenity)".

These words have a familiar ring every quarter about this time as students are reminded (or informed for the first time) of the due date for their typewritten, double-spaced, one-inch margined, minutely footnoted, carefully researched (?), triple-bibliographed, totally meaningless TERM PAPER.

Exactly what is a term paper?

A term paper is something that 95 per cent of the students write the night before, 4.5 per cent write the morning of the day its due, and the remaining .5 per cent work on it all quarter. (The last figure may be a little high.)

A term paper is a good way to get expelled on plagarism charges for not footnoting periods.

A term paper is finding out that 28 of your 29 sources in the library have been checked out and the remaining one source is being repaired.

A term paper is running out of erasable typing paper at 3:30 in the morning with your paper due in exactly four and one half hours.

A term paper is writing a grammatically correct, completely perfect in form research theme and then forgetting to put your name on it.

A term paper is measuring to make sure that the staples exactly divide the margin into thirds.

A term paper is all your friends going to Shakey's while you have to go to the library.

A term paper is the electricity going off in the dorm when you have an electric typewriter.

A term paper is misspelling the teacher's name and then not being able to figure out why you got a "D".

Believe it or not, some people actually love term papers.

People with stock in the No-Doze Company love term papers.

People that wrote an "A" term paper in high school on the same subject that they have to write a paper on now love term papers.

ECHO! ECHO ECHOECHOECHO...

Special Throw-Away Edition

ALC Sits on Calendar Proposal; Students Say "Rotate"

STORY PAGE 13

Early Season's Greetings!

I am writing to you from Tokyo to wish you the very best during exams and during the holiday season. I hope that everything will go exceptionally well for you.

Thanks to the Japan Society which is underwriting the expenses for this trip, I am working in Japan to arrange student and faculty exchange programs. I have met with officials from many colleges and universities here and I am genuinely excited about future prospects for exchange programs involving Maryville College faculty and students. I am also visiting many high schools to talk with counsellors and students with an eye toward attracting students to Maryville College.

Our exchange program at Kansai Gaidai, where Hubert Dixon and Mary Padget are enrolled this term, is going very well and I am looking forward to additional exchange programs of this caliber in the future.

With my very best personal wishes--and sayonara!

Sincerely,

Wayne

King Speaks at MC

by Pam Mathews

"We need to create a just society. . . . Instead of embracing hate, we have to embrace love," Martin Luther King III stated, resounding his late father's plea. King, vice president of the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change, was guest speaker of the Community Issues and Values Program November 29.

"This generation has to be. . . historically educated. People who do not know history are doomed to repeat it," King commented on the basis that the current generation knows little about the civil rights movement. Young people, by being informed will "make sure that what happened in the 60's never ever happens again.

As a child, he saw the civil rights movement evolve under the leadership of his father and remembers the violence in the 60's when he was prohibited from entering an amusement park or a fast food restaurant.

When he was ten years old, his father was slain by James Earl Ray. The principles of Dr. King were "formed as a child under the care and guidance of his grandfather," Martin Luther King Sr., who died several weeks ago.

In order to illustrate the harsh treatment of blacks, King recalled a story that his grandfather once told him.

A policeman who apparently wanted to harass a black man stopped King Sr. who was driving in the car with King Jr. The officer, addressing the elder King as "Boy," asked to see his license.

"Grandfather said to the officer, pointing to his right side (Martin Jr.), 'This is a boy. And I am a man." King stated. The officer was so stunned that a black man would retort [talk back] to him, that he just wrote the ticket and left.

King thought that his father would be pleased with the progress black people have accomplished, but "we've got a long way to go. Perhaps if he [Dr. King] were here, we would be farther along," he replied.

King emphasized that education should be a top priority for young people, for the most superior nation is not the one of the biggest bomb, but "the nation with the brightest minds. To have great ideas, we must have good minds, and to have good minds, we must have a strong academic foundation," he concluded and also stressed the importance of increasing spending on education rather than cutting it.

See KING, p. 6.

THIS IS A SPECIAL PUZZLE - EDITION OF THE Echo. Put a circle around each real story and then scratch & sniff. If it smells like bovine feces you were right! You win the prize! Oh boy! - ed.

Dear Santa,

I have been a good girl all year (somewhat). Please bring me alot of good and fun things for Christmas.

1. Please bring me a magic refrigerator stocked with 3 cases of Michelob Lite Beer no matter when I open it.
2. And also at least a C+ in Computer Science.
3. And a giant vacuum cleaner for the Echo Office and a typewriter, that works (not necessarily in that order).
4. Plus an additional refrigerator that holds a mere cases of Michelob Lite.
5. And please bring enuf passes for next semester's books.
6. How about a gray or silver Mustang convertible with a maroon interior and some gas.
7. And a new VCR for the wide-screen tv in the Smith Bar. By the way, thanks for the present. I didnt know you were an alum.
8. Please make Johnnie the security guard wall.
9. Please put grass down by the hiway.
10. If you cant do that please make the hiway go away.
11. Please let us have filet mignon in the dining hall before May.
12. And please let them know how to cook it.
13. Please bring us pretty sunsets to look at.
14. And let us have time to look at them.
15. Please find another editor for the Echo by Interim.
16. Please put a check for 1/2 tuition in my stocking.
17. And one thing more. Please have your elves make us a new schedle. And please have them think it out better than the last one.

I luv you, Santa!!

PS - Say hello to Rudolf for me!

ear Editor,

came to Maryville College y Freshman year solely be- use I could, with financial d and a scholarship, go here eaper than a state school near me. I basked in the warm, endly atmosphere of this small hool with "an enviable envir- nment."

When the next school year me, around, I just could not e myself going anywhere else en though costs increased. I d made many diverse friends. I as thoroughly impressed by the ncern and friendliness of the dministration, faculty, and aff. In short, I was drawn back re by the people.

Now I am a "big senior." This hool has lost everything that er made it special. (This is not nother case of "senioritis.") As r the people? I don't know. I ever see them. I have friends on is campus I have not spoken to two or three weeks. They are iends who still mean a lot to e. You know why I never see em? I have to study from sun to sun up. Granted, I am a ience major and I expected to ve it tough. This, however, is diculous. I have heard people all disciplines talking about w depressed and fed up they re.

Sure the administration and aff "care" about us (until we alk out their doors.) They have pen forums and invite us to eir offices to voice our opin- ns. They say, "Come tell us our problems. We want to help ou." Of course, after we have ld them, we never hear any ore about it.

The administration and staff ave the advantage because they now we do not have the time keep fighting. If they really o not intend to help us, they hould stop acting as though t hey are. I do not know about ny one else, but I am tired of eing patronized and wasting 7,000 a year on this place. (I eed to mention here that I ppreciate what Dr. Anderson as done, but he cannot do it lone.)

Obviously, no one believes this roblem is as extensive as it is. Not only is the morale low here is a great deal of apathy. Some people blame our difficul- ties on our being "below average ability students." That sure does not say much for the admissions office. The admissions staff works hard to get students here. The rest of the school under- mines all the work done by ad- missions. Personally, I was una- ware that this school admitted "below average" students. I thought only the "cream of the crop" got in. That's what we're told, isn't it?

In any case, this is not the problem. The problem is that no one believes there is a problem except students and a few faculty members. We cannot function without sleep, proper diet, exercise, and time for relaxation and socializing. (Right, Mr. Guillame?)

I have heard of more people than ever before talking of going to see Bruce Guillame because they just cannot handle it any more. I don't know if anybody has noticed, but there is an in- crease in alcohol consumption on campus. Alcohol is now being used for socializing in circles where it was not previously.

A note to selected faculty: Stu- dents tried to tell you we were having problems. You brushed students off as having "personal problems." You're saying we are just spoiled implies that this school was not difficult before now.

I know of at least five people who have gone long distances (14 hours) to go home in the middle of the term because they could not stand it any more. I know of many others who live closer who have done the same. People who have never been homesick before have been this term.

A couple of weeks ago, I an- nounced to my friends that "if I were not a senior, I'd transfer." Of course, I have cooled down since then. I am now serious thinking of transferring to the state school near home.

For those students, faculty, etc., who do not know me, I am not an habitual complainer.

I would not recommend this school to even my worst enemy. I have come to hate this place with as much passion as I once loved it.

Mary Ann Bobbitt

Thə Compləat Rəportər

It's write-your-own story time!
Who: staff, faculty, staff, alumni & MC
What: gave money, lost money, won an athletic contest, lost an athletic contest, + co- athletic contest
When: Sometime between Dec. 14 - Dec 21.
Where: Maryville College, not Maryville College.
Why: Why not?
Length. Enough to fill this space.

graphics by Karen Shaler

Echo Ear

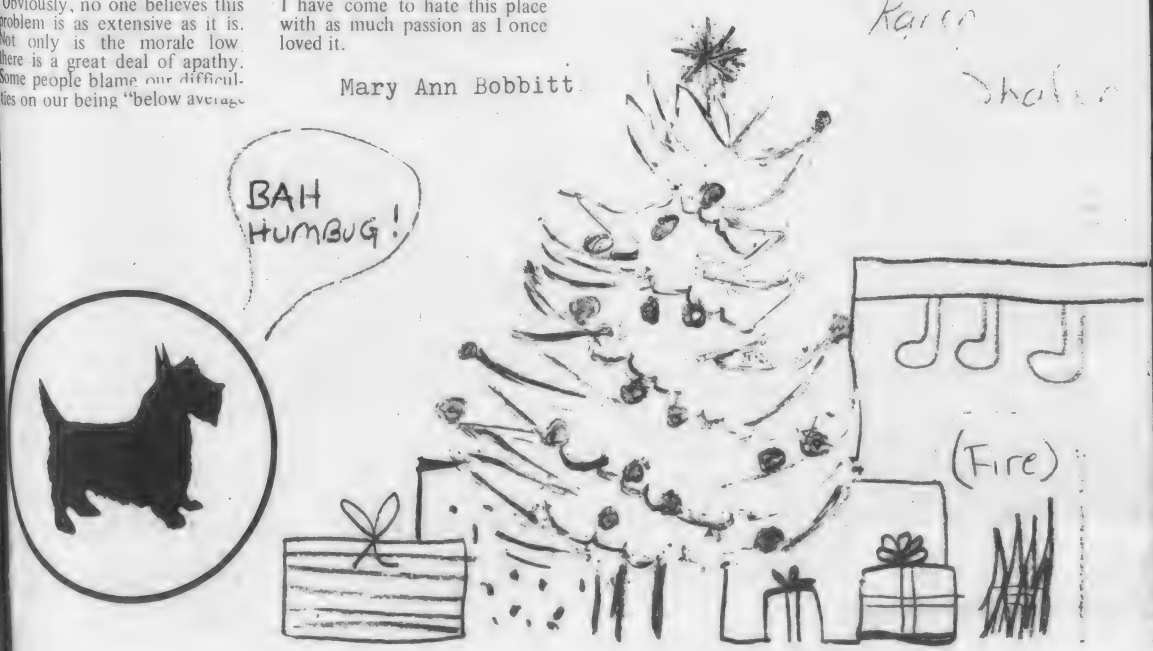
FF—Congratulations!! "Have a good life!" We're going to miss you! J & J

Merry Christmas from Mrs. Claus!

Go for it!—US

To those who want it—How's the revolution going? Love, Tom Scott

To D'Donna—Where am I? Jacob



To Roxanne—Did you hear about Paula in the book- store?—T.S.

To Bert and Ernie (and the Cookie Monster too)—Merry Christmas, Love, Pam

To Tom—I think Snoopy is Cute.

To Charlene: Waitress, would you come here a minute please. . . .?

Leigha & April—Joyeux Noel!—votre amie, Laura

This Week at the Movies

Where's the Beets?

see page 8

Amadeus (PG)

The story of the one-sided rivalry at the famous Maryville College music department between the resident composer, Robert Ronhami, and the upstart, Wolfgang Amadeus Schoen. Starring the two composers as themselves, with Sallie Schoen as Wolfie's wife, and Rabbels as their son.

Beverly Hills Cop (R)

A comedy about a one-of -a-kind security guard on his own in the glittering city of Maryville as he tries to find the murderer of a pal. Starring Eldria Hurst in the title role, and Magic as his pal.

A Christmas Story (PG)

A whimsical and slightly twisted comedy about a typical American family's Christmas. This film is set in a Tennessee suburb during the 1980's and follows the adventures of a boy who wants only one thing from life—to finish his Independent Study. Starring Nick Venditti as the oldest living MC student.

Dune (PG-13)

Science fiction concerning a young prince who finds himself at the center of a raging, intergalactic political battle. Starring Al Perkins as the prince.

Falling in Love (PG)

A contemporary love story. Asks the question "can chairmen of two different departments find happiness at MC?" Problems occur when they try to set up housekeeping in Anderson or in Thaw. Starring Russell Parker and Carolyn Blair as the famous couple.

Hatchet Murders (R)

A horror film about two mild-mannered students who take revenge on all those who refuse to join the Young Republicans. Starring Tom Scott and Ed Steuckle as Reagan's hit men.

House by the Cemetery (R)

A combination comedy-horror film about the antics of a weekend in a co-ed dorm at Maryville College. Starring the residents of Copeland Hall.

Just the Way You Are (PG)

An upbeat comedy about the efforts to thwart students' graduation plans with a core curriculum and the swimming test. Starring the English, History, and Physical Education Depts., with a special appearance by Edith Largen.

Maniac (R)

A horror film. The sequel to "Hatchet Murders," this movie picks up where the last one left off. The Peace Education Task Force takes revenge on its rivals. Starring Jim Pickens, Ed Welch, Kati Tabor, and Ciretta Carpenter.

Missing in Action (R)

Dr. David Cartlidge, a man who won't take "no" for an answer, sets out to rescue the Peace Education Task Force in this sequel to "Maniac."

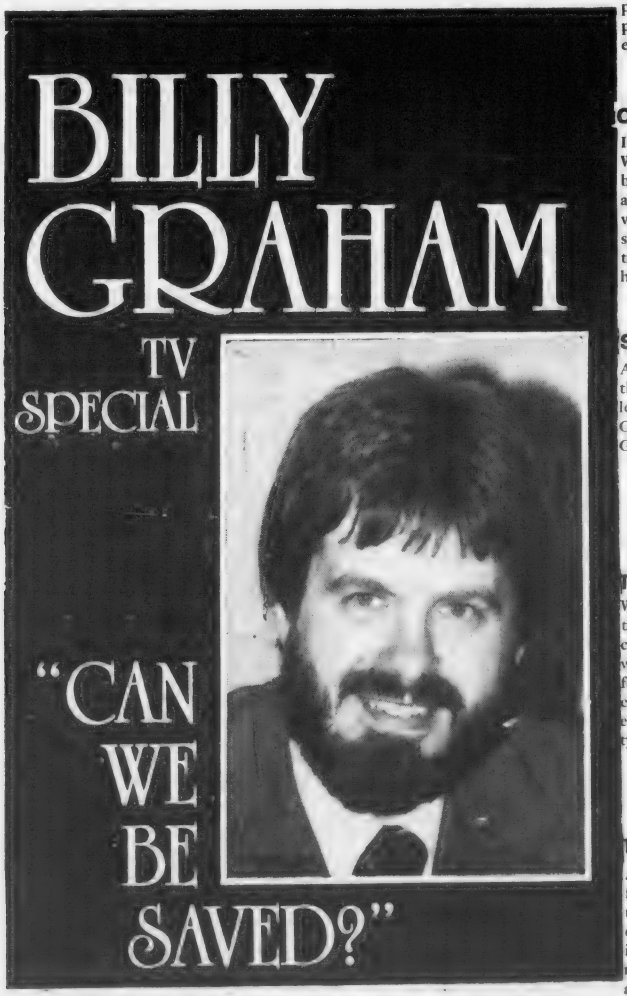
Odd Balls (PG)

Pits the famous campus minister against adversaries who are the very embodiment of evil in a desperate quest for a sacred stone with magical powers. This production is filled with prayer-raising creatures and special effects. Starring Earl Rash.

Oh, God! You Devil (PG)

In this second sequel to "Oh God!.. Wayne Anderson plays dual roles as both God and the devil. About an aspiring rock star who makes a pact with the devil. Starring Wayne Anderson as God and the devil, Jim Bloy as the rock star, and Thelma Bianco as his bewildered wife.

Supergirl (PG)



A science-fiction story built around the adventures of the female equivalent of Superman. Starring Sharon Crane in the title role, and Bruce Guillaume as Boris Blane.

Teachers (R)

What can we say? A comedy that takes its audience into the world of a contemporary liberal art college where teachers and students are faced with all the absurdities of modern society on the path toward higher education. Starring students, faculty, and staff of Maryville College.

Terminator (R)

An action drama about two women from the future who come back to the present: one to change the course of history and pass a 97th year Senior, and the other to stop her. Starring Martha Hess, Susan Whitehead, and Mrs. Miller.

This year a small group of American students, set out on the greatest adventure of them all. To see if there is life beyond Maryville College.

2010

The Year We Graduate

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents a PETER HYAMS film

Martha Hess

"2010" JOHN LITHGOW • HELEN MIRREN
BOB BALABAN • KEIR DULLEA • music by DAVID SHIRE visual effects supervisor RICHARD EDLUND, A.S.C.
based on the novel by ARTHUR C. CLARKE written for the screen, produced and directed by PETER HYAMS

PG PARENTAL GUIDANCE SUGGESTED
SOME MATERIAL MAY NOT BE SUITABLE FOR CHILDREN

DOLBY STEREO IN SELECTED THEATRES

DIAMOND JUBILEE SIXTY YEARS OF GREAT ENTERTAINMENT

© 1984 MGM/UA ENTERTAINMENT CO.

70MM

Individualized Interim See Dr. Fowler (Anderson 317) for information about "Castles, Cathedrals and Gardens of England and Scotland," a study tour scheduled June 20–July 5, 1985. All-inclusive price is $1695 from and to Atlanta. Interim credit may be arranged.

3

POWELL 1 & 2

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS

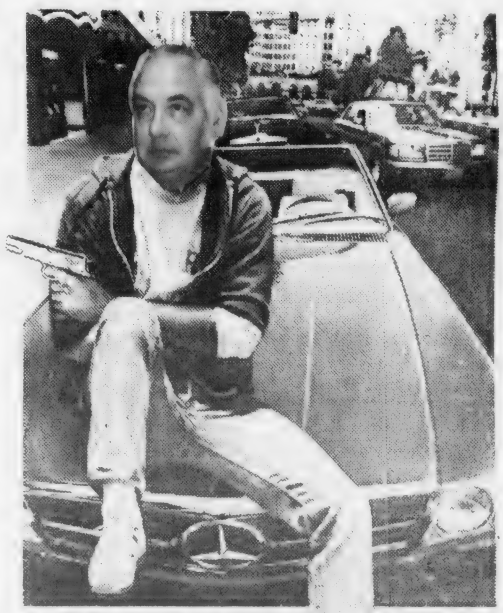
2nd Super Week!

Check Theatre Ads for Times

UA EAST TOWNE 7
EAST TOWNE MALL 566-1545

FROM THE PRODUCERS OF THE SUPERMAN MOVIES...

Supergirl



Her first great adventure

HALLS CINEMA 4
922-9095

Helen Slater
Faye Dunaway PG

Capri CINEMA
5304 KINGSTON PK.

He's been chased, thrown through a window, and arrested.

Eldria Hurst is...

MARYVILLE COLLEGE Cop

PARAMOUNT PICTURES PRESENTS A DON SIMPSON/JERRY BRUCKHEIMER PRODUCTION IN ASSOCIATION WITH A MARTIN BREST FILM-EDDIE MURPHY-BEVERLY HILLS COP-SCREENPLAY BY DANIEL PETRIE, JR. AND DANIEL PETRIE, JR. PRODUCED BY DON SIMPSON AND JERRY BRUCKHEIMER DIRECTED BY MARTIN BREST

R RESTRICTED

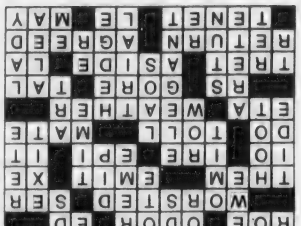
PHONE 564-5140
Capri CINEMA
5304 KINGSTON PK.

NOW SHOWING
CHECK THEATRE ADS FOR TIMES

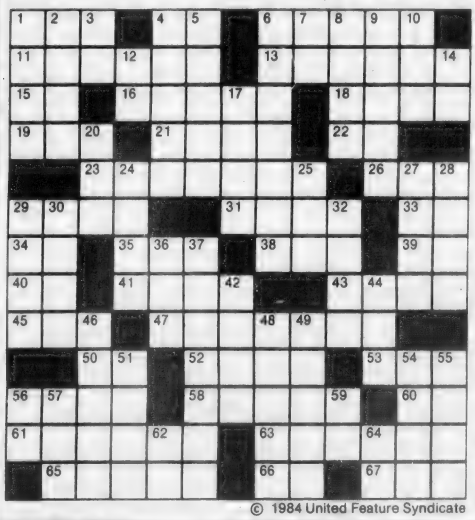
PHONE 938-2290
Clinton CINEMAS
TWIN AIRE SITE CLINTON HWY.

HALLS CINEMA 3
922-9095

UA EAST TOWNE 7
EAST TOWNE MALL 566-1545



DOGWOOD MARYVILLE



ACROSS

1 Also
4 Equally
6 Babylonian hero
11 Swatted
13 Mediterranean vessels
15 Near
16 Chore
18 Mother of Apollo
19 Fish eggs
21 Aroma
22 Revised: abbr.
23 Kind of fabric
26 Weight of India
29 Pronoun
31 Send forth
33 Symbol for xenon
34 Maiden loved by Zeus
35 Anger
38 Slender finial
39 Italy: abbr.
40 Fulfill
41 Tax
43 Partner
45 Greek letter
47 Atmospheric conditions
50 Rupees: abbr.
52 Blood
53 Hindu cymbals
56 Allowance for waste
58 Whisper
60 Note of scale
61 Come back
63 Concurred
65 Doctrine
66 French article
67 A month

DOWN

1 Former Russian ruler
2 Mr. Preminger
3 Either's partner
4 Performer
5 Slides
6 Most remote
7 Symbol for tellurium
8 Competent
9 Wants
10 Perform
12 As above
14 Therefore
17 Indicate
20 Female sheep
24 Leave out
25 Plunge
27 Way out
28 Nerve network
29 Current
30 Cry of owl
32 Tempo
36 Quarrel
37 Fastidiously tasteful
42 Country of Asia
44 Skill
46 Rugged mountain crest
48 Test
49 Barrier
51 Stupefy
54 Name for Athena
55 Title of respect
56 Reverse: abbr.
57 Soak
59 Teutonic deity
62 Note of scale
64 G.I., e.g.

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

We are available to D.J. your Dance!

Yes, if your group is planning to (or even remotely thinking about) throwing a dance, we have the technology. We can deal with it.

We have a vast selection of recorded hits and are more than happy to play any and all requests. If you have something you particularly want to hear, bring it with you—we'll play it!

As a matter of fact, we'll play anything—and everything.

For a change of pace, we're here at boxes 2161 and 2236. Well we're not actually there, in the boxes, but we pick up our mail there occasionally. . . .

We look forward to hearing from you. We know you'll look forward to hearing from us.

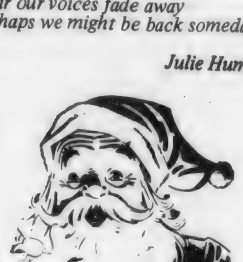
Sincerely,

The Unknown D.J.s

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats $2.25 Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15
FLESHBURN



2:00 4:30 7:00 9:30
"DUNE"

1:00 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
CLINT EASTWOOD
BURT REYNOLDS
CITY HEAT PG

12:40, 2:50, 5:00, 7:10, 9:20
STARMAN
The science fiction love story. PG

Hark! the college students sing
Glory be, we're through again
Peace on earth, the campus quiet
We've left for home and a healthy diet
Joyful, all our spirits rise
Join the triumph of the skies
Hear our voices fade away
Perhaps we might be back someday
Hear our voices fade away
Perhaps we might be back someday

Julie Humpert

KING cont.

King, recently returned from a trip to Africa with John Denver, called on Americans to help the people that are starving in Ethiopia and elsewhere. "The world community has the feasibility to feed the world. We must take the lead," on feeding the starving instead of on weapons; for "development instead of destruction."

"We cannot be free until all our brothers & sisters are free, wherever they are. . ." he said.

Echoing the words of his grandfather "no matter how adverse the conditions were, that somehow we would persevere with dignity and Christian love for all men and women," King concluded.

Dr. Terry Bunde, associate professor of chemistry at Maryville College, will teach a newly announced Interim at MC, entitled "The Effects of Nuclear Radiation in East Tennessee." Dr. Bunde's teaching will delineate the potential of nuclear threat in East Tennessee and probe reports of the possible nuclear effect on animal growth in the region. Defense techniques will also be included as part of the course's study, without the cost of extra enrollment fees. For details, contact Dr. Bunde, Miss Martha Hess, or the local chapter of the City of Maryville Giant Rodent Control Task Force.

Ty and Sa: A Winning Combo

by Rick Carver

Tyrone Matthews, a 6'5" Sr. forward from Decatur, GA., and Sara Covington, all American center from McColl, South Carolina, have a lot more in commin than just being good basketball players. They are engaged to be married after their playing days at MC are over.

Both came to MC to play basketball, and both have done that superbly. Sara was the MVP of the girls squad last year, and also received All-American honors. She is currently the leading scorer of the Lady Scots this year and is serving as captain of the team. Tyrone served as captain for the Fighting Scots last year, and is playing a key role as sixth man this year.

Both view their relationship as a special one to help each other perform better. "We help encourage each other," Sara remarked. "We give each other helpful criticism to make us play better." "I'm into the game more," Tyrone added. "I play with more heart when I know she's watching. I push her toward perfection. I want her to play the perfect game, and I'm still waiting for that game," he said with a grin.

Both have learned a great deal from being members of MC basketball teams. "I've learned how to be a leader and to accept responsibility," Sara commented. Tyrone replied that he has learned to accept the differend toles involved with sports. "You can't always have things your way," he said. Both credit God, each other, and their coaches for their development and for what they have learned.

While Sara cannot point to a specific area that has been most valuable to her learning experiences from basketball, she remarked that her coaches here at MC have taught her many things. Tyrone said he would like to thank Coach Lambert for teaching him how to play a more "organized, controlled form of basketball." "Coach Lambert taught me how to be disciplined and to be a team player. He taught me how to look at life the way it is."

In terms of goals, both have the same team related concept–"to win no matter how well I do individually." Both value praise as being competitors to be ultimate compliments. "I want to be known as a winner at heart."

Scots Jump to 5-1

by Rick Carver

The men's basketball team is flying high, off to their best start in recent memory with a 5–1 record.

The Scots opened the season at home on Nov. 23rd with the Pepper Classic. The Scots started out on the right foot, with a 106 point outburst that crushed Emory University. Then, on Nov. 24th, the Scots captured the tournament crown with a 3-point win over Bluefield State.

On Nov. 28th, the Scots suffered their only loss of the 1984-85 campaign as Centre College gave the Scots an 89-72 trouncing. But, as all good teams do, the Fighting Scots rebounded (literally as well as figuratively) to outgun Eastern Mennonite in triple overtime, 96-95. Pacing the Scot attack in the Nov. 30th win were Ray Burnett with 24 points, 14 rebounds, and 4 assists; Deangelo McDaniel with 21 points and 10 rebounds; and Paul Mills with 18 points and 3 assists. Tyrone Matthews and Tom Robinson also chipped in 15 and 14 points, respectively.

On December 6th, the Scots went to 2–0 in the ODAC with a 97-91 win over Emory and Henry. In that game, Freshman guard George Lancho started his first collegiate game in place of injured Paul Mills. All Lancho managed to do in leading the Scots to victory was score 14 points, dish out 11 assists, and steal 4 WASP passes. Deangelo McDaniel was the Scots high scorer in the game, contributing 34 points.

Tyrone Matthews tossed in 14 points, and Ray Burnett added 12.

The Scots next "contest" was Lynchburg College on December 8th. MC Whitewashed the hornets, 108-79. Turning in yet another stellar performance, Deangelo McDaniel led the way with 30 points and 10 rebounds. Dan "Sticks" Kirkpatrick finally got untracked and returned to his old form with a 17 point, 8 rebound performance. Ray Burnett and Tom Robinson also added to the firepower with 14 and 10 points.

The Scots are now 3–0 in ODAC play, and are looking forward to continuing their winning ways in the future.

The Year in Review

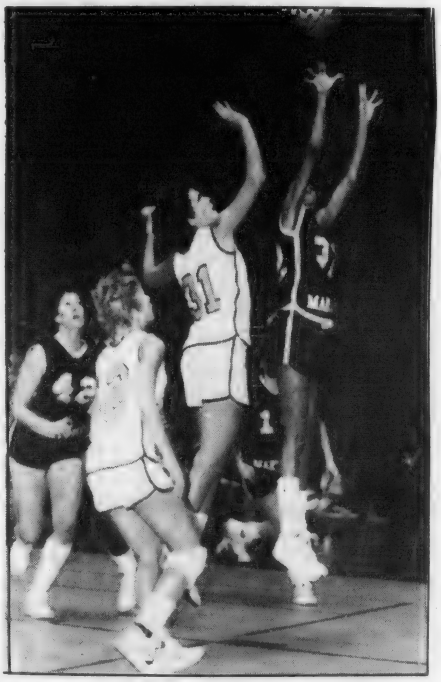
by Rick Carver

As the New Year approaches, people everywhere begin to reflect on the highs and lows of the past year. Here's a look at the highlights of 1984 in MC sports:

*The football team went to the Rose Bowl.
*The basketball team beat Louisbille 101–33.
*The Scots' ace pitcher, Blazing Smoke, signed a 5-year contract with the New York Yankees.
*The girls' soccer club hired Pele as a coach.
*The volleyball team won the Gold Medal in the 1984 Olympics.
*The soccer team averaged 17.3 goals per game.
*Cheryl Miller transferred from USC to join the women's basketball team.
*The King and his court came to Maryville to play the Girl's softball team and left with an embarrassing 13-2 setback.

Alright, enough is enough. While none of the highs in MC sports reached such extreme proportions, some of the events in 1984 were noteworthy. For instance:

*The football team beat archrival and ODAC power Hampton-Sydney.
*The basketball team defeated number 2 ranked Roanoke College.
*The volleyball team won the conference tournament at the end of the season.
*The Women's Tennis team won the WIAC title.
*The baseball team beat Carson Newman, 6–1.
*Paul Anagnostis was considered for, and Sara Covington garnered, All-American honors.
*The baseball team beat highly ranked Lynchburg, 3–2.
*The softball team won a share of the WIAC title.
*And the Men's basketball team is off to a 5–1 start.



These are the major highlights of 1984. I'm sure there were others. These incidents will rest in MC sports history now as we prepare for 1985. So, let's make a New Year's resolution to make 1985 an even better year for Maryville College Athletics. And who knows, maybe something fantastic will happen?!

GO SCOTS!

Merry Christmas Lady Scots

by Brian Rigell

'Twas a night during Christmas and all through the gym
Basketballs were bouncing–most around the rim
Uniforms were donned without any fear
Even though "almighty" LMU soon would be here
For LMU had blown out Temply by thirty or more
And Temple had nipped our Lady Scots by a 78–71 score.
Early predicitons had LMU in a runaway
But such was not the case–at least not today
Out in the lobby there arose such a noise
No, it was not Santa–just the media boys
It seems they were all agog with the Whiteheads' return
And that put the Lady Scots on a slow burn
With the teams on the court all ready to go
All it takes is a jump ball and we'll start this show
An early LMU lead–thirteen at the half
Things looked dim for Maryville, and that's no laugh
However, not all was at a loss
For we managed to score on a miraculous toss
Less than a second on the shot clock was left
When the ball went–it I'll not soon forget
A wonderful shot–Mimi's her name

Anywhere from fifteen feet out is her kind of game
The second half began with a lot of excitement
In that thirteen point lead the Lady Scots put a big dent
A couple of points here, a steal or two there
And visions of upset danced thru the air
Try as we might, it just wouldn't be
For LMU took home a four point victory
The coach was pleased, the team had done well
And that my friends is as clear as a bell
So off on a road trip at the end of the week
A win against Belmont or Fisk they did seek
They loaded the bus (next time take a slaigh)
And off they went on their merry way
First there was Sara, Pam, Cindy, and Jenny
Let's not forget Nancy, Mimi, Penzy, and Penny.
As hard as they tried it was just no go
Lady Scots lost twice by twenty or so
Keep the faith and don't give up hope
Will our team quit? Definitely nope!
I'll cut this short–just one thing left to say
Merry Christmas to all, and to all a good day!

Christmas Memories

by Peggy Millsaps

I will never forget my seventh Christmas--not because of our new two-story house dazzling with decorations from top to bottom like the White House Christmas tree, nor because of the delicate porcelain Snow White doll my parents, under the guise of Santa Claus, gave me.

With frightening clarity, I remember my seventh Christmas because of what a classmate told me only days before.

This lisping, freckle-faced observer of world affairs told me, with the same clear-eyed certainty of purpose that garnered him consistent A's in show 'n' tell, that on Christmas day a vast and ruthless nation called Russia was going to attack the United States.

Russia would attack us with atomic bombs, he said, and when they'd devastated our major cities and taken our president hostage, they'd trundle off our grandparents to die in the woods, leave children to starve, slaughter our pets, and guard the streets with hot pitch forks. His list of atrocities ran on.

Not being much of a foreign affairs expert at that age and having found this boy to be absolutely reliable in everything he'd said up to that point, I never questioned his grim pronouncements. Nor did I talk to my parents, who might have been able to alleviate my fears.

I spent Christmas listening for the shriek of missiles. When, at bedtime, my street, and so far as I knew, the nation, were still intact, I figured we'd been mercifully spared and that I need never worry about the Russians again. My peaceful and circumscribed life adjusted back to its even keel of Walter Farley novels, Barbie dolls, and the Osmond Brothers. Nonetheless, that Christmas marked my first awareness of the Soviet Union--particularly, the Soviet Union as a potential threat to the United States.

I am a more astute observer of world affairs now. I am not so naive that I expect an all-out Soviet assault on Christmas day, but I need no precocious classmate or prophet of doom to tell me of the strained relationships between the United States and the Soviet Union. For the second time in my life, Christmas is tainted with what I thought were long-sleeping nuclear fears.

I have heard the newscasters, the politicians, the experts. I have seen excerpts from Soviet training films where the camera cuts artfully and terrifyingly depicts missile after missile shrieking across the television screen while a series of mushroom clouds go up in boiling black smoke.

In a very serious and grown up way, I am afraid.

I can tell my parents about my fears. I can tell my friends, I can tell the President.

But this time no one can alleviate my fears.

Imagine that very first Christmas morning. . . .It is very early. The sheep are still asleep over in the corner of the barn while the cows munch quietly on the hay. It smells kind of musty, like old wood and animals, but that doesn't bother Mary. Wrapped in Joseph's warm cloak, she lies in the warm hay, exhausted from the birth that took most of the night. Looking down at the newborn face of Jesus, wrinkled and red, as he shifts in her arms, she smiles contentedly and closes her eyes to rest. Joseph's shadow leans in the doorway. He's watching a billion stars twinkle all at once, and he thinks about being a young boy again: a boy climbing trees, teasing the camels, and afraid of the darkness. Joseph glances inside the barn to check on his new family sleeping peacefully on the hay, then turns back to the vast and silent night. He clears a place on the ground and sits down with his back against the doorway to keep watch with the moon, no longer afraid.

Julie Humpert

THE NON-STUDENT AFFAIRS AWARD

Poet's Corner

Sere

the self stepped out of its circle.
it starts to want to speak everyone's dialect–
to find a new world.
before, it was impossible– even selves have steps to take, have numberless days of infancy before language –meaningful utterances–
is possible.
it sends more flowers,
now that it knows numbers
it begins to count pleasing petals.
–it remembers your name.–
it did not choose poverty
'though it was its own life it did not want it.
yet, it stood still, believing the line could not be crossed.
–it wants to return–
it needs to step into another universe.
the only function it needs now is peace.
in this country everything has seemed so far.
so far. with youth's ignorance and no car to travel with–everything seems so far.
so far away.
where are you?
across the table?
this is another balancing place.
this is the deserted barren country which no one visits.
i have been lost.
it is time.
my hands are in front of me.
my hands are waiting at the table.
when i picture you picturing me,
i see you learning
all i've felt and never said.
i watch your face take the knowledge of why.
self stepped out of its circle offering a new world.
thinking only of you.
new language takes form:
the moments', the days',
the years' meaningful utterance is your name.

Ciretta Carpenter

Highland ECHO

Volume 70, Number 9 MARYVILLE COLLEGE MARCH 1, 1985

Reagan's New Budget Asks Giant Cuts in Student Aids

SOME 'WORST FEARS' COME TRUE; 2.5 MILLION STUDENTS COULD LOSE AID (CPS) -- As many as 2.5 million college students could lose their financial aid funding next year if the education budget President Reagan sent to Congress February 4th passes, education proponents warn.

The budget proposals incorporste many of the worst fears expressed by educators since the November election.

And while education groups last year succeeded in pressuring Congress to overrule most of the president's education cuts, officials worry they may not be as lucky this time.

Reagan wants to cut next year's student aid budget by $2.3 million, a 27 percent decrease from the $9 billion appropriated for the current funding year, according to Education Department spokesman Duncan Helmrich.

Under Reagan's plan, the entire education budget would be slashed by nearly $3 billion -- from $18.4 billion to $15.5 billion -- for the upcoming fiscal year.

"But (the current $18.4 budget) includes a $750 million appropriated for payment of prior Pell Grants and Guaranteed Student Loans (GSLs) debts, so we're really only talking about a little over a $2 billion cut," Helmrich says.

Student aid will suffer most of the decrease. Under Reagan's proposal:

† Students with family incomes over $32,500 will be cut from GSL program, beginning with the 1986-87 school year.

† Those with family incomes above $25,000 would be denied Pell Grants, National Direct Student Loans (NDSLs), or College Work-Study funds.

† The State Student Incentive Grant and Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant programs will be eliminated.

† Assistance programs for international education, foreign language, study, and the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education will be cut drastically or eliminated.

† Funding will be frozen for remedial education, block grants, handicapped education, bilingual learning programs, and vocational and adult education programs.

Needless to say, Reagan's proposals are drawing harsh criticism from education groups.

"We see (the proposals) as a very major assault on education and student aid," says Dallas Martin, executive director of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

"More than one million students will be ineligible by the $25,000 ceiling on the Pell Grant, NDSL, and Work-Study programs," Martin contends.

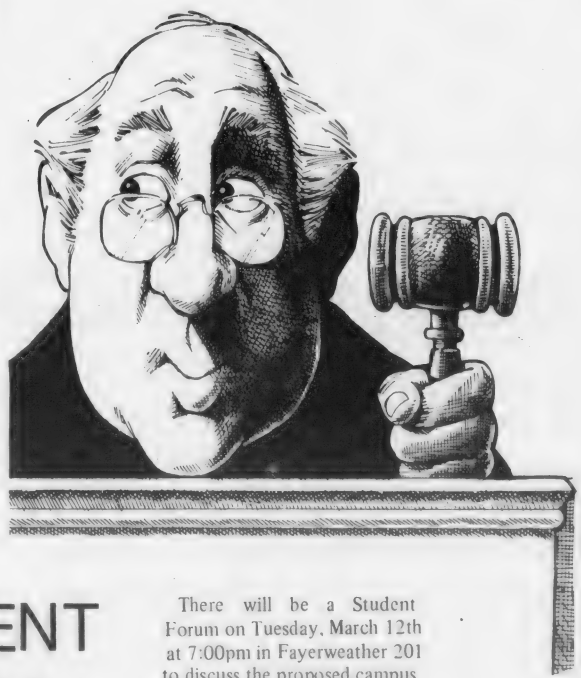
"Roughly one million more will be displaced by the $32,500 cap on GSLs, and another 300,000 will be affected by the cuts in state grant programs," he predicts.

Congress must still review and approve Reagan's proposals, or pass its own version of the education budget.

Martin feels he and his colleagues face a hard battle to beat the proposed cuts.

"We're in a totally different environment this year," he explains. "Last year was an election year and no one wanted to do anything too unpopular."

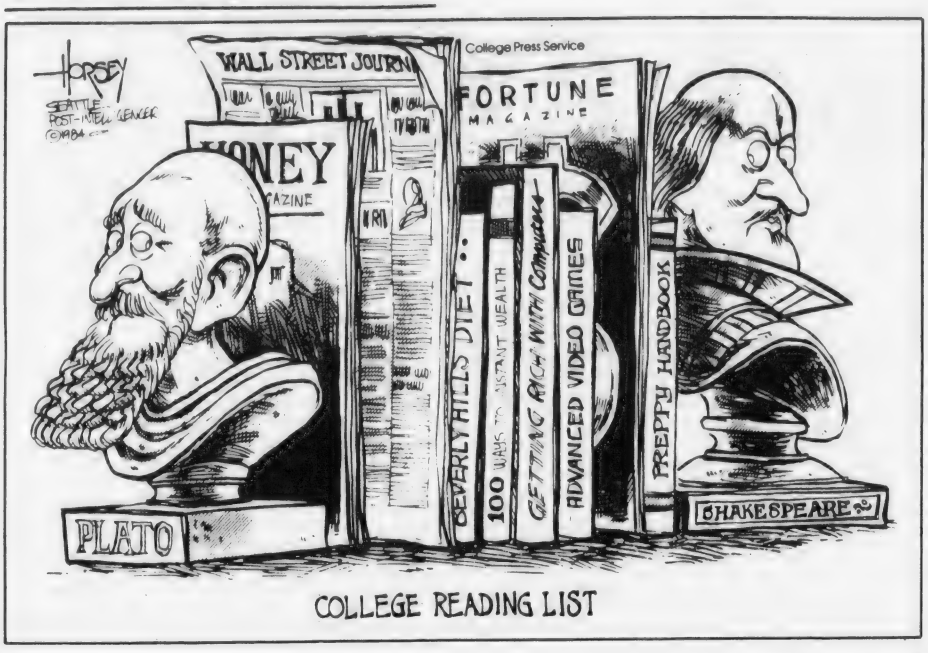
This year, he says, "because of the tremendous pressure to control the deficit, we should not assume that Congress will automatically step in and reduce the cuts."



NEW CAMPUS GOVERNMENT PROPOSED

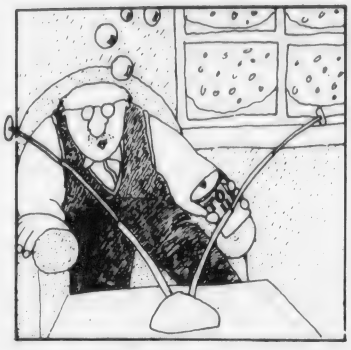
The present governing body of Maryville College, the All-College Council (ACC), has been perceived as ineffective by many individuals on campus. The most recent self-study of the College and the subsequent examination of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) indicated this apathy and disillusion with the ACC. SACS has recommended that the College re-examine its governance system, noting that "... better internal communication between administation, faculty, and students is needed, even on this fairly small campus."

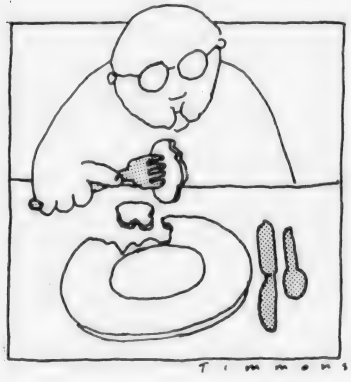
This proposal is the result of many months of intense thinking and discussion of a Governance Task Force charged by President Wayne Anderson to review the current campus governance system at Maryville College and, if necessary, propose a new governance system. By way of clarification, it should be noted that whatever governance system is proposed or adopted must be approved by the Board of Directors of the College. Although all campus consti uencies will have ample opportunity to examine and discuss this proposal, the final decision rests with the Board.



The main feature of this governance system would be a Student Senate and a College Liaison Council. The present ACC would be eliminated but the current council and committee structures would be maintained. The legislaive powers of the College would be divided among the constituencies, yet overall campus communication would be enhanced.

The unique position of the CLC will enable it to facilitate much-needed communication among the various councils and constituencies. Under this proposed system, the students will have their voice, with considerable legislative responsibility, and will be comparable to the Faculty and Administration as a separate entity. Students will deal with student concerns, faculty with faculty matters, and Cabinet with administration matters. This diversity of responsibility will remain a cohesive force through the College Liaison Council which will keep each constituency in touch with the others. In this respect, the CLC will provide and indispensable function to the success of College government.





STUDENT FORUM

There will be a Student Forum on Tuesday, March 12th at 7:00pm in Fayerweather 201 to discuss the proposed campus government. This will not be the only time, so watch for another time and date during lunch times.

COLLEGE READING LIST

the Highland ECHO

Brenda Gillespie .....Editor
Al Hipkins .....Assistant Editor
Amy Waggoner.....Advising Editor
Dr. Lemay.....Faculty Advisor
Keith Moore .....Photo Editor

Staff Writers: Ciretta Carpenter
Rick Carver
Lisa Harvey
Julie Humpert
Brian Rigell
Karen Shafer
Teresa Welch

The Highland Echo accepts signed, responsible comments from students, faculty, and staff. Names will be withheld upon request, but unsigned letters will not be published.—ed.

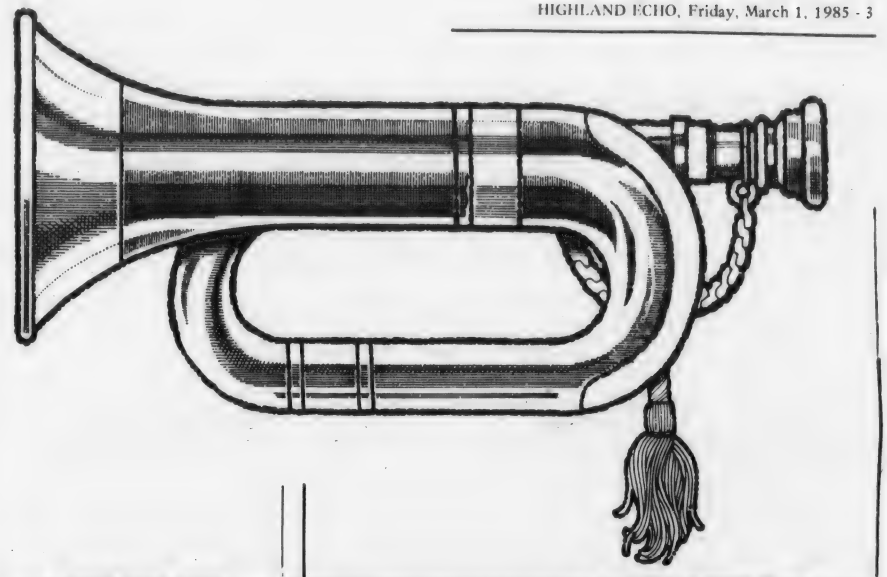
FEBRUARY

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

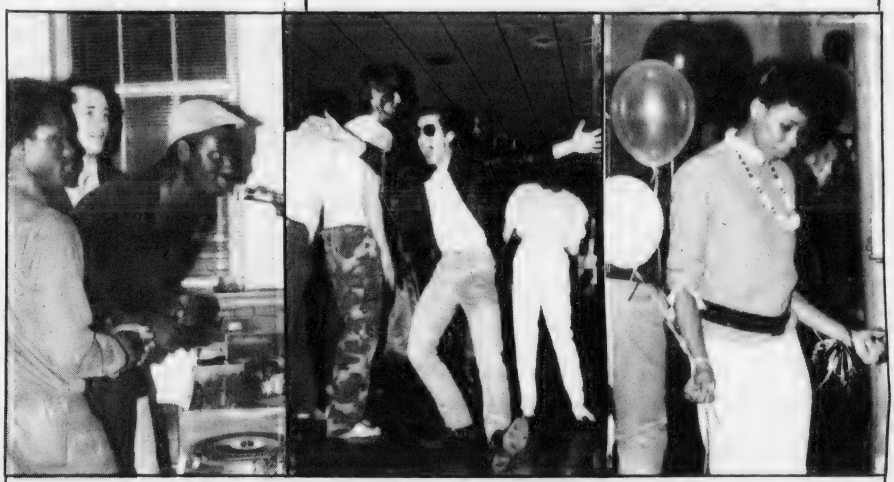
1. Pet Sematary, by Stephen King. (NAL/Signet, $4.50.) King's latest horror tale in paperback.
2. In Search of Excellence, by T. J. Peters & R. H. Waterman Jr. (Warner, $8.95.) A look at the secrets of successful business
3. Dune, by Frank Herbert. (Berkley, $3.95.) First book of the Dune series. Currently a motion picture.
4. Poland, by James A. Michener. (Fawcett, $4.50.) A panoramic view of 700 years of Poland's troubled history.
5. The Far Side Gallery, by Gary Larson. (Andrews, McMeel & Parker, $8.95.) And still more cartoons from the "Far Side."
6. Fatal Vision, by Joe McGinniss. (NAL/Signet, $4.50.) Non-fiction account upon which the recent TV special was based.
7. Living, Loving and Learning, by Leo Buscaglia. (Fawcett, $5.95.) Thoughts from the acclaimed California professor.
8. Changes, by Danielle Steel. (Dell, $3.95.) Her latest romantic novel—this time between doctor and anchorwoman.
9. The Road Less Traveled, by M. Scott Peck. (Touchstone, $8.95.) Psychological and spiritual inspiration by a psychiatrist.
10. In Search of the Far Side, by Gary Larson. (Andrews, McMeel & Parker, $4.95.) More cartoons from the "Far Side."

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS/NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

Professional Music Fraternity on Campus



by Jim Stettner



Phi Mu Alpha. Or, more correctly, Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia Fraternity of America, Inc. It sounds impressive! So what is it? Phi Mu Alpha is a professional fraternity for men in music, and claims in its membership such great musicians as Leopold Stokowski, Leonard Bernstein, Power Biggs, Virgil Fox, Duke Ellington, Pablo Casals, Glenn Miller and "Doc" Sevrinsen.

Purposes of the fraternity are: 1) to encourage and actively promote the highest standards of creativity, performance, education and research in music in America; 2) to develope and encourage loyalty to the Alma Mater; 3) to foster the mutal welfare and brotherhood of students of music; 4) to develope the trust fraternal spirit among its members; 5) to instill in all people an awareness ot music's important role in the enrichment of the human spirit.

Xi Rho is the Maryville College chapter of this fraternity. The current officers are Jim Stettner (President), Mark Womack (VP), Phil Finney (Treas.), Al Hipkins (Sec.), Terry Harmon(Educ. Officer/ Warded) and Charlie (Historian). Other members include Trent Gilmore, John Wright, Don Brickey, and David Marcum. In the past, this chapter has sponsored such fundraisers as its annual Haunted House, car washes, a piano smash, and old-fashioned photos at last year's May Madness dance. This semester, and looking into next school year, they hope to hold more fund raisers including a recital, musical dinner, and auction, as well as car washes and a sponsored dance. In addition, Xi Rho is hoping to sponsor some guest recitalists, and lectures for workshops.

This fraternity is not limited to music majors only, but is open to all persons interested in music. If you have any inquiries about the fraternity, or are interested in becoming a member, please contact box 2848.

Fantasy Free-for-All Phenominal Success

Notes About Notes

by Al Hipkins

Friday evening while most of the campus was watching the Scots basketball team romp in the second round of the ODAC tournament, I had an opportunity to hear the finest concert that the Maryville-Alcoa College Community Orchestra (MACCO) has offered. This was, of course, the EMPIRE BRASS.

The concert opened with selections of Early English Music by Adison, Purcill, Handel and others. These chamber works, arranged by the EBQ for brass, were played with the same richness of string and delicacy of bow that the finest string quartet would produce. The Empire Brass then played "Contrapus 1" from J.S. Bach's The Art of Fugue and one other Bach fugue. Those were played to perfection - never pushed, hurried or forced, but flowing as though the performers were only a medium for something larger and greater.

Virtuosity is commonplace among the members of the quintet. DAVID OHANIAN, EBQ French Horn player, demonstrated his virtuosity in Mozart's Rhondo and Finale for Horn. Ohanian takes the hardest instument to play and plays it with such grace and beauty as to make it all seem easy.

There were many things about Friday night's concert that only a brass player would appreciate -- like a tuba playing up and down 3 octaves, or French horn lip trills. But even those who don't play brass instruments appreciate the quality of music offered by the Empire Brass Quintet.

But the Empire Brass doesn't just play beautiful music, they entertain. For example, during the Porgy and Bess Medley, the Tuba player, SAMUEL PILAFIAN plays a lip glissando--nearly impossible for a tuba--to everybodies' amazement. Rolf, Charles, David, and Scott, the remainder of the quintet, just looked at him as the audience laughed and David says "Do that again" (although he could have said "Play it again Sam") and Sam plays it again but this time the gliss is twice as long!

The "Hota 2" by Mendenze portrays the fight between the bull and the Matador and requires auidence participation. We were to get a cue from CHARLES " "IRON LIPS" LEWIS, trumpet player, to yell "Ole." When Charles walked off stage, no one was sure what was going on, but when the giant cue card "Ole" came out of the stage door we all knew! The show continued with Cole Porter's "Leader of the Band," a song that Ethel Mermen made famous. The solo line was, of course, played by the Tuba. It was sort of like listening to an Ethel Mermen record at 16 instead of 33!

The second half also included "The Blade Bottom Stomp," "Ain't mis-behavin," "Carnival of Venice" and "Central Park Morning" from David Chester's Manhattan Suite. The night ended with "The Stars and Stripes Forever" with the piccolo solo being played by, of course, the Tuba!

This was the second concert that the EBQ has played in Maryville and the second time they have amazed me. For those who were there, I'm sure you'll be back next year to hear them again. For those who missed it, be sure not to miss their return next spring.

THE EMPIRE BRASS QUINTET

ROLF SMEDUIG, trumpet
CHARLES LEWIS, trumpet
DAVID OHANIAN, French horn
SCOTT HARTMAN, Trombone
SAMUEL PILAFIAN, Tuba

CIRCUS

The Greatest Show on Earth, America's legendary national treasure of live family entertainment, is coming to Knoxville after all, bringing a host of fresh new attractions combined with traditional old-time favorites in two-and-one-half hours of action, suspense, daring and hilarity.

The sparkling new Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus opens at the Knoxville Civic Colliseum on March 19 for 12 star-studded performances through March 24.

The Knoxville performances will be The Circus' only Tennessee apperance this year, having cancelled 1985 engagements for Memphis, Nashville, and Chattanooga earlier. Tennessee's new amusement tax, higher than most states apparently had a bearing on The Greatest Show on Earth's decision to limit this year's tour to only one city in the state. East Tennessee Circus fans have traditionally turned out in great numbers for the Show's five day Knoxville run.

Tickets are on sale now at the Knoxville Civic Coliseum and all area Ticketron Outlets including Miller's Stores in Downtown Knoxville, Westown, Eastown, Foothills Mall, and Oak Ridge. Prices are $7.50 and $9.00, an increase of 50cents per ticket over 1984 prices. The price hike is less than half of the newly added amusement tax. All seats are reserved and prices include all taxes.

This season's Edition celebrates the 100th Anniversary of the first performance of Ringling Bros. Circus. 1985 will be the 25th consecutive year that The Greatest Show on Earth has performed at the Knox ville Civic Coliseum. The hands of time will be turned back a century as audiences travel down the rhinestone and sawdust trail to meet those five innovative Ringling Brothers who built the biggest, boldest, and best Circus the world has ever known.

This season also marks the 125th year of the most romantic of all Circus art forms -- the flying trapeze. In apt recognition, The Greatest Show on Earth proudly features Miquel Vazquez, the greatest trapeze artist of all time. Audiences witness Circus history in the making each time the daring young man on the flying trapeze adds yet another incredible quadruple somersault to his astounding record.

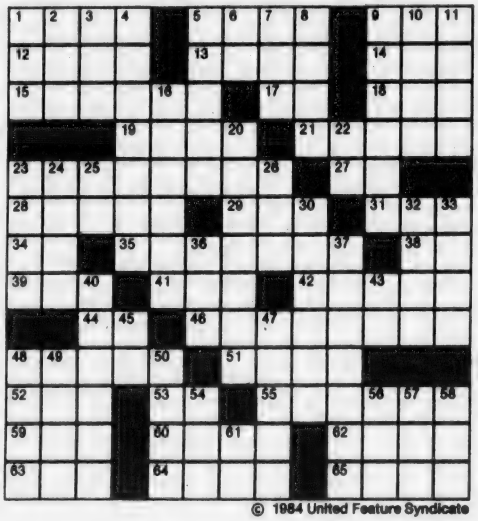
Circus Producer Kenneth Feld and his father, the late Irvin Feld, traveled the entire world to bring to American audiences the 300 world-class Circus artists and 200 exotic animals seen in The Greatest Show on Earth. This year's Edition boasts more new young talent than ever before as a fresh breed of energetic newcomers make their debut in The Greatest Show on Earth.

COME AS A GROUP

Special Group Discounts are offered this year for half of the Show's 12 Knoxville performances. Groups of 20 or more can save $2.00 each off the regular ticket price. For further information on Group Discounts, contact the Group Sales Office at (615) 522-9743.

Miguel Vazquez of the Flying Vazquez, the only person ever to complete a quadruple somersault to the hands of the catcher, will attempt this awesome feat during each of the 12 performances of The Greatest Show on Earth.

CROSS WORD PUZZLE



FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS

1 Kind of lock
5 Linger
9 Insane
12 Great Lake
13 Competent
14 Rubber tree
15 Defaced
17 Note of scale
18 Golf mound
19 Escaped
21 Liquid measure
23 Farm apparatus
27 Symbol for tellurium
28 Choose
29 Swiss river
31 Bone of body
34 French article
35 Instructor
38 Sun god
39 Novelty
41 Pair
42 One of Castro's men
44 Printer's measure
46 Mixing, as dough
48 Citrus fruit: pl.
51 Traded for money
52 Artificial language
53 Negative
55 Heavy hammer
59 In music, high
60 One opposed
62 Bellow
63 Grain
64 Mexican laborer
65 Withered

DOWN

1 Dress border
2 Macaw
3 Title of respect
4 Ideal
5 Walked in water
6 Hebrew month
7 Sick
8 River duck
9 Grumble
10 Toward shelte
11 Antlered anim
16 Raised the sp of 20 Priests' assistants
22 Italian: abbr.
23 Of the same material
24 Entreaty
25 Anew: abbr.
26 Cheer
30 Recollect
32 Country of Asi
33 Loud noise
36 Diving bird
37 Part of ship: pl.
40 Lower in rank
43 Prefix: twice
45 Symbol for methyl
47 Chemical dye
48 Falsifier
49 Lazily
50 Break suddenly
54 Single
56 Female deer
57 Long, slender fish
58 Before
61 As far as

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Jobs for people with savor.

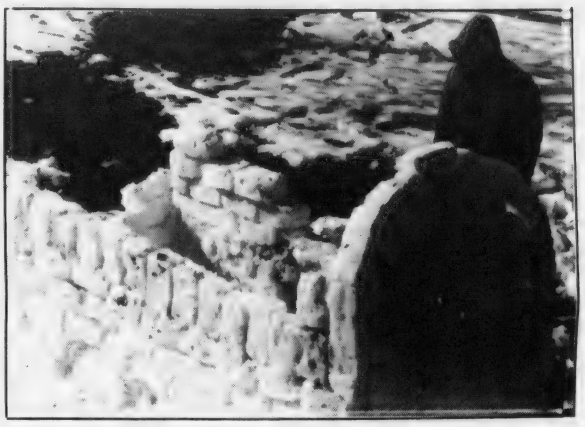
"You are the salt of the earth." – Mt. 5:13

How do you keep your savor? By making yourself useful to the Lord! One great way to serve Him is with a job in a Christian organization.

Is God calling you to use your skills for Him full-time? Contact Intercristo for leads on selected openings in over 2,000 Christian ministries, missions, schools, camps, and local churches. Thousands of career and short-term positions are available now, coast-to-coast and around the world.

CALL TOLL-FREE: (800) 426-1342.
(AK, HI, WA, CANADA: (206) 546-7330).

OR RETURN THE COUPON BELOW.



Intercristo
The Christian Career Specialists
P.O. Box 33487
Seattle, WA 98133

a division of CRISTA

Please send me information on "jobs for people with savor."

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State ____ Zip ____
I saw this ad in (Publication) _____

Eskimo Invasion! Dwight Graybill and his Igloo

Did You Ever Notice How in the Dining Hall...

1. Big Strong Men are allowed two helpings on the first time through, while frail, slender, atheletic girls are only allowed one?

2. If you go back to the line with a bowl you may not have french fries you MUST have french fries on a plate, consequently soiling two plates, instead of one plate and one bowl?

3. You can't get Nachos with meat and cheese BUT you can get Nachos with cheese and a taco shell with meat. Then you can pour the meat onto the nachos, and discard the taco shell endangering the taco shell supply for those behind you?

4. Fresh lettuce is accompanied by shriveled salad fixings, while wilted brown lettuce is accompanied by a variety of fresh salad fixings?

5. The employees sometimes can't tell you "What THAT is"?

6. Choc. Milk is offered on secret food service holidays known only to privy officials?

7. You get baked potatoes for three days in a row, and then you don't see them again for three months?

8. At five whole minutes before closing, you are confronted with sniviling employees who feel it is time for you to stop eating?

9. They have stricter ID rules than any bar in Knoxville?

Join us next time in the Business Office...

International Publications

is sponsoring a

National College Poetry Contest

— — Spring Concours 1985 — —

open to all college and university students desiring to have their poetry anthologized. CASH PRIZES will go to the top five poems:

$100 First Place	$50 Second Place	$25 Third Place	$15 Fourth $10 Fifth

AWARDS of free printing for ALL accepted manuscripts in our popular, handsomely bound and copyrighted anthology, AMERICAN COLLEGIATE POETS.

Deadline: March 31

CONTEST RULES AND RESTRICTIONS:

1. Any student is eligible to submit his or her verse.
2. All entries must be original and unpublished.
3. All entries must be typed, double-spaced, on one side of the page only. Each poem must be on a separate sheet and must bear, in the upper left-hand corner, the NAME and ADDRESS of the student as well as the COLLEGE attended. Put name and address on envelope also!
4. There are no restrictions on form or theme. Length of poems up to fourteen lines. Each poem must have a separate title. (Avoid "Untitled"!) Small black and white illustrations welcome.
5. The judges' decision will be final. No info by phone!
6. Entrants should keep a copy of all entries as they cannot be returned. Prize winners and all authors awarded free publication will be notified immediately after deadline. I.P. will retain first publication rights for accepted poems. Foreign language poems welcome.
7. There is an initial one dollar registration fee for the first entry and a fee of fifty cents for each additional poem. It is requested to submit no more than ten poems per entrant.
8. All entries must be postmarked not later than the above deadline and fees be paid, cash, check or money order, to:

INTERNATIONAL PUBLICATIONS
P. O. Box 44044-L
Los Angeles, CA 90044

February Meetings Examined Media

by Julie Humpert

The 1985 February Meetings took place last week, Feb. 17-20. The Rev. Edward N. McNulty, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Westfield, N.Y., led the meetings which examined "Media Parables the Word, Rock, Film, and T.V."

The three-day series began with Sunday School and Worship at Highland Presbyterian Church. On Sunday afternoon a workshop offered instructions for Youth and Christian Education Workers. Sunday Night at the Movies in the Snack Bar featured "The Year of Living Dangerously."

Monday meetings included "T.V. as Leisure Time"; "Rock Music and Christian Values," a Community Issues and Values program; and a time to voice opinions in "Media Mind Exchange," in Lloyd Hall Lounge.

Tuesday meetings began with a multimedia experience in worship titled "The Christ Figure in Media." During the lunch hour, faculty and staff had a chance for "table talk" about the role of multimedia Liberal Arts education. The afternoon meeting centered on "Multimedia and Culture - Transmitting Values."

Thanks to all who took the time to participate and make the 1985 February Meetings a success.

Scots Win O.D.A.C. Title

by Tyrone Matthews

The Fighting Scots Basketball team are currently 15-7, having won their last 2 regular season home games over Washington and Lee 61-48, and Bridgewater 69-68, to win the 1984-85 regular season O.D.A.C. Basketball title. The Scots played the first round of the O.D.A.C. tournament at home Tuesday Feb. 19 against Bridgewater. A victory in that game allowed the Scots to advance to Salem, Virginia for the Semi-Finals and finals on Feb. 22 and 23.

The Scots have received outstanding efforts all season long from Seniors Tyrone Matthews, Dan Kirkpatrick, and Deangelo McDaniel; and Juniors Tom Robinson, Ray Burnett, and Paul Mills. Another key factor for their success has been their depth and versatility. Although sustaining injuries to key players such as Tom Robinson, Deangelo McDaniel, and Paul Mills, the Scots have continued to win due to the outstanding efforts of the people off the bench. Jeff White, George Lancho, Jeff Ketron, Robert Waters, and Dennis Varhall have all played important roles in critical conference games both at home and on the road. Also, Tom Mosher and Steve Tensi should be given credit for their hard work in practice and their constant enthusiasm and team spirit. Coaches Lambert, Gist, Dunlap, and Graves along with the players, would like to thank all the fans (especially the corner) for their enthusiatic support all season long.

GO FOR THE GOLD.

You've just about completed one big challenge—your degree. Ready for the next? Go for the gold. The gold bars of a Second Lieutenant in the Army.

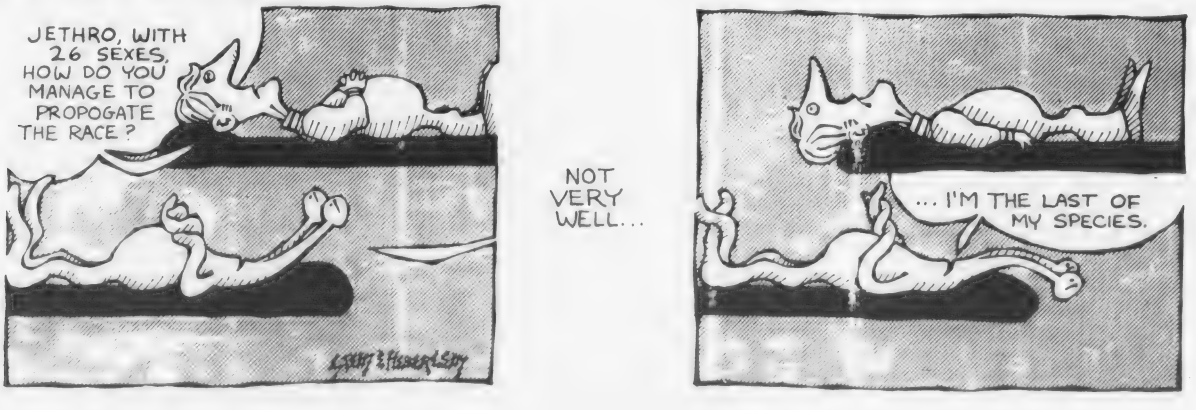
It's no picnic. O.C.S. (Officer Candidate School) is a 14-week challenge that will make you dig deep inside yourself for mental and physical toughness. When you come out, you'll be trim, fit, a commissioned officer in the Army, and ready to exercise the leadership skills civilian companies put such a premium on.

Go for the gold. It could help you when you're ready to reach for the brass ring.

ARMY.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Pitching a Key to SCOTS

The 1985 Scots baseball team is adding the final touches to their pre-season drills and gearing up for the season which begins February 27th at the University of Tennessee. The team will face a tough schedule this year. Powerhouses such as Carson Newman, Lincoln Memorial, Tennessee Weslyn, and Sewanee will prove to be stiff competion. In addition, the team will face the always tough ODAC foes, with Bridgewater, Lynchburg, Hampden Sydney, and Randolph-Macon being challengers to the conference title.



Normally, such a difficult schedule would cause concern. However, new coach Bobby Saylor remains optimistic and boasts a strong pitching staff to be the key to the team's success. At the top of the staff will be junior transfer Brian Tease, who brings his talents to MC from Florida Atlantic University. Other key members of the pitching staff include transfer Tracy Pate, FR. Jim Gregory, FR. Steve Robbins, SR Steve Saylor, JR. Rick Carver, FR. Ricky Miller, SO. William Pate, and JR. Tony Murr.

Supporting the team in the field will be another group of fine atheletes. Soph. Eric Etchison returns from his 1984 MVP season, and will supply the team with stability at catcher and at the plate with his 353 average. Spelling Etchison will be FR. Jason Harlison and FR. Jeff Catlett.

In the infield, the Scots have JR. first baseman Ronnie Ramsey returning. Second base will be manned by Tracy Pate and FR. Jim Shook. At third base, the Scots have the strong bats of Brian Tease, Jason Harlison and Steve Saylor. Rick Carver returns as the shortstop.

In the outfield, the Scots are not as experienced, but are reasonably secure with Soph. Mike Human and JR. Tony Murr returning. Steve Robbins, Steve Saylor, William Pate, and Buster Ferguson will provide depth and additional help to the outfield corps.

Helping Coach Saylor with the team this year is SR. Patt Foster. Foster returns for his second year as assistant coach. The overall attitude of the team is positive, and the 1985 Scots are anxious for the upcoming season. The first home game is Friday March 1st, when the Scots face Cumberland College. Sewanee will invade MC on March 8th, and the Scots are looking for support from the MC community. So put on your shades, bikinis, sun tan oil, and flip-flops, and come see the baseball team as they strive to give MC back to back ODAC chamions.

Sports

JOCK TALK
A Tribute to Teamwork

by Rick Carver

In the past few months, a group of people got together on the basketball court and decided to work together as a team and to do something that is almost forbidden at MC -- WIN. This group of people is the 1984-85 basketball squad. Yea, it's that group that has received some, although not enough, attention in the past few weeks. It is the group that we all cheered for as they won the ODAC regular season championship.

What is behind this squad? Why did they achieve their success? Answers to these questions come down to one word---teamwork. Everywhere you go, you see a group of basketball players. You don't see a basketball player, you see some basketball players. They hang around each other constantly. They go to class together, they eat together, and they most certainly play together. From starter to substitute, the members of the basketball team are unified. No one claimed to be better than anyone else. They are truely a team. Here's a look at what each member of the team contributed to his fellow teammates from a spectator's point of view:

†Coach Lambert - Whenever you look at success, you must start from the top. The Coach of the Year award received by Coach Lambert is only a small token of symbolism for the job he did.

†Paul Mills - He lived up to his nickname of "pistol." He was the engineer, and kept the troops emotionally pumped.

†Ray "In the Way" Burnett - did whatever was needed at the right time. Ray proved to be a team player through his many versatile talents. Whether it was a key basket, rebound, pass,or defensive effort, he was always there.

†Deangelo McDaniel - the leading scorer and stalwart of the team. Never before on any level of basketball have I seen anybody work as hard for the ball. He is an intense player who deserves the first team all ODAC honors he received.

†Dan "Sticks" Kirkpatrick - The chairman of the boards. He didn't score like alot of fans expected, but he proved to be a neutralizer of opposing big men. All he needed was some Windex and the backboards would have been spotless.

†Tom Robinson - "T.R." is the ultimate competitor. When he went down with a severe ankle injury, he could have moped around, but he battled back and showed his teammates what is meant by Fighting Scots.

†Tyrone Matthews - a great motivational player who wanted to work hard and did whatever was needed. Intensity and competiveness are two adjectives that should be used around this man.

†George Lancho - this spark–plug from the "Magic City" dazzled opponents with sharp passes and quickness. He represents an attitude of future success in Scots basketball.

†Jeff White - Only a freshman, but performed like a vet. Another fine athlete with bright future plans. His jumpers should prove to be even more fatal to opponents next year.

†Dennis Varhall and Robert Waters - both of these big guys provided relief in the low past. They may have gone unnoticed by some, but not by their teammates.

†Jeff Ketron, Steve Tensi,and Tom Mosher - although they played sparingly, they provided moral support and encouragement. All should see plenty of action in the future.

Congratulations are in order to the members of this fine team. They have given us excitement, victory, and most importantly, an example of what can be accomplished when people work together as a team. Let's just hope that the attitude exhibited by the basketball team will carry over into other areas, sports and otherwise, here at MC.

Lady Scots Wrap Up

by Brian Rigell

The gym is silent; gone are the cheers, the loud buzzers, the thud of the ball, squeak of shoes, and the ever so silent but awesome swish of the ball hitting nothing but the net on its way through the rim. The season is over and all that remains is the reflection and introspection that will be a constent companion until next season.

In retrospect, the 1984-85 season for the Lady Scots Basketball team and Coach Sharon Arrington was a successful one. Granted, their record was not outstanding and they didn't share in the acclaim and publicity of their male counterparts, but their's was a different kind of success story.

Coaching can be compared to trying to work a jigsaw puzzle. You start with different pieces that come in many shapes and sizes and try to put them together to make a picture. In coaching however, there's no picture on the box cover to guide you, and it takes a lot of time, effort, patience, and a little luck until all the pieces fall into place. As the season started, Coach Arrington had a of pieces, and no idea how they were to fit together. "In the beginning we were more of a team that had five people out there for themselves, but towards the end we were five people playing as one for each other."

Teamwork is one of the main things that Coach Arrington stressed throughout the season, and it paid off. One player was heard saying, "It was all worth while. For the first time in quite a while I feel as if everyone wanted to win. It sure is a great feeling. "Coach Arrington added, "We got to the point where we went out to win for one another; we felt each other's pain and we all shared in the laughter and joy."

The outlook for next season depends a lot on recruiting. Coach Arrington will have a solid nucleus of Penny Head, Pam Gunter, Denise Penzkofer, Cindy Blair, and Nancy Koehl to work with, but the loss of Sara Covington, Jenny Black, Mimi Chesney, and Robin Simmons will certainly affect the team.

Coach Arrington summed the season up by saying, "We had the desire to win, we wanted it and we were willing to play together in an effort to get it." In my opinion, Coach, you did a damn fine job and Lady Scots you're the best jigsaw puzzle picture I've seen in a long time.

TENNIS ANYONE?

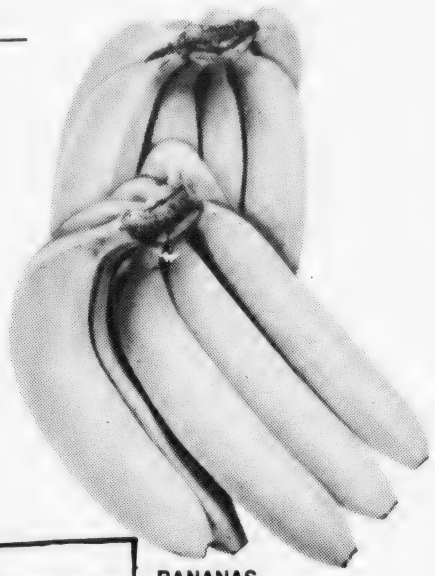
by Lisa Harvey

The Fighting Scots varsity tennis team is under the guidance of a new coach who comes to Maryville form Salt Lake City, Utah. Coach Steve Taylor, who received his B.A. from Utah State, has most recently been working as a polygraph examiner (No lie!) after graduating from Backster's School of Lie Detection.

After graduating from Utah State, Coach Taylor had brief contracts with both the Saskat chewan Roughriders and the Dallas Cowboys. He fondly recalls the day he was issued his Cowboys uniform....and a pot of glue... and told to find his spot on the bench and to stay there.

Aside from having a sense of humor, Coach Taylor has a great deal of experience with athletics. He has owned health spas, was the Conditioning Coordinator at Utah State, has coached several successful teams, was the Inter-Mountain States chairman of the AAU in weightlifting and bodybuilding, was an AAU bodybuilding judge, and has coached the number-one ranked teenage tennis player in the U.S.

Coach Taylor is even taking a few classes at Maryville. He is taking Physiology and economics in order to complete his pre-chiropractic requirements.



Welcome, Coach Taylor!

Dr. David Cartlidge has taken the position of coach for the Lady Scots varsity tennis team. Dr. Cartlidge, in his nineteenth year at Maryville as a professor, is a rookie as an "official coach," although he has assisted several Maryville teams.

Dr. Cartlidge participated in cross-country, was captain of the swim team, and was a member of the tennis team at Wooster College, where he received his B.A. He received a Bachelor of Divinity from McCormick Theological seminary, and his Doctorate from Harvard.

BANANAS

The Back Page

EDITORS WANTED

Share some of that creative genius! Applications are now being accepted for editors for the '85 - '86 academic year. Students must maintain a 2.5 gpa, and attend a publications workshop to be eligible. Available positions include ECHO Assistant Editor, CHILHOWEAN Editor and Assistant Editor,and IMPRESSIONS Editor. Applications are available through the Office of Student Affairs and should be returned by March 15.

PUBLICATIONS WORKSHOP
Saturday, March 16, 1985.
All students interested in publications are urged to attend a workshop on the how - to's of editing, layout, writing and other aspects of publication. Inquiries may be sent to the Echo, box 2820. Sign up in advance via the Echo.

RA, SA Applications are due today in the Office of Student Affairs.

What would you like to see in the paper? We need suggestions to make your paper, the Highland Echo , better! Drop suggestions in Box 2820. We want student input!

Puzzle Answer

REDUCED FARES FOR STUDENTS

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 20, 1985 -- As spring break approaches, thousands of college students are anxious to swap books, exams and harsh winter climates for a few weeks of "the good life."

Whether they're off to the beaches for fun in the sun, or home to mom for some tender-loving-care, college students can travel anywhere Greyhound goes in the continental U.S. for a round-trip fare of only $85.

Terry Underwood, Greyhound's vice president of marketing, said, "'Students traditionally leave campus during spring break, and Greyhound is able to provide not just safe, reliable transportation, but a special discount price as well."

Tickets may be purchased at any Greyhound terminal or commission agency through June 15. A valid student ID card must be presented at the time of purchase.

Tickets are valid for a maximum of 15 days of travel or through June 15, whichever comes first.

For futher information, students are advised to call the local Greyhound agent.

Photos by Tom Hudson

Seniors celebrate 100 days at the home of Wayne Anderson, February 10. Today's count: 79 days.

BOOK SALE

A.A.U.W. BOOK FAIR
March 15 and 16
9:30am - 5:00pm
Used paperbacks and hardbacks in many categories.
Blount County Library Community Room. Donations accepted: Wed., March 13 - 3:30 - 7:00pm and Thurs., 9:00am - 7:00pm in the rear of Blount County Library. Old textbooks and ancient magazines not accepted.

for Sale

FOR SALE: 1979 Firebird. Low mileage. Contact Teresa, box 2798 or 982-9894.

FOR SALE: 12 string guitar-Yamaha, good shape; price negotiable. See Miss Sack in P.E. Bldg. or call ext. 283.

Poet's Corner

The Echo accepts submissions of poetry from faculty, staff, and students. Individual authors retain all rights, and publication in the Echo does not disqualify potential submissions to Impressions. We will return original copies on request.

SENIORS

SENIORS! Your input is needed for your CIV on May 9. Photos may be sent to box 2174 (with your name and box number on back) for the slide show. Got any ideas? Talk at Ciretta, Gloria, Donald, Mack, Brenda, Maria Jo, or Maelea. We're counting on YOU!

PERSONALS

EDP : The woods aren't so bad....

Tell it to the ECHO box 2820

Highland ECHO

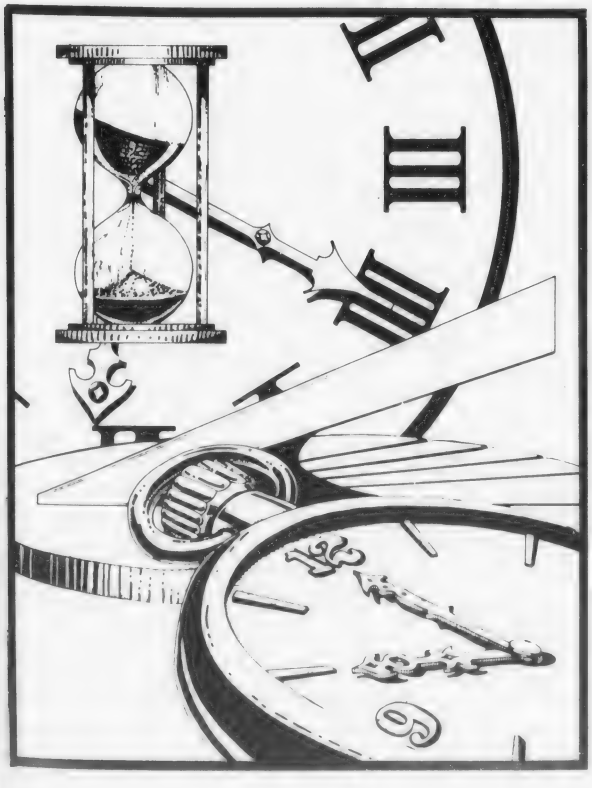
Volume 70, Number 10 MARYVILLE COLLEGE March 15, 1985

University Lobby Day For Arms Control Slated April 18th

College students, faculty and staff from across the country will gather in Washington on Thursday, April 18th for the 1985 University Lobby to End the Arms Race. They will meet with Members of Congress to inform them of widespread campus support for policies that would halt the nuclear arms race.

Participants in the Lobby Day will discuss four legislative priorities with their legislators: restricting funds for nuclear explosives testing and resuming negotiations for a comprehensive test ban treaty; stopping appropriations for extremely accurate, potentially first-strike weapons such as the MX, Trident D-5 and Pershing II missiles; continuing a moratorium on testing of anti-satellite (Star Wars) research and supporting efforts to maintain the existing ABM treaty in force; and finally, supporting legislation for a comprehensive bilateral freeze on the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons. The lobby day will feature briefings by Washington arms control lobbyists, meetings with legislators and a chance to share experiences with campus delegations from around the country.

The national sponsor of Lobby Day is United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM), an organization founded in 1982. UCAM presently has 60 campus chapters and contacts on 700 campuses in all 50 states and Canada. Students for Nuclear Disarmament, Yale University, will lead the field organizing effort to encourage participation in Lobby Day. Yale and national UCAM will be assisted in their efforts by UCAM chapters and independent campus groups throughout the country.



Last year, 700 participants from 65 campuses gathered for the first Lobby Day. Students spoke with their Members of Congress and were addressed by national arms control experts. Michael Wishnie, a key Lobby Day organizer at Yale University summarizes the objectives of the lobby day: "We hope to spark a renewed effort to curb the spiraling nuclear competition by demonstrating the presence of a well-informed and active campus movement for arms control." UCAM's Field Director Phil Antweiler says that he "expects this year's event to be much larger. Interested student groups have been calling from around the country and the organizing effort is well ahead of last year's pace."

Lobby Day organizers are currently seeking contact with persons or groups interested in learning more about the event. Even campuses unable to send delegations to Washington, D.C. are urged to support the aims of Lobby Day by collecting signed proxy statements which will be delivered by participants to Members of Congress.

For more information, contact either of the organizations listed below:

Students for Nuclear Disarmament, Yale University
Eric Celeste
Box 6198, Yale Station
New Haven, CT 06520
(203) 436-1480

UCAM
Phil Antweiler
1346 Connecticut Ave. NW
Suite 706
Washington, DC 20036
(202) 223-6206

College Students Urged To Line Up Scholarships Now

Deadlines are quickly approaching for summer and fall financial aid, according to The Scholarship Bank.

Students with financial needs should begin now to investigate some of the more than 25,000 private aid sources, according to Steve Danz, Director. These funds are available to students with interests in a number of fields, and many do not depend on demonstated financial need, as do state and federal funds. For example, students with an interest in business, law, and accounting can receive a stipend from the Exceptional Student Fellowship Fund, and apply to the parent corporation for full moneys available. As an example of the depth of the search, the bank reports one student found thirty six sources for the most unusual major of "deep sea diver". Students wishing to use the search should send a stamped, self addressed envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 10100 Santa Monica 2600, LA CA 90067.

The computer can help you find sources designed just for you, based on your major, occupational goal, geographic desires, type of aid requested (scholarships, loans, summer work), and special skills and hobbies. According to the director, the computer guarantees each student at least fifty sources of aid. It has been estimated that each package of aid represents approximately $20,000 in potential money for college. Private aid comes from America's largest foundation, corporations, unions, and private donors and totals approximately 500 million dollars, or one fourth of all available aid. Thus, it is an extremely valuable addition to time work following graduation.

The Scholarship Bank is the largest private scholarship bank in the country for undergraduate and for graduate grants and loans.

editorial

Spring term 1985 and the campus is stricken with . . . apathy. Prior to the publication of the last ECHO, one staff writer was considering writing about apathy on campus but discovered there was little to be said. Students willingly voice their opinions, but when it comes right down to it, very few people actually do anything.

What can be said? Not a great deal. But let me ask -- What would it take to motivate students? What needs to happen before you will get involved?

The problem became very obvious to me this morning when I learned that no one has submitted an application for editorship af any of the three student publications. It is frightening to me to think that one area in which the students have control will be lost because of apathy. The CHILHOWEAN, the ECHO, and IMPRESSIONS need student editors.

I can say from experience that these positions are very rewarding . The jobs are not easy, but a break of one-half tuition for editorship of the newspaper or yearbook is, for me, a great motivator, especially with the cost of tuition rising each year. These are positions of responsbility. I don't want to discuss resumes here, but just think how a prospective employer will view this kind of experience. You will have learned how to delegate, to create, and to deal with people in a slightly pressured environment. I am not suggesting that anyone apply for editorship solely to look good in the job market, and I won't even imply that it's not a lot of work. I will say again that you will find the jobs rewarding and worthwhile.

Not to sound too pleading, but do you realize that if students don't design and run student publications,that, too, will be publications, that, too, will be left in the hands of the administration? How much does student yearbook or newspaper or literary magazine mean to you?

the Highland ECHO

Brenda Gillespie .....Editor
Al Hipkins .....Assistant Editor
Amy Waggoner.....Advising Editor
Dr. Lemay.....Faculty Advisor
Keith Moore .....Photo Editor

Staff Writers: Ciretta Carpenter
Rick Carver
Lisa Harvey
Julie Humpert
Brian Rigell
Karen Shafer
Teresa Welch

The Highland Echo accepts signed, responsible comments from students, faculty, and staff. Names will be withheld upon request, but unsigned letters will not be published.—ed.

The largest student organization at Stanford's Business School, is the 125-member Hug Club. Organizer Michael McTeigue says the club relieves stress and promotes hugging between consenting adults.

Notes About Notes

by Al Hipkins

What kind of music do you like? For most people at MC – as with most college students – it is Rock-n-roll. Well, that's understandable, people like music that they understand. I am a classical pianist and spend a great deal of my time learning to understand the music I play and I would like to share some of what I have discovered.

First, why is Rock-n-roll so popular? It's a little hard to have a rolling party while listening to Bizets' Carmer, or to early Mozart string quartets. But crank up some Van Halen or Doobie Brothers, drink some beer and boogie! Sometimes, however, I like to listen to music -- I mean really listen. And understanding what you listen to is a big part of enjoying. I play classical music - well actually Baroque, Classical, Romantic or Impressonistic music. These are the styles I would like to share with you.

Baroque music is basically that which was written during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The man that exemplified this period was Hohann Sebestian Bach. There were many forms of music that was written during the Baroque period, but J. S. Bach was (and is) especially known for as the "fugue". A fugue has 3 or more parts which play a melody one after the other with each new entrance interupting the previous part. A fugue goes on to introduce more themes and to develop (play around with) the earlier themes. When listening to a fugue, I like to listen for the entrance of each new voice and how it combines with the previous ones to create new harmonies.

In the middle of the eighteenth century, a new form of music began to emerge. As the old feudal system began to break down, and the "common" people wanted more and more, Classical music emerged. Mozart and Beethoven were the two biggies of this period. As a pianist, the most obvious difference I see is the complexity of the music. More of the piano is used and there is much less of the rigidness of the Baroque. Religious and emotional expressions are also stronger and technical prowess becomes a necessity. The harmonies of the Classical period are the ones that rule Rock-n-roll today. The ideas of tension and release are fully expressed in this period.

Beethoven was not, however, always a classical composer. In his later years he began to rebel against the rules that bound the Classical period. He began to create tension that did not release for some time, and his emotional expression became more intense. A sensitive performer can put across to the listener the stress that Beethoven was experiencing as he became more and more deaf. His last symphony (the ninth) truly expresses his belief that something better and greater exists than what is available on earth. Listen to the music, read the words that the chorus sings and you will understand Beethoven.

The Romantic period is one of expression and ideas. My best example is Debussy's "The Sunken Cathedral." The music portrays the French legend of a magnificant cathedral that was banished by the gods which it challenged. But when these gods sleep, the cathedral rises from the ocean depths that are its grave. Rises above the waves in all its splendor and glory until the gods awaken again to banish it again to the seas.

The most recent form of "classical" music (the stuff that WVOT plays) is Impressionistic. This is music that attempts to paint pictures and stir emotions. It is sometimes very difficult to understand or like this music. But if the piece is a setting of depressing pessimistic poetry and you leave feeling depressed and pessimistic, the composer has accomplished his goal.

Here at Maryville College we have a fine music department and many fine young musicians. Once a month a group of these students perform their best and would like to share it. If you don't like the classical music they play, maybe it's because you don't understand it. I urge you all to attend at least one student recital and listen for pictures of emotional and maybe -- just maybe -- you will begin to understand and enjoy this marvelous art form we call music.

Dulin

Gallery of Art
3100 Kingston Pike
Knoxville, TN.

Feb. 15 - March 24 - DULIN 17th NATIONAL WORKS ON PAPER – Almost 400 entries from all across the country were entered in this competition/exhibition, with 58 chosen for exhibition and 12 receiving purchase awards totalling $3,000.

March 30 - April 28 - "STROKES OF GENIUS" - A masterpiece art collection from 5 prestigious museums will be on loan to the Dulin for this show scheduled in honor of the Dogwood Art Festival's 25th anniversary. Included will be a Picasso, a Rodin, a Degas and a Daubigny.

Jobs for people with savor.

"You are the salt of the earth." – Mt. 5:13

How do you keep your savor? By making yourself useful to the Lord! One great way to serve Him is with a job in a Christian organization.

Is God calling you to use your skills for Him full-time? Contact Intercristo for leads on selected openings in over 2,000 Christian ministries, missions, schools, camps, and local churches. Thousands of career and short-term positions are available now, coast-to-coast and around the world.

CALL TOLL-FREE: (800) 426-1342.
(AK, HI, WA, CANADA: (206) 546-7330).

OR RETURN THE COUPON BELOW.

Intercristo
The Christian Career Specialists
P.O. Box 33487
Seattle, WA 98133

a division of CRISTA

Please send me information on "jobs for people with savor."

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State ___ Zip ___

I saw this ad in (Publication) _____

College Press Service Litzler

"I SHOULD JUST RUB THIS PIZZA ALL OVER MY FACE... 'CAUSE THAT'S WHERE IT'S GONNA END UP ANYWAY."

EVERYONE CAME TO LAST SATURDAY NIGHT'S DANCE LOOKING FOR A LITTLE PEACE

...RUD TO STAND WITH YOU IN THE LONG MARCH TO PROTECT LIFE!"

Did You Ever Notice How In The Business Office...

...the person you need is ays "out to lunch?"

...visitors are given a higher priority than students?

...the check is processed, not signed by the authorized person, who is in office; therefore, you a week for the check?

...the office workers are SKILLED in writing receipts?

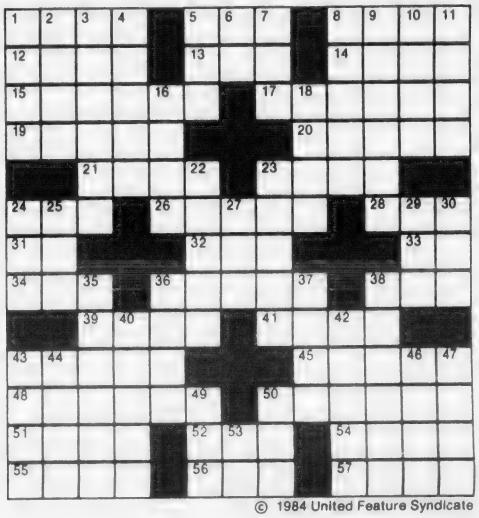
...if they owe you money, y pay it when they feel it?

Join us next time in the Library . . .

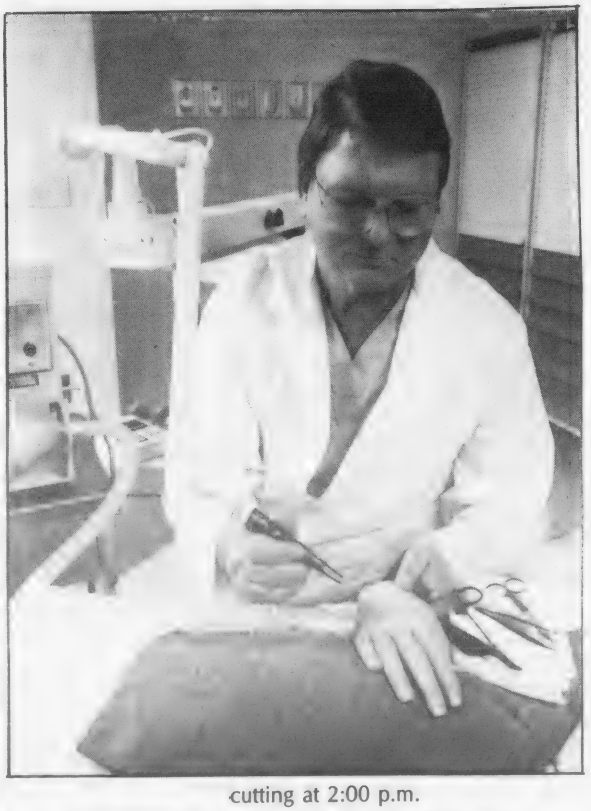
...if you owe them mon- it's the inevitable "30 s?"

CROSS WORD PUZZLE



FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

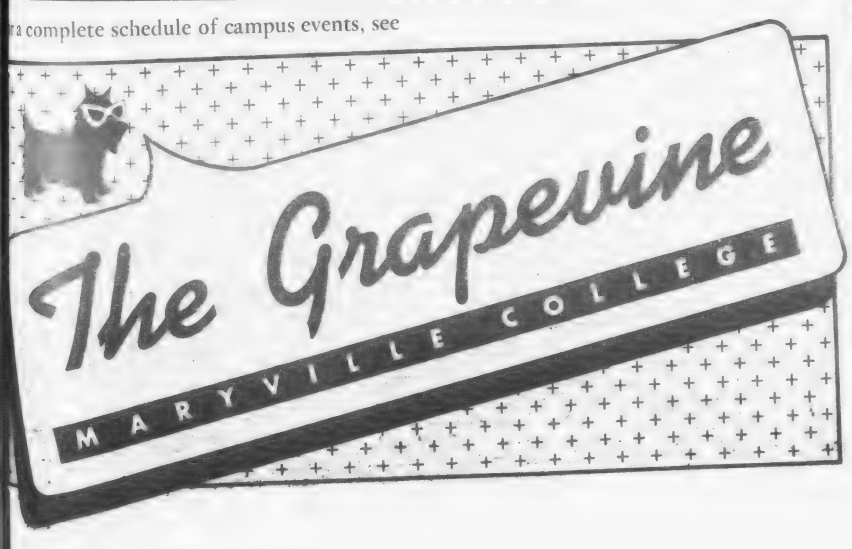
ACROSS



1 Headgear: pl.
5 Time gone by
8 Oriental nurse
12 Ox of Celebes
13 Food fish
14 Repulsive
15 Retreat
17 Rubber on pencil
19 Vapid
20 Chemical compound
21 Former Russian ruler
23 Surfeit
24 Couple
26 Part of flower
28 Tier
31 Third person
32 Female: colloq.
33 Pronoun
34 Sched. abbr.
36 Tag
38 Ancient
39 Walk unsteadily
41 Scorch
43 Look fixedly
45 Warn
48 Kettledrums
50 Heavy hobnailed shoe
51 Is ill
52 Bother
54 Sharpen
55 Merriment
56 Trifle
57 Emmets

DOWN

1 Vehicles
2 Dillseed
3 Vegetable
4 Goes by water
5 High card
6 Proceed
7 Poem
8 Nautical: cease!
9 Title of respect
10 Toward shelter
11 German title
16 Harvest
18 Actual
22 Royal
23 Transactions
24 Article
25 Damp
27 Flap
29 Night bird
30 Marry
35 Fit for plowing
36 Condescending look
37 Shakespearian king
38 "The Beaver State"
40 Worn away
42 Hawaiian greeting
43 Antlered animal
44 Caudal appendage
46 Stunted person
47 Golf mounds
49 Posed for portrait
50 Lad
53 Fulfill



© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

cutting at 2:00 p.m.
Demonstrations of lasers throughout afternoon

...a complete schedule of campus events, see

The Back Page

SENIORS

SENIORS! Your input is needed for your CIV on May 9. Photos may be sent to box 2174 (with your name and box number on back) for the slide show. Got any. ideas? Talk at Ciretta, Gloria, Donald, Mack, Brenda, Maria Jo, or Maelea. We're counting on YOU!

Applications are due today for editorships of next year's publications. Contact the Office of Student Affairs.

Publications Workshop Saturday, March 16.

MICKEY MOUSE

LAKE BUENA VISTA, F – Forget Scrooge McDuc Mickey Mouse has the ri answer for vacationing c lege students – a price bre for Spring Break on W Disney World admissio March 1-31, college st dents receive a $3 discou on admissions to the Ma Kingdom and Epcot Cent by presenting their stude ID's, asking for the Disn Break '85 ticket and plun ing down $15. Regular pr is $18. Each ticket is go for admission to one of t parks but not both.

The admission ticket i cludes unlimited use of the attractions in the them park attended: the likes t thrill rides such as Spa Mountain and Big Thund Mountain in the Mag Kingdom, the 3-D "Mag Journeys" film and Ame can Adventure show Epcot Center.

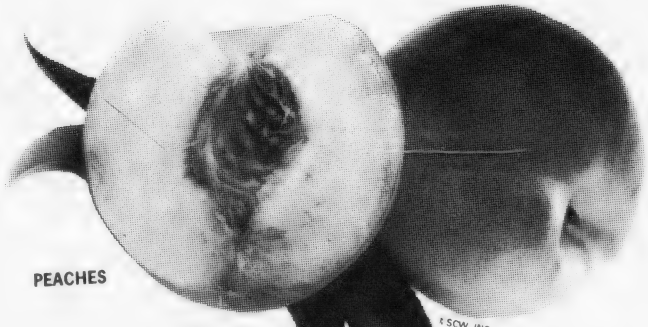
For additional inform tion, call: (305) 824-432 Or write: Guest Inform tion, P.O. Box 40, La Buena, FL 32830.

A male theater student exposed 25 Oregon State U. classmembers to chicken pox during class lesson on stage kissing. The contageous kisser is home recovering.

American students ignore illness and resist help until their symptoms are life-threatening, says a study comparing American and Third World students.

TAKE A DIVE

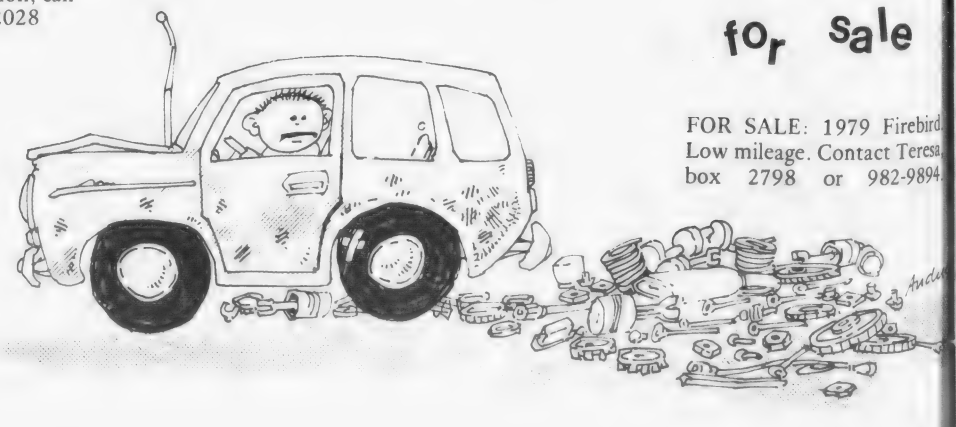
DESTIN, FL – If you're the kind of person who always wanted to fly, climb mountains, go hang gliding, or explore the vast ocean depths, then scuba diving is for you! And Wet Sports, Inc., in Destin, Florida, can make it happen this year during Spring Break.



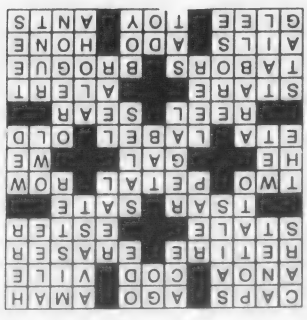
Wet Sports, Inc. offers boat trips and NASDS professional instruction. Half day, full day, and night divers available. They also handle air, rentals, and retail sales of all the latest equipment required for diving.

For more information, call collect, (904) 837-2028

OINK!
Love
B&L



Tell it to the ECHO box 2820



FOR SALE: 12 string guita Yamaha, good shape; price negotiable. See Miss Sack P.E. Bldg. or call ext. 28

for sale

FOR SALE: 1979 Firebird Low mileage. Contact Teresa box 2798 or 982-9894

Puzzle Answer

Highland ECHO

Volume 70, Number 11 MARYVILLE COLLEGE April 12, 1985

Good News for Liberal Arts Majors

Ames IA (CPS) -- When Iowa State University senior Jeannette Fielder recently walked into a job interview with some conservative bankers, she figured she didn't have a chance. She was, after all, an English major.

"I said 'Do you realize that I haven't had any finance classes?' And they said 'No problem. We'll train you,' " Fielder recalls. "They all said they wished they had been a liberal arts student."

"They felt their perspective was so narrow. I was tickled."

Fielder, who will go to work for the bank after graduation this spring, was, in fact, interviewed by about 10 corporations.

Though her case may not be typical, college placement officials across the country report that the number of firms looking to hire liberal arts grads is up substantially over last year.

"Even major corporations are now giving an increasingly sincere look at liberal arts graduates," reports Victor Lindquist, who directs Northwestern University's career placement center and is the author of an annual report tracking job offers nationwide.

Lindquist says the increasing interest in liberal arts graduates is part of a trend that began in about 1980.

Liberal arts grads "tend to have marketable communication skills, both written and oral, analytical tools, and tend to be more trainable," he explains.

Small businesses are also hiring more this year, and are more receptive to liberal arts grads than to grads with technical or specialized degrees, who may demand higher salaries.

"It's hard for a liberal arts graduate to convince a major corporation that he or she has valuable skills," Judith Kayser of the College Placement Council says.

"But with a mom and pop operation, it's easier to get the time to sell yourself."

If the trend in favor of liberal arts grads is reaching new highs, it could mean the end of what some administrators have dubbed the "taxi-driver syndrome:" the spectre of bright, overqualified humanities graduates who drive taxis while waiting for 'meaningful' jobs that never materialize.

But others say the increase in job offers for liberal arts graduates is no larger than for graduates in other disciplines.

"I'd like to believe that employers have come around to the advantages of liberal arts graduates," says Gary McGrath, the career development director for liberal arts majors at the University of Minnesota. "But that's not the case."

McGrath says an improved economy is the reason more employers are interested in liberal arts grads.

"When the economy improves, employers are willing to look at a more diverse group of applicants," he says.

The College Placement Council's annual survey of major corporations indicates business executives plan to hire eight percent more grads this year than last.

Other surveys, however, suggest that liberal arts majors will not benefit from that increase.

In fact, both Lindquist's survey and a similar study by Michigan State University placement director Jack Shingleton, show the number of job offers to liberal arts grads will decline slightly this year.

The surveys, however, focus on large firms' recruitment plans and may not reflect interest by small firms in liberal arts majors.

Stanford liberal arts grads began doing better in the job market in 1980, despite surveys showing a general pall in student job prospects at the time.

One hundred sixteen firms interviewed liberal arts majors that year, compared to only 11 four years earlier.

Similar increases were reported at other schools.

The proliferation of practical courses in liberal arts curricula, and an increasing realization that the technical skills required in business can be taught on the job helped liberal arts grads, career placement officials say.

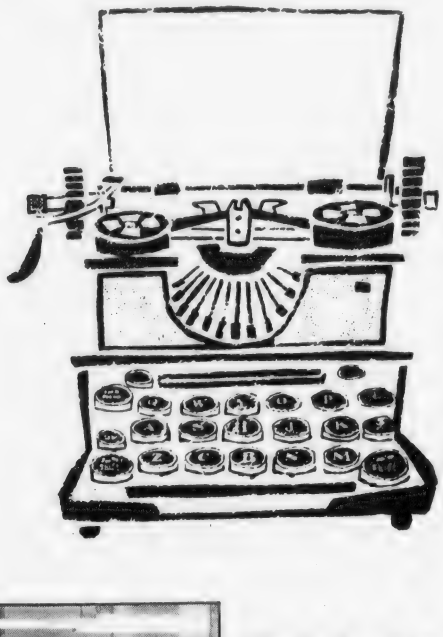
However, many liberal arts majors are still said to suffer in the job market because of a fixation on one subject.

"To deny the existence of business courses and become ostrich-like is to be myopic to the point of being insufferable," Lindquist warns.

"The liberal arts graduates should have experience with almost any activity."

Dr. Beck Named President

Charlotte H. Beck, Maryville College professor of English, was elected president of the Tennessee Philological Association at its eightieth annual meeting held recently at the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga.



Dr. Beck will preside at the group's 81st session, scheduled to meet in Nashville at Tennessee State University next year.

The Tennessee Philological Association consists of professors of English and foreign languages and is dedicated to the advancement of scholarship and teaching in these fields.

Dr. Beck also recently published an article entitled "Randall Jarrell and Robert Penn Warren: Fugitive Fugitives" in the fall issue of the "Southern Literary Journal," published at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The MC English faculty member is the author of the book, "Worlds and Lives: The Poetry of Randall Jarrell," published in 1983.

She and her husband, Dr. Raymond W. Beck, a University of Tennessee-Knoxville faculty member, reside in Knoxville. They have two sons.

Letters

Dear Editor,

Merely because students do not find the MC publications so very important, it does not mean everyone is chronically apathetic. Why is it that people who think they are so involved in so many important things feel it is their responsibility to expostulate on the slothfulness of the rest of the peons? Frankly, I am sick of hearing about the apathy of college students in the 1980's, especially now for goodness sakes. If you were aware of campus activities, you would know the results of the Hunger Awareness Week. Eighty students (approx. ¼ of the people on the food plan) gave up their evening meals for a week to fight world hunger. Another twenty or so students sponsored people who were fasting. Over $600 was raised and about 100 letters were written to Congressmen lobbying in favor of specific hunger legislation. Is this apathy? While you were so enraged about student apathy toward MC publications, you might have opened your eyes to see approximately 100 students and an undetermined number of faculty and staff involved in fighting world hunger. The "revived" Echo did not even bother to report on this aspect of student involvement. Maybe you should spend your time writing about the challenges and rewards of being an editor (something besides experience to pad a resume) rather than trying to shame students with false accusations.

Ed Welch
Involved Students Defense League (ISDL)

Did You Ever Notice How In The Library...

The most crucial book for your research is always stolen?

Student workers are only trusted enough to answer such questions as "where's the bathroom"; If you want to know where to find Reader's Guide, you have to ask a more qualified librarian (QL)?

It's the noisiest place on campus to study (creeky floors and clangy pipes)?

The indexes have been moved from their logical place in close proximity to the periodicals to the opposite end of the building?

The particular librarian you need is never there?

It's impossible to sleep in the fiction room because people keep interupting you to study in there?

Paying students must wait in line for the Xerox while Anderson Staff uses it (theirs is ALWAYS broken)?

You can't borrow a pencil from the circulation desk without permission of a QL?

Periodicals are available for check-out after your bedtime only?

Your personal belongings are subject to invasion upon leaving the library?

Join us Next time in Fayerweather...

"Knowledge is of two kinds. We know a subject ourselves, or we know where we can find information upon it."

Boswell, Life of Johnson (1775)

You can find a wealth of information from the Federal Government at Depository Libraries. Contact your local library.

The Federal Depository Library Program

Comments? Letters? Personals? Suggestions? Deadline for the next ECHO is Sunday, April 26, 6p.m. Submit to the HIGHLAND ECHO, box 2820, or Fayerweather 202 (after post office hours).

APRIL

Campus Paperback Bestsellers

1. In Search of Excellence, by T. J. Peters & R. H. Waterman Jr. (Warner, $8.95.) A look at the secrets of successful business.
2. The Far Side Gallery, by Gary Larson. (Andrews, McMeel & Parker, $8.95.) And still more cartoons from the "Far Side".
3. The One Minute Manager, by K. Blanchard & S. Johnson. (Berkley, $6.95.) How to increase your productivity.
4. In Search of the Far Side, by Gary Larson. (Andrews, McMeel & Parker, $4.95.) More cartoons from the "Far Side".
5. Dune, by Frank Herbert. (Berkley, $3.95.) First book of the Dune series. Currently a motion picture.
6. Megatrends, by John Naisbitt. (Warner, $3.95.) Forecasting America's future.
7. The Road Less Traveled, by M. Scott Peck. (Touchstone, $8.95.) Psychological and spiritual inspiration by a psychiatrist.
8. Pet Sematary, by Stephen King. (NAL/Signet, $4.50.) Another tale from the prolific Mr. King.
9. Living, Loving and Learning, by Leo Buscaglia. (Fawcett, $5.95.) Thoughts from the acclaimed California professor.
10. Bloom County-Loose Tales, by Berke Breathed. (Little, Brown, $5.95.) Highlights from the author's cartoon strip.

New & Recommended

The Rescue of Miss Yaskell, by Russell Baker. (NAL/Signet, $3.95.) Russell Baker is back and looks into things that keep all our lives from being ordinary.

A Sinless Season, by Damon Galgut. (Penguin, $4.95.) An extraordinary novel of troubled adolescence as powerful and disturbing as Lord of the Flies.

Inside Management Training, by M. L. Salzman with D.A. Sullivan. (NAL/Plume, $8.95.) Essential information on the training programs of over 100 major corporations in over a dozen career areas.

ASSOCIATION OF AMERICAN PUBLISHERS/NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COLLEGE STORES

YOU CAN SAVE YOUR COUNTRY...

...AND WIN A $10,000 SCHOLARSHIP!

Federal deficit spending endangers your future. Today's low inflation and falling interest rates are only temporary. The effects of our growing deficit have been masked, not resolved.

Starting a career is tough enough without having to struggle with a wounded economy. It's important that our decision makers know how you feel about the deficit — to get them to act now. Enter the "You Can Save Your Country" National Essay Contest and we'll make sure that the President and Congress get a copy of your essay. PLUS, you can win a $10,000 scholarship, or one of three $2,500 scholarships. But hurry! Entries must be received by April 29, 1985.

Contact your Student Government Office for contest details, or write.

the INSTITUTE of financial education
111 EAST WACKER DRIVE
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60601

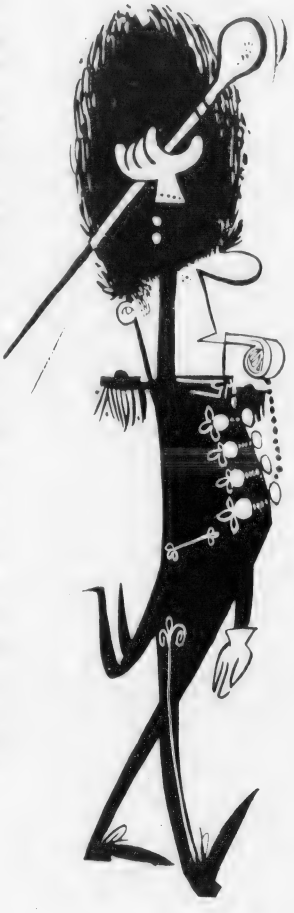
Notes About Notes

by Al Hipkins

Preparing a recital is like nothing anyone who hasn't done can appreciate. Any musician can prepare a single piece or two for performance, but to prepare major works is a whole different ballgame. I am currently preparing a full Mozart sonata and a major Schumann work. It would be easy if I could work on just one section or piece at a time, but then it wouldn't all be together at one time. Let me start with the Mozart.

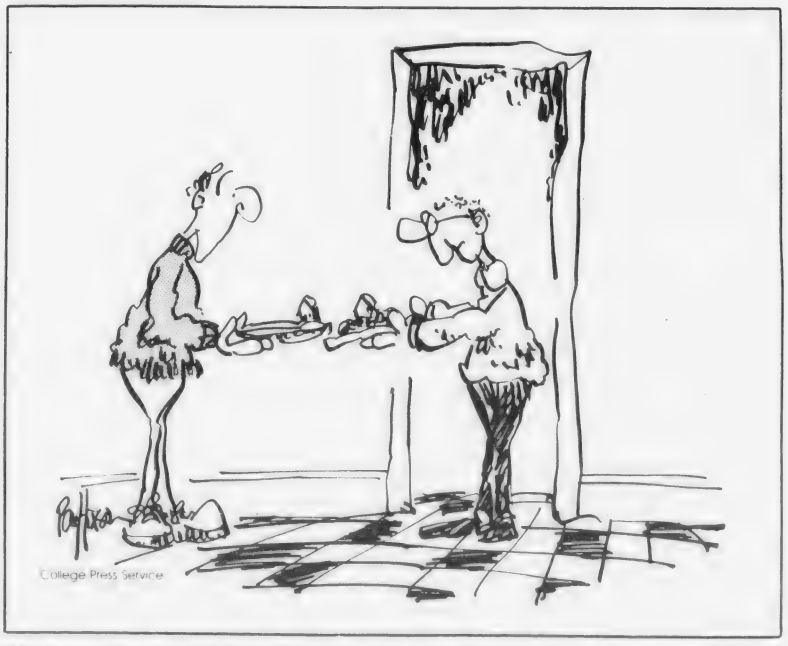
A Mozart piano sonata contains three movements. The one I am working on has as its first movement a classic Sonata Allegro form. Two major contrasting themes and a development section followed by a repeat of the two themes. I have done several sonatas but they have all been Beethoven sonatas which are much different from Mozart sonatas. Beethoven is much more virtuostic and showy whereas Mozart is considerably more delicate. But this is the least of my problems.

The second movement is a through-composed theme and variations. This simply means that the seperation between themes is not as clear as a normal theme and variations. It is also easier to deal with. That is why the third movement is so much trouble.



The third movement is a theme and variations in true Mozart form. The theme is simple and straight forward, and the variations are predictable but not easy. The first variation is faster than the theme because it is in triple time (one third faster) with the triples in the right hand. Then Mozart switches places and the left hand has the triplet theme.

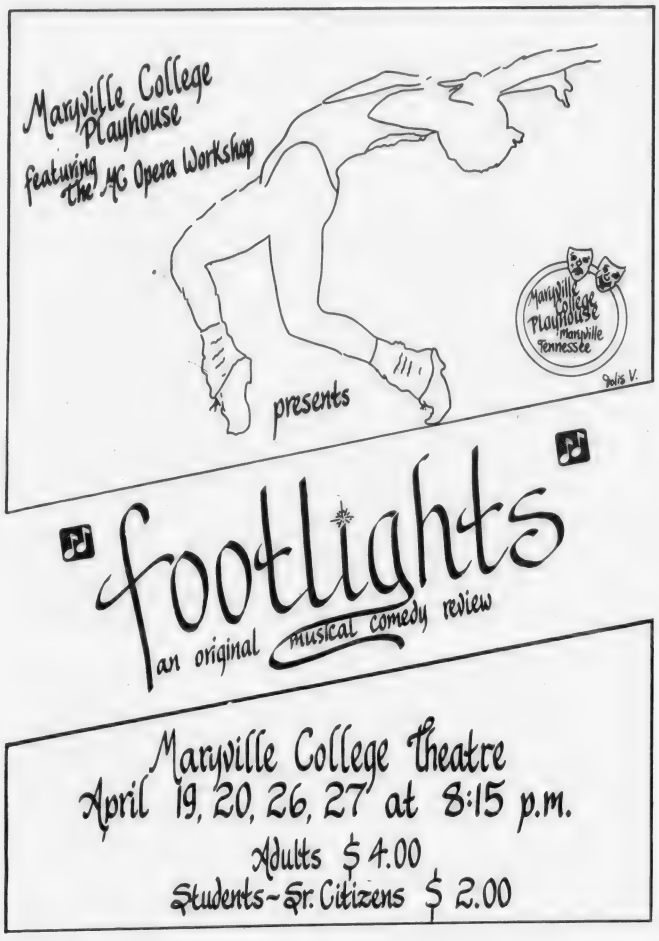
The next two variations are the same way but are in double-time (twice as fast as the theme). Mozart also has octave, broken octave and alternate key variations. Put all of this together and it feels much the way a computer must feel when it gets too much data!



But that is only half the recital! The Schumann "Papillons" is a collection of twelve small pieces that portray various personalities at a costume ball. Each of the pieces portrays the personality of the costume, the person behind the mask and the combination of the two. Some of these works, like the ninth one, contain two personalities and their interactions. I have found 40 different personalities thus far and it seems like I keep finding more.

Technical difficulty is not the problem in the Schumann, but making a difference between each of these personalities is tough.

Putting all of this together and timing it so that it all comes together at the same time--especially when that time is fixed seems to be beyond reason. But next year I have to do twice as much music! Wish me luck!



"Hold your tray real still and I bet we can get your lunch to jump back over."

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00 CAT'S EYE	12:30, 2:45, 5:00, 7:15, 9:30 LADYHAWKE
1:00, 3:00, 5:00 CARE BEARS MOVIE 7:00, 9:00 SCHOOL SPIRIT	12:30, 2:45, 5:00, 7:15, 9:30 MASK

Footlights

The Maryville College Playhouse will present an original musical review entitled Footlights at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 19,20, 26 and 27, in the MC Theater.

The review, part of the Blount County Chamber of Commerce's Dogwood Arts Festival, will combine popular musical numbers, both sung and danced, with classic "blackout skits" from the pens of Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman.

Music for the production ranges from light opera to modern Broadway musical comedy. Featured selections will include opera scenes from Mozart's "The Abduction from the Seraglio," Bizet's "Carmen" and Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" as well as medleys from Rogers and Hammerstein, the Gershwins, Cole Porter and Stephen Sondheim.

Don Thomas, instructor in speech and theater and Playhouse director, will direct the 40-member cast, consisting primarily of MC students. Joining them is the MC Opera Workshop directed by Robert Ergenbright, music faculty member and choral director at the College.

Others assisting with Footlights include MC Professor Emeritus Harry Harter, choral director; MC alumni Tillman and Sharon Crane, set and lighting design; Knoxville Pianist Marcus Shirley, sound; and Appalachian Ballet Company featured dancer Amy Moore Morton, choreographer.

MC assistant director of development Tom Hudson and Don Thomas wrote and compiled Footlights.

For more information or to reserve tickets for Footlights, call the MC Playhouse at 982-6412 or 546-6912, ext. 308. Tickets will also be sold at the door.

Dismas House Opens Doors

by Beckie Haynes

Once upon a time there was a man by the name of Jack Hickey, a Catholic priest concerned with the prison system and the ministries within Tennessee. He realized that a lot of the reason for the return of offenders to the prisons was their lack of ability to establish and work within a community. As a result, they dealt with their frustrations by commiting offenses that once again found them trapped within the prison system-a vicious cycle. Well ole Father Hickey decided that a new and different way to approach this problem was to create a halfway house (or "transition house" as we like to call it) for ex-offenders that was different in its approach to reconciling these people to society. He established the Dismas House theory: its uniqueness being more than a bunch of ex-inmates tossed into the pot together; there is that extra seasoning, the "salt of the earth"...the student!!! And that's where the Blount County Dismas House needs you, Maryville College! We at Dismas miss YOU!! Without you the House doesn't really work. As one of the residents put it, "There needs to be a meeting of the minds," an integration of the two worlds.

Dismas is about LIFE, and although it's hard to believe as you peer out from your stack of books and overdue papers, meetings, and yes, those dreaded upcoming exams, LIFE is about PEOPLE! It doesn't matter what your major is or where you're thinking about movin' on to once you are out into the "real world," you will always be with people. And although we who are from that level of social classification known as "the Middle Class" don't realize it, there is a whole other world (in fact a vast majority) of people who have never known the good times we've had and taken advantage of all our lives. Yet, even though I've come from that middle class existence and carry the label of "college kid" I found that I knew nothing about the community and have realized that people-all people- are important. They need you and you need them.

I will have to admit that Dismas is not for everyone or everyone for Dismas. It takes those who are willing to be "real." To paraphrase the Skin Horse in the Velveteen Rabbit, "Sometimes it is not so easy being real...it may mean losing all your hair, your joints growing loose, and your eyes falling out." It isn't easy, but these folks are real! In my month-and-a-half at Dismas they have helped me learn more than my four years at MC combined...that's not to say that I wouldn't trade my background or education for the world; however, I wish that I had combined my "book learning" with the real thing. It does take giving, taking, hurting, communicating, forgiving, and being forgiven, laughing and helping others realize laughter; essentially it takes LOVE!! Most of these folks don't know what it's like to be really loved...and it doesn't take so very much to show them.

Besides being one of the best learning experiences you could ever ask for in dealing with people, there are those practicalities of lower cost, GREAT, FABULOUS, and I do mean WONDERFUL evening meals, a chance to escape from the "Isle of MC" and an opportunity to meet and get to know the wealth of community members who live, breathe and even work right here in Murvil! We've got the space, the place, the need and the people...so what are you waiting for?! We're even (and especially) open for those summertime frolicking folks, and are preparing for next year's new beginnings. For more information give us a call at 984-8751, stop by at 212 Cates Street (behind McAmmom-Ammons Funeral Home) or leave messages in MC Box 2046 for Tommy Brown or Box 2362 for Beckie Haynes.

HIGHLAND ECHO, Friday, April 12, 1985 - 5

It's As Clear As... Mud

by Amy Waggoner

Here I sit, once again enjoying another beautiful Spring day at Maryville College. From my 3rd floor Lloyd penthouse I can see the sunshine and shadows making patterns on the mountains. They seem to be so close, almost in our back yard. I can see an almost cloudless blue sky, and the shadow of a big pine tree gently swaying in the breeze. I can see the college woods, a cool haven for escapes from campus life. I can see the contrasting hues of big yellow bulldozers against the deep red mud of half-finished intramural field....

Beautiful Spring days like this one sure bring back memories: of other voices; other rooms; of faces that have come and gone, lost to graduation or the semester system; of lying on Lloyd "beach" trying for that all-important Florida-in-Tennessee look.

So many things have changed during my three years here that little things that bring continuity to life really mean a lot to me. Mud, for instance.

Three years ago we were blessed with the trenches. Remember those? Grass was quite a rare commodity in those days. Prices for prime spots on any patch of greenery rivaled those for 50-yard-line seats for Super Bowl XIX. Frisbee took on a whole new meaning then, as acrobatics became a necessary skill when trying to avoid the ditches.

Trench-jumping even became the new pastime: the object was to see how many times one could jump across the trench and back between Pearsons and Thaw. Nick Venditti held the all-time record with 8,749.

Some of our more talented students even went so far as to immortalize the mud with music. Remember? "There's a trench across the campus, it's growing every day . . . ."

I rejoiced the day that the last trench was filled in. No more mud! And the next morning I once again awoke to the sound of jackhammers and bulldozers. Crews began work on the Connector, cutting across the corner of campus. Thanks, Gov. Lamar!

No longer could upwardly immobile students satisfy midnight munchies with a short trip to the Jolly Giant. No longer could they spend a leisurely afternoon swimming in the lake after a flood. No longer could they frolic in the grass or hit golf balls for fear of sinking in a giant glob of . . . you guessed it . . . mud.

Now the Connector is finished, though, and the trenches have ceased to exist. Thinking that we would finally have a normal looking campus, I cheerfully moved all my worldly possessions into my penthouse to begin another year. With expectations of a beautiful sunrise view of the mountains, I threw open the curtains the next morning and saw . . .mud.

With a sigh and a shrug, I resigned myself to my fate. I thought with guarded optimism, "Well, they have nothing else to work on. Maybe the fields will be finished in a month or two." Now I look on that day in wonderment. How could someone who had spent two full years at Maryville College be guilty of such naivete?

And so, seven months later, I face the fact that I may never see a mudless day here. I've resigned myself to my mud, and even become rather philosophical about the whole idea. After all, the alma mater's not too difficult to modify in view of the situation:

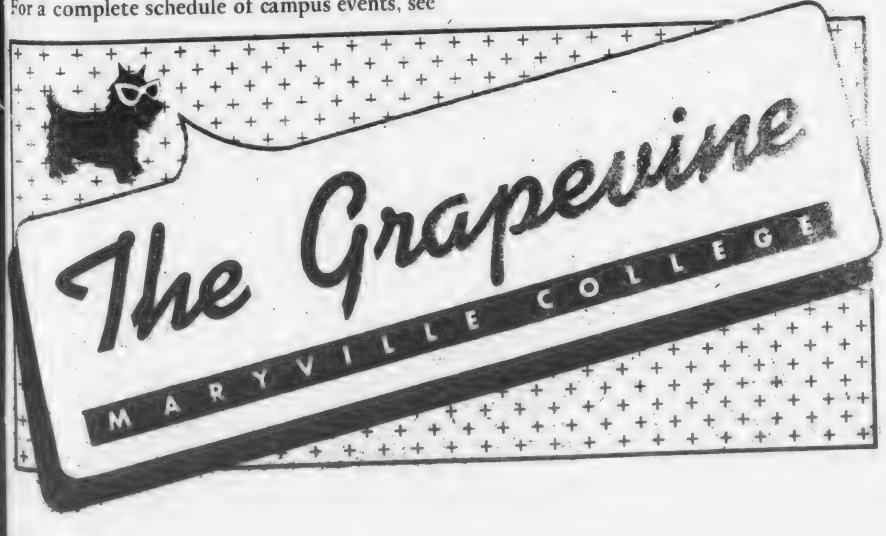
Where Chilowee's lofty mountains
Pierce the southern blue
Proudly stand those yellow'dozers
Noble, grand, and true.

Mud and trenches, here forever
That no man can fill
Hail to thee, our alma mater,
Hail to old Mudville!

News About Booze

LEGAL DRINKING AGE-Legislation that would eliminate loopholes in the 21 year-old drinking age law was approved by the full Senate.

The bill would only exempt those people in the military with proper identification in August, 1986, the date when those who were grandfathered expires. The legislation removes an exemption in the present law allowing children to consume alcoholic beverages when accompanied by a parent.



DUI LAWS--The Senate Transportation Committee voted this week to allow second-time Driving Under the Influence (DUI) offenders to leave jail long enough to go to work each day during their mandatory sentences.

The bill would give the judge the discretion to allow the offender to participate in a local work-release program in order to keep his job and take care of his family. The offender would report back to the jail after his work is done and would spend his nights locked up. The judge would have the authority to suspend this privilege if the offender abuses it or could follow the current law mandating 45 consecutive days for severe DUI cases.

Another bill regarding the DUI law was also passed by the Senate Transportation Committee. This legislation would allow persons with restricted DUI licenses to drive to and from work, church, or to alcohol and drug abuse counseling.

The bill would only apply to first-time DUI offenders and the counseling sessions would have to be a regularly scheduled meetings with either a psychiatrist or a group like Alcoholics Anonymous. The bill passed by a vote of 5-2-0, with those opposing the bill voicing concern that this legislation would further erode Tennessee's tough DUI law.

For a complete schedule of campus events, see

Fulbright Grants For Study Abroad

The United States Information Agency (USIA) and Institute of International Education (IIE) today announced that the official opening of the 1986-87 competition for grants for graduate study or research abroad in academic fields and for professional training in the creative and performing arts is scheduled for May 1, 1985. It is expected that approximately 700 awards to over 70 countries will be available for the 1986-87 academic year.

The purpose of these grants is to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries through the exchange of persons, knowledge and skills. They are provided under the terms of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961 (Fulbright-Hays Act) and by foreign governments, universities, corporations and private donors.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens at the time of application, who will generally hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent before the beginning date of the grant and, in most cases, will be proficient in the language of the host country. Except for certain specific awards, candidates may not hold the Ph.D. at the time of application. Candidates for 1986-87 are ineligible for a grant to a country if they have been doing graduate work or conducting research in that country for six months or more during the academic year 1985-86.

Creative and performing artists are not required to have a bachelor's degree, but they must have four years of professional study or equivalent experience. Candidates in medicine must have an M.D. or equivalent degree (e.g., D.D.S., O.D.) at the time of application.

Application forms and further information for students currently enrolled in Maryville College may be obtained from the Fulbright Program Adviser, Dr. Perkins who is located in Anderson Hall.

Sports

JOCK TALK

by Rick Carver

As I recently sat in the confines of the HPER building during the first two days of Spring Break, I thought about a problem concerning MC athletics which has been overlooked for far too long. Does MC's affiliation with the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC) make any sense? Before answering, consider this: The ODAC consists of Emory & Henry College, Hampden-Sydney, Randolph-Macon, Eastern Mennonite, Bridgewater, Lynchburg, Washington & Lee, Roanoke (all schools located in Virginia), and Maryville College. Approximate travel times to get to these locations range from 2½ hours to 10 hours. One doesn't have to be an economics major to see that such travel time is inefficient and costly. Not only in terms of financial value, though, are road trips within the ODAC costly. As many of the male athletes at MC know, classes are missed to undergo the long ordeals of travelling to ODAC schools. Therefore, it is also not academically reasonable to say that going to such metropolis' as Farmville, Ashland, and Lexington, VA make good sense.

Another problem concerning the location of MC in relation to the rest of the ODAC is admissions. Considering the change recently to emphasize more enrollment from a 250 mile radius from MC, do MC recruiters really believe they can interest quality area athletes in MC by telling them they will be performing most of their athletic events in places most high school seniors have never heard of? My guess is no, and from the attrition rate of athletes that leave MC, and the statistics of the current enrollment, the guess is not too far off base.

Aside from the location problems with the ODAC, another problem is that MC athletes are hardly an effective competitor to their opponents. Since MC's entrance into the ODAC in '79 only one regular season championship has been allowed to rest in the Scots trophy case. That lone title came only recently when the basketball team captured the ODAC Laurels. Is one championship in 15 plus seasons spanning football, basketball, and baseball over the past 6 years competitive?

On the plus side, academic reputation and comparative enrollment stand to be reasons for being in the ODAC. The prestige and reputation of schools like Washington & Lee helps make MC's affiliation with the ODAC look good. Likewise, MC's size fits well with the other schools in the ODAC. But, do size and reputation outweigh the high cost of travel, missed classes, and the loss of current and potential students?

What then, is the solution to this problem? Certainly it is to get out of the ODAC. But where would MC go? NAIA? Another conference? Division II? Independent? These are all questions which need to be answered.

One possible solution would be to enter the guys conference that is most closely related to the conference that our Lady Scots are in. While the name of that conference escapes me, the schools represented include Sewanee, Centre, Rhodes, Berea, Transylvania, Earlham, Rose Hulman Institute of Technology, and a few others. The academic reputation of these schools is of equal standing to that of ODAC schools. The enrollment is slightly larger in these schools, but still the difference is not much greater (200-500 students). As for location, most of the schools are within 4 hours travel time. Exceptions to that are Rhodes, Rose Hulman, and Earlham, which are located in Memphis and Indiana, respectively. Smart scheduling could make it possible to make only one road trip that lasts more than seven hours.

Another possible solution would be to move up to Division II. This would enable scholarships to be given, and better athletes to be enrolled. However, MC's size would be a problem. The academic reputation of some Division II schools might also hurt MC's reputation. The source of scholarship funds would also have to be worked out.

Going back to an independent status would eliminate all of the problems that seem to be associated with any conference. However, going independent would be a step backwards and present a problem of a steady schedule of teams to play.

A long-run alternative to the ODAC and previously mentioned conferences is the NAIA. There are several NAIA schools in the area, and most have comparable though slightly larger enrollments than MC. Scholarships would also be a present thought. Academic reputations of teams like Carson-Newman and King College also make the NAIA look attractive.

What then is the answer to finding an appropriate conference for MC? I don't know the answers, and apparently neither does anybody who believes the ODAC is right for the Fighting Scots. There will be problems with any conference, but the general opinion of MC athletics is that the ODAC has more problems. Let this mark the first of several challenges to the upper brass of MC to help solve a problem which will only get worse in the future. I can't fight this conference any more.

"Hold that scalpel firmly, look that frog straight in the belly and remember . . . no guts, no glory. Go get 'em Morton."

ERRORS COSTLY TO SCOTS

After a respectable 2-2 start, the 1985 Scots baseball team has fallen to a 7-12 record. While some spots have been bright, other areas have proven to be costly. One of the bright spots thus far has been the offensive firepower, as the Scots are averaging 6 runs a game. On the negative side, however, the Scots are averaging 3 errors a contest, a statistic which has proven to be the achilles heel of the 1985 team. Here's a recap of the games from the last report.

On March 11, Cumberland College of Tennessee travelled to meet the Scots and left MC with an east 18-1 win. The Scots offensive was lifeless this day, as Rick Carver and Jason Harbison managed to be the only Scots to get base hits.

On March 13, the Scots bounced back from embarrassment to take a doubleheader from ODAC foe Emory & Henry. The first game saw MC win 7-3, with Jim Gregory supplying the winning pitching and Mike Human (3 hits), Tracy Pate (homerun), and Ronnie Ramsey (2 doubles) providing the scoring punch. In the second game, MC 'Teased' the Wasps, due to a no-hit pitching performance by Brian Tease. Tease also contributed with his bat, by smashing a grand slam home run. Tracy Pate also deposited a home run behind the left field fence, and Rick Carver had 2 hits and 3 RBIs to lead the Scots to a 14-0 win.

On March 16, ODAC rival Hampden-Sydney came to town to leave the Scots with a 2-2 conference record. The Tigers won the first game 6-5, but feisty efforts by Tony Murr (home run) and Mike Human (2 hits) kept the game close. The second game was easier for HSC, as they got to losing pitcher Tracy Pate and won 9-5. Rick Carver had 3 hits and 2 RBIs in the losing effort.

Keeping pace with the pattern of fighting back, the Scots rallied to defeat heavily favored Lincoln Memorial University on March 19. Ricky Miller kept the Railsplitters in check all afternoon, to pick up a 6-3 victory. Brian Tease and Tony Murr led the offensive surge.

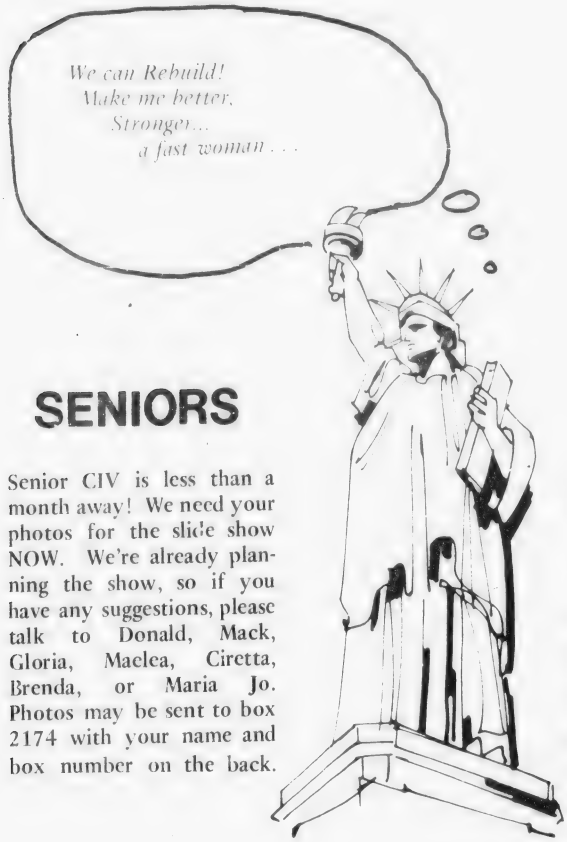
On March25, MC traveled to Harrisonburg, VA, to face the Bridgewater Eagles. The MC defense lacked consistency, and Bridgewater took the first game 10-3. The Eagles took advantage of the Scot defensive miscues in the second game and won 7-4. Offensive leaders in the contests were Steve Saylor and Tony Murr, who had 4 hits and a home run on the day.

Defense continued to haunt the Scots on March 26, as Eastern Mennonite was the recipient of costly errors by MC fielders. In the first game, Steve Saylor allowed only one earned-run, but took the 7-6 loss. Brian Tease had a home run and Steve Saylor had 2 triples to lead the overshadowed MC offense. In the second game, MC managed to get 8 runs, but the defense gave up 12 to cause another defeat. Ronnie Ramsey had 2 hits and Tony Murr chipped in a home run in the powerful but futile MC offense.

After a short recess for Spring Break, the Scots were back in action against Tennessee Temple on April 12. Temple took the first game 5-4, but the Scots rallied for an 11-1 victory in the nightcap behind Steve Robbins' winning pitching. Ronnie Ramsey had 4 hits and 2 walks to pace the Scots. Brian Tease also added some crucial hits to the Scots cause, and Steve Robbins had 3 RBIs.

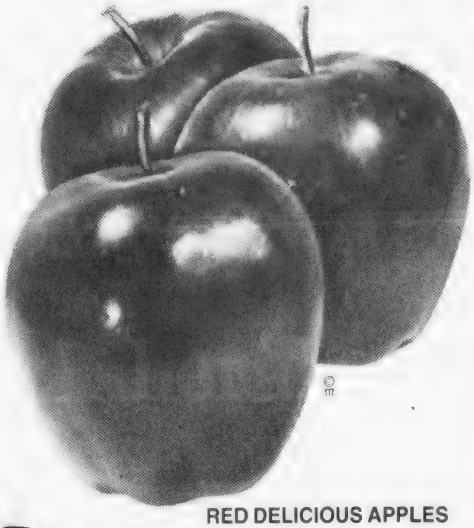
On April 4, the Scots traveled to face LMU once again. Even though MC pounded out 15 hits and 10 runs, the ever present mass of errors dealt the Scots a 21-10 loss. Steve Robbins and Steve Saylor homered for MC, and Ronnie Ramsey added 3 hits in the slugfest.

The Scot defense finally picked up on April 6th, when the Scots split a doubleheader with Tusculum College. Brian Tease got the win and the game winning RBI in the first game, as the Scots rallied in the bottom of the 6th behind an Eric Etchison walk, a Rick Carver sacrifice bunt, and a clutch hit from Tony Murr to win 5-4. Tusculum took the second game 12-11, but the Scots fought back from a 9-1 deficit. Leading the parade of MC hitters in the nightcap were Steve Robbins with 2 hits, Rick Carver with 2 RBIs, Tracy Pate with a home run, Steve Saylor with 3 hits, Jason Harbison with a run-scoring double, and the consistently hot bats of Tony Murr, Brian Tease and Ronnie Ramsey.



SOFTBALL FEVER

The Lady Scots Softball team is midway through the 1985 season and boasts a record of 9-6. A quick recap to date shows the following: Double header splits against LMU and Tusculum at home followed by double header sweeps against Tennessee Tech and St. Leo and Eckerd. A split against Rollins rounded out the Florida Spring Break trip. Returning home, the Lady Scots have run into trouble losing three of four. Greenville and LMU took one in Harrogate before the rains came and washed out the second game. The fast pitch portion of the schedule draws to a close this Saturday with the Tusculum Tournament after a double header against Cleveland State on the 10th. Slow pitch home games include Bryan (Tuesday April 16th), Hiwassee (Monday, April 22nd), and the WIAC Tournament on Friday and Saturday the 26th and 27th. Coach Arrington is pleased that the team is doing so well but feels the record would show greater improvement if the team could stay mentally in every game. "I hate to walk away from the field saying 'We could have won that one'," said Arrington. She added, "Everyone on the team is performing well. On any given day, anyone can step in and take the leadership role, and we do our best when we've got someone who takes charge and is willing to fill that role. Without it we usually run into trouble!"

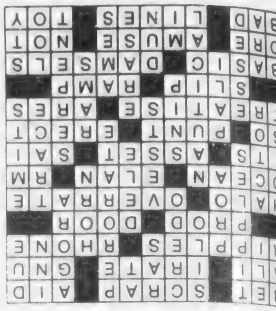


This year's roster includes infielders Mimi Chesney, Sherrie Farmer, Belle Ferguson, DeAnn Hargis, Nancy Koehl, Alicia Oller, and Charlotte Sherrif. The outfield consists of Sara Covington, Sarah Ferguson, Penny Head, Denise Penzkofer, Kandy Schram, and Ruth Ann White. Donna Clancy assumes most of the responsibilities of pitching (3-5) with Kandy Schram also part of the rotation (1-1). Coach Arrington has a lot of options available to her in that each of her players can assume duties in at least two different positions. "It makes it easier to coach knowing that you can rely on more than one combination of players," says Arrington. This idea was already put to the test on the Florida trip when Coach Arrington lost the services of three of her players and was still able to guide the team to a 5-1 record.

The Lady Scots are hoping to continue in their winning ways and count on your support. Softball fever - it's contagious.

SENIORS

Senior CIV is less than a month away! We need your photos for the slide show NOW. We're already planning the show, so if you have any suggestions, please talk to Donald, Mack, Gloria, Maelea, Ciretta, Brenda, or Maria Jo. Photos may be sent to box 2174 with your name and box number on the back.



RED DELICIOUS APPLES

The Back Page

Aren't paper cups great?
cheap & convenient quench your thirst
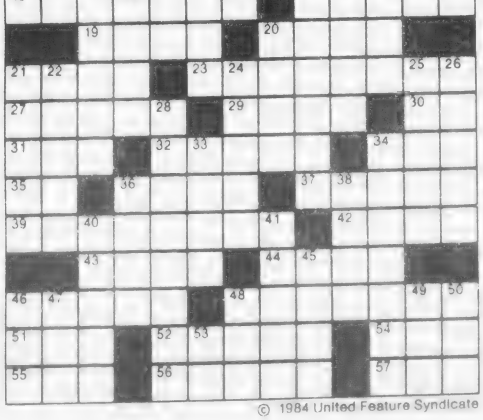
throw them away
Just call me Dixie

OD

Puzzle Answer

CROSS WORD PUZZLE



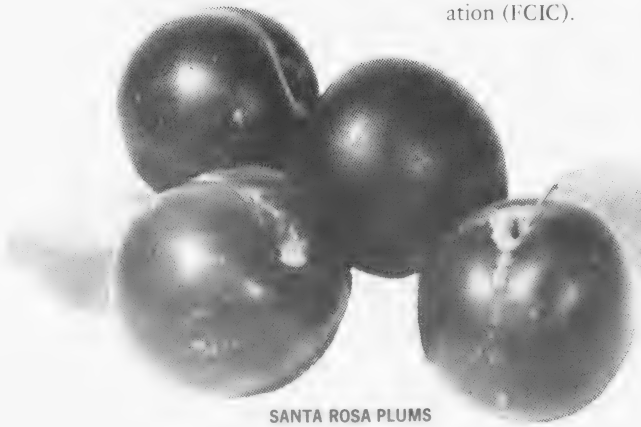
FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS

1 Wager
4 Fragment
9 Help
12 Mohammedan name
13 Angry
14 African antelope
15 Small waves
17 River in France
19 Urge one
20 Entrance
21 Nimbus
23 Estimate too highly
27 Body of water
29 Verve
30 Reichsmark abbr.
31 Possessive pronoun
32 Item of property
34 Capuchin monkey
35 Therefore
36 Football kick
37 Build
39 Argument in writing
42 War god
43 Undergarment
44 Inclined roadway
46 Fundamental
48 Young ladies
51 Native metal
52 Entertain
54 Negative
55 Evil
56 Boundaries
57 Plaything

DOWN

1 Prohibit
2 Actor Wallach
3 Indulges in liquor
4 Farm building
5 Set of professed opinions
6 Ethiopian title
7 Near
8 Harangue
9 Greek marketplace
10 Hostelry
11 Owing
16 Malay canoe
18 Musical instrument
20 Erase: printing
21 Raise
22 Performer
24 Waistcoats
25 Delineate
26 Sends forth
28 Pertaining to navigation
33 Cut
34 Snake
36 Buddhist dialect
38 Male sheep: pl.
40 Ancient chariot
41 Wipe out
45 Site of Iowa State College
46 Cut short
47 Macaw
48 Press for payment
49 Game at cards
50 Pigpen
53 Mile: abbr



© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

CHRISTIAN DATING SERVICE
51 PALMER ROAD
GREENS FORK, IN. 47345

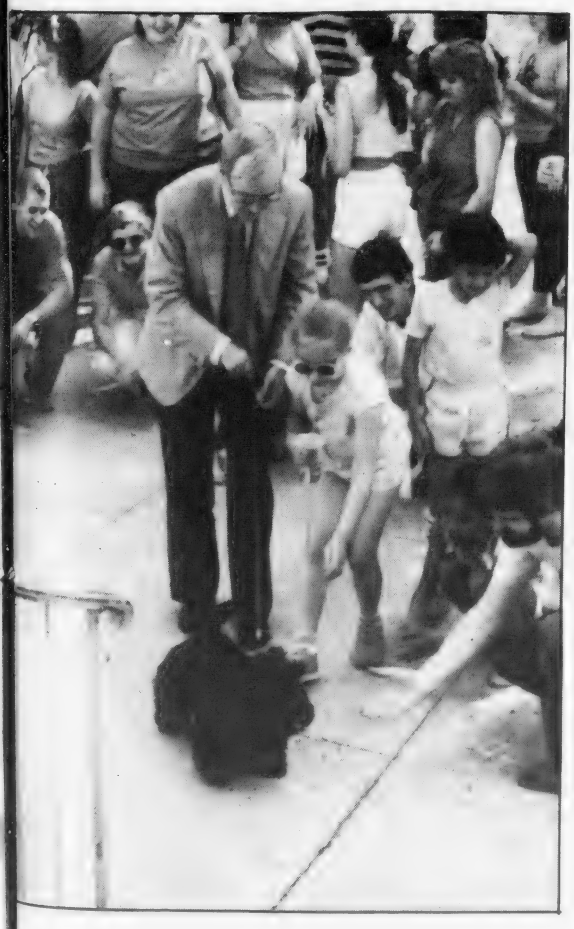
XXX

GREENEVILLE, TN–April 15 is the last day to apply for Crop Insurance for corn, grain sorghum, soybeans, and tobacco in Blount County, Tennessee according to Billy Gammon, a representative of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation (FCIC).

SANTA ROSA PLUMS

Highland ECHO

Volume 70, Number 12 MARYVILLE COLLEGE Friday, April 26 1985



Supreme Court Helps Gays In Campus Recognition Fights

WASHINGTON,D.C. (CPS) -Gay students around the country got more legal help last week in fighting colleges that won't recognize their clubs.

By refusing to intervene, U.S. Supreme Court justices let stand a federal appeals court ruling that Texas A&M University's refusal to recognize a student gay group constitutes unconstitutional discrimination.

The ruling, issued last year, was the fourth of it's kind from a federal appeals court.

Combined with similar rulings by the Florida and Oklahoma supreme courts in 1982, gay activists believe they now have the legal weapons to force the administrators to recognize their groups as bona fide student groups.

"We consider this settled law," says Tim Sweeny, director of the Lambda Legal and Educational Defense Fund.

Jeff Levi, acting director of the National Gay Task Force, called the Supreme Court ruling "a positive development."

"It underscores the free association rights of gay people, whether in the general public or on campus," he says.

Texas Tech, which was sued earlier this year by gay students, may be the first university to respond to the Supreme Court's action.

Universtiy lawyer Pat Campbell says if reports of the Supreme Court's ruling are correct, the university will withdraw its objection to recognition of the local gay student group.

Campbell still rejects the group's claim to punitive damages from the school.

Both Levi and Sweeney expect they'll have to keep fighting to gain recognition on other campuses.

"It's been over and over again in so many jurisdictions," Levi says.

"We have 10 years of legal precedents, all on our side but that doesn't mean that people are going to toe the line," Sweeney says.

"It's not an easy battle but it's easier than it used to be,"he adds.

Georgetown, Texas Tech, and Southern Methodist universities are among the institutions which refuse to grant student gay groups rights given other student organizations.

At those schools, gay groups either are required to meet off campus, or can use campus buildings only if other groups are not using them.

At SMU, the gay student group -- its membership down more than 50 Percent since last school year -- has decided to drop its battle for full-fledged recognition.

"Everyone was tired of the conflict and confrontation," says faculty advisor Campbell Read of the recognition battle waged last year before the student government and the school's board of governors.

"The members feel very much down as a result of all the hostility," Read says.

The SMU group is keeping its eye on the litigation involving Georgetown, where school administrators argue the school's affiliation with the Catholic Church exempts it from the requirement that it recognize the campus gay organization.

The gay group contends that, because the school recieves federal funds, it should be required to recognize them. The case is pending before the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Many legal experts consider the Georgetown case an important test of private college rights to regulate sponsored student activities.

MC WELCOMES

BLACK BART

Black Bart, our newly appointed Mascot, was introduced to the campus last Friday at the TGIF on the patio. He will be in the care of Lois Boney of Copeland Hall. Welcome to Maryville, Bart!

editorial

"Maryville College: An enviable environment." More enviable , of course, if the board of directors is on campus. For it is on these few magical weekends that the staff is actually moved to make everything perfect for "the board."

I often wonder what it is that is so terribly wrong with the campus as it is that causes such action. Think about it. We students live with leaves on the sidewalks, graffitti on the bathroom walls, and average dining hall meals all year long. But, oh, those mysterious changes that occur whenever "important"people are coming!

Maintenance men become Supermen and perform at lightening speed such tasks as raking, mowing, sweeping, or painting.

The dining hall becomes a gourmet restaurant (or do they order in?) and the entrees are even hot!

I feel certain that the Administration prays continuously throughout the week of preparation in dire hopes that the student body will behave while the board is amongst us. Horrors to suggest that we engage in any form of celebration such as "May Madness" while the board is on campus. Seniors will have to celebrate the survival of comprehensive exams in some untraditional way that is less visible to our guests.

I do appreciate all the board does for the college, and it is right that they be treated as guests. But it seems that a purpose of meeting regularly on campus (aside from their business meeting, of course) is to see what is happening on campus. How can this happen when "normal" campus life is so disguised? And does it make sense that the open forum meeting is scheduled while the majority of the Senior class will be taking Comps?

What's so bad about Maryville College when the board isn't here?

Comments? Letters? Personals? Suggestions? Keep 'em to yourself! We don't want to hear 'em. The next (and final) ECHO will appear on May 10. If you've got something important to say, get it to us by the 5th.

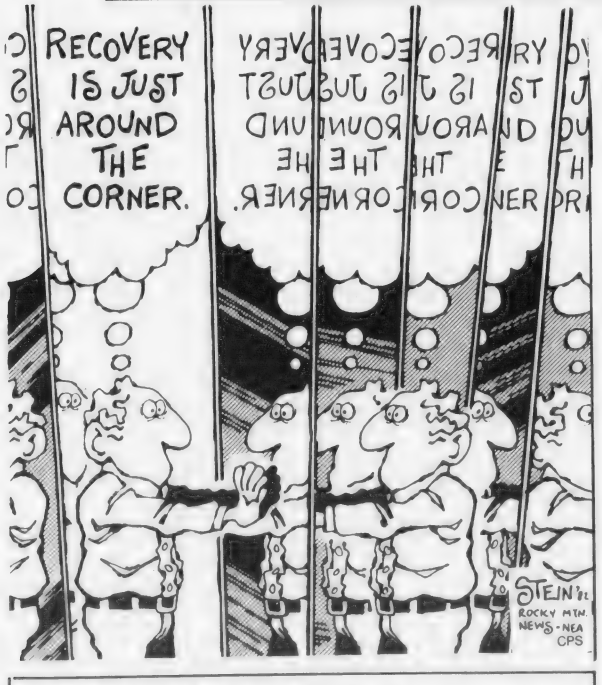
Did You Ever Notice How In Fayer weather...

1. CPP keeps strange hours?

2. Student Affairs office can be helpful in rare instances?

3. You get a note saying see the school counselor, and when you try to make an appointment, he's booked for weeks?

4. Just when Independent Study is due, the bookstore is out of binders?



5. The snack bar is amazingly almost finished in time for the Board of Directors?

6. You always get packag on Saturday when ther no-one to give them ou

7. People don't meet a socialize like they did wh we had a 10:30 brea

8. There isn't much activi around the Center for Lif style Development?

9. After 3:00 on the s ond floor we walk in fear ballerinas falling throu the ceiling on our head

The staff of the Highland ECHO includes :

Amy Waggoner, Keith Moore, Al Hipkins, Teresa Welch, Julie Humpert, Rick Carver, Brian Rigell, Karen Shafer, Pam Mathews, and Lyn Neary.

The paper is edited by brenda gillespie, and Steve Lemay is our faculty advisor to whom we are very gracious.

Dear Editor,

William Faulkner wrote ". . . it doesn't make any difference what you believe Man is not only nourished by convictions, he is nourished by any conviction. Whatever you believe, you'll always annoy someone, but you yourself will follow and bleed and die for it in the face of the law, hell or high water."

Now the Maryville College Community is being threatened by this attitude that the "in" cause is the only one worth bothering with. Active students (politically or otherwise) scorn those who choose silence. Silent students scorn those who support their "cause".

We all have our pet projects that we think are more important than those of other students, but we must remember that since we are all individuals within the community, we each have the right to take whatever action -- or lack of action -- that our conscience dictates.

The Maryville College community, moreover, centering around an institution of higher learning, free and differing opinions, should respect and encourage the individual's right to act as he sees fit.

One of the most important responsibilties of the ECHO editor is to keep the students informed of campus events and of the attitudes and behavior of the college community. The editor's position gives him the right, therefore, to bring to the community's attention any issue about which he feels strongly, including apathy on campus.

We as students, wheth we agree or disagree wi the opinions of othe must understand that eve other student, including t ECHO editor, has a right his own opinion and must learn to express o own opinions without m king a personal attack others.

Many experts recogni that apathy is a legitima problem on college ca puses today. While an one may point o that students do not appe to care about some issu he still must recognize th right to think, act, a speak as they wish.

Amy Waggo

Not About Notes

by Al Hipkins

Having played RISK for some twelve years now I have often employed several variations of the current rules. The following variations have been used individually, but I prefer to combine them in making the game much more interesting.

RETREAT

The idea of sitting still and allowing an overwhelming forced to overrun your position is in poor military taste. Using these retreat rules allows armies stationed in attacked territories to retreat only if outnumbered by more than 2 to 1. After surviving the initial attack (considered a surprise attack) the remaining forces may elect to retreat to an adjoining "friendly" country, friendly of the same player or of another player who has an alliance with the first that allows for retreat into one of his countries.

ALLIANCES AND TREATIES

Alliances and treaties can be used for several purposes:

Joined Battle. Two players may join forces and attack a single country in two ways: either allied armies are in the same attacking country, or they attack from different countries forcing the defender to split his defenses to stave off both attacks.

Mutual Defense. This treaty basically states that if one party is attacked, the other will either join battle in defense of that country, or will revenge the aggressive act of the other player.

Free Passage. Allowing retreating armies to enter their country without reprisal.

POKER AND NUCLEAR VARIANT

This variant is my favorite. Use a deck of normal playing cards to determine your extra reinforcements. If you take a country in your turn you can draw a (one only) card. When you have a poker hand you can cash it in for extra armies as follows: one pair = 2; two pair = 5; three of a kind = 7; straight = 10; flush = 12; full house = 15; four of a kind = 20; straight flush = 25; royal flush = 30.

This comes in addition to normal reinforcements. An ace of spades or a joker can be used to obtain a nuclear base. To determine its location, draw 2 RISK cards.

If one of them is in your possession, you have a base and can fire at will. If not draw again next turn.

Another player can, however, destroy your base by either taking that country (dumb luck since that country is not exposed) or by sabotage with a pair of aces. This can be done at the beginning of that player's turn or if an attack is announced against the player with the pair of aces.

When the bomb hits, everything in that country is dead, and cannot be rebuilt for 3 turns following the explosion, after which it can be fought over. Note: for the purposes of reinforcements, that country is no longer counted by anyone; it does, however, allow a player to claim a continent even though a country is missing.

If you wish to experience these rules in full effect, look me up and I'll give you a lesson in Joker Poker Risk!

Free access

. . . to information from the Federal government is available to you at more than 1,380 Depository Libraries across the country. You can visit any of these libraries and use the Depository collection free of charge. To find the Federal Depository in your area, contact your local library or write to the Federal Depository Library Program, Office of the Public Printer, Washington, DC 20401.

Federal Depository Library Program

MASK: A True Story

Have you ever left a movie feeling that your heart had been shattered? As the tears rolled down your cheeks, did you find it hard to speak and just walk in silence? If you answered yes, you've probably seen Mask.

The movie is based on Rocky Dennis. He was born with craniodiaphysial dyplasia, a very rare disease that affects one in twenty-two million people. At two and a half years of age the disease was discovered in an x-ray. It showed abnormal amounts of calcium deposits in his skull causing his eyes to be pushed towards the edges of his head and his nose to be twisted out of shape

There is more to Rocky than his disfigured face. Much more. He has dreams of traveling to Europe, and of falling in love and being loved. He is witty. Once, someone asked him to take off his mask and he replied, "It seems to be stuck." He sounds like any normal boy and he is, except for his face. It causes people to fail to see the richness of his personality, and to see only the blaring reality of his face.

In one part of the movie, Rocky meets a beautiful, blind girl named Diane at a camp for the blind. He tries to explain to her the colors of the sky and the clouds, but she has never seen and can't conceive something she has never seen. Rocky, determined to find a way to explain to her what color is, takes her to the kitchen and seats her on the table. Excitedly he runs to the freezer and refrigerator, he returns with two stones and presents them to Diane. The coldest rock he presents first and tells her "this is blue." and then the cooler rock, saying "this is green." He then runs to the stove and takes from a boiling pot of water another stone. "This is red and when it cools, it's pink." Then he explains the color of clouds with cotton "billowy, this is white," Reaching for her hand and placing it against her face he says "This is beautiful."

Blindness doesn't stop one from seeing, but quite often it is our sight that causes us to become blind. How often do we turn away from the things we see?

I Only Want To Say . . .

May life be kind to you
And when it fails to be Always have hope
To see beyond

May you love and be loved
For it is the greatest gift
But do so freely
Without expectations

Believe in yourself Always
When you do
You can overcome obstacles

I
Love
You
Goodbye

CONSOLIDATED THEATRES All Seats Everyday 'Til 5:30 PM

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS
977-4499 • FOOTHILLS SHOPPING CENTER

1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00 Just One Of The Guys	12:30, 2:45, 5:00, 7:15, 9:30 Stick
1:00, 3:00, 5:00 7:00, 9:00 Moving Violations	Desperately Seeking Susan

YOU CAN SAVE YOUR COUNTRY...

...AND WIN A $10,000 SCHOLARSHIP

Starting a career is tough enough without having to struggle with a wounded economy. It's important that our decision makers know how you feel about the deficit — to get them to act now. Enter the "You Can Save Your Country" National Essay Contest and we'll make sure that the President and Congress get a copy of your essay. PLUS, you can win a $10,000 scholarship, or one of three $2,500 scholarships. But hurry! Entries must be received by April 29, 1985.

Contact your Student Government Office for contest details, or write.

the INSTITUTE of financial education
111 EAST WACKER DRIVE
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60601

footlights

The Review In Review

by Amy Waggoner

The Maryville College Playhouse opened its spring production, FOOTLIGHTS, last Friday in the MC theater. The production, and "original musical comedy review," combines the talents of the MC Opera Workshop, the MC acting class, and other talented performers from the college community.

The roughly chronological history of the theatre begins with opera numbers by Mozart, Donizetti, and Gilbert & Sullivan. Selections from twentieth century musical theatre include the works of Rogers & Hammerstein, Gershwin, and Cole Porter.

The MC acting class provides comic relief with its lighthearted versions of vaudeville classics "MY" and "The Tridget of Greva."

The second act, covering musical theater from the 1940's to the present day, effectively intertwines upbeat dance numbers with touching ballads and more comedy sketches. Also included are "Maxims" from the Lehar opera The Merry Widow, and the Quintet from Carmen.

Literary buffs will enjoy "Brush Up Your Shakespear," by Cole Porter (via Tom Hudson and Nick Venditti) and a new version of "Cinderella" written by Jean and Walter Kerr. The skit, a satire of A Streetcar Named Desire, nearly brought down the house on opening night.

The show's narration, written by Tom Hudson and director Don Thomas, provides the audience with a light background on the literary history of musical theater. Choreography by Amy Moore Morton greatly enhances the visual effect of the show.

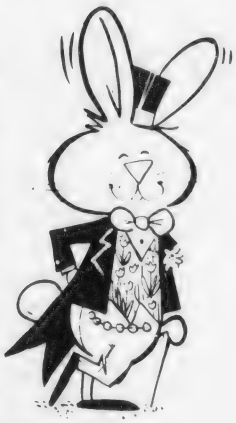
FOOTLIGHTS runs for two more nights, Friday, April 26, and Saturday, April 27. Both performances begin at 8:15 p.m. Tickets are $4 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens and are available at the door.

Wayne Anderson, MC President, was initiated last Friday into the largest formal organization on campus, the Bunny Rabbit Singer If America (BRSA). Wayne and friends enjoyed the sun, fun, and everybody's favorite --

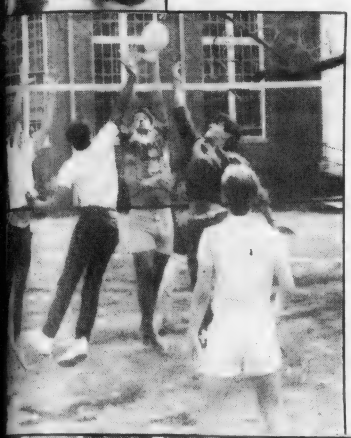
BANANA POPSICLES!!!

College Press Service

"Maybe if they turn up the music we can watch our entrees move in unison."



Your name.
That's not too much for your country to ask



A name and a few more facts. That's all we're really asking of the two million young men who will turn 18 this year. After all, there's no draft. So if someone you know should be registering, remind them that it only takes five minutes at the post office. And, it helps keep our country strong.

Register with Selective Service.
It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Presented as a Public Service Announcement by the Selective Service System.

Poet's Corner

I apologize for being one and twenty, mother and not belonging

but I'm still standing here in the sun like a child alone with the sand and waves sifting through my hands not holding on
not holding on (maybe not knowing how) still the little girl throwing open the church door like our kitchen screen in mid-afternoon

skipping up the long aisle randomly tapping the pew ends stopping to strike poses with the shadowed shapes - saints and statues - dappled in sunlight colors through stainglass windows hopping up the white marble steps laying my flushed face on the cold cold altar sigh escaping

Jesus, are you closest to me here?

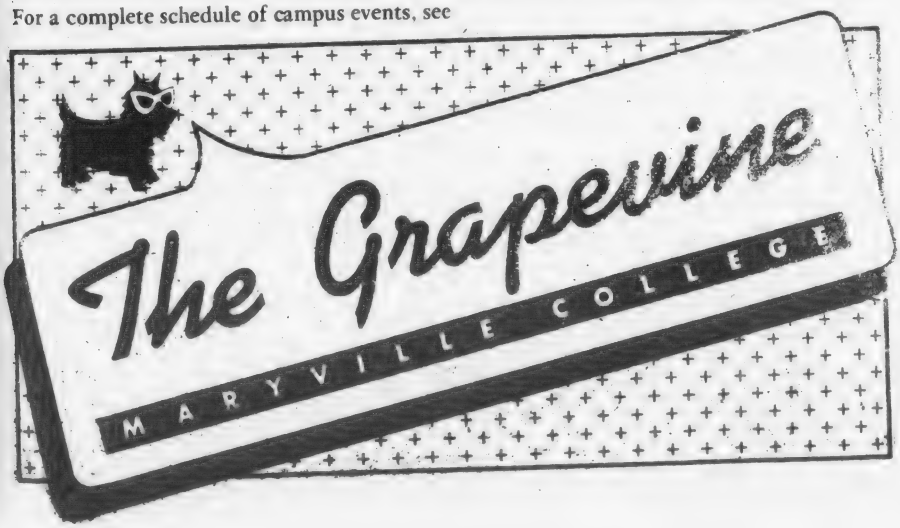
Julie Humpert

A JUNKY'S TESTIMONY

We see tomorrow
Through glazed and bloody eyes --
Warped, twisted (high), minds.

That is why we live for now --
"We ain't got no tomorrow."

Rethabile Masilo



CARE
CAMPAIGN for AFRICA

CARE joins the student-run organization S.A.F.E. - Students Against Famine in Ethiopia - in calling on college students throughout the country to give up a meal April 25 and donate the money saved to organizations fighting hunger in drought-stricken Africa.

Your gift will make a difference. Please help.

For a complete schedule of campus events, see

America's Miss Charm

A search is on for a new "AMERICA'S MISS CHARM." Over $100,000 in Scholarships, Prizes and Awards will be presented at the National Fianals, July 30 -- August 3rd in Washington, D.C. The reigning America's Miss Charm is Kim Olson, a Junior at the University of Maryland. The young lady chosen as the 1985 America's Miss Charm will receive a $4,000 Scholarship, Luxury Cruise Trip to the Bahamas, Norweigeian Blue Fox Jacket, Diamond Jewelry, Six Foot Trophy, Personal Appearance Contract, and many more prizes and gifts.

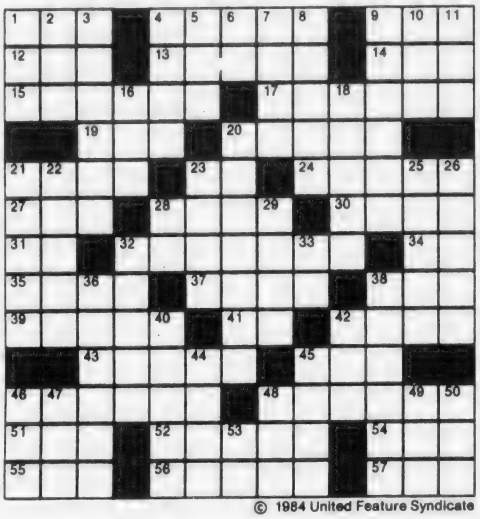
We are looking for a young lady to represent this college and state at the Nationals.This is open to girls, ages 17-25, who are single, regardless of race, color or creed. At the National Finals, girls will be judged on their talent, poise and appearance, scholastic honors and community service. Any fraternity, sorority, or organization may nominate a girl to represent this state, or any interested girls may write in directly for more information. Please send a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to:

AMERICA'S MISS CHARM SEARCH

P.O.Box 7246

JACSONVILLE, NC 28540

CROSS WORD PUZZLE



FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS

1 Crown
4 Kind of foot race
9 Animal's foot
12 Pension-plan initials
13 Omit from pronunciation
14 Arabian garment
15 Sea bird
17 Anger: colloq.
19 Free of 20 Challenged
21 Halt
23 Coroner: abbr.
24 Trades for money
27 Crony: colloq.
28 Head of Catholic Church
30 Transaction
31 Negative prefix
32 Vacation places
34 Agave plant
35 Weight of India
37 Group of three
38 Precious stone
39 Breaks suddenly
41 Symbol for tellurium
42 Journey forth
43 Food programs
45 Ventilate
46 More mournful
48 Encircle with a sash
51 Hasten
52 Part of flower
54 Organ of hearing
55 Transgress
56 Fur-bearing mammals
57 Brood of pheasants

DOWN

1 Gratuity
2 Native metal
3 Subdivision of Boy Scout troop
4 Musical instrument
5 Cloth measure
6 Roman 51
7 Egyptian lizard
8 Period of time: pl.
9 Oar
10 Presidential nickname
11 Armed conflict
16 Tear
18 Wants
20 Expels from country
21 Part of fireplace: pl.
22 Claw
23 Majority
25 Tardier
26 Viscous mud
28 Hebrew letter
29 Great Lake
32 Swift
33 As far as
36 Climbing device
38 Flower bed
40 Leaks through
42 Evergreen tree
44 Woody plant
45 Is ill
46 Third person
47 Breeze
48 Female: colloq.
49 Beat down
50 Before
53 Symbol for tantalum

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

THEY'RE HERE!!

The 1985 CHILHOWEAN has arrived and will be available to students on Friday, April 26th , from 12:30 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. (yes, I know it's during Comps!), and again on Monday, April 29, from 1:00 until 4:00 in Fayerweather 202C.

Can't pick yours up at these convenient times? Contact Brenda , P.O. Box 2174, and it will be yours for only $1!

Yearbooks are free (sort of) to students with proper i.d. and $15.95 for everyone else (faculty, staff, alumni, etc.).

YES, Interesting Photographs, Artistic Layouts, Witty Humor, and Clever Mistakes can all be yours in the 1985 CHILHOWEAN! Come and get 'em!

The 1985 CHILHOWEAN

Sports

JOCK TALK

by Rick Carver

Have you ever noticed the attendance at MC athletic events? There are students, predominantly girlfriends and other athletes who are out of season, and a few parents. But where are the faculty and staff? I suppose they are too busy to attend just one athletic event. After all, they must think of something for us college students to do with all of our free time..

During the course of MC sporting events throughout the 1984-85 academic year, I noticed a fairly good representation of faculty and staff at the football games. The soccer attendance was pitiful. Ditto for volleyball. Men's basketball received some attention, but only after the team began to win. Teh Woen's basketball team didn't win as much as the men , so nobody jumped on their bandwagon. Lady Scots softball drew more students than baseball, but the administration attendance was almost non-existant at either of those sports home dates. Let us not forget tennis, which drew a big zilch from both students and upper brass.

So what does all of this mean? Faculty and staff are not required to attend sporting events, and they should attend only if they want to be entertained. But shouldn't there be more backing from the educators of the college? The lack of financial interest in athletics is a minor shame in itself, but when combined with the lack of moral support, athletes begin to feel unwanted. No, this is not a plea for special attention to be given to the athletes. Athletes are students first, and should be treated as such. On the other side of the coin however, faculty and staff are part of the college community, which consists of more than mere classroom education.

Understand too, that this is not a personal grudge toward the whole faculty and staff population. There are a few members who take advantage of their opportunity to see the fighting Scots and Lady Scots in action. These members should be commended for their support and acknowledgement of the fact that life does exist beyond the classroom, Library, and textbook realm. But a big incomplete should be given to the majority who don't recognize athletes.

So what can be done about increasing the support shown to MC athletics? Probably nothing, but how about an attendance clause similar to the one students are under? I'm not talking about required attendacne at all but 4 sporting events, that would be absurd. What if each member of the faculty and staff attended a minimum of 4 sporting events athroughout the year? Can you imagine what that would produce? Full stands and perhaps a few noises? A few more victories? Totally unheard of!!!

OK, I've made my point, and I'd better shut up because I still have a year left here. The timing of this article cancels the hope for increased attendance for this year, but let us remember in the future that athletics were designed to supplement academics. and without at least moral support, the purpose for athletics gets a below average grade of a "D". Remember also that Maryville College offers a liberal arts degree, with liberal meaning broad and encompassing many facets of life to build a whole individual.

SCOTS SLUMPING

The 1985 baseball Scots have hit a major snag in their quest for a successful season. Although the defense of the Scots has picked up slightly, the once potent offense has stalled. As of press time, the record stands at a disappointing 9-18. There are a few bright spots which need to be mentioned, however. With 6 games remaining in the regular season, the Scots have a very good shot at an 11 win season, something that has been lacking in the baseball program over the recent years. Also, the team will be heading to the ODAC tournament in hopes of bringing back MC's first post-season baseball victory in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference. Here's a brief recap of the most recent games

On April 9th, the Scots journeyed to Sewanee for another double-header with the University of the South. The results ended in a split, with Sewanee taking the first game 6-3, and the Scots coming home Victors in the nightcap, 8-4. In the first game, Steve Robbins took the loss, but pitched a respectable game. Ronnie Ramsey had 2 hits to lead the MC offense. The second game saw Jim Gregory win his third game of the year, as he held Sewanee to 4 runs. Jason Harbison paced the Scot offensive surge with a homerun and a double. Ronnie Ramsey and Rick Carver also chipped in 2 hits a piece.

On April 13th, the Scots hit the road again and landed in Ashland, VA. to face the Randolph Macon Yellow Jackets. The Scots came up empty, though, as the Yellow Jackets swept the double-header by scores of 9-8 and 6-2. In the first game, MC led by a fine pitching performance by Brian Tease. Tease took the extra inning loss, but was victimized by a crucial error by Rick Carver that allowed RMC to take a one-run lead into the seventh. The Scots rallied back to tie, as Carver singled Jason Harbison to make the score 8-8. RMC won in the eighth, overshadowing a 4 for 5 performance by Steve Saylor and a 3 for 5 game by Tony Murr. In the second game, RMC took advantage of control problems by Scot pitcher Ricky Miller and went on to win 6-2.

The next day, MC travelled through Virginia again, and pulled into Lynchburg for what proved to be two easy victories for the Hornets. The first game saw Lynchburg win 12-0, as the Scots could muster only 3 hits, those going to Rick Carver, Tony Murr, and Eric Etchison.

The second game was just as lifeless for the MC offense, as LC won 8-1. The lone MC run came in the 6th inning, when Rick Carver singled in Jason Harbison who had doubled. Tony Murr added a triple to the Scot offense, but it proved to be futile.

MC finally came back home to play, and on April 20th, the Scots snapped a 5 game losing streak to salvage a split with the Washington and Lee Generals. W&L took the first game 3-2, due to a sputtered offense, that was led by Eric Etchison's 2 hits. In the second game the Scots rallied behind Brian Tease's winning pitching to claim a 3-0 victory. Ronnie Ramsey had 2 hits to lead the offensive side of the win.

With 6 games and the tournament left, the Scots could progress or regress from what stands to be a mediocre season thus far. Tune in next issue, when the team's contributions are recognized with a mock Award's Ceremony.

PERSONALS

Do you think it means something, Earl?

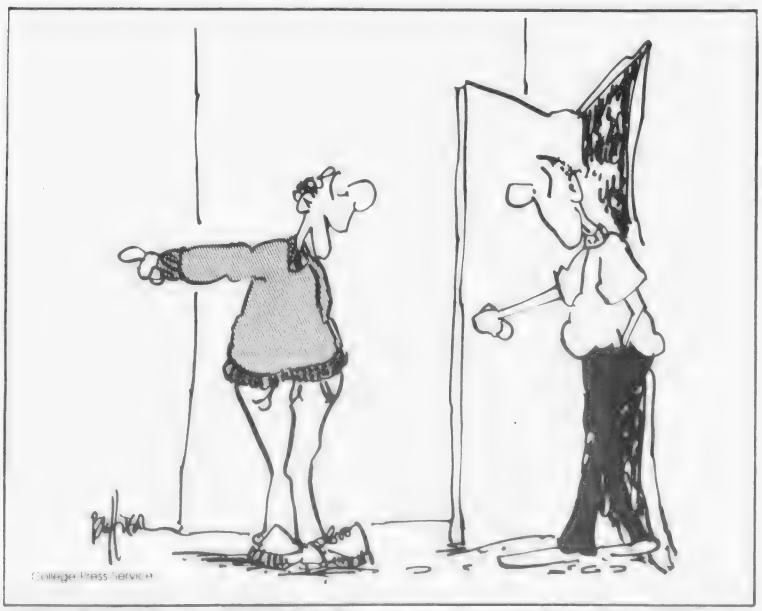
To all my new buddies - Congratulations! We're glad you're here . . . Miss B.

Where is the CCM anyway?

T,K,B,D,M,C,Cira,JH-- Congratulations. You made it! See, it wasn't that bad . . .or . . .was it? AKW

KB - Bang, bang! You're dead.

23 days!



The Back Page

GRAPES

"Pigs Finished With Comps!" ya guys are GREAT! Lyn

"The clinic called to say that they have your test results and if you hurry quick, you can hear about yourself on the 5 o'clock news."

CHRISTIAN DATING SERVICE
51 PALMER ROAD
GREENS FORK, IN. 47345

Puzzle Answer

Hogland ECHO

olume 70, number 13 maryville college may 10, 1985

GOODBYE, MC!

See You In the Real World!

ell Ciretta, it looks like we ade it, Shalom Darling! ey Jerry and Amy, take re of each other. Hey itch, Mark, and Ed, "What out the heather?" Take re you guys. And remem- r: "Ev archo han ho gos..." Meg, be sure to re- ember all the wonderful kes I told you. Roxanne, ke care; remember all ose extremely fun ex- riments we did in psy- ology. Shalom all, and a ecial blessing on my bro- ers and sisters of the ith, God bless.

B.W.

ate good-byes... so "See later!" - Julie

Good-bye to Bob, Jeff, Cesar, Karen, Trash, Chris the "designated driver". Special goodbyes to Gorgeous, Hunk, Fred, Tweery, Dump, and Donnie, Paul, Pat - Thanks for four terrific years and God Bless!

M.B.

A High ole time to the Party Animals.

J.M.

Good-bye to Amy Ralston - Hello to Amy Vagnier. Good-bye to the Bouch Sisters who have been sweet during my days at MC and especially during comps! Good-bye and Best Wishes to Rob & A!

J.V.

To Chandra, thanks for making this year bearable. I really don't think that I could have made it without you. It is really going to be hard not having you around to bother all the time. Good Luck and Don't Be Good!!! To Deangelo, thanks for putting up with all of my shit this term. I wish you the best of luck in whatever you decide to do in the future.

R.B.

to all my back-stabbing, two-faced friends (we know who we are): i love you all dearly and wouldn't trade you for the world - not even nyc. best of luck to you all. see you in the real world! hugs - brenda

To Rhonda: Thanks for a great year. I couldn't have made it without you. We shared a lot of good times and no matter how far apart we are I will always cherish the memories.
To Padge: Thanks for the great weekends (always remember those). Thanks for the shoulder that you allowed me to use whenever I needed it, but most of all thanks for being such a good friend. Hang in there it gets easier.

C.W.

Good-bye to THE ENTIRE PLACE!

J.J.

Good-bye to Dawn and Becky - "a couple of great commuters to have lunch with." I'll miss that.
Good-bye to Adrienne and Rob - Would we have made it through all of those business tests and especially comps without each other? Thanks for your help and Good Luck!
Good-bye to Thaw Hall - my home away from home!

K.H.

There are so very many people that I would like to say Good-bye and Thanks. You mean the world to me. To Lisa B., you are very, very special to me and I hope I'll never have to say Good-bye.

RYVILLE, TN (APS) -- Dr. Wayne Anderson, famous world- aveller and president of the prestigious Maryville llege (the little Harvard of the South) shocked the tire country with his resignation today. It seems at Dr. Anderson will be leaving his post to take a sition with Mayo Garden Centers.

The publicity given to Dr. Anderson's previously nown talents in the college annual, The Chilhowean, parently caught the eye of Mayo president, Mustard N. yo. According to Mr. Mayo, "Dr. Anderson's reputation the 'fearwess weader' of Maryville College should ve him plenty of experience for his new position."

Dr. Anderson's responsibilities will include hoeing, ding, cutting grass, and of course weeding. Dr. Ander- will be serving a two month internship with the MC ntenance crew to insure that he is prepared for the job, beginning June 1.

"I am very grateful to the students, faculty, and ff of Maryville College," he said. "My years here e been happy ones, but I must move on and find new to cultivate my weedership abilities."

MARYVILLE, TN (APS) -- After months of searching, scientists have discovered a rare breed of homosapien which they previously thought might have been extinct. The liberalis artis doublis majoris, a distant relative of the common liberalis artis studentis and of the universitas technicalis studentis.

This animal's scarcity has been attributed to its strange habit of never leaving its cage. Whether it lives in a laboratory, a library, or in front of a typewriter, the creature spends up to sixteen hours per day there.

Dr. Al Perkins, Maryville College Academic Vice-President, is very pleased to discover the species at his institution. "We think the liberalis artis majoris doublis will be happy at Maryville. After all, we have so much more to affer him that regular colleges and universities do not. We will provide him with a truly enviable environment."

LETTERS?!?!

After this "ad" ↓ was printed in the last issue.

Comments? Letters? Personals? Suggestions? Keep 'em to yourself! We don't want to hear 'em. The next (and final) ECHO will appear on May 10. If you've got something important to say, get it to us by the 5th.

we had an overwhelming abundance of mail. strange, yes. intelligent? we think so. at least worth reading. i just don't understand...

To the Editor

I cannot help but take notice of the recent wave of thought concerning apathy on the Maryville College campus. Yes, it is true that apathy is a pitiful ailment which can be detrimental to the atmosphere of any college campus, but I think that many people on this campus suffer from another type of ailment: disillusionment. In particular I am referring to the growing concern towards the starving in Ethiopia. Yes, I know that the country is in a desperate plight and that many people are starving and even dying. Undoubtedly these people need help, but I feel that their need for help extends far beyond that of merely food for survival, and anyone who thinks otherwise is sadly disillusioned.

The people of Ethiopia presently live under a Marxist-Leninist regime led by a Moscow backed tyrant named Marian Menqistu. I can assure you that Mr. Menqistu's goals are selfish and self centered. To him the famine is an effective method of squashing the Tiqream rebels who oppose his communist regime. Since it is the Ethiopian government who is responsible for the distribution of Western aid, they can use it to centralize their power and further suppress the opponents of their government, regardless of the cost in lives to the Ethiopian people.

The situation will not get better by American's singing songs and fasting. Indeed we should raise money for Ethiopia, but it should be raised for a realistic and constructive end. The most realistic hope that the Ethiopian people can presently have is that Mr. Menqistu's tyrannical government can be liberated. For as long as Ethiopia is under the control of a communist tyrant, regardless of how many rock stars get together or how many college students donate their evening meals, there will be hunger, starvation, suppression, and death.

Brian C. Linkous

amen!
ed.

The Dobb's House cafeteria knows that we are basically creatures of habit, and that we will accept the fact that there isn't any orange juice, or jelly, or fruit, or whatever. They also realize that we will just accept these things without so much as asking (although I often have), or demanding that they bring out more food.

I think that I have simple tastes in food. For example, at breakfast I'm happy if I have fresh fruit, cereal, and orange juice. Now that is undeniably a simple menu, right? But from my experience it is obviously a menu too complicated for Dobb's House. It seems that if you are not one of the select few who get to the cafeteria during its first thirty minutes of breakfast then you can hang up any thoughts of fresh fruit or juice, because they will be long gone. But if you have the stomach and the arteries, which I don't, there is always an abundance of fat laden pork sausage and bacon.

By the way, what is that man's name who runs our cafeteria? Well, I'll just refer to him as A. S. Anyway, I hope A. S. takes heed to what I am about to write.

I pay $1,340 to eat in the Dobb's House cafeteria and from my understanding it will be $1,460 next year. I will grant you that it is not a lot of money to feed someone for an entire year, but then I am sure that Dobb's House is not losing money on the arrangement. With the preceding facts in mind, I will expect in the near future to have the same choice of food and drink as everyone else does, regardless of what time I eat. If I should choose to eat breakfast at 7:30 there should be an ample supply of fresh fruits and juices. But if I choose to eat at 8:59 there should be the same ample supply.

I feel that during the past year some of us have been too nice about the quality of food service we have received. When the dining room shelves were empty we politely asked cafeteria employees if they could bring more out, but the same reply came every time. "No! We are temporarily out and will have to re order." In my personal opinion A. S., this is B.S. Although I know nothing about managing a cafeteria I do believe that it is not so hard that you cannot keep adequate supplies on hand.

If you have noticed, I have not made any requests for better quality food, although if I thought it feasible I would. However, my one and only request is that Dobb's House keep our dining hall adequately stocked with the few decent foods it does have. Now do you think that this is a totally unreasonable request?

Brian C. Linkous

Once upon a time in a land not so far away, there was a tyrant ruler named King Wiseless who ruled over a castle named One Hall. In this castle he lived with his queen and their three urchins. They led a petty and simple life, quiet and peaceful until...Damnit! Those ruthless, uncaring, cruel, barbarous, rent-paying Knights the Party Animals returned from conquering lands far, far away. But boys and girls, what are Party Animals? They are simply students who like to have a good time after spending their week performing chivalric deeds such as studying, passing exams, attending classes, and courting women. Now they don't sound all that bad, do they? But King Wiseless vowed that the Party Animals were not to have a good time in his castle and he began by levying heavy taxes against them on petty items.

Then one day special declarations were posted in the One Hall to announce that no one under a certain age was allowed within the confines of his majesty's castle. No one knew it but these declarations were written on silk with solid gold ink, for when one of the King's defiant subjects tore it down King and Queen Wiseless charged the kingdom $50 for each missing declaration and $25 a day until this terrible person was brought to justice. Oh, but the King did not stop there! His mind was made up that he would raise his urchins in the castle, at any cost! So he set out to make the inhabitants lives revolve around the lives of his children. If the Party Animals did not behave and study while his kids slept, he would fine them heavily. It was also forbidden in his castle to carry on private parties in private rooms. It was even said that the King once poured the Party Animals beverage down the moat. It is presumed that he did this out of anger from not being invited to their social gathering.

But these Knightly Party Animals vowed that life would go on, in spite of King Wiseless who despised those servants who would not bow at his humble feet. However, the Party Animals were on a mission (clas-ified) which they vowed ne to stray from. King Wiseless, t as he did, was unsuccessful breaking their spirit. He would often refer to the Knight's 2 record in the courtly arena meaning that they were n truly men, and that they act out of pitiful frustration. Ki Wiseless often claimed that urchin number 2 acted wi more sense than those perilo Knights. Well that might might not have been true, t those Knights were receiving education, not excluding t fact that they did not wear di diapers! For they had alwa been men, and if they ever w diapers they were made of iro and the milk they drank w from wild wolves. Yes Knig like the Party Animals w rare indeed. But never fear, as long as there are mindle selfish, dictators such as K Wiseless, there will be no Knights known as Party Anim who will fight for their sequ ered rights. The few, the pro the fearless, the Party Anim-

Name withheld by requ

Dearest Editor:

In October of 1984, just before the Board of Directors' visit, the students of Maryville College vehemently protested the semester calendar. Among their chief concerns were lack of time for extracurricular activities such as eating, sleeping, and bathing; no campus wide morning break; lack of adequate lunch schedule; and difficulty in scheduling sports' practices/events. Most importantly, students were concerned with their overwhelming course loads.

At the open forum with the Board and select college officials, students were assured that their problems were merely adjustment-related, and that the students would, given enough time, be just as content with the new schedule as- maybe more so than- they were under the old system. They asked us to try semesters - and since we had no choice but to do so - we agreed.

As seniors who spent several years on the Trimester System and a year on the Semester System, we would like to say that we find the Semester System to be both inferior to Trimesters and certainly more unpleasant. However, we realize the futility of this letter. The Semester System is now an integral part of our beloved alma mater. But for the record, we think the college has made a grevious error. Students enrolled after 1988 may not realize that a conflict ever arose. However, neither will they have the opportunity to enjoy such a unique and valuable educational system.

Sincerely,

Karen Shafer
Amy Waggoner
Maelea Fiore

the editorial

i quit. cheers! - brenda

Football at MC has become synonymous with a farce or comedy to the general public outside MC. Synonymous to tragedy to the players, and synonymous to something that should be terminated to the administration.

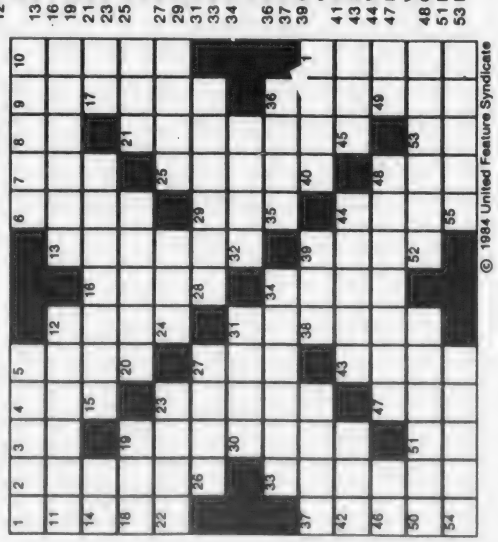
Football is an extracurricular activity that gives, pays, or denotes nothing at MC. In fact football here is met with extreme skepticism, or disdain, by some of the administration/staff. Sure such reaction will be present almost any where, but to the degree it is exemplified here is overbearing. Overbearing in the sense that it is shown in the way football is run here. At Yale, at Harvard, at Brown, it is Honorable, it is a tradition, along with the tailgate parties of caviar and champagne, or sandwiches and soda. It is something to revel in, to have pride in, but here it is a disease to be shunned. Maryville is a disgrace to the ODAC.

We at MC have some very talented players and should be able to compete with anyone at this level, but the coaching staff is overextended and understaffed Quantitatively and Qualitatively. Is the administration blind to this fact? Not so I believe. The administration is using a shoestring budget to hire coaches and run the program. The best coaches are the volunteer coaches that receive absolutly nothing. It is reported that Coach Dire, a very good coach, left to go to a high-school that paid him more.

I am tired of getting humiliated every Homecoming with scores that look like lopsided basketball scores, and it is obvious that the players, not to mention students and the public on the whole are tired of this. Of approximately 65 players 28 showed up for two meetings, the only formal ones called after the season effectively ended. May I add that these meetings were highly stressed if the player planned on playing football at MC anymore.

The players and public are tired of ineffective coaching, and of anti-athletic administrators who do not want school colors painted on anything because it might seem to promote athletics. I think the real cause of this is seated in an inferiority complex developed by these individuals. It is a personal bias that is carried to exorbitant ends, which are harmful to the school; as in school spirit, retention of students, and lower applicants due to this loser mentality. If the school is to enjoy success in this area it must rectify this situation "poste haste" and employ a real defensive coordinater which I understand is being considered, and a real offensive coordinater. Otherwise this school should end this farce, for it is better to do nothing than to do it half-assed.

CROSS WORD PUZZLE



FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS

1 Newly married woman
6 Goddess of the hunt
11 Newest
13 Cake mix
14 Above
15 Restaurant workers
17 Symbol for titanium
18 Wooden pin
20 Join
21 Devoured
22 Tolls
24 Obtain
25 Lubricates
26 Soaks, as cotton
28 Colonize
30 Verse
32 Ceremony
33 Writing implement
35 Roman tyrant
37 Attitude
38 Title of respect
40 Lasso
42 Decay
43 Beef animal
45 Snare
46 Negative prefix
47 Squanderer
49 Sun god
50 Tidier
52 Sailor
54 Handle
55 Capital of Tibet

DOWN

1 Deceive
2 Sword
3 Kind of type: abbr.
4 Condensed moisture
5 Brother of Jacob
6 Challenge
7 Possessive pronoun
8 Near
9 Irritate
10 Sign of zodiac
12 High-pitched sound
13 Improve
16 Cravats
19 Most profound
21 Part of airplane
23 Rock
25 Aquatic mammal
27 Dry, as wine
29 Metal
31 Title of respect
33 More indigent
34 Hold on property
36 Musical dramas
37 Publish
39 Cerise and crimson
41 Babylonian hero
43 Barracuda
44 Walk unsteadily
47 Music: as written
48 Cheer
51 Diphthong
53 Parent: colloq.

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Puzzle Answer

E	F	T		P	I		P	R	A	T	E
R	A	I	S	I	N		R	U	L	E	R	S
E	T		O	P	U	L	E	N	T		A	I
	H	E		E	R	O	S		O	A	S	T
S	E	R	E		E	D	I	T		B	E	E
I	R	A	T	E		E	D	A	M		R	S
		S	O	N	S		E	R	I	S
A	D		N	I	T	S		T	R	A	D	E
R	I	M		D	U	A	L		E	V	E	N
B	A	I	T		T	R	E	S		E	R
O	D		R	E	T	I	N	U	E		I	F
R	E	N	E	G	E		D	E	L	U	D	E
	M	O	T	O	R		S	S		P	E	N

4 ← page number for easy reference

Where Do We Go From Here?

A summer internship in Washington, D.C. writing for a Public Interest Consulting Firm. In August I will probably move back to Kentucky, preferably Lexington, and think about the possibility of grad school. You'll probably find me working at McDonalds or at a hardware store selling oversized O rings.

J.H.

I am going to get my teaching certification to teach in secondary schools. I plan to get my M. Ed. and possibly later get an advanced degree in Chemistry.

M.B.

My plans for after graduation include getting a job so I can put this college Knowledge to work, and spending more time with my husband instead of schoolwork.

K.H.

At present I just want to graduate. I am not worried about the future too much. I will go to grad school, go to seminary or something along that line, work as a sponsored volunteer at a Christian camp, get a job in the local community, work for the government, or join the "Hollywood Shorties," ------just kidding.

B.W.

Get married and go back to my high school and coach Basketball and Football.

T.S.

I plan to attend graduate school and get a Masters Degree in Social Work.

C.W.

I plan on getting married on May 25th! I will be working at Ridgeview Psychiatric pital as an adolescent aid, and hope to begin graduate studies next year.

J.V.

I plan to go back to Atlanta and work for the Internal Revenue until I get out of debt.

R.B.

My plans for after graduation will be to work on the Maintenance crew for the summer and then make-up the two classes I need to REALLY GRADUATE from here.

Work on race cars and try to get a job with the Auto Companies.

J.M.

An exciting career in the real world, somewhere in the northeast corner.

og

Graduate School in Chemistry.

L.W.

Did You Notice the ECH

The Student Publica this week, proved t in attendance. This of a time. Present year's editors and cation during the y time. Several awar cap the evening for award for Editor-of- presented, but the column writing was awards of congenial upon Brenda Gillesp Chauffer-of-the-Yea sented to Teresa We given to Lyn Neary pert (for typing ex recieved Columnist- and pencil sets wer

Dear John... GOODBYE FOREVER

Ever write a "Dear John" or "Dear Mary" letter? Then you may be one of the countless thousands who, taking pen in hand, tried to end a relationship with a final goodbye forever love letter.

A Michigan man, Shaffer Fox, wants to pay you as much as $30 for sharing your experiences in an upcoming book titled, "How We Say 'GOODBYE FOREVER' in the U.S."

The book will contain final goodbye love letters from every state in the nation. Fox currently has over 100 of these final letters on hand, yet at least 300 more letters are needed for both the first edition and the planned sequel, "How We Say 'GOODBYE FOREVER' in the U.S. II."

Fox will pay $5 for every letter that is accepted, and $25 upon its publication. All letters must be accompanied with a note briefly explaining how the romance ended and why the letter was written.

The letters received so far have been funny, sad, and in some cases, bizarre. All references to names, cities, and other specific information will either be eliminated or changed to protect the identity of the authors.

Want to be part of this book? Start digging through those boxes and dresser drawers for your old goodbye letters. Send them, along with your explanation, to: GOODBYE FOREVER, P.O. Box 1015, Owosso, Michigan 48867

We've Gone BANANA

MARYVILLE, TN (APS) --Officials say that President Rona Reagan will become an adjunct faculty member at tiny Ma ville College beginning next school year. Reagan will be professor of Economics (replacing the departing Dr. Steve Lemay) and History.

"I'm hoping to train several new supply-side econ omists during my affiliation with the college," he said "In addition, I will be teaching a course on World War (emphasizing the rise of Naziism). Hopefully I will b able to impart the students of Maryville College the correct interpretation of Hitler's policies. He really was very misunderstood. . . ."

this is page 5

Last will and testament of...

I, Lisa Smith Webb. being of unsound mind and questionable moral character, do hereby bequeath: To Drs. Naylor, Bunde, and Yager- I leave a quiet 2nd floor of Sutton. To Cesar Z.-I leave my notable, remarkable, illustrious, renowned, natural talent for chemistry (B.S.). To Bob - you're awesome-Aucker- I leave my overly-abundant calves. And finally to Mike (you know who you are) K.-I leave my handy-dandy set of meticulously-taken Physics notes.

I, Mary Ann Bobbitt, being of perverted mind and strong lungs, hereby bequeath the following: To Drs. Naylor and Bunde, I leave neat, uncluttered doors. To Bob Aucker, I leave my extraordinary wit and magic hands. To Jeffrey Todd the "wimp", I leave my ability to keep up with my books. May you never be five credit hours short of graduation requirements. To future chemistry majors, do not forget the phenol phthalein. To Cesar, I leave the distinguished Aluminum Whale. To someone in my past, Many Happy returns-thanks for the memories (splash). To one unspecial guy: You had your chance and you really screwed up!

I will my parking space at Lloyd to Vic Ford and my pitching ability to Fahed.

J.M.

I leave to Hubert the "How To" Parties!!! To Ed S., my Loud rock music!! To Jim a book on how to girls!!! To Charlie G., a Paul Schaffer T-shirt!! To Don D., a hair styling manual!! To the Rhinos, Where are the trucks? To the other people that made my commitment to this institution bearable "This Buds For You"

I will Paul Mills my intramural softball team and all the headaches that go with it.

T.S.

I leave absolutely nothing for everything I have MC has taken.

C.W.

I will to Maryville College two pink flamingos for the Anderson Hall flower garden.

C.C.

To Becky Hedrick I will an "A" for her to put in her last name so it will be spelled correctly.

K.H.

For Aim, I leave the clouds, sunsets, and a toe to bite. For Julio, I leave a new pair of shoes (to walk away in), a quarter to wash your socks, and un beso grande!

J.H.

To MC- a workable daily schedule; to the ISDL - tact, the courtesy to show up for appointments with echo reporters when he wants his starvathons publicized, and singing lessons; to Lyn - patience, creativity, and a spring break where the real boys are; to Amy K - applause for getting out as fast as you can, wonderful Atlanta weekends, and plenty of pringles; to Jill - her very own prince charming, love, and puppies; to Victor O. - imagination, hugs, and the balls to stand up to 'em when you know you've done your best; to Noble - we're leaving for Atlanta at 4:00, are you coming?

og

...wer
...In
...

...is Banquet, held earlier
...njoyable evening for all
...r, at least, had one hell
...quet were all of this
...who worked on any publi-
..., all 6 of us had a great
...iven and I'd like to re-
...y: the Thomas Hudson
... was not among the awards
...dson award for spontaneous
...my Waggoner. Two-fold
...egativity were bestowed
...retta Carpenter. The ...s appropriately pre-
... late-blooming awards were
...ant layout) and Julie Hum-
... Rick Carver (in absentia),
...Hostest award. Cross pen
... to all. We missed you!!

Any Last Words?

Four years ago when I received a letter from MC saying "Congratulations, you will be a member of the class of 1985." I thought that day would never arrive. Now, however, graduation is upon us, and the time has really gone by very quickly. So to all the members of the classes of '86, '87, and '88, I would like to say "Hang in there, your day will soon be here too!" It really is well worth the wait.

K.H.

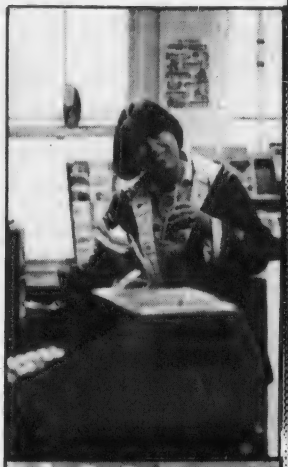
I'm glad it's over--There's no money for next year.

J.M.

I wish all the best to everyone.

B.W.

Th-th-th-th-th-that's all, folks!



L.W.

page negative 6

JOCK TALK

Can You Imagine?

by Rick Carver

Have you ever imagined what life will be like in the future? Here's a look at good 'ole MC, if current conditions proceed.

In the year 2064, a generous grant is given to the MC athletic department in the amount of some $53 million. The donating group for this fund is called "Stars for Sports," and has some prestigious MC Alumni on the board. Included in this group are Paul Anagnostis (who went on to win millions in the NFL), Dan "Sticks" Kirkpatrick (a Hollywood dynamo), Sara Covington (first woman elected into the Pro Basketball Hall of Fame), and Mark Mixner (who took Brent Musberger's job and salary at CBS). Reportedly, the money will be used to construct the Bobby Saylor Memorial Highlander Dome, which will serve as the Fighting Scots Football stadium. MC was picked especially for this award because of consistency, based on the fact that the football team has consistenly won 2 games a year since 1982.

The soccer team was also granted permission to use the dome. Stipulations were that the new soccer recruits (which outweighed the football team's offensive line) had to perform double duty in the two sports, and that the soccer team could win no more thatn 1 more game than the football team.

The volleyball team was also granted a donation for a stadium. MC Alumni responsible for the gift are Denise Penskofer, who won 4 Olympic gold medals in the sport, and Kandy Schram, who went on to win a Nobel Peace Prize for all of her numerous talents. Coach Brenda Ammons was enrolled in a speech making course, and finally made an appropriate, interesting speech at the All-Sports banquet.

The basketball team announced the signing of 7'4" center Tommy Lambert, grandson of the former MC coaching legend. Lambert, an all American high school senior hails from the "Magic City," wherever or whatever that is. Coaching the Fighting Scots is 40 year veteran Coach Deangelo Matthews, son of the former MC player and named after a past all ODAC performer.

The Lady Scots finally drew a well-deserved capacity crowd, prompting 80 year coach Sharon Arrington to retire at the ripe old age of 105. Arrington leaves the coaching ranks after an amazing string of 40 conference championships and 12 national titles. Rumors naming clock keeper Brian Rigell as a successor to the vacant coaching position proved to be erroneous.

The corner, that infamous bunch of rowdies which support the basketball teams, was presented with an artifact that was uncovered during ground breaking ceremonies for the Highlander Dome. The antique had a striking resemblance to a a 3/4 full keg of beer, which mysteriously dissapeared some 79 years ago.

The tennis teams were also treated to capacity crowds for their opening matches. Coach Don Dove held a party in honor of the occassion, and was quoted as saying, "Thanks, both of you, for attending."

Softball season marks the beginning of the ladies' first season of all fast pitch games. The Lady Scots were also treated to a field on campus in which they could use for home games. Reasons for the sudden change in sites are due to the fact that somebody in the administration actually DID something about an athletic complaint, and the decision to allow the Baseball team no more home games. Support for an all away game baseball schedule was decided by the ODAC, which stated in its report: "Maryville College loves to travel. They must, because they continue to be in a confernece to which they don't belong." As for the amount of claases to be missed by the baseball team, Coach Patt Foster commented: "Missed classes will be nothing compared to the 1985 season." Foster was also named coach of the yaer, due to his ability to handle superflake pitcher Richard Gregory. Foster was able drops precisely 3.14159265358979323846263726373688 inches upon arrival at the plate. Space Case Ace Shook was named the team's MVP, but only after he limited his pregame rituals. Shook had been famous for several superstitious quirks, most notably keeping 7 marbles in his back pocket, wearing the same socks for every game (unwashed), and reciting the Greek alphabet backwards and forwards before every pitch. He now only lets out a very boisterous MMMUURRR!!!

The travel van is replaced by a supersonic jet, immediately after it completed a successful trip without a breakdown of some kind.

An autopsy was also performed on former Highland Echo columnist Rick Carver. The results found nothing in the brain of the lame wit. Absolutely nothing. Traces of bits and pieces of Humanities courses were found, but they proved to have little or no bearing towards any of the useful facets of life, much like many of his Jock Talk columns.

CHRISTIAN DATING SERVICE
51 PALMER ROAD
GREENS FORK, IN. 47345

FOOTHILLS CINEMAS

1:00, 3:00, 5:00, 7:00, 9:00
GIRLS JUST WANT TO HAVE FUN PG

1:15 3:15 5:15 7:15 9:15
RAPPIN' PG

1:00, 3:00, 5:00
7:00, 9:00
CODE OF SILENCE R

1:15 3:15 5:15
7:15 9:15
GOTCHA PG-13

YOU CAN LIVE IN THE MOST DYNAMIC PLACE IN MARYVILLE!!! We've got a beautiful home near campus with a porch swing and puppies. For only $210 a month, you can get great food and a roomate who knows more about cells than Dr. Ramger. Live at Dismas House this summer or next fall. Contact Tommy Brown, Box 2046 MC.

Sports

Scots Advance to Semi-Finals

The 1985 baseball Scots ended their season with a 3rd place finish in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference Tournament. The Scots also won 12 games for the year, surpassing a long drought for wins in a season dating back to the early 1970s. The Recap of the games since the last report follows.

On April 25th, the Scots united for a doubleheader sweep of Mars Hill College. The first game saw MC whitewash the Lions 19-3. Brian Tease got the pitching win and was given more than adequate support from an explosive offense. Every member of the Scots lineup managed to get a base hit in the 5-inning game. Leading the onslaught were Rick Carver (2-3 and 5 runs scored), Tony Murr (2 hits and a home run), Steve Saylor (3 hits and a homerun), Brian Tease (2 hits and 3 RBI's), Eric Etchison (2 hits), and Jim Shook (4 runs scored). The second game saw MC win by the narrow margin of 8-7. Jim Gregory got the pitching win, and Brian Tease picked up the save. Key hitters in the game were Tracy Pate with a homerun, Steve Saylor with 2 hits, Rick Carver with 2 hits, and Eric Etchison with 2 hits and a homerun.

The Scots' next contest was in the first round of the ODAC tournament, which saw number two-seated Hampden Sydney fall 7-2. Brian Tease tossed a 5 hitter for the win, and was supported by the bats of Tony Murr (2 RBI's), Eric Etchison (2 hits), and Rick Carver (2 RBI's). Tease also contributed 2 RBI's to help his own cause.

The Scots went into the semi-final game against Randolph-Macon with high hopes of bringing back an ODAC championship. However, the Yellow Jackets of RMC proved to be too tough and won 8-0. Brian Tease took the loss. The MC offense managed to get 11 hits on the day, but none at the crucial times.

The Scots closed the season on the expectations of doing better in 1986, and will lose only 1 senior to graduation. The year had many highlights and "low-lights," and to commemorate the eventful season, awards were given to every player. Here are the results:

Bobby Knight Chair Throwing Award
Coach Saylor
"Come on Blue, Can Me Too" Award
Patt Foster
"Don't Say Anything Award" Award
Jim Gregory
"Nice Swing, Alice" Award
Steve Robbins

Never Take My Hat Off Award
Tony Murr
Golden Bladder Award
Eric "Stop the Van" Etchison
Piano Mover of the Year Award
Ronnie Ramsey
Hit the Cut Off Man Award
Ricky Miller
Hole in the Glove Award
Rick Carver
"Get in the Dugout" Award
Brian Tease
Most Photogenic Award
Mike "I've Got to Study" Human
"How to Get Spanked in Spades" Award
Jason Harbison
"I've Got Something to Add" Award
Tracy Pate
Dancing Ears Award
Tracy Pate
"I Was Innocent and Had to Run 5 Miles"
"Bill" Pate
"I Got Attacked by a Bear on a Triple"
Jeff Catlett
Butcher of the Year Aeard
Buster Ferguson
"You're More Valuable on the Bench"
Jim Shook
Senior of the Year Award and Membership in the Rick Carver Dinger Club
Steve Saylor

To Peg & Marta: we missed you more than you could imagine.
To brenda: I leave a safe deposit box in which to store the patience you'll no longer need. I also leave you a thousand saturday shopping days we'll never have. Come to ny!
To Julie: After all the nights and mornings of this nonsense, THIS is what we wanted... no more castles in eyes, no more birds in throats, only rest and letters and words, words...
To Amy double you: Now that you know exactly what to study for COMPS, I hate you ! See you in the penthouse suite off Central PRK,west.
To Jill: No more fat tears (yeah!) But I'm jealous, you'll have Dr. Schneibel again! Rub your face in velvet hills and never comb your ears.
To Chris: A procession of speechless words. A silent vioce must speak for me again. thank you,thank you.
To John: You're on the island of misfit toys...good luck...keep your head about you.
To [illegible] :a thousand miles away from me, and yet you helped me through this more than any other.How about another pilgrimage to the best days of my life? Sending arms, violets, and love
To Ma Crane: I love you dearly, but you really must do something about this positivism.
Enuf already! love, ciretta

To DM, ES, and MW, the intrepid adventureres:
You are all honorary pigs (and you all know why).
Keep up the good work.

For all my pals (the G.L. gang) -
You guys are terrific! Love Ya!

PIGS - The EARLY PIG gets all the truffles.

TreeDee - watch out for your fingernails.

Maebaby - Germans make better lovers
(kidding, Frank!)

Amy K. - What can I say? Real Seniors don't graduate early!!

The Back Page

And The Votes Are In...

94 questionares were mailed in a once-in-a-lifetime survey to determine whether seniors would do it all again if they had the chance. 15 surveys were returned. Boy oh boy. The vote? 9 yes, 6 no. It is the opinion of the editor that the results are probably not a good indicator of the general opinion. We can only speculate as to why no one bothered to send back the questionare. Certainly it wasn't APATHY!!!

The Woeful City ... let us go then ...

by Ciretta Carpenter

I've often thought that Dante's inscription before the gates of hell should be tacked before the gates of Maryville College: "Through me is the way to the woeful city...Leave every hope, ye who enter!" (Something tells me we all have!) But, in the words of Peggy Milsaps, "now that I'm actually going to be somewhere else very soon, I no longer find the Indian's sentiments upon embarking on the Trail of Tears entirely alien to my experience."

So what happens now? After A-hour inquiry, comprehensive exams, reams of college-ruled paper, endless mail-less weekends, and countless all-nighters, I have to admit, I'll miss it. I will not miss hands covered with white-out, or bloodshot all-nighter eyes, or mornings, noons, and nights worrying about comps, or independent study, well...Truth is, the minute I finished my independent study, I wanted to start another one. The second I.S. would investigate the post-partum depression students experience upon finishing their first! Ideally, though, this I.S. would not have to be written while simultaneously juggling five other classes.

Now that my only thought (aside from passing french and graduating) is where and how to acquire cardboard boxes for four years of acquired junk, I can sit back and finally supply Brenda with "something for the paper." I wish it were different. I wish there had been more time and less responsibility. I wish there had been more dedicated staff members on more committees. Enuf said.

What did I learn from transplanting myself 800 miles away from Brooklyn? I learned that Dorothy was right (click, click, click) There's no place like home. I learned that jokes about cruel New Yorkers slip easily (and sometimes cruelly) out of the mouths of southerners. I learned that home at times meant places I'd never been before (like Michigan) or places I'd been once or twice (like Cincinnatti). I also learned to love books again. And to love school and classrooms, and most of all professors. I learned that the perfect roommate does exist, it just takes a while to find her!

I also discovered that you never forget the songs or the people you loved. Also, that we were all a lot smarter as adolescents. I learned that the mountains always look like a backdrop to a girl who loves the city and that there are no subways running to Knoxville.

Maryville's a wonderful place to come for a good education. In fact, I firmly believe that the faculty at MC is solely responsible for making it the famous enviable environment it is. Administration comes in close at second. Historically, the Administration at MC has held the highest of ideals. I'm sure that that Maryville tradition will continue.

When I was fifteen, the only dream I had was coming to Maryville. I never understood why I wanted to go to this particular school, only that I wanted to desperately. Now I know why.

But, I'm glad it's over. The one thing you learn when you go somewhere new is how much you loved your homebase. It's time (click, click, click) and I'm so very glad and eager to go home again. I'm going back home, to my old habits and old friends. Home, where I'll read Anais Nin for the rest of my days, cherish my friends, write daily, and miss my dog. In the immortal words of e.e. cummings, "listen: There's a hell of a good universe next door; let's go."

1986 - 1987

Highland Echo

Vol. 71 No. 1 | MARYVILLE COLLEGE | Thursday, March 6, 1986

MC holds Phonathon

Maryville College is nearing the end of its annual Phonathon. This year's goal was $25,000 to support student financial aid.

In the Phonathon, students, faculty, and staff volunteer their time to call MC alumni across the country. The calls are to answer any questions alumni might have, to verify address information, and to ask for alumni support.

According to Tom Hudson, Assistant Director of Development, this year's Phonathon is very close to reaching its $25,000 goal. "We've raised $22,765 so far this week. Totals for the second week haven't been tabulated yet."

As far as exactly how the money is used, Hudson said, "All the money raised goes to unrestricted gifts and grants". An unrestricted gift is one that, in this case, goes to the financial aid office to be divided among the students.

This is the Phonathon's 11th year, and every year it tries to raise money for a specific area that needs support. For the secondyear in a row, the money is going for student aid. Hudson feels that this is an area in need of extra support. "With the rising cost of everything, aid is something very important."

"A lot of people think the federal government provides most of student aid, but in reality the school (does) most of it," Hudson said. $1.2 million of MC's annual $6 million budget goes for student aid. Seventy-five percent of this is MC money and 25 percent is federal money.

Participation in this year's Phonathon has improved over that of last year. Approximately 60 students and 20 faculty and staff members have participated so far. Only 51 students and 15 faculty and staff participated last year.

The average amount of each pledge has varied from night to night. By Wednesday of the first week the average amount was $62. But by Thursday night the average amount had dropped to $35. Hudson attributes this fact to return calls. These are calls which were not answered on the first attempt. These calls generally don't produce as much response as first time calls. Although the second week is traditionally slower than the first week, Hudson said that it is important to gain a good momentum during that first week.

While the Phonathon lasts only two weeks, the preparation for it takes around two months. This includes getting records straight and phones hooked up. Money for the Phonathon is included in the Development Offices annual budget.

Hudson emphasized that the Phonathon is much more than a fund-raiser. "I'm convinced the value of the Phonathon can't be compared to just dollar figures. One of the most vital aspects is the person to person contact with alumni." He also added that, "Nothing can take the place of that individual contact. That does a lot for callers on both ends."

The Phonathon is coordinated by Ellie Gilmore, Director of Development and Alumni Relations, and Hudson. "Even with all our coordination, we couldn't do it without the many volunteers," Hudson said. These volunteers, in addition to all the students and faculty, include Lynn Hachenberg, Dietra Cooper, and Libby Rankin. They are the people who handle all of the pledge cards and tabulate figures.

The Phonathon continues through Thursday, March 6.

Cindy Claborn takes advantage of the recent warm weather to study outside

Echo returns

by Sarah Schaefer

The first issue of the Highland Echo for the 1985-86 school year is the beginning of a progressive effort for a "quality publication", says editor Brian Linkous. The bi-weekly paper is being produced mainly through the work of Ms. Lax-Farr's journalism class.

The Highland Echo hopes to extend its coverage beyond MC events. Major Knoxville area events will be included in the paper to provide information of a greater variety. National and world news briefs will also be included in an effort to further inform MC students.

The Echo's slow beginning should not detract from a quality future. Linkous plans on building a lasting paper that will continue growing without interruption. He hopes that "the variety of coverage will generate student support so that never again will MC be without a student paper."

The scholars are coming

This weekend is Scholarship Weekend at Maryville College. Sorry, but only prospective scholars need apply.

Prospective students from across the Eastern United States will be on campus to compete for various scholarships. According to Steve King in the Admissions Office, "the kids will be competing for band, art, presidential, and church scholarships."

See Scholars pg. 5

Campus Events

Thursday, March 6--

10 a.m. - 5 p.m. Circle K Blood Drive. CCM.

12:30 p.m.-ACC Meeting

3 p.m.- Softball vs. Tennesse Tech at Sandy Spring

Friday, March 7--

3 p.m.- Men's Tennis vs. King College. Away

Saturday, March 8--

9:30 a.m. Freshman Fine Arts Competition. Music Hall

1 p.m.- Baseball vs. Tusculum. Home

1 p.m.- Softball vs. Tennessee Wesleyn. Home

8:15 p.m. -Phi Mu Alpha Recital. Music Hall

Sunday, March 9--

3-5 p.m. - Gallery Reception

Monday, March 10--

1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Union. Home

Tuesday, March11--

3 p.m. - Softball vs. LMU. Away

Thursday, March 13--

11 a.m. - CIV Randy Wells, Tenor, Lecture/Recital

3 p.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Lee College. Home

Friday, March 14--

1:30 p.m. - Baseball vs. E. Mennonite. Home

3 p.m. - Softball vs. Concord. Home

Saturday, March 15--

Concert Choir on Tour

1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Milligan. Away

HIGHLIGHTS...

Another side of Bathroom Graffiti - page 2

Reagan's Student Aid Cuts - page 3

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Student Aid Cuts

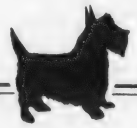
The President's 1987 budget leaves much to be desired for needy students attending postsecondary institutions.

The budget calls for drastic cuts in student-assistance programs to comply with the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings law. These cuts include $2 billion from grant and loan programs which would cause 1.36 million students to be dropped from these programs.

The President's budget also includes a $635 million cut in student aid funds which Congress has already appropriated for the current fiscal year.

Furthermore, the Reagan administration feels that it can justify these outrageous cuts under the pretense that such aid amounts for only 7 percent of total expenditures for education.

Anyone concerned with improving our lagging educational system must seriously question why this is far from a top priority of the Reagan administration.



We do not disagree with the President's aim of reducing the Federal deficit, for it is a problem that must be taken care of immediately. What we do disagree with is a budget that calls for major student aid cuts while at the same time calling for an increase in defense spending.

This budget will do more than eliminate students from upper income families from receiving aid; it will also affect students from lower income families. These are students whom banks will find potentially more costly to loan money to since the proposed budget eliminates full guaranty on student loans.

There is little doubt that under this budget many potential college students will have to forsake plans for higher education, not to mention current students who will be unable to finish their education. What will these individuals be forced to do? Will they enter the job market at minimum wage with little hope of escaping? It hardly seems a fitting future for our country's bright young minds.

If these arguments seem outrageous or unwarranted then so much the better; that is exactly what the President's student aid cuts are.

It appears to us that a president who puts his defense program before his educational program is lacking a sense of priority.

Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Brian Linkous
Assistant Editor . . . . . Sarah Schaefer
Business Manager . . . . . Jack Griffin
Sports Editor . . . . . Rick Carver
Layout Editor . . . . . Sarah Ferguson
Photo Editors . . . . . Kathy Hudson, Jess Kane
Typist . . . . . Karen Williams
Staff Writers . . . . . Lynn King, Lisa Harvey
Advisor . . . . . Ms. Lax-Farr

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

Another view of....

Bathroom grafitti

by Brian Linkous

Some things never cease to amaze me. I've been in college three years and I've seen a lot of things that amaze me. Now some of these things I can partially understand, for example I can understand when I see a food fight in the dining hall. Most of the time the food is only good for throwing.

But what I'm talking about right now is the graffiti in the bathrooms. Come on, you've all seen it before. Half of you are probably even responsible for it.

Graffiti on the bathroom walls, who cares. This is probably what you are saying to yourself right now. Well, in a sense you're right.

Sure, it's only some ink on the wall that can be covered up by the maintenance people; the same ones you bitch about because they're never around when you need them. They are probably not around because they're out cleaning us silly messes like graffiti.

When I was in high school, writing on walls was a "fashionable" thing to do. I guess I never was in fashion because I never did it. But I always thought that when I reached an institute of higher learning, like MC, graffiti would be a thing of the past. I was wrong.

I'll admit it; I've read those writings on the wall just like everyone else has. But I still cannot understand what possible satisfaction their "authors" receive from publishing work in a toilet. In most cases that's where it belongs anyway.

What kind of people do these things? Are these the same people who can't pass English 130, so they go to the toilet to commit their sentence fragments and dangle their modifiers without the careful scrutiny of a professor?

If these people were half as creative in the classroom as they are in the bathroom, MC might really have something. But until this happens, I suggest that the bathroom poets lobby to get a Graffiti 101 class added to next year's schedule so that they can channel their energies toward something more creative.

I don't think anyone will miss reading it, and I certainly don't think that the Manitenance people will miss cleaning it up.

Pease joins MC

by Sarah Schaefer

So what is the purpose of a Vice President of Student Affairs? Well Ron Pease, Maryville College's newest Vice-President, sees his job as coordinator of the Student Affairs staff and all related activities. Student Affairs involved with the out of classroom life of all MC students.

Maryville did have a Vice President of Student Affairs. After we lost the last V.P. several years ago, Student Affairs functioned under the direction of the Dean of Students. Now Pease works with Dean Richardson, Chaplain Earl Rash; Sharon Crane, Director of Student Life; Bruce Guillaume, Director of the Institute of Lifestyle Development; Jean Jones, Director of Career Planning and Placement; and the Health Service. With this administrative staff working closely with the students and faculty, Pease hopes to build a stronger sense of "community".

One key to a community is "communication between the Student Affairs staff and the students," said Pease. This means that Student Affairs wants to hear your gripes and your ideas for change and improvement. If a particular solution does not seem feasible, Mr. Pease will consider all suggested alternatives and assist in the implementation of new programs. If an idea does not work, then he will "continue working with the students" to find another solution.

Pease said his philosophy is that, "Success comes when all community members stretch toward making the most of their personal potential."

ZACK'S
FAMOUS FROZEN YOGURT

...Invites All Maryville College Students To Enjoy Low-Calorie & 8% Fat Free Yogurt And All The Toppings. You'll Especially Enjoy Our Pina Colada, Strawberry, And Oreo Shakes!

1707 RED FOOD CENTER
984-0241

Coupon RECEIVE 50¢ DISCOUNT ON BANANA SPLIT, OR A BIG ZACK Coupon

Reagan plans to cut aid

Washington D.C.

President Reagan's budget for higher education would impose major reductions on student aid programs with a "triple-whammy", according to Charles Saunders Jr., Vice President of the American Council on Education.

Saunders says that proposed changes in the Guaranteed Student Loan Program threaten the collapse of the entire program, which accounts for 62 percent of total federal financial assistance. Banks may pull out of the program if the special allowance is reduced and the in-school interest subsidy is eliminated as the budget proposes.

The current program, costing $3 billion, supports over $9 billion in annual loan volume for over 3 million students.

Under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction act, some 1,186,000 students would be dropped from eligibility for other programs already appropriated for FY 86 which are scheduled for allotment this fall.

The cuts would include a reduction of Pell Grants, supplemental grants, and college work study programs. State student incentive programs and direct loan capital contributions would be eliminated under the proposed budget.

The reduction of Pell awards will be necessary because the administration is not requesting a supplemental appropriation to make up a $215 million funding shortfall and the $154 million cut by Gramm-Rudman. This will drop 290,000 middle-income eligibles from the program and reduce awards for another 500,000 recipients with family income between $12,000 and $20,000.

Revisions would cut another 304,000 awards by eliminating the State Student Incentive Grant program; 202,000 awards by eliminating capital contributions to the Direct Loan program; 271,000 awards by cutting supplemental grants $155 million? and 119,000 awards by cutting college work study $90 million from the original appropriation.

The third phase of the administration's triple whammy against student aid programs, would take effect in Academic Year 1987-1988, Saunders says.

Further proposed restrictions of Pell Grant eligibility would cut funding by $800 million below the amount needed to fund a $2,100 maximum, making it serve 816,000 fewer eligibles than the current program.

Supplemental grants and college work study would be eliminated, and replaced by a new work/grant program which would provide 681,000 fewer awards and require institutions to provide 50 percent matching funds by 1990-91.

The direct loan program would also be replaced by a new, and substantially higher-interest laon program which would serve an estimated 411,000 fewer students.

The administration's revised Guaranteed Loan Program would serve an estimated 3,251,000 borrowers (619,000 fewer than currently), who would pay interest at T-bill rates until the third year of repayment, with in-school interest accrued and compounded; T-bill rates plus 3 percent thereafter (currently, borrowers are charged 8 percent, paid by the government while in school).

Eligibility for unsubsidized PLUS loans would be expanded, increasing the number of borrowers participating by an estimated 343,000.

The FY 87 proposals also assume the elimination of all graduate fellowships.

One call does it all!™

DOMINO'S PIZZA

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE!

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

Coke® 16oz.

$1

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 4-1-86

Fast, Free Delivery™
407 W. Broadway
983-0000

ENTERTAINMENT

Film

MARCH
6 "The River"
10 "Conan"
11 "The Glass Menagerie"
12 "Vanished"
13 "The Natural"
14 "Willie Wonka & The Chocolate Factory"
24 "The Cotton Club"
25 TBA ("Oklahoma")
26 "Rumble Fish"
27 "Country"
28 "The Dark Crystal"
31 "Alien"

Movies in parentheses are tentative.
All movies are shown at 8:00 in the Snack Bar.

Art

This is Dulin's 18th year of exhibiting such work. The first exhibit, in 1965, sought to stimulate creativity by giving artists a chance to exhibit and sell their works.

The exhibit allows art enthusiasts to buy art which has already been selected as "noteworthy." The prices of the exhibits range from $70-$900.

The Dulin Gallery is located at 3100 Kingston Pike. Hours are Tuesday through Friday from noon until 4 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays until 5 p.m. Admission is $1 for adults and free on Sundays.

Three East Tennessee artists have been chosen among the purchase award winners in the Dulin Gallery of Art's annual National Works on Paper Competition and Exhibition, March 14-April 6, 1986.

The local winners, Diedre Austin, Andrew Rubin, and Greg Stewart who were chosen by artist and Northwestern University Professor Ed Paschke, will have their works on permanent display at Dulin. The works include prints, drawings, hand-made paper, photographs and mixed media.

A movie for everyone

by Brian Linkous

It has 11 Academy Award nominations, it's based on a Pulitzer Prize winning novel, and it's directed by Steven Speilberg. These three facts alone should be incentive enough for even the part-time movie-goer to see "The Color Purple", but it has this and much more.

Set in a rural southern community in the early 1900's "The Color Purple" focuses on the struggles of a black woman (Whoopie Goldberg) to overcome the cruelty of her husband (Danny Glover). Goldberg and Glover do a superb job of working opposite each other to form a contrast which becomes the essense of the entire movie.

Besides an ample cast of talented new faces, the setting adds a sharp quality to the story.

Unlike many of Speilberg's special effects movies, "The Color Purple" was shot mainly on location in Union County, North Carolina. In fact, the scenery is often as absorbing as the story.

It doesn't stop here though. In addition to the cast and the setting, the musical score is also superb. The music varies from African tribal music to southern jazz.

Regardless of what you look for in a movie, "The Color Purple" has something for everyone. In these days of cheap action films, it's rare to find a movie which is both funny and intense, happy and sad. This is certainly a movie worth experiencing.

Book Review

J. Edward Kidder Jr's book The Art of Japan, is an excellent introduction to the fascinating history of art in Japan. Its text is quite readable and provides a good, solid survey of artwork done by the Japanese.

Having spent a semester in Japan I often heard Kidder referred to as a scholar of Japanese art. Kidder, a graduate of Maryville College, has written several books on this subject.

As for the book itself, The Art of Japan is very well balanced in its treatment of the various periods of Japanese art. The art of the prehistoric Jomon people is covered quite well considering there is very little knowledge about this era.

The photographs throughout the book are in color and give a good illustration of the various themes in Japanese art. The book also contains close-up pictures of many sculptures and temples, which is good because it gives the reader an idea of how intricately detailed Japanese art is. The photographs of beautiful Japanese paintings are also done very well.

The works of the famous Japanese artist Sesshu are thoroughly examined by Kidder's book. But if the book has a real weakness, it is in its shallow treatment of the Daibutsu (sculptures of great size depicting the Great Buddha) at Nara and Samakura.

However, the book is generally well done and adequately covers the different periods of Japanese art. In addition to giving the reader an interesting look at Japanese art, The Art of Japan also shows the reader the beauty of Japan through its fine examples of Japanese artistic expression. Kidder's latest book should be read by anyone interested in learning more about Japanese art.

Area Events

The Dulin Gallery of Art is sponsoring "Directions in American Painting, 1875-1925" through March 9.

The 115th edition of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus opens Tuesday, March 11 at the Knoxville Civic Coliseum. Advance tickets for all performances are on sale at the Coliseum Box Office and all area Ticketron outlets. Ticket prices are $7.50 and $9.00.

While appearing in Knoxville, the Circus will hold admission interviews for its Clown College and auditions for female dancers on March 13 at noon at the Civic Coliseum. For more information phone (202) 364-5220.

The Buddy Rich Band will perform Friday, March 7 at 8:15 p.m. in the Bijou Theater. The concert is part of the Bijou's Jazz Series and is co-sponsered by the Dogwood Arts Festival. Tickets are $12.50 at Bijou box office.

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's "The Magic Flute" will be performed Friday, March 7 and Saturday, March 8 at the Clarence Brown Theater University of Tennessee. Tickets are $7.00, $4.00 and $2.00 at the UT Central Ticket Office.

MC's first King and Queen of Mardi Gras enjoy themselves at the recent dance in Lloyd.

School News

-March 12, 1:00-7:00 CCM: Graham Studios will be taking yearbook pictures of students who missed the January photography sessions. Also, any faculty or staff who want formal pictures should have them taken at this time.

-March 11. 10:00-12:00 & 1:00-2:00 in the yearbook room (second floor, Fayerweather Hall): underclassmen who had their pictues taken in January may see the photographs to decide if they want them reshot on March 12.

Any students who have color or black & white photographs to submit to the yearbook should put them in Victor Oakley's box (2547).

February Meetings held

by Lynn King

MC students recently had the opportunity to experience a unique religious adventure, as well as a Maryville College tradition dating back more than a century.

The annual February Meetings were held February 16-20, revolving around the theme "Centering: Pathways to Spiritual Life." Exploration of this theme involved activities such as a sunrise service, silent breakfast with readings from the Mystics, and an introduction to the diversity of approaches to worship. Developed by a committee of students and faculty organized by Pastor Earl Rash, the meetings were led by the Reverend Geoffrey R. M. Skrinar, a 1968 Maryville College graduate and current rector of the church of St. Andrew, Staten Island, New York.

February meetings have been a Maryville College tradition since 1876.

Themes have customarily been chosen to reflect the tone of the times, as evidenced by such examples as "Days of Heaven upon Earth" in 1898, "What is Pearl Harbour?" in 1944, and "Loss of Identity and New Styles of Life" in 1967. The meetings are currently supported by an endowment of the Joh Vant Stephens, Jr. Memorial Lecture Fund, in honor of this former member of the Maryville College Board of Directors.

Like most long-enduring traditions, February Meetings have evolved and changed during their 100-plus years in existence. In regard to the future of the meetings, some considerable changes are being contemplated due to apparent student apathy and lack of interest. Whatever the outcome of the alterations, however, February Meetings are definitely a Maryville Colllege tradition that is here to stay.

Dr. and Mrs. Anderson talk with Rev. Skrinar, leader of the February Meetings

Scholars

The students and their parents will arrive on Friday. That evening they will be treated to dinner, a reception, and entertainment by the Playmakers. Then on Saturday, the students will begin competition for scholarships. The remainder of Saturday will include a campus tour, a scholarship banquet, and a dance. The students will depart on Sunday after brunch.

In a survey of last year's prospective students, the responses to Scholarship Weekend were very positive, King said. "Most of the students say they like to meet MC students and attend MC events."

According to King, Scholarship Weekend is very influential in attracting students to MC. "A lot of kids come even if they don't get a scholarship," King said.

Besides meeting MC students the prospects will also have a chance to hear some MC students speak at Saturday's banquet.

MC students Rick Carver, Kati Tabor, and Neal McBrayer will be speaking to the students and their parents. In addition, John Wright and Trent Gilmore will perform,

Julio's
Hungary
Italian
NOW OPEN
Monday Saturday
11-11
PIZZA COLD BEER
SALAD BARPASTA
SANDWICHES
CARRY OUT

	10"	12"	14"
Cheese	$3.35	$4.75	$6.50
Extra Items	.50	.60	.70

407 Church Street Ext.
Maryville, TN
615/977-7197

John Julies
Proprietor

MC students face cuts

The Maryville College community is watching President Reagan's budget proposals very closely. If the president's budget is passed, Maryville College will feel the effects.

Dan Perkins, director of financial aid, said that he is definitely concerned about the proposed student aid cuts. "If President Reagan gets the cuts he's asking for, we will feel the effects."

Perkins said he was not sure how much the college would be affected. He added that, "I don't think that the president will get all of the cuts he is asking for. But there will probably be some cuts that could hurt Maryville College."

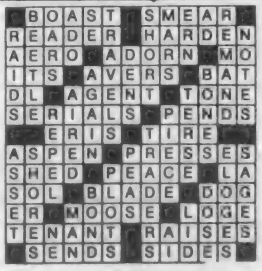
The threat of student aid cuts is something that Perkins said his office is faced with every year. "It is just too early right now to say what will happen," Perkins sais.

But at least one expert in Washington D.C. fears that the president's student aid cuts will mean serious trouble for America.

"If you cut off access to education, it's like eating your seed corn," said Dr. Dallas Martin, Jr., executive director of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators.

"At some point we all lose," Martin said. "You'll have more people who are unemployed, on public assistance, in prisons, in mental institutions. Believe me, it's cheaper with education. me, it's cheaper with education."

Martin predicts that funding cuts will eventually hurt America in many ways. He said that higher education could become too expensive for middle-income families to afford, leaving many jobs unfilled because there will not be enough educationally-qualified workers to fill them.



Martin stresses that the presiden's budget is only a proposal, and "there's a long process between proposed and reality."

"It's unfortunate that the timing of the budget is the same as when many students are planning tc go to college, Martin added.

"No one has specific numbers but if you look at trends, we've seen a decline in the past few years in certain enrollments."

According to Martin, three-fourths of the families witl children in college use their current income to help pay their portion of college expenses What this means, he said, is that these families are already making sacrifices such as in food, clothing and housing.

At Maryville College, 80 percent of the students receive student aid. The average amount of each aid package is $5,700.

SPORTS

Tennis coaches serve up prospects

by Lisa Harvey

Both second year men's tennis coach, Steve Taylor, and second year women's coach, Dr. David Cartlidge, have an optimistic outlook on this year's season.

Coach Taylor said "this spring the Scots Men's tennis team's hopes are resting on two returning lettermen and seven newcomers to the Highlander courts." He said that the team's challenge ladder has begun, with the members competing for the top six positions.

Taylor said that returning letterman Don Dove's serve and volley game have improved, making him much more competitive.

The other returning member, Sam Cornett, taught tennis for the Blount County Parks and Rec. Dept. last summer, and has imporved his game as well. Coach Taylor hopes that Cornett will be able to contribute to the team even though his lab schedule interferes with the practice and match schedules.

The team has added a JV student-coach in the person of Glenn Stout. Taylor said that Stout is working on improving the basic shots and serves of some of the less-experienced players. He also conducts some of the drills and strategy sessions for the team.

Coach Taylor said that the team has practiced on the John Sevier Omnicourts in "snowstorms, rain storms, and high winds," and added "this team has demonstrated a spirit of determination that will certainly help when we reach the ODAC finals in April."

Coach Taylor said of the team, "We've been pleasantly surprised this year, and if some of our promising recruits come to MC next year, we will ocntinue to build a competitive men's tennis team for years to come."

Coach Cartlidge listed his returning letter winners as Kathy Balent, Margaret Calloway, Julie Dodd, Pam Gunter, Lisa Harvey, Jackie Osborne, and Teresa Petitt. Rounding out the squad are new players Raina Boring, Jessie Kane, and Jody Mullen.

Cartlidge mentioned the return of Balent, who did not play last year, and the total number of returning players as indicators of improvement over last year. Also, the addition of Boring, who has potential as a number one player, and the assistance of Kane and Mullen in adding depth to the squad as other strengths.

The women's team is young which, according to Cartlidge, is both good and bad. It is good because it helps to establish a solid foundation, but it is bad because the team could use more experience.

Cartlidge said "We do not know the current state of our opponents, but if they are about as strong as they were last year, we will compete better than we did last year." He also said that the schedule is stronger this with some new additions.

As a wrap-up, Cartlidge added that the team is beginning to build a women's tennis program at MC which can compete with the perennial leaders in the WIAC.

"We have a long way to go in this respect. But I am satisfied at the way that the returning players have grown in skill and attitude. No matter what our win/loss record will show at the end of the season, we already know that we will be playing much better tennis than we did last year," Cartlidge said.

The men's team begins with an away match on March 7, follow- at 10:00 a.m. The women's first match is home, against Bethel College (MN) on March 24, at 1:30.

Depository Libraries . . .

BRINGING GOVERNMENT INFORMATION TO YOU

Information from the Federal Government on subjects ranging from agriculture to zoology is available at Depository Libraries across the nation.

You can visit these libraries and use the Depository collection without charge.

To find one in your area, contact your local library or write to the Federal Depository Library Program, Office of the Public Printer, Washington, DC 20401.

The Federal Depository Library Program

This program is supported by The Advertising Council and is a public service of this publication

Lady Scots end anxiously

You'd think that a team finishing with a 2-24 record would consider itself mediocre at best, if not a failure. You'd also think that this same team, while losing three of eight players to graduation (two of them all conference performers) would be hoping for some catastrophe to delay the start of its next season. Not so with our Lady Scots. In fact, Coach Sharon Arrington is anxious when she thinks about her team's possibilities for next year.

Anxious?!? Come again??? Well, the Lady Scots may have been losers on the scoreboard, but the gains that they made in character, and the rebirth of their program are what made the '85-'86 season a success. Coach Arrington commented that she was impressed with the overall dedication and competitiveness of her team.

"They stuck with me and with each other. They're tough competitors. They gave me as much as they had to give," she said. She also added that the team learned how to stick together for as we know, it's easy to stand by someone when times are good, but when times get tough, it is the true winner that stands by your side. Arrington also noted a great deal of physical improvement in her players who will return in 1986-87.

If all of these accomplishments were so marvelous, then why didn't they win more? Well, their schedule was extremely difficult. They played several tough oppenents, seven of them in consecutive road games. Another reason is that two major injuries occurred before the season began, limiting the squad to eight players. Very few teams can win with eight players. Of those eight players, only four had prior college playing experience.

That boils down to 50 percent of the team being new and unfamiliar with each other. Past recruiting was also a problem. Only one member returning to play in '85-'86 was recruited for basketball purposes. The others were good all-around athletes learning a new sport, freshman, or walk-ons with an interest in the game. It is a true wonder that they even won at all with these forces stacked against them.

The season started slowly but ended on an upbeat as the Lady Scots advanced to the semi-final round of their conference tournament. They were definitley and improved team at the season's end. Let's look at the members of the team and their contributions to the building of future success in MC basketball. The following are Coach Arrington's post-season reflections on her players. Assistant Coach Mimi Chesney--"My right arm. Not enough good things can be said about her. She's a good role model and she is always positive and constantly supportive."

Senior, Denise Penzkofer--"Penzy," an All-Conference, All-Tournament player, was a positive force for the Lady Scots. "She gave all that she could give. Her honors are only a small portion of what she deserved. She's very dedicated..

Senior, Penny Head--The general and floor leader of the Lady Scots. Another All-Conference player who gave 110 percent every second of every game. "I've never seen a more determined athlete--Ever."

Senior, Cindy Blair--"Excellent role player who did more than expected. She's a good all-around player who is highly respected by her peers."

Junior, Peggy Sackett--"Has a super eye for the basket. Overcame the adversity of being new and yet not a freshman. Learned and improved a lot.

Junior, Nancy Koehl--"Stuck with it. Worked hard to improve. She learned court sense and I look forward to her becoming a leader next year.

Freshman, Gay Fretag--"A very skilled atulete who will be a standout. We only got a glimpse of what she is capable of."

Freshman, Tammy Ward--"Has talent and the tools to become a potent all-around player. She is a very hard worker."

Freshman, Monica Cayo--"My brightest light. She's a coaches dream. She's a good hustler with a great positive attitude."

With such enthusiasm and optimism about the future, you can see that the Lady Scots will be ready to do damage to opponents' records next year. Until that time, they will remain anxious to apply what they have accomplished in the renaissance season of '85-'86.

Jock Talk

A commentary

By Rick Carver

It's been a long time since I've had the privilege to write another "Jock Talk" column. So long, in fact, that it was difficult to find a topic to write on. Let's face it, a lot has happened in the athletic department since the spring of 1985. Four football coaches were hired; a new trainer was hired; a new soccer coach and sports information director were added; a tutoring coordinator for athletes appeared; the volleyball coach vacated her position; the athletic director got canned; Coach Lambert became the new athletic director; a new head football coach was named; a new baseball coach was appointed (finally); and the Scots remained in the senseless old Dominion Athletic Conference. But in spite of all these important changes, the subject that most affected the athletic department was the lack of a student newspaper.

Without a doubt, the lack of a newspaper adversly affected other areas of campus life too, but its greatest impact was felt on the fall and winter athletes. Those "little" things like game recaps and feature articles on the standout athletes mean a great deal to the Division III performer. I'm sure that a simple Highland Echo article about a star player may not seem like much, but consider the fact that at MC, the chances are slim to none that a fighting Scot or Lady Scot will receive much attention from the outside media. This is not to say that the Daily Times and the Knoxville papers are not doing their jobs. They are, and they are serving the majority of the people who keep them employed. But Maryville College athletics must take the back seat to area high school athletics and the University of Tennessee sports because MC simply is not as newsworthy.

Therefore, some ink in the Echo is about all of the press that an MC athlete can hope for. Granted, any athlete who competes only for headlines should not be allowed to wear a uniform, but a pat on the back from the fans or readers saying, "Good job" or "Your dedication to your sport is exciting to watch." would be nice.

The reason for not having a newspaper? Some mental giant decided that the quality of the paper was not up to some sort of specifications, so it needed to be stopped completely until a quality advisor could be found. Improvements are necessary in every facet of life, and I'll admit that the Echo did have some pretty trashy issues. But are a few mistakes reason to completely shut down? I've never heard an athlete (who represents approximately 40 percent of the MC population) complain that recognition they received in the Echo was of poor quality. Furthermore, I don't recall the student body being asked what they thought of the Echo. If the students were asked, did they say to quit printing? I seriously doubt it, and anyone who believes such a thing should awaken from their world.

Other excuses are given to the delay of the revitalized Echo. The lack of student interest and the lack of a quality editor and other rationizations for this decision are nothing but grade A fertilizer.

The damage to the MC athletes has already been done, and trying to correct it after the fact is futile Hopefully, though, the people responsible for this incompetent act might try to at least apologize or offer congratulations for a job well done to the following athletes who performed superbly this year:

DeeDee Davis and Lisa Harvey--All -Conference volleyball players

Chris Johannson--All-ODAC tight end in football

John McLeod, Bob Aucker, Marty Carpenter, Pat Moyer, Ronnie Ramsey, Jeff Goethe, Jeff Seagle, Scott Cinnamon, Jeff Collins, Glen Humphries, Patt Foster, and Steve Saylor--senior football players.

Charlie Gumula--Senior Soccer player

Rethabile Masilo--All-ODAC Soccer player

Cindy Blair--Senior basketball player

Penny Head and Denise Penzkofer--All-Conference and Senior basketball players

Ray Burnett, Paul Mills, Tom Robinson--Senior basketball players

Clay Freels--All-ODAC in basketball

Thanks to all of you for performing so well and for dedicating yourselves to the point of excellence. Let's hope this inconsiderate blunder never happens again so that others may receive the recognition to which they are entitled.

Photo by Victor Oakley

Scots battle Washington and Lee players for the rebound in Roanoke, Va. The Scots lost 69-65.

SCOTS finish third

by Rick Carver

The 1985-86 basketball campaign ended with the Scots finishing in a third place tie for ODAC honors. The team ended with a 14-12 overall record and a 9-7 record in the conference.

Coach Randy Lambert's assesment of the team's finish was one of mixed emotions. "I was disappointed that we didn't win the ODAC tournament, but we showed good enthusiasm and effort. Considering our losses graduation and the injuries to key players, it was a very rewarding season.

> "I was disappointed that we did not win the ODAC.."
>
> Coach Lambert

A good bit of the rewards that Lambert found came through his seniors and the leadership that they demonstrated. Lambert said that senior players Ray Burnett. Paul Mills, and Tom "T.R." Robinson were the keys to the success of the season.

"They did much more for the program than statistics will ever show. They touched all of us with their spiritual and enthusiastic leadership. I hate to see them go. They deserve every bit of recognition they get."

Lambert commented further on these team members: Tom Robinson- "His contributions cannot be measured by statistics. I will not miss his practical jokes but his leadership and intense desire to win will be missed by everybody." Ray Burnette- "He represents the ideal role model of a senior for the younger players. His spiritual leadership and high standards will be missed." Paul Mills- "As a member of the 1000 point club and with close to 500 assists, you can see that he had an outstanding career. His leadership on the floor was a luxury."

With the losses of these key players, the outlook for 86-87 might appear bleak. "With the number of good players returning, we are two deep at every position. I will have the luxury of recruiting to complement the team with depth, Lambert said optimistically.

Another bright spot for the future of the Scot's basketball program is the quality of the returning players. All-ODAC performer Clay Freels will return with his 20.6 scoring average and his 7.9 rebounding average. Steve Tensi, whom Lambert says "has the potential to be one of the best big men in the conference". also returns.

Other returning players include Dennis Varhall, George Lancho, Jeff White. and standout freshman players Pat Heldman, Scott Fletcher, Dean Walsh, and Kent Thomas.

The talent should be back next season, and the Scots will be looking forward to improving their 1985-86 performance. Enthusiasm and optimism are the keys to this program. In fact the enthusiasm is so great that Coach Lambert said "I'd like to start practice tomorrow."

Softball in swing

The Lady Scots softball team is already breaking records this year. For the first time in its history, the team will play an entire fast-pitch schedule, and they are confident that they will meet the challenge.

Coach Sharon Arrington is enthusiastic about the new season and believes that the team has many strengths, including "talent, depth, dedication, and hitters all through the line-up."

The team will be playing Division II and NAIA teams, and Arrington predicts that "the team will be very competitive," and she anticipates a winning season. She said that this competitiveness will be exhibited when the team takes the field.

The Lady Scots will open their season March 6 with a double-header at Tennessee Tech and will play Tennessee Wesleyan in a double-header at home (Sandy Springs) Saturday, March 8 at 1:00.

The 1986 Lady Scots include Penny Head and Denise Penzkofer, seniors; Michelle Davis, Sherrie Farmer, Belle Ferguson, and Nancy Koehl, juniors; Donna Clancy, Andrea Dye, Sarah Ferguson, and DeAnn Hargis, sophomores: Gay Fretag, Kristi Self, Shellie Stoddard, and Tammy Ward, freshmen.

THE BACK PAGE

As I See It

A commentary

by Patrick Moyer

Violations of NCAA rules in the past decade have grown to epidemic proportions. Colleges and universities across the nation have been stripped of scholarships, forbidden television coverage, and eliminated from post-season bowl games or playoff appearances. These are pretty stiff penalties, right? Not always. Please don't get me wrong, I'm not an advocate of breaking rules; however, there is a side of the story that some people are unaware of.

Last year the university of Florida, Clemson, Tulane, TCU, Gerogia, and a number of other colleges were guilty of NCAA violations. Most of the problems fall into the area of money athletes have received "100 handshakes" after a good performance on the field, or often a player is extended privileges not available to the non-athlete. In a recent investigation former UT quarterback Tony Robinson was found to have allegedly received unlimited use of a credit card and motor vehicle. Most of these privileges involve alumni who feel like helping out their alma mater.

Ticket sales is another issue that has arisen recently. Athletes are permitted four complimentary tickets for each game. These tickets are intended for family or friends but often they are sold. Sometimes they are sold for $10, $20, and sometimes $100. In any case, if an athlete sells his or her tickets it is an NCAA violation. The key word here is athlete. If a non-athlete sells his tickets, then it is perfectly acceptable. Why are such rules allowed to exist?

Another problem area is drugs. Athletes have been involved in the illegal use and trafficking of narcotics. A study at Vanderbilt University showed that a number of their football players have allegedly used steroids. Marijuana, Quaaludes, and cocaine have also been targeted in investigations at many schools. This is a federal offense and should be treated as such.

The problem I have is with some of the more minor violations. Did you know that if a teacher or a coach lends an athlete his or her car that its an NCAA violation?

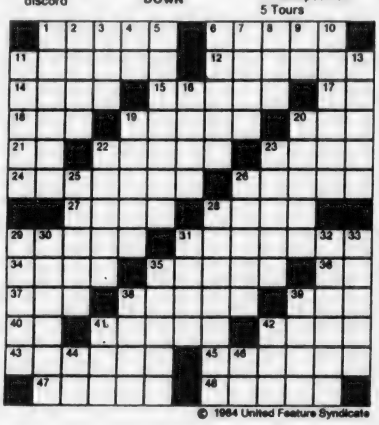
If someone connected with your school lends you money, should that be breaking the rules? Well, it is. Athletes on scholarship are prohibited by the NCAA to have jobs. How are they supposed to earn money for expenses not covered by scholarship grants? Parents can only provide so much help before the well runs dry.

My solution is for the NCAA to "lighten up." If the law is broken as in the case with drugs, then I feel that the court should throw the book at the offender. But if an athlete wants to sell his tickets for $100 apeice, then let him. Who does it hurt if an athlete makes a little money?

The NCAA needs to limit its involvement with athletes to the field of play and refrain from poking into their personal lives. The non-athlete is given the freedom to borrow and sell without fear of breaking rules.

The athlete, however, is forced to watch his every move. Just what seperates the athlete from the non-athlete anyway, a pair of shoulderpads or a basketball?

CROSS WORD PUZZLE



FROM COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

ACROSS

1 Brag
6 Besmirch
11 Schoolbook
12 Solidify
14 Danish island
15 Decorate
17 A state: abbr.
18 Possessive pronoun
19 Declares
20 Cudgel
21 Deciliter: abbr.
22 Representative
23 Pitch
24 Continued stories
26 Awaits settlement
27 Goddess of discord
28 Weary
29 Tremulous
31 Irons
34 Lean-to 35 Tranquility
36 Note of scale
37 The sun
38 Sharp-witted fellow
39 Canine
40 Teutonic deity
41 Antlered animal
42 Theater box
43 Occupant
45 Rears
47 Dispatches
48 Takes one's part

DOWN

1 Insect
2 Paddles
3 Fuss
4 Helm position
5 Tours
6 Curt
7 Planet
8 Sea eagle
9 Paid notice
10 Recommit
11 Forays
13 Memoranda
16 Lairs
19 Once more
20 Parts of skeleton
22 Ventilated
23 Brief
25 Repulse
26 Fragment
28 Merchants
29 Item of property
30 Coastlines
31 Edible seeds
32 Encomiums
33 Wise persons
35 Parcels of land
38 Tie
39 Portion of medicine
41 Provide crew
42 Cover
44 Compass point
46 Three-toed sloth

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Stevens comes home

by Rick Carver

Coach Larry Stevens was recently hired to replace Bobby Saylor as head football coach. He comes to MC from Eastern Kentucky University where he served for two years as an offensive backfield coach.

Stevens, a 1972 graduate of MC, said his return to the college was like a homecoming. "My wife is from here, and my family is from here. It's good to be back in Maryville."

When asked of his goals for the fighting Scots, Steven's replied, "the immediate need is to bring in more athletes." Such a statement would lead you to believe that he is a recruiter. Well, he is.

Coach Stevens said that he wants to bring in 40 to 50 recruits immediately to increase the size of the team. He also said that his recruiting style is one in which he will find the best athlete available who is "not a marginal student", which indicates that he is searching for a good all-aroung person, and not just a "football player."

Other goals that Stevens has set for himself and the Scots are the curbing of the attrition rate, stability in a staff of six coaches, and to become competitive in the ODAC. Of the former, Stevens said "We need to maintain squad size and to stop athletes from leaving before they have obtained their degree." Of the latter, he remarked, "I hope to consistently win and be near the top of the conference. We can and will compete in the ODAC."

Stevens cautioned that his goal may be two years down the road. "We're very weak fundamentality. We need to completely rebuild and get a good, sound base fundamentally. If you have a good base fundamentally, winning will sustain itself."

In terms of strategy, Stevens believes in a balanced attack offensively. He said that fans should expect about a 50-50 run pass ratio next fall. He will employ the "I formation" and will give the opposition multiple looks, depending on the athletes available.

As for defense, the balanced approach is again his style. Stevens said that a great deal of the defensive strategy will be done by Defensive Coordinator Jim Pavao. Coach Stevens also stressed that the specialty team would receive an equal amount of attention. "Games are won and lost in the kicking game. I believe strongly in a good kicking game." he said.

Coach Stevens' personal interests include fishing, golfing, and going to theatrical and musical productions. He commented that he likes the qualities of a positive outlook, good sense of humor, and well-roundedness in the people he deals with. He said that he hoped he could exhibit those qualities to the people he meets.

Stevens also said that he would like to be remembered as a considerate family man who worked hard.

His wife Kenna and their two sons, Jesse and Joseph are all happy to be here at MC. Welcome home, coach.

Larry Stevens MC head football coach

Highland Echo

Vol. 71 No. 2 | Maryville College | Thursday, April 3, 1986

Facelift for lounge

by Karen Williams

The Commuter Lounge in Fayerweather is getting a face-lift. The commuters want to make the lounge comfortable and usuable without spending a lot of money. Their spokesman, Joe Chamberlain, said that this is the "first effort of the group to accomplish anything" this year.

The commuters are a loosely organized group out of necessity, since they live off campus. Some students are even unaware that the lounge is available for their use. The lounge, however, is not necessarily restricted to use by commuters. Campus groups such as the Fellowship of Christian Athletes have used the lounge for their meetings.

The face-lift will consist of a coat of paint, and the addition of curtains, tables, lamps, lockers, study carrels, and a refrigerator. These things are not new, but things from around campus not currently in use. Chamberlain said that the aim is to make the lounge "aesthetically pleasing to the eye as well as functional." When finished, the lounge will be a pleasant place to eat lunch, talk, and study.

There are approximately 130 commuters attending MC this year. Chamberlain said that "once the lounge is accessible and aesthetically pleasing, it will be used quite a bit." Accessibility is one problem that Chamberlain said must be addressed immediately.

He wants to make the lounge available at nights and on weekends for use by the Continuing Education (CE) students.

The commuter organization is planning a work session for Saturday, April 12, for painting and general clean up of the lounge.

Other events in the planning stages include: fielding a team for May Madness Weekend and having an open house. Details will be forthcoming in follow-up stories in the "Echo."

One of the special features of the lounge will be a bulletin board. The board will be a communications device for the commuters. It will post such things as information on available rides to share, meeting notices, and books for sale or trade. Chamberlain said that he would make a point of having a copy of the "Echo" available in the lounge, since features such as the calendar of events is very helpful to commuter students in particular.

The commuter students have different needs and these needs must be met in different ways. Ron Pease, head of student affairs, recognized this and suggested that the commuters get organized so that they could have a single voice on campus. Chamberlain said that Pease is ready to listen to them and is eager to help in any way.

Donna Davis, the college business manager, has been the main driving force in finding materials for the lounge. Chamberlain said that she offers "good suggestions and good imput."

Beck receives fellowship

Dr. Charlotte H. Beck

Dr. Charlotte Beck, professor of English at Maryville College, has received her second James Still Fellowship for study at the University of Kentucky. Her grant is one of five such $2,600 fellowships for Appalachian college faculty recently announced by the Appalachian Center at the University of Kentucky.

The Still Fellowship, begun at UK in 1980, are named in honor of the Appalachian poet-novelist James Still, a resident of Dead Mare Branch in Knott County, Ky., for more than 40 years. Funding comes from a grant to the Appalachian Center given by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

While at UK from June 23 through August 27, Dr. Beck will study "the fugitive-agrarian legacy and the role such writers as Still, Ransom, Davidson, Warren, and Stuart played in it." Dr. Beck plans to use her studies in a chapter of her next book.

Dr. Russell Parker, Professor of HIstory at MC, has also been a Still Fellowship recipient. Dr. Beck said that she was pleased to receive the Fellowship and encouraged other MC faculty to apply for the grant.

Dr. Beck is currently serving as president of the Tennessee Philological Association. She has been invited by Gov. Lamar Alexander to participate in the Tennessee Writers Conference from October 9-11, in connection with Homecoming '86.

The Still Fellowships and the Appalachian College program enable the faculty at colleges such as Maryville to come to UK to conduct research or study toward an advanced degree. The program provides faculty development opportunities for 35 private colleges in Appalachian regions of Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, and Tennessee.

Campus Events

Friday, April 4--

3 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Berea. Away

4 p.m. - Softball vs. Cumberland. Away

8:15 p.m. - Robert Bonham Recital. Music Hall

Saturday, April 5--

9 a.m. - Fine Arts Competition. Music Hall

10 a.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Centre. Home

1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Lynchburg. Home

1 p.m. - Men's Tennis vs. Milligan. Home

1 p.m. - Softball vs. Austin Peay. Away.

2 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Transylvannia. Away

9 p.m. - Junior Class Dance. Alumni Gym

Sunday, April 6--

3-5 p.m. - Gallery Reception.

7:30 p.m. - "A Peasant of El Salvador" play. Wilson Chapel

Thursday, April 10--

11 a.m. - CIV Ms. Jane Limone of Knox Health Care Center "Alzheimer's Disease." Music Hall

Saturday, April 12--

7:30 p.m. - Dogwood Arts Concert. MACCO. Wilson Chapel.

Monday, April 14--

12 p.m. - F.A.S.T. Talk. "Alcohol Awareness." Dining Room Alcove

Tuesday, April 15--

8:15 - Affiliate Artist Performance, Rick Davis, Mime. Music Hall

Thursday, April 17--

Board of Directors Meeting

Highlights

Commentary Page 2

New Fields on Campus Page 3

MC's Spring Play, 'Androcles and the Lion' Page 4

Track Returns to MC Page 7

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Here we go again

Here we go again trying to dictate to autonomous nations what and how they should conduct their business. The U.S. seems to be the policeman of the world.

The U.S. is in Honduras because it is scared of Nicaragua. It is, unfortunately, a Nicaragua driven to communism by the U.S. via the CIA. You won't, however, find that in any history books.

U.S. diplomacy since the turn of the century, has stressed a policy of Central American intervention whenever convenient.

America has a poor track record in this area. It has installed repressive dictators, we remember Somoza, and keeps countries in power that are anything but communist. We will take anything over the system of communism, regardless of how much worse it is.

Fascist dictators are a favorite of the U.S. You know, the kind with the steel helments. They don't, however, have Hitler's charisma. But they do hate red and they love to destroy anyone or institution which seems to threaten their authority.

You know what communists are. They are the ones who want revolution, change, betterment for their people. Sound anything like America's roots? By communism we don't mean Sovietism which is an entity unto itself, but rather pure communism.

The next time we get angry at President Reagan's request for money to finance his little private wars, let's remember that the U.S. has played a large role in driving these countries to communism.

To the educated and the informed it is easy to see through the United States. We are not the white knights that we propogate ourselves as.

We are, as sad as it is, a country swept up in a conservative wind. We are conservative in all the negative senses of the word. We have become a hysterical bunch of fanatics who think that any country which breaks from its colonial past must be an ally of the "Sino-Soviet Bloc."

LETTERS:

Dear Editor:

It's good to see the "Echo" back in publication. And it's particularly refreshing to see an MC student newspaper with an air of professionalism – something that's been a bit scarce around here in recent years.

Yes, it's high time for the return of the "Echo." In his March 6 column, Rick Carver raised a good question about the paper's absence (through his phraseology" was rather caustic and his logic somewhat flawed).

Where has the "Echo" been and why has it taken a semester and a half to bring it back?

To quote Rick, "the Echo did have some pretty trashy issues." An institution of higher education such as Maryville cannot afford to produce, nor can it tolerate, "trashy" publications. MC strives for quality in all aspects of its operations, so why should it accept less in a student newspaper? Our students, faculty and staff deserve better.

It is also difficult at best to produce any publication of any quality without an editor. As no one expressed interest in the editorship of the "Echo" last spring (when the editor is usually selected), the Publications Committee re-opened the search this past fall, again with no takers. The post was finally filled shortly after Interim, when Brian Linkous applied for, was approved for, and accepted the editor ship.

As Maryville College is technically (and legally) the publisher of the "Echo," and is responsible for its content, the need for a faculty advisor (to fill the position vacated by Steve Lemay last spring) with newspaper and journalism experience was vital. As no faculty member on campus had such experience, the Publications Committee had to look elsewhere.

Such searches can take time, and this one did. After a term of looking and exploring options, the College brought Joanne Lax-Farr on board to serve as faculty advisor to the "Echo," the "Chilhowean" and to teach as part of the English faculty. Her background in journalsim and her efforts thus far in the resurrection of the "Echo" should prove valuable to the newspaper, its readers and to the College.

These are the reasons for the "Echo's" absense. These are not put forth as excuses – they are facts. The Publications Committee was charged to do the job, to bring back the "Echo," and the Committee wanted to do it right. I believe it has done that.

It's unfortunate that the search for excellence is viewed as "an unconsiderate blunder." Or that a belief in quality is "grade A fertilizer." I'll stick with quality and excellence every time.

Rick did raise a good question that needed to be raised. His commentary and his observations were, I believe, a bit off the mark.

Tom Hudson
Publications Committee member

Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Brian Linkous
Assistant Editor . . . . . Sarah Schaefer
Business Manager . . . . . Jack Griffin
Sports Editor . . . . . Rick Carver
Layout Editor . . . . . Sarah Ferguson
Photo Editors . . . . . Kathy Hudson, Jess Kane
Typist . . . . . Karen Williams

Staff Writers . . . . . Lynn King, Lisa Harvey
Advisor . . . . . Ms. Lax-Farr

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

New fields on campus

by Sarah Ferguson

For a while now, there has been what is fondly known as "the mudhole" behind Lloyd Hall on campus. For a while now, there have also been plans to construct fields on campus for the Scots soccer and softball teams. Soon reality and dreams will come together and "the mudhole" will be transformed into playing fields for these and other teams.

Athletic Director Randy Lambert and Business Manager Donna Davis have said that during the next dry period the contractor (Lynn Delozier Landscaping in Maryville) will start to work. Two soccer fields will be constructed on the lower plateau (one for practice and one for games) and on the upper level there will be a softball field and an intraumural field.

Lambert said that the money has been allocated and it is "just a matter of time because the weather has been uncooperative." Lambert said the fields will "definitely be ready for next year," and that "tolerating the mudhole has paid off."

Davis said that the fields will be seeded this spring and the soccer field should be ready for next fall. She said that the entire area is seven acres and it will be "a real nice complex."

Softball and soccer players are looking forward to the new fields. Patrick Ferguson, a freshman soccer player, said, "If the fields have Bermuda grass on them the way I've heard they're supposed to, then it will be fun to play on. We played on Bermuda grass at Emory University and it was awesome." He is also glad that there will be no more running off onto the cinder track around the football field and no more complaining by the football players about soccer goals on their field.

Belle Ferguson, a junior softball player, said, "I think it will be great! We won't have to reserve fields any more and drive around town for practice and games. We can walk right over to our field and fans can come and watch our games easier. It will also be safer because there will be easy access to the training room." She also said that the new fields are a good recruiting point because they show that the school cares about its athletes.

In response to the question, "What do you think about the new fields on campus?" Robert Waters, senior intramural director said, "What new fields?"

Don Dove, a sophomore tennis player was also oblivious to the fields now under construction on campus. Whe told of the plans for the area he said, "How many years is this gonna take?" He went on to say that the school could use the money to fix his closet doors.

Neal McBrayer, a senior, said, "The fields will be nice for a change. We have a standout ladies softball team and this should promote more interest at home."

The new fields will provide a field for every sport and Lambert also has plans for sprucing up the old fields. The Marine Corps of Engineers will construct three multi-purpose practice fields from the graveyard to the field behind the gym.

The College also has plans to redo the football field and practice field by smoothing them out, planting new grass and improving the drainage. The baseball field will also receive improvements including a new backstop and outfield. Cars will no longer be permitted to park on the outfield for football games.

President Anderson(center),Mary Lib Jackson,and Ed Best along with students,Jasni Hashim(left) and Abeb Wahib take part in the ribbon cutting ceremonies at the opening of the new International House.

International House opens

by Hubert Dixon

The official opening of the MC International House was March 11. The house, formerly the old infirmary building, will serve as a mulit-purpose facility for the college campus.

The opening was attended by President Anderson, members of the board of directors, administration, faculty, staff, and students.

Also attending were Mary Jackson and Donna Davis, the people responsible for the renovation and opening of the house.

Jackson, a member of the board of directors, donated the money which was used for the renovations. "I hope the students enjoy the house," Jackson said.

Davis, business manager for MC, also played a large role in directing the work done on the house.

The International House or "I-House" as it is called by some students, is maintained by the International Club.

The International Club's purpose is to encourage international awareness and understanding between individuals of the college community.

Membership to the club is open to everyone.

The house will soon be open on a regular schedule and the International Club said that everyone is welcome.

International students help to bring countries closer

by Lynn King (Part one of a two part series)

"It's a small world after all." Here at Maryville College, students have the opportunity to find out just how small it is and perhaps do to lessen the distance even further. Improved communications, organizations like the United Nations, and the study of foreign languages are helping bring the countries of the world closer together. International study programs such as the one at MC may do even more toward accomplishing this goal.

There are currently 41 international students from around 18 foreign countries studying at Maryville College, and there are as many unique backgrounds, reasons for choosing to study here, and paths by which they came, as there are international students. Of the 41, 10 of these students are enrolled in the Center for Intensive English Language Study (CEL), which has been in existence at MC for just over three years.

Emphasizing oral work, especially speaking and listening comprehension, the program includes eight skill levels, with the average student completing three or four levels. Acting Director Marian Fitzgerald spoke of the high motivation, enthusiasm, and eagerness to learn the English language of the international students. "They make wonderful students!"

Fitzgerald mentioned some difficulties unique to international students, such as the paperwork of immigration and the pressure to keep grades up, intensified by the threat of deportation if grades fall, depending on the type of visa the student is here on. Also, international students must demonstrate full financial ability for support before they can be accepted at MC, a limitation American students are not faced with. Fitzgerald said that working with international students is a fascinating experience and she learns more than she teaches.

Not all international students come through CEL. Many enroll directly as freshman or as transfer students, for example. To enroll in any American college, international students must pass the Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL), for which CEL offers special preparation.

International students find out about MC in a number of ways. The largest group come from Malaysia, many by means of scholarships from their government. The Japan connection is also a strong one, due in part to President Anderson's travels there. MC alumni working as teachers, missionaries, and in other positions in foreign countries are another source of information for students looking for a place to study in the United States, as are American embassies.

The foreign students' reasons for deciding to study in the United States are as varied as the students themselves. Director of Admissions Leslie Nier said international students come here for better lives when they go back home, to escape political pressures, and sometimes simply out of curiosity about this country. "It's always amazing to me that there is such an interest in learning about American culture," Nier said.

Some students come with the intention of completing their educations here, while others come mainly to improve or cultivate their English skill, and still others come as transfer students through programs comparable to the opportunity American students at MC have for a semester in Japan. Dr. Young-Bae Kim, who serves as an advisor to international students, cited two common reasons why international students come to study in the United States: lack of educational opportunity at home, where the number of places available in universities is limites, and belief that the U.S. has greater educational opportunites to offer. Whatever their reasons for coming, Dr. Kim found some common denominators in the type of people who make the decision to study in a foreign country. He described these students as very openminded and very brave. "They are ready to face a different kind of experience, " he said, adding that this often means they are ready to face difficulties.

ENTERTAINMENT

Julio Pesiri(the Lion) and Jonathan Yarboro (Androcles) take a break during rehearsals for the upcoming production of George Bernard Shaw's 'Androcles and the Lion.'Opening night will be April 18.

Play examines Christianity

by Tom Hudson (reprinted by permission from Focus '86)

It's not a typical story of Christians versus lions. "Androcles and the Lion," George Bernard Shaw's 1913 stage examination of Christianity, opens Friday, April 18, in the MC Theatre. A production of the MC Playhouse, the play will showcase Shaw's "gentle satire, with moments of his biting wit showing through," according to theatre director Don Thomas.

"Shaw was one of the originators of the modern social thesis drama," Thomas explains. "He used the stage as a pulpit, staging statements against the theories of his time."

"Androcles," which is based on a children's story is the tale of Androcles and his wife, Megaera, fleeing persecution for their Christianity. Escaping into the forest outside Rome, they encounter a wild lion.

"There are a lot of wild lions in the forest outside Rome," Thomas notes with a chuckle.

Androcles discovers a thorn in the lion's paw, "uses his basic ability to communicate with animals" removes the thorn, making a friend of the beast.

Later, as Androcles and his friends are being thrown to the lions because of their faith, Androcles meets his friend again, "with the resulting scene amazing Caesar to the point of converting Rome to Christianity."

The work can be viewed as "total entertainment" or as "Shaw's dialectic," according to Thomas.

"Each major character represents a different view of Christianity," Thomas states. "Shaw explains these views in the preface to the play, which interestingly enough, is three-times as long as the play itself."

To help convey the mood of the play, Thomas says that he is turning to an ancient theatrical stage device--the periaktoi.

"The periaktoi is a three-sided flat which revolves to show different scenes," explains Thomas. "It stems back to the Golden Age of Greece and is one of the earliest forms of technical staging."

Cast members for the play include Jonathan Yarboro as Androcles; Julio Pesiri as the lion; Laura Starkey as Megaera; Christopher Herbert as the Captian; Leah Mueller as Levina; Steve Katz as Ferrovius; Jeff Allen as Spintho; Jeff Hollar as Lentulus; Terry Snyder as Metulus; and Tom Hudson,assistant director of development as the Emperor Julius Caesar.

Other cast members include Bruce Blaisdale, Dan Reynolds, Donald Thorne, Phil Finney, Michael Howell, Donna Sue Hadden, Julie Marshall, Heather Farrar, Hideki Kuwabara, Steve Herbert, and Lori Suggs.

Assistant directing for Thomas are Suggs and Tolis Vouyioukas. Technical director is Tillman Crane. Lighting director is Sharon Crane, director of student life. Jocelyn B. Neary will serve as costume designer and set painter is Sandi Snyder.

The production will run Friday and Saturday, April 18 and 19, and Friday and Saturday, April 25 and 26. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m. in the MC Theatre.

Film

A movie to forget

"3:15" rated R...

by Darrell Franklin

...Shhhhhhh. If this movie can be quietly forgotten maybe no one will notice that it ever existed. Maybe if there are no names mentioned, then the actors, directors, and writers can go on quickly to new projects that will help them atone for this pathetic attempt at cinema. Maybe if I try, then I can put this pretentious piece of celluloid out of my mind. There were a few funny moments during this movie, but they were not intended to be funny. There were moments of sadness, but these came only when I came to the realization that I had spent money to get into the theater.

There were a couple of bright spots in this movie, but they were not enough to save it. It was a deserved death.

April

3 "The Life of Brian"
4 "The Secret of N.I.M.H."
7 "Fire Starter"
8 "King Lear" and Death of a Salesman"
9 "St. Elmo's Fire"
10 "The Holy Grail"
11 "Watership Down"
14 "The Shining"
15 "Tootsie"
16 "The Big Chill"
17 "The Wall"

All movies are shown at 8:00 p.m. in the Snack Bar.

BRINGING GOVERNMENT INFORMATION TO YOU

Information from the Federal Government on subjects ranging from agriculture to zoology is available at Depository Libraries across the nation.

You can visit these libraries and use the Depository collection without charge.

To find one in your area, contact your local library or write to the Federal Depository Library Program, Office of the Public Printer, Washington, DC 20401.

The Federal Depository Library Program

MC plans Festival events

by Lynn King

The Dogwood Arts Festival in Blount County will get off to an official start in the MC Theatre Complex on Thursday, April 10, at 8 p.m.

Following the opening program, which will include a program of bluegrass music and an appearance by Minnie Pearl, are two weeks of activities including something for everyone, ranging from nature hikes to musical performances to sporting events.

Three of the many activities planned are affiliated with MC. The Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra concert will take place April 12 at 7:30 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. The Affiliate Artist Clown Performance by Rick Davis will be presented at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall on April 15. The Maryville College Playhouse will present "Androcles and the Lion" April 18, 19, 25, and 26; curtain time for each performance is 8:15 p.m.

Art

Gallery exhibit

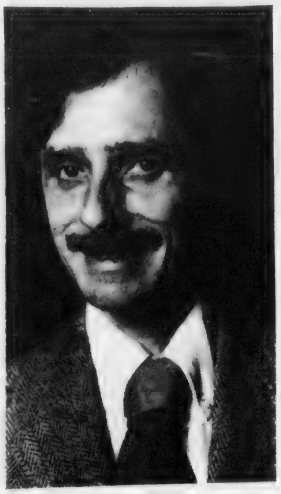
by Elizabeth Stine

The month of April in the MC Fine Arts Gallery will bring a collection of hand bound books by five Southern artists.

The exhibit, entitled "Book Imaging", takes a creative look at the art of book making, yet retains traditional ideals. The participating artists are Chris Brown of Gray, Tenn; Gretchen Whisnaut of Johnson City; Chris Yarborough of Winston Salem, N.C.; Joyce Elaine Seviers of Sparta; and Bambie Berry of Rome, Ga.

An exhibition of fabric design by Ann Hughes and of pottery by Talle Johnson was on display in the Fine Arts Gallery during the month of March. The show began March 9 and included quilted vests and hats, painted chairs and window frames, and fabric collages as well as fantastic, figurative jugs, 18-27 inches tall, finished with wood ash glaze and then sand blasted.

Leah Mueller models a provocative dress at the annual Spring Fashion Show sponsored by Proffitt's.



Schoen featured with MACCO

Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Minor, with Sallie Schoen at the piano, followed by Dvorak's New World Symphony are the program for the April 12 performance by the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra under the direction of David Hoffecker.

The program, in Wilson Chapel, will start at 7:30 p.m. It is one of the Dogwood Arts Festival events this spring.

Schoen, on the faculty at Maryville College since 1955, holds degrees from Oberlin Conservatory and Indiana University. She has done additional study at the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria.

In addition to numerous recitals in the Southeast, she has appeared as a soloist with the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra and the Knoxville Chamber Orchestra.

Dr. Robert Bonham

Bonham to hold recital

by Lynn King

Classical music enthusiasts will have an opportunity to hear music by Bach, Schubert, and Liszt played by Dr. Robert Bonham for his faculty piano recital April 4 at 8:15 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall.

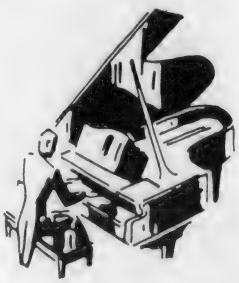
How does a musician begin to decide which pieces to include from the myriads available? "It has to be music I enjoy," Dr. Bonham said, adding that after this first criterion, he hopes other people will enjoy it also.

Dr. Bonham has been preparing for the recital for about a year now and practicing 4 to 5 hours and more nightly since Christmas.

He believes that music is one way to help "create an integrated environment." "Everything is related to everything," he said, adding that if the mind, body, and other life influences are kept in good shape, "music is simply a continuation."

Choir returns from tour

by Michael Simpson



Over spring break, while many students were relaxing and resting, the MC Concert Choir was busy bringing the sound of music to a different part of the country. Their nine-day "Spring Tour", which began March 15, carried the choir through five states, performing nine concerts, concluding with a pre-service concert at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington D.C. on March 23. The choir's program included a wide variety of pieces selected to provide something enjoyable for all audiences. Selections ranged from early Renaissance pieces to works by Haydn, Brahms, and Hindemith. The program also consisted of songs in five foreign languages, including a collection of Japanese folk songs arranged by one of the choir's own members, Hidenori Akashi. Also included in the program were a number of spirituals, ballads, and "nonsense songs".

This program will be repeated for the MC community on April 3 at 8:15 in the FAC Music Hall.

Robert Ergenbright, director of the MC Concert Choir expressed his enthusiasm about the tour, saying that the tour was basically a culmination of an entire year of work. A "labour of love" as he called it, the tour gave the choir a chance not only to sing together but to grow together.

The Choir's next off-campus performance will be on April 5 at the U.S. Pavillion on the Knoxville World Fair's site for the "Spiritual Life" concert, a part of Tennessee's Homecoming '86 celebration. The choir will be performing with a number of other groups in a four-hour concert from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. The MC Concert Choir will be on stage from 2 to 2:30.

MC students attend theater conference

by Lori Suggs

Three MC students and an instructor recently returned from a regional theater conference.

Lori Suggs, Jill Lucke, and Chris Herbert with Don Thomas attended the South Eastern Theatre Conference in Charlotte, N.C. on March 6-8. The conference included over 3,000 members attending workshops, plays, seminars, and auditions. Suggs concentrated on clown and circus workshops. Lucke participated in the SETC college conection. Herbert went through an audition for over 60 companies and received 14 callbacks and four contract offers.

The convention is an annual event and includes the 10 states in the southeastern region.

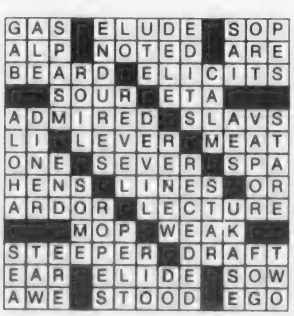
SHORTS

Phonathon exceeds goal

The 1986 Maryville College Phonathon was a success!

According to Tom Hudson, Assistant Director of Development, the total amount pledged in this year's Phonathon was $29,000. The pledges exceeded the goal of $25,800, which was the amount raised in last year's Phonathon.

The Phonathon was stopped two days early because the pledges already exceeded the goal and because prospective donars had been called at least once. The students, faculty, and staff volunteers could have kept calling in order to get in touch with everyone, but statistics show that "call backs" have minimal return in pledges. Hudson said that it was in the "best interest to wrap up on a successful note."



This year, as in the past, awards were given to the group or individual having raised the most money in pledges or having accumulated the greatest number of individual pledges. The campus organization that raised the most money was the commuter students, who raised $3,180 in pledges. The residence hall that raised the most money was Lloyd Hall with $9,695 in pledges. The faculty/staff person raising the most money was Vera Gilmore with $475 in pledges.

Terry Snyder, a freshman, won both the awards in the student category. He raised $2,025 in pledges and accumulated 41 individual pledges. Since Snyder came in first in both categories, second place awards were given. Lynn Sedowicz, a sophomore, won second place in most money raised with $1,340. Lissa McLeod, a freshman, won second place in the number of individual pledges with 29.

The Phonathon could not have been such a success without the help of the volunteer callers, Hudson said. "The 1986 Phonathon was a great success for student financial aid at the college." He added, "our goal was ambitious and it's exciting to have exceeded it by so great an amount."

Volunteers, Jeff Liebert, Julio Pesiri, and Jim Pavao man the phones at the annual MC Phonathon.Sixty students and 20 faculty/ staff raised $ 29,000 to be used for financial aid.

BLOUNT BUSINESS SERVICES

Professional Work
Reasonable Rates

Word Processing
Resumes
Letters

All Work Supplied On
25% Cotton Bond
Unless Specified Otherwise.

133 Roosevelt Street
Maryville, TN 37801

Phone: 983-3209

Students fast for hunger

by Sarah Ferguson

This week over 70 students on campus have been fasting for the "Halting Hungerat Home" program.

Participants in the program give up their dinner in the dining hall each evening, and Dobb's House refunds the cost of these meals to the charity that the students are working for. Money will also be raised through sponsors who have pledged money to the fasters.

Charlie Parsons, who is in charge of the fast, says that the money raised will go to the local hunger concerns such as the food pantry in Blount County. The students would like to raise at least $500 through the program.

Rice and juice is served each night in the CCM from 5:30-6:30 for the fasters so that they will not starve and can better understand hunger.

Sunday at 6:30 the fasters gathered in the CCM for a time of silence and prayer for the hungry of Blount and Knox Counties. Wednesday at 7:00 the fasters gathered again in the CCM to listen to Lola Reid, director of the Blount County Food Pantry and Christine Cureton, director of the Southern Appalachian Food Bank as they spoke on local hunger relief.

On Sunday, April 6, the students will end their fast with a short worship service and candle light vigil at 7:00 in the CCM.

The "Echo" needs responsible free-lance writers. Experience on a newspaper staff is not required. Applicants must, however, like to write and be able to meet deadlines. If interested contact the "Echo" at Box 2820.

Feminism could hurt job prospects

(CPS) -- Women may have a hard time getting a job if their resumes evince strong feminist feelings or refer to school projects thast a prospective employer may see as meaning they could cause "trouble" on the job, a new study by two professors suggests.

Employers surveyed by Michael Hitt of Texas A&M and William Zikmund of Oklahoma State seemed especially reluctant to hire female students who had done studies of job discrimination.

But corporate preferences for male applicants in general seem to be fading, Hitt adds.

Other job placement officials, however, question Hitt and Zikmund's study and note "political" references on a resume are always a risk.

"I am not sure if (discrimination) is specific to women's groups," says Joe Santos, a placement officer at Miami of Ohio.

Employers in general seem to respond less positively "to social stands of any kind" on resumes, he observes.

Hitt and Zikmund's study suggest companies appear anxious to respond to feminist applicants with appropriate care, if not with jobs.

"The study shows companies tend to respond to feminist applications to make sure they are responding to feminists," Hitt says.

Hitt and Zikmund sent the resumes of two women to some 200 companies.

To see if companies respond to feminist applicants differently than they do to others, the researchers sent resumes that identified the applicants only by their initials, resumes that identified them by full name, resumes that said the applicant had written a thesis on job discrimination, and resumes that did not mention the thesis.

Invariably, the firms replied to the resumes indentified only by initials with the saluation of "Mister," Hitt recalls.

The resumes that mentioned the discrimination thesis and had the women's full names received the most responses, but the majority of them were nagative.

Companies, Hitt concludes from the response, are leery of hiring someone who might question how they operate.

Santos thinks they're just leery of hiring anyone whose politics may offend someone in the firm.

"Whenever you mention involvement with a political stand, there is always the chance the person reading the resume may have a bias the other way," Santos says. of them were negative.

The companies responded to women who did not evince any feminist philosophies on their resumes at the same rate as they did to men.

In previous studied by Hitt and other researchers, companies tended to respond to male applicants more frequently and more positively than they did to female applicants.

As a result, Hitt advises women who wish to mention on their resumes activities that might be considered vaguely "feminist" to identify themselves by only their initials.

Mary Padget willingly donates to a Medic worker at the Circle – K blood drive.

Rick Carver takes a crack at the ball during the Scot's game against Union

'Kemp Decision' stirs reaction

(CPS) – Big Ten doormat Northwestern could become a football powerhouse.

Or the overall quality of intercollegiate sports will decline. Or

Or the overall quality of intercollegiate sports will decline. Or colleges will take educating their athletes more seriously. Or colleges won't be able to keep athletes in school.

Or hundreds of colleges will be sued unless they improve their "developmental studies" – or remedial – programs for athletes.

Those are just some of the speculations now tearing through college athletic departments wide in the aftermath of a "landmark" court case in Gerogia.

"It sent a shock across the country," reports Charles McClendon, head of the American Football Coaches Association. "I think it serves notice to all of our campuses that we need to take a look at ourselves."

"It" was a federal court ruling in favor of Jan Kemp, an academic advisor to University of Georgia athletes who, she says, was fired because she refused to give passing grades to some football players who were flunking their courses.

If she had flunked them, the players would not have been able to play in the 1982 Sugar Bowl game.

Kemp eventually left the university, and then sued it for firing her.

The court in February ruled Georgia must pay Kemp $2.6 million in back pay and damages.

While the university is appealing the decision, the court testimony about low graduation rates among athletes, about Georgia's expectations for its black football players -- UGa's lawyer told the court the athlete's college educations at least would propel them beyond being garbagemen, qualifying them for postal service careers -- and how it has different academic standards for "revenue-producing" athletes has refueled parts of the college sports reform movement.

The huge award, whether or not it stands, will cause "administrators and developmental studies people (all over the country to) wonder if their programs are running better" than Gerogia's, says Sheldon Stenbach of the American Council on Education.

Gerogia's remedial programs helped only 16 of the 61 black athletes on it s football team since 1971 to graduate.

"The question," Steinbach adds, "is how many other universities are conducting programs like that (in which) grades are being manipulated."

Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan estimates there may be "50 or 60" running shoddy programs.

The Georgia system, in any case, now is "reviewing" all its developmental studies programs, Chancellor Dean Propst's office says.

Other athletic officials specualte the huge award, when considered with the National Collegiate Athletic Association's new rule setting higher academic standards for Division 1 athletes, amy alter competition among schools.

At its January convention, the NCAA voted to keep freshman athletes off the field unless they had a 2.0 grade point average in 11 core high school courses and scored at least 700 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or 15 on the American College Testing (ACT) exam.

Some coaches worry the new rule, followed so closely by the Kemp decision, may make it harder for them to lure quality athletes.

A University of Michagan study estimated the NCAA rule alone would have excluded about a third of its freshman football recruits between 1979 to 1983.

"I am a bit concerned there is an overreaction" to athletes' academic troubles, University of Maryland football coach Bobby Ross contends, adding the Kemp case could inspire more rules precluding athletes from attending college.

Ross argues students who went to bad high schools and didn't take enough academic courses won't be able to do well enough on admissions test to meet the new NCAA requirements.

And if college remedial courses now have to be changed, the athletes from bad high schools won't be able to keep competing once they've made it into college

Track returns to MC

by Lynn King

There is good news for running enthusiasts: track is back at MC.

A group of students is now in the process of organizing a track club. Chairman of Student Programming Kati Tabor, who instigated the effort, said that she believes student interest is here on campus and urged more students to become involved.

"One of the things that really intrigues me about running is that it's a sport that can be both an individual and a collective sport. We are competing with ourselves and we're competing together as a team, Tabor said.

Now aiming for official club status, with hopes of possibly becoming a varsity team sometime in the future, the group plans to begin as a track club and hopefully participate in cross country events in the fall as well.

Tabor said that while working in the admissions office, she is often asked by prospective students about the existence of track and cross country teams at MC than about any other sports. The group is currently receiving advice and support from faculty consultants Leslie Nier and Dr. Robert Yager, both runners.

Club members are now meeting daily at 4 p.m. in front of the P.E. Building to run. Anyone interested in joining is welcomed; encouraging new members, Tabor said, "I find a lot of satisfaction in running. It's mentally satisfying as well as physically satisfying."

Any interested student should contact Tabor (Box 2535) or Michael Simpson (Box 2555) for further details and to be included on the list to receive notices of club meetings and new developments.

The future Maryville College Track Club plans to participate as a group for the first time in the annual The Daily Times-Scots Spring Road Race on April 12, and in the Sweetwater Road Race on April 19. Anyone else interested in competing can get an application in the MC post office, P.E. Building, or from Nier or Tabor. Early registration must be completed by April 6 and April 14 respectively.

Sports Events

Tuesday, April 8--

3 p.m. - Softball vs. LMU. Home

Wednesday, April 9--

1:30 p.m. - Baseball vs. Emory and Henry. Home

1:30 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. LMU. Home

Friday, April 11--

3 p.m. - Men' Tennis vs. LMU. Away

TBA - Softball in Tusculum Tournament. Away

Saturday, April 12--

1 p.m. - Baseball vs. Tusculum. Away

TBA - Softball in Tusculum Tournament. Away

Monday, April 14--

1:30 - Baseball vs. Sewanee. Home

Tuesday, April 15--

2 p.m. - Women's Tennis vs. Tennessee Wesleyan. Away

THE BACK PAGE

Honor society to hold ceremony

by Karen Williams

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor scholarship society, will hold its recognition ceremony Thursday, April 3.

The society was founded at MC in 1934 with the purpose of encouraging scholarship and promoting interest in cultural pursuits among students of the College.

Honorees are new members from the class of 1986: Kimberly Allen, Sharon Hight, Karen West Jernigan, Christopher Kauker, Neal McBrayer, and Amy Ralston Vagnier.

In order to be eligible to membership in AGS society, a regularly enrolled student must be of good moral character; must have attained the standing of a senior at the beginning of the spring semester, that is, must have the prospect of graduating in the calendar year; must have been in residence for at least three semesters; must have an average of at least 3.33 for all college courses taken at Maryville or elsewhere; and must have taken or be following the core-curriculum requirement stipulated for the Bachelor of Arts Degree.

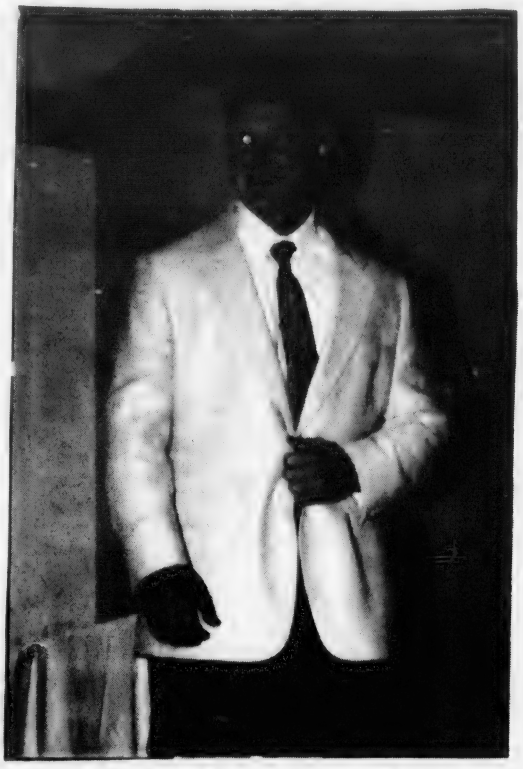
The number of students elected in one year may not exceed 10 percent of the candidates for the Bachelor of Arts degree in that academic year (September through August). Election is to take place early in the spring semester from a list of seniors and juniors who are eligible at that time. A second election may take place following the spring semester to fill the quota.

Also to be honored as associate members are Dr. Margorie Kratz, Dr. Russell Parker, and Dr. Judith Sumner.

Dr. Kratz came to MC in September 1968 as assistant professor of history. She became associate professor in 1976.

Dr. Parker came to MC as an instructor of history in 1964. He was promoted to assistant professor in 1966, associate professor in 1969, and Professor in 1979.

Dr. Sumner came to MC as assistant professor of biology in 1978.



Those on the college faculty who are members of any chapter of Phi Beta Kappa automatically become associate members of Alpha Gamma Sigma upon subscribing to the constitution. A member of the faculty of Maryville College who has taught a liberal arts course in the college for a period of at least three years, and whose undergraduate record would have entitled him to membership in AGS may become an associate member by nine-tenths vote of the active members of the society.

The 1986 Alpha Gamma Sigma Scholarship Award Winner is Heidi Weiffenbach. The AGS Scholarship is awarded to the returning junior who had the highest grade point average at the end of the sophomore year.

Dr. Howard Polio, Distinguished Service Professor in Psychology at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, will be the speaker for the Maryville College Alpha Gamma Sigma recognition ceremony.

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler, president of the society, will preside.

The ceremony will be held in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall at 11 a.m.

John McLeod models his 'ready for business suit' at the Spring Fashion Show.

Softball has slow start

by Sarah Ferguson

The Lady Scots softball team now has a 3-4-1 record after four weeks of play. The Lady Scots split a double header with Tennessee Tech by winning the first game 6 - 2 and ending the second game in a 9 -9 tie because the game was called for darkness.

The Lady Scots then went on to defeat Lincoln Memorial University in a double header at LMU. The scores were 2-1 and 6-4.

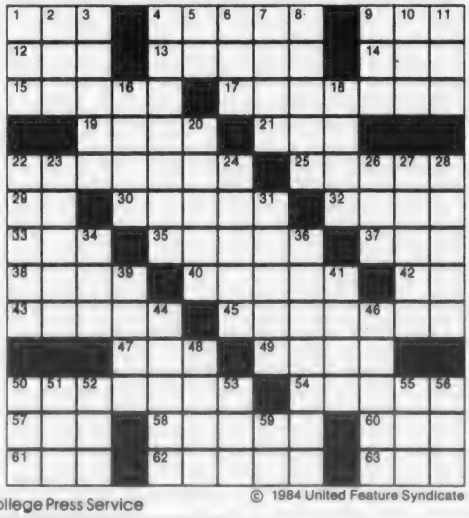
Next, the Scots faced Carson Newman at Carson Newman and lost both ends of a double header with the scores of 4 - 3 and 1 - 0.

In two home games against Tusculum, the Lady Scots were again defeated by scores of 8 - 3 in sudden death and 4 - 0 in the second game.

The Lady Scots will play at Cumberland College on Friday, April 4. the next game will be away against Austin Peay.

The Lady Scots will return home on April 8 for a game against LMU. The Lady Scots will be competing in the Tusculum Tournament April 11 and 12.

The Puzzle



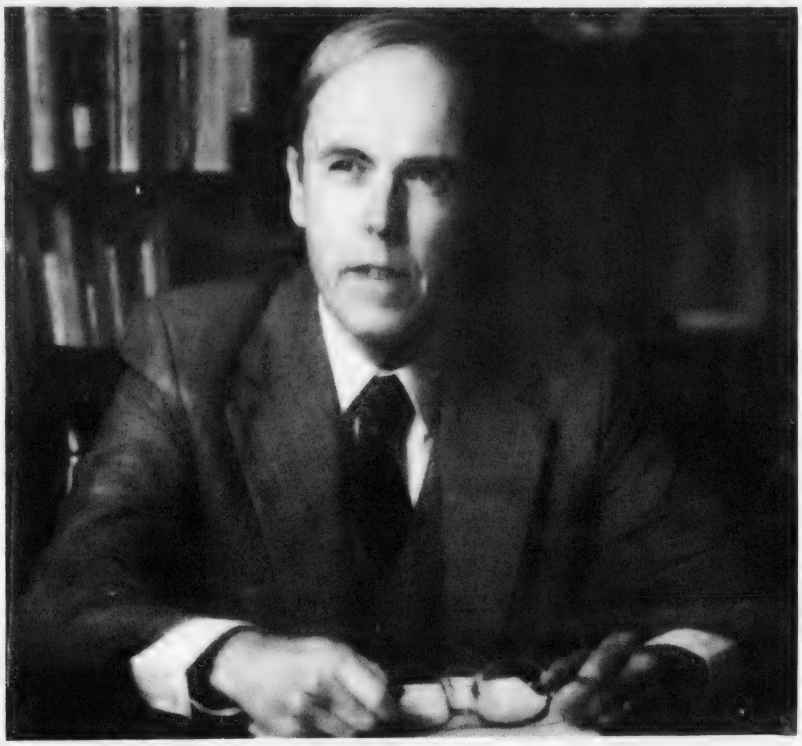
answer pg.6

ACROSS

1 Aeriform fluid
4 Avoid
9 Soak up
12 High mountain
13 Famed
14 Exist
15 Facial hair
17 Draws out
19 Tart
21 Greek letter
22 Adored
25 Southeastern Europeans
29 Chinese distance measure
30 Foot pedal
32 Flesh
33 Individual
35 Cut
37 Health resort
38 Chickens
40 Boundaries
42 Owner's risk: abbr.
43 Enthusiasm
45 Formal discourse
47 Cleaning instrument
49 Feeble
50 More precipitous
54 Tentative outline
57 Organ of hearing
58 Omit from pronunciation
60 Seed
61 Veneration
62 Remained upright
63 The self

DOWN

1 Idle chatter
2 Beverage
3 Muscular contraction
4 Suffers patiently
5 Behold!
6 Southwestern Indian
7 Erase: printing
8 Revises
9 Capuchin monkey
10 Scrap of food
11 Footlike part
16 Irritate
18 Tranquil
20 Carouse
22 Hawaiian greeting
23 Roadside restaurant
24 Mephistopheles
26 Roman bronze
27 Bluster
28 Look fixedly
31 Renovate
34 Finish
36 Retreated
39 Indefinite amount
41 Play leading role
44 Lassos
46 Official decree
48 Animal coat
50 Ocean
51 Game at marbles
52 Before
53 Spanish for "river"
55 Mist
56 Couple
59 Duplicate: abbr.



College Press Service

© 1984 United Feature Syndicate

Highland Echo

Vol. 71 No. 3 | Maryville College | Thursday, April 17, 1986

DR. WAYNE ANDERSON

Anderson bound for Illinois; Says MC's future is bright

by Brian Linkous

Dr. Wayne Anderson announced his resignation as president of Maryville College last week, after almost nine years on the job.

During his time at MC, he was responsible for many varied achievements and innovations.

He said, "I am terribly pleased that I was part of a group that made a change at the college. I was only one leader within a group of leaders instrumental in makind advances at MC."

Dr. Anderson emphasized the "group effort" which he feels has made things happen. "I don't feel comfortable saying I made it happen, but one thing which has been satisfying is the dedication and commitment to the progress of the institution."

Although Dr. Anderson refuses credit for many achievements, the fact remains that under his leadership the school has made some impressive advances.

Since he assumed the presidency in July, 1977, MC has been reaccredited and has added new programs such as the Nursing Program and the Continuing Education Programs. In addition, with some outside financial support, special opportunities have been made available to support faculty development and assistance in faculty compensation.

Due in part to new management systems, MC has finished in the black every year since 1978.

The endowment has also doubled in that time. Such innovative ideas as the wood-burning system have reduced energy costs by 85 percent per year.

Dr. Anderson said that an especially satisfying aspect for him has been the "constant reinforcement" from graduates who claim that MC has taught them to communicate and think logically.

"All of our efforts have paid off in preparing students effectively for the future. That's what we are all about," Anderson said.

As for the future of MC, if Dr. Anderson's predictions prove true, MC should do fine. Anderson confidently stated, "I think the college will attract very strong candidates to replace me. Beyond that I think that the college's quality will continue to attract interest and funds."

Institutions such as ALCOA and the Mellon Foundation have been large contributors to the school. Anderson said that they continue to give because of the quality of the institution.

In the area of enrollment, Anderson painted a very bright picture, saying that applications are up 32 percent over last year.

Dr. Anderson also believes that

see pg.3

ACC conducts business; Student Senate on the way

by Brian Linkous

A Student Senate will be in place at MC by the end of the academic year as a result of action taken by the All College Council at its April 3 meeting.

At the meeting two months ago, the ACC formed a committee to draw up a proposal to revise the college governance system, which the school has sought to revise for over two years.

According to Ron Pease, the communication process in the present system hasn't worked as effectively as hoped. "Students feel they have no representation," Pease said. Pease also said that under the present system (now old) students didn't feel comfortable about voicing their opinion.

Under the old system the ACC could make policies without complete representation from the various student concerns.

The new system will have the bulk of committees such as Athletic Committee and Religious Life Committee under the Student Senate.

According to Pease, "the Senate guarantees there will be representation from all students."

The Senate will be comprised of 19 members (15 voting) comprised as such: 4 ex-officio members comprised of each class president; 1 president elected from campus elections, 2 representatives from each class, 1 representative from each residence hall, and 2 commuter representatives. The ex-officios will be non-voting members.

Neal McBrayer, a member of the committee which drafted the proposal, also believes that the Senate offers more representation for students.

"Under the old system, ACC student representatives often had no idea what student sentiment really was. They were representative of the student but not always responsive to students needs. Hopefully the Student Senate will address that problem."

The new Senate will make it clearer to students where they will need to go if they have a problem.

For example, a student who has a problem must notify a student Senator who will draft a resolution and introduce it to the Senate, after which it will be assigned to an appropriate committee which will decide its outcome.

Also under the old system, the ACC had been dealing with academic issues which the student representatives often felt uncomfortable with and which they felt could be best handled by faculty. Likewise, faculty representatives were often faced with a similar dilemma.

The Student Seante will hopefully alleviate this problem.

McBrayer said an added feature of the Senate is that it allows students to debate issues before they reach the ACC level.

It is important to note that the new governance system does not affect the ACC. The ACC will retain its present structure which consists of : six faculty members, administrators and staff,

see pg.6

Highlights

Thomas' final contribution pg.5

Who will win the pennant pg.7

Motorists and the wall pg.8

The real terrorists pg.2

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Goodbye Dr. Anderson

As an institutuion of higher learning, Maryville College will inevitably have to grow in order to prosper. Unfortunately, what is often growth seems much more like regression. President Anderson's resignation is such an example. By losing Anderson, Maryville has lost a top-notch leader dedicated to the betterment of all higher education.

While he has had a quantity of support from other high quality administrators, Anderson's record at Maryville College is impressive. Under him the college has experienced a period of growth which has included: much needed renovations of campus buildings, increased alumni contributions, implementation of a money saving heating system, and additional academic programs such as the Nursing Program. Granted, it is hard to look at the president's resignation as growth but time will show it. Hopefully time will also bring an equally gifted leader to guide Maryville College into the challenge of a new dacade.

As President Anderson said, "the college will attract very strong candidates to replace me." Let us also hope the Presidental Search Committee makes the right decision after considering the facts.

We feel Illinois Wesleyan University has a new president capable of meeting all their challenges. We wish you a prosperous career Dr. Anderson.

The Student Senate

In perhaps one ot its better moves, the ACC has finally created a Student Senate. It is in an idea whose time is long past and which offers students the representation which most feel they have been lacking. But if the ACC really wanted to increase student representation, it should have started with informing the students beforehand of the proposed Senate so they could have had input into its creation.

Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Brian C. Linkous
Business Manager . . . . . Jack Griffin
Entertainment Editor . . . . . Lynn King
Sports Editor . . . . . Pat Moyer
Photo Editor . . . . . Kathy Hudson
Typist . . . . . Karen W. Williams
Staff Writers . . . . . Michael Simpson, Sarah Schaefer, Sarah Ferguson, Darrell Franklin, Jesi Kane
Advisor . . . . . Ms. Lax-Farr

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

"Prosperity" Of The Eighties: Parallel To The Fabulous Twenties?

by Dr. Russell Parker

A necessary disclaimer: while claiming no such expertise as those who specialize in the field of economics, I can claim, as an historian, a perspective gained from study of the past -- a perspective that often proves helpful reading the present and predicting the future.

The recent bullish behavior of the stock market -- a remarkable recovery from a depressed state just over a decade ago -- has led many investors (and some analysts) to forecast a bright future for the U.S. economy. There are disturbing parallels to another time, some sixty years ago, that might give the thoughtful observer pause. The pyrotechnics of the stock market in the late 1920's masked an economy that was marked by imbalance, malfunction, and "sick" industries:

1) the essential structure of the tax system -- relatively low at the top on the assumption that the benefits would "trickle down" -- led to accumulation of wealth and savings at that extreme (the Reagan monetary policy has followed an identical course).

2) at the lower economic level, farmers and laborers were not sharing the "fabulous" lifestyle of the rich and famous. In an effort to keep up, these borrowed beyond limits that wisdom would dictate and became in large numbers victims of foreclosure and repossession (Americans have again borrowed beyond prudent bounds; the easy availability of bank credit cards - at 20% interest - and government loans to farmers have lured them on).

3) American bankers had extended credit to international borrowers far beyond prudent limits; when the stock market crashed in October 1929, banks went under by the thousands (bankers are again overextended, lending Middle East oil investments to third world producers. The FDIC, while reassuring to modest savers, will not cover all in a wholesale bank collapse).

4) corporations tended toward monopoly; they held the price line and competed through advertising, rather than price-cutting (note the merger mania of recent months).

In sum, history seems to be repeating itself in disturbing fashion, although admittedly circumstances are not exactly replicated. Unequal distribution of wealth in the 1920's led to a crisis when those of limited means could no longer purchase durable luxury goods such as autos and applicances (the wealthy can buy only a finite amount of these goods). The stock market collapsed when investors lost confidence in what the future might hold.

The recent drop in oil prices, which some hail as a harbinger of good things to come, will create problems for oil producers in the U.S. While some of us will shed no tears at their embarrassment, the falling prices spell trouble also for third world producers to whom injudicious American bankers have loaned enormous sums. If these poor countries default on their loans (it's pretty well assumed already that many will never pay the principal), banks might collaspe in unprecedented profusion. What will this prospect -- if not actuality -- do to the confidence of stock market speculators?

The Real Terrorists

by David Cartlidge

Some of us may wonder why the rest of the world does not seem to appreciate fully our moral outrage at "international terrorism." It may be worthwhile to explore some others' perspectives on our moral indignation, as we are a nation known globally for our lack of introspection. We tend to leave out the qualifier in Abraham Lincoln's description of us as "God's almost chosen people."

The world knows that we are part of the phenomenon called international terrorism. We have for years held an entire nation in terror with the threat of total annihilation. Only when the Soviet Union had achieved nuclear-terror parity with us did the world-wide peace movement's concern begin to have popular support in the U.S.; our morality escalated in direct proportion to our jeopardy.

The world's people remember that it was not only the fascist states in World War II which established the contemporary precedent of all-out, terror-war on civilians. The V-2 bombing of London and the saturation bombing of Coventry had their allied counterparts at Dresden, Hamburg, Hiroshima, and Tokyo.

That is macro-terrorism. We also participate in micro-terrorism. Every terrorist educated in Cuba or at Patrice Lamumba University is more than matched by one trained at Gettysburg or in some other U.S.A. war-college. The policia of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Zaire are not born terrorists; they learned their skills under our tutelage.

The USSR has its Cuba; we have our Israel and our Contras. Each is an example of the modern dilemma.

The superpowers dare not directly confront each other in the politics of violence. Macro-terror has seen to that. Each super-power must employ the politics of violence through surrogates, usually an authoritarian state (if it is their surrogate, it is totalitarian).

We and the Soviet Union make good use of our freedom-fighters (terrorists). But each of us also needs the other's terrorists (freedom-fighters). How else could we justify our support of governments that you certainly wouldn't invite home to meet mother? How else could we justify a giga-bucks a year "defense" budget to protect Peoria from Grenada?

Terrorism, macro and micro, is not the anomaly which our press reports it to be; it is the politics of violence of our age. Its insanity demands our rethinking of violence as politics.

This Has Been Published In Accordance With A Request From Student Affairs

CONSTITUTION

of the

MARYVILLE COLLEGE STUDENT SENATE

I. Purpose

The purpose of the Student Senate is to serve as a body which deals with the issues and interests of the students of Maryville College. It shall be a deliberative, recommending body which will develop policies and proposals that are in line with the Maryville College Statement of Purpose. The Student Senate shall primarily deal with the concerns of its constituency, yet should always bear in mind its obligation to the campus community as a whole. It shall also serve as a tool in developing the maturity of its various student members through the leadership and responsibilities necessary for governance.

II. Structure

A. Senate

The Student Senate shall consist of fifteen (15) voting members. Ex-officio members will include the four (4) class presidents, the Senate Cabinet, and three (3) advisors. The Student Senate will convene twice each month of the academic year, preferably the second and fourth week of each month. Appropriate resolutions passed by the Student Senate will be presented to the All- College Council by the President of the Student Senate. the Student Senate will be responsible for the creation or dissolution of any standing or ad hoc committee under its jurisdiction.

B. Committees

Each senator shall serve as a member of one of the following standing committees:

1. Community Standards and Residential Life
2. Social/Recreation
3. Student Publications
4. Dining Hall Committee
5. Judicial Policies
6. Committee on Clubs and Organizations
7. Traffic Committee

Constitution - MC Student Senate
Page Two

8. Worship and Religious Programs
9. Community Outreach Committee
10. World Concers Committee
11. Athletic Committee

Each senator serving as a committee member will be responsible for reporting the activities of that committee to the Senate. Any additional standing committees created shall also include at least one senator.

C. All- College Council

The student membership of the All- College Council shall consist of five (5) senators, representing but not limited to, one from each class, and the President of the Student Senate. The President of the Student Senate shall also serve as the Co-Chairman of the All- College Council. The student members of the All- College Council shall be elected from and by the Student Senate.

III. Composition

A. Senators

1. Requirements
   a) a course load of no less than twelve (12) semester hours,
   b) 2.00 grade point average for all members,
   c) transfer students eligible after completing one semester at Maryville College,

2. Election
   a) the senators shall be elected by constituency:
      (1) Senior Class--two (2)
      (2) Junior Class--two (2)
      (3) Sophomore Class--two (2)
      (4) Freshman Class--two (2)
      (5) Residence Halls--one (1) representative each
      (6) Commuters--two (2)
   b) The elections for the Student Senate shall be held during the first week of May in the Spring Semester of the academic year. Freshmen members shall be elected during the third week of classes during the Fall Semester of the academic year.

3. Duties
   a) represent the interests of their various constituents,
   b) sponsor resolutions,

Constitution - MC Student Senate
Page Three

   c) serve on standing committees and/or as representatives to the All- College Council,
   d) accept or reject the Cabinet appointments as recommended by the President of the Senate. (If the Cabinet appointments are not approved by the second meeting of the Senate, the Senate is charged with making its own appointments.)

4. Term of Office
   Term of office will include that academic year proceeding the May election (September election of Freshmen).

B. Officers

1. Requirements
   a) junior or senior standing,
   b) a course load of no less than twelve (12) semester hours,
   c) 2.00 grade point average,
   d) transfer students eligible after completing one semester at Maryville College.

2. Election
   a) the President shall be elected in a campus-wide election at the student body during the second week of April,
   b) the Vice-President shall be elected from the Student Senate at the second meeting of the academic year.

3. Duties
   a) President
      (1) shall preside at all meetings of the Senate,
      (2) serve as Co-Chairman of the All- College Council,
      (3) appoint a Cabinet to be approved by the Senate,
      (4) call or create any special meetings, forums, or ad hoc committees necessary for governance.
   b) Vice-President
      (1) shall preside over senate upon absence of President,
      (2) report to the Senate the activities of the Academic Life Council,
      (3) serve in the place of recalled or removed President only until an election can be held to fill that position.

Constitution - MC Student Senate
Page Four

C. Ex-Officio Members

1. Members
   a) Class Presidents,
   b) Secretary (Cabinet member)
   c) Treasurer (Cabinet member)
   d) Parliamentarian (Cabinet member)

2. Requirements
   a) 2.00 grade point average,
   b) a course load of no less than twelve (12) semester hours.

3. Appointments
   a) Cabinet
      (1) shall be nominated by the President of the Student Senate,
      (2) shall be appointed upon approval of the Student Senate.

4. Duties
   a) Class President
      (1) shall serve in the Student Senate without vote, unless that class president is also a senator,
      (2) shall have speaking and resolution sponsoring capabilities.
   b) Cabinet
      (1) the Secretary shall record minutes of all meetings, maintain all Senate correspondences, publish the agenda of all meetings, and have no vote or voice that is more than advisory in the Student Senate,
      (2) Treasurer shall maintain a record of all funds handled by the Student Senate and have no vote or voice that is more than advisory in the Student Senate.
      (3) Parliamentarian shall insure all meetings are operated by the Rules of Order of the Maryville College Student Senate and have no vote or voice that is more than advisory in the Student Senate.

D. Advisors

1. Requirements
   a) one (1) representative from the Office of Student Affairs,
   b) one (1) representative from the faculty,
   c) one (1) representative from the administrative staff.

Constitution - MC Student Senate
Page Five

2. Selection
   a) one representative shall be chosen from the Office of Student Affairs,
   b) the faculty representative will be chosen by the faculty,
   c) the administrative staff representative will be chosen by the administrative staff.

3. Duties
   a) the Advisors shall aid and supervise the activities of the Student Senate,
   b) the Advisors shall report the activities of the Student Senate to their constituencies,
   c) the Advisors have no vote.

IV. Powers

A. The Student Senate shall act in accordance with the Rules of Order of the Maryville College Student Senate.

B. The Student Senate will be responsible for the orientation of all new students regarding the system of governance at Maryville College.

V. Amendments

Amendment of this document shall be made upon two-thirds (2/3) approval of the Maryville College Student Senate at two successive meetings.

Anderson

from pg. 1

the building program such as the library renovation will make MC very attractive to prospective students as well as current students.

Although the decision on who will replace him will be the ultimate responsibility of a search committee, Dr. Anderson has some expectations for his replacement.

"I would expect that we would attract someone who will involve faculty, staff, and students in the decision-making process." He added, "I would also expect someone who will be able to represent the campus effectively and who will raise funds for continued growth of programs."

Dr. Anderson is optimistic about the future, but he concedes that there will be some challenges ahead especially in the areas of finance and enrollment. "I think there will be significant challenges for Maryville College. It will be important for the new president to join other private schools in lobbying for more state and federal support."

The most effective course for MC, he said, is to "be vigilant, observe trends, and try to challenge the outcome." He added that this is not just a task of MC, but a task for all of independent higher education.

Dr. Anderson strongly emphasized that "there are no negative reasons whatsoever related to my leaving."

He said that he is leaving because the new job offers a challenge. Illinois Wesleyan convinced him that they needed him to overcome the challenges they are facing. "I hope they're right," he said.

Illinois Wesleyan should indeed offer a new challenge. It is a school of 1,550 students. Founded 136 years ago and affiliated with the Methodist church, it offers an undergraduate program with an emphasis on both liberal arts and specialized learning. It operates on a $16 million budget with an endowment of $40 million.

ENTERTAINMENT

Affiliate Artist gives 'Informance' at MC

by Michael Simpson

Clown. Philosopher. Artist. These all apply to this year's Affiliate Artist, Rick Davis. Davis uses a combination of knee-jerk comedy and human emotion to entertain and enlighten his audiences.

Davis, a graduate of Allegheny College, sees clowning as the "next logical step" from his psychology/philosophy degree. Also a graduate of the Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Clown College, Davis views clowning as the most creative art form. To him, clowning uses everything the artist can come into contact with as part of the art. A clown creates his own art form, without any restricting parameters.

After leaving the circus, Davis wanted to continue clowning without doing birthday parties or television commercials. For a time, he worked with the Peace Corps, touring countries at his own expense, and providing free shows in orphanages, schools, hospitals, and prisons.

Davis' next career step will be a tour in the People's Republic of China with Project Troubador, a folk-singing group. Davis plays the accordian with the group and clowns for the audience between selections. Project Troubador will be departing for China this winter.

Affiliate Artist Inc.

by Michael Simpson

This week marked the annual visit of the ALCOA Affiliate Artist, Rick Davis. But, what exactly is an Affiliate Artist? Just another evening CIV? Not quite.

In 1966, Affiliate Artists Inc. was formed, a non-profit organization dedicated to exposing diverse audiences to the arts in a new way that is both interesting and informative. Affiliate Artists selects artists who are typically at the midpoints in their careers and, by connecting them with a sponsor and a presenter, gives them an opportunity to further their careers and to increase their performing skills. The presenter involved provides the itinerary for the year's tour and the sponsor provides the financial backing for the tour, while the artist provides the actual performances.

The performances on an Affiliate Artist tour are called Informances, a combination of informal and informative performances. The basic goal behind these Informances is not only to expose the community to the artist's work but also to provide to the community some into the art form itself through the artist.

Rick Davis is the eighth Affiliate Artist Maryville College has presented in cooperation with the sponsorship of the Alcoa Foundation. Davis has been in the area for three two-week sessions, in late November, early January, and finally this past week. Assistant Director of Development Tom Hudson served as guide for Davis, escorting him to appearances at local church groups, elementary schools, and other performances.

Hudson said of the Affiliate Artist program, "I would say it's an important link between college and community. The Alcoa Foundation and college in partnership are bringing to the area aspects of various performing arts which local people might not normally be exposed to." Both Maryville College and the Alcoa Foundation are dedicated to providing unique cultural development programs, and the Affiliate Artist program is one such way of upholding their dedication. By providing a new Affiliate Artist each year, Maryville College and Alcoa Foundation can provide a wide variety of art forms to the community in order to create a greater understanding of the arts as a whole for the community.

So, the next time you see the term "Affiliate Artist" applied to one of MC's on-campus productions; remember it's not just another evening CIV, you have the opportunity to experience an "Informance."

AFFILIATE ARTIST RICK DAVIS

Area Events

"Androcles and the Lion" will be presented April 18, 19, 25 and 26 at 8:15 p.m. in the MC Theatre. Students Admission is $2.00.

Stevie Nicks will be in concert April 30 at Stokely Athletics Center. Tickets are $12.50 and $15.00 at the UT Central Ticket Office and area Proffitt's stores.

Afrikan Dreamland, a three-man "blu-reggae" group, will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday, April 19, at the U.S. Pavilion on the World's Fair site. The concert/dance is being presented for the Freedom Jam sponsored by tge Tennessee Valley Energy Coalition.

UT MOVIE SCHEDULE

April
18	"To Live and Die in L.A."	UC
19	"To Live and Die in L.A."	UC
20	"Anna Karenina" plus "Intruder in the Dust"*	CBT
21	"Hail Mary"	UC
22	"Five Easy Pieces"	UC
22-23	"The Officail Story"*	CBT
23	"Long Riders"	UC
24-26	"Kiss of the Spider Woman"*	CBT
24-25	"New Films from China"*	CBT
25	"A Clockwork Orange"	UC
26	"A Clockwork Orange"	UC
27	"New Films from China"*	CBT
29	"The Manxman" plus "Notorious"	UC
30	"Psycho"	UC

CBT - Clarence Brown Theatre
UC - University Center

Wolf trap offers chance for kids

by Lynn King

Wolf Trap is bringing music and dance to East Tennessee, and MC is helping to provide a unique opportunity for over 1000 area preschool children.

Wolf Trap Farm Park for the Performing Arts, located in Vienna, Virginia, is America's only national park dedicated to the performing arts. Several thousand performances planned to interest all types of audiences have been held there since 1971, entertaining millions.

A troupe of Wolf Trap artists will perform for over 1000 East Tennessee Head Start children from April 21 through May 2. Funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, this residence will offer preschool children from low-income families the opportunity to experience live music and dance performances, often for the first time.

Wolf Trap will use MC facilities to present nine performances for children of Knoxville, Knox, Blount, Sevier, and Monroe counties.

MC became involved through Director of Student Life Sharon Crane, a former college classmate of one of the coordinators of the trip, when the facilities Wolf Trap had formerly planned to use became unavailable. "We are delighted that the college's facilities will offer these young children the excitement of a live music performance by one of America's jazz virtuosos," Crane said.

The first week of the two-week residency will feature a Wolf Trap Institute Artist-in-Residence performing with a company of life size dinosaur puppets. The second week's music program will be led by Keter Betts, acclaimed bass player in Ella Fitzgerald's band.

"The Land of Colors," a 20-minute ballet performed by the Center Dance Ensemble of Rockville, Maryland, will be presented throughout the residency.

Production to be Thomas' final contribution to MC theatre

by Jesi Kane

The upcoming production of "Androcles and the Lion" will be director Don Thomas' (D.T.) last contribution to Maryville College theatre. Thomas, an instructor in speech and theatre, is leaving Maryville at the end of this school year because his lack of a doctorate makes him ineligible for tenure.

In 1979 Maryville College adopted a policy which stated that all persons "of rank of assistant professor required the earned doctorate and at least one year of teaching in an accredited institution of higher education, or equivalent experience." Thomas was hired as a lecturer part-time then appointed instructor on a year-to-year basis, and has been teaching at Maryville for seven years.

Thomas said that there is nothing personal in the college's decision, and he doesn't feel as if he is being forced out. He said that he would like to stay, but he just is not in a position to earn a doctorate degree.

"The school has always been totally supportive of the theatre program and me personally. Next to the library, I have one of the larger programs on campus."

According to Dr. Carolyn Blair, chariman of the English Department, a faculty member is considered for tenure at the end of the sixth year if a tenure track position is open. To be considered for promotion and tenure, an instructor must have the terminal degree in his or her field. Without the terminal degree, he or she cannot continue on a year-to year appointment.

A promotion to the rank of assistant professor is considered if the person has obtained, or is in the process of obtaining his or her doctorate. Thomas agrees that the school's policy is "only a question of formality" but he feels that a doctorate is not necessary for his position.

He holds a Master of Arts in College Teaching (MACT), which certifies him to teach on a college level. The degree, however, does not satisfy the doctorate policy instated at Maryville College. Thomas believes that a Master of Fines Arts (MFA) would be enough. "It doesn't take the knowledge of a Ph.D. for this position; it's performance oriented."

The College ran an advertisement for Thomas' position in the Chronicle of Higher Education back in January, and has already received a number of applications for the position. Dr. Blair said that Maryville would prefer someone with a doctorate, but could accept someone with an MFA under certain circumstances.

Dr. Al Perkins, Academic Vice-President, said that the decision to grant tenure is not made by one person alone. It is made by the department head, in this case English, the Academic Vice-President, the President of the college, with advice from the Personnel Standards Committee.

This committee consists of five people, four who are tenured and elected by the faculty and the Academic Vice President. Perkins also said that with the exception of the library staff, no one has received tenure without a doctorate for about a decade.

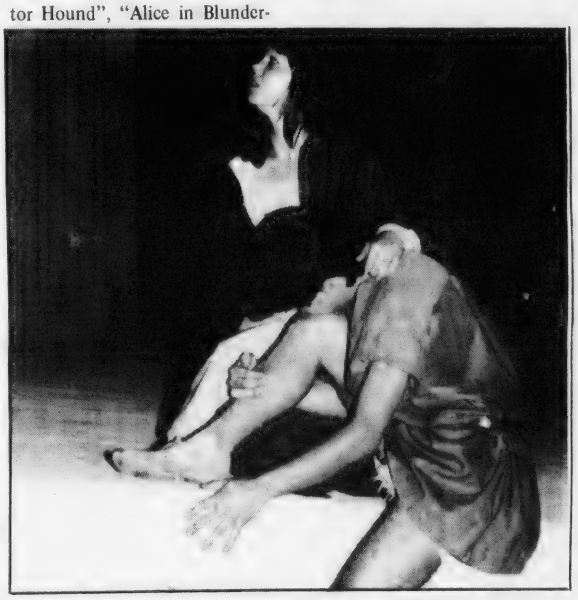
The students are saddened by Thomas' leaving and have expressed concern over what will happen to the theatre program in the future. Chris Herbert, a junior, has worked with Thomas on three shows "Footlights", "Dracula", and "Androcles and the Lion"."He's easy to work with, and he knows just how much stage direction you need. He doesn't give you too much too fast. His professionalsim instills confidence in the cast."

Di Hutsell, a senior, has also worked with Thomas on "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Footlights". "He deals with everyone on a professional level, and he's biased to none. He's a real asset to the theatre and the whole campus. The faculty should be aware of how strong the students are against his leaving."

Mike Howell, a senior acting in "Androcles" said, "D.T. is one of the nicest teachers I've had the pleasure of working with. Beyond that he really seems to know his field--theatre. I challenge the current administration to try and replace D.T. with a man of his caliber - but of course, the administration will get someone who makes THEM happy; not someone who relates so well to the student body."

Jonathon Yarboro, a sophomore, and Lori Suggs, a junior, have both done technical work and have acted in plays since they came to Maryville College. Yarboro has worked on and acted in "Footlights", "Dracula" and "Androcles". "He commands a lot of respect, not from yelling at you, but because he knows his trade better than any director I've worked with before." Suggs has done technical work on "The Real Inspector Hound", "Alice in Blunderland", and "Androcles". She has also done technical work and acted in "Dark of the Moon", "Footlights" and "Dracula". "What he can't teach tech people, he finds someone who can. I think they're stupid to let him go. He takes so much time for students."

Julio Pesiri, a senior and also the lion in "Androcles," said, "As a person he's great. He's been like a friend to me. When I heard about it (Thomas' leaving) I thought, 'What's going to happen to the theatre?' I hate to see him leave, but I understand why he's leaving."



Jeff Hollar, a junior, is also working on the upcoming "Androcles". "I don't think the degree makes the person. If he has the ability, he should be allowed to teach without the degree."

Dr. Blair said that Thomas has "made a tremendous contribution to this campus. He recognizes the situation and understands. His only thought is for the welfare of the school."

Thomas said that he will miss Maryville and the students here. He also said that he has no ill feelings toward anyone here, only positive feelings. Thomas said that he doesn't have any specific plans for the future, but he will stay in the Knoxville area.

DON THOMAS DISCUSSES A SCENE WITH THE CAST FOR THE UPCOMING PLAY "ANDROCLES AND THE LION". OPENING NIGHT IS APRIL 18.

JONATHON YARBORO AND LEAH MUELLER REHEARSE A SCENE FROM "ANDROCLES AND THE LION".

MC MOVIE SCHEDULE

April
17	"The Wall"
18	"All of Me"
21	"Dawn of the Dead"
22	"Cheech and Chong: Up'n Smoke"
23	"Westside Story"
24	"Tommy"
28	"Harold and Maude"
29	"Cheech and Chong"
30	"Oklahoma"
May
1	"The French Lieutenant's Woman"

All movies are shown at 8:00 in the Snack Bar

SHORTS

Tusculum coach makes own rules; Lady Scots win anyway

by Sarah Ferguson

The Lady Scots' record is now 15 - 5 - 1. The Scots recently defeated Tennessee Wesleyan in a double-header with a score of 15 - 0 and a forfeit. Nancy Koehl was 5 - 5 with two RBI and Donna Clancy was 2 - 4 with three RBI.

The Lady Scots also turned up winners in double-headers against Cumberland University and Austin Peay Univeristy. Against Cumberland the Scots won 9 - 4 with Penny Head going 3 - 5 at bat and Koehl going 2 - 4. In the second game the Scots won 11 - 3; Koehl hit 4 - 5 and Clancy hit 2 - 4 with two RBI.

The Scots won the first Austin Peay game 8 - 2; Clancy hit 2 - 4 with three RBI and Denise Penzkofer hit 2 - 4 with two RBI. The second game was won 4 - 2 in 8 innings; Head batted 3 - 4 and Andrea Dye 2 - 2.

Next the Scots faced their biggest test and what seemed like their only chance for recognition -- the Tusculum Tournament.

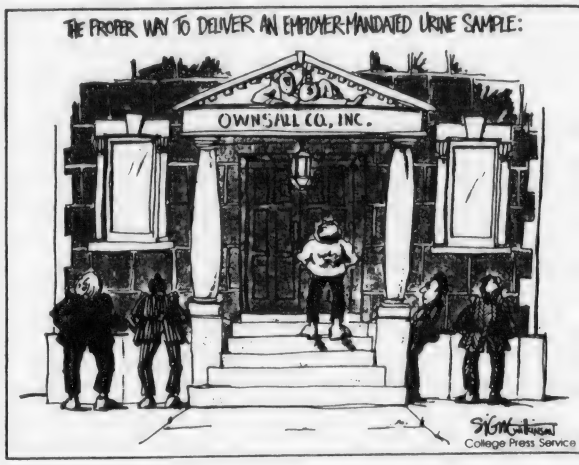
If you've ever played a game with a kid who made up the rules as he went along, you would probably understand the aggravation and frustration that the Lady Scots felt at the Tournament.

It was a round-robin tournament with 12 teams divided into two brackets. To reach the finals, a team had to finish first or second in the bracket.

In their first game, the Scots beat LMU 4 - 0 in 9 innings; Dye batted 1 - 4 with a home run with Sarah Ferguson also going 1 - 4 with a triple.

The Scots next beat Davis and Elkins College 3 - 1; Shellie Studdard was 2 - 2 and Dye was 1 - 2. The Scots were also victorious against Martin Junior College with a score of 8 - 4; Koehl batted 2 - 4 and Penzkofer 2 - 2.

The Scots then suffered their only loss in the tournament to Winthrop College with a score of 6 - 1; Gay Freytag batted 3 - 3 and Dye 2 - 3.



Pending another win against Cumberland, the Scots were in a three-way tie for first place in the bracket after beating LMU.

It seemed that the Scots were bound for the finals until the Tusculum coach dropped his final bomb during the Cumberland game, which the Scots were winning.

He decided that the top two teams in the bracket would not be determined by a playoff game but by the total number of runs scored by the teams during the tournament.

This put LMU and Winthrop on top unless the Scots scored 29 runs against Cumberland. A seven run mercy rule effective after five innings made 29 runs impossible. The Scots went on to win 13 - 2 in five innings. Clancy hit 3 - 4, Dye 2 - 3, Belle Ferguson 2 - 3 with two triples, and DeAnn Hargis 2 - 3.

The Scots will finish their season against Tennessee Tech at home April 29.

ACC from pg. 1

and six student representatives.

General consensus seems to be that the ACC works very well under its present structure. According to Hubert Dixon, the ACC is the only campus governing body around in which you can tell the president he is wrong and get away with it.

But the ACC's hope right now is that through the Student Senate, decision making will eventually occur closer to the constituency: students and faculty.

The Admisssions Office is sponsoring Sneak-a-peek day on April 19, 1986 from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m.

CCM will be headquaters for the day's events which will include a faculty fair, workshops on career planning, wellness, financial aid for parents, and "What is College really like?" for students.

This event is designed to give prospective students from the area a chance to "sneak-a-peek" at Maryville College.

For reservations, call 982-6412, ext. 226.

International students help to bring Countries closer

by Lynn King

(Part two of a two part series)

Some of the difficulties international students face, in addition to large-scale hassles such as immigratiion red tape, are the day-to day adjustments from the cultures to which they are accustomed to that of the U.S., which often involve radical differences. The first major adjustment involves language; any American student who has studied a second language can begin to imagine the challenge of speaking it constantly, with everyone with whom he or she wants to communicate.

Another adjustment that can be a major problem concerns the food served on campus. While most American students would agree with the Japanese students who described the food served in Pearson Hall as "tasteless," mere inedibility is a slight problem compared to the difficulties faced by students whose religions prohibit eating much of what is served there. Often, Muslim and Islamic students choose to live off campus for this reason.

Classroom atmosphere is another area which can be very different for studnts of some cultures. For example, some Japanese and Chinese students find it initially difficult to take an active part in class because they are used to more passive roles in the classroom, where the professor lectures and the student simply listens. In these countries where teachers are perceived as superior and students bow in greeting, greeting a teacher in much the same manner as peers, with a simple "hello," would be seen as disrespectful. Hidenori Akashi, a student from Japan, said that college is much harder here than in Japan; in Japan, preparation for the university is rigorous, then the workload lessens considerably for the college students, while just the opposite is true here.

Another cultural difference which can be hard for students from some countries to adjust to involves the demonstrativeness and lack of reserve of most Americans. The American custom of greeting people on the street in passing, whether one knows them or not, is strange to students of some cultures. Ishun Ahmad said this is not done in Malaysia, and he could run into severe trouble just for speaking to a girl he didn't know if his intentions were misinterpreted.

Sayuri Yamaguchi, a Japanese student who first learned about MC during President Anderson's last visit, said she was unsure how to react at first when spoken to in passing, as this practice is unfamiliar in Japan as well. Yamaguchi said she thought this difference could be partly due to an American need for reassurance, resulting from the diversity of the population, while the population of Japan is essentially Japanese.

She also observed that while Americans appear to be friendlier on the surface, lawsuits are much more commom here than in Japan. Akashi said that it is easier to make freinds here, on the surface, but not to really know them, while in Japan it is just the opposite.

Stranger even than excessive surface friendliness, to students of more conservative cultures, is publicly showing affection. Students from some Middle Eastern nations said that seeing couples holding hands or kissing in public was shocking at first,, while one Japanese student observed that Americans are always hugging, another difference from life in Japan.

Imad Adem, a student from Jordan who has already studied in Greece, said there is a lack of

- see pg. 8

As I See It

by Pat Moyer
part one of a two part series

Who will take home the major league pennant?

There comes a time in the life of every sports columnist when his opinion is asked. Recently the question, "Who will win the World Series?" was directed at me. Well, I'll put my unproven and untested skills on the line and try and pick who will take home the major league pennant.

Let's first take a look at the Ameican League. The league's East Division is one of the strongest divisions in the big leagues. The Orioles, after winning the series in 1983, have plummeted in a hurry. But with Earl Weaver managing for a full season and a probable return to form by the pitching staff, there is enough offense to put the Birds right back in the thick of things. Infielders Cal Ripken, Jr. and Eddie Murray will have to have great years again, in order for the Os to reach the series.

The Boston Red Sox are a true mystery team. The talent is surely there, yet they always seem to disappoint the fans. Off-season acquisitions of pitchers Calvin Schiraldi and Wes Gardner could be the lift they needed. If Wade Boggs continues to embarass opposing pitchers and Jim Rice collects his 100+ RBIs, the Red Sox could be a legitimate contender for the first time since 1978. Only time will tell.

In Cleveland it will take a major miracle for them to even climb out of the cellar. Until some dependable pitcher shows up on the banks of Lake Erie, the Indians can mail in their 1986 results. Their manager is Pat Corrales, which gives you some idea of their success. Who is he?

In Detroit the Tigers once again will be a force to be reckoned with. Sure, they have good pitching along with a solid infield and outfield, but now that they've resigned Kirk Gibson, they have the one star player who can make the difference between winning a pennant and finishing down in the pack.

The Milwaukee Brewers are another team that has quickly slid downhill. The pitching staff is mediocre at best, with no standout starters and no reliever in the bullpen. The Brewers' most realistic goal in 1986 may be to finish 500.

The Yankees are a powerful team, and the only thing that can stop them from winning is internal strife. Their pitching staff is old and getting older with three pitchers over 40. This could be a factor down the stretch.

In Toronto the Blue Jays are coming off their best season ever. But how smooth will the transition from Bobby Cox to new manager Jimy Williams be? And what about those guys in the bullpen last season: are they for real? Can Doyle Alexander continue to win? A lot of questions must be answered before they can repeat as champions.

My prediction for American League East winner is the Baltimore Orioles.

The American League West has to be the weakest division in the majors. Four of the seven teams finished with losing records. The California Angels blew a six-game All-Star break lead, but were still in the pennant race until they lost three out of four games to the eventual champion Kansas City Royals. The Angels led the American league in fielding last year, but will have to produce a couple of hitters to compliment Brian Downing and Reggie Jackson, if they want to contend.

The Chicago White Sox were 12th in the league in hitting (.253) and seventh in pitching (4.07 ERA), and they must improve on both in 1986. The ingredients are here for a return to the bliss of 1983, when the Sox won the American League West by 20 games. Consistency is the key to their success this year.

The defending World Series Champions, the Kansas City Royals will once again finish high. Saberhagen, Brett, and Howser: it's a trio that will keep the Royals on top of the western division.

The final four teams are the disappointment in the American League West. The Minnesota Twins are young and could fare well with some experience. Manager Ray Miller is highly regarded throughout the sport and may be the one to point the Twins in the right direction.

The Oakland A's suffered from a lack of pitching depth in 1985, and this year doesn't look much better. They'll be lucky to finish in the top five.

In Seattle the Mariners are an unknown club. They do not draw much publicity and they don't draw many fans either. Top players include Mark Langston, Jim Presley, and Dave Henderson, which illistrates their lack of publicity.

The Rangers are starting their 14th year in Texas, and this team is about as effective as the Washington Senator franchise which predated it. Last year's 62-99 record will probably even drop further, placing the Rangers among the worst teams in baseball history.

My prediction: American League West winner California Angels.

In the American League playoffs the Orioles will sweep the Angels, placing them in the Fall Classic.

Rietkovich brings winning attitude to MC

by Pat Moyer

Ty Rietkovich was appointed to the MC football staff last week.

A native of Columbia, South Carolina, Rietkovich enjoys life and plans on pursuing his present ambitions and goals in East Tennessee. His primary duties will involve recruiting and coaching the wide receivers and tight ends. Rietkovich is optimistic about his appointment at MC.

"I'm very excited about coaching at Maryville College" Rietkovich said, "I consider it a great step up to be able to contribute to building a strong program here."

Rietkovich comes to MC from the University of South Carolina, where he was a two-year letterman as a Gamecock tight end. In 1980, as a freshman, he was part of South Carolina's Gator Bowl team. The 6'3" former receiver finished his playing career in 1984, but remained at South Carolina as a graduate assistant.

"My two years as a G.A. (graduate assistant) at South Carolina was a great learning experience for me," he said. "It helped me understand how to deal with players, and hopefully I can apply that here at Maryville."

When not coaching, Rietkovich enjoys playing golf and softball. In his leisure time he likes to listen to music, especially country and western. He is not married.

Athletic Director Randy Lambert feels Rietkovich is going to be a great addition to the MC staff.

"We're glad to have Ty on board" said Lambert, "He comes from an excellent program at USC, and I know he'll bring a winning attitude to Maryville. He has already been highly successful in his recruiting efforts."

Sports Events

Friday, April 19
1:00 Baseball vs. Hampden-Sydney - Away
1:30 Men's Tennis vs. Emory & Henry - Away
1:00 Softball vs. Concord College - Away
Saturday, April 19
1:00 Baseball vs. Washington & Lee - Away
9 a.m. Women's Tennis vs. N. Centre - Away
Monday, April 21
3 p.m. Softball vs. Tusculum - Away
Tuesday, April 22
3 p.m. Men's Tennis vs. Roane State - Away
2 p.m. Women's Tennis vs. LMU - Away
Friday, April 25
TBA Women's Tennis WIAC Tournament - Away
TBA Men's Tennis ODAC Tournament - Away
Saturday, April 26
TBA Women's Tennis WIAC Tournament - Away
TBA Men's Tennis ODAC Tournament - Away
1:0 c.s.t. Baseball vs. Sewanee - Away
Sunday, April 27
TBA Men's Tennis ODAC Tournament - Away
Monday, April 28
1:30 Women's Tennis vs. Roane State - Home
Tuesday, April 29
3:00 Softball vs. Tennessee Tech - Home
Wednesday, April 30
TBA Baseball ODAC Tournament

Annual Road Race held

by Lynn King

A number of runners from the MC community geared up for the 8th Annual Scots-Daily Times Road Race Saturday, April 12.

MC was represented by several students, faculty members, and members of the future MC Track Club in the 5K and 10K races. Michael Marvet, one of the organizing forces of the track club, said "The 10K course was excellent and the weather was perfect."

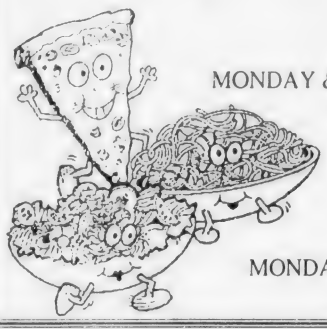
Heather Farrar, a sophomore, said after running the 5K race, "I think it's a beautiful event. It's a great community spirit activity. The age range included people in their 60's to little 4-year-olds. I think that's great." Farrar added, "But really, all I wanted was a shirt."

Several track club members plan to run again as a group in the Sweetwater Road Race on Saturday. New members are still strongly encouraged to join.

THE BACK PAGE

Hey, Maryville!

Musselman's



ALL · YOU · CAN · EAT

BUFFET

IS NOW ON

MONDAY NIGHT TOO!

PIZZA! SALAD BAR! SPAGHETTI!

$3.49

MONDAY & TUESDAY NIGHTS
5:30 - 8:30 p.m.

$3.29

MONDAY - FRIDAY LUNCH
11:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

FREE
MEDIUM SOFT DRINK
WITH THE PURCHASE OF ONE BUFFET
Not valid with any other coupons or specials
Musselman's

$5.99
LARGE PEPPERONI
THIN CRUST PIZZA
Not valid with any other coupons or specials
Musselman's

Wall poses hazard to MC motorists

by Sarah Ferguson

Driving off of and onto the MC campus is a very tricky process that sometimes calls for survival tactics, such as a quick slam of the brakes and a 90-degree turn, or a speedy acceleration.

What are the causes for such hazardous driving techniques? At the entrance to Highway 321 students point to one main cause -- the wall.

When asked, Sybil Porter said "I can't see around the wall when I pull out of campus, and I can't see over the plants on the median when I'm pulling back in." She also said that she can't see the entrance at Court Street because there's no light.

Lynn Sedowicz had the same complaints about the intersection -- she can't see around the wall or over the plants.

Nelson Yan said that it's hard to see the cars coming so he has to pull way out.

Complaints have also reached higher places. Donna Davis, MC Business Manager, has also been hearing complaints and has already been talking with the city manager and the State Highway Department. The wall was put up last year by the State Highway Department when it completed the new highway. Davis said the original design called for the wall to be higher and the highway department modified it.

When Davis called the highway department about the problems at the intersection, the department sent over traffic safety engineers to survey the situation. Their solution was to draw a new stop line that's 22 feet further out from the original.

Nevertheless, Larry Wilmoth complained that, "I have to pull over the new white line to see. It's easier to see at night because of the lights, but during the day I've almsot been smacked a couple of times."

Denise Penzkofer said, "I can't see because of the wall, and I have to pull out into the lane to see traffic."

After measuring it, the Echo found that the wall is three feet four inches high at its highest point and an average-sized car of four feet and four inches has to pull three feet eight inches past the new line to have an absolutely clear view of a road to the left.

However, it seems very unlikely at this point anything will be done to the wall and Donna Davis advised people to be cautious at the intersection.

Impressions should be impressive literature

by Sarah Schaefer

The 1986 edition of Impressions magazine will be available the first week of May. Impressions is the annual literary and artistic publication of work by members of the MC community.

The Editors of Impressions this year are Sherri Jones and Sam Cornett. They operate under faculty advisor Dr. Charlotte Beck.

Work began in February after the Publications Committee selected the editors. Artistic and literary submissions were solicited until March 1. Sherri Jones was "pleased with the large number (69) of literary contributions" yet "was disapponited that no prints or sketches were submitted."

After a rigorous selection process by the 10 student staff members, 25 pieces were accepted for publication. No more than three pieces per person will be printed.

The copies will be of professional quality. Drawings by several students will highlight selected poems. Complimentary copies will be given to all contributors and sponsors. Individual copies will be available at minimal cost during lunch hours in or around Pearsons Hall.

International students

cont. from pg.6

respect among young people here for parents and older people that is not found in his home country. An American oddity that bothers Aidil Omar is that it seems as if everything is paid for twice; in Malaysia, a thing has one price, while in the U.S., there is first an original price, then tax is added.

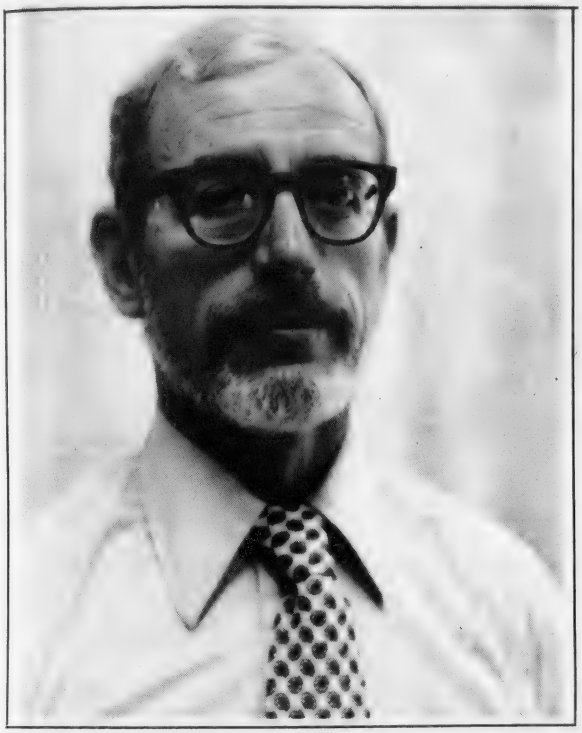
Stephen Wei, who has already been a teacher in China, found American clothing styles quite strange sometimes; he said sometimes it seems that girls dress like boys because there is no difference in their clothing. In regard to national character, one Japanese student said that Americans seem to overestimate materialism. Another interesting observation about the most immediately noticeable differences between this country and Japan was made by a student who said simply, "It smells different."

Emphasis is often placed on what international students have to gain from studying in the U.S. but their contributions to the college community are great as well. Students from other countries do come to learn about American culture; however at the same time, this is an excellent opportunity for Americans to learn as much or more from them.

"I would encourage our students to get to know the international students. They are so interesting, and their backgrounds are so interesting," Leslie Nier said. "The more students I meet, the more I want to know."

Dr. Kim also encouraged American students to make an effort to know international students. He urged them to visit International House, stressing that the International Club is for both international and American students and is an excellent opportunity for students from different countries to get acquainted. Asked if international study programs will help erase the sterotypical ideas that exist between countries, Dr. Kim said, "Definitely! That's the best way of going."

Sometimes these stereotypes are perpetuated by the very cultural differences which are so interesting to learn about. Yamaguchi recalled a basic truth that is sometimes overlooked when so much emphasis is placed on differences when she said, "Human beings are human beings." "All people have the same emotions; different cultures just have different ways of expressing them."



Akashi echoed this thought. He said that his purpose in coming to America to study was to learn about the American culture and American people, but "I was surprised that we are the same."

Campus Events

Friday, April 18
4:30 - Board of Directors Reception
8:15 - "Androcles and the Lion." Opening Night Reception. Theatre
Saturday, April 19
9 a.m. - 3 p.m. - Sneak-a-Peek-Day. CCM
9 a.m. - 3 p.m. - R/A S/A Workshop
8:15 p.m. - "Androcles and the Lion." Theatre
9 p.m. - 1 a.m. - Art Club Dance. Alumni Gym
Monday, April 21
Noon - Great Decisions. Snack Bar
Tuesday, April 22
10:20 a.m. - Weekly Worship led by Kirk Burdick plus the Black Student Association Choir. CCM
11 a.m. - 2 p.m. - Earth Day Celebration
Thursday, April 24
Senior Comprehensives
Wolf Trap Artists. Wilson Chapel (4/24 - 5/2)
Friday, April 25
Senior Comprehensives
9 p.m. - 1 a.m. - Rock Solid Fellowship. Snack Bar
Monday, April 28
Noon - F.A.S.T. Talk "Being Your Own Contractor" Dining Room Alcove
7 p.m. - Awards Banquet
Thursday, May 1
4 p.m. - Room Draw

Highland Echo

Vol. 71 No. 4 | Maryville College | Thursday, May 1, 1986

Dr. Aldred Perkins will leave Maryville College July 6 for his new position at Berea College.

Perkins resigns

by Darrell Franklin

Dr. Alfred Perkins has accepted the position of Academic Vice President and Dean of the College at Berea College in Kentucky. He will be leaving his post at Maryville College on July 6.

Leaving after an eight year stay at Maryville College, Dr. Perkins cited the need for the incoming president of the college to choose his own Academic Vice President as one of the reasons that he accepted the timely offer from Berea College.

He also stated that he had accomplished much that he had wanted to in his stay at Maryville and that it was time for someone new to come in and bring in new creativity while he goes to Berea and does the same. Dr. Perkins said there were no ill feelings in his departure.

Dr. Perkins commented that the things that attracted him to Berea College were the things that made Maryville College similarly attractive. The commitment to an inter-racial education, the education of Appalachian youth, a liberal arts education, and to under graduate education were all important factors that appealed to Perkins as he made his choice.

There has been some concern among the students at MC about the rash of resignations in top administrative levels. Neal McBrayer, a senior political science major, voiced this worry by saying, "I am a little dismayed at the turnover in several administrative postitions this year. I hope that to despite the losses, they are losses, that the college can continue to grow and improve. Frankly I am a bit skeptical as to whether it can or not."

When asked whether or not the resignations of President Anderson and Robert A. Ellis, Vice President for Development, who resigned last summer as well as his own resignation would hurt the college, Perkins said that at an institution as long lived as MC there is the ability to perform normal activities without the loss of quality that some expect.

He stated that college is on the right course and that it will go on with great strength.

Given the opportunity to leave one message to the students at MC, Dr. Perkins stated that the students are more fortunate than they realize because of the amount of opportunities for personal growth at MC. His advise is "to seek and seize those opportunities."

Making these opportunities available to students and faculty is what Dr. Perkins enjoys most. He said, "Overall, seeing people have new kinds of experiences that will enable them to grow," is the aspect that he liked best in his stay at MC.

More specifically he said that Faculty Development Program, the Continuing Education Program, and the Life Enhancement Portfolio Program were some of the highpoints of his term at MC.

He was quick to point out that no one person can run a college, and that these programs were the result of a lot of work by others as well as the efforts of himself.

The dedication and hard work of the faculty and staff as well as the opportunity to achieve

see pg. 3

May Madness features weekend of fun

by Michael Simpson

Spring has arrived here at Maryville College, and with it, the long awaited return of May Madness. May Madness, the annual celebration of spring, and life in general, is the weekend festival beginning the evening of Friday, May 2.

Friday evening, the Pearson's Patio area will be the site of a pig roasting and live music from 5 p.m. to 11 p.m. Four bands, including MC's own rock band, Paydirt, and the Royal Court of China from Nashville will be on hand to provide the appropriate opening atmosphere for the celebration.

Another musical option on campus that evening will be The Originals, a local contemporary Christian group including MC freshman, Mike Bradam. The Originals concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Music Hall.

Saturday morning heralds the beginning of a day of games between teams representing most of the factions of Maryville College: residence halls, faculty, administration, commuter students and others. Events scheduled for this contest include a tug-of-war and a pizza eating contest.

The climax of the weekend comes Saturday night at the Spring Fling, a semi-formal dance to be held at Morningside Inn. Live music will be provided by the Jerry Collins Orchestra, a Knoxville band that specializes in music from the 40's to the 80's. Admission to this gala event is $5 per person.

Sunday is reserved as a time for relaxation and recuperation from the weekend of celebration.

Sharon Crane, MC Director of Student Life, encourages members of the faculty, staff and administration to attend. Since May Madness is open to all of the MC community Crane stated this is an opportune time for all of the members of the College community to come together and participate in an activity which is enjoyable for everyone.

Forensics reactivated

by Sherry Bonham

Forensics at Maryville College will be reactivated in the fall semester of 1986 after a "rest" of 16 years. Dr. Arda Walker and Ms. Sherry Bonham will coach the new team. Both are former debaters and speakers; Dr. Walker coached the Maryville College team for 19 years. (She was Ms. Bonham's debate coach for 2 years.)

According to Ms. Bonham, debate is an exhilirating experience. Bonham said that when the student competes in an intercollegiate forensic tournament, "your heart is pounding; adrenaline races in your body. You feel as jumpy as a soldier in a

see pg. 6

Bolden named acting V.P.

Dr. Dean Allen Bolden, associate professor of sociology and chair of the Division of Social Sciences at MC has been named by Dr. Anderson as the acting Academic Vice President.

Dr. Bolden will assume the post on July 7, 1986, taking the responsibilities from the hands of Dr. Alfred Perkins who will be going to Berea College to assume the Academic Vice President's duties there.

Dr. Bolden earned a B.A. at Hanover College and gained his Ph.D. at Vanderbilt University. In his seventh year at Maryville College, Dr. Bolden was named acting Academic Vice President from July 1986 to July 1987.

When asked what he sees before him in the coming year, Dr. Bolden replied that this next year would be challenging. He said that even though it will be a year of transition, he will strive to keep the college moving forward. He stated that MC cannot and will not stop going forward.

Highlights

Fowler has story to tell pg. 3

Scots baseball pg. 6

Rock group spreads word pg. 5

Security crackdown pg. 8

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Sick humor

Some people have a sick sense of humor. As the recent Thaw Hall bomb threat tells us, Maryville is not lacking in its share of such people.

Perhaps in light of the recent alleged Libyan terrorist attacks this individual(s) felt particularly compelled to play such a silly game.

In the words of Debbie Nichols "a bomb threat is a terrorist act." We couldn't agree more.

It makes little difference that no bomb was found. The incident was obviously disruptive and emotionally disturbing to some.

We certainly hope that no MC students participated in this sick hoax.

Lesson in Hall 1

The residents of Hall I recently learned a lesson that should be beneficial to other residence halls.

The scene began with broken chairs and eventually culminated into full scale accusations and charges everywhere. People who claimed they were innocent seemed to have been found guilty before proven innocent.

Rather than engage in the bureaucratic judicial system of a Hall Council, residents with grievances met with the Resident Director to air out their differences.

At times the words were a little harsh but everyone was honest. What had previously been a series of rumors through the grapevine became a face to face discussion.

Unfortunatley rumors can be devastating to those they infest. We congratulate Hall I on what we feel is an innovative and efficient way of dealing with its problems.

Another view of . . .

Being the editor

by Brian Linkous

Nobody ever said it was going to be easy. But then they never said that it would be downright impossible either.

When I decided that I would give a shot at being editor of the ECHO I knew that there would be difficulties; I just didn't realize to what degree.

The first and foremost was that there was no one left, with the exception of Tom Hudson who has been a great help, from previous ECHO staffs to orient the new staff on standard operating procedure.

A problem such as this is quickly remedied after an all night marathon. Before the first marathon I was confused and uncertain of what the fruits of my labor would produce.

As it turned out my labor produced the realization that if things didn't change I was going to go crazy. More importantly it produced the feeling that I had done this work all of my life. Suddenly I understood and I was no longer confused, except for why I had no staff helping me.

I promised myself that things would be better for the second issue, and they were to a degree. But I still stayed up all night for marathon II.

There have now been four issues and things have admittedly improved, especially in organization. I even go to bed now on Tuesday night.

Things even look promising for next year: an increased budget, a larger staff, a good mix of upper and lower classmen, more innovative ideas, and a continued committment to a quality newspaper. Undoubtedly the ECHO is on a stable track with a promising future.

Yet for all of these promises, I am again confused about something: general community support. What does it take to get people actively involved in their community and world?

In specific I am talking about a section of the paper known as "letters to the editor." It is a place for people to voice, responsibly, their views on whatever. The ECHO has such a page although response to it would almost indicate otherwise.

On more than one accassion I have heard students who were strongly against something (sometimes an editorial) say that they were going to "write a letter to the editor." If these letters have been written I haven't received them.

In the last issue we were fortunate enough to have two thought provoking columns. In the one we had Dr. Parker's strong hint of another great depression and Dr. Cartlidge's accusation that America is essentially a terrorist herself.

Now if these articles don't entice at least one reply it is hard to imagine what will.

Do college students not care what happens around them? I hesitate to use the cliche "apathy" which seems to come up every spring but there is a problem.

Lest we think that this is exclusively a student problem let us think again. Dwell on this fact: on three seperate occassions the ECHO asked a different professor to do a guest column on a current topic of interest. The professors neither wrote the column nor wrote a reply saying that they could not do the article.

Personally I expect a little more from the people who teach us. I only wonder if professors are familiar with the feeling that a student has when he/she fails to turn in an assignment.

This is not, however, meant to take away from those faculty who have given their welcome support. It is merly to point out that as a college community, we should all be more involved in our surroundings,

This does not just apply to support of the newspaper but support of all facets of the college community. We should have a network of mutual support.

Let us hope that with next year we can all start fresh and do a little more than we have done in the past.

Highland Echo

Editor . . . . . Brian C. Linkous
Business Manager . . . . . Jack Griffin
Entertainment Editor . . . . . Lynn King
Sports Editor . . . . . Pat Moyer
Photo Editor . . . . . Kathy Hudson
Typist . . . . . Karen W. Williams
Staff Writers . . . . . Michael Simpson, Sarah Schaefer, Sarah Ferguson, Darrell Franklin, Jesi Kane
Advisor . . . . . Ms. Lax-Farr

Letters, comments, or inquiries should be addressed to the Highland Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College, Maryville, Tennessee 37801. Opinions expressed in the Echo do not necessarily express the views of the editor, staff, and/or college administration. The Echo is a member of the College Press Service and is printed by the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times.

SENIORS!
GRADUATE STUDENTS!
RECENT GRADUATES!

Would you like to drive away in a Brand New Automobile TODAY?

■ No Down Payment Necessary ■ No Credit Necessary
■ No Co-signer Needed ■ First Payment Can Be Deferred as Much as 90 Days
■ Foreign or Domestic — New or Used

Come Visit East Tennesse's #1 Chrysler-Plymouth Dealer

Knoxville, TN. 1-800-251-1370

★ ☆ Home of 5 year/50,000 Mile Warranty ☆ ☆ Over 200 Cars to Choose From ☆ ★

Chrysler LeBaron Convertible

HAVE YOUR CAR WORKED ON BY THE BEST — Nobody Does It Like We Do

Lane CHRYSLER PLYMOUTH

930 North Broadway 546-1370

Perkins

from pg. 1

some rewarding and creative things is what awaits the new Academic Vice President said Dr. Perkins. He also said that the new person would find an institution on the move.

It has been this flexibilitly and the availability for personal growth that has highlighted Dr. Perkins' career at MC. He said finally, "I've enjoyed my time here. I've enjoyed the people. I hope I've been able to make some difference."

The Snack Bar will be open for study breaks on Sunday evening, May 4 and May 11, from 7 - 11 p.m.

Weekly Worship Service - Tuesday, May 6, 1986 - 10:20 a.m. CCM - Led by Reverend Earl Rash and featuring the Maryville College Choir.

Dr. Fowler: A professor with a story to tell

by Karen Williams

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler is a person who always has a story to tell. If a student ran into Dr. Fowler on campus, she might tell that student about her grandfather (who immigrated to America from England), her four children (two are college professors and two are ministers), her six grandchildren, her log cabin on Watts Bar Lake, her little dog Terry, her involvement with the church, her publications, her teaching career, or her latest trip to England.

Though semi-retired now, Dr. Fowler is still teaching Technical Writing and Advanced Composition in Track II of the English major. Dr. Carolyn Blair, head of the English department, said that "we are especially indebted to her for developing the writing track as an option for English majors."

For those students who don't know her, Dr. Fowler is a professor of English at Maryville College. She received a B.S. from Birmingham-Southern College, a B.D. from Vanderbilt University, and an M.A. and Ph. D. from the University of Tennessee. Dr. Fowler came to MC as assistant professor of English in 1969, became associate professor in 1976, and professor in 1980.

Dr. Fowler said that MC's English department is "one of the strongest, if not the strongest department on campus." She said that what makes the department so strong is that it is well-rounded and balanced. The English department has young professors, older professors, and those in the middle. Dr. Fowler says that "each (professor) has an area of specialty."

Dr. Blair said that "Dr. Fowler is one of the most versatile and creative teachers I have known. She is always ready with whatever courses we need."

Dr. Fowler's list of publications shows just how versatile and creative she is. The list includes "The Search for King Arthur -- Success or Failure?" an MC Bulletin, Jan. 1974; "Career Planning and Placement," an MC Bulletin, June 1974; "Vachel Lindsay, The Children's Poet," Tennessee Philolgical Bulletin XI, July 1974; and Holston Women. A Journey of Faith, 1974.

Dr. Elizabeth Fowler

She also edited a self-study for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. She is currently writing a series of Sunday school lessons on the Apocrypha which will include teacher and student manuals. Dr. Fowler says that while the College "does not emphasize publishing... a good many publications come out of the (English department."

Dr. Fowler said that her next project is to popularize her Vachel Lindsay material. Vachel Lindsay is the early 20th century American poet who was the subject of her dissertation. She has letters written to a friend of hers from Lindsay. She said she wants to "write up this material for the general public, with no scholarly trappings."

Her career at MC has been a very fulfilling one. Since coming to Maryville College, Dr. Fowler has filled in as college chaplain, chairman of the Individualized Major Committee and of the Faculty Club Committee, chairman of the committee appointed to revise the campus governance system, a member of the ACC and the Judicial Council, a member of the committee that started the Career Planning and Placement program, and co-chairman of the Vachel Lindsay Festival. She is currently serving as president of Alpha Gamma Sigma (honor society), and faculty advisor of Alpha Lambda Delta (freshman honor society).

Dr. Fowler said that one of the things that has made her career at MC fulfilling is her involvement with the students. She enjoys teaching and her students enjoy learning from her. Melissa Walker, one of Dr. Fowler's former students, said that, "She is really fascinating." Another former student, Joanie Williams, said, "Dr. Fowler is interesting. I really enjoyed going to her class."

These students are not alone in their opinion of Dr. Fowler. She came in second in the voting in 1976 and first in 1978 for the Outstanding Teacher Award on campus. Dr. Blair said that "a small department like ours is indeed fortunate to have such a capable and dedicated teacher."

ENTERTAINMENT

Akashi expresses emotion through music

by Lynn King

"Versatile" should be Hide Akashi's middle name.

At 21, Akashi has already recorded an album, is accomplished in both contemporary and classical music, plays a number of instruments, speaks several languages, has extensively studied everything from art to philosophy, and has studied for almost a year in a foreign country.

How did an accomplished musician from Fukushima, Japan, ever wind up at Maryville College? "Almost by accident," according to Akashi. A music major at the Hokkaido University of Education, Akashi knew that he wanted to study in a foreign country to learn about another culture, but he hadn't decided on the U.S. when he found a small ad and, rather jokingly, took an exam to study here.

Surprised at being one of the few students who passed, Akashi had decided to study in Alabama when, again by accident, he met Dr. Anderson on the top of a famous mountain in Japan, near his university. After talking with Dr. Anderson, Akashi made the decision to come to MC instead. He has been here since last fall and will return to Japan at the end of May.

Coming from a family of artists, Akashi has been musical all of his life. He began playing the piano as a child and, able to play by ear, didn't actually take lessons until around age 18. "I was very affected by classical music," Akashi said.

MC students will have the chance to see the classical side of Akashi when he presents his student recital Friday, May 9, at 7 p.m. in the FAC Music Hall. Akashi said that this recital will be a combined concert, featuring singing, composition, and piano. He will sing two English songs and two Italian songs by Tosti, for which Sayuri Yamaguchi, also a music major, will be accompianist. Two of his original compositions will be performed as well, a rondo in A minor and variations in F minor. 'I don't want to give names to my instrumental pieces," Akashi said. "I don't want to order my ideas to the music."

Also included in the program are three Chopin works. "I was very affected by Chopin," Akashi said. Dr. Robert Bonham, Akashi's piano teacher, said of him, "He is very gifted, and has a very fine ear." Dr. Bonham added, "He has a lot of sensitivity."

While talented in classical music, Akashi has other musical interests as well. "I really like hard rock," he said. Akashi recorded his first rock album entitled "Masterpiece", about a year ago. In addition to singing, he composed all of the music and most of the lyrics, some of which are in English, with the exception of some written by one of his high school teachers.

He also plays all of the instruments and recorded the entire album himself in his room at home, where he has a synthesizer and everything else needed to produce a professional-sounding product. With the exception of the female vocals, this album, which might be called soft rock, is a one-man effort. A former art student, Akashi designed his own record jacket as well.

Talented in both contemporary and classical music, which does Akashi prefer? "It depends on the situation," he said. "The difference is only form. Chopin and hard rock work from the same emotion. I want to explain the emotion." Discussing the primary goal for music as a whole, Akashi said, "I'm hypothesizing that music is the one kind of form to explain the human emotion -- music itself."

Akashi said that both classical and rock music fulfill this goal, as the basic emotions are universally recognizable. "I want to express this kind of emotion, like sadness," he said. Going to a piano to illustrate his point, Akashi struck a chord: "To me, this is a death chord," he said. It obviously is.

This kind of reflection, extending beyond the superficial aspect of things, is characteristic of Akashi. Very interested in philosophy and religion, Akashi said that he has been "very affected by philosophy." "I believe that there are two types of human beings. One seeks eternity, something sure. Another lives actually."

A Buddhist, Akashi is currently in the process of doing a 1000 days of meditation. This is a kind of training in the Buddhist religion which involves 30 minutes of meditation every day; if he skips even one day, he must begin again at 0. Akashi said that some of the objectives of this kind of training are "to develop psychic power," and to increase spiritual and physical power as well.

Marian Fitzgerald, acting director of the Center for English Language, has known Akashi since he first came to MC last fall. She said, "He's been one of the most interesting students to have in class. He has some very interesting ideas."

"I think he is very ambitious. He's very widely read, and he knows a lot of things," Fitzgerald continued. "I think living in America has been a good experience for him. And he's been a good experience for us."

Hide Akashi demonstrates just how versatile he really is.

Since Akashi's university in Japan is a university of education, he will be prepared to teach after graduation. He said that he would be interested in music as a career, but money is not his objective; his purpose in composing is just to express the "common emotion -- so people can share it." Multifaceted, Akashi added, "The music is not my life, only the method to express my emotion."

Those who don't know Akashi personally have probably seen him around campus -- he's the one wearing red, black and white. Having been influenced by studying psychology, another one of his interests, Akashi said that he has worn this color combination almost exclusively for about two or three years, after deciding that it creates an image easy for most people to identify. Not surprisingly, his album jacket is also red, black and white.

Students who know Akashi comment on his intriguing personality as well as his versatility and musical talent. "He's a very theatrical person. He has a theatricality that's very refreshing," said Joe Chamberlain. "He's very aware. Sometimes I wonder if the music he plays is a result of his temperament, or just happens to go along with his temperament." Chamberlain added, "He shares his music almost reverently. I think he's very humble about that."

Like Chamberlain, Mike Bradam met Akashi through the MC Concert Choir, for which Akashi prepared an arrangement of Japanese folk music for the recent Spring Tour. Bradam said that after seeing him compose, sing, and play several instruments, "I thought, 'Is there anything this guy can't do?' Every time I turn around, he does something new."

"He's a very talented individual," Mary Gaines said. "He has an open mind to new cultures." Probably Gaines came as close to describing Akashi as it's possible to do when she said simply, "Hide's quite a character."

UT MOVIE SCHEDULE

May

2	"Body Double"	UC
3	"Body Double"	UC
4	"Streetwise"	CBT
6	"This Strange Passion" plus "El Bruto"	UC
7	"Citizen Kane"	UC
9	"Night of the Comet"	UC
10	"Night of the Comet"	UC
13	"Man of Marble"	UC
14	"Lawrence of Arabia"	UC
16	"Witness"	UC
17	"Witness"	UC
18	"Himatsuri"	CBT
20	"Mr Smith Goes to Washington"	UC
21	"Taxi Driver"	UC
23	"After Hours"	UC
24	"After Hours"	UC
25	"Le Bal"	CBT
27	"Stagecoach" plus "The Shootest"	UC

For showtime information, call 974-5455

MC MOVIE SCHEDULE

May

1 "The French Lieutenant's Woman"
5 "The Warriors"
6 "Wierd Science"
7 "The Wiz"
8 "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest"

All movies are shown at 8:00 p.m. in the Snack Bar.

Rock group spreads word

by Darrell Franklin

Maryville High School has sent Maryville College scholars, athletes, and now...gospel rock musicians.

Mike Bradam, 19, a freshman music major, plays keyboards and sings lead for the contemporary Christian rock group, "The Originals". Along with Bradam, the band is made up of Mickey Bradam, Mike's brother, Victor Garcia, and William West.

"The Originals" will be playing during May Madness on Friday, May 2 in the Fine Arts Auditorium. The admission is free, and the band is being sponsered by the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Bradam, who wants to be a minister of music at a church, said that the group is a mixture of entertainment and ministry. He and the other three in the group try to spread the gospel of Jesus Christ and to be entertaining at the same time. Bradam emphasized this by saying that they were Christians first and rock musicians second.

Bradam said that being able to look out and see lives changing or affected positively was the thing that he liked best about performing with the band.

The band plays a mix of current music with songs from contemporary gospel performers such as Petra, Shelia Walsh, Degarmo and Key, and Wayne Watson.

Bradam also likes to write music for the group. About one-fourth of the music that the band plays comes from the pen of Bradam. One of Bradam's songs, "Thank You Jesus", has been copyrighted.

Bradam said that through his music he has the chance to be in front of people and express what is important for meaningful life.

THE SALON FOR FAMILY HAIR STYLING

HOUSE OF HAIR

Jack Coker and Kenneth Melton
Owners

321 High Street Dial 982-4584

10% discount with MC id.

Electronic music comes to MC

by Lynn King

Good news for music majors or anyone else interested in broadening his or her musical horizons: a new course in electronic music will be offered at MC next fall.

"Electronic Music is an introduction to the field of electronic music," said Robert Ergenbright, who will teach the class. Having no prerequisites, this course is open to anyone and will be a "hands on" kind of course, according to Ergenbright. Students will have the opportunity to learn to use a synthesizer, while learning about acoustics as well.

The course will begin with a study of the history of electronic music, along with defining of terms including differentiation between the two branches of electronic music. One branch involves electronically changing existing sounds, while the other deals with generating new sounds using electronic instruments.

Students will also complete several projects, and everyone will be expected to compose a piece of music. Ergenbright said that this is actually a less intimidating undertaking than it might seem, in light of the fact that to do so, one must deal with the question "What are the parameters that make up that sound?", which is one of the discoveries to be made in class.

Electronic music, which has existed much longer than most people realize, began to come into its own in the United States around the 1930's, having been introduced first in Europe. One important advancement around that time was the introduction of the Theremin, the precursor to today's synthesizer, developed by a man of the same name.

Today, electronic music is "a real part of the music business," according to Ergenbright. "every time you turn on the radio and listen to a rock band, you're hearing electronic music." He believes that electronic music is an important part of the future of music and that it will prove quite valuable for students entering musical fields to have had some experience in it.

The music department at MC has had a synthesizer for about two years. Ergenbright believes that working with it will be an exciting experience for students. "There are all kinds of wonderful things that can be done – creative, imaginative things," he said. He hopes to get a computer for student use in the music department sometime in the future, so students can gain experience in the filed of computer music as well.

Ergenbright said that Electronic Music will begin with the question "Is it possible to synthesize sounds?" The class will seek to reach a conclusion by the end of this interesting and informative course.

Area Events

May Madness begins tomorrow, culminating in Spring Fling Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Music will be provided by the Jerry Collins Orchestra. Admission is $5 per person.

The Dulin Gallery of Art will feature "Ten in Tennessee," a collection of works by 10 contemporary artists, May 17 through June 22. For more information, call 525-6101.

MACCO's Spring Concert featuring violinist Paul Rosenthal will be presented Tuesday, May 13, at 7:30 p.m. in Wilson Chapel. Admission is free with MC I.D.

The Highlander Band Concert will be presented at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the FAC Music Hall.

ZZ Top will perform at 8 p.m. Monday , May 5, at Stokely Athletics Center. Tickets are $15 and are on sale at the UT Central Ticket Office and all Proffitt's stores.

Van Halen will be in concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday, May 21, at the Civic Coliseum. Tickets are $14.50 at the box office and Ticketron outlets.

"All the Way Home" will be presented by the Knoxville Community Theatre at 8:15 p.m. May 1, 2 and 3, at the Bijou Theatre.

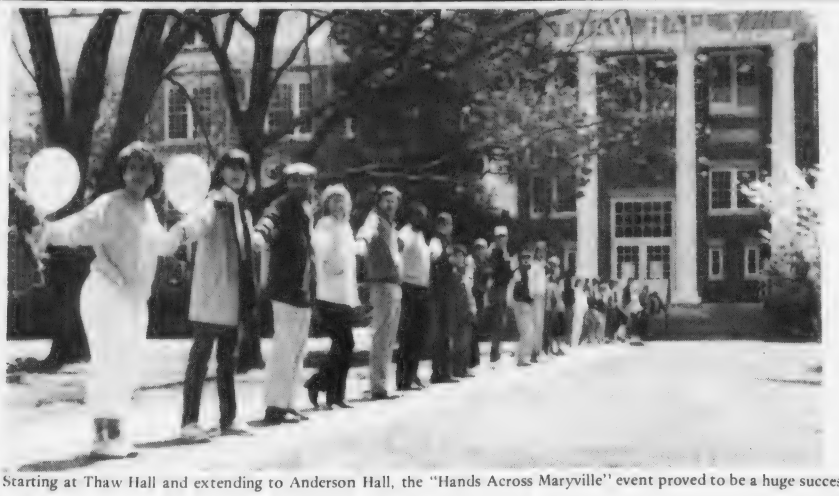
A student exhibit will be on display in the FAC Gallery next week. Any student wishing to display work is invited to do so. Announcements of winners will be made Tuesday, May 6, in the Gallery at noon. A reception will follow, and students are invited to attend.

MC math teacher: Alias rock musician

by Darrell Franklin

The Math Department and the Fine Arts Building have something in common: they both have musicians.

Mr. David Vinson, a Statistics and Pre-calculus teacher, is a guitarist in the Christian rock group, Vessel. Vinson joined Vessel about six years ago which was about four years after it was originally formed as a gospel quartet. When Vinson joined the group, they made the transition to a more contemporary sound.



When asked how to classify Vessel, Vinson said, "I've never really seen anyone who does as wide a range of music as we do." Vinson; Jeff Roberts, the lead singer; Keven Mason, bass guitarist; Sam Roberts, guitarist; and Jeff Benson, drummer, play just about any style that happens to appeal to them. When asked what he enjoyed most about being involved with Vessel, Vinson stated, "The thing that I enjoy most is writing the song that we sing."

The songs, over half of which are written by Vinson, deal with many different social issues such as Apartheid and world hunger. Vinson, and the others in the group, view their music not so much as an evangelistic ministry, but simply as the expression of five concerned Christians about the problems in the world. The ability to address these problems is another aspect that appeals to Vinson.

While acting as a running social commentary, Vessel's main goal is entertainment. Vinson asks that no one dismiss Vessel out of hand, and stated, "Don't let the Christian label keep you from giving us a chance."

Vessel will appear at Dollywood in Pigeon Forge for Young Christians' Day on May 10. Although Vinson said that Vessel is going to do about four or five shows, he did not know their exact schedule at press time. Vinson is also working for a concert at Maryville College so that all can enjoy the music of Vessel.

SHORTS

Starting at Thaw Hall and extending to Anderson Hall, the "Hands Across Maryville" event proved to be a huge success with 160 participants.

Hand in hand

by Jesi Kane

MC celebrated Earth Day on April 22 by showing its recognition of the importance of people as an environmental resource. About 160 faculty, staff, and students joined hands to celebrate "Hands Across Maryville."

The human chain stretched from Anderson Hall to the steps of Thaw Hall. By 11:30 everyone was hand-in-hand. The group then formed a circle. On a signal from President Anderson, balloons were released, and someone began singing the Alma Mater. The group broke for lunch at 11:45.

Reverend Earl Rash said "Hands Across Maryville" was to "promote a positive state of community on campus." Administrators and staff were asked to pledge two cents for each participant. According to Reverand Rash, about $150 to $200 dollars was raised, and the money will be donated to the Blount County Food Pantry.

The idea of "Hands Across Maryville" was suggested in an ACC meeting by freshman Gayle Christensen. Its purpose was two-fold: a celebration of the international Earth Day, and to connect with the national event "Hands Across America," which will take place May 25.

Kati Tabor, a junior and a "Hands Across Maryville" participant said the event was a "celebration of each other and an appreciation of Maryville College."

from pg.1

trench, yet you are strangely eager to begin."

"It could be the hardest work you'll learn to love," Bonham said.

Students are encouraged to enroll in debate both semesters. The fall term is predominately spent in research and practice in debate and other types of speaking. Most of the intercollegiate tournaments, which students will be expected to attend, are held December through spring. One hour of credit will be given each term.

Ms. Bonham laughed about the one hour of credit, "Students should not be deceived by the one hour of credit. They will work as hard--if not harder--for this course as any at Maryville College. They will work because they are driven by the fun, the challenge, and the desire not to appear foolish. The one hour of credit is, shall we say, token of appreciation. Debaters get bitten by a wonderfully strange fever; they forget the credit but remember the rewards."

The rewards are great, Bonham said. Debators will quickly become efficient researchers, which will also help them in all MC courses. They will learn to put that material together quickly into a well-shaped, meaningful body, which will also help in writing research papers more easily. They will also learn to think quickly and well on their feet, which will help in classroom and job-related presentations in college, future jobs, and community meetings, Bonham said.

A fund-raising campaign to create an endowment for the debate team was begun last fall. Letters accompanying donations from former debaters show how important debate was to Maryville College alumni.

"It is rather unusual for people to be 'thrilled' to donate money to a cause," says Dr. Walker with a smile, "but our letters typically began 'I am thrilled that you will again have a debate team at Maryville College. It was my most important course. Every day I use what I learned in debate, whether on the job or while analyzing world events.' " She continued, "A successful New York trial lawyer wrote that his law school did not include debate. He told us that he did not know whether he could have been a success as a lawyer if he had not had debate at Maryville."

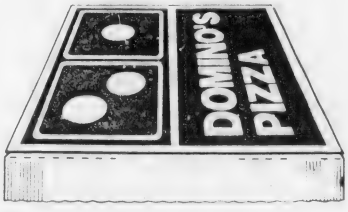
Students may pre-register for debate now or may add it to their schedule in the fall if there is still room. Students do not need to be accomplished speakers; the class will practice speaking. Students should bring a desire to research a topic of current interest, a willingness to be a responsible individual within a team, and an expectation that they will enjoy the challenge, Bonham said.

Scots post most wins in decade

by Pat Moyer

Good hitting and a tight defense have helped the MC diamond men post the most wins by an MC baseball team in the last 10 seasons. Maryville's 13 wins in a regualr season play betters last season's total of twelve. Much of the success has to go to the strong batting line up. Six of the Scot's starting ball players are hitting .300 or better.

Junior catcher Eric Etchison leads the Scots in hitting, in fact, his average of .446 leads the entire conference. Etchison is followed closely by third baseman Jason Harbison, currently hitting .396. Chris Johannsen, Ron Ramsey Tony Murr, and Rick Carver make up the rest of the "300" club.



Leading the fielders is second baseman Jim Shook. Shook has played nearly flawless ball enroute to recording a fielding percentage of nearly .985.

Pitching has also been a bright spot for the Scots, especially the pitching of sophomore Rick Miller. Miller has recorded 6 wins on the year. Seniors Rick Carver and Pat Moyer have 3 wins apiece.

In the Scot's most recent outing, they swept a double-header from the Sewanee Tigers. Leading the Scots in the opener was Etchison and Murr, both of whom collected three hits each. Carver got the win on the mound.

In the night cap, Etchison again got three hits, Johannsen, two, and Murr two hits each. ing a second inning homerun blast. The Scots won the first game 12 - 8, and the second 11 - 9.

Currently the Scots are in Richland, Virginia competing in the O.D.A.C. Tournament. They will play Randolph-Macon today in the first round, and hope to qualify for the finals on Saturday.

fast, free delivery

Domino's Pizza wishes you a fun summer break,
and we hope to see you
again next fall.

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

$2
$2.00 off any 16" large two-item pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 9-1-86

Fast, Free Delivery
407 W. Broadway
983-0000

Coke 16oz

As I See It

by Pat Moyer (Part two of a two part series)

Turning to the National League proves to be a tougher job of predicting. The teams are stronger and the pitching is a grade higher. In my estimation this year's World Series Champion will undoubtedly come from the National League. Let's see why.

Can lightning strike twice in St. Louis? I don't think so. As you know the Cards wound up in the World Series due, to a great degree, to their pitching. Last season's ace Joaquim Andujar won his first nine games, but this year he'll be playing in Oakland. Sure John Tudor had a great year, but he'll need help and this year he won't find any. The Cards will be fortunate to finish in the top three teams in the Natioanl League East.

With new, young blood in the pitching staff, it looks like the Montreal Expos are building for the future. Pegged at one time as a "can't lose" team, they learned the meaning of the term "choke". However, a bright future beckons ahead for this proud group.

For the last two seasons, the Phillies have been going through a rebuilding stage. Eventually their rookies will grow up, but in the meantime, the team from Philadelphia will suffer from growing pains.

In Pittsburgh, the Pirates have everything they need to begin moving up in the standings if their starting pitching has a decent year. After seeing a few seasons of everything going wrong, it will be no surprise to see the Pittsburgh Lumber Company profit this year. They may not win the pennant, but sparks will fly once again in the steel city.

Last season in Chicago things returned to normal for the Cubs. 1984 and the National League East Crown seemed like a pleasant dream. In 1986, they must start over and hope the injury plague passes them by. If it does, the fans might have something to dream about again.

As an avid Met fan, I have to pick them to win the National League East. In 1985 they were in the hunt for the first-place spot. This year with the return if a fine young pitching staff and veteran sluggers, it won't be a miracle when they go all the way. Count on Dwight Gooden, Darryl Strawberry, and Gary Carter leading the way.

My prediction: National League East winner N.Y. Mets.

In the Western Division three teams will battle down to the wire. The Braves, Reds, and Dodgers are all legitimate contenders. With the weakening of the National League West, it was assumed that the Braves would make a run for the crown. They, however, were too busy battling among themselves. Now it seems like they're tired of having their backs against the wall, and are set for a push toward respectability.

In Cincinnati last year the Reds proved they could be a strong contender for the National League title. This year they'll be even better, as their young players are sure to mature. Pete Rose, with his perennial hustle is determined to bring back the power and glory the Reds knew so well in the 1970s.

The third team that will vie for the western title is the Los Angeles Dodgers. The Dodgers came so close to bringing another World Series to southern Californaia. One bad pitch to Jack Clark in the National League playoffs was their undoing. Possessing the best pitching department in the National League, 1986 looks to be an equally impressive season.

The Houston Astros are a sleeper in the western division. They're strong in every aspect of the game except pitching. Playi ing in the Astrodome forces the Astros to rely on speed and finesse. They'll be serious contenders for the National League West crown once they put together a stronger group of starting pitchers.

In San Diego the Padres realized in 1985 that they were in a division comprised of many tough teams. No longer can they sit back and sail through the Natioanl League West. Now aware of this, the Padres must return to top from in order to have a shot at a division win.

The Giants round out the Western Division. They have once again found themselves in the basement. It's a postition they'll probably keep until certain aspects of their game improve. Feeling unwanted in San Francisco, they are being wooed by the city of Denver. It will be a long, hard road finding a new home.

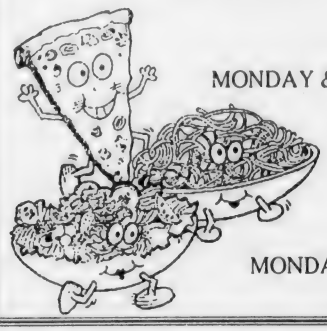
My prediction: National League West winner L.A. Dodgers.

In the National League Playoffs the Mets and Dodgers will face off in a battle royale. But the Mets will finish on top behind the strong arms of Dwight Gooden and Ron Darling.

The World Series will prove to be one of the best contests in baseball history. The Orioles and Mets will have to play all seven games to decide this one. It will turn into a pitching extravaganza featuring Dennis Martinez, Mike Flannigan, and Storm Davis for the Os and Gooden, Darling, and Jesse Orosco for the Mets. The young Mets will prove to be too strong for the aging Birds though, and this year's World Series trophy will be showcased in New York's Shea Stadium.

Hey, Maryville!

Musselman's



ALL • YOU • CAN • EAT

BUFFET

IS NOW ON

MONDAY NIGHT TOO!

PIZZA! SALAD BAR! SPAGHETTI!

$3.49

MONDAY & TUESDAY NIGHTS

5:30 - 8:30 p.m.

$3.29

MONDAY - FRIDAY LUNCH

11:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m.

FREE

MEDIUM SOFT DRINK

WITH THE PURCHASE OF ONE BUFFET

Not valid with any other coupons or specials

Musselman's

$5.99

LARGE PEPPERONI

THIN CRUST PIZZA

Not valid with any other coupons or specials

Musselman's

Lady Scots roll

The Lady Scots' softball team is the winningest team on campus this spring with a record of 21 - 7.

The Lady Scots ended their season Tuesday at home by splitting a double header against Tennessee Tech. The games were the last for seniors Penny Head and Denise Penzkofer, who both have had outstanding seasons. Congratulations to the Lady Scots for an excellent year.

Women's tennis overcomes difficulties

by Lisa Harvey

After a sometimes difficult season, the Lady Scots tennis team, according to Coach David Cartlidge, "demonstrated their considerable improvement over last year's team" by sharing the runner-up spot in the tournament (WIAC conference) with Sewanee (U. of the South) in the team competition.

The difficulties faced by the Lady Scots are not truly reflected in the season record of 5-5 (with one match remaining). Some of the other difficulties have included one players' fight against strep throat; numerous injuries, from blisters to strains to pulls; highway construction; a Division II school; and negative coverage from the local newspaper.

Another aspect not reflected in the overall record is the conference competition. Maryville was only able to schedule two regualr season WIAC matches, but managed to win both of them.

Since only two conference teams were played, four teams in the conference tournament were unknown quantities, although close estimations were made, based on last year's tournament. (Last year Maryville won only one match in the whole tournament; that number was raised to eight this year.

The overall powerhouse team was Rhodes College, which gathered 33 total points. (The 5 other teams combined for only 22 points.) All of the finals for Maryville were played against Rhodes players, and all of these matches were lost by MC.

Coach Cartlidge's final comments on the tournament: "Each of the Maryville team members played to her current potential and gave maximum effort. That everyone on the squad contributed points to our team's effort is very gratifying."

THE BACK PAGE

Bomb threat disrupts MC

by Brian Linkous

Nestled in the serene foothills of the Great Smoky Mountains the MC community would almost seem exempt from crisis situations, but a recent bomb threat has brought many to the realization that MC is also susceptible to such.

The threat on April 21 disrupted classes and library hours as MC security closed the building for the entire day.

According to chief of security Eldria Hurst an anonymous male caller phoned the switchboard operator at 9:50 a.m. claiming that a bomb was set to explode sometime during the day.

The Maryville Police Department was immediately called and were on the scene with their men in minutes. The search, which involved faculty and staff members, revealed no bomb.

The building, however, was closed all day because no time was given by the caller. According to Hurst the building was closed over 22 hours because that would have been adequate time for a time bomb.

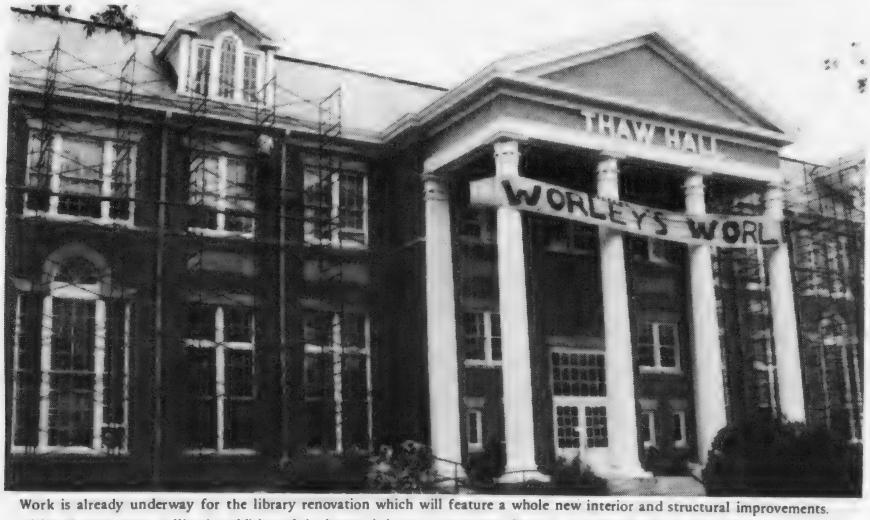
Hurst also said that security has determined that the call was not made from campus and that steps will be taken to prevent its happening again.

Although Sutton Science had a bomb threat in the fall Hurst said, "In the 25 years I've been here that is probably only the fourth bomb threat we have had."

Campus reaction to the threat has been mostly focused on the inconvenience of the incident rather than the danger.

Mark Womack, who was in the building at the time, said "As a student I was somewhat worried at first, but after remembering previous (false) bomb threats I was calmed somewhat."

Womack also said that he was upset about his books being locked inside all day.



According to a library assistant some of the librarians were upset because they had been asked by the police department to help in looking for the bomb.

Debbie Nichols, assistant librarian, said that the librarians were joking about the incident, yet underneath the joking she felt that everyone was upset.

"I personally think that calling in a bomb threat is a terrorist act. It doesn't harm anyone physically but emotionally it is disturbing."

At least one source told the ECHO that without the proper equip ment there would realistically be no way to find a bomb in Thaw Hall in a reasonable amount of time, given the many empty rooms and crevices.

If caught and convicted of a bomb threat, a person could face 3-5 years in prison under Tennessee law. The act of actually planting a bomb could carry a 25-30 year prison term.

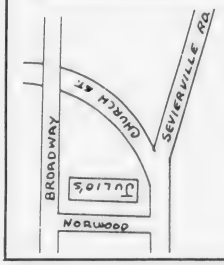
Work is already underway for the library renovation which will feature a whole new interior and structural improvements. Although most seem to like the addition of the banner it is not a permanent fixture. The library will be closed for the summer starting May 16, but reserve materials may be checked out in Sutton Science.

MC security urges crackdown

by Jesi Kane

A recent car accident involving an MC faculty member and a student has prompted MC security to suggest a crackdown on campus speeders and reckless drivers.

Chief of Security Eldria Hurst has proposed that first time offenders for reckless driving should be fined $15, second time offenders $25, and third time offenders should have campus driving privileges revoked.



Hurst said, "I average stopping five drivers a week and caution them about their driving, but I don't think that's going to be enough. Once you've taken a life, it's too late to be sorry."

Fines will be paid in the Student Affairs office, and a record will be kept of drivers' violations if the proposal passes.

Hurst has also suggested that center lines be painted on campus roads to help drivers determine where the middle of the road is. He also wants to put up "NO PARKING" signs in front of Willard House and along the road to the dining hall. He said that cars parking there create a one-way street, and it is difficult for other drivers to see around them.

MC security will soon be posting "Tow Away Zone" signs in front of the physical education building and beside Dorm I in an effort to discourage illegal parking in those areas.

Hurst hopes that these improvements will make students and faculty more aware of safe campus driving.

Julio's
Hungary Italian
407 Church St. Ext.
NOW OPEN
Monday — Thursday 11-11
Friday & Saturday 11-11
PIZZA PASTA
SALAD BAR COLD BEER
SANDWICHES

$3 pitchers with MC id.
CARRY OUT
977-7197

Campus Events

Friday, May 2
5 p.m. - MAY MADNESS
Dinner - Pig Roast
Bands: Royal Court of China, Payärt, Cairo, Gerald Burnett
8 p.m. - Contemporary Christian Music. FAC Music Hall
Saturday, May 3
1 - 4 p.m. - Battle of the Scots Champions
1 p.m. - Tennis vs. Lee College. Away.
9 p.m. - 1 a.m. - SPRING FLING
Dance at Mormingside Inn with Jerry Collins Orchestra
Tuesday, May 6
11 a.m. - Senior CIV. FAC Music Hall.
Thursday, May 8
11 a.m. - CIV. Nina Gregg "Mr Men and Little Miss Gender. Images and Pay Equity." FAC Music Hall.
Friday, May 9
Last Day of Classes

Saturday, May 10 - Monday, May 12
Review Period
Tuesday, May 13 - Friday May 16
EXAMS
Sunday, May 18
10:30 a.m. - GRADUATION

SPORTS
Ladies' soccer is looking good

NEWS
Growth through humanities

ENTERTAINMENT
Some movies are still worth seeing

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 1 Maryville College Thursday, September 18, 1986

Stephens' debut spoiled

by Brian C. Linkous

Anyone who knows much about MC's football team would say that the Scots' season opener Saturday should have turned out differently. Going into the game, the Scots seemed to have a lot in their favor with a new, enthusiastic head coach and an aura of optimism about the team.

Unfortunately, high expectations proved to be not enough as the Scots fell to Union 24-8.

The first quarter proved to be a defensive struggle as neither offense could move the ball with much consistency. But then, late in the quarter, Union recovered an MC fumble, setting up a 31-yard touchdown run by quarterback Jeff Baldwin.

The Scots' offense, which had trouble with Union's defensive line, struck back early in the second quarter with a 60-yard drive that started from their own 32-yard line. A 24-yard pass from MC's Russ Thomas to Kenny Goodman sent the Scots into Union territory. The Scots' continued to move until the Union eight-yard line when Union recovered another MC fumble. In the next play, Union running back James Fletcher raced 80-yards for Union's second touchdown.

Seconds before the half, an MC drive highlighted by a pass to Will Delaney, sent the Scots to Union's 36-yard line. Unable to move further against the Union defense, the Scots attempted a 54-yard field goal which unfortunately missed.

Early in the third quarter, Union, unable to score a touchdown after a 52-yard drive, kicked a 39-yard field goal to make the score 17 - 0. Later, Union would score again making the third quarter score 24 - 0.

The Scots continued to fight back after a Mike Walsh interception on the Union 28-yard line. Maryville put together a series which culminated into a 75-yard drive, but a fourth and one play failed on the Union 15.

The Scots embarked upon another drive late in the fourth quarter with a 27-yard pass from reserve quarterback Mike Human to Bob Echols. Four plays later with barely two minutes in the game, Human scampered into the end zone. With a two-point conversion pass to Goodman, the Scots were finally on the scoreboard.

Additional Story p. 6

Leigh Emery

MC's Bob Echols gets tripped up by a Union defender after a 27-yard catch.

Enrollment up 17.5 percent

by Lynn King

"Our goal next year is to convince 200 people that Maryville College is where they want to be."

That's how Director of Admissions Leslie Nier describes her plan to increase MC's enrollment. The first stage of which has already resulted in the largest increase in the enrollment of freshmen in the last five years.

The number of freshmen enrolled has increased 17.5 percent in comparison to last year, a significant increase at a school the size of Maryville. There are 154 freshmen now enrolled at MC, as compared to 131 at the beginning of last year. According to Nier, this may become a trend: "My goal for the next three years is to increase new students by 20 percent per year," she said.

How did the admissions office accomplish this? In addition to the enormous amounts of work the admissions staff puts into finding prospective students, Nier credits recruiting by the athletic coaches and the alumni program with some of the increase.

The alumni program at MC is a very strong one, and Nier said alumni do significant recruiting, especially in areas of the country where it is not economically feasible for admissiions personnel to travel.

Students also play a vital part in recruiting, Nier said. "I am going to be asking students and faculty to help with admissions next year. The job belongs to all of us; it does not just belong to the admissions office."

see pg. 6

Highland Echo

Textbook rip-off

There ought to be a law. We all recognize and accept the fact that some things are illegal, but this does not mean that such things do not continue to happen. Robbery, for example, is no doubt one of the more common crimes, although society recognizes it as illegal. The only assurance we have, as such crimes continue to be committed, is the fact that justice will take care of many of these criminals.

On the other hand, let's think about the "crimes" that exist, but are so subtle that society actually accepts them.

One of the best examples of what we are talking about pertains to the companies which publish college textbooks. In short, these companies are robbing college students of millions of dollars a year derived from exorbitant prices for "revised material."

Let's face it. The average life expectancy of a textbook, before the publisher's revisions, is no more than three years, although many times it is less. Publishers seem compelled to constantly revise their books, but more often than not, the revisions amount to nothing more than piddle designed merely to render previous books unusable via word changes, new pictures, different page numbers, etc.

Now we would be the last ones to stand in the way of progress and advancement of learning if we thought that such were the publishers' ultimate goal. Unfortunately, we feel that textbook publishers only care about that almighty green god known as the dollar.

Actually, the real irony is that they have us where they want us because they realize that after investing thousands of dollars in an education, we will certainly invest a few hundred in the books that are so pertinent to that education. And the real shame is that we will continue to let it happen.

Letters to the Editor:

There are a few things I'd like to say.

First of all, my peace of mind was recently disrupted by the threat of a possible room arrangement or extra payment to accommodate a transfer student. True, this situation worked itself out to benefit a lot of people, but did anyone apologize for my inconvience? No!

Second, I recently, along with many others, waited over two hours to get my new I.D. made. I later found out that my picture was not produced. Therefore, I was told that I was to report to Student Affairs on my own time for a new one. Did anyone appreciate my standing in line for nothing? Did anyone say, "Sorry for all the inconviences"? NO!

I wrote a letter to Dean Richardson recently about using some of the spare furniture, which is mainly stored in Carnegie, for shelters and needy people. Did she respond with "We'll see what can be done on that"? Did she respond at all? NO!

Notice all these incidents are recent. They don't even account for the past three years I've been here. Through trenches, semester changes, library renovations, schedule problems caused by mistakes on my card, and tuition inflation. This school expects a lot of patience from its student body. I just find it difficult to remain dedicated and maintain a good attitude without reciprocal considerations.

All in all, however, thanks to a great student body and plenty of wonderful professors, I've had cause to remain here for three years, going on four. But there comes a time when some opinion and emotions need to be vented.

Thank you. Risa Stein.

Is there a future for space exploration?

by Dr. Terry Bunde

I have been asked to write a guest editorial about the future of space exploration following the tragic explosion of the 25th space shuttle mission. Should this accident prevent or seriously curtail future manned space exploration? This question has been asked before following the explosion of the Apollo I capsule on the lauching pad at Cape Canaveral on Jan. 27, 1967. Following this accident, manned space flight was suspended for 21 months.

The question of the validity or necessity of manned exploration should justifiably be asked every time there is an accident involving the loss of human life. Saying that, I still think that it is in mankind's best interest to continue to explore the unknown, to dream the unthinkable, to do the seemingly impossible. We, as thinking, reasoning, calculating, and yes, dreaming creatures, will always try to bridge the gap between the here of today and the there of tomorrow.

We will explore the frontiers of space because it is our nature to explore; and nothing calls men and women to explore quite like the unknowns and challenges of travelling to the stars. I think back to my youth when the earlier rocket scientists like Werner von Braun planned the exploration of Mars and Venus long before Neil Armstrong ever set foot on the moon. Such is the way with man's quest and absolute need to explore; we must always be dreaming of tomorrow's journeys before those of today are realized.

The results of the investigation into the causes of the shuttle tragedy are indicating serious problems with the administration of NASA. The questions involve the impacts of funding cutbacks, the increased militarization of space, the lack of a true mission for NASA, and a growing lack of conficence and decline in spirit within NASA.

Yet the American people want a strong space program, want a new shuttle to be built, and want to see continued manned exploration not as something we do for national pride or prestige, not as something to beat the Soviets, not something to control the use of space in some sort of celestial manifest destiny, but a quest to exercise the highest cognitive levels of the human intellect. I think this quest is summed up in Tennyson's poem "Ulysses."

. . .It may be we that gulfs wash
down;
It may be we shall touch the Happy Isles,
And see the great Achilles, whom we knew.
Tho' much is taken, much abides; and tho'
We are not now that strength which in old days
Moved earth and heaven, that which we are, we are-
One equal temper of heroic hearts.
Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.

Yes, we need to continue to explore space, if for no 3 pcother good reason than it represents the greatest challenges, unknowns, and engineering problems that we can conceive of.

While we remember the American and Soviet astronauts who have given so much, including their lives for this quest, let us also remembher to keep the quest pure to the intentions of those who have gone before and those who will undoubtedly follow. Let us keep this exploration for the good of all mankind, all over the earth. It should be a quest for the human spirit and not for the baser side of the human character. I step down from the soap box and bid you Shalom.

Professional conferences: the real story

by Scott Brunger

No doubt in your college career you have gone to see a faculty member, taking special care to arrive during office hours, only to discover that your professor was absent attending a "professional conference." Or you came to class at the regular hour only to discover it had been postponed because of a professional conference. Since such discoveries cause you stress; it seems only fair to tell what goes on when faculty absent themselves for professional conferences. This article will do so by stating five principles.

Principle I -- Faculty members do more than teach. They must learn the subject too. Even though the faculty have fancy degrees in their disciplines, new research has the nasty effect of rendering knowledge obsolete. In order to keep up with their field, the faculty must hear the results of the latest research at their professional converences.

Principle II -- Faculty enjoy listening to others talk sometimes. They can listen to their colleagues at professional conferences. You have no doubt watched with amusement as a faculty member tries to cope with a difficult question. The faculty derive malicious pleasure in watching their colleagues squirm when faced with such questions too. You can help the faculty prepare for professional conferences by posing exciting questions during discussion periods.

Principle III -- Faculty members attain advanced levels in their fields. You may wonder what value results when your professor is a leading authority on an obscure subject. However, when your professor is with a multitude of other authorities the obscure subjects begin to add up to important knowledge. Though our economy does not reward advanced knowledge as highly as big league sports, in the long run knowledge is more important to our society than fast balls.

Principle IV -- Faculty were once students too. They went to school with the others attending the conferences. Their reunions at the conference reward them for staying in the field.

Principle V -- Faculty discover good teaching skills at professional conferences. They also observe bad teaching. The spectacle of a Nobel Prize-winner, who leans over the podium, wraps a leg around it and stares at the foot, while mumbling past the microphone makes one glad to be at a liberal arts colletge where teaching is important.

When your faculty members gets back from a professional conference, ask about it. The reply may be interesting.

Ebersole believes in humor

by Kimberly D. Spargo

Dr. Mark Ebersole believes in the power of a smile. His face proves it. His blue eyes are nestled in a bed of laugh lines. Dressed in a blue pinstripe suit with a striped tie, he looks professional, yet comfortable.

"Humor is a good thing -- the more the better -- it helps people keep their sanity, gives people a perspective on what is important and what is not important," he said.

Dr. Ebersole likes MC. He said, "I like the place, the people, the location, and the history. The students seem to be open and friendly."

Shelia Akins, executive secretary to the president, said, "he listens to you and is good to go right to the point of what you are saying."

Dr Ebersole

Dr. Ebersole's interests are varied. He enjoys golfing, playing tennis with his two sons, and watching the Philadelphia Phillies.

He has always been interested in athletics. He started playing ice hockey when he was 6 years old and he received an ice hockey scholarship for his freshman year at the University of Pittsburgh.

Since his wife is still in Pennsylvania caring for her critically-ill mother, he spends a lot of his evenings reading. He said, "I read everything James Thurber ever wrote -- most everything of E.B. White." He said he likes to study "what humor is and how it works."

"I'm very, very close to my sons. They have helped me keep in touch with college students and taught me how to understand students' ambitions," he said.

After his term at MC, Dr. Ebersole has ambitions of becoming a professional interim president. He is not the kind of man to take retirement sitting down.

He said, "I like to go to a place and give it all I can and then go somewhere else and do it again. Someday I guess I'll quit, but I don't plan to quit yet."

Students urged to apply for private aid

College students in need of financial aid for this academic year were urged to investigate private foundation sources by Steve Danz, Director of The Scholarship Bank.

According to Danz, there are over 500 million dollars in private financial aid sources that often go unused. This occurs because college students until now have not had a reliable method of finding out about the numerous private aid sources. The Scholarship Bank has computerized this information and will send each applicant a personalized print-out of private aid sources that appear just right for each applicant.

College students can find funds based on major, occupational goals, geographic preferences and approximately 30 other criteria. Financial need is not stressed as heavily in private aid as in government funding. Numerous new grants exist this year for business, liberal arts, health care, law, and humanities. Students are also urged to investigate well-paid corporate internships as part of their overll financial package.

Students interested in supplementing their current financial aids should send a stamped, self-addressed business-sized envelope to The Scholarship Bank, 4626 N. Grand, Covina, CA 91724

More colleges requiring studies in humanities

(CPS) -- All community college students will have to take humanities courses such as philosophy and art in order to graduate, if the leading association of two-year college presidents has its way.

While most two-year colleges already require students preparing to transfer to four-year schools to take the courses, the new plan would make the courses part of vocational and technical programs as well.

"Employers are demanding a more broadly educated person," explained Dale Parnell, president of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACAC).

"And we must uphold the vision of what an educated person should look like."

Parnell's group approved the call to wedge humanities into all two-year degree programs out of a concern that students in recent years have foresaken the "soft sciences" for strictly technical studies.

But some college counselors reply that more requirements will make it impossible for students to complete many already-demanding technical degrees in two years.

"It's not to say I'm against humanities, but we're already having problems fitting everything in," said Lawrencella Dukes, director of counseling at the Community College of Allegheny, Penn.

"Some of our students in technical courses have to take 72 credits to graduate," she said. Two years of full-time study typically is comprised of 60 credits.

In addition, many students must take remedial courses before they can even begin their associate degree studies.

Specifically, the AACJA proposal recommends all two-year colleges require a minimum of two courses in humanities (art, philosophy, foreign language and literature courses) for associate degrees in applied science, three courese for associate of science degrees and four courses for associate of arts degrees.

Such requirements "definitely wouldn't be popular with applied science students," said Jerry Moskus, vice president of education services at Des Moines Area Community College.

"Many vocational and technical students are oriented toward getting job training. They don't want anything they see as an obstruction to that goal."

Moskus himself sees humanities as anything but an obstruction to job goals.

"If we could help people communicate better, we could help them in their careers," he said.

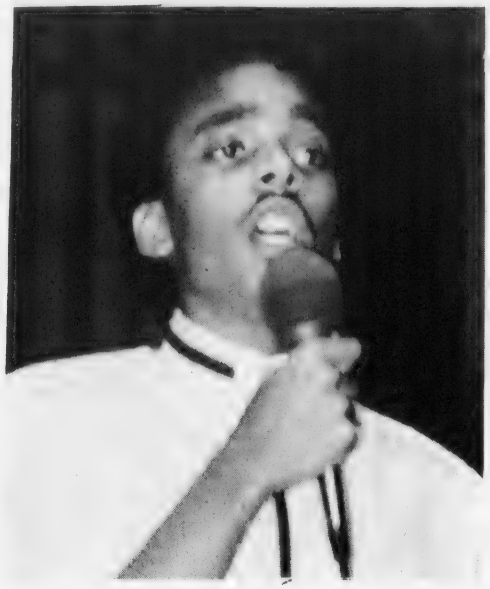
"My own father was a machine repairman in a factory," Moskus related. "His one complaint was that he could never understand his orders."

Besides goading students to broaden their education, the new policy also may be aimed at shoring up liberal arts departments.

As fewer students opt for humanities, faculty jobs in those areas have become more vulnerable to budget cuts, said Ann Stephenson, dean of humanities at Southwestern College, Chula Vista, Calif.

MC feels bite of aid cuts

by Jonathan Yarboro



How many of you stood in line for hours on September first in a noisy gym, only to find out that your financial aid was not what you were promised? If this desccribes you, don't feel alone. Despite the fact that college is more expensive each year, and the government is requiring more information for loan and grant application, recent government budget cuts have depleted the amount of aid to students. The main program thats suffering is the Pell Grant program.

According to the director of Financial Aid, Dan Perkins, the government has underfunded this program for years, borrowing extra money from future budgets to make up the void. However, this year the government decided not to borrow any more and make do with the little bit of money it had left. This decision resulted in a 15% reduction in the amount of Pell Grant Aid.

For example, a student receiving a $650 Pell Grant last year would receive only $150 this year. Also a student receiving $550 last year would receive nothing this year. The question now is; how are the students going to fill this monetary gap? For those students in state schools, the options are very few. Fortunately, schools like Maryville offer some alternatives.

Perkins has relied on work study, Guaranteed Student Loans, long term loans and Tennessee state grants to make up the gap. Unfortunately, Perkins said that the family is the unit most counted on for additional money. If students are independent, they must make up the difference. Therefore, many students have dropped to part-time status and have taken on other jobs.

ENTERTAINMENT

John Wright

Student attends music festival

by Heidi Weiffenbach

Can we assume that because one merely spent his summer in a quaint little valley surrounded by lofty mountains, that it was all fun and games? Well, for John Wright, a senior voice major at Maryville College, it was more of a combination of hard work and play.

Encouraged by instructors Dr. Robert Bonham and Mr. Robert Ergenbright, Wright auditioned for the world-renown Aspen Music Festival in Aspen, Colorado.

Wright, a lyric tenor, was one of 900 chosen to participate in the nine-week intensive musical program. He received a scholarship to the festival and was the youngest participant in the opera program.

Unique features of the festival included guest artists and individual instruction.

Wright studied under the distinguished Adele Addison who is head of the voice department at the Manhattan School of Music in New York City.

Wright described Addison as instrumental in "shaping my vocal technique, attaining a tenor sound, and introducing me to inter- pretation of song."

He spent four hours a day practicing vocal technique, and special classes were taught in opera and song repertoire.

"I enjoyed getting feedback and ideas from professionals," Wright said. He also enjoyed studying the works of classical composers and getting to know the professionals who played their music.

"One of my most fascinating experiences," Wright said, "was watching the fourteen year old violin prodigy, Mi Dori, play Wieniawski's Violin Concerto No. 1."

The Opera Theater Center presented Douglas Moore's The Ballade of Baby Doe and Benjamin Britten's The Burning Fiery Furnace both in which Wright had operatic roles.

With such a busy schedule, it is a wonder Wright had any free time, but he said he did manage to do some hiking, to pick wild flowers, and to just enjoy the fresh mountain air.

Wright said that at the end of the nine weeks he was homesick for MC, but that the festival was a wonderful learning experience. "The most rewarding thing for me was the professional atmosphere and the reassuring feeling of knowing that I can compete in the musical world."

Kiss-and-tell campus paper may go national

DALLAS, TX (CPS) -- Now everyone at Southern Methodist University can learn who is sleeping with whom and who did too much damage at recent parties, thanks to a new newspaper called Greek Times and an ambitious publisher who hopes to be covering other college campuses soon. Greek leaders, in turn, have complained to the administration that publisher Harry Shea's revelations are "in poor taste."

But "things just don't happen in PG," asserts Shea, who has been circulating his paper, which appears every three weeks, on the SMU campus since last fall.

Shea, who got the idea for the paper when he attended the Univeristy of Southern California where he worked on a similar gossip magazine called Row Run , believes "a definite majority (of students) are in favor of us."

But Janet Watson, president of SMU's Panhellenic Council, is a less than avid fan. "It's really ridiculous when they report people breaking up with their boyfriends," she contends.

Greek Times makes fun of the greek system, Watson maintains, adding the paper "does not cover the positive things we do, such as raising money for scholarship funds."

Caswell speculates the school may challenge Shea's right to distribute the paper on campus, but nothing is certain at the moment. "We don't know what action we will take." A decision regarding what to do about the controversial gossip sheet will be made this fall, he adds.

By then, Shea hopes to be publishing local versions of Greek Times at the University of California at Berkeley and Los Angeles, University of Colorado, the University of Texas at Austin and the University of Florida. He published two editions of a similar paper at Oklahoma last fall, and although it was not as successful as SMU's edition, he plans to return to Norman in September.

Other campus officials don't seem to like such papers, either.

At Florida, for example, the Beta Theta Pi fraternity in February, 1985, published one edition of Uncensored: The 4 O'Clock Weekly, which featured racial slurs and a list of how many beers it would take to seduce certain UF women. Administrators reacted angrily, and soon suspended the fraternity.

But Shea's paper is different, he insists. "We do not use four-letter words or publish nude photos, and we are not malicious," he said.

Perhaps as a result, SMU patrons snap up copies quickly. Shea distributes about 6,000 copies of the advertiser-supported paper for free, and "they are usually gone in three days."

Religious art on display

The Arnstein Jewish Community Center, in conjunction with the Arts Council, will host the Siskin Religious Art collection as part of Artfest '86.

Judaica, Chrisitanity, Hinduism, Taoism and Buddhism are some of the religions represented in this unique and rare cdollection from all over the world. Approximately two hundred objects of art made of silver, ivory, wood, brass, and pewter, as well as a number of paintings and ceremonial certificates, are included.

The religious and ceremonial art objects are from the Harris Swift Museum of Religion and Art. The museum is part of the Mose and Garrison Memorial Foundation in Chattanooga.

The exhibit will be on display at the Arnstein Jewish Community Center, 6800 Deane Hill Drive, Knoxville, from Sunday, September 14 to Thursday, September 25, except for Saturday, September 20.

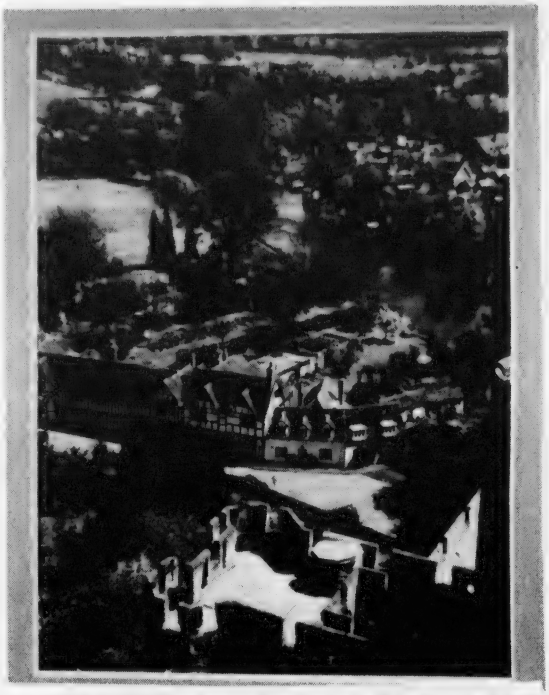
Stage set for fall production

by Jennifer Worth

The Maryville College Playhouse is at it again.

Rehearsals officially began last week for the play which is scheduled to open on Halloween. The production, "The Dining Room," by A. R. Gurney, is somewhat unusual because a balanced cast of eight share the fifty-three roles. The cast consists of Kirk Burdick, Joe Chamberlain, Chris Herbert, Leah Mueller, Kimberly D. Spargo, Heidi Weiffenbach, Jennifer C. Worth, and Jonathan Yarboro, with Don Thomas as the director.

"The Dining Room" is a new play, first performed in 1982. Its subject is simple: the vanishing culture of white Anglo-Saxon Protestants. The action takes place in a basic dining room--in the grand old style of classic American dining rooms--in the northeastern United States at various points in history. This room could be found almost anywhere, but Gurney chose New England as his setting because it is home to one of the last and strongest concentrations of stereotypical WASP culture



The play's many small scenes, or vignettes, satirize that culture by showing various families and friends in the dining room throughout the day. Audiences will see a child's birthday party, a Thanksgiving dinner, many casual conversations and heated discussions, a secret rendezvous or two, and numerous other types of situations.

Audiences will probably note considerable differences between "The Dining Room" and last year's Playhouse shows. Although it is a play with a relatively small cast (as "Dracula" was), and often has deeper meaning beneath the comedy (as "Androcles and the Lion" did), this show will make special demands on both its cast and its audience.

All the actors and actresses must rapidly change character--their attitudes, mannerisms, and sometimes even vocal qualities from scene to scene. Thomas has noted that this aspect of the play will be most challenging for the eight performers. The audience will need to follow the action as scenes melt into each other and actors and actresses reappear as different characters with only minor costume changes.

As with any show, the technical aspects of the production are equally important. Jonathon Yarboro will set the show's lighting. The technical director is Tillman Crane; his crew is Steve Herbert, Greg Metcalf, and Lori Suggs.

Other performance dates for the play include Saturday, Nov. 1; Friday and Saturday, Nov. 7 and 8; and a tentative matinee scheduled for Thursday, Nov. 6.

"River Avon from Warwick Castle" by Ron Sarson is just one of the many pictures on display in the FAC.

"Stand by Me" brings back 60's

by John Wright

Hey! What do YOU look for in a good movie? Richard Gere, an enviable French kiss, or John Travolta in an aerobics class? How about a movie guaranteed to create a spontaneous reaction that will make you race home, listen to some James Taylor, sip on some drink that you wish were a Nehi grape, and reflect on life as a teenager?

"Stand By Me" is a charming film based on Steven King's novel "The Body" about a man who tells the story of a painful, yet rewarding segment of his childhood.

Among other situations, the adolescent Chris is constantly reminded of his parents' favoritism towards his older, athletic brother who recently dies in an accident. Chris shares his conflict in an incredible relationship among three other characters his age.

The realistic setting of a small town in Oregon during the mid 60's is brought to life complete with rolled up sleeves, slicked back hair, classy cars, tree houses, and horn-rimmed glasses.

The four junior high school youngsters are for the most part impressive, believable characters as they venture to find a kid who has been missing from town for a few days. Several scenes, such as the suspenseful and quite humorous run from an unexpected train on a railroad bridge and the finding of a dead body, create an indescribable emotional intensity between audience and screen.

My only real qualm about the movie is the narration. Richard Dreyfus plays the part of the successful writer who flashes back and tells of his childhood experiences. He may write well, but the flat, gutteral tone of his voice is especially irritating and inappropriate for the narration. Also, the four teenagers' profanity level is probably equivalent to that of a college student. Just grin and bear, old folks, this is a potential award winning film!

Photo show in FAC

by Kristi Self

The Foothills Camera Club is currently displaying some of their work in the Gallery of the Fine Arts Center. The exhibit opened September 2 and is scheduled to run through September 26.

The photographs on display are in color and have been professionally processed. There is a wide array of material. Photographs of national landmarks such as Yellowstone Falls and the Grand Canyon are displayed, as well as the local West Miller's Cove. Topics of European interest include the Queen's Color Guard, the Avon River, and Neuschwanstein Castle in Germany.

Participating photographers are Janet Estep, John W. Proffitt, Janet S. Proffitt, and Ron Sarson. The Gallery is open from 9:00 am to 4:00 pm Monday through Friday.

The Foothills Camera Club, headed by Ron Sarson, is located in Maryville and has a policy of open membership.

Some future events to be held at the Gallery have already been scheduled. In October, Nick Cook will display wood vessels. In November, there will be a student exhibit by Jeff Seagle. Kathy Balent will also hold a student exhibit during the month of December. Jack Weiso will exhibit photographs in the Gallery in February.

There are plans to count one of the exhibits as a C.I.V. credit. That particular exhibit will be announced at a later date.

Music competition awards slated

New York, NY -- BMI will again sponsor the BMI University Music Show Competition Awards. These awards will be given to the undergraduate composer, lyricist, and librettist of the best musical show or revue presented during the 1986-87 academic year as a recognized student activity of a college or university in the United States or Canada.

Awards of $2,500 each will be given to the composer of the best musical, author of the best lyrics and the organization or club which sponsored the winning show. In the event of multiple composers or authors responsible for the winning show, the award will be split among them respectively. Although the libretto of a musical will not be judged, an additional prize of $1,000 will be presented to the librettist of the winning show.

The competition will be judged by a distinguished panel of musical theatre professionals.

The BMI University Musical Show Competition closes June 15, 1987.

For more information, please contact: Allan Becker, BMI Musical Theatre Department, BMI, 320 West 57th Street, New York, NY 10019, (212)586-2000 ext. 258.

Party in the streets

Maryville will be the center of activity on Saturday night, September 20 from 5 to 10 pm as the newly-formed Blount County Arts Council plans a night on the town celebrating the Fine Arts in Blount County. There will be clowns, jugglers, balloons and puppet shows.

A stage will be erected in the middle of Maryville for performances by the Appalachian Ballet Company under the direction of Cheryl Van Metre, the Blount County Playhouse, and the Maryville Alcoa College Community Orchestra directed by David Hoffecker.

Smaller ensembles including the handbell choirs from local churches will entertain crowds at various locations up and down Broadway. A variety of food vendors will provide food for sale. MACCO season tickets will also be on sale here.

SPORTS

Scots' cloud has silver lining

by Brian C. Linkous

No doubt the Scots' trip home from Kentucky seemed considerably longer after losing to Union. But in spite of the loss, Coach Larry Stephens had some positive things to say about the team.

"I think that defensively we performed better than I expected. However, it wasn't a great surprise in that there were several returning defensive players, and what we are doing defensively is similar to what we did last year."

"I think our young men showed a lot of character and poise . . . we can build on that."
-Coach Larry Stephens

Although the offense seemed to have problems with Union's defense, especially its defensive line, Stephens believes that it is understandable under the circumstances.

"Offensively we made mistakes which you would expect young and inexperienced players to make in a first game on the road." Maryville's offense consists, in part, of freshmen and upperclassmen who have never started in a college game before.

Stephens, referring to two MC fumbles which resulted in Union touchdowns, felt turnovers were a turning point in the game.

But last week's game is over and Stephens feels that such losses are an important learning device for building a winning team.

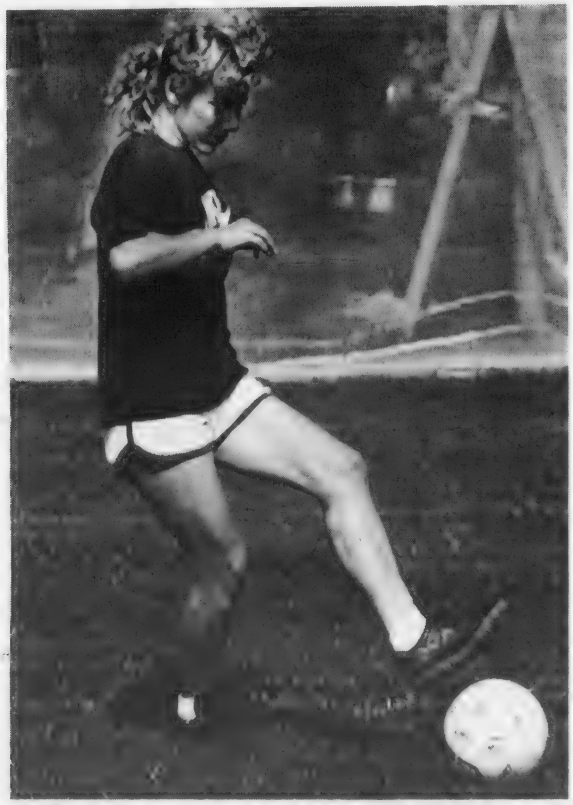
"I think our young men showed a lot of character and poise. We can, and we will, build on that."

The Scots face Centre College this week, a team which is very similar to Union both offensively and defensively. Stephens said he believes this will be helpful to the Scots in that the plan of attack will be similar to last week's.

Leigh Emery

Quarterback Mike Human ran 7 yards to the goal line to set up MC's only touchdown.

Cheerleaders fired up for new season



by Lynn Smith

Scots' fans should be in for a treat when they attend an athletic event this year. The 1986-87 cheerleading squad has been working hard during the summer so they can promote enthusiasm throughout the college. The cheerleaders plan to revive spirit through what they learned at camp and involving the student body in activities.

The squad got together this summer to attend a National Cheerleader Association's Camp at the University of Tennessee. The camp was held from August 12 - 16. The hard work that the girls put into those days seems to have paid off in the end. The squad received three red ribbons, one blue ribbon and a spirit stick. They also earned the title of "a squad of excellence" and were first runners-up in the final competition.

According to Jody Mullen, co-captain along with Mary Kleeman, "There is a lot of creative energy on this year's squad."

The girls are anxious to utilize what they learned at camp, including new cheers, dances, fund raisers, and pep rally ideas.

Heidi Hoffecker works out with the MC women's soccer team. Coach Greg Hosler is enthusiastic about the team's progress this year

Ladies' soccer hoping to rewrite catalog

by Rethabile Masilo

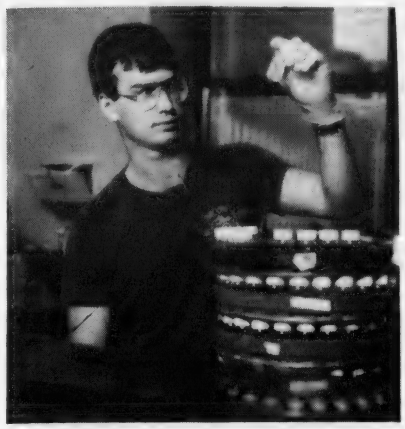
The 1984-86 M.C. catalog states that, "Maryville College has five sports for men and four sports for women." Football, basketball, baseball, soccer, tennis; and basketball, softball, volleyball, tennis, for men and women respectively.

Fortunately, that is not engraved in stone, because there is one coach and a bunch of girls who are trying to rewrite the M.C. catalog.

It is worth noting that our women's soccer team is the most unskilled team that Greg Hosler has ever coached. In 1984, he coached the men's team at Dixie Hollins High School in St. Petersburg, Florida. The level of skill was much higher in Florida.

I recently spoke with Coach Hosler about some of the things that he's trying to accomplish with women's soccer. Coach Hosler, in his second year at Maryville College, is fighting well, I might add, with a technical disadvantage he's never had before.

To date, the team, which is open to area high school students, has played two official games and one scrimmage. Coach Hosler said "the first game was great!" Only half the team played last year, yet "we creamed them." (The Maryville College women's soccer team won their first game 5-2 against a full varsity squad.)



The win is unusual because the team had only three days to prepare, and over a third of the team had never played soccer before. On the other hand, the win is not so unusual when one looks closely at the structure of the team. Only a few on the team are experienced soccer players and they are the backbone of the team. Dudley Hawkins, a high school student playing center-foward, scored all five goals of the first game, and Kendre Linkes, another high school student, is invaluable with her passing and offensive skills.

But the whole team won the game, and Coach Hosler names captain Deann Hargis, Teresa Petitt, Amy McCleod, Monica Cayo, Raina Boring and Andra Ware, four of whom never played soccer before, among his strongest players.

The Lady Scots lost their last game 13-5 to Brevard College. But Coach Hosler unhesitantly puts the fact into a different perspective. "Last year we played four games in all, and scored no goals at all. This year we've played just two games of nine, and already we've scored ten goals!"

see pg. 6

MC seniors experience research at Oak Ridge

Jeff Flickinger

Cesar Zambrano

Two Maryville, Tenn., seniors were among 74 students who did a summer of research under the Student Research Participation Program sponsored by the U. S. Department of Energy's Office of Energy Research. Both were at Oak Ridge Associated Universities, Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Cesar H.A. Zambrano, a chemistry major was in the Manpower, Education, Research, and Training Division, where his project involved the detection of minute amounts of thallium by spectrophotometry.

Jeff E. Flickinger, a health sciences major at Maryville College, was in ORAU's Medical and Health Sciences Division. His project involved the function of certain enzymes in platelet activation factor metabolism.

Flickinger said of the program, "It's an experience. I don't think I want to do research for the rest of my life; I like to work with people more . . . maybe clinical research."

"It was fun. It's a lot of work, and you do a lot of independent work. I learned this summer about the way they do research, on different research sites."

During the 10- week appointment, the students were in a realistic work environment with experienced DOE or DOE contractor staff. They used state of the art energy technologies to develop skills and knowledge in projects relating to energy production, utilization, conservation, and related social inplications.

Since 1958 more that 2000 of the country's brightest students have participated in the SRP program, said Dr. Alfred Wohlpart, Chairman of Oak Ridge Associated Universities' University Programs Division which manages the program.

"I'm certain we're making a difference!" he said. "Individually, students have had their minds opened to the challenges and opportunities of a career in energy research," Wohlpart said.

"And on a broader perspective, the SRP program helps meet our nation's energy research and development needs and enhances the quality of undergraduate education in science, mathematics, and engineering."

Selection for the SRP program is competitive and open to college students who have completed their junior year and have the potential for a successful scientific career.

The Student Research Participation program is one of many programs that undergraduate and graduate students participate in through DOE national laboratories. Opportunities are also available for postgraduates and faculty members.

Con't from p. 1

by Lynn King

Nier emphasizecd that the impression visiting high school students get of students at MC is one of the "main selling points." She said prospective students visit college campuses to discover the unique personality of the college and to see whether or not they think they can fit in, and such students always comment on the impressive friendleness of MC students.

The effects of this year's influx include the addition of another Spanish 110 class and another English 104, for which another instructor, Mrs. Sherry Bonham, was hired. This, and the shortage of books in the bookstore for some classes, seem to tbe the only recognizable differences caused by the larger freshmen class.

CRUISE SHOW

Sunday, Sept. 21
2:00 pm
Airport Hilton

For more info, phone Jane Parker at 982-6400

Men's soccer: MC style

by Rethabile Masilo

Soccer used to be, and in some places still is, all at once, "Hey! Square! You get help! Pick your head up! Man on! John! John! Shoot! Back-pass! Square!"

That was soccer two or three years ago at Maryville College. That was soccer before Coach Phil Neddo.

We all, more or less, knew Coach Neddo, because he changed Maryville College soccer to more footwork and less yelling: "touch," a player now requests, "Turn," or "man on."

Soccer is a difficult sport. Not so much difficult, maybe, as plain complicated. Conditioning is one of the key words. During pre-season camp, the Scots were roused at 6:00 a.m. for a daily under twelve minutes two-mile run. Then during the day they would do technical, tactical, and other conditioning exercises.

Coach Neddo has, indeed, changed the image of soccer at M. C. to that beyond "Square! Cross! John! John!"

Five years ago the athletic trainer was a part-time soccer coach. Today Maryville College soccer has two coaches and a student assistant. Five years ago, the games were played behind Copeland. Today, the Scots play on Honaker Field, or on their own turf alongside of Honaker.

To date, the Scots are 1-2-1. It's an encouraging record because more than half the team is new and because injury plagued the team during the first two weeks. Only four players returned from last year's team.

The toughest games are usually played against ODAC teams, however, the Scots are learning from mistakes and plotting against their ODAC rivals.

The four returning players are captain Nick Busko, a wing defender; Walter Walsh, sweeper; Michael Rethwilm, center-midfield; and Danny Clark, outside midfield. The Scots play their next home game on Saturday, Sept. 20.

Career Workshop at UT

The Chrysler-Plymouth Career Search Workshop will be at the University of Tennessee October 1-2. The hour-long event will provide soon-to-be graduate college students with a basic overview of the whole job seeking process.

Jean Jones, director of Career Planning and Placement believes that M.C. students are fortunate to have this opportunity. "It is a courtesy for U. T. to invite us because this is primarily presented at large universities across the nation." Jones also said that the hour-long investment will pay off many times. The hours for the workshop will be 2, 4, and 7 p.m. on October 1 and 1 p.m. on October 2.

937 Bestsellers

The U.S. Government Printing Office has put together a new catalog of the Government's bestselling books. Find out what Government books are all about. Send for your free catalog.

New Catalog
Post Office Box 37000
Washington, D.C. 20013

Con't from p. 6

This year, for the first time ever, Maryville College has given money ($300) to the women's soccer budget. The rest is covered by Domino's Pizza. Because of lack of funds, the team cannot have a pre-season camp as other sports on campus. And because of no recognition as a varsity representative, the team is never a first priority with the players. Coach Hosler can therefore never, officially and legitimately, fully exercise his know-how to upgrade the M.C. women's soccer team.

THE BACK PAGE

Announcements

Student Volunteers in Action, a new group on campus, attempts to involve students in service to the Maryville community. Oppotunities for service include everything from tutoring adults to learn to read, to taking care of the children of abused spouses. In between are things like Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., and helping at a children's home.

Next Wednesday at the lunch hour you you will have an opportunity to volunteer to serve 1 to 2 hours a week in community service and meet representatives of the different agencies.

Why S.V.A.? Why Now? Because the needs are great, because you can help, because you can grow by helping others, because... whatever motivates you to help those in need; because Maryville College has a tradition of service to the community. Learn while you help others.

The chaplain, Earl Rash, is co-ordinator of this program. If there are any questions or suggestions, please contact Rev. Rash in the Center for Campus Ministry.

● ● ●

Maryville College's art club, Lascaux, encourages students to get involved in the club's activities. Each year Lascaux is involved in a variety of fund-raising campaigns including dances and homecoming activities. The money raised goes to help MC art students. The club welcomes all who are interested including non-art students.

● ● ●

Dr. Gerald Duff, a candidate for the presidency at Maryville College, was introduced to the faculty and staff at a confidential meeting on Monday, September 15, from noon to 2:00.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Business Manager — Jack Griffin
Entertainment Editor — Heidi Weinffenbach
Sports Editor — Pat Moyer
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Layout Editor — Jes Kane
Typsetter — Al Hipkins
Advosir — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers — Darrell Franklin
Kim Spargo, Mike Howell, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Lynn Smith Jennifer Worth, Gina Emmett, Matt Wayland, Johathan Yarboro

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, Box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

● ● ●

The 1986 edition of the Chilhowean will be distributed tomorrow 12:00-3:00 in the Chilhowean room, located on the second floor of Fayerweather. You may pick up your book if your name is listed in the 1985-86 directory. Please bring your I.D. You will not be able to pick up anyone else's yearbook

Photographs used in last year's book can be pruchased for 25 cents each.

If you were a student last year and your name is not listed in the directory, contact Kristi Self, Box 2548.

Information

... a priceless commodity in todays marketplace.

The information resources of the US Government are available at a Depository Library near you. Without charge.

For the location of the Federal Depository Library in your area, contact your local library or write to the Federal Depository Library Program, Office of the Public Printer, Washington, DC 20401.

● ●

Give us your news, your schedules, and your information searching for an audience!

The Grapevine is a newsletter and the Echo is a newspaper and they both need news. There is plenty of news on the Maryville campus, and a great need to communicate within the campus community.

Let the Grapevine and the Echo have your announcements, your schedules, and news of your activities. We'll be sure it's published in timely fashion and we will try to make both publications of interest and value.

Deadlines for the Grapevine are noon Tuesday for publication Friday.

Deadlines for the Echo are Sunday for publication Thursday.

Thank you. The Editors.

Julio's

Hungary Italian

Tuesday Nite Special! Any Large 2 Item Pizza and Pitcher of Favorite Beverage $10.25

407 Church St. Ext.
CARRY OUT
977-7197

Campus Events

Thursday, Sept. 18
11:00 a.m. CIV Dr. Hugh Wolfe, Physicist. "Scientists and Peace." FAC Music Hall.
12:30 p.m. Faculty Meeting. PDR.

Friday, Sept. 19
6:00 p.m. Volleyball vs. Defiance College. Away.

Saturday, Sept. 20
9:00 p.m. Defiance Volleyball Tournament.
1:30 p.m. Football vs. Centre College. Away.
2:00 p.m. Soccer vs. Lynchburg College. Home.

Sunday, Sept. 21
8:00 p.m. Movie: "The Wind in the Willows." Student Center.

Monday, Sept. 22
5:00 p.m. Volleyball vs. Berea College and Georgetime College. Away.

Tuesday, Sept. 23
10:20 a.m. Weekly worship. CCM.
7:00 p.m. Soccer vs. Tennessee Wesleyan College. Away.

Wednesday, Sept. 24
8:00 p.m. Movie: "Alien." Student Center.

Thursday, Sept. 25
11:00 a.m. CIV Jim Rugh. '64x. FAC Music Hall.
Noon Faculty Luncheon. PDR.

Friday, Sept. 26
12:00 p.m. Volleyball. MC Invitational.

SPORTS
Scots' football team still looking for a win

NEWS
Wal-Mart pulls Rolling Stone

ENTERTAINMENT
Ballet brings life to upstairs of Fayerweather

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 2 Maryville College Thursday, October 2, 1986

Debbie Coles

This ticketed car outside of Davis epitomizes the parking problems that are being experienced due to the new regulations.

MC restricts parking

by Lynn King

Little white warning signs keep croping up on car windshields. The chief of security stands out in the road one rainy morning cautioning students not to park in a former student lot any longer. Commuters feel that they are being deliberately discriminated against. Administrators stress that it is all in the interest of safety.

All this over a few changes in parking policies? Well, the changes have seemed somewhat radical to a campus community accustomed to parking wherever it pleased and not informed about what was going on ahead of time.

At first, one wonders what objection anyone could possibly have to trading in muddy gravel parking lots for newly paved, neatly lined-off areas. This neat lining-off, however, has resulted in the elimination of some parking spaces and the modification of others, all of which has trampled on old habits some find hard to break.

Probably the most immediately noticeable changes involve the "no parking" zones (e.g. in front of Anderson) and the marking of some spaces "reserved" as a result of the elimination of zoning. Differentiation by zones of faculty and student parking no longer exists.

Other changes include designated visitor parking, spaces reserved for handicapped drivers, and a significant crackdown on unregistered cars at MC. When the Echo went to press, parking signs to clarify some of these things were expected to arrive soon.

Why the changes? The main objective, according to Business Manager Donna Davis, was "to make MC a safe place to park your car and a good safe place to drive." Both Davis and Chief of Security Eldria Hurst stress that every "no parking"

see Parking pg.8

President search continues

by Kim Spargo

The presidential search committee is still searching. Business Manager Donna Davis said that during the summer a screening sub-committee reviewed 100 applicants and then "filtered" them down to 35 and chose the 12 "best-matched candidates."

Of those 12, the committee "kept selecting out people until [it] got to the point of inviting two people to the campus," Davis said. In the event that these two prove to be unsuitable for the needs of the college, then the committee has the option of referring back to the group of 35 or the group of 100, according to Davis.

The first candidate stayed at the campus on September 13, 14, and 15. The second candidate is scheduled to arrive on October 7 and leave the 8th. Candidates are interviewed by the presidential search committee (PSC), members of the RA/SA staff, members of the student senate, and various faculty members, according to Davis.

Students who wish to be a part of the process are invited to speak with their representative, Dee Ann Hargis, to express any ideas about the needs of the college. Donna Davis and John Walker (student member of PSC) are also available to speak with interested students.

see Search pg.3

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

The Student Senate

It's hard to believe, but after all the work, talk, and elections, Maryville College finally has a Student Senate. The Senate came to life last week at its first official meeting of the year.

In years past, students never really felt that they had a voice on campus. Unfortunately, they were right. The former structure of government consisted of a few student representatives who were completely detached from the general consensus of the college community. In a climate of limited representation from the students, a college cannot grow effectively.

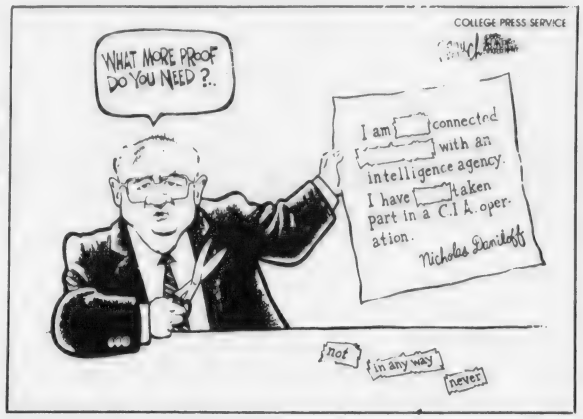
With the Student Senate, students from all areas of the college community now have an opportunity to voice their needs and concerns. The extreme diversity of students in the Senate should insure that all such voices are heard.

However, the real beauty of the Student Senate is that the students now have a potential unlike anything they could ever have imagined. The potential for changes is there for the taking, and the Student Senate is the instrument by which these changes, changes for the betterment of MC, can take place.

A parking mess

If Maryville College thought that it had a parking problem before this year, we suggest it stop and take a look at the mess it is in now. A better system of parking was definitely needed but not at the expense of the students, especially the commuters.

Maryville College officials should have had enough foresight to at least create some new and decent parking lots for those people who would obviously be without such. Does Maryville College flagrantly disregard the needs of its community?



We especially are disappointed by Donna Davis who was instrumental in developing the new system and who obviously does not acknowledge that there are any major problems. But then again, we would imagine that she also has a reserved parking space.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Entertainment Editor — Heidi Weiffenbach
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Layout Editor — Jes Kane
Typsetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Jack Griffin
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers
Kim Spargo, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth, Gina Emmett, Matt Wayland, Jonathan Yarboro.

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

How to read a French newspaper

by Dr. Scott Brunger

Since you are a fan of the Highland Echo, you no doubt understand the best traditions of American journalism. First, you know that each newspaper article begins with a paragraph that summarizes the importance of the event described, its location and timing, and the various opinions of participants. The reporter's job consists of reflecting facts without commentary. The editor chooses those events which are "news," because other newspapers choose to print them as news too. According to the rules of Anglo-american journalism, opinions and commentary are confined to the editorial pages.

Futhermore, American newspapers are local newspapers. National journalism was the domain of newsmagazines, such as Time, Newsweek, and U.S. News and World Report. Now there is an exception in U.S.A. Today which uses satellite communications to print simultaneous copies throughout the country.

Finally, our newspaper articles fade at the end into insignificant detail (just as this commentary is doing at this point). In the age of manual typesetting, the editor could drop stories on the page. Very little would be lost at the end. Today computerized typesetting enables your editor to remove useless sentences (such as this one) from the middle of an article.

What should you look for in a French newspaper article? Rhetorical questions? (such as this one) Commentary? Flights of fancy by the writer? But first find the three major points of a mind formed by cartesion logic. They appear in naked splendor following: "Premeirement" (first) "Ensuite" (furthermore) and "Enfin" (finally).

"Ensuite," recognize that each newspaper has a particular political point of view related to a party. Figaro (no relation to the cartoon cat) is for fat, self-important bourgoeis who vote conservative. Humanite (humanity) is for skinny proletarians who celebrate as a victory the Haymarket Massacre by the Chicago police on May 1st. Canard Enchaine (jailed duck) is for cigarette-smoking intellectuals looking for Watergate-style scandals in each issue.

"Enfin," do not skip the conclusion. The author has saved for you a delicious experience. Savor it as you sit in a cafe facing a crowded boulevard reflecting on the ironies of life.

LETTERS:

To the Editor

In your first edition of the Echo this Fall, you printed a letter from Risa Stein regarding the delay caused on registration day by the I. D. photo station. Risa's main point was that no one from administration apologized for the long lines.

Thank you, Risa, for calling us to task. An apology is definitely in order. That was the first time we had taken photos at the beginning of registration and we did not allow enough up front time. Needless to say, we learned something in the process and will plan more efficiently next year.

Sincerely,
Jane G. Richardson
Dean of Students

Dear Editor,

With any campus publication, problems arise. The 1986 Chilhowean got off to a late start and continued to be plagued by staff and production problems. While this doesn't excuse the final product, perhaps it will explain some of its shortcomings. After the distribution of the yearbook, complaints were voiced regarding photographs.

Unfortunately, some borrowed photographs were not properly returned and may have been misplaced or lost in the intervening months during the transition from last year's staff to the present one. We sincerely regret these losses.

Under new leadership and a structured organization, the 1987 Chilhowean will strive to be a quality publication of which we can all be proud. Work has already begun on an innovative theme under a new staff, which includes a practicum student from the Business Department serving as business manager and Tillman Crane as photography advisor. We are very excited about this yearbook and hope you'll share our enthusiasm.

Kristi Self, editor.
Joanne Lax-Farr, advisor

Charlie Gumula

MC's all-new Student Senate concened for the first time Sept. 25 to elect officers and make plans for the coming year.

Is Rolling Stone banned?

by Jennifer Worth

At the same time that conservative groups have been pressuring retail stores not to carry certain magazines, Wal-Mart has quit selling Rolling Stone magazine.

The discount retail chain announced earlier this summer that it will no longer sell certain records and magazines, including Rolling Stone, a popculture magazine specializing in rock music and personalities. This decision follows closely on the heels of a June first sermon by Jimmy Swaggart, in which he criticized some retailers for selling "merchandise that could negatively affect kids," reported Michael Goldberg in the September 11 issue of Rolling Stone.

Is Wal-Mart's timing coincidental? Stacey Duncan, public-relations coordinator for the Wal-Mart Corporation, said in a phone interview that the "decision was made based on a periodical review of merchandise" and that it was "not based on any moral values."

Duncan cited "customer preference" and the chain's "family image" as deciding factors. She also insisted that Wal-Mart had not singled out any particular publication or recording artist. The manager of Maryville's Wal-Mart outlet, located in Foothills Plaza, had "no comment whatsoever" on this issue.

The controversy may seem insignificant, for Rolling Stone is still widely available. Is the issue just a tempest in a teacup? MC students were largely unaware of the situation; but a few were incredulous. "Why would anyone want to ban it [Rolling Stone]?" was a common response.

Why, indeed? Other area retailers have no complaints. Maryville's Gateway stores, Waldenbooks, and Kroger all carry Rolling Stone and affirm that it is a hot seller. A Kroger employee exclaimed, "We usually can't keep it on the shelf!"

Closer to home, the MC library has recently suscribed to Rolling Stone; however, the library staff's hectic summer has prevented any gauging of the magazine's campus popularity. Head librarian Joan Worley decided to take it because of its "good coverage of the popular music scene," along with some "good political content."

Neither retailers nor library has received demands to get rid of Rolling Stone. If confronted with such a request, Worley said she would simply invoke the American Library Association's "Bill of Rights," which denounces censorship; the A.L.A. insists upon everyone's "right to read."

The heart of this matter is that personal right and whether it is being bruised by the Wal-Mart Corporation. In a practical sense, maybe not. Rolling Stone can still be found and purchased locally although perhaps with a bit more inconvenience. But a principle may be at stake. Censorship has been on many minds over the past year, due to Edwin Meese's commission on pornography, Seven-Eleven's action against Playboy and similar magazines, and the records-rating debates in the Capitol building. More and more attention is focusing on what consumers may and may not buy and read. Whatever their reasons, Wal-Mart's corporate heads may well have started a trend.

Search from pg. 1

Members of the screening sub-committee include: Edwin Best, Harwell Proffitt, Russell Parker, and Mary Lib Jackson. Members of the PSC include: John Walker, Ellie Gilmore, Russell Parker, Carolyn Blair, and board members Edwin Best (chairman), Harwell Proffitt, Mary Lib Jackson, Roy Crawford, Dick Chait, and Phil Brown.

The committee members are a representative body of the campus. The student member, John Walker, was available during the summer for much of the work that had to be completed before fall term. The two faculty members, Russell Parker and Carolyn Blair, were elected by the faculty. Ellie Gilmore represents the staff, and the board members include alums of the college.

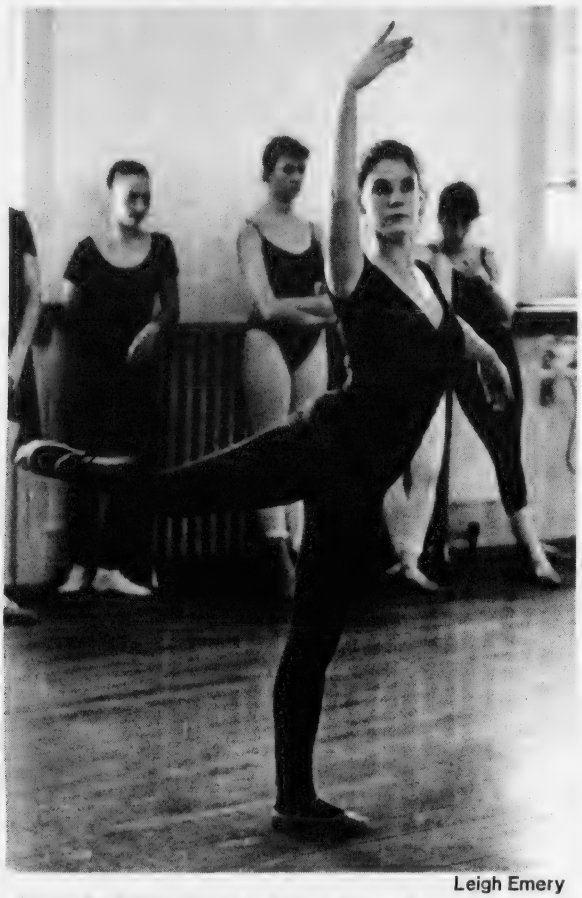
Donna Davis said "the search committee will pick one person to bring before the whole board; the board will formally appoint the president or tell the committee to keep searching."

Futhermore, Davis explained that the " board does not want a vote from faculty or students, but they want to know, 'Can you work with him?' This is not a popularity contest. Everybody may love him, but he may be a disaster as a president."

The whole process is a delicate one. Davis said, "I liken it to people dating -- it is almost like a marrigae. It isn't that you like this boy better than that -- it is who you are most comfortable with. It is the best fit or match."

The selection of the president is a confidential process in part to protect the candidate, said Davis. Some of the candidates already hold jobs and therefore prefer not to have their names revealed. Also, "It is the board of director's responsibility to select the president," Davis said.

Currently, the PSC is still considering candidates, for as Davis said, "An organization is like a person. If you didn't grow, you died. So we need a president for growth."



SHORTS

(OCR) Parents don't know much about the critical college and financial aid information available to them and their kids, an Illinois scholarship committee says. The group's study found that 54 percent of the parents of eigth-grade students didn't know anything about the state's college admission requirements. Still, 80 percent wanted financial aid information.

(OCR) -- Amourous relationships between faculty members and students enrolled in their classes are prohibited by a new policy at the U. of Iowa. The policy also provides that a professor formerly or now involved in a romantic relationship with a student will not be allowed to make decisions regarding that student's grades. The policy is intended to help end sexual harassment at the school, according to a university spokesperson.

(OCR) -- Liberal arts graduates received the best news from this year's Salary Survey by the College Placement Council. The average salary jumped 10.1 percent for humanities grades, and 8 percent for both social science and economics students. "More and more employers have been telling us that they're giving more attention to liberal arts graduates because of their broad-based education, and their ability to see the big picture," says CPC's spokesperson.

Dance students flock to Fayerweather's top floor

Leigh Emery

Angela Beckwith (above) and Doug Cooper (below) warm up for class.

Leigh Emery

by John Wright

Eight a.m. The post office, snack bar and bookstore awaken to yet another day. 9:55 a.m. Students check their mail boxes, watch "Press Your Luck", or rush to their next class. Noon. the snack bar becomes a gathering place filled with commuters and faculty eating lunch and sharing the important and the not-so important news of the day.

Four p.m. What happens? Fayerweather is suddenly taken over by a horde of little girls dressed in pink, black and sometimes flourescent blue and green tights and leotards.

To many Maryville College students, life does not go beyond the first floor of Fayerweather and to others an occasional visit to Bruce Guillaume, Career Planning and Placement, or to Marty Redman, Resident Life Director, is all they encounter. Let's go beyond the second floor of Fayerweather. The stairwell to the third floor, like the one from first to second, is creaky. But once you reach the top, a whole new world appears.

Stretching, pictures of famous artists, tap shoes, books on technique, little brothers and sisters playing with tinker toys and Cabbage Patch dolls, and patiently waiting mothers are among the multitude of things which create a special aura at the Van Metre School of Dance.

Six p.m. Experienced amateur and professional dancers gather for class for the simple reason of making themselves better artists.

Appalachian Ballet principal dancer Amy More Morton was asked how she felt about working in the midst of a college environment. She explained that the third floor was like a special place of business and that she appreciates the respect from the college students. "I only wish there were more of an awareness of existence up here. It would be good if students would come up and ask questions or just observe a class," she expressed.

But what about the building itself? Morton smiled and said, "It's like a haven! You have to go and study someplace like New York to fully appreciate it. It's like a private domain with great scenery and an occasional preying mantis that decides to join ballet class."

Both Morton and director of the company Cheryl Van Metre consider themselves greatly connected with college. Van Metre has worked with Maryville College since 1957 and since then has trained many Maryville students who have become professionals in dance and other artistic fields.

Van Metre thinks that it is wonderful for students to study dance because she pushes them to their maximum potential. "I care about my students and give them every opportunity possible. In that sense I feel like a vital part of the college, sharing the same philosophy as most Maryville College professors."

The few Maryville College students who do take dance benefit from it in a number of ways. MC sophomore Leigh Emery said, "It's a physical pick-up and motivates me to strive for more." Emery also agreed that having professionals around is a great model. "I'm still a beginner, but someday I'd like to be in the jazz company." Leigh also incorporates herself with the dance company as a photographer and general "go-for."

Other students include freshman Doug Cooper, who said that the most rewarding factor for him is exceeding limitations and reaching goals he never thought were possible. Also, Japanese exchange student Mayumi Endo enjoys taking dance merely for the exercise and personal fulfilment. She said, "It's convenient, I get college credit, and the personality of the teachers makes it so fun!"

So you see Maryville College, there is life beyond the second floor of Fayerweather. A place that encompasses much discipline and practice, not to mention a lot of sweat.

Performances

10/8: Spyro Gyra

Award-winning jazz ensemble Spyro Gyra will perform Wednesday Oct. 8 at the Bijou Theater. Showtimes are 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $15, on sale at all Cat's Records, Tony's V.I.P. and the Bijou Box Office. For more information call 691-7170.

10/10: Gallagher

Comedian Gallagher will perform at 8 p.m. Friday Oct. 10 at the Civic Auditorium. Tickets are $15 and $12.50 and are on sale at the box office and Ticketron outlets.

HOME for the Holidays

All Seasons' Vacation Center
Midland Shopping Center
(615)982-6400

Call now for best airline discounts

ENTERTAINMENT

Campus Events

Thursday, Oct. 2
11:00 pm CIV Dr. James Bloy on "The Gothic Realization."
12:30 pm ACC meeting. PDR

Friday, Oct. 3

Saturday, Oct. 4
1:30 pm Scots' Football at Cumberland College
2:00 pm Scots' Soccer at Bryan College

Sunday, Oct. 5
8:00 pm Movie: "The Little Prince" Student Center.

Monday, Oct. 6

Tuesday, Oct. 7
6:00 pm Volleyball doubleheader. Scots host Bryan College and Carson Neuman College. PE Building

Wednesday, Oct. 8
8:00 pm Movie: "All of Me." Student Center.

Thursday, Oct. 9
3:30 pm CIV. Shakespeare Company. "The Taming of the Shrew." FAC Music Hall.
7:00 pm Student Recital. FAC Music Hall.

"Crocodile Dundee" fails to bite

by John Wright

Jaws II or Superman III I haven't quite figured out which of these two movies best describes the plot of Crocodile Dundee. The film opens with a scene in a New York newspaper firm. Shiela, a journalist and the Boss' daughter, desires to do a story on an Australian man who has unbelievably survived the bite of a crocodile: hence, Michael J. "Crocodile" Dundee.

Sheila arrives in Australia and meets Mr. Dundee in the town bar. My immediate reaction was, "Love is right around the corner" and "All we need now are the superman powers". I was right.

Mr. Crocodile first reveals his telepathic ability by charming an ox in the middle of the road and later a couple of vivacious, uninviting doberman pinchers. Also, Dundee performs his heroic duty by leaping to rescue the writer from the jaws of an 18-foot crocodile.

But superhuman powers and heroic efforts are not all. Sexual innuendos are often exchanged between the two, but subtlely. My sincere thanks to director Michael Boyd who graciously left out that moment of relentless passion.

However, what this picture lacks in plot line, it gains in humor. Throughout the movie, the attempt to ridicule "tradition" is more than successful.

A scene at a meal during a safari is particularly funny as Dundee advises the journalist to eat some distasteful yams and seconds later pulls out a few canned goods for himself.

The most entertaining part of the movie though occurs when Crocodile Dundee is introduced to the "Big Apple". The sarcastic yet good-natured character has trouble figuring out the significance of American escalators and toilets.

However, the laughs don't stop there. Dundee also has several run-ins with "soul brothers", whores, and drug dealers. He handles them all with great charisma and eventually adapts to big city life.

Finally, love wins out between Sheila and Crocodile Dundee in a hysterical scene in the subway, and of course, they live happily ever after.

If you are a superman, Lois Lane, Jaws, with a touch of good humor, fan, I highly recommend this movie for you. Otherwise . . .

Herbert aims at stardom

by Heidi Weiffenbach

Today's acting profession requires more than just a handsome face, and MC's Chris Herbert has got what it takes.

"Chris combines a good amount of intelligence and talent toward acting. He has a studied approach toward acting," says Don Thomas, instructor in speech and theatre.

Acting has never been a lifelong dream for Herbert, but a role in the 1985 spring musical, Footlights, sparked his interest in the theatre. He realized he was destined to be in front of the lights, so he obtained an agent in Knoxville and launched his career.

Since Footlights, Herbert has done several television commercials and has had lead roles in MC's Playhouse productions of Dracula, Androcles and the Lion, and he is currently in A. R. Gurney's, The Dining Room.

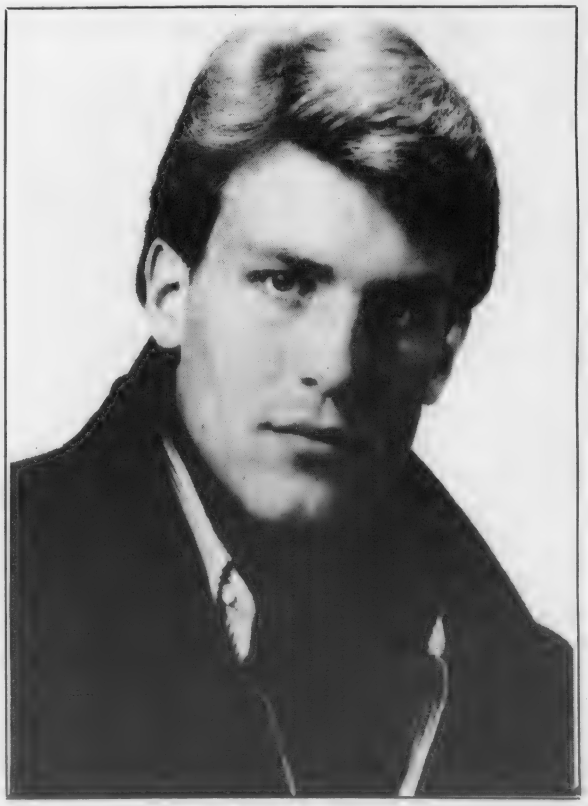
This summer Herbert had the chance to put his talent to the test. After qualifying on the state level last November at the Tennessee Theatre Association (TTA), Herbert auditioned for the Southeastern Theatre Association (SETC) and landed a summer position with the Lone Star Historical Drama Association in Galveston, Texas.

The Association presented two outdoor dramas: Paul Green's The Lone Star, about Texas' dramatic struggle for freedom, and Jerry Herman's Hello Dolly! The season opened June 7 with The Lone Star and ran through July 4. Then the Broadway hit musical Hello Dolly! opened July 5 and played every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, alternating with The Lone Star which played on Wednesday, Friday, and Sunday through August 23.

In The Lone Star, Herbert portrayed Colonel Buck Travis, co-commander of the Alamo to Bowie, and in Hello Dolly!, he was a chorus member. As Colonel Buck Travis, Herbert was a supporting lead, in which each evening he was involved in a grueling sword fight which resulted in his being mortally wounded. The free-flowing fake blood brought gasps from the audience, but it was all in a day's work for Herbert.

Six nights a week, Herbert and a cast of 100 played to packed houses of 2,000. Is it any wonder then that with such a rigorous schedule, there weren't any mishaps along the way?



During one evening's performance, Herbert was moving scenery between acts and tripped over a cable, breaking his knee cap. "But," Herbert said, "the show must go on, and so I danced the finale."

"I found the entire experience challenging and rewarding," Herbert said, "because I learned a whole lot about what it is like to do repetoire theatre, and what it is going to take to make it as an actor. I also made a lot of good connections!"

Thomas added that Herbert's summer experience "gave him a good idea of what professional theatre is really like without committing himself."

So, what's next for the up-and-coming star? In January Herbert plans to attend the Aspen Winter Theatre and Film Conference Festival where workshops will be held in film and acting. "I would like to stick to the film medium," Herbert said, "because the camera can pick up those subtle gestures and glances that an audience can't."

"I don't have any doubts that I'll make it as an actor," Herbert replied, exuding confidence. He is striving for lasting talent, and not the fleeting stardom that accompanies teen idols. Herbert definitely has that star quality and who knows? Perhaps he is the big screen's next Robert Redford.

Chris Herbert

Redman brings experience, enthusiasm

by Kristi L. Self

When he isn't sitting in the woods with the crickets, listening to the radio, Marty Redman is busy reviewing old files and settling into the position of director of residence life and co-curricular programs.

This well-dressed, enthusiastic man is very excited about working at Maryville College. He said, "I am really impressed with the students' openness, friendliness, and willingness to help -- so far it's been great." He said that the only bad experience he has encountered so far was waiting to do his laundry in a college dormitory on a Sunday night.

A graduate of Dickinson College in Pennsylvania, Redman has worked in many student-related jobs. He began as a stage manager at Dickinson and later became president of the student government and served on various judicial boards.

Redman's next employer was Temple Community College in Texas. At Temple he was the director of student life.

After Temple, he worked at SMU in Dallas as the resident director and as the summer conference supervisor. Part of his job included running the NCAA cheerleading camps, which were founded at SMU. While at SMU, he completed work on his graduate degree.

From August 1980 until August 1986, Redman worked at Washington and Jefferson College in Pennsylvania where he served as assistant dean of students. His responsibilities included the management of residence halls, student life, Greek organizations, orientation, and student government.

Redman has worked in small colleges the majority of his career. He prefers them to larger universities. He said, "Small staffs allow you to do lots of different things. Generally, I have varied days and I prefer to work under those pressures."

Maryville College offered Redman proximity to his family and a chance to the kind of work he prefers -- working actively with the students. He was also encouraged by Larry West, a former MC employee, who now works with Redman's wife at Guilford College.

Redman has three main goals. He wants to better diversify out-of-class activities and offer the students more options. He wants to make all aspects of college life enjoyable. Redman encourages students to voice their opinions. He said, "I would like to offer students the opportunity to stop by and say hello or to talk about anything."

Redman said his second goal is to "assess the situation of the physical facilities." He added, "I want to conduct building inspections to get a better feel of the facilities and see where the improvements need to be made."

His third objective is planning a homecoming celebration that is enjoyable for the students, the faculty, and the community.

When Redman spoke about the residence halls his face filled with enthusiasm and anticipation. He said, "We have a great residence hall staff. I plan to meet the students' needs in the dormitories and elevate RA's and SA's as student leaders and clarify their roles."

Redman is very interested in commuters as well. He doesn't see anything being done for them right now. He said, "Student commuters are a large population that need to be addressed. I would like to set up an organization and hold open meetings just to talk about things that affect this group."

When Redman isn't working in his airy, spacious office or listening to the aspiring ballerinas practice in the studio above him, he is at home in the Maryville College guesthouse. He enjoys reading and has a keen interest in law. In fact, he had originally planned to become an attorney. He said, "I would love to get a law degree just to get it!"

Most of Redman's time is spent repairing and fixing up his new home and waiting for his wife, Sally, and his 16-month-old daughter, Katie, to join him.

Debbie Coles

The parking area in front of Carnegie Hall is one of the major causes of student complaints with the new parking regulations. See related story, pg. 1.

Fayerweather gets facelift: Student Senate finds home

by Kristi L. Self

During the past three weeks the second floor of Fayerweather has been the site of pounding hammers, twisting screwdrivers, buzzing saws, and anxious, observing faces.

When all the workers leave and the sawdust is swept away, Maryville College students will have official meeting rooms for the first time in history.

The former Black Student Association room is the new home to a suite of offices and meeting rooms. One office will be filled by the student senate president. The two remaining offices will be used for other student programs.

The selection process for filling these offices will be conducted by Student Affairs. When the project is near completion the announcement for applications for office use will be made.

Organizations wishing to use the space will be selected on the basis of the types of programs they offer, their overall productivity, and the number of students involved.

The meeting rooms will be open to all college organizations, but appointments must be made to use the rooms.

Construction began on September 12, and is scheduled for completion on October 10. Business Manager Donna Davis said, "That part of the building was intended for the infirmary, that's why we got such a late start on the construction."

DeAnn Hargis, Student Senate president, said, "I'm thrilled! Finally, the students will have a place to go. Fayerweather is really becoming a true student center. The students' voice is located inside of it."

SPORTS

Maryville's Das Fumbah tries to maneuver past this opponent in a recent game against Covenant College.

Scots come close

by Matt Wayland

The Bridgewater Eagles are breathing a sigh of relief after last Saturday's contest with the up-and-coming Maryville College Scots.

Before 1550 fans at Jopson Field in Bridgewater, Va., The Scots rallied in the second half to turn a 10-0 halftime deficit into a 14-10 Maryville advantage. But this was to be Bridgewater's day, for with 1:14 left in the game, the Eagles scored on a 19-yard pass to seal the victory by a score of 17-14.

The first half belonged to the Eagles as they scored on a 24-yard run with 9:36 left in the first quarter. This touchdown capped an 80-yard drive.

Then in the second quarter the Eagles recovered a Maryville fumble and with 14:45 left before halftime, converted it into a 35-yard fieldgoal. The score stood at 10-0, Bridgewater at halftime.

During halftime, an amazing transformation must have taken place as the Scots came roaring back in the second half.

Freshman running back Julio Kiliddjian, who amassed 142 yards on 18 carries, scored on an 8 yard run with 6:45 left in the third quarter. Suddenly the Scots were right back in the game.

As Kiliddjian said, "In the second half we really came out and wanted to win. Everybody had confidence in the second half."

Then the Scots scored again with Kiliddjian scoring from 12 yards out with 12:33 left in the fourth quarter. Both of these runs were aided by some ferocious blocking by the offensive line and by fullback Jeff Seagle.

The Scots were then up by a score of 14-10 but unfortunately this was not to last long. With 1:14 left in the game, the Eagles came back and scored on a 19-yard pass making the final score 17-14, Bridgewater.

This was a tough loss for Maryville, yet it was an encouraging loss, if there can be one. Against Centre College, two weeks ago, the Scots were defeated 36-14 and they allowed nearly 500 yards in offense as well as turning the ball over eight times.

The Scots now seem to be progressing as the season moves along and playing better as a team. The players also seem to realize this as Steve Katz, senior offensive guard stated, "We still have a ways to go, but we're improving every game."

Some of the outstanding efforts by the Scots included two interceptions by safety Mike Walsh and another by defensive end Steve Diggs. Linebacker Eddie Fuchs and defensive end Jeff Denton also played exceptionally well.

This next game is a must win for Maryville and they know it. Darrell Lauderdale emphasized, "We're gonna win! We will win! I guarantee we will win!"

Other players expressed similar emotions. "We have to win. We have to push the button earlier and play harder," said Julio Kiliddjian.

Freshman defensive tackle Derek Lee said that, "We're going to build on our mistakes. We've progressed since day one. We've got to keep our heads held high. There's no limit to what we can do."

Soccer team loses three in a row

by Rethabile Masilo

Just how would you feel if you were dealt three nasty blows to the midriff, and each time you felt you could feint to the side or counter with a block, but somehow you couldn't? Well, hold the feeling, because a lot of the soccer fans have caught it already.

On September 20, the soccer Scots played a gruelling game against Lynchburg College and lost one to nothing. A few words about Lynchburg College are in order. First, they are ranked 10th in the nation. Second, one of the reasons they are is that soccer is their main autumn sport. Third, in the histroy of ODAC, Lynchburg has lost the soccer champoinship only once. Now, it is clear how the Scots could have lost against Lynchburg, but that's not how they did.

A soccer game lasts 90 minutes and has two 45-minute halfs. At about the 85th minute, in the game against Lynchburg, the Scots' stopper stripped the ball off a Lynchburg foward and passed it to his goalkeeper. And both froze in their tracks, because the ball proceeded to roll over the goal line, and Lynchburg was one up. At the same time that the pass was made, the goalkeeper was moving out either to strangle the attack, or to anticipate the pass. A crucial mistake at the wrong time and against the wrong team.

On September 23, the Scots played away against Tennessee Wesleyan, and if your guess is what I think it is, you're absolutely correct. This time the battle went on for eighty-nine minutes, when the Scots conceded a goal. In less than a minute, the game was over. Another tough-luck situation, because the Scots were getting ready for the Scots of Covenant College on September 27. Their first encounter this season, at Covenant College, ended in a goal-less draw.

Now, Covenant Soccer is not anything to lose sleep over, but Covenant Soccer is no pushover:
the team is neither good nor poor. It is consistent, in its wins and in its losses. And it is consistent in its rough tackles and charges and trips and pulls. It is a tough opponent althogether.

The game started at a quick pace, and two or three minutes later, a penalty kick was awarded against the Maryville Scots!

On a penalty kick, the ball is placed twelve yards from the goal line of the team that committed the foul, and there is a duel between the goalkeeper of that team and a kicker from the other team. It is lop-sided 95-5 disadvantage against the goalkeeper, because he is not allowed to take his feet off the goal line wntil the kick is taken. Anyway, one nothing, Covenant. The game went on with few exciting moments until, two minutes from the end, Covenant scored a second goal.

M.C. got one yellow card, and Covenant collected a total of four yellow cards. Two were given to players for unsportsmanlike conduct, and two to the coaches for ungentlemanly conduct.

The Covenant game drew about 50 M.C. fans and the message from the team is that "We really appreciate people coming out. We know we aren't going anywhere fast unless we have the full support of everyoine here in Maryville."

Team captain Nick Busko further pointed out that everywhere they have played, they were always overwhelmed by jeers and, in other cases, genuine moral support from their opponent's supporters. Whichever it is, "some of the teams just win games because of their fans, you know," he emphasized.

And life goes on as the soccer Scots' prepare for the rest of the season, which includes four ODAC games.

THE BACK PAGE

Parking from pg. 1

zone was so designated for a safety reason.

Examples cited include fire lanes and the area in front of Anderson, where cars used to line both sides of the street. Hurst and Davis said that this necessitated one-lane traffic, creating a dangerous situation.

In keeping with the new regulations, Hurst is really cracking down on violators this year. He has issued a number of warnings to cars without parking decals and plans to continue to do so until he gets every MC driver registered.

"With the exception of visitors, I will endeavor to try to get every car registered," Hurst said. "It's mainly to identify people that belong here." This too is safety oriented: the decal stickers are intended to help the security department eliminate stragglers, outsiders and "unwanted persons" who come on campus.

At the time of this writing, close to 400 students had registered cars; that is almost double the number who registered last year. More faculty had registered too. Hurst said this does not indicate an increase in the number of cars at MC: the cars were here before, but people simply didn't bother to register them.

Warnings have been handed out in vast numbers, but no citations are being issued until every violator receives a warning first. "I will try my best to put a warning on every car before I give them a ticket," Hurst said.

"This is not a monetary thing. We would hope that we didn't have to issue any tickets," he continued. "I wish I could go a day, a week, months, forever without having to write one. But that's an impossibility."

"The campus is not that big, and there is plenty of parking space, so there is really no reason for violation," Davis said.

Both Hurst and Davis said that there was really no way to say how many parking spaces have been eliminated, but that there is still ample parking space available.

"Right now, students taking the spaces around Anderson is the biggest problem," Hurst said. Space is available at Anderson only for faculty and staff who work in the building, according to Davis, with the exception of three visitor parking spaces.

Melissa Walker, Director of Alumni Relations, said that she sometimes has trouble finding a parking place in the mornings because of students parked at Anderson. "I don't think people need to drive from Davis to Anderson, not even in the rain," Walker added.

For some, the problem was not any particular regulation, but simply that they had no idea what was going on at the time. One faculty member said that she saw the spaces marked "reserved" when they were first painted and drove on in search of a place to park, unaware that she was part of the group for whom they are reserved.

> "Unless they want to start buying my shoes, they had better mark out some of those 'reserved' spots."
>
> – Kristi Self

"You may count me among the confused," Dr. Charlotte Beck said. Dr. Beck's customary parking space was one of the casualities of the new "no parking" zone by Anderson Hall. Dr. Beck had no real objection to the changes, but she felt that the campus community could have been better informed at the time that the changes took place.

"I think we can get used to any system, as long as it is a good system, and as long as we are informed about it," Dr. Beck said, adding that it is ludicrous to have people so confused about what is happening in a place as small as MC.

Not everyone feels that the changes have been equally fair or beneficial to all members of the campus community. "Truthfully, I don't think enough has been done for the commuter," junior Melodie Sedgwick said. "For people who drive to school, it's difficult in the mornings to find parking places. There aren't enough parking places on campus anymore."

Sophomore Kristi Self agrees. "It's very discriminatory toward commuters," she said. "I've had to circle the parking lots two or three times in the morning, just to find a place to park my car. Last year there was no parking problem."

Now Self said that she often has to park behind the chapel. "It's not even a parking lot back there; it's a gravel hole!" she said. "I am so tired of wading through wet grass." Self said that her daily trek through wet grass "makes big huge spots on my shoes."

Some students complain that too many parking spots have been reserved for faculty and staff. "Ridiculous" is how sophomore Mike Bradam describes the situation; another student commented that she might as well be at UT.

"All these parking spaces sit empty in front of FAC and Sutton every day," Self said. "Unless they want to start buying my shoes, they had better mark out some of those 'reserved' spots."

Student archer shoots for future Olympic medal

by Kent Thomas

All of us at one time or another have dreamed about being in the Olympics. For Patrick Kelly, that dream is not so far out of reach.

Kelly, a 19-year-old freshman from Hamilton, Virginia, has proven himself to be one of the best in the country in the sport of archery. His credentials read something like this: undefeated in the '84-'85 season, won 60 straight tournaments, won the state title two years in a row, placed 49th out of 532 in the Olympic trials in June, and last August placed 79th out of 300 in the U. S. Nationals at Miami University.

It takes most archers many years of training to get that good, but Kelly has only been at it for three years.

Kelly won't stay at Maryville, however, even though he would like to. Kelly, who was born with a hearing problem, came here because Maryville has a good hearing-impaired program.

Kelly is also in pursuit of something else: an intercollegiate championship. "I have a lot of confidence that I will win it [an intercollegiate championship] by 1988. That should be no problem," said Kelly.

But for what college? His next stop will probably be at Arizona State, the number one team in the nation in archery for the last six years. Although the University of Tennessee is not out of the picture, Arizona is the most likely college for him, and that he could be granted a scholarship for his skills with the bow and arrow.

Is there an Olympic medal in Kelly's future? Patrick said that if so, it will take some more years of training under his belt. "1992 is a possibility, but '96 or 2000 are more likely," he said.

So remember the name Patrick Kelly, because you might be able to tell your kids you went to college with an Olympic medalist.

Volleyball team optimistic

by Rae Ann Hickman

Improvement.

That is the key to success in any field, and it is what the volleyball team is pursuing.

With a record of 3-13, the volleyball team is only about one-third into the season. Their coach, Kandy Schram, in her first year as head coach, feels very good about the team.

The hardest part of the schedule is completed. The team has been playing top-notch schools from the beginning of the season. These larger schools have the advantage of scholarship funding, but the Scots are nonetheless talented and very dedicated.

They are playing very well as illustrated by the fact that seven of their losses were by only one point. Schram thinks that this year's team is 100 percent better than last year's.

This year's team of 13 has a better attitude and better skills. There are also more young players who have time to learn and develop.

Schram has the team working on the mental game so that the players can develop the confidence to effectively use their skills. This opinion is shared by the players.

Peggy Lane says, "At times I think we could do better if we tried harder. If the team as a whole had the go-get-em attitude that the incoming freshmen have, they would do much better."

ENTERTAINMENT
MC: A return to the past

NEWS
Deaf awareness

SPORTS
Scots trounce Sewanee 49-30

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 3 | Maryville College | Friday, October 24, 1986

MC celebrates the Scots

by Heidi Weiffenbach

"This is going to be the best homecoming ever!" said Kati Tabor, co-chairman of Student Programming. The long-awaited weekend is finally here, packed with fun-filled and exciting festivities that are sure to enthuse even the most lackluster of scotty dog fans.

The Homecoming Parade kicks off the celebration at 3:30 p.m. on Friday in downtown Maryville followed by the Playmaker's reunion dinner in Profitt Dining Room at 5:30. MC's snack bar will be named and dedicated in honor of Sharon Crane at 6:30 in Fayerweather Hall. Then at 7:30 the Scots will be cheered on to victory at the annual homecoming pep rally and bonfire on Honaker Field. Immediately following the pep rally some of MC's finest talent -- past and present -- will light up the stage with a variety show in Lloyd lobby.

Saturday's activities begin bright and early at 9 a.m. with the Female Athlete's Reunion Breakfast at Morningside Inn, and at 10 a.m. everyone is invited to Honaker Field for a student-alumni soccer match.

But if sports aren't your bag, you may like to visit the MC Harvest Crafts Festival in the P.E. building which lasts from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.

The festivities continue with a ceremony celebrating the reopening of Thaw Hall, and tours will be given of the newly refurbished library. Lunch will be served on the lawn prior to the Homecoming football game at 1:30 when the MC Scots take on the Hampden-Sydney Tigers.

The traditional MC Homecoming barbecue is a real treat for fun and fellowship. During the barbecue, from 4:30 - 6:30, the Psychology Club will sponsor a wet sponge throw. So here's your chance to soak your favorite professor.

And to top it all off, you can dance the night away with your sweetheart to the bigband/jazz sound of "Archie Ashe and Windfall."

The Homecoming dance is semi-formal and will be held at Morningside Inn from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m.

Homecoming promises something for everyone. "The unity of the college is shining through," Tabor said, "and the Homecoming spirit is really coming alive!"

Homecoming '86 Schedule of Events

Friday, October 24

9 a.m. - 4 p.m. MC Alumni Board Meeting. Willard House.
3:30 p.m. Homecoming Parade.
5:30 - 6:30 p.m. Playmakers' Reunion Dinner in Proffitt Dining Room.
6:30 p.m. Naming of Snack Bar. Fayerweather Hall.
7:30 p.m. Homecoming bonfire and pep rally. Honaker Field.
After pep rally Variety show featuring student and alumni talent. (Special guests are alumni Playmakers.) Lloyd lobby.

Saturday, October 25

9 a.m. Female Athletes' Reunion Breakfast. Morningside Inn. (Former female athletes should receive a letter, but in case you are not in our files as a former athlete, you may make reservations through Kandis Schram.) There will be a $2 reservation fee.
9 - 10:30 a.m. Alumni registration. Willard House.
10 a.m. - 1 p.m. Bookstore open.
10 a.m. Alumni vs. Varsity Soccer Match. All previous soccer players (varsity or club) are invited to report to Honaker Field at 9 a.m. to organize for the game.
10:30 a.m. Celebration of the Reopening of Thaw Hall. Lawn in front of Thaw Hall. After the ceremony, the library will remain open for tours.
11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m. Lunch on the Lawn. Lawn between Thaw Hall and the P.E. Building. $3 per person. No charge to students on the MC meal plan.
1:30 p.m. Homecoming Football Game. MC Scots vs. Hampden-Sydney. Honaker Field. $2/adult; $1/students.
4:30 - 6:30 p.m. Traditional MC Homecoming Barbecue. Lawn between P.E. Building and Thaw Hall. Menu: Beef BBQ, cole slaw, baked beans, apple, doughnut, and beverage. $5.50/adults, $2.25/children. No charge to students on the MC meal plan.

9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Homecoming Dance with a "big band/jazz" sound. Morningside Inn, Maryville College woods. Semi-formal. $5.00/person.

Leigh Emery

Everyone got in the act during last Friday's homecoming prelude, Orange and Garnet Night in the Lloyd Hall lobby. The crowd was treated to a variety of talent including the smash hit single "The Maryville College Blues."

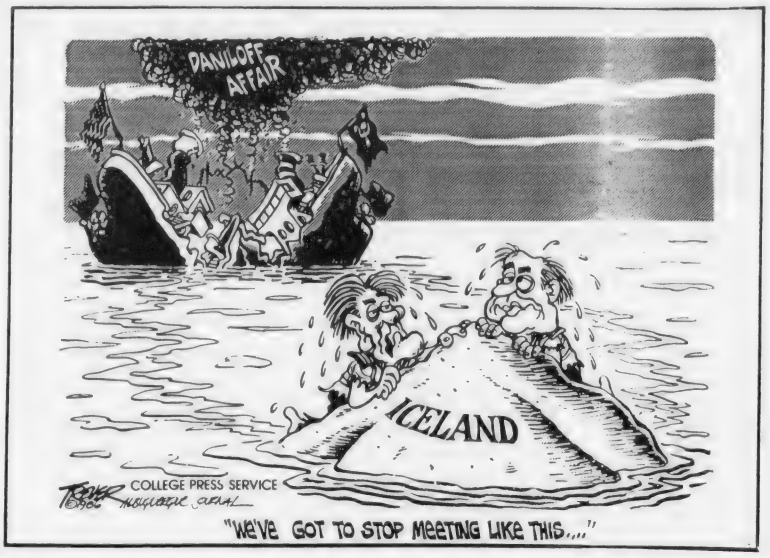
COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Better food service system needed

The sign hanging on the back wall of the Margaret Ware Dining Room proudly and colorfully displays the essentials of a balanced diet. But as anyone who regularly "dines" at MC realizes, the sign might as well be a sick joke.

It is ironic that a food service company would want to display such a sign when it does not come close to fulfilling those same merits.



The food that Dobbs House serves on some evenings, especially weekends, is simply ridiculous. How many times have you eaten fried chicken with a barbecue sauce poured over it? You probably don't eat it often because it's disgusting. But it is a good example of what Dobbs House often serves.

What about fried foods? There are other, healthier ways to prepare food. A little imagination could go a long way in helping Dobbs House improve its food service.

But better yet, the students of MC can go even further. I urge those students who are tired of the poor quality of food service they receive to organize a movement to separate the meal plan from the housing plan on the MC campus.

Besides the poor quality of food we receive, the greater disadvantage of the present system is that it offers no type of refund for meals not eaten in the dining hall. At the very least, a much better and convenient system could be instituted through the use of food coupons. These coupons could conceivably be bought in increments of $100 and could be redeemed in either the dining hall or the snack bar.

In all honesty, such a system would be much more beneficial to the students than the present one. It is an idea whose time has come and we urge you as students to strongly consider it.

MC's communication problem

by Lynn King

We have a communication problem at Maryville College. Not through any lack of tools for spreading information or willingness on the part of those responsible for it, but from what appears to be complete apathy, unconcern, or maybe just stubborn unwillingness to communicate on the part of the campus community.

Both the Grapevine and the Highland Echo are tools of communication on the MC campus; both are intended for the convenience of the campus community. But these publications cannot publicize news they are not aware of, and they cannot be aware of everything going on here unless the other necessary links in the communications network, i.e. students, faculty, and staff, do their part.

The Grapevine and the Echo are published alternate weeks, so a week never goes by without one or the other being available as a campus-wide forum for spreading information. Yet now many clubs, organizations, etc. bypass these publications, choosing instead to tack up posters, distribute flyers, or publicize their doings by word of mouth instead?

By the same token, how many students don't utilize the resources available to them in our campus publications? The Post Office floor never fails to be littered with the Grapevine the day it comes out: others are at least considerate enough to deposit theirs in the trash. People, these publications are not junk mail!

Both the Grapevine and the Echo are intended for your use and convenience. The editors of these publications do not spend hours compiling the information included for their health; neither are we desperately in need of something to do. We are not merely collecting experiences to include in resumes in later life either; we publish the campus newsletter and newspaper in an effort to serve you.

So the next time you hear about something of interest to the MC campus community, let us know about it. Don't just assume we'll find out through some other source; you are our sources!

And the next time you fine the Echo or the Grapevine, in your post office box, don't immediately file it under "F." You just might be missing something important.

Read them to see.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Entertainment Editor — Heidi Weiffenbach
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Layout Editor — Jes Kane
Typsetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers
Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth, Matt Wayland, Jonathan Yarboro Kristi Self

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

LETTERS:

Dear Editor,

Recently, I was working on an assignment in the Maryville College library. Due to extenuating circumstances, I was unable to begin work until a short time before the assignment was due. As I searched for particular materials, a concerned librarian offered her assistance. I told her the information that I was looking for and the places that had already been searched. Together, we looked for the material.

In a short while another librarian told the prior one to cease looking for the materials I had requested. She did.

As a student, I resent the librarians making moral judgements. I regret being unable to do the work earlier, but that is irrelevant. The librarian had absolutely no right to intervene in my affairs with another library employee. Librarians are placed in a library to help students, not to interfere or make character judgements. If they feel that the manipulation of students is necessary, they should seek employment in an elementary school library.

I left the library with an incomplete report, a feeling of humiliation, and a much lower opinion of some members of the library staff.

MC Student

The ECHO normally accepts only signed letters to the editor, but due to the nature of this letter, an exception was made.

Perils of journalism

by Kimberly D. Spargo

If you have aspirations of becoming a journalist, be prepared to put your pen down, frequently.

Unfortunately, you cannot always put it down on your paper. In fact, most interviewees prefer that you put your pen in your pocket. Why do interviewees become defensive around journalists?

After I became a staff writer for the Highland Echo, I confidently set out to seek familiar professors and staff members for bits of information to spice up the pages of the paper and inform the minds of the readers. What I frequently encountered was a wall of hesitant, anxious people who smiled when they saw me, Kim Spargo the student, and frowned when they saw me, Kim Spargo the journalist for the campus paper.

Carefully formulated answers and neat, compact, quotable comments replaced the usually casual, jocular conversations I was accustomed to. My first reaction was surprise, my second, understanding; my third and most enlightening reaction took the form of a question: Have journalists in the past given present journalists a "bad name?"

The stigmas that follow journalists probable began with the creation of the first daily newspapers. The earliest indication of newspapers comes to us from Germany in the 17th century. But it was not until 1883 that people started going out after the news instead of waiting for it to come to them. Thus, the first journalists were created, and more than likely, they in turn created the first reluctant interviewees.

In fact, I happen to believe that people have always distrusted and disliked journalists. Journalists are right down there with strangers and salesman; you're not supposed to talk to them or let them in your house (or into your mind in this case).

So, have journalists of the past given today's journalists a negative stigma? I think the answer is yes. In the fast-paced society in which we live, it seems we are masters of catching glimpses of conversations and snatches of context and then flying into full-length explanations of what a person of text really means. We see it all the time in television journalism, political propaganda, and even our daily conversations or classroom situations. This is not to say that journalistic (or other) misinterpretations are always malicious paraphrases, deliberately intended as harmful. It is saying that we frequently do not take the time to comprehend a single thought in the context in which it belongs.

Realizing the possibility of misrepresentation, the interviewee becomes hesistant. Even more fearsome for the interviewee are the thoughts that he might say something damaging to his or someone else's career or something grammatically incorrect or embarrassing. Thinking such things greatly inhibits the candidness of the interview. Experienced interviewees have learned to expertly divulge perfectly quotable, unbiased, and essentially boring comments.

Obviously, somewhere along the line of newspaper and television journalism, somebody forgot to clearly identify what should be (and for me, I hope, are) the ultimate goals of the reporter. In the first place, the goals are not to destroy reputations, cause conflicts or arouse tempers. Granted, particular stories aften involve controversial or heated issues. But the point is that the really expert journalist should be able to establish a trusting relationship with his interviewees. After all, there is no journalism without the interaction of people. With such a relationship, a journalist could bring a news story, profile, or other journalistic features to life with the personalities of the people involved and provide not only accurate but interesting, perhaps stimulating, material for the average reader.

The problem is that the stigmas have had too much time to grow into well-fed, paper-comsuming, black-inked pens that dash across the page with seeming fury and smudged devilishness. Ah, how we need to get back to basic journalism. If journalism could gain a new, friendly, trustworthy reputation, and interviewees could learn to put down their defenses, then maybe our journalists could continue to put down their pens -- on paper.

Another view of . . . The UKA

By Brian C. Linkous

We all appreciate it when others remember those important dates in our lives. The United Klans of America are no exception -- they're human too, as the rumor goes.

1986 is the 25th anniversary of the United Klans of America. What I propose you people should do is to remember this special celebration by sending the Klan a birthday present.

I think we all know what the KKK stands for. UKA is a national Klan organization devoted to their cause. What I would hope you would do as a concerned citizen is to send them as much mail as possible.

This could include, but is by no means limited to: magazine subscriptions, hate mail, books, large orders for business supplies, or boxes containing undesirable goods.

Or, one could prevent them from receiving any mail by filling in phony holding or forwarding orders at your post office.

One trick is to fill a box with heavy bricks and send it to them with only a few cents postage on it. Or one could put the correct amount and enclose one's dead hamster. The UKA might even enjoy a new record collection from one of those record houses you see in magazines.

Just remember, use your imagination, and let the Klan know that they are always in your thoughts.

Reagan needs support

by Pam Gunter

The meeting between Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and U.S. President Ronald Reagan in Reykjavik, Iceland should not be blown out of proportion. It was a presummit meeting and not a "minisummit" as many of the press would have it called.

The meeting was part of the deal to free American Nick Daniloff, the reporter held on espionage charges by the Russians. The anticipated results of the meeting were to set a date for Gorbachev to come to the United States and to learn some of the positions each side held on topics to be discussed at a summit. The leaders failed to set the date, but the two definitely presented their positions on issues such as arms reduction and human rights. In order for the President to be successful at a summit, we must support him in his position on SDI -- Strategic Defense Initiative -- and his concerns for Soviet dissidents.

President Reagan went to Reykjavik to propose a generous plan concerning SDI. The President suggested that once the research for SDI ("Star Wars") was completed, the Soviets would be allowed to observe and participate in the tests. It should be stressed here that SDI in a non-nuclear defense system; therefore the nickname "Star Wars" is a misleading term. SDI is a practical method of destroying nuclear missiles in air before they reach their destinations.

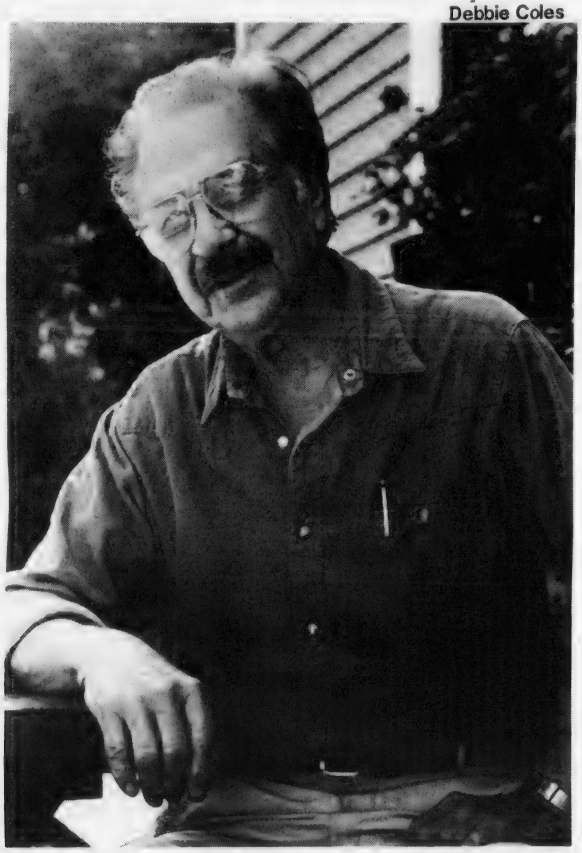
Gorbachev, on the other hand, stubbornly insists that all reasearch on SDI be restricted for the next ten years. Instead, he counter-proposed a reduction in intermediate-range missiles, stating that the need for "Star Wars" would be neglible if the weapons were reduced.

President Reagan refuted this by pointing out the security SDI offers is not simply against Russia, but safeguards both nations from other countries and "madmen."

The President's opposition says that SDI is in violation of previous agreements, such as the ABM (Anti-Ballistic Missiles) treaty. SDI, in its current status, does not violate any treaty the U.S. has signed. The Russians have simply chosen SDI to avoid the issue of human rights. (It should be noted that the Soviets have repeatedly violated the Helsinki Accords they signed in 1975 concerning human rights.)

The President, wanting "not just the prevention of war, but the extension of democracy," went to Reykjavik with all things negotiable but two -- "our [America's] freedom and our future."

To help the President maintain these ideas, we as Americans -- not Democrats or Republicans -- must support him in quest for a solution with the Soviets.



1931 grad recalls past days

by Lynn Smith

November 3, 1930, was the date on the yellowed page of the Highland Echo. This homecoming edition of the paper read, "There shall be merrymaking by day and sounds of revelry at night." Leland Gilmore, a 1931 graduate, was recalling his years as a Maryville College student.

Gilmore said the typical homecoming events were limited to the students and faculty, since there was the transportation problem for almuni returning to Maryville. He mentioned, "The fact that we [students] were all so close to each other as a college community that such a thing as a homecoming weekend was a part of the very life of all of us."

Debbie Coles

Leland Gilmore, 1931 graduate of MC, recalls the homecoming activities of years past.

Homecoming weekend was kicked off Friday night with a big pep rally, which was held in the chapel or occasionally outside with a bonfire. As head cheerleader, Gilmore was very involved with all the pep rallies and games. At the football game, a "Queen of the College" was crowned.

After the football game almost every guy would "tote a poke," or bring a date, to the "snap party." "If you didn't tote a poke, you would approach one of the non-dated beauties within and snap your fingers in front of her," Gilmore said. This was the girl's invitation to be a boy's date for the evening.

According to Gilmore, a bag of peanuts costing a dime was the standard refreshment at all of the parties. The evening involved games, various kinds of entertainment and some square dancing. The dates came to an early conclusion back then. A gentleman had to have his date back to her dorm by 10:30, and all dormitory lights were out by 11:00, said Gilmore.

The homecoming weekend came to an end Sunday with Maryville College students going to church in the morning and a crowd at vespers in the chapel that evening.

"Maryville College always was my home."

-- Leland Gilmore

Gilmore, a retired minister of Highland Presbyterian Church, is still active in activities at Maryville College. Gilmore and his wife, Vera -- Independent Study Editor -- have fed and housed several international students. All six of the Gilmore's children have attended Maryville College. As a three-year member of the Maryville College-Blount County Alumni Board, Gilmore helped arrange events for the homecoming celebrations at the college.

Besides planning for the homecoming celebrations at the school, the Gilmores also plan on having friends and family that attended Maryville College over to their house for additional celebrating and reminiscing. The Gilmores live at the foot of the MC campus. The house was originally owned and has been used by the campus as a dormitory.

When Gilmore was asked about this year's homecoming he simply smiled and said,

"Maryville College always was my home."

Fall CIV Schedule

October
30 J. Edward Kidder, International Christian University, Tokyo, Topic TBA
31 Play "The Dining Room" (Also Nov. 1, 7, & 8)

November
6 Prof. George Herring, Univ. of KY "After Ten Years: Lessons and Legacies of Vietnam."
13 Robert Bonham, "Early Renaissance."
21 Adis Vila, Director of Office of Mexico & Caribbean Basin, "Economics, Commercial Growth, and Investment Issues Pertaining to Mexico and the Caribbean Basin."

December
4 Elaine Vuyosevich, "Organ Transplants."
6-7 "Amahl and the Night Visitors." TBA.
9 Charles A. Howell, III TN Commissioner of Conservation, "In Search of the Quality of Life."

CAREER PLANNING AND PLACEMENT COMING EVENTS!

Oct. 28 Health Career Day. Meet with representatives of UT Center for Health Sciences: Medicine, Physical Therapy, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Nursing, Allied Health. UT Center Ballroom. Contact Jean Jones, CPP for appointment.

Yardwork causing problems

by Kimberly D. Spargo

The members of the MC admissions staff really know how to work up a sweat. Three staff members recently mowed, trimmed, weeded and raked in the garden areas in front of Anderson.

Dressed in shorts, MC T-shirts and blue jeans, Leslie Nier, Stan Anderson, and Tracey Mosley volunteered their services after a decision at a recent staff meeting that the campus grounds needed some attention.

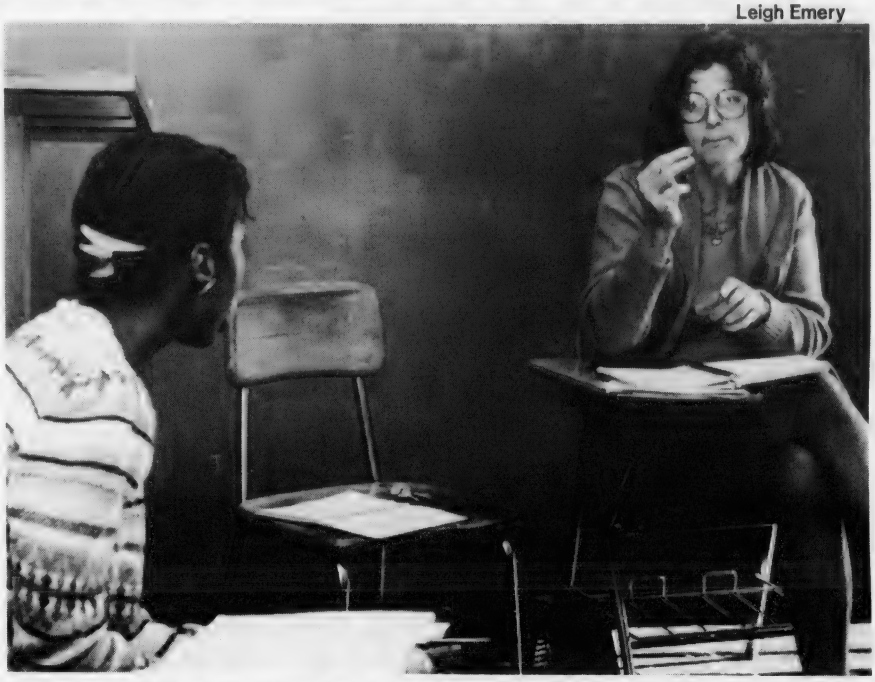
Leslie Nier said, "We just decided that something needed to be done. The maintenance people can't do it all."

The reasons the maintenance people "can't do it all" are numerous and complicated. Donna Davis, physical plant and personnel business manager, said the problems really started last spring. In September of '85, Al Hill was hired to serve as superintendent of the grounds. Davis said Hill actually had to create his own job description, and she hoped "he could explain what needed to be done on the campus and then establish a grounds crew."

In April of '86, however, Hill was offered an appointment at Harvard, which he accepted. Davis said that since his job was an "experiment," his absence left the campus with a void in the maintenance department. "I need to assess what we are going to do and what equipment we can purchase before we hire someone else," Davis said. In addition, Davis said that she and Lee Stephens (maintenance supervisor) will have to create a job description since Hill created his own.

Davis said she is currently assessing the problem in three ways: 1) How can we staff it? 2) What equipment do we need? 3) Can we sell our old equipment and afford to buy new?

One of the biggest problems is the outdated equipment. For example, Davis explained that the



See YARD pg. 5

MC leads in deaf awareness

Part 1 of a two part series

by Kristi L. Self

Leigh Emery

Ruth Sandefur-Yates conducts an interpreting class as part of MC's Sign Language Interpretation major.

It's 7:00 a.m. Suddenly, your sleep is interrupted by flashing lights, but it isn't an electrical problem or a switch-happy roommate. It's just the usual wake-up alarm for hearing impaired Maryville College students Patrick Kelly, Doug McCarty, and Jason Weaver, who use their eyes instead of their ears to receive the ever-dreaded wake-up signal that beckons us all to A-hour.

Most of us take for granted the small, seemingly insignificant objects like alarm clocks that help us function daily in a hearing-oriented society. Take a moment and imagine a world void of sound -- no ringing telephones, no screeching brakes, no music, no barking dogs, or no class bells. Simple tasks suddenly become major obstacles.

Deafness is the least noticeable and least understood disability. It isolates the individual and affects aspects in their life from ordering in a restaurant to getting a job. Many times the needs of the deaf are overlooked or avoided.

Some hearing impaired individuals are able to read lips and effectively communicate in the hearing world. But, less than 30% of the English language can be lip-read. That means that 70% of everything a hearing impaired person lip-reads is guesswork. For a hearing person that would be comparable to constantly changing the volume on a radio.

There are many myths about deafness. Deaf people can drive. In fact, their driving records are superior to those of hearing people. Most deaf people can speak. Less than one percent of the deaf population is mute. The term mute implies the inability to speak due to anatomical reasons.

Deaf is the term used for those who prefer to communicate by manual means (sign language), and those who prefer to communicate orally (lip-reading and speaking) prefer to be called hearing-impaired. The term hearing-impaired is used generically for all persons with a hearing loss.

In 1979, there was a breakthrough for the deaf. American Sign Language gained recognition as a separate language. For the first time, since 1969, when research was conducted by Dr. Stokey on deafness, deaf individuals in America were gaining recognition. The hearing world began to see deaf people from a different prospective.

Besides interacting with the hearing community, deaf people have developed their own tightly-knit group known as the Deaf Community. They share a strong sense of kinship. Once a strong coalition was formed, deaf people began demanding their rights and recognition. They confronted the government head-on concerning section 504 of the Rehabilitation Bill which deals with access to services warranted by the deaf.

The only way to continue moving ahead in deaf awareness is to increase deaf exposure and to become involved. Locally, Blount County has been very receptive to the needs of the deaf. The resolution to make the 911 emergency number accessible through telecommunication devices for the deaf (TDD's) was passed the first time it was presented to the county. There are over 50 identified deaf adults in Blount County. The fire and police departments understand their particular needs and strive to fulfill them.

Maryville College is nationally recognized for its exposure to deafness. It was the first school in the nation to offer a B.A. in Sign Language Interpretation. Maryville is the only four-year college to offer this program in the entire southeastern region.

YARD from pg.4

small mowing tractor used to mow the grassy areas between buildings puts the grass into piles instead of "throwing it around evenly." So after mowing, "the mowers must go back over the grounds with another tractor to vacuum up the piles of grass." Davis said that this process is extremely time-consuming and involves too many staff members.

In a further attempt to accurately assess the extent of the problem, Davis had a survey done to determine how much man-power would be involved in maintaining the college campus. The survey revealed that it would take 680 hours a month to mow, 112 hours a month to trim, and thus it would take four to five people working 40 hours a week just to keep the grass mowed. Davis said that hiring such a crew is just not in the budget at this time.

But currently, no one has been hired for the campus grounds. In an attempt to alleviate some of the problem, Davis said, "We are going to set up a zone-by-zone plan and have our maintenance crew do the campus a zone at a time."

Another effort involves an "Adopt a Spot" program. Davis said the plan "just sort of happened by accident. Faculty just decided to start helping out." That explains why the admissions office was pulling weeds the other day. They agreed to adopt the circular garden behind Anderson. Annabelle Libby and Martha Hess have adopted the grounds in front of Anderson. Bruce Guillaume, Jane Richardson, Donna Davis, and S.M. Atchely have adopted the Japanese garden in front of Fayerweather "as friends of Sharon Crane" because it was one of Sharon's favorite spots, Davis said.

Davis said, "Students could be interested in spots around the dorms or the back patio at the student center.

Other efforts include what Davis described as the "Litter Attack." She said, "A litter pick-up to pick up the campus litter such as old Coke cans and candy wrappers happens the first thing every morning." Davis also said that litter is not as big a problem this year as it was last year. She said she felt the orange and garnet trash cans that were placed on campus last year have probably "encouraged students to throw away their trash instead of throwing it down."

Spirit draws alumni back

by Lynn King

When they come to Maryville College, they come to stay.

That has proven true, at least, for a large proportion of the faculty, administrative and staff personnel now working to uphold the MC traditions that drew them back to the College, or never let them leave it.

The beauty of the geographic location. The quality of life in the surrounding community. A strong belief in the ideology of the institution.

Those are just a few of the reasons alumni affiliated with the college in various capacities give for being here now -- drawn back by the Maryville College spirit, that "intangible something" which was the most influential factor for some in making the decision to pursue careers at their old alma mater.

Whatever the elusive Maryville College Spirit is, it undoubtebly exists; twenty-six MC alumni are here now to prove it.

Just how did so many people make the decision to come back to Maryville College, or in some cases, to stay?

"We decided we wanted to come back to Maryville to live, because we liked it as students," Director of Admissions Leslie Nier said.

After graduating in 1971, Nier and her husband Gary, also an MC graduate, lived in New Jersey for some years where she worked in various positions, including teaching special education in a New Jersey school system.

Nier said that she didn't originally think of coming back to work at Maryville College, but when a position became available, she saw it as an opportunity. She felt that Maryville College had done a lot for her, and she wanted to give something back.

Nier worked first as secretary for the Office of Community Service and Alumni Relations, then as an Admissions Counselor and later as Assistant Director of Admissions and Financial Aid. She has been Director of Admissions since August 1985.

Arthur S. Bushing, associate professor of English, began his career at Maryville College in 1943 as an instructor in physics, and returned in 1947 after years in the U.S. Army, followed by graduate school. "Both times I was challenged to do something I had not dreamed of doing," Bushing said, explaining that he was invited both times and did not apply.

Now in his thirtieth year of teaching, Associate Professor of Biology Dr. Robert Ramger was also asked to come back. After teaching for one year then serving in the army for two years, he chose to return to MC to teach and get his master's degree rather than going into research at Oak Ridge. "I just love the area so much; it's just a great place to live," added Ramger, who is originally from St. Petersburg, Florida.

Dr. Jerry Waters' situation was much the same. He was finishing his Ph. D. at the University of Kentucky when the dean called him. "To come back to Maryville College was an unexpected pleasure," he said, explaining that he had had no idea there were openings in his field at the time. Waters is now Professor of Psychology and Chairman of the Division of Behavioral Sciences and Human Services.

Part 1 of a three part series

MC is Cornett family tradition

by John Wright

Have you ever wondered about the white house next to Copeland Hall? One might say that this white house is a part of Maryville College's tradition, for it has great historical value and is an important source of the College's foundation.

MC student Sam Cornett said that his great-grandfather built the white house. Gideon Stubbins White Crawford is a name everyone associated with Maryville College should know. Crawford began the first generation of family graduates and was very instrumental in the development of the college.

Crawford took a job offer from MC in 1874 and served as a mathematics professor for many years. Crawford also served as a preacher, having attended Lane Seminary and Union Seminary in New York. Cornett said, "His Presbyterian ministry was probably one of strong moral value."

What about the third generation? Cornett explained that his grandfather is one of the oldest living alumnus, still doing well at the age of 96. Maryville College was a preparatory school when Cornett's grandfather attended. "He played quarterback for the football team his senior year in 1912," Cornett explained. "They called him 'squirrely' because he was so quick on the field." His name now appears on the Wall of Fame in the gym.

Samuel Crawford remains an active supporter of the college. Cornett said, "It's amazing to think that my grandfather was raised in the white house next to Copeland along with three brothers and two sisters. It's great that he's still alive and can reminisce during the days of MC homecoming."

Since Cornett's grandfather graduated, many other family members have also passed through the doors of Maryville College, including his uncle and his mother, who before marriage was known as Mary Elizabeth Crawford.

Cornett was asked how he felt about being the fourth generation. "Tradition is straying away and school is a personal decision. I came to Maryville because of its quality, not because of family tradition." Cornett is the only one of many children in his immediate family to attend Maryville.

Although college today is more of a "ticket to the future," MC maintains its staunch pride and everlasting traditiion. Cornett said, "I'm proud to be a part of a family that has shared in shaping Maryville's present environment and I see an even brighter outlook for MC attitudes, sports, organizations, and other aspects of the college."

Bartlett Hall offers fond memories

by Kristi L. Self

To most of the students at Maryville College, Bartlett Hall is just a place to print a resume, xerox papers, or run down a maintenance man to repair a jammed closet door, but to students attending Maryville in the late 1800's it was a monument of triumph and determination.

In 1894 a Japanese student named Kin Takahashi began a fund-raising campaign to collect money for the construction of a gym and Y.M.C.A. hall. Takahashi was recognized as a leader early in his college career. Only 5'2", he was the first football captain at Maryville College.

Takahashi wanted to build a structure to show his gratitude to the college and to secure a headquarters for athletics and religion.

Actual work on the building began in June, 1895. Students began making bricks by hand. They produced 300,000 bricks for only $1,300.

The foundation was laid in 1896. In 1897, the walls were erected. That same year Takahashi returned to Japan. Due to lack of funds, construction was halted. In 1899, the college donated funds for Bartlett's completion. By 1901, the building was occupied. Sixty-eight percent of the building funds were collected by Takashi.

The original purpose of the building was to provide a place for athletic activity. In fact, Maryville College was one of the first colleges to house a YMCA. Later additions to the building included a swimming pool and an indoor track.

Lee Stephens, director of maintenance, began working for the college on July 28, 1943. He remembers Bartlett as the location of the gym and classrooms for physical education majors. The termination of these offices accompanied the construction the P.E. Building in 1970. All of the athletic offices and classrooms were transferred to the new building.

One of the fondest memories of alumni is a small store that was located in what is currently Joan Hughes' office. It was opened for one hour in the morning and one hour in the afternoon and became the gathering place for students.

Today, Bartlett is the site of a wide array of offices. It houses the maintenance, security, and housekeeping departments, as well as the print shop and two administrative offices.

This isn't Monkee business?

by Jennifer C. Worth

In answer to this September 8, 1965 ad in Variety, over 400 insane boys came down for interviews. When the dust had cleared, producers Bob Rafelson and Bert Schneider had created the Monkees -- the world's first pre-fab rock band. British stage actor David Jones, child TV star Micky Dolenz, Greenwich Village folkie Peter Tork, and songwriter/protest singer Michael Nesmith were the lucky winners.

For a while, the Monkees were a genuine phenomenon: the show won two Emmy Awards for the 1966-67 season; reknowned songwriters penned smash Top-Forty hits for the Monkees; the show featured guest shots by such varied talents as Ruth Buzzi, Tim Buckley, Vic Tayback, Liberace, and Frank Zappa; concerts and personal appearances were greeted by hordes of hysterical teens unrivaled since the early days of Beatlemania.

But cracks began to show when Nesmith called a press conference and revealed that the Monkees had scarcely played any of the instruments on their two albums, forcing the production company to yield. They ousted musical supervisor Don Kirchner and handed the reins to the Monkees.

But although the Monkees wrote many and played all of the songs for their second season, their concert tours, and their other eight albums, they were trapped by the teenybopper image that had given them their initial success. The show was canceled after two seasons; their 1968 movie, Head, was a critical landmark but a commercial bomb, after which Tork left the group. A year later, Nesmith departed, and in 1970, Dolenz and Jones called it quits. The seventies saw a rebirth of the series in syndication; a 1976 reunion tour -- "Jones, Dolenz, Boyce and Hart" -- was a marginal hit in the U. S. and a smash in Japan.

The story might have ended that way, but 1986 is seeing a renewal of Monkeemania. MTV has been the Monkees' avenue to new success, airing the series for the first half of the year, hyping their reunion tour featuring Dolenz, Tork, and Jones (Nesmith played one concert in L. A.), giving airplay to their new music video, "That Was Then, This Is Now"; and touting them as "The world's first video band."

Their success continues to balloon: They have extended their sellout twentieth-anniversary tour; Nickleodeon airs their show nightly; and a new album, Then and Now, The Best of the Monkees (a greatest-hits package with three all-new tracks), has gone gold. "Monkee-maniacs" are rapidly forming and joining fan clubs. The nine-year-old Monkee Business Fanzine claims over 2800 subscribers, up more than 2100 since June. Fans can also join brand-new fan clubs, like the Knoxville-based "Monkees Fan Club -- A New Generation," started by fifteen-year-old Kelli Bolinger, who lists current membership as around seventy; she has issued over two hundred applications.

Has Monkeemania hit Maryville College? A small poll was conducted, revealing that MC's basic attitude toward the Monkees is lukewarm. Of the thirty-six students and faculty who answered a brief questionnaire, thirty-two are eighteen to twenty-two years old, too young for the first wave on Monkeemania, and too old to really be stricken by the current wave. In fact, only five respondents first became aware of the Monkees within the past year. Most, eighteen, have known about them for six to fifteen years, and seven have known about them for even longer.

"The Monkees" show was the most common avenue of Monkee-awarness. Six got acquainted with the group via the original series; sixteen, through its widespread syndication since the early seventies. Another six met the Monkees via radio airplay, and eight cited other sources, such as friends, older sisters, or albums. Concerning the show, most respondents, twenty, rarely watch it (make no conscious effort either way). While six avoid the show, four watch it regularly if at all possible. Five like the show, but don't plan their lives around it.

Only nine respondents own Monkees albums; of these, four have more than one. Thus, it is no surprise that twenty-five respondents cannot name more that three Monkees' songs.

The poll's most revealing item is: "Which phrase best summarizes your opinion of the Monkees?" Only two people have no opinion; most, seventeen, classify the Monkees as a "mediocre sixties band on a reunion tour." Of the two extreme views, more people, fourteen, chose the more favorable: "pop-rock icons whose universal appeal allows their current popularity." Only three descrivbe the Monkees as "talentless teenyboppers vainly trying to cash in on former popularity."

More interesting than the poll results are the comments that over half the respondents added to their questionnaires. Sarah Prince thinks "the Monkees are one of the best bands ever," but are "underrated by practically everyone," while Andy Ringstaff calls them "a musical joke." Some comments center around the series, from "I always thought their show was corny" to Lars Farmer's "Their zany show is great" to "[I] can even laugh at the show when I am in a weird mood." Leah Mueller quipped that she "can't watch it, but would religiously if I could get CIV credit."

Others mentioned the reunion tour. Joe

See pg.8

Jumpin' Jack Flash: it's funny

by John Wright

"Dog's barking. Can't fly without an umbrella." The delivery of this simple message gets Whoopi Goldberg mixed up with the police, the CIA, and British Intelligence, and the KGB.

Goldberg plays the role of Terri Doolittle, a computer programmer for an international banking firm. Naturally, her personality sparkles and her unique way of handling things seems to have friends at work and in other firms around the world asking for help and advice. Wild!

One evening before shutting down, a "Knock, Knock" appeared on Doolittle's computer terminal screen. She responds properly and from then on, trouble slowly progresses. Who else could it be? Goldberg almost pulls the braids out of her head trying to figure out the person's code. Her only clue was that "Jumpin' Jack Flash" is the title of a Rolling Stones' song.

It turns out that ol' Jumpin' Jack is a CIA member stuck in Russia who wants out!! The British Consulate won't help, his exit contacts don't respond, and his ex-girlfriend doesn't care. it's up to Doolittle to save the day.

Whoopi Goldberg in an evening gown? Yes! This is only one of many hysterical scenes as Whoopi sneaks herself into a British high society ball. She disguises herself as "the entertainment."

That was only a small part of the process for producing a happy ending. The seriousness of the drama and the comical aspects of the movie were mixed with just the right ingredients. Congratulations to Whoopi! Her character was funny, intelligent, witty, and believable.

ENTERTAINMENT

Movies

Sunday, Oct. 26
8:00 p.m. Movie - Jagged Edge. Snack Bar.

Monday, Oct. 27
7 - 9 p.m. Study Hall. Thaw 216.
9:00 p.m. Monday Night Football. Snack Bar.

Tuesday, Oct. 28
4:00 p.m. Soccer vs Roanoke College. Home.
8:15 p.m. Maryville College Concert Choir. Music Hall.

Wednesday, Oct. 29
7 - 9 p.m. Study Hall. Thaw 216.

Art exhibit features wooden vessels

by Meg Fraelich

Artist Nick Cook's wooden vessels are the featured works in the October exhibit in the Fine Arts Center gallery.

The show is composed of functional and non-functional wooden bowls and vases. The thirteen vessels are made form a wide variety of woods, ranging from exotic rosewood to spalted, rotted, pecan. Some forms are reminiscent of old frontier kitchen ware; others are celebrations of luxurious wood grains.

Cook's work explores the organic nature of wood. The forms are elegant explorations of the limitations imposed by the natures of different woods. He frees the grain of the wood, allowing it to determine the form.

Cook's vessels are formed on a spinning lathe. He uses various special techniques to create his elegantly-sculpted works. Because of the long periods of time required to dry the wood, often several years, he turns the bowls from unseasoned, green wood. The distortion produces as the wood dries imbues the form with life -- a natural imperfection.

Some of his containers have natural edges, edges which show the surface texture and form of the orginal piece of wood. Turning a piece with a natural edge is very difficult. As the wood spins on the lathe, the unevenness catches the knife.

Some of his works are made from splated woods. The diseased, partially rotted wood is difficult and dangerous to work; often a piece of wood will break under the stress of shaping. Some forms have been hollowed using blind boring. Blind boring involves carving the wood by sound and feel because the opening at the top of the bowl or vase is so small. Cook's sensitive use of a satin polyurethane and wax finishes enhance the wood grains.

One of the most distinctive pieces is made of charoil walnut, a grafted French walnut. It is a dark, conical vase with a natural edge and stress splits. Three thin, small black heart sassafras bowls curve elegantly, defying gravity. They have a delicate black/brown grain which sbimmers against honey collered backgrounds. A spherical bowl made from splated pecan offers an excellent example of blind boring. Its smooth sides and bubble-like thinness emphasize the irregular black patterns from the spalting.

Nick Cook's exhibit is a wonderful display of an unusual art form. The exhibit can be seen at the FAC gallery between 8 a.m. - 3 p.m. until the end of October.

Hartman's Flowers
204 S. WASHINGTON ST.
MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE 37801
PHONE 982-7500
George W. Province

Vincent's album sizzles

by Michael Howell

Vinnie Vincent is the latest heavy metal guitar slinger, in a long line of stellar quick guitarists, who bursts upon the secne eager to prove himself "fastest gun in the West."

A debut solo LP, entitled Vinnie Vincent Invasion heralds Vincent as the new guitar wizard ready to capture audiences once spellbound by the fretboard virtuosity of players such as Eddie Van Halen, Randy Rhodes, and reigning speed-king Yngwie Malmsteen.

Halfway through the blistering selections on Invasion, the listener begins to wonder if maybe Vincent is the fastest. The guitar solos literally scream in death-agony. Incredibly, Vincent evokes his frantic death-throe wail without the use of pedals or extra cutboard equipment.

Apparently, Vincent has organized a band with sufficient ability to parallel his own. Lead singer Robert Fleischman belts out the Vincent-penned lyrics in approved heavy metal fashion.

His alien-high screams belie a tonal perfection and noteworthiness seldom displayed by metal frontmen. Bassist Dana Strum and drummer Bobby Rock form a powerful rhythm backdrop for Vincent's lead guitar. The album's bass and drum sound is excellent -- never buried or muddy. At times the rhythm riffs allude to modern dance sound (believe it or not) and not simply heavy metal thud and plod.

Co-produced by bassist Strum and Vincent himself, the album's sound is a slick, polished representation of straight-between- the-eyes metal. Lyrical content provides standard fare for the listening metal horde.

Conceptual ideas revolve around the basic components of heavy rock: love/sex, drugs, a heaping dose of rock n' roll vulgarity, and, oh yeah, gratuitous Evil -- guaranteed to make Tipper Gore whine and clamor about multitudes of corrupted youth.

Vincent understands the value of brash pretension thrown in the face of society. The song, "Animal" declares:

I rise from the ashes
From the core of the earth
Evil undetermined
Claim my bounty's worth.

Rise all creatures
and hail to the beast
Eyes full of fire
Consumate my feast

I prowl the innocent forbidden terrain
Unleashed, half-human,
half-insane.

Like the lyrics, Invasion's image as a group reflects the best (or worst, depending on one's viewpoint) of heavy metal excesses. Like the sound, the image is glam/glitter metal to the extreme: theatrical, self-indulgent and raw.

Maybe this can be explained. Before Invasion, Vincent had to contend with the fame (and egotism) of other supposedly bigger stars whom he backed-up. Now the limelight is his.

One can easily imagine the proud, posturing Vincent bedecked in sequins, and leather, astride high-heeled boots, strutting and preening across the stage, guitar slung across thigh, hands flailing, amps wailing.

Undoubtebly the fantasy will become reality: Invasion's concert tour will soon kick-off in order to promote the LP. Often a metal band's strongest financial source is concert tickets, not albums sold. However, a fan of the genre should view Vinnie Vincent Invasion as an engaging, entertaining piece of vinyl. Vincent's barrage of guitar licks alone make the album worth the bucks. Indulge yourself -- buy the album, turn it up to ten, and get trashed!

Monkees from pg. 7

Chamberlain wonders, "How could you imagine that a comeback of no talent be considered appealing?" Jonathan Yarboro believes that although "they're a good band, . . . their music is nothing more than history and is not qualified to be repeated in any sense of adoration."

Three people compared them to the Beatles. One says, "They did an excellent job of cashing in on the Beatles' popularity; Leigh Emory insists that the Monkees "are merely copies of the original group, The Beatles." The third echos a common sixties phrase, calling them "the American Beatles," adding, "they did not influence the music world as much as other bands, i.e. -- the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, and the Who."

In the final analysis, MC is neither hostile nor devoted to the Monkees. They have a handful of fierce detractors on campus, along with some hardcore fans.

How have the Monkees succeeded in gaining new fans and reviving dormant devotion? In a radio interview, Peter Tork himself cited the show's "parentless, romping kind of image" and the band's lighthearted reputation. MC's own Denise Wilson has a very plausible theory, too: "They're fun -- we need to have more things that allow us to be silly."

The Monkees will be in concert along with Gary Puckett and the Union Gap, Herman's Hermits, and the Grassroots in Knoxville's Civic Coliseum Oct. 30 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $16 and are on sale at the box office and Ticketron. All seats are reserved.

MC: A return to the past

1892
WELCOME TO NEW STUDENTS

Arrival. A committee of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations will meet you at the train.
Boarding. Good boarding can be had at the College Boarding Hall at cost -- certainly for less than $2.00 per week. Rooms and boarding in private families from $1.50 to $3.00 per week.
Rooms. Rooms in the dormitories cost $3.00 per term, or $6.00 per year; rooms in town from $.50 to $1.50 per month.
Matriculation. Present yourself before the College Treasurer where you will receive the proper instructions. Tuition $5.00 per term, or $10.00 per year.
Grounds and Buildings. The College grounds consist of 250 acres, covered with a beautiful growth of evergreens, and a noble forest. On these grounds are located half a dozen buildings, erected at a cost of seventy thousand dollars. Anderson Hall occupies the central position, and contains a chapel, six recitation rooms, a music room, three literary halls, an apparatus room, a bell ringer's room, a book and stationery room, and a chemical laboratory. An addition that will nearly double the Hall is now in the process of erection. Lamar Memorial Library contains over ten thousand volumes besides magazines and periodicals.
Athletics. The Maryville College Athletic Association was organized in 1890. The spacious ground and forest afford unequaled facilities for outdoor sports. Two diamonds are used for baseball, one field for football, and nice grounds beneath the shade of the forest oaks for lawn tennis and croquet.
Maryville. The town of Maryville is situated 15 miles south of Knoxville, on a series of undulating hills midway between the Chilhowee range of mountains and the Tennessee River. It commands a beautiful view of the Smoky Mountains on the south, and of the Cumberland on the north. It has a population of more than two thousand inhabitants.
Attendance at Chapel each morning at 8:45 is compulsory.
Attendance at Sabbath School and Church is required of every student.
College Colors. Orange and garnet.
College Yell. Howee, How, Chilhowee, Maryville, Maryville, Tenn-es-see.
Telephone Office. At the Depot.
Special Notes. The location is very healthful. The community is noted for its high morality. No saloon in Blount County.

VINTAGE YEAR -- 1905-1906

The Maryville College baseball team won twelve games and lost one in the spring of 1905. The loss was to Tusculum which subsequently lost three games that season to the Scots.

Total points:
Maryville, 106; opponents, 64.

The basketball team lost one game in 1906 but won every other game in the six-game series, including two wins over the University of Tennessee sophomores and seniors.

Total points:
Maryville, 295; opponents, 79.

The 1906 football team lost to Mississippi and Alabama, but tied Georgia Tech and Auburn, and defeated the University of Tennessee 11-0. The record for the season was five wins, three losses, and two ties. Coach Reid Dickson had nine veterans on a squad of thirteen men. The team played Mississippi, Alabama, and Auburn on November 4, 6, and 8, while traveling some 2,000 miles on this single road trip. According to the report of the three games in the Chilhowean, "not a single man was hurt seriously enough to be forced out of a game.

SUGGESTIONS TO ARRIVING FRESHMEN, 1921

Take special note of the waste can at the Maryville station . . . You must throw all Bolsheviki tendencies, all Red Flags, all high and low explosives (linguistic and otherwise), all snuff, chewing tobacco, and smokes into said recepticle. Then carry on up the cinder path.

Work hard, play hard, love hard and Maryville will be a thrilling experience and a happy memory.

Most Maryville girls prefer middy suits and gingham dresses for school. You will need a few light dresses for parties and a regular evening dress wouldn't be amiss, though don't have it extreme. Let it be simple and girlish revealing your personality, not your person.

TONGUE IN CHEEK

A sad note was struck amidst the joys of the closing days of the school year when the action taken by the discipline committee at their last meeting was announced today. The "inquisition of the south," as the body was laughingly termed by an ex-student of Maryville College, has been closeted in their chamber for the past two days, together with 21 men of the school who were arraigned before them on the charge of whistling on Sunday.

When, after being closeted with the committee all night, the men staggered forth into the cold, gray dawn this morning, their faces told the stories of the terrible sufferings more graphically than the most facile pen.

Notices were sent out that 20 of the men had been found guilty and expelled. The 21st man produced an alibi, saying that he was not whistling, but that the sound was his natural way of breathing, as he had adenoids.

EVOLUTION OF COLLEGE RULES
(Based on statements in College Handbooks)

Dating

1924: On week-days, social privileges are allowed from the close of dinner until 1:10 o'clock within the Quadrangle between Thaw Hall and the Chapel. On Monday afternoons, from 1:00 to 4:30, young women may receive young gentlemen in the parlors of their dormitories or in the open campus around those dormitories. At all other times all strolling and visiting of young men with young women is forbidden, both on the campus and off the campus.
1931: An honor rank system for girls was inaugurated in April, 1931. Example of the new liberalization in policy for women attaining the highest of five ranks: Honor Rank Girls may be in the company of young men on the Hill on weekdays any time from breakfast until supper time.
1938: Dating on weekdays is permitted in the central area of the campus and in the business section of Maryville, during the hours between breakfast and supper; also at authorized evening activities on the campus, and at Sunday morning church services in Maryville.
1953: Off-campus dating at night is limited to one night a week for freshmen and sophomore women and two nights a week for junior and senior women, under the direction of the Student Council. Dating in Knoxville is allowed only by special permission of the Dean of Women except for certain senior privileges.
1969: Upperclass women (not on academic or disciplinary probation and with parental consent for those under 21) are granted the privilege of having a key to allow them to enter their dormitory after closing hours: Junior and senior women any time, and sophomore women on Friday and Saturday nights.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS

The University of Tennessee was dropped from the football schedule of Maryville College in the fall of 1929 after a long rivalry between the two schools. A suitable date could not be agreed upon. A story in the Highland Echo, January 7, 1929, had this to report:

"In the past few years the Highlanders have come so near wresting several games from the Volunteers, and have given them such strong opposition that they realize they have nothing to gain and everything to lose when they play us. Downcast as we may be at the thought of not being able to make the welkin ring with shouts of 'Beat U.T.,' we have hopes of being able to raise the battle cry of 'On to Vandy,' since Vanderbilt has been added to our schedule for next fall."

Miscellaneous

1924: Vice, drinking, gambling, dishonesty, and habitual profanity forfeit for the offender all right to the advantages afforded by the institution.
1931: Young men rooming in Carnegie Hall, when absent during any part of the evening, are expected to be in by 11:00 o'clock, except on special occasions.
1934: Card playing is discouraged. Gambling of all kinds is forbidden.
1937: Men are expected to wear coats and ties to the evening meal.
1946: Students through appropriate organizations participate in formulating college standards and requirements and in planning and conducting the general program of the college community.
1968: Chapel attendance requirement dropped.

SPORTS

What about those silly rules?

by Kent Thomas

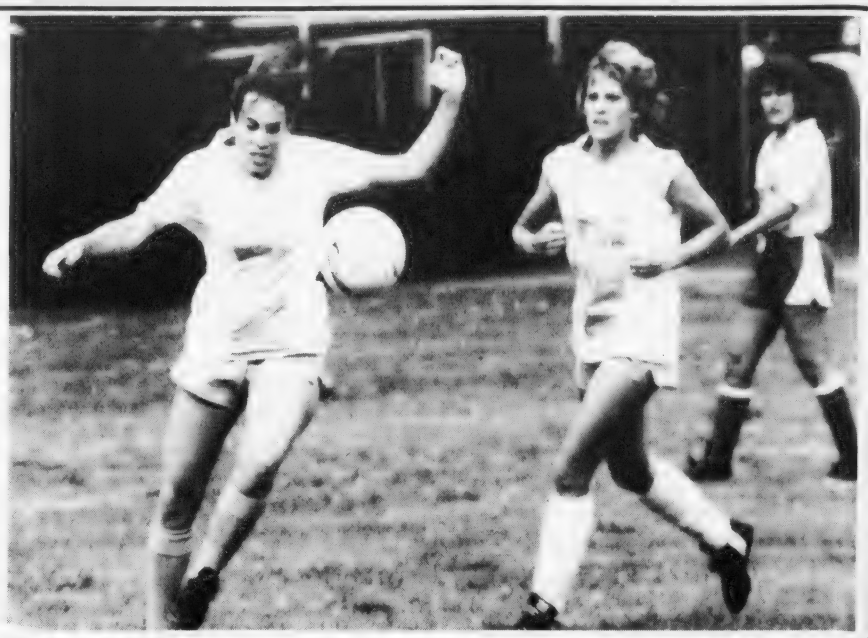
When I was in high school, I was in love with my sport. I actually looked forward to practice, if you can believe that. And to play in front of all my friends, my peers, and the girls was the second highest form of ecstacy I knew.

I figured college ball would be an extension of all that. Well, you can cross that out. I guess things seldom turn out the way you think they will, and my sports story is a lesson in that theory.

So what's the problem? Why isn't playing a sport for Maryville College the same thrill it was in high school? No one can really be blamed, but I think I've come up with the major reason why an athlete here may find himself disgruntled.

So a major incentive to play sports has been lost, but the coaches don't fully realize that. Their job is to win so they work us twice as hard as we worked in high school, but we get much less of a reward from our efforts. This, of course, does not put coaches at fault, because they are just doing their job. In many cases the only thing to blame for a dissatisfied player is the athlete's own vanity.

But if you want to get picky, then how about those silly little rules the coaches press us with? One coach says, "No drinking during the season." Yeah, right. Another coach will make a player run if he is caught with his boxers hanging out of his shorts. And almost all coaches here tell you not to wear a hat indoors.



Come on, coaches; we're not on scholarship here!

In high school everyone seems to want to be popular, and a great way to impress people is to play a sport. And since most of the student body attends the games regularly, it's very easy to be noticed. If all this sounds vain, well, it is, but that didn't stop me from enjoying all the attention I got because I played a sport.

But popularity isn't much of an issue here (one of the things I really like about Maryville College) so being an athlete just isn't that big of a deal. I found that I'd get no more special attention because I played a sport. And it sure takes away a lot of the fun when you play in front of stands that are three-fourths empty.

I know that's common courtesy at the dinner table and at church, but the hats off rule anywhere indoors is going slightly overboard. And heaven forbid that a player should get an earring! Come on, coaches; we're not on scholarship here! Let us dress the way we want to.

It's ironic, but I came to Maryville College simply to keep playing my sport, and as for the education and the other students here, well, I really didn't care much for them. But now that I'm in my third semester at this college, I've found that its my friends and academics, not sports, that are keeping me here.

The faces of MC soccer players Margaret Callaway, left, Amy McLeod show the intensity with which this team plays soccer.

Ladies' soccer improves

by Rethabile Masilo

The Soccer Lady Scots came close in a 2-1 loss to the University of Tennessee and hope to go a step further in the next encounter, even with the loss of some key players.

On October 8, the Lady Scots lost 2-1 to UTK in a memorable home game. Putting it in perspective, Coach Greg Hosler said, "It was a great performance. In the two previous games we lost 17-0 and 11-0 to UTK."

Hosler also said that the recent 2-1 loss was not a loss, but an achievement, especially because UTK, even though a club like MC, is much more mature.

On October 18 the Scots took on Brevard College. Apart from simple maturity that is gained through time, Brevard (and all other teams that the Lady Scots play against) is a varsity team, and it had little trouble winning by a margin of 7-3.

Coach Hosler attributed some of his losses to the fact that the team had progressively lost one player at a time, most because of commitments elsewhere.

The Lady Scots played Brevard without the services of Raina Boring and Julie Marshall. But much more serious, Coach Hosler noted, was the permanent loss of Deann Hargis, Leah Mueller and Monica Cayo. Hargis and Cayo play softball, while Mueller is a Playmaker.

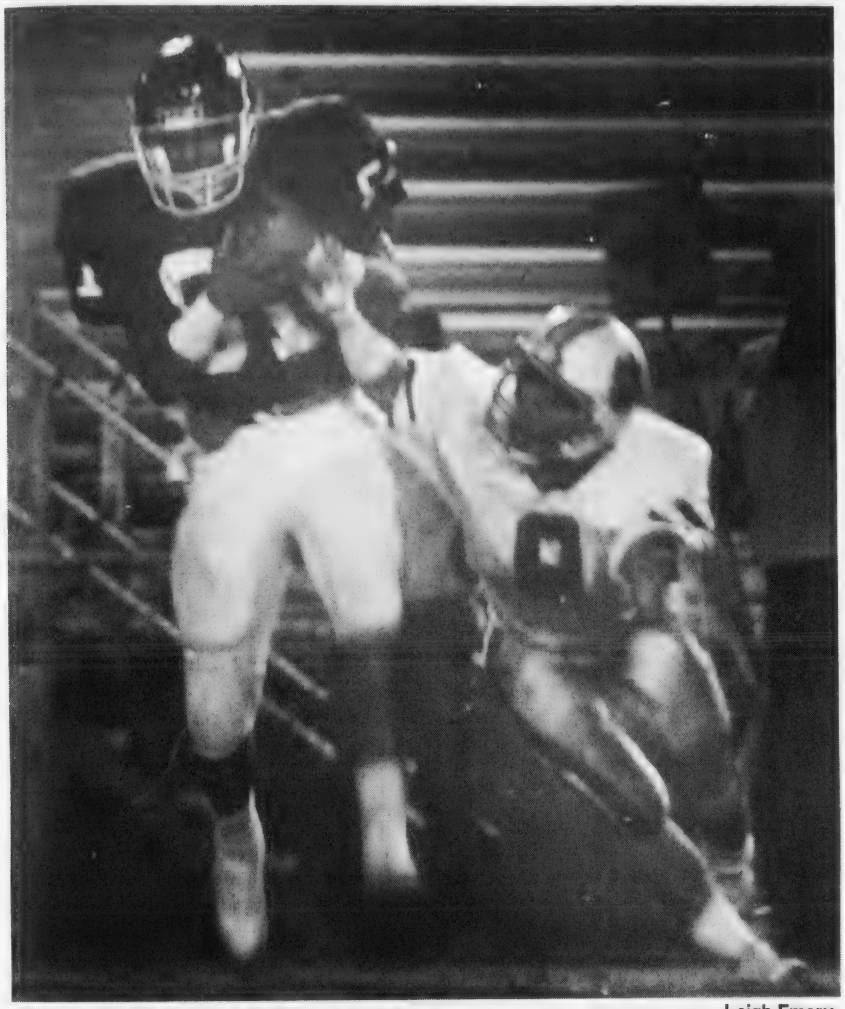
This is "the problem," Coach Hosler said. "These three were among my best players." He said that players give first priority to everything else except to soccer, and that therefore the team is retarded in its progress. "Next time we hope to beat UTK, regardless," he concluded.

Cagers lacking size

by Kent Thomas

As assistant coach John Dunlap puts it, "Maryville College basketball is finally getting respect in the ODAC. Two years ago we were number one, last year we were number two, so people don't take us lightly anymore."

When it comes to MC Basketball, there is good news and bad news. First, the bad news.



Like last year, the cagers still lack size inside. There are none of the 6'7" or 6'8" giants that are becoming more and more commonplace around the league. But although the team lacks size, it doesn't lack talent in the pivot.

Steve Tensi, a 6'5", 205-pounder defensive stopper, will carry a heavy load in the middle. Helping him inside will be Scott Fletcher, a 6'5" scrapper, Dean Walsh, a 6'4" sharpshooter, and James Austin, a 6'4" banger from Atlanta, GA.

The good news is that from post to point guard, the Scots have speed, depth, and dead-eye shooters.

At point guard Pat Heldman, George Lancho, and freshman Steve Pear will lead the fast break. At off-guard is Jeff White, transfer Mike Reid, and freshman leaper Mark Wattenbarger. Playing the wing position is Stan

See Cagers pg. 11

Senior Chris Johannsen pulls down a pass in the face of this Sewanee defender. The Scots rolled over Sewanee 49-30.

Leigh Emery

HS Tigers face doom

by Brian C. Linkous

It seems the Scots are finally getting the respect, and the wins, they deserve. Anyone who missed last Saturday's game against Sewanee missed a treat.

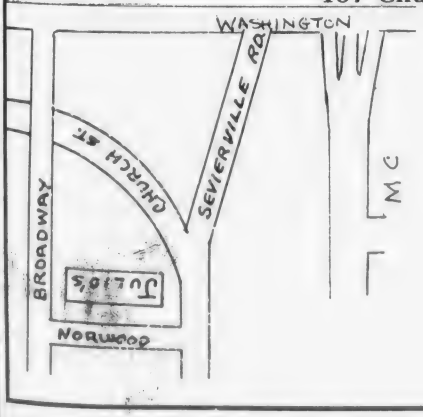
The Scots proved that they really do have a potent offense. That, in itself, wasn't a hidden fact as we saw in the Washington and Lee game two weeks ago.

Coach Stephens seems to be slowly moving his team toward a better balance between passing and running. This is definitely an advantage for the formerly pass-happy Scots considering the strong running backs it has this year, especially in the persons of Julio Kiliddjian and Jeff Seagle.

These two players could be the key to an MC win on Saturday, especially if the Tigers manage to shut down the Scots' passing game. The Tigers have traditionally never had a very strong secondary unit but something tells me that this year may prove differently.

In the quarterback of Mike Human, the Scots have a strong arm and a good scrambler, although scrambling should not prove necessary Saturday if the offensive line can keep its unity. If the Tigers are smart-- smart doesn't mean cocky -- they had better stick like glue to the MC receivers because this year's squad has the talent to make the big plays.

On another note, the Scots have got to hang on to the football. The Tigers would like nothing better than to find the ball on the ground for easy pickings.



Lest we think an offense can win a game by itself, let us think again. The Scots' defense will probably play the biggest role against the Tigers.

The defense will have to shut down the Tigers running game, especially the option. This will no doubt set the tempo for the game.

If the Scots can shut down the option by sticking the Tiger quarterback every chance they get, a potential headache will be alleviated. The Tigers would have to resort to an aerial attack which the Scots should have no problem shutting down.

No doubt the Tigers will roll into Maryville with a cocky and confident attitude. However, the ride home will be long after the Scots feast on the Tigers. My prediction: Scots 35, Tigers 21.

Julio's
Hungary Italian
407 Church St. Ext.

Tuesday Nite Special!
Any Large 2 Item
Pizza and Pitcher of Favorite Beverage $10.25

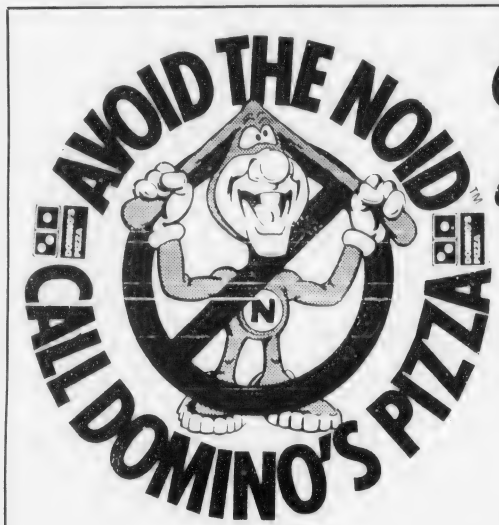
CARRY OUT
977-7197

Cagers from pg.10



Ballard, an all-around talent who transfered from Roane State, freshman Jumping Jack Brett Stanley, and Kent Thomas.

A major problem for the team this year is inexperience, according to Head Coach Randy Lambert. "It's a big worry," said Lambert, "that only four players (Tensi, Heldman, White and Lancho) had any substantial playing time last year." Gone from last years' team are seniors Tom Robinson, Paul Mills, and Raymond Burnett, plus top scorer Clay Freels. Inexperienced players must grow up in a hurry.

A plus for the team, however, is the installation of the three-point goal. "With the shooters that we have, that could help us a great deal," said Lambert.

What can MC fans look forward to this year? Just ask Coach Lambert. "Despite our youth movement, I believe we will be exciting to watch. Our fans will hopefully see a fast-tempo offense and an intensified, pressure defense," he said.

THE BACK PAGE

One call does it all

EXTRAVAGANZZA!
NINE TOPPINGS FOR THE PRICE OF FIVE

One call does it all!

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS FREE.

$1.00 Off!
$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 11-30-86
Fast, Free Delivery
Good at listed locations.
983-0000
407 W. Broadway

$2.00 Off!
$2.00 off any 16" 2-item or more pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 11-30-86
Fast, Free Delivery
Good at listed locations.
983-0000
407 W. Broadway

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

Hours:
11:00am-1:00am Sun.-Thurs.
11:00am 2:00am Fri. & Sat.

Please present driver's license when paying by check.

CPP Notes

Oct. 31 University of Tennessee Graduate School Representative. 10:00 or 11:00 in CPP.

Nov. 4 State of Georgia: Seminar about job opportunities with Georgia State Government. All interested persons invited. 10:00 in Thaw Hall, room 202.

Nov. 11 International Opportunities Seminar. Learn about work or study abroad. 11:00, CPP.

SHORTS

Compiled from On Campus Reports

It's a Civil Rights violation to say who people can fall in love with, says a U. of California professor, and for that reason, student-faculty romances should not be prohibited. The California Academic Senate recently heard debate on a proposed amandment to the faculty code that would declare such relationships unethical. The measure was defeated.

(OCR) — HIGH TECH MAY NOT HELP: Although both faculty and students are "positive" about computers on campus, a recent study on the impact of personal computers at Dartmouth College found no hard evidence that learning is increased in courses using computers as part of the instruction. Although half of the students surveyed say their grades would suffer without their computers, in 21 of 24 introductory courses, there was no difference in grades between computer owners and non-owners.

Students use computers mostly for word processing. Their papers were longer by half in two courses, but faculty opinion is mixed about whether the quality of the papers improved.

Women make better students than men because they mature more rapidly and therefore develop better study habits. Paul Murray, a sociology professor, found definite sex differences while examining factors influencing his students' grades, such as living arrangements and family backgrounds. Women scored higher in his classes than did men and the disparity increased for upperclassmen. "Women students benefit from experience and improve their study habits and test-taking skills during their four years in college," Murray wrote.

The most popular choices of students include Budweiser beer and Chevys, Fords, and Nissans. Students' favorite breakfast is Kellogg's Frosted Flakes and Dannon yogurt. Campbell's V-8 is best juice. Neckties that look exactly like fish were voted the hottest fashion item. And the must-have cookbook is White Trash Cooking published by Ten Speed Press. (National Association of College Stores.)

Women are all talk and men are all action, concludes a recent study on college relationships. The study, conducted by a Penn State U. graduate student, found women tend to emphasize communication in their relationships while men are more interested in activity. The most common problem facing college relationships is not having enough time to spend together.

Toilet scrubbing is the subject of a film being distributed nationally by the U. of Kansas. "Restroom Sanitation" is the latest in a series of housekeeping videos training new employees at about 150 schools. A Kansas housekeeping director began producing the profitable videos when he couldn't find any on the market.

Student protesters demanding "Real Cheese on the cafeteria pizza," have kidnapped a bust of Florida Atlantic U.'s founding father, Thomas Fleming. The students also want copy machines that work and Royal Crown Cola in campus vending machines. School officials, who were not amused, say the prank is a felony and that the cafeteria does use real cheese.

ENTERTAINMENT
Production opens Friday night

NEWS
The race heats up

SPORTS
Tigers snap Scots' streak

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 4 | Maryville College | Friday, October 31, 1986

Senate discusses Activity Fee

by Kimberly D. Spargo

The Student Senate passed a resolution last Thursday asking for "a line item breakdown" of the $52,500 in activity fees paid by students each year.

Don Dove, Junior class representative, submitted the resolution at the Oct. 23rd meeting in the CCM. The resolution is composed of seven clauses (with an amendment by Chris Herbert). Clause four resolves that "the line item breakdown of the budgeting of the activity fees...be submitted to the Senate...by the Nov. 13 meeting for investigation."

Clause six reads as follows: "Resolved, if those investigating the budgets can adequately prove that an attempt was made to misrepresent the actual costs of the activities...in order to cover up the actual budgeting of the money, then all paid activity fees will be refunded to the students immediately."

Dove said that the investigators will consist of "an ad hoc committee appointed by the Senate to investigate each budget to make sure the budget is being spent appropriately."

Clause seven states that "failure to submit the aforementioned budgets...will result in the transfer of all student activity fees to the Student Senate's account for holding purposes until these budgets are submitted." The resolution was passed by a vote of 10 to 2.

Dove said, "No one ever knows where the activity fee money goes." Futhermore, Dove said that, "This bill is the first real test of the power of the Student Senate."

According to Dove, the Senate does not have the power to enforce clause seven of the resolution, and the Senate will have to rely on the power of the administration. Dove said, "If the administration chooses not to aid the Student Senate by enforcing this bill, then our Senate has been reduced to an organization with little or no legitimate power or impact on this campus."

The two opposing votes came from Kati Tabor, Lloyd Hall representative, and Jon Allison, Freshman Class representative. Tabor said, "I was not opposed to the concept of the resolution....I was opposed to the way it was written. I feel there was a negative overtone to it....There is no room for negotiation."

Similarly, Allison said, "The idea is great. The students should know where their money is going....But I am afraid that if the Senate should step outside of its bounds, that it may ultimately defeat the purpose of the Senate."

Linda Stephens, Controller (Business Office), said, "During the 1986-87 fiscal year Maryville College students will be paying 46 percent of the cost of their education....When scholarships are deducted from fees...students are only paying 28 percent of the actual cost....Activity fees, assuming no scholarships, represents six-tenths of 1 percent of the total cost [of the student's education]. This charge is used to offset the cost of several student activities."

1986-87 Activity Fee

Based on full time paying equivelant of 450 x 105 = $47,250
Activity fee pays for the following:

Admission to: ($2.00 x 20 events x 450)	$18,000
Football games
Basketball games
Theatre
MACCO
Intramurals	816
Student Programming (Social)	10,150
Student Health Services ($600 x 9 months)	5,400
Chilhowean	7,900
Echo	5,900
Impressions	500
Playmakers	1,000
Student Senate	500
Total	$50,166

Halloween in Maryville

by Jennifer C. Worth

"Trick or treat!" comes the shout from costumed children. The scene is a classic slice of Americana; with autumn's burnished leaves and nippy air comes Halloween.

But what is Halloween? And how is it weathering the test of time and cultural changes?

Technically titled All Hallows Eve, Halloween falls on the eve of the ancient Celtic New Year, which was adapted in the Middle Ages to a Christian holiday dedicated to dead souls. Supposedly, witches, fairies, and their supernatural brethren flew abroad on the eve of the holy day, and the superstitious sought to ward them off with bonfires and jack-o'-lanterns made from turnips.

The holiday migrated to America with the Scotch-Irish, who adapted the customs to their new home. For instance, the pumpkin replaced the turnip as jack-o'-lanterns.

By the twentieth century, the practice of trick-or-treating became customary; recently, however, this practice seems to be waning. Carolyn Blair recalls that until the past few years, children of all ages (including MC students) trooped to her door in search of the requisite goodies. Indeed, many students remember trick-or-treating as an integral part of their own childhood Halloweens.

Some remember a different type of celebration. Becky Walker recalls attending church-sponsored parties. Kimberly Spargo also associates Halloween with parties; in high school, she and a friend sponsored an annual fest that utilized many of her family's nineteen acres to achieve a maximum spooky effect.

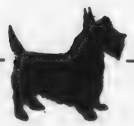
Some celebrants take a different tack — vandalism. Practical jokes, often destructive, have been a staple of the holiday since the nineteenth century in some parts of the country. A

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Activity fees

It seems that the mystery of the student Activity Fee has finally been solved. For some time now, students have wondered exactly what their Activity Fee pays for. As a result of last week's Student Senate meeting we now know that the money is filtered through the MC general budget to support everything from athletics to MACCO. In actuality, the Activity Fee is tuition with a different name. It would seem to make sense for MC to just include it, or disguise it, in the tuition bill and save itself the trouble of explaining exactly what the money goes toward.



Ticket mania

The parking problem doesn't seem to be getting any better. If you are a resident of Hall I, you are certainly attuned to this fact.

Residents of this dorm have been told not to park in designated areas, including the grass. Never mind the fact that there are at least nine more cars, with registration stickers, than there are parking spaces. Why should these people have to park far away or risk being ticketed?

No one disputes that there is a problem, but the parking tickets continue to be written. However, the MC security force is simply carrying out rules from a higher authority.

At the very least MC officials should cease writing parking tickets until a solution is worked out. In the meanwhile I suggest that the ticketed continue to do what they have been doing: throw them away. If nothing else such action will serve as a symbolic gesture of defiance to a senseless system.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Entertainment Editor — Heidi Weiffenbach
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Layout Editor — Jes Kane
Typsetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr

Staff Writers — Kristi Self, Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth, Matt Wayland, Jonathan Yarboro

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

LETTERS:

Dear Editor,

There is currently a movement in the southeast that could completly undermine American ideals. The Concerned Women of America, a Hawkins County fundamentalist group, wants to keep their children away from "objectional" material. This material includes the introduction of Buddhism, Judaism, secular humanism, feminism, and evolution in the public schools. It is the belief of the Concerned Women of America (CWA) that the presentation of this material promotes atheism among their children.

Another group in Alabama is trying to remove certain objectional material from the public schools. The judge there has not yet ruled and could easily be awaiting the Tennessee federal judge to set a precedent that he can follow. (The Tennessee group has already succeeded in lower court.)

Many issues are at stake in these cases: freedom of religion, separation of church and state, freedom of the press, and censorship.

First consider freedom of religion, since this is the basic issue at stake here. A basic tenant of the American way is the right of all people to choose what they believe. If parents wish to restrict their child's religious development by keeping them away from other religious ideas, they must impress those ideas at home.

But for a child to develop his own opinions, he must be given a broad base on which to form them. "How can children be expected to develop their own attitudes and beliefs without a broad understanding of those of others," says Betsy Xiques.

It is the duty of our public school system to present that broad base so the children can form some ideas of their own. If parents are afraid of free thinking children, they can send their children to a private school that specializes in that perversion.

Mr. Podesta, attorney for People for the American Way (the group supporting the defending school system), is further concerned about what lawsuits of this nature do to the school system in general. "These lawsuits only make science, reading, and religion controversial subjects," Mr. Podesta said, "undermining the public education system."

Another problem we have is that the US government is a non-secular government which neither promotes nor demotes any religious belief as long as that religion does not violate the constitutional rights of others. When public schools begin promoting the Christian religion above others, the separation no longer exists.

If these specific groups succeed in their efforts, they would be the groups imposing on our religious freedom by teaching our children mainly of their beliefs.

Freedom of the press is not a strong direct issue here, but when publishers are afraid to publish certain items, or are restricted from publishing certain ideas or having their product banned, this right is violated. The direct threat to freedom of the press is censorship.

This is the scariest thing that these groups are attempting. This is beyond these other ideas in that this potentially establishes a precedent whereas any idea objectionable to some group becomes free game for the censors (whomever they may be).

I'm not speaking just in schools. Once the precedent is set for censoring school textbooks, it is there for censoring other material as well. I feel quite certain that with this precedent, a strong minority could be found here at MC to ban Dante!

"Objections to a world view, other religions on equal footing, feminism and other 'objectional issues' because of a group's religious views is alright, constitutionally," says Chris Lilley. "But, the want to interject religious views can be seen by others as wrong constitutionally. But I feel the parents' objections to the material could be cleared up at home. I was always taught that questioning one's beliefs is the best way to strengthen your beliefs."

Mr. Farris, attorney for the CWA, agrees with this. He says, "The more the parents are involved with the schools the better it is for all of us." Yet he still presses for the job to be done in the school. Perhaps he feels that parents can't do a proper job.

When a small portion of the population can dictate what the majority can do, read, or think; or when a small portion of the population wants to direct what our children can do, read, or think, it is time for the majority to speak out and defend their rights and the rights of all. I challenge all of you who read this to make your voices heard by writing to newspapers and congressmen.

I also challenge the MC campus to make a statement and make it official -- I would like to see a resolution from the Student Senate and the ACC condemning censorship and promoting free thought in our public schools.

Sincerely,
Al Hipkins

Race heats up

by Pam Mathews

With the law barring Lamar Alexander from seeking a third consecutive term as governor of Tennessee, Democratic candidate Ned Ray McWherter and Republican nominee Winfield Dunn are vying for the office of state executive in the November 4, election.

Each candidate won his respective primary August 7, with Dunn facing little opposition. McWherter, however, defeated two strong opponents, Jane Eskind, chairperson of the state Public Service Commission and Nashville mayor Richard Fulton.

A former dentist from Memphis, Winfield Dunn, was governor from 1971 to 1975, the first Republican to hold this office in 50 years.

After leaving office, Dunn served as Senior Vice President for Public Affairs and as a member of the board of Directors of Hospital Corporation of America, based in Nashville.

McWherter, son of sharecroppers from rural West Tennessee, served an unprecedented term as Speaker of the House of Representatives for 14 years. He owns one of the largest beer distributorships in Tennessee, a trucking firm, and a nursing home.

The race is into the final week and is finally exhibiting some life in what has been a relatively quiet campaign. Both candidates are critizing the other's personal investments.

Dunn sold his stock in Hospital Corporation of America and is urging McWherter to divest himself of his businesses to prevent conflict of interests since they are state-regulated. McWherter, if elected, is planning to place his investments in a blind trust which would be managed by trustees.

Dunn has also received flak about his use of tax shelters to avoid paying federal taxes in 1982 and 1983. Furthermore, McWherter is reminding East Tennesseans of Dunn's wish to construct a correctional facility in Morristown and his opposition to the funding of a medical school at East Tennessee State University in Johnson City.

Another topic of controversy is that of minorities. Dunn received criticism for his membership to Nashville's swank Belle Meade Country Club which has no blacks or Jewish people as members.

Meanwhile, McWherter apologized for supporting a bill that would have sterilized mothers on welfare. Ironically, each candidate is courting the black vote which will be a leading factor in determining the next governor.

Dunn's and McWherter's stands on issues appear to be similar. Each is praising Alexander's administration for its inovation, with Dunn promising to continue the Alexander legacy and McWherter stating that he passed many of Alexander's successful programs.

Each candidate supports the Better Schools Program. However, McWherter, who has the endorsement of the Tennessee Education Association among others, spoke earlier this year of repealing the Career Ladder due to dissatisfaction of teachers, but quickly changed his mind when Tennesseans spoke out against this measure.

Mike McWherter, son of Ned Ray McWherter, campaigning recently at the Alcoa plant stated that his father values a college education, since he did not have the opportunity to finish college. "He wants to see every young person have the opportunity to attend the college of his choice; that's why he supports more aid for students." McWherter further added, "We think that we have a message for the young voters in Tennessee."

Another area of agreement is their opposition to Abortion. Dunn has said that the only time he thought abortion would be acceptable is in the case of a woman being violated or if the mother's life was in danger.

Neither candidate has made clear what kind of law they would support if the Supreme Court were to give the decision back to the individual states.

One of the more striking differences are the candidates' images. The rotund, balding McWherter evokes the image of the "good ol' boy" politician with his beer distributorship and trucking firm.

Dunn, however, has a urbane, grandfatherly image that would seem more fitting in an office than down home on the farm. This is additionally evidenced by the support of entertainers for the candidates with singer Amy Grant supporting Dunn and Country music star Charlie Daniels helping McWherter.

Opinions on the MC campus are probably reflective of the consensus across the state.

Russell Parker of the History Department commented "I don't care for either candidate. I would have preferred Jane Eskind because of the good job she did while on the Public Service Commission." He further noted, "It will probably be a safe administration under both candidates."

"I've only been in Tennessee for two years, and it is unfortunate that Blanton and Butcher have given Democrats a bad name," admitted Eileen Riordan of the Biology Department. "Dunn keeps pointing a finger at

SHORTS

(OCR) -- Freshmen students at the U. of Arizona were coerced into taking an in-depth survey on their background and personal beliefs, the American Civil Liberties Union has charged. ACLU officials say the four-page "Required Survey for Entering Students" contained 100 questions ranging from ethnic background to parental income and that unless students completed it, they couldn't register on time. School officials claim the survey was voluntary.

(OCR) -- A former U. of Southern California employee has admitted to tapping into the campus computer system during a period of two years, apparently to tamper with students' grades in return for money. USC administrators think 43 students paid the employee and two others to fix their grades. Since the scheme was uncovered last spring, 14 USC students have been expelled and the records of another 14 have been put on hold, pending further investigation.

(OCR) -- Liberal arts grads are the most promotable, and math and science majors lack many important managerial skills, says a 30-year AT&T study. The study, which explored the relationship of college experiences with later managerial performance, says that it was extra-curricular activities that led to their success in the long run, rather than the quality of their college or grades.

(OCR) -- Showing porno movies shouldn't be banned from Penn State's campus because they make a lot of money for the residence halls, says the school's cinema director. One flick recently make $1,400 over one weekend.

(OCR) -- Parking problems are worsening and school officials have "dragged their feet" long enough, say student leaders at Memphis State U. So they've arranged a public forum. Guests include school administrators, city council members, and state legislators.

(OCR) -- 6,000 peace cards inviting President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to attend a peace summit were delivered to Washington, D.C. by members of a U. of Kansas student group. The KU Coalition for Peace and Justice, which extended the invitation for the Lawrence summit, were allowed inside the Soviet Embassy and the White House.

(OCR) -- Lemon and lager -- a mix of premium beer and lemon flavor -- is a hit at the bars and liquor stores near Indiana U. Produced by Huber Brewing Company, the beer is similar to a European drink, called a shandy, where beer is poured over lemonade. Bloomington was the test market for the brew.

(OCR) -- Is beauty only skin deep? A Stanford U. researcher has found that very attractive women and men have a decided advantage over their less attractive peers. The study, using photos of six men and six women, found that while many people claim that looks are superficial, apperarance matters a lot in our day-to-day encounters.

ENTERTAINMENT

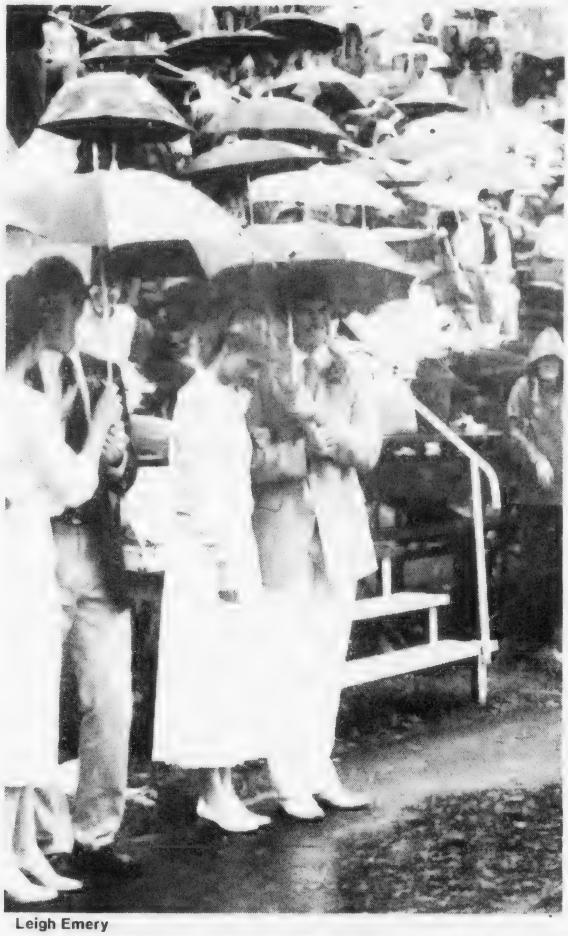
Leigh Emery

Keith Moore

Homecoming '86

As the pictures indicate, MC enjoyed its Homecoming festivities despite the inclement weather. Perhaps it's a spirit or some other phenomena, but Homecoming always seems to draw the college community closer together. It's a wonderful feeling of unity that never seems to last quite long enough.

Leigh Emery



Keith Moore

Leigh Emery

Leigh Emery

Keith Moore

Keith Moore

Production puts demands on cast

by John Wright

The MC Playhouse production "The Dining Room" needs just a little polishing as Halloween's opening night approaches this Friday. No one need wear a mask for this show. The pseudo-dress rehearsal that I had the privilege of seeing was performed with much confidence and stability. Expected low energy was apparent, but the pace of the show was especially nice.

A. R. Gurney Jr.'s play puts great demand on the actors. The cast of eight not only play one, but many characters that change, overlap, and reassemble almost instantly.

Situations involve everything from kids at a birthday party to a psychiatrist conversing with an architect, or a housewife having an affair. All actions, dialogues, and occasional arguments regardless of the time or period, are focused in and around the dining room.

The cast should be highly commended for their character flexibility, communication on stage, and ability to interact with each other. Director Don Thomas explained that the cast is made up of both young and experienced actors. I was particularly impressed with Heidi Weiffenbach for whom "The Dining Room" is an MC debut.

Some specifics from other cast members should also be noted. Kirk Burdick shines in the character of a small child; Kimberly Spargo makes an excellent persuasive mother; Chris Herbert superbly displays the many facets of a "husband;" Jennifer Worth creates a neat, youthful "girlfriend" character; Jonathan Yarbaro is the prep school type; Leah Mueller is convincing as a confused wife; and Joe Cl[illegible] is quite a "family [illegible]".

The show has been prepared and directed articulately. [illegible] most characters are well developed and believable, and the challenging situations that happen in "The Dining Room" should be performed well.

Spirit draws alumni back

Part 2 of a three part series by Lynn King

"I decided this would be a good place for my family to settle, and a good job for me to get into and hopefully be into for a long, long time," Head Football Coach and Assistant Athletic Director Larry Stephens said. "This is a beautiful area to live, and I love MC."

"I developed a very strong love for this institution, and to have an opportunity to be a part of it again is a thrill," Coach Stephens added.

When alumni return to pursue careers in the same institution where they earned their degrees, do they encounter unique advantages or disadvantages which wouldn't be present had they opted to work in another college?

"When I came back, many of my former teachers were in the last ten to twenty years of their careers. Obviously, I was an upstart," Bushing said, continuing, "On the other hand, I knew something of the academic tradition here, something of the expectations."

"Teaching children of former classmates or children of former students has been a particular pleasure. Also, I have had opportunity to see the college evolve over an extended period."

Ramger sees an advantage in that faculty who are also alumni are "a little more sensitive to old traditions."

Conversely, he said that new blood is needed as well, to prevent too much repetition, a kind of inbreeding of teaching methods that can occur when alumni return to their alma maters to teach. Ramger added wryly that some of the current faculty were here when he was a student, "so they know some of my foibles."

"I think there's a definite advantage," Nier said. "Being an alum, I'm absolutely dedicated to the success of the institution. I thoroughly believe in what this institution has to offer."

"There are more advantages than disadvantages," Waters said. "You know the school really well, you know students' problems. You already know quite a bit about the community."

On the other hand, "Faculty members remember you as a student; now you're a colleague." Waters adds that this quickly wears off, however.

"For me, I think there's a greater loyalty; the roots are a little deeper," said Registrar Martha Hess, who graduated from MC in 1967. Hess said that knowing people at MC made the transition back to the college after teaching at Farragut High School for seven years much easier.

Do perspectives change after seeing both sides of the Maryville College story, first from the student then from the faculty or administrative point of view?

"Oh yes!" Nier said. "I think as a student you're taking; as a staff person you're giving."

"I didn't see the value of the liberal arts education as I see it now," Nier added. "I think I'm able to see more with an open mind now."

Deaf awareness

Part 2 of a two part series by Kristi L. Self

The sign language classes at Maryville College were initiated by Dr. Robert Ramger. Ramger had a deaf brother to whom he served as an interpreter. In 1968, Ramger's brother, Harold, was killed in an accident. At that point, Robert Ramger traveled to California, where his brother had been a teacher at the California School for the Deaf. During this time, Ramger interacted with many deaf people and realized the importance of communicating with the deaf.

When Ramger returned to Maryville College, he began planning an interim entitled "Let's communicate with the Deaf." With the help of Dr. Jerry Waters, the interim was first offered in 1972.

The hours of preparation paid off. There was an overwhelming response as 65 students signed up for the class. Ramger, who refers to himself as the "god-father" of the program, divided his time between sign language and biology for the following six years.

During this time, Irma Young was hired to help establish a Sign Language program. In 1974, she devised the curriculum for an individualized major in Sign Language Interpreting. By 1976, Interpreting was offered as a regular major.

Young and Ruth Sandefur-Yates, the other instructor in the sign language department, are assets to Maryville College. Both are nationally recognized figures in deafness. Sandefur-Yates is hearing impaired herself and Young grew up in a deaf environment, so they have a true understanding of deafness. They often attend meetings, locally and nationally, to promote deaf awareness. They also serve as consultants to other four-year colleges trying to set up programs for sign language interpretation.

Maryville has a reputation for producing interpreters of exceptional quality. In cooperation with the office of Career Planning and Placement, there is a 75% placement of graduates. Charis Wolfe, a senior interpreting major, is currently working as an interpreter for the vocational school at State Tech in Knoxville. She hopes to one day work at a communication center for the deaf.

The sign language classes are not limited to interpretation majors. They are open to all students. Maryville College offers American Sign Language (ASL) as a foreign language requirement. It was one of the first undergraduate colleges to recognize ASL in this way.

Maryville College offers many contributions to the community in regard to sign language. Representatives from the department go to area schools during Deaf Awarness Week (Sept. 21 - 27 this year) and speak on hearing conservation. In addition, some interpreting majors offer their services.

Note-takers are provided for Maryville College students who have hearing disabilities. The Maryville College switchboard is equipped with a TDD to handle calls for hearing impaired students. Twice monthly special activities are planned for the deaf in the community, including captioned films.

In turn, the Maryville community is very supportive of deaf awareness at Maryville College. The Alcoa Kiwanis Club established the Harold Ramger memorial scholarship. It is given to students from deaf families or sign language interpretation majors. The Blount County Medical Auxilary is also very supportive.

Deaf awareness is a national concern. There are 309,000 hearing impaired individuals in Tennessee alone. Measures are taken toward understanding the deaf, but it is an on-going process that needs to be continued. The more we understand deafness, the smaller the gap becomes between the hearing and the hearing impaired.

RACE from pg. 3

whatever McWherter has done wrong. McWherter may not have a great appearance, but I feel that he has compassion and integrity," she replied.

When asked to predict the outcome of the governor's race, Harry Howard of the Political Science Department conceded, "The election is more of a horse race than I actually thought it would be. McWherter's tenure as speaker has given him state wide visibility and that is one of the reasons why he is running so strong against Dunn."

Howard obvserved that success may depend of "how long the memory of East Tennessee is," referring to Dunn's support of a correctional facility in Morristown and his opposition to funding of a medical school at E.T.S.U. "Some Republicans in East Tennessee may vote for McWherter to spite Dunn for his actions. On the other hand, Democrats may vote for Dunn because they feel that East Tennessee will be forgotten by McWherter, who will focus on Middle and especially West Tennessee," Howard said.

As election day draws near, the two gubernatorial candidates may start some heavy "mud-slinging," in hopes of tarnishing the other's image in the eyes of the voter.

Regardless of which candidate wins, on thing is clear -- he will have a difficult time in following Alexander's legacy, who some have said was one of Tennessee's greatest governors. The public will most surely be more critical since their expectations were raised during Alexander's eight-year term.

INTERESTED IN

- Compact Discs or Audio?
- Marketing?
- A Resume Builder?

DIGITAL SOUND MARKET SERVICES

Needs ambitious college students to be campus representatives

Call 1-800-223-6434
or 1-219-626-2756

9am to 9pm

Leigh Emery

MC's Hank Snyder drags down a Hampden-Sydney player in Saturday's game.

Tigers snap Scots' streak

by Brian C. Linkous

The rains poured Saturday as Hampden-Sydney snapped Maryville College's two-game winning streak by scoring 21 fourth-quarter points and by preventing the Scots' a chance at a winning season.

The Tigers, 5-2 on the season and 3-1 in Old Dominion Athletic Conference play, handed the Scots a 28-7 defeat on rain soaked Honaker Field. The loss was the first at home for the Scots who are now 2-5 overall and 1-2 in ODAC play.

In the early stage of the game, the Scots took control with a 5-yard touchdown by Julio Kiliddjian and a Henry Marambio extra point kick in the second quarter.

But early in the third quarter the Tiger's Willie Fobbs ran 43-yards to tie the score after a Jim Hondroulis extra point kick.

Senior Bob Echols believes the third quarter score was the key to the game. "Their scoring on the second play of the second half definitely changed the momentum to their side."

The Tigers broke the Scots in the fourth quarter with a 1-yard scoring run by Fobbs and two touchdown runs of 60 and 31 yards from David Kelly.

Kelly finished with an impressive 15 carries for 149 yards and two catches for a total of 24 yards. Fobbs combined 16 carries for 73 yards as the Tigers outrushed the Scots 258 yards to 144.

Maryville relied upon the running of Kiliddjian to carry to bulk of the offensive load as he carried 30 times for 114 yards.

In the aerial attack both teams finished nearly even statistically. Hampden-Sydney's Robby Waldrop threw 6 of 12 passes complete with three interceptions and a total of 70 yards. Maryville's Mike Human and Russ Thomas both combined for 7 of 16 passes with only one interception and a total of 67 yards.

The Scots travel to Virginia this weekend to face Randolph-Macon in yet another conference game.

Soccer foundation debated

by Rethabile Masilo

In an effort to upgrade the level of soccer in East Tennessee, a movement called the East Tennessee Soccer Foundation has been formed. It emerges during the young, developing stages of local soccer, and it is among the first of its kind in East Tennessee.

"It is very good for the community," said Maria Hawkins, College Librarian and ardent soccer fan whose daughter plays for the Maryville/Blount Soccer Club, and who was named to the girls' 1986 under-16 State Select Team.

Hawkins said that East Tennessee, apart form being ready, needs such a collective, governing body, "especially because soccer here is only three years old."

She noted that Blount County has never had any soccer organizaitons of the size of the new Foundation, and that in this regard, Maryville College "has always been very helpful" by making fields, classrooms, and qualified personnel available.

"Individuals at Maryville college who have been loyal supporters of the Youth Soccer program include Gary Leventhal, former M.C. soccer coach, Phil Neddo, present M.C. soccer coach, Donna Davis, and Sid Downey. And the addition of four new soccer fields at Maryville College shows a continued commitment to soccer in Blount County," Hawkins concluded.

Buster Waller, who together with David Bayley and Sterling Johnson, formed a team to compete in the Knoxville Metro Middle-School League, and who is presently an organizer for the Maryville/Blount Soccer Club, said that "Maryville is too small for such a movement," even though there is obvious need for constant, competent guidance from a superior body.

Waller was also skeptical about whether the Foundation will survive its first years in existence. He said because it is "a one-man-show," it might not live long enough to make a profitable change in Blount soccer. The new fields at Maryville College "would be great to have," he said.

The Maryville/Blount Soccer Club consists of four teams (one under-19, two under-16, and one under-14), and in the spring there are clashes with baseball and softball for practice and game-scheduling. Usually soccer has to give in. He pointed out that even though soccer has full privileges in the fall, the soccer community would welcome any new turf.

"The Foundation is not a one-man-show," said Greg Hosler, a founding-member of the East Tennessee Soccer Foundation and head coach of the Maryville College Women's Soccer Team. Hosler stated that while the Foundation aims to play a leading role in East Tennessee soccer, it does not aim to "take over."

The Foundation is "interested only in building and improving, and I'm sure it will succeed." He emphasized the need for cooperation and mutual commitment between the Foundation and people and/or groups that started the Blount Soccer program.

"This is for the good of soccer in East Tennessee in general, and in Blount County in particular," Hosler said.

Thursday, Oct. 30
11 a.m. CIV. J. Edward Kidder, International Christian University, Tokyo.
3:30-5:30 p.m. Open House at International House.
6 p.m. Volleyball with the University of the South. Away.
7-9 p.m. Study Hall. Thaw 216.

Friday, Oct. 31
3 p.m. Soccer with Carson Newman. Away.
8 p.m. Fright Night. Snack Bar.
8:15 p.m. MC Playhouse: "The Dining Room." Theatre.

Saturday, Nov. 1
1:30 p.m. Soccer with Washington & Lee University. Away
1:30 p.m. Football with Randolph-Macon College. Away.
8:15 p.m. MC Playhouse: "The Dining Room." Theatre.

Sunday, Nov. 2
Attn. student workers: timesheets due today.
8 p.m. Movie: "Brazil." Student Center.

Monday, Nov. 3
6 p.m. Volleyball with Milligon College. Away.
7-9 p.m. Study Hall. Thaw 216.

Tuesday, Nov. 4
10:20 a.m. Weekly Worship. CCM.
3 p.m. Soccer with Sewanee. Home.

Wednesday, Nov. 5
7-9 p.m. Study Hall. Thaw 216.
8 p.m. Movie: "Agnes of God." Student Center.

Thursday, Nov. 6
11 a.m. Prof. George Herring, University of Kentucky. "After Ten Years: Lessons and Legacies of Vietnam."
12:30 p.m. ACC meeting. PDR.
6:30 p.m. International Club meeting. International House.
7-9 p.m. Study Hall. Thaw 216.

THE BACK PAGE

Halloween from pg. 1

popular local custom is swathing the yards of friends and enemies alike with streamers of toilet paper. More serious pranks are also common.

Homer White, business manager for the Blount County Sheriff's Department, affirms that the squad will have extra staffing on the 31st; he expects the usual batch of tree-cuttings and minor vandalism in Blount's rural regions.

How are the modern-day Scots of MC planning to celebrate this Scottish holiday? Some will trick-or-treat in the dorms; others will attend parties. Student Programming plans a "Fright Night" in the Student Center; director Marty Redman says the evening will include several back-to-back horror movies (TBA), along with some special treats. Nothing more elaborate has been scheduled because of Halloween's proximity to homecoming weekend, the opening of "The Dining Room" this Friday, and an away ballgame this weekend.

Why does the MC of 1986 seem a bit blase about this intriguing holiday? The reason is probably, as Blair suggests, that "we have too many other things to take our attention."

But since before the Dark Ages, Halloween has refused to fade away, and it's certainly not dead yet. So, MC, have a safe, happy Halloween, and don't forget to look over your shoulder -- you might glimpse a Scottish goblin!

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

$60.00
PER HUNDRED
PAID

for remailing letters from home! Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for information and application to, Associates, Box 95-B, Roselle, NJ 07203

Repetition
1809 E. Broadway
(near 5 Points)

Now accepting fall/winter clothing on consignment.

In stock - new and consigned ladies' clothing; name-brands, good selection of petite and junior sizes.

For more information, stop in or call

983-6304

CPP Notes

Friday, Oct. 1, in CPP. 10 - 11 a.m.

All you ever wanted to know about graduate school!! What is it? Why do it? How to choose? Bring your questions about program requirements, application procedures, fellowships, financial aid, when and where to apply, and when to take entrance exams.

Tuesday, Nov. 4, in Thaw 201. 10 - 11 a.m.

Jobs in State government!! Mr. John Townsend, Senior Personnel Analyst, State of Georgia Merit System will discuss the variety of entry level jobs in government, the differences in employment in the public sector vs private industry, application procedures, organization of state agencies, and career advancement opportunities.

Ghosts haunt MC

by Kristi L. Self

Halloween is always accompanied by trick-or-treaters, jack-o-lanterns, and tales of ghosts and goblins. But, ghost stories aren't limited to October 31st on the Maryville College Campus. Several stories concerning ghosts have been circulated throughout the campus, but the experiences remain the same with only varying details.

The best known story deals with a ghost named "Whiskers" that roams the corridors of Anderson Hall. "Whiskers" is supposedly a Civil War veteran that has only one leg. He is in Anderson searching for his other leg.

Several people have experienced strange occurrences in Anderson, especially during late-night hours. Dean Richardson's former office was in Anderson. She spent many nights working late. Richardson describes her encounters with "Whiskers" as being very eerie.

She said she would be the only one in the building, but she would still hear footsteps upstairs. Richardson said that she would get a very strange feeling, like someone else was in the room with her. Her worst experience occured at 11 p.m. one night.

She was sitting at her desk with her head down, when she heard someone say "Jane." Richardson looked around the room but saw no one. Her window was closed so she knew the voice was inside the building. She went out in the hall and again saw no one. She hurriedly left the building.

Although there are other stories similar to Richardson's, there is one flaw. Anderson Hall was not built until after the Civil War. This would imply that "Whiskers" does not exist at all, or that he is there for another, unexplainable reason.

Another well-known ghost inhabits Pearsons. The story behind this ghost is based on a suicide. Supposedly, a girl that used to live in Pearsons hanged herself in her shower. Her spirit has never been able to escape from the building.

At one time, Pearsons had four floors and was a dormitory. This girl lived on the fourth floor when she killed herself. After the incident, people who lived on the fourth floor saw a white body at the end of the hallway. They also heard footsteps and doors opening and closing. All of these events would occur between 11:30 p.m. and 2 a.m., the span of time just between late night and early morning.

A fire consumed the fourth floor and a few years later only two floors were rebuilt for housing. The reconstruction did not release this spirit. One source claims she relocated on the second floor near the alcove and that a certain aura can be felt around this area. Another source feels that she has moved her home to the basement of the building.

There are other stories of spirits and ghosts around the campus. Tom Hudson, former editor of the Highland Echo, said that there is a spirit or force in the Echo room. He said while working late he would experience another "being" in the room. Hudson siad that occasionally his papers would blow off his desk, with the windows and door closed.

Tillman Crane said that he was familiar with many of these stories and that he had experienced the same phenomena. He added that he "had a feeling in the theater" of the same nature.

These strange occurrences are not limited to buildings. Eldria Hurst, head of security, said that late one summer night he decided to take a break on the bench in front of Fayerweather Hall. As he was sitting with his dog, a voice said, "good evening." Hurst looked up to respond, as did his dog, but to his dismay no one was around. He ordered the dog to find the "voice," but the dog only looked up, went around in a complete circle, and sat back down. Hurst looked for the "voice," but had no luck.

Do you ever get the feeling that someone is behind you as you return to your room after a late night in the library? Do you ever hear your name but when you look up realize that no one is there? Have you ever been in a building alone and heard footsteps? Just remember, the next time you are alone, you really might not be alone at all.

ENTERTAINMENT

Affiliate Artist Elisabeth Braden

NEWS

Dr. Perez-Riley

SPORTS

Ladies' Softball Gears Up

Highland Echo

Vol.72 No. 5 | Maryville College | Friday, November 14, 1986

No "laundry list" for Ferrin

by Brian C. Linkous

The search for Maryville College's tenth president is over but amidst a deluge of rumors, the speculation surrounding Dr. Richard Ferrin is just beginning.

No sooner had memorandums been placed in post office boxes on Tuesday than students and faculty alike were voicing their opinions as to what the new tenure of office would mean for the college.

In a telephone interview earlier this week, Ferrin, speaking from his home in Spokane, Wahsington, had much to say about his philophy and ideology in regard to Maryville College.

Ferrin said that as he begins his presidency, he will pay particular attention to the enrollment trend. "I think the size of the student body is something that should be worked on right away," said Ferrin.

Ferrin's efforts will coincide with the general effort of the College to substantially increase its enrollment over the next few years. However, Ferrin emphasized a strong commitment to attract students by the quality of the institution rather than by high-flown gimmicks.

> "The connection with the church is a valuable one which should be attended to."
>
> -- Dr. Richard Ferrin

In other areas, a stronger emphasis on the church and Maryville College will be a top priority of Ferrin. "From my standpoint, the articulation of the liberal arts mission to the broader church connection is very important," said Ferrin. "The connection with the church is a valuable one which should be attended to."

Ferrin, in response to what many have dubbed "student apathy," stressed a philosophy which he calls a "super ordinate goal." The philosophy is to get individuals tied into "something bigger than yourself." Ferrin said that as long as there is a preoccupation at the self-fulfillment level, there will continue to be apathy.

Ferrin was careful to discount any rumors that he was coming to Maryville with a "laundry list." "I will not come in with a program of changes; I don't yet know the institution well enough."

While he may not have a predetermined plan of action, Ferrin was very explicit about his religious and educational beliefs. "For me, God and Jesus Christ are at the base of all knowledge. I think that at the core of who we are as humans there is a spiritual sense."

Ferrin said that he is interested in extending the tradition of Maryville college into every facet of college life, and that he would work toward that in a "deep way."

On a less philosophical level, Ferrin expounded on why he would travel across the country to assume see Ferrin pg. 3

Gateway rips and trashes out of print books

by Kimberly D. Spargo

Recently, some Maryville College students noticed that the dumpster behind Gateway Books in the Midland Shopping Center frequently contains torn-up paperbacks. The discarded books have their covers ripped off and are torn in half.

The manager of Gateway Books, O'Dell Warren, said that the procedure is the "policy of the publishers." Warren said, "We have to destroy them. We rip the covers off and mail them back to the publisher to get credit for them [the unsold, outdated books]. We rip the books apart by hand."

Warren explained that the publishers demand an understood agreement that the unsold paperbacks are destroyed before the store can receive credit for them.

Whenever new books come in, Warren said, "you get a 'books out of print' list and see what is not current," and then you destroy those books. Warren also said that the reason the books are ripped up is because flea market people often rifle through the dumpsters and salvage the books to sell them at the flea markets. The coverless books sell fairly well, Warren said.

The publishers want to stop the flea markets from gaining profits off of unsold books, Warren said. By returning the covers and promising to destroy the books, the bookstores are assured a full credit return, Warren said. "If we were caught not destroying the books, we could go out of business," Warren said.

Apparently the procedure is standard for most bookstores. Walden Books in Foothills Mall also destroys outdated paperbacks. An employee of the store who preferred to remain anonymous said that, "It is the policy of the Walden Books' home office as well as the publishers."

The only books that are affected by the policy, however, are what Warren called "mass market size paperbacks." The "hardbacks and larger see Books pg. 8

Intramurals program not utilized

by Kristi L. Self

Maryville College has an intramurals program that offers students the opportunity to compete in various organized sports or plan their own type of recreation, unfortunately very few students take advantage of this program.

Intramural Director Sharon Arrington said that this year has been the hardest year to get things going. She said that she cannot understand the lack of participation. Arrington said, "The equipment is just dying to be used." They have basketballs, racquetball paddles, horseshoes, footballs, pingpong equipment, and much, much more. Many things have never been used.

Efforts have been made to cater to the students' wishes, but all attempts to promote the program have failed. Arrington asks, "What do you [the students] want?" She said, "The lack of participation is very

see IM's pg. 3

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Sports and religion

Sometimes we all forget how fortunate we are to be living in the United States. Besides the basic liberties we are afforded under the Constitution, we are also provided the tenet of separation of church and state. Luckily, our forefathers had the foresight to recognize the importance of this separation and as the years have passed we have constantly tested the First Amendment. Fortunately, it still remains intact.

Just as we can appreciate the freedom to choose or not to choose religions, we should also be able to appreciate that where religion or some form of it is practiced that it is done so with conviction and sincerity. If it is not then the term "hypocritical" comes to mind.

This editorial, however, is not about the separation of church and state: it is about the non-separation of church and athletics.

Basically what I am talking about are sports events. I have yet to understand why prayers are murmered, with the utmost reverance from the fans and the athletes, at sports events. To me, it is the highest form of hypocrisy which exists in society today.

Think about how many sports events you have been to lately that have not begun with a prayer. I can guarantee that you will be hard pressed to name very many. Now think about how many obscenities by both players and fans you have heard yelled at the same events and how many fights, of some sort, that you have seen. No so hard pressed anymore are you?

The whole thing is so crazy. Who decided that a prayer had to be spoken before these sports events? I am not aware of such a verse in the Bible. Unfortunately, we are dealing with a doctrine of man: another idea about religion which simply becomes tradition without regard to fact.

To me, a prayer is a sacred and humble request to my God. It doesn't matter who or what your god is, a prayer should always be the same sacred thing. But to pray before a football game, or a basketball game, or any other athletic event is to simply degrade this same sacred request.

Anyone who has ever played a sport can tell you, although they probably won't admit it, how quickly the spirit of religion subsides as the spirit of competition rises. Players and fans alike become so engulfed in their own little world of competitive fierceness that the basic tenet of religion becomes ridiculous.

In short, athletic events and religion do not mix. Unfortunately, religious beliefs take a back seat during a competitive athletic event. So why do we continue to kid ourselves into thinking that by praying at the opening of these events we are combining sports and religion? We are, on the contrary, only succeeding in making repulsive hypocrites out of rselves.

LETTERS: Student wants apology

I would like to address the issue of school spirit as it relates to an incident that occured at the football game last Saturday against Tennessee-Wesleyan. My definition of school spirit is support of all college-related activities, not just football!

The incident of which I speak is the halftime show, which included skydivers and an unfinished performance by the Highlander Band, directed by Mr. David Hoffecker.

Mr. Hoffecker received numerous complaints last year from the athletic department about the fact that the band rarely played more than the national anthem and fight song during halftime. Did the athletic department ever receive complaints that the football team was a losing team last year with a record of 3-7? I think not.

Mr. Hoffecker knows how to do his job -- otherwise he wouldn't be here. Last Saturday the band prepared an entertaining halftime show that included six numbers and a script. Because of the skydiving exhibition which preceded the band and of which Mr. Hoffecker knew nothing until it was announced over the microphone, the band's playing time was drastically cut and they were only able to finish half of their show.

The band was warned by several coaches and referees that the team would be given a five-yard penalty if the band did not leave the field. When playing a team that has been winless since its inception, a five-yard penalty on the kickoff to start the half should have absolutely no bearing on the outcome of the game.

Within the next few minutes, Maryville scored, but the touchdown was disqualified because there were too many men on the field. Is it that much more difficult to count to eleven than it is to five?

As the band left the field, they were subjected to much abusive language from several players. Is that school spirit? The band works hard, just as the cheerleaders, and players do, and does not deserve such treatment.

I would like to remind the team and coaches of the incident last year in which a non-band member played a few notes of "Taps." His action was entirely inappropriate and he was reprimanded by Mr. Hoffecker. In an effort to dispel any feelings of ill will between the band and athletic department, Mr. Hoffecker apologized to Coach Saylor and the entire football team.

I think the behavior of the team and coaches was inappropiriate and the band and Mr. Hoffecker deserve an apology.

The band is out there to support the football team. The football team is not so important or great as to justify showing such a lack of mutual respect.

Heidi Hoffecker

Prof. upset with dishonesty

Each community has its own special values which it holds dear. In "yuppie-dom" the "knowing of other people's wives" apparently is a lesser crime than making bad investments in mutual funds. The French, said Professor Higgins, don't care what you do as long as you pronounce it correctly.

The academy has its own priority of values. Its most heinous crimes are the suppression of academic freedom and the practice of academic dishonesty. The later felony includes such practices as a professor's using another scholar's ideas without giving acknowledgment of the borrowing, a student's copying from another person's work, and one's gaining credit for work which is not done.

It is not only in Division I athletics where credit for courses which were not attended appears on the school's transcripts. It is taking place at Maryville College. We are aware that there are students who are gaining credit for CIVs which they have not attended or at which they have only made a perfunctory apperance.

I call these students' attention to the statements on academic dishonesty which are in the Student Handbook. These are not to be taken lightly; they will be enforced.

We have reluctantly concluded that due either to illiteracy in respect to these plainly stated rules or to a lack of personal integrity on the part of certain students we must begin changes in the methods by which we register CIV attendance. These are already in practice. If they do not work, we shall take more stringent action.

David R. Cartlidge
CIV Committee Chairman

Homecoming Thank you

Dear Faculty, Staff, and Students of MC,

I just wanted to write and say thanks so much for the warm welcome you extended to the alumni on Homecoming weekend. I returned to MC, along with several others, for the Playmaker reunion. It was such a terrific time, not only with the Playmakers but so many others embraced us with open, loving arms. It was so nice to be "Home" again. It was great to see familiar faces as well as meet some new folks. I hope that you students who are there now will be able to come back to MC and remember your years with as much happiness as I did.

Also, thanks to the people who organized the Playmaker reunion. It was very well done, and I am sure everyone enjoyed it as much as I did. The dedication of the snack bar was done so nicely, even through tears it was good to remember Sharon for all the joy she brought into everyone's life. I was so pleased to see such a fine group of performers carrying on a 10 year tradition . . . keep up the good work.

Again, thank you so much for your warm embrace. Homecoming '86 has created lots more precious memories for me of Maryville College. I look forward to my next return.

Most sincerely,
Jean Plant-Moeller

Perez-Riley enjoys work

by Lynn Smith

Dr. Elizabeth Perez-Riley has been given an opportunity to apply her teaching philosophy this year through Maryville College's Latin and Spanish programs.

According to Dr. Perez-Riley, she wants "the students to leave the class with information and skills that can be put to later use."

After ten years at Middle Tennessee State University, she decided to leave her position as administrative director of International Student Services and come to Maryville College.

Dr. Perez-Riley said this was the type of college where she always wanted to teach. When asked her impression of M.C., she said, "I like it very much; there is a good quality of students here."

She also commented on how impressed she was with the sense of support that is given and received among the college faculty.

Leigh Emery

Her interest in becoming a Spanish teacher was sparked during her undergraduate work. In the 1960's the United States government wanted people to be trained as foreign language teachers to establish programs in all schools. There were a lot of lucrative job offers in the profession at that time.

Dr. Perez-Riley said that it is very important for Americans to learn the Spanish language since there are so many speaking that language in our country. She said, "it helps to bridge the gap and enables them to assimilate better if Americans speak their language."

The most valuable opportunity she had to use her Spanish was when she worked with migrant workers. She was involved with the Office of Economic Opportunity and helped disadvantaged teenagers, many of whom were Spanish-speaking.

IM's from pg. 1

defeating to me and the workers."

Ideally, intramurals provide a chance for students to compete at a non-collegiate level, but Arrington said that 90 percent of the participants are Maryville College athletes. Arrington said, "If we took away the athletes from the intramural program, we would have no program."

The most popular activities seem to be individual sports where little supervision and officiating are required. Pingpong seems to be one of the favorites.

The major problems arise with sports such as flag football. Arrington said that rosters are rarely turned in and frequently scheduled games are forfeited because one of the teams did not show up.

Intramurals are an important part of Maryville College. They provide a break from the monotony of studying and going to classes, as well as getting you into shape.

How many times have you heard someone say, "There's nothing to do?" The next time this happens simply go to the Athletic Building, choose the equipment you want, and leave your I.D. with the intramural worker. You can get exercise, learn a new sport, or play for the simple enjoyment of it.

Ferrin from pg. 1

leadership at Maryville College: "The prospect of living in Tennessee is intriguing, and I've found nothing but warmth and kindness."

For Ferrin, church-related higher education is something that is "in my bones." But perhaps more importantly, Ferrin added that he has been guided to Maryville. "I believe this is where God would have me be at this particular time."

Spirit draws back alumni

by Lynn King

(Alums tell why they return to MC. The following begins with Jerry Waters.)

"I began to see a much broader view of why certain things were done the way they were done," Waters said. "I really gained a lot more respect for faculty members, being one myself."

"I have developed a much greater appreciation for those who founded the College and expanded its services; the openness to change and experimentation (a characteristic not always found in institutions of higher learning); the high academic standards and quality of training," Bushing said.

For some, it was not individual perspective that changed, but Maryville College itself.

"I think the school has a much stronger academic orientation," Ramger said. "I think the academic standards are higher, and the level of difficulty is greater."

"At the time I graduated, it was a very conservative institution. It changed with the times," Dr. Arda Walker, Professor Emeritae of History explained.

Maryville College could be called a way of life for Walker: she grew up in the Maryville area, her father was an MC professor, she earned her BA in History from MC and later returned to teach. Including her years of undergraduate study, Walker has been affiliated with the College for 41 years.

So why do so many people choose to stay with Maryville College for much more than four years of undergraduate education?

"I think because they believe in the institution and what it's doing, and they want to be a part of that," Nier said. "It gave to them and they want to give back to it."

"For me, it was the community feeling on campus, mostly the people," explained Walker.

"It's undoubtedly a great place to work," Director of Communications Duncan Bennett said. "The atmosphere in a small college is probably the best thing you'll ever find in terms of being an employee."

Maryville College is something of a family tradition for Bennett. His mother, his wife, one daughter and an aunt are all MC graduates, while another daughter attended MC for a while before transferring to another institution.

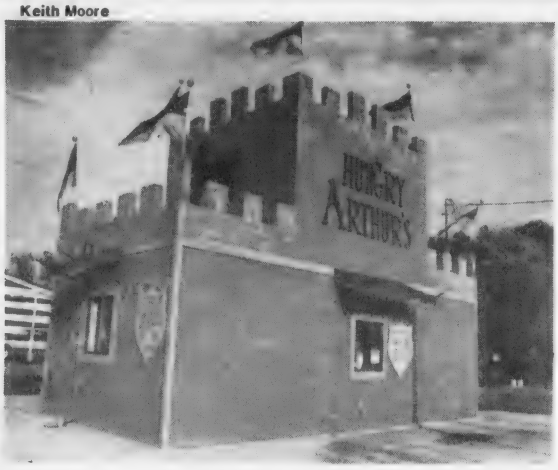
He first worked at MC in the 1960's as Director of Information Services, essentially the same position he is in now with a different name. After six years, he returned to the Knoxville News Sentinel. Bennett came back to Maryville College in October of last year, after taking early retirement from the News Sentinel.

Waters speaks of the "thread of congeniality" and loyalty to the College among faculty members at MC. "The faculty interrelates really well," he said.

"It's a nice place to work," said Melissa Walker. "The atmosphere is really nice; you get to keep in contact with students."

Walker graduated in 1985, then began working as Communications Office Manager a few months after graduation. In June of 1986 she became Director of Alumni Relations.

"The 'Maryville College Spirit' seems to draw people back," she added.



Hess concurred in her explanation of why so many choose to remain at MC. "I'm not sure it's something that can be verbalized," she said. "That intangible thing called the 'Maryville College Spirit' tends to pull people back."

"It definitely is a phenomenon," Waters said. Perhaps Waters came as close as one can to a summation of the lasting pull of alumni loyalty, the "Maryville College Spirit", the aura of the institution:

"It's like going back home, literally."

ENTERTAINMENT

Keith Moore

Hungry Arthur's, on Highway 411, provides meals fit for a king at a pauper's price.

It's a pauper's palace

by Jennifer C. Worth

Look! On the horizon: it's a turret -- it's a castle -- it's a fast-food restaurant? Hungry Arthur's, a drive-through on the Old Knoxville Highway (411), is nothing if not eye- catching.

Its vivid sign, colorful pennants, and especially its tiny pseudo-castle building first caught my eye over a month ago, and I have finally eaten there -- or more accurately, bought my food there. The medieval motif carries through from the shield-shaped "enter/exit" signs to the menus on the side of the building. This decor is somewhere between camp and cutesy.

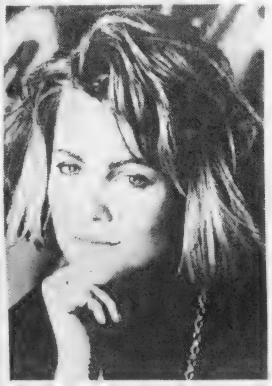
The exterior belies a no-frills interior; the walls are spartan white tile, and the employees don't even wear the polyester uniforms so typical of fast-food chains. The menu, too, is sparse, but graced with names someone was probably up all night thinking of: Castle burger ($.33 regular, $.39 with cheese), Castle dog ($.49), and Castle fries ($.39). The highest-priced item is barbeque, in $.69 and $1.49 sizes.

Hungry Arthur's also offers the basic array of soft drinks at $.29 for 16 ounces. I forsook the potential adventure and danger of the barbeque for a trio of burgers and an order of fries. By the way, a Castle burger, the servitor told me, comes with onions, mustard, and pickle, "just like Krystal."

It was about a quarter to noon, and although the grounds had been empty when I arrived, several cars pulled in behind me as I ordered. I followed the driveway around the back to find myself barely three yards north of my previous position but facing the opposite direction in front of a second window, where the same employee handed out a plain white bag. The entire process had taken just over four minutes and cost $1.49. Furthermore, the employee was courteous, which I found amazing in light of the dreary weather. So far, my venture was a success, but the biggest test was still to come: how would the food taste?

The bag sat on my passenger seat, tantalizingly filling the air with the warm scent of onions, on the five-minute drive home, I eagerly fixed my drink and surveyed the fare. The fries were of the crinkle-cut variety and had cooled to just above room temperature. They reminded me somewhat of basic high school cafeteria fries, but they weren't greasy enough.

The burgers, like their ingredients, were Krystal-esque: small and square. Very small, but tasty as fried burgers go. Onion-haters, be warned -- each Castle burger carries a small mound of fried onions, brown and fragrant. On the whole, the meal was filling and eminently palatable.



Patronizing Hungry Arthur's is an exercise in speed, frugality, and modern American culture. It's also a pleasant enough eating experience. If you've got the time and money to spare, or just a snobbish palate, you're better off eating elsewhere. But if you're pressed for time or cash, or if you're just in a madcap mood, Hungry Arthur's is more than worth the minimal effort it requires of its customers.

ROCK VIEW

Rock 'n' roll videos make the scene

By Marianne Meyer

With the holiday season just around the corner, the number of music videos released for the home market increases. Here are a few hits — and misses — to consider.

Belinda Carlisle

"Belinda" (MCA Home Video, $19.95). OK, so Belinda Carlisle leaves the Go-Gos, makes a solo LP and prepares for her first solo performance at Los Angeles' Roxy club. With all the gush of the MTV special it once was, the producers of this tape want you to think it's some kind of musical second coming. What it is is an average rehearsal-cum-concert show with interview bits featuring a singer whose on-stage presence and off-stage pertness can wear pretty thin.

"Wham! in China: Foreign Skies" (CBS Fox Video Music, $19.98). Noted film director Lindsay Anderson ("O Lucky Man," "If") seems to have been asleep behind the lens on this one, a documentary look at Wham's historic concerts on the red side of the Great Wall. What could have been an insightful look at a cross-cultural event or a teenybopper's backstage delight is neither, and winds up just another road-trip home movie, albeit with accents. George Michael at least gets some good on-stage moments but Andrew Ridgeley, as if he knows his golden goose is dying, appears generally defensive and boorish.

"Motown: The 60s" (MCA Home Video, $29.95). What sounds like little more than a gimmick works to great effect here. Take one Motown song from each year in a decade, pair it with newsreel footage relating to the events of the time, then sprinkle a little Monty Python-like animation and archival performance shots of Stevie Wonder, Smokey Robinson et al. into the mix. The music is classic stuff, while the visuals range from the fascinating to the poignant.

"Joe Jackson: The Big World Sessions" (A&M Video, 19.95). All too briefly (it's less than a half-hour long) this tape takes you on stage with Jackson for six songs he performs at the concerts and recording sessions for the "Big World" LP. Given the enormity and integrity of his quest — to record and mix live to a two-track master with absolutely no overdubs — one wishes Jackson would have given us more of the music and an up-close look at the unique recording process. This is a clean, snappy mini-concert.

Burdick's shop of horrors

by Heidi Weiffenbach

He keeps his little shop of horrors backstage at the theater, and in this secluded domain he performs all kinds of bloody lacerations and grotesque deformations on himself -- all with makeup, of course. Kirk Burdick, a sophomore at Maryville College, is quite a master of disguises.

Burdick is one of about 33 students currently enrolled in the Maryville College Life Enhancement Program (MCLEP). MCLEP was designed "to aid in developing and educating the whole person," said Bruce Guillaume, director of MCLEP. According to Guillaume, this structured program falls into four distinct categories: personal management, creativity, adventure, and service.

The student chooses one of these areas of particular interest, and he, along with a faculty or staff mentor, designs a project and determine project goals. "These experiences need to be something new and different from past experiences," Guillaume said.

These projects and experiences may cover a wide range in interests, and some that are currently being done or have been completed include teaching someone to read, learning to play the piano, writing a short story, bicycling cross-country, and preparing excercise programs.

For a successfully completed project, the student earns one credit hour. MCLEP is currently voluntary, but as of next year all incoming freshman will have to do a project to fulfill graduation requirements.

Burdick decided to do his project on prosthetic makeup. "Makeup is the art of deception, and I've always liked fooling people. My ultimate project is to dress up with makeup and walk around campus to see how many people recognize me!"

Burdick is enthusiastic and ready to get his project underway. "If people are interested, get in touch with me," Burdick said, "because I do need victims . . . uh . . . volunteers!"

Braden is Affiliate Artist

by John Wright

Maryville College introduces 1986-87 Affiliate Artist Elisabeth Braden to our campus and community. This year, Affiliate Artist Inc. celebrates the 20th anniversary of a program which has supported the career development of exceptionally talented performers. The unique program allows singers, dancers, instrumentalists, mimes, and others, to perform in diverse community settings throughout America.

What does it take to be an Affiliate Artist? Besides good stage presence and excellent technique, it takes a sparkling, well-rounded and honest personality to exemplify the concept of an Affiliate Artist. Lisa Braden, lyric soprano, has just that and more. Lisa comes to share a special gift with area high schools, local churches, and the College.

Braden discussed many trials, successes, and other aspects of her life. Braden explained that Affiliate Artist work really is demanding, but at the same time quite rewarding.

"Affiliate Artists must have the discipline, the vocal repertoire and range, and the willingness to get to know many people," she said. "I especially enjoy it because it breaks the barrier between performer and audience."

Affiliate Artist work is not all that fills Braden's yearly work schedule. About six months out of the year she performs with regional opera companies, sings oratoria works with various prominent orchestras throughout the United States, and does lots of recital work. "I really love doing concerts and someday I hope to get with a concert management."

Braden's wide range of performances include The Merry Widow, La Cenerentola, The Barber of Seville, and her New York City Opera debut as Michaela in Carmen. A few oratorio works include Haydn's Creation and Lord Nelson Mass, Bach's Saint Matthew Passion, and Handel's Messiah.

Other accomplishments include numerous awards, such as District Winner in the 1979 Metropolitan Opera Auditions and first place in the 1979 Naftzger Competition.

So how did this happy, successful part of life come about for Braden? "I hung in there!" Braden said. "You have to just keep growing as an artist and don't worry about fame or glory because it's not in your control."

Braden was originally trained as a cellist and at first really did not think she wanted a career because her mother was such a beautiful classical singer. She said, "I used to think there might be some kind of competitive feeling between us."

Braden explained how as a child she used to imitate arias that her mother sang aroung the house. Her interest in classical music as a youth stayed with her and has been the best influence in her choice for a career.

Braden said, "I especially admire Joan Sutherland, not only for her incredible vocal ability, but for being able to sing at an older age and still make it sound so good. If you want your voice to last for a long time, you have to treat it with great respect and stay vocally healthy," she added.

Braden credits her present teacher, Margaret Hoswell, for help in maintaining vocal stability. "We still tackle the basics and we work with what's best for me. I shy away from teachers with a 'method'. I spent five years looking for a teacher," she said. "I just stuck with an eastern philosophy that says 'when you're ready, the right teacher will appear to you,' and she did."

Braden is optimistic about her stay at Maryville. She will be around in January and the first part of March. Don't hesitate to make conversation or to say "Hello", or even challenge her to a game of tennis.

But how will you know her? Well, if you don't get the chance to hear that beautiful, strong, secure voice of hers, you still can't miss her. She will be the unfamiliar tall, blonde lady walking around campus with pretty eyes and a smile that makes you feel instantly comfortable.

Help Set a World Record

Got a Card? "Little Buddy" is a 5 year old Scottish boy dying of Leukemia. His dream is to get in the world record book for receiving the most cards. His parents, who are members of the church, would appreciate help from their brothers and sisters in Christ in making his wish come true. First class postage is $.44 per half-ounce -- a one page letter or a small card. His address: Little Buddy, P.O. Box 76, Paisley, Renfrewshire, Scotland, United Kingdom.

Poet's corner

To salvage myself,
my pride,
I stepped on you.
Our relationship shattered
like glass,
The jagged shards cut deeply.
I bleed.
Each drop covers your visage,
Obscuring it from my memory.
Forever.
Wounds heal.
I'll never bleed again.
Next time I'll wear boots.

--Michael Despayre

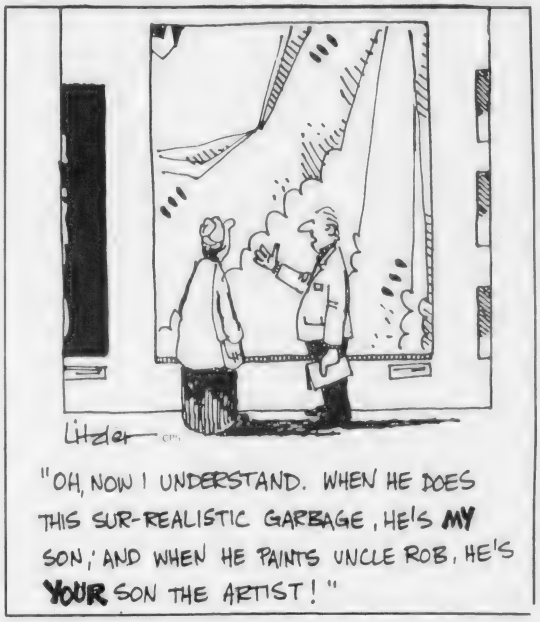

Exhibit explores different media

by Meg Fraelich

This month's exhibit in the Fine Arts Center gallery is work by senior art major Jeff Seagle.

The exhibit features works in a variety of media. There are paintings, pen and ink renderings, pencil drawings, and prints. Also included in the show is a portfolio of advertisements from practicum work.

Seagle's interest in commerical art is easily seen. Many of his designs use the vocabulary of the commercial artist. Several pieces incorporate company logos. During his practicum with Dobbs House, he further refined his commerical design skills. He uses an unusually refined, precise drawing style in his advertising work. His elegant Christmas card featuring the college seal represents the height of his advertising design work.

The glory of athletic competition is a recurring theme in Seagle's work. His show features many football related works. Several pieces are icons of famous coaches. One particularly detailed intaglio print is of coach Paul "Bear" Bryant. The intaglio printing process requires that each line of print is scratched into a sheet of plastic. The plate is then hand inked and run through a printing press together with a sheet of damp paper. Another intaglio print is of rowers; this piece captures the rhythm of the rowers in action.

Other drawings feature more conventional themes. One particularly haunting piece is an abstract of a dissection of a cat. Deliberately vague renderings of cats in various stages of dismemberment capture the painful scene.

Seagle can also create precise, realistic images. His drawings of Anderson Hall and the old barn are excellently executed.

The senior show is a crowning achievement of art majors at Maryville. It presents a picture of their exploration and growth. Seagle's exhibit is a record of his growth as an artist. From paintings to pen and inks, and from abstracts and stylizations to realism, he explores media and the limits of his abilities.

His exhibit can be viewed from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the FAC gallery until the end of November.

AIB to deal with dishonesty

by Pam Mathews

A student is assigned a position paper. This student is having difficulty in expounding on the subject and decides to use some ideas from a book on that subject. After reading this student's paper, the instructor discovers that the student did not use his original ideas and decides to take disciplinary action.

In another case, a student steals a test from an instructor who becomes aware of the misdeed several days later. The teacher, therefore, deals with the misdeed accordingly.

Though varying in degrees of seriousness, both of the examples, under current policy, would warrant the same penalty -- an "F" in the course the first time and dismissal from the college if found guilty a second time.

However, the student could request a hearing before the Academic Vice President or the Judicial Board on his second offense. The instructor must determine the verdict of the first instance of academic dishonesty.

In order to alleviate some conplications of current policy, the Academic Life Council (ALC) recently passed a resolution establishing the Academic Intergrity Board (AIB), separating academic dishonesty from the Judicial Board.

The AIB will be comprised of three faculty members and two students, all of whom previously served on the Academic Life Council.

Under the guidelines of the AIB, if an instructor feels that there has been a violation of academic intergrity, he can discuss the case with the department chair person, and can schedule a conference with the student. If the student denies the charges, the case can be turned over to the AIB. If the student admits guilt, he will be dealt with accordingly without appeal to the AIB.

In the event that someone other than the faculty discovers academic dishonesty, he/she can inform the Registrar, who will notify the faculty member involved and the AIB chair. The AIB chair will next meet the person reporting the violation for the necessary information and will proceed in arranging a hearing, informing the student of the charge and the faculty member involved.

For both cases, the sanctions would range from a letter of reprimand to dismissal, depending upon the seriousness of the violation.

Also, the President will be notified of the recommended penalty.

Those who are familiar with the AIB seem positive about the new policy.

According to Dean Bolden, academic vice president, "The previous system was not very good because it could not always deal with cases that involved more than one offense. The Academic Intergrity Board policy allows for more flexibility in decisions," he further stated.

Dr. Harry Howard, a faculty member of the AIB, mentioned the problem of enforcement. "Some faculty members were not clear on the old policy. Others knew the policy but disagreed with certain aspects."

Howard added, "Some students perceived the policy as being inequitable since the instructor could be both judge and jury, which could also discourage enforcement."

Howard also feels that the proposed system better defines the policy which will allow for a better application of necessary actions.

SHORTS

(OCR) -- Life is good. More that 30 percent of the 650 members of Harvard Business School's class of '61 made it to the top of their companies, and most say they are satisfied with life, according to a recent poll. Of course life is good, about 63 percent of them make more than $100,000 per year.

(OCR) -- Don't be squeamish. Teenage men who can watch horror movies without showing signs of distress are seen by their dates as more attractive because of their bravado, says a study by two Indiana U. researchers. It also found that the more distressed the female companion became, the more attractive she was to the male.

(OCR) -- Vandalism carries a high price tag at Indiana U. Damage to the school's 10 residence halls last year increased by 3.3 percent to $53,175. About 80 percent of the damage is blamed on people coming in from off-campus to attend dorm parties.

(OCR) -- You can hold hands, but sexual activity is out of the question in U. of Colorado dorms. As outlined in the new guide to residence hall living, officials prohibited "sleeping together" or "going to bed with another person." Some students are angry and others are getting a good chuckle out of it.

SIGN UP WITH US, AND WE'LL SIGN OFF ON YOUR LOAN.

Just because you graduated from college doesn't mean you have to graduate into debt. Erase your college debt with the Army's Loan Repayment Program.

Each year you serve as a soldier, the Army will reduce your college debt by ⅓ or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. So after serving just 3 years, your college loan will be completely paid off.

You're eligible for this program with a National Direct Student Loan, or a Guaranteed Student Loan, or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975. And the loan can't be in default.

And just because you've left college, don't think you'll stop learning in the Army. Our skill training offers a wealth of valuable high-tech, career-oriented skills. So sign up. And watch us sign off. Find out more by calling your local Army Recruiter.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Leigh Emery

MC defensive back Jeff Whitt turns upfield after his second interception against Tennessee-Wesleyan on Saturday.

Scots win a close one

by Matt Wayland

It wasn't pretty, but they'll take it anyway. This best sums up the Scots' 20-17 victory over Tennessee-Wesleyan College here last Saturday. Neither team was very impressive as Maryville moved up to 3-6 on the year while the Bulldogs from Tennessee-Wesleyan dropped to 0-9.

The Bulldogs drew first blood with a 46-yard touchdown run by Mark Frizzell with 13:16 left in the first quarter. It looked as though he ran into a wall of blockers and then scooted around the left end to go virtually untouched for the score.

The Scots came back with a drive of their own. With 4:51 left in the first quarter, quarterback Mike Human tossed a 33-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Ricky Miller to tie the game at 7-7.

In the second quarter the Scots launched another touchdown drive that ended with freshman running back Julio Kiliddjian scoring from seven yards out after a great second effort. This made the score 14-7 with 6:03 left in the second quarter.

The Scots' lead didn't last long, however, as the Bulldogs' freshman quarterback Kenny Birchfield plunged into the end zone from one yard out to tie the game at halftime 14-14.

The Scots realized at halftime that they had a real fight on their hands with the winless Bulldogs.

The Scots came out in the third quarter and took a 17-14 lead with a 23-yard field goal by Henry Marambio. He then came back for a repeat performance nailing a 47-yarder with 40 seconds left in the third. "That was the longest of my college career," said Marambio of the eventual game winning field goal.

The Bulldogs came back in the fourth quarter however and gave the Scots a scare. Place kicker Hall Williams hit a 21-yarder with 12:07 left in the game to make the score 20-17. Williams failed to come through in the clutchas he missed a 39-yard field goal with six seconds left in the game to give Maryville the victory.

Admittedly, the Scots played rather poorly, especially against a winless club, but there were a few bright spots for Maryville. On defense, linebacker Jeff "Yarddog" Collins made 15 tackles and recorded his fifth interception on the year. Defensive back Mike Walsh, the NCAA Division III interception leader, snagged two more to bring his total to 10 interceptions for the year. Jeff Whitt also followed suit with two interceptions of his own.

Jeff Denton and Darrell Lauderdale also combined for five of the six sacks suffered by Tennessee-Wesleyan.

The Scots wind up the season with a game this Saturday against Emory and Henry College in Bristol, Tenn. The Scots will have to play much better against Emory & Henry than they did against Tenn-Wesleyan if they want to win because Emory & Henry is a much better team. But as Darrell Lauderdale said, "What your mind can conceive, your body can achieve." But the question remains as to whether the Scots will do some conceiving and achieving against Emory & Henry.

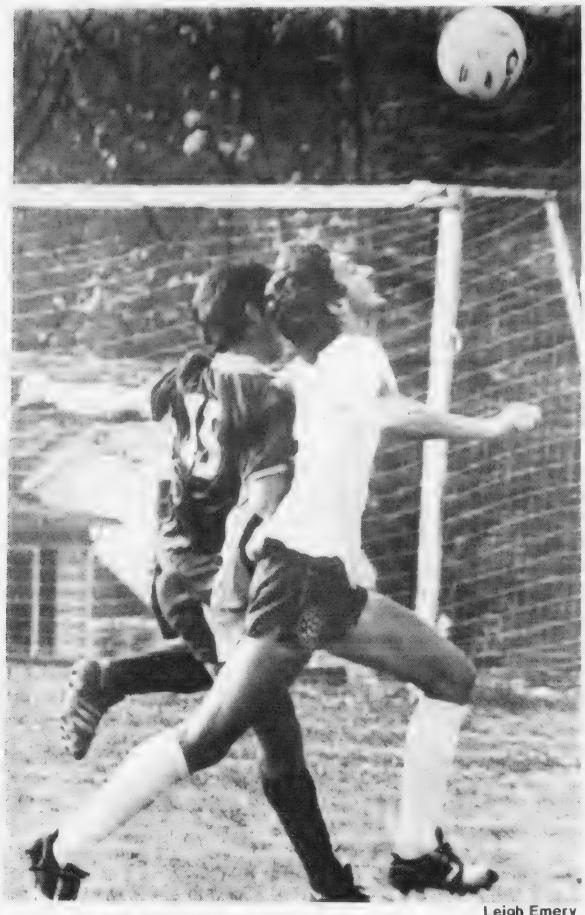
Lady Scots' Softball a winning tradition

by Kristi L. Self

After finishing a winning season last year, the Lady Scots' softball team is gearing up for another victorious year.

Last year, the Lady Scots' competed in an entirely fast-pitch schedule. Playing in an independent conference, they finished the season with a 21-7-1 record defeating such schools as Lincoln Memorial University, Tusculum, and Austin Peay. They finished their season with high tournament placements.

Softball coach Sharon Arrington said of the 1987 team, "We've got some good recruits and potential players; this year's team is just as good as last year's."



Arrington emphasized the strengths in catching and pitching. Arrington said she also anticipates a strong infield.

This will be the second year of entirely fast-pitch ball for Maryville. They will be playing NCAA Division III, but with an independent ranking. Due to the lack of fast-pitch teams in Tennessee, more out-of-state trips have been scheduled. Arrington said, "I am looking forward to a good season."

Softball is an important part of the MC athletic department. The program has a good reputation at Maryville as well as at other colleges. Efforts have been made to support the program such as the construction of a new field, but some believe more attention needs to be given to the sport.

In the past, crowd support at home games has been fantastic. As Arrington said, "The Lady Scots' are winners and people like to watch winners." The first game of the season is a home game.

THE BACK PAGE

Trond Skogeth uses his head against this opponent

Leigh Emery

Soccer looks ahead

by Rethabile Masilo

Under the guidance of two competent coaches, and notwithstanding injuries and an empty bench, the mens' soccer team saw a record of 7-11-1 at the close of the season.

The last two games are representative of the entire season: skill and determination, but no experience. Over half of all losses were by a margin of one goal, and most to established teams among which can be named are Lynchburg College, the University of Tennessee, Washington and Lee University, Roanoke College, and Covenant College.

But as the coaching staff of Phil Neddo and Bakhty Barber assert, through the caliber of the teams they scheduled and by word of mouth at every practice session, this is what it's all about, and the opponent teams are not a woe, but a challenge.

The Scots' problem is youth. Only four players of last year's team came back, and the rest are freshmen. This is not to say that the freshman input is not whole, because it is, in fact, what the team is. Realistically, however, the freshman enters ODAC competition unaware of the prerequired intensity, unaware that college soccer is much more demanding than high school soccer.

The game against the University of the South is illustrative of this point. From the beginning, the game was played in the Scots' attacking half of the field, even though no clear scoring chances were generated. The University of the South scored in the opening minutes of the second half, and from then on it was downhill for the Scots. A single goal was enough to disintegrate the taut intensity and the tight defense. This is a sign of youthful inexperience.

The Scots won the last game of the season 2-0 with goals by freshmen Trond Skogseth and Jess Dunn, which further illustrates the immensity of the freshman input. This year's team is an MC record breaker, and the praise can go only to Rod Shore, Nick Busko, David Walsh, Walter Walsh, and Scott Kueny in the defense; Michael Rethwilm and Danny Clark in the midfield; Dazta Fumba, Trond Skogseth, Jess Dunn, and Aidil Putra in the offense; and Rusman Yaacob, Chris Alden, Tim Glover, and Bill Davis as subsitutes.

Now the team looks to the next season with many hopes: that at least half of this year's team will return: that the College and the community will increase, most importantly, its moral support for the team; and that incoming recruits will be a substantial asset.

Can Food Drive

Dorm competition -- the dorm that brings in the most canned goods or money will receive an ice cream party. Cans should be taken to resident directors. A faculty competition between buildings on campus will also be held. Winners will receive a pancake breakfast.

Underclass and Senior pictures will be taken in the CCM Monday, November 17th from 11 a.m. - 6 p.m. and Tuesday, November 18th from 2 p.m. - 7:30 p.m. You may purchase these pictures from Graham's studio. The yearbook will use the pictures in the book itself. If you fail to show up at the announced times the picture from your student I.D. will be used.

$60.00
PER HUNDRED
PAID

for remailing letters from home! Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for information and application to, Associates, Box 95-B, Roselle, NJ 07203

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

Books from pg. 1

paperbacks are sent back," Warren said. The publishers say that the return shipping costs of the smaller paperbacks exceeds the actual costs of the books, Warren said.

Warren also said, "We don't have anything to do with the magazines."

Echo staff writer Jennifer Worth did some research on just exactly what does happen to the magazines: "The Anderson News Service comes and boxes up the old magazines when they bring in the new ones." Worth was unable to discover what the Anderson News Service does with the old magazines, but she said, "It is the procedure of all bookstores that carry magazines the Maryville area."

Campus Events

Friday, Nov. 14
1:30 p.m. -- Comprehensive exams for graduating seniors.

Saturday, Nov. 15
1:30 p.m. -- Football with Emory and Henry College. Away.

Sunday, Nov. 16
8 p.m. -- Movie "White Nights." Student Center.

Monday, Nov. 17
7-9 p.m. -- Study Hall. Thaw 216.
9 p.m. -- Monday Night football. Issac's (Snack Bar).

Tuesday, Nov. 18
10:20 a.m. -- Weekly Worship. CCM.
12:00 p.m. -- Presidential Scholars lunch. PDR.
7:30 p.m. -- FCA meeting. CCM.

Wednesday, Nov. 19
7-9 p.m. -- Study Hall. Thaw 216.
8 p.m. -- Movie "Out of Africa." Issac's (Snack Bar).

Thursday, Nov. 20
12:30 p.m. -- Faculty meeting. PDR.
7:30 p.m. -- Highlander Band Concert. FAC Music Hall.

Friday, Nov. 21
11 a.m. -- CIV. Adis Vila, Director of Mexico and the Caribbean Basin, U.S. Department of Commerce: "Economics, Commercial Growth, and Investment Issues Pertaining to Mexico and the Caribbean Basin." FAC Music Hall.

ENTERTAINMENT

Heavy metal savior

NEWS

Antiporn laws

SPORTS

Al McGuire

Highland Echo

Vol.72 No. 6 | Maryville College | Friday, December 5, 1986

Rehearsals for the Nutcracker kick off the holiday spirit. Leigh Emery

A holiday tradition "Nutcracker" opens Saturday

by John Wright

The Appalachian Ballet Company will perform its annual production of the "Nutcracker" Sat., Dec. 6 at 8:15 p.m. and Sun., Dec. 7 at 2:00 p.m., at the Knoxville Civic Auditorium. Tickets are $20, $16, and $12 with a $3 discount for students, and are available at the UT Central Ticket Office, Proffits, and at the door.

Bruce Alan Ewing and Amy Moore once again dance the lead roles of Cavalier and Sugar Plum Fairy.

Yvette Herzburn will dance the role of Snow Queen and MC student Doug Cooper will partner as the Snow King.

The ballet promises to be a joyous occasion with the new costumes, set designs, and music, played by the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra.

Conner confused about dismissal

by Kristi L. Self

On Tuesday Dean Boldon informed Dr. Edwin Connor that his contract at Maryville College would be terminated at the end of either 1986 or 1987.

This decision is currently the center of very mixed emotions. Dean Boldon told a fellow reporter that no decision had been made towards Dr. Conner's contract and that regardless of the situation the students' input would not affect matters.

This issue is very important to all present and future students. Since the humanities sequence is required, Conner currently teaches the 260 level of humanities as well as the English 311 class, which is history of the English language.

After a recent surge of complaints, especially stemming from the 311 class, the dismissal of Conner was suggested. English Department head, Dr. Carolyn Blair, through consultation with Dean Boldon, decided that the release of Conner was the best thing for the campus community.

Conner's reaction to the entire situation was disbelief and genuine concern. He was aware of the complaints concerning the 311 class, but other complaints were "a mystery" to him. These complaints were voiced to faculty in the English Department and the Student Affairs Office.

This situation was a shock to the MC campus. Earlier this year, Conner earned his Ph.d. and received a promotion, which seemed to him and to students to indicate good work and consistency - a vote of confidence. Conner said the decision to terminate his contract was a surprise, and that he was "unaware of anything causing that decision." Conner said, "Maryville College has a certain degree of confidence, and if you don't deteriorate as a teacher you can expect a reappointment."

Was there actually a deterioration of teaching, or were some students just displeased with their grades? Whatever the circumstances, Conner is faced with the dilemma of being without a job. This, in itself, creates a major problem.

Applications for teaching positions at a post-secondary level are received during the fall term and ruled upon shortly afterwards. Conner said, "I would like to have been better prepared for applications to other colleges." Conner also said that the timing of this news was his major dissatisfaction.

Conner said that he is all for open communication, including this issue and other issues. He stated that his work

see Conner pg.6

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Changes come

Maryville College is headed for a series of changes over the next few years. There is a wind of conservatism in the air which will, I believe, reshape the Maryville College we all know today.

The Board of Directors basically dictate how Maryville College will be run and with the recent vacancies of the President and Vice President's office they were given a clear mandate to set the pace of the College for many years to come. Let's face it, their appointment of Dr. Ferrin, amidst some controversy, is indicative of the attempt to "reform" Maryville College.

It can hardly be disputed that Maryville College has strayed from its early religious emphasis. Indeed, Maryville College bears little resemblance to a Presbyterian affiliated school.

I can hardly argue against a reaffirmation of the College's ties with the church, and this is precisely what Dr. Ferrin hopes to do. The students of this school have drifted too long without a purpose or a goal and a return to religious values could probably help more than a few.

A new emphasis upon religion could perhaps help end the student apathy on campus. In other areas, it could provide a greater and richer self-fulfillment at the collegiate level. There is certainly nothing wrong with either of these objectives.

However, we as individuals must decide whether or not such an emphasis is right for our lives. But even further than just religion we must decide our own morals and our own lifestyles. We cannot be told that certain things, such as alcohol, are wrong -- we must be free to choose all things we do.

As members of a college community, I believe that we constantly grow by making decisions. Decisions about honesty, love, sex, alcohol, and religion are a part of our everyday life. We should not have the parameters of our decisions restricted in any way. Unfortunately, I am afraid that as the conservative wind blows across campus over the next few years, so will many of the personal liberties we know todav blow away. Let us hope that I am wrong.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Entertainment Editor — Heidi Weiffenbach
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Layout Editor — Jes Kane
Typsetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers — Kristi Self, Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth, Matt Wayland, Jonathan Yarboro

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

Conner's dismissal angers student

I would like to express my deep concern over the College's questionable decision to fire Dr. Conner, one of our English professors. I strongly believe that this is a serious mistake and that the persons responsible should reconsider their action. It is hard not to respect Dr. Conner as a person. He is very kind, intelligent, and student-oriented. On this point I think most students would agree.

The problem that some students have with Dr. Conner seems to be his teaching style. These students probably did not do well in his class, whatever class that may have been. As a result of their failure to make good grades, these same students are placing the blame on the professor. Dr. Conner's classes are indeed tough, but does that make him a poor teacher? Of course not.

I think rather that students have become much more interested in obtaining "the grade" than what that grade supposedly represents. Fortunately, Dr. Conner does not emphasize grades as much as students do. He is a professor who seeks to make students think, an action which is obviously difficult for many of those students who dislike his teaching style.

It would be a serious injustice to fire Dr. Conner for any reason. He is one of the best, if not the best, educator at this institution. This school has two choices in my estimation. It can keep Dr. Conner and thus reaffirm its commitment to higher learning, or it can fire him, and by doing so continue its digression towards a "Dick and Jane, See Spot Run" educational institution. As a Presidential Scholar, I would like to further comment that I will never support an institution financially or otherwise, which fires an educator as brilliant as Dr. Conner.

Don Dove

A matter of choice

by Jennifer C. Worth

"Buckle up; it's the law." This current local ad campaign reflects a recent, unfair state law making seat belts mandatory.

Studies indicate that seat belts are a safety factor, but the findings are the kind of statistics that are difficult to conclusively prove. Although buckling seems a logical precaution, we should not overlook the fluke accidents in which being trapped in a seat spells doom for the traveler. Only last year, a young man was spared the mutilation of his left foot because the blow from a fender collision threw him across the passenger seat; a buckled seat belt might have cost his a limb. Granted, such incidents are rare in the mounting toll of roadway mishaps, and granted, there is some logic and evidence to support the value of buckling up.

But none of that is the issue. It should be for you, the driver, or you, the passenger, to decide whether to wear a safety belt, as a matter of individual conscience. Shouldn't you, the adult, resolve this life-and-death issue for yourself?

The Tennessee State Legislature thinks not, for this summer it made wearing a safety belt mandatory on Tennessee highways. Although the bill's proponents probably had good intentions, they have succeeded only in raising a politically sweet issue at the expense of a democratic liberty. How refreshing to hear that our legislators care about us and our safety! How comforting to think that the otherwise impersonal political machine is really just a cozy mother hen with our interests at heart! Such sentiments will no doubt rise in flurry of gratitude on election day.

That gratitude, however, will be misdirected, for in this case the government has overstepped its bounds. Are we self-willed individuals whose government is a tool, or adolescents whose government is an over-protective parent? The issue may seem insignificant, but in reality it is a matter of principle.

What's next? Will the government outlaw cola, coffee, and chocolate? Will Capitol Hill decree that all Americans eat a well-balanced breakfast and brush their teeth after every meal?

When the government intrudes on matters that rightly belong solely in the realm of individual conscience, our rights are compromised and our maturity insulted.

Perhaps a hue and cry from the residents of Tennessee and travelers on Tennessee roads -- which includes everyone on the MC campus -- will cause the state legislators to rethink their resolution. Or at least it may alert the media and government agencies to this situation.

And hopefully, the man in the TV ad will someday say of the government's new policy: "Buckle up; it's your choice."

Continuing Ed draws busy adults

by Lynn Smith

The Maryville College brochure on Continuing Education reads, "Continuing Education at Maryville college is for busy adults who want to study part time." Busy is an understatement for most of these adults who have full-time jobs and families.

The Continuing Education program started in 1978 with about 30 to 40 people, and according to director, Sally McNiell, has increased to 174 students this year.

Most of the people involved in this program are either sent by their employers or are looking for a career change. When asked what kind of profession most of these people have, McNeill said, "There are more nurses than any single category."

One reason for the nurses being attracted is MC's Bachelor of Science degree that is offered in nursing. McNeill also said that there are all kinds of different job opportunities in nursing -- public health, teaching, and even attaining assessments for insurance companies.

Other students include people who are employed in finance, a wide variety of businessmen, and a few homemakers. McNeill said some teachers are in the program to renew teaching certificates. Some seniors also attend these classes, for those courses that are only offered through the program.

The age of students in the program ranges from 20 to 60 years old. McNeill said, "Twenty-five is usually the dividing line between traditional and non-traditional students." When asked about the study habits of the older students, McNeill said that teachers have commented that adult students always read their assignments and are highly motivated since they are usually paying for their education by themselves or through their employer.

McNeill mentioned that employers will not supply their financial aid if a grade lower than a 'C' is made.

The only other financial aid supplied to the Continuing Education students are through Federal and State grants, which are tied into the student's income level.

Those students take two classes a term, which is a three-month period. Classes may include courses to refresh study skills. People who have had no previous college experience are required to start with one hundred level courses. A "simplified admissions" is offered to those students who graduated from high school more than ten years ago. According to McNeill, these students are invited to attend these classes and try their best. She says, "This works well, and if it's not working for them, they don't hang around long."

Maryville College's Continuing Education program, with the help of Sally McNeill, and a combination of professors and adjunct faculty, has been very sucessful, with the graduation of 28 students as of this year.

Michelle Hill and her mother enjoy studying together.

College as a family affair

by Lynn Smith

Imagine having your mother in class with you. That is the case with Michelle Hill and her mother, Becky.

Hill decided to come to Maryville College to help her with her job at a nursing center. She said, "I feel like the classes offered at Maryville College go hand-in-hand with my job."

Hill is taking physical education classes to get a better idea of how the body grows and ages. She also feels religion classes help since she works so closely with death. Learning Sign Language is very important to Hill. She said that by teaching Sign Language not only to the patients, but the staff at the nursing home, a frustrating communication gap is alleviated.

The use of fine arts, such as music and art, can be applied to the patients as a sort of therapy, according to Hill. In her own words, "I'm taking a little of everything at Maryville College. There is nothing they offer that I don't need."

After high school, Hill attended Knoxville Business College. She says that the skills she learned there have been very valuable, but she wants to further her education.

Hill's day starts at 8 a.m. with two classes at Maryville College. She then goes to work from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. After she gets home from work, she cooks dinner for her family and then begins her homework.

Because she has three daughters that will be going through college for the next ten years, she feels like the classes will help her understand what they will be experiencing in the next few years.

Both Michelle and her mother enjoy having each other in the same class because they say it gives them a chance to get together more. As it stands now, Michelle said, "She's doing better than I am."

CPP Notes

1. Wal-Mart Corp. has established a college internship program to allow college students to enter their management training program and to work 15 to 25 hours per week as they finish school. Interns will be rotated through the various departments and business offices and will receive a wage considerably above minimum wage while you are in training. Upon graduation and completion of training, interns will be promoted to an Assistant Manager position. Interns need to be willing to relocate. Starting salary is quite competitive with other retail organizations.

The Regional Manager would like to interview interested Seniors (and possibly juniors) during the week of Dec. 16. Please come by the CPP immediately if interested.

2. The Peace Corps is actively recruiting new graduates. Applications are in the CPP.

3. Martin-Marietta, Oak Ridge National Labs, offers a summer research program for new graduates in Science. Salary range is from $1400 to $1900 per month. Complete research descriptions and applications are available in CPP.

ENTERTAINMENT

An opera Christmas story

The Christmas story of a crippled shepherd boy, written for television and first shown 35 years ago, will be presented by the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra Saturday and Sunday. Part of the planned MACCO concert series, the presentation also utilizes the College Choir, the Foothills Chorale, and the College Theatre department.

"Amahl and the Night Visitors," an opera in one act, by Gian Carlo Menotti, will be presented Saturday, Dec. 6, at 8 p.m. and again Sunday, Dec 7, at 3 p.m. in Theatre Complex on the Maryville College campus.

The production is under the direction of David Hoffecker, conductor of the MACCO orchestra. Vocal Director is Robert Ergenbright, Director of the Maryville College Choir, and stage direction and set design are by Donald R. Thomas, director of the Maryville College Playhouse.

Tickets will be sold at the door before the performance, and are available at Proffitt's in the Mall and at the College in the Bookstore and the Development Office.

Menotti said of the opera that it is for children, and he has called it "nice to look at, impulsive and warm-hearted."

Amahl will be played by Jason Redwine, and his mother by Cindy Claborn. King Kaspar is John Wright, King Melchoir Jon Allison, and King Balthazar William Delaney. Robert Montgomery plays the page.

The story of "Amahl and the Night Visitors" is the story of a crippled little shepherd named Amahl, who lives with his mother, an impoverished widow. Three Wise Men, on their way to Bethlehem, stop at the hut where Amahl and his mother live, and ask to stay the night.

Amahl and his mother welcome them, and are astonished by the splendor of the Wise Men and the gifts they are taking to a newborn babe. The mother cannot understand why at least some of the gifts are not for her own child, and under cover of darkness she steals some of the gold.

She is caught, but readily forgiven by the Three Kings, who try to explain to her who the newborn child is and how much he needs the love of every human being to build his coming kingdom.

The widow, touched by the story, gives back the gold and wants to add a gift of her own. Amahl comes to her rescue. He impulsively hands the Three Kings his wooden crutch, his most precious possession, and in doing so he is miraculously cured of his lameness.

At the end of the story, Amahl begs to be allowed to join the Three Kings and follows them to Bethlehem.

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

$60.00
PER HUNDRED
PAID

for remailing letters from home! Send self-addressed, stamped envelope for information and application to, Associates, Box 95-B, Roselle, NJ 07203

Review

Moving movie

by John Wright

Movie-goers thrive on films about romantic, passionate love stories. Fantasy overrides the imagination and paints a perfect picture of the ideal man or woman. But what if the ideal man or woman just happened to be deaf? Eh?

Take the most handsome speech therapist and the most beautiful deaf woman, put them together and create an innovative, unforgettable film.

William Hurt plays an accomplished speech teacher who arrives at a boarding school for deaf students and falls in love with Marlee Matlin's character: a highly intelligent, very stubborn graduate of the school who has a lot of growing up to do.

Hurt pushes his teenage students to learn by motivating them through their own interests. He teaches them dance by feeling vibrations and to express emotions by speaking and sometimes yelling.

For the most part, Hurt is successful with his students, until he takes interest in the 25-year-old custodian who refuses to communicate through speech.

Both principal parts appeared extremely difficult to characterize well. It was intriguing to see emotional extremes, such as anger, hurt, and fear be expressed totally through facial expression along with tense, abrupt sign language.

How does a hearing person explain the sound of music to a deaf person and how does a deaf person explain the meaning of true silence to a hearing person?

Through a unique relationship the two find that they need a halfway point. (Figure that one out!)

Again, it was a hard show to pull off. The pace moves slowly because most of the scenes are conversations between the two leads and nearly everything that Matlin signs is spoken by Hurt. This is pretty much balanced though with a continuous desire for "what happens next."

See the film! It's a tear-jerker and quite moving, but expect deception with choices of background music and the newness of seeing deaf actions on the screen -- both things that play heavily on a hearing person's emotions. Then again, what makes a movie?

Heavy metal savior

by Mike Howell

In the realm of popular music, fads come and go. We've seen the rise and fall of passing trends such as psychedelic sounds in the late 60's, disco (yuck!) in the mid-70's, and punk rock in the late 70's - early 80's. While advocates may scream that any of these categories represented important developments in the music world, no one can dispute that each particular genre witnessed an incredible fast ascent in popularity and afterward an equally quick descent because the initial mania faded, leaving only the true-blue fans to carry on. Well, I want to discuss one such trend which a couple of years ago rose to unforseen heights of mainstream popularity and is now a topic of ridicule by many: heavy metal.

Don't get me wrong -- heavy metal has existed in one variant form or another for the past twenty years. When disco was the rage, auditoriums still filled up and sold out with screaming throngs of fans who gathered to hear the thunderons tunes. As the metal mania increased, and certain groups made exorbitant amounts of money, a new influx of "let's-get-rich-quick" rockers decided to give heavy metal a try. Originality took a back seat to greed, and a heavy metal formula soon developed.

Now all one needed to play were gaudy tights, long hair, and three chords. However, the new groups added a new method for success: release watered-down music geared toward mainstream radio consumption and/or target a younger, more impressionable audience.

The rise of bands such as Kiss, Quiet Riot, Def Leppard, Ratt, Twisted Sister, Motley Crue, and W.A.S.P. all rested on "the formula"; the heavy metal "fad" was on. Thus rang the first death knell for the genre.

You see, the formula is antitheses to the heavy metal ideal. Metal is rebellion; metal is chaos. Metal is a musical misfit. "Mainstream heavy metal" is a contradiction in terms. If an authority figure can listen to any part of it, then it's wrong.

If a parent consents to 12 year old Johnny's presence at the concert, it's wrong. Punk rock and true heavy metal are the idiot-bastard twins of music. Both are seemingly senseless, chaotic, rebellions, and low forms of

see METAL pg. 5

Weak geography

by Angie Hoffman

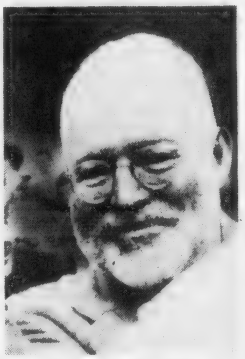
What is the highest point above sea level?

Contrary to the belief of one Maryville college student, it is not "Cheech and Chong's van on a Saturday night."

Recently, Dr. Jett's education 325 class conducted a survey to test the geographical knowledge of Maryville College students and faculty. A random survey of 137 students and faculty was conducted.

The results were unimpressive. Fifty-nine percent of the tested population was unable to identify five pre-specified states while only 29 percent were able to correctly label the capitals of the five states. Fifty-five percent of the population was able to explain the difference between climate and weather.

As for determining the direction North, "licking one's finger and holding it to the wind," "asking an Eskimo," and "following interstate signs" are all very creative ideas; however, it is doubtful that they were learned in an educational classroom setting.



What is the lowest point below sea level? No, it should not be your "self respect" as one student replied. The survey did, however, prove that a gap exists in the learning and retaining of geography among the Maryville College students and faculty.

CINDY SAYS

Hemingway was one tough photo subject

By Cindy Adams

Life magazine recently celebrated 50 years. Photographer Alfred Eisenstadt, now age 88, stood amid his 90 Life covers — Marilyn, Sophia, John F. Kennedy, and the gang — and said his toughest was Ernest Hemingway:

Ernest Hemingway

"Hemingway was naked except for dilapidated shorts. I didn't know what to do. I suggested he put on a shirt. He exploded: 'You crazy? Garbo loved this body. Marlene loved this body. You want me to cover this body?'"

"Hot Pursuit," the Robert Loggia-Jerry Stiller movie, was shooting in Ixtapa, Mexico. When Bob Werden, the unit publicist, reached me in New York, he reported that it was 100 degrees, 100 percent humidity, and they'd recently suffered a killer hurricane. "Oh, how horrible," I said. "Naaah," said Werden. "We had a scene with a storm at sea, so the crew shot right through the hurricane. We were all delighted."

Ronnie and Nancy requisitioned a print of "Marlene," Maximillian Schell's documentary on Dietrich. ... Faye Dunaway, who has been living in England, is moving back to the States. ...Maryan d'Abo, James Bond's new bird, is rapping screen sex and boasting that she's not nude in that Timothy Dalton movie she's doing. That's OK by me. But if anyone's looking to see her in the altogether, sniff around a steamy little video called "Extro." ... Dr. Ruth Westheimer's doing an autobio for Warner's. She's "telling about 90 percent truth" to writer Ben Yagoda.

Glenn Close

At Tristar's screening of "Peggy Sue Got Married," Glenn Close, looking like a star in a stunning black suit, crunched through an economy-size pail of popcorn. ... George Shultz and the Missus attended B'way's "Sweet Charity." The troupe assembled on stage afterward for handshakes and pictures. An AP cameraman rushed forward to record the moment. He had his camera. He forgot his flash. Result? No photos.

Concerto Concert Competition

The annual Concerto Concert competition for the Maryville-Alcoa College-Community Orchestra will be held Dec. 13 on the Maryville College campus. David Hoffecker, conductor of the orchestra, announced the competition in preparation for the Concerto Concert Feb. 24.

The competition is held to give area musicians the opportunity to perform in public with a symphony orchestra. Three winners will be picked by a panel of judges, one each from pre-collegiate, collegiate, and post-collegiate performers.

Each year, the MACCO Concerto Concert provides a showcase for some of the finest musical talent in East Tennessee. The competition is open to all instrumentalists and vocalists.

Instrumentalists should prepare one movement of a concerto or solo piece, and vocalists should prepare one song or aria. All selections must be for solo voice or instrument with orchestral accompaniment.

Applications may be obtained by calling or writing the music department at Maryville College. Winners will be announced Dec. 16.

METAL from pg. 4

entertainment. Both forms hate the other and both evoke strong reactions from the fans.

So is heavy metal going to die because of the FM metal fad? No. A dark savior for the genre exists --"black metal," aka. "death metal" or "thrash metal."

Black metal is a branch of heavy metal run amok to an extreme. The loud, crashing guitar riffs accompany inciting lyrics. It is merciless in its assault on the fans, on its opposition, and on society itself. Black metal ideology attacks cultural cornerstones -- expecially the religious cornerstone of our culture: Christianity.

The imagery of black metal groups are calculated dark, evil, and satanic. Groups such as Mercyful Fate, Slayer, Venom, and King Diamond stand as excellent examples of thriving black metal bands.

What's the purpose of these seemingly undesirable organizations? In a word, rebellion. Rebellion against the herd mentality of the mainstream and direction of rebellious anger toward sterile institutions such as religion or government.

The existence of black metal accomplishes two things: one, invention of a new mythology opposing the old mythologies of Christianity, science, and materialism and thereby balances our society; and two, heavy metal as a genre is taken out of the castrating pretences of mainstream culture and is restored with the original energy it garnered as a deviant from years ago during metal's genesis.

Parents will never consent to young children attending a black metal concert (or rite, if you will). Thus the children will probably want to, but the point is this: the approval is not there. Radio will never play songs from a black metal LP. Potential commercial appeal just does not exist. Therefore, black metal is a dark saviour of a currently "dying" form. The negative energy enervates the metal genre so that it rises, like a modern Lazarus from the tomb of insipidity.

Billy Joel grows up

by Jennifer C. Worth

Billy Joel has grown up. With The Bridge, he proves that a singer and songwriter can grow mature without growing complacent.

This album is the ideal follow-up to Joel's greatest hits package of last year; The Bridge does on one record what Greatest Hits Volume I and II does on two: it recaps Joel's impressive career, recalling the best moods, themes, and styles that he has used over the years.

The Bridge strikes an alluring balance between Joel's last two albums of original material: the social cynicism of 1982's The Nylon Curtain and the almost-maudlin mostalgia of 1983's An Innocent Man. The bitterness is still there; "I'm a statistic in a system/That a civil servant dominates," laments the exciting, high-strung "Running on Ice." But Joel hasn't abandoned sentimentality; in "This is the Time," he croons, "Did you know that before you came into my life/It was some kind of miracle that I survived."

The most interesting aspect of this album is the outside talent that augments Joel's own considerable talent. Steve Winwood jams along on "Getting Closer," adding his organ playing to Joel's piano and synthesizer work. Surprisingly, Cyndi Lauper's distinctive wail is a delightful complement to Joel's lead singing on "Code of Silence."

see JOEL pg. 8

SHORTS

(OCR) -- Marriage and school mix well at Brigham Young U., where 28 percent of the student body is married. Figures from other schools show that only eight percent of students are married. A BYU instructor says students who marry while still in college do better in their studies because they take school more seriously.

(OCR) -- Blood, sweat and tears. People who have overdue parking tickets at West Virginia U. have to pay off their fines with blood donations to the campus blood bank. Violators who weigh less than 110 pounds or have colds or diseases like hepatitis still will have to pay overdue fines with cold hard cash.

(OCR) -- A phone fraud caper at the U. of Florida has been taken off the hook. Police are taking testimony in a case involving 222 UF students and more than $90,000 worth of long-distance calls. they're looking for the student who, using a home computer, discovered the school's long-distance service account number and gave it out to students.

(OCR) -- Dormitory stores can sell prophylactics at Indiana U., but not advertise them. A university center stores committee ruled that it was inappropriate to advertise such a product carried by four of nine dorm stores.

New director named

by Kristi L. Self

Lew Clark Rudisill has recently been named as director of camps and conferences at Maryville College. Her job is new, but her face is familiar to the campus. Prior to her new appointment she worked part-time for Rev. Earl Rash. She is now located in Bartlett Hall.

Rudisill is very excited about her work and has a positive attitude towards the college. She had not planned to work at Maryville, but once she began working for Rev. Rash she said, "I got such a wonderful feeling about the campus, I thoroughly enjoyed being here." This feeling prompted her to apply for her new job.

As director of camps and conferences, Rudisill is responsible for bringing groups not affiliated with the college on campus. This includes everything from church lock-ins to summer camps.

Rudisill is active in community and volunteer work. She is on the board of the Blount County Playhouse, a member of the Passion Play Guild, and a handball player at New Providence Church.

Rudisill's favorite hobby is cooking. She is the owner of Cuisine Art in Maryville. Rudisill said that before she began her work at the college, she spent her time in the daily operations of her business. By cooking, she was able to spend more time with her family. She said, "Being with my daughters is one of the most important things to me." She said her daughters are older now and it's "time she got out in the big world and did something serious."

That "something serious" is her new job at Maryville College. Rudisill said, "It's really exciting. I'm feeling a little overwhelmed right now. Maryville is everthing I hoped it would be and then some.

Rudisill said the hardest part of her job now is trying to figure out who is responsible for what on campus. She is very optimistic about her future here and the future of the college. Rudisill said it is her basic nature to be a "nurturer," and she feels like Maryville College is a nurturing environment. She said, "It seems like a natural to me."

With a large smile and a confident nod Rudisill said, "The college is just ready to open up. I couldn't have chosen a better time to work here if I would have planned it."

Now Accepting

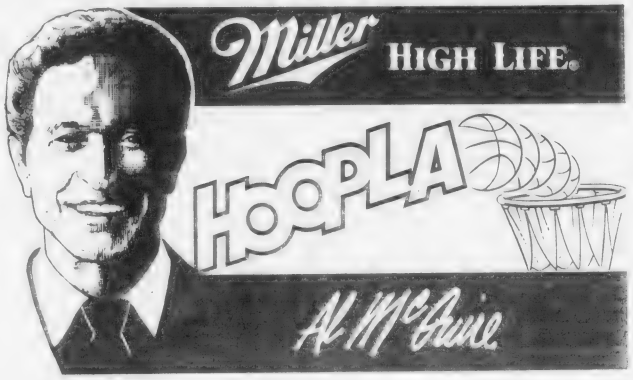
The Echo is now accepting applications for various positions. We do not require a background in reporting, but we do require a desire to succeed, understanding of deadlines, and basic grammatical skills.

Positions include:
- Editor
- Assistant Editor
- Sports Editor
- Entertainment Editor
- Reporters
- Business Manager
- Ad Reps

If you would be interested in meeting this challenge, please send your requests for applications to P.O. Box 2820.

CONNER from pg. 1

here at MC was not on a tenure track, and that he is not in a position to quarrel about matters.



Conner made it clear that he was not exempting himself from criticism. He said, "We are dealing with reasonable people." Conner pointed out that his field of expertise is English literature and 14th century Italian literature. He views teaching his present courses not as obstacles, but as challenges. He said, "I feel well qualified to teach the courses. It's always harder in the first few years, but after teaching these courses for a while, mastery of the material is possible."

In response to other complaints, Conner said that organization is not his strongest point, but he is constantly striving to get organized and that he is getting better organized as time goes by.

Conner feels that student involvement in this matter is important. He said, "I don't want people to get too disturbed - just voice their opinions." He also feels that weight will be placed on the nature and quality of the student input.

Conner stated that the decision for his dismissal was based on what some felt was best for the college, with the students' interest at heart. He said, "I don't think any individual has bad intentions."

After only three years of teaching, some feel that Conner was not given adequate time to polish his teaching skills, others feel that his time here was too lengthy. As Conner said, there is no certain incident or individual to lay blame on. He said, "We are all imperfect creatures in an imperfect world, and if one looks for places to lay blame there would be no shortages anywhere."

by Al McGuire

The leaves are turning up their toes and here we are, ready for another go-round, and I have to say right off the top that hoops, buckets, nets, roundball -- whatever you want to call it -- it's out of sight. Everything is beautiful, and it's going to get better, but:

It's time we stopped whipping that automatic punching bag in Shawnee Mission, the NCAA, and put the blame on the downside problems of college basketball -- and our inability to handle them -- where it really belongs. I'm talking about the problems we have now with recruiting violations, academics, payments under the table, student-athletes who aren't educated -- let's put the blame for all this right where it belongs, in the laps of the presidents of the Division I universities.

Too often, when it comes to something important, university presidents are too content to play Pontius Pilate, washing their hands of whatever comes their way. Or, acting like an ostrich with its head in the sand, or a whale that doesn't come up for a blow quite often enough.

Sad as it may seem, their relationship to college athletics is like that of the bachelor who's dating: He likes the girl on Saturday night, because she's dressed like Astor's pet horse. But come Monday morning, when she has diarrhea and curlers in her hair, he doesn't want to know her. That's how they feel when it comes to college sports.

The truth of the matter is, the president of the university should be where it's at -- like the Oval Office when the red phone rings. He should be the Frank Sinatra, the Lee Iacocca, the Bruce Springsteen. He should be the boss. Whatever happens at the athletic department, the buck should stop at the president's desk. And if they don't realize that, then what are they doing, out walking around the stadium on Saturday afternoons, wearing their ascot?

No university president can expect that he can have automatic alumni meetings every Saturday in the fall and on the weekends in wintertime, without being aware that there are certain yeses and nos that have to be answered. Like the idea that somewhere down the line student-athletes are going to have to receive some type of financial compensation -- even if, by comparison, a migrant worker tips more than the student-athlete is given to live on.

What I'm trying to say to you presidents of the universities is, you don't need the committees. As Harry S. Truman put it, the buck stops at your desk. You can put up as many studies and committees and athletic boards and consultants, with their buffalo chips, and what it still breaks down to is that you're the boss. You're the only one that can say, enough is enough.

I'm going to say it once again: The people who should answer for these problems are not the guys at the NCAA, because they work at the pleasure of the presidents of the universities. The presidents should decide the policies, instead of hiding behind committees or boards that never say anything, that dance in the shadows until the band goes home.

For example: If we claim that we have the best faculties in the world at our universities, then why is it so difficult to educate a person who gets a 650, rather than a 700 on his SAT's? If it's that difficult, then I think we'd better start checking on the ability of our faculty. Or are we there to educate or just to educate the educated?

To sum up, I'd say, college presidents, make decisions. Make 'em even if they are unpopular. It's time for hardball, or college sports is going to lose its credibility throughout the country. Right now, there's a credibility gap in discipline, in the academic end, and perhaps most importantly, on the moral side of things.

Jump in the water. Find out what the real world is like. I know you like to picture yourself as Gregory Peck going after the Great White Whale, but there's more to it than showing up at the parking lot in your best tweed sport coat for the tailgate on Saturdays.

Antiporn laws won't affect UNC

(OCR) -- University students in North Carolina will still be able to take life drawing classes and study erotic art and film, despite the fact that their professors fear prosecution under the state's new anti-pornography law.

Rather than risk committing a felony, some professors have been deleting parts of their courses they feel might be considered pornographic.

However, educational institutions in North Carolina are protected from prosecution for violating the tough anti-porn law, says an attorney for the U. of North Carolina system.

"There are exemptions built into the law and if what is going on is part of an official school function, then it is not a violation of the law," says Betsy Bunting.

At the U. of North Carolina-Greensboro, a film history professor dropped the works of Italian filmmakers Fellini and Bertolucci from his curriculum because he's afraid of being arrested. A communications professor at UNC-G stopped showing a slide show about erotic art and obscenity court cases for his class on First Amendment law.

Under the law, it's a felony for adults to possess pronography in their homes. The law also lets local communities -- not state courts -- define what is obscene, and lets police arrest anyone suspected of disseminating pornography before a judge actually determines whether the material is, in fact, obscene.

Despite the exemptions, educators are still worried that the quality of a student's education may suffer because some controversial subjects might be avoided. These fears, Bunting says, are unjustified.

'Because they're protected from the law, I don't think that anybody would have to change their curriculum," she says. "However, we do have to be careful when it comes to extra-curricular activities. Because they are not official university functions, they might not be protected."

The on-campus showing of X-rated movies may not be protected, she says, because they aren't official university functions.

It's a rocky field

by Kristi L. Self

How would you like to participate in a special activity that the softball team has affectionately dubbed "Rock Day?" Everyone is welcome to join in the festivities.

"Rock Days" are days designated to upgrade the quality of the softball field. On the announced dates, just show up at the softball field wearing old clothes and old shoes.

The actual work at the field entails systematically collecting and placing fragments of consolidated mineral matter into hollow containers, in other words, picking up rocks and putting them in a bucket.

It's really not as bad as it seems. Remember, the improvements made on the softball field reflect on the entire campus. Just think of it as unselfishly donating your time to better the softball program and the Maryville College campus.

THE BACK PAGE

Poet's corner

From where I stand and grimly see
Their painted faces tease and smile
They use poor fools with malefic glee,
Falsely laughing all the while.

--Michael Despayre

Father walks dry
under Mama's tears:
I did not form no clouds -- nor stick my contorted finger into her epicenter

How come Father is dry and we are wet
under Mama's rain of tears?

Rethabile Masilo

JOEL from pg. 6

The LP's most intriguing combination is Joel's duet with his idol, Ray Charles. The pair growls out an appealing, "bluesy" ode to "Baby Grand," destined to become a piano man's standard.

"Big Man on Mulberry Street," slated to be featured in an upcoming episode of Moonlighting, is the best cut on the album. This piece is by turns mellow and rousing. It showcases Joel's elastic vocal range and imaginative scoring; he elaborately contrasts his energetic piano with a swinging horn section.

There's something for everyone within the grooves of The Bridge: from the grinding rocking beat of "Matter of Trust" to the popsy "Modern Woman" to the melancholy romance of "Temptation." Throughout the album, Joel's keyboard prowess, his moody vocals, and above all the poetic characters created by his evocative lyrics pervade the varied styles he uses.

On The Bridge's last track, "Getting Closer," Joel sings, "While I must live up to my contracts/I did not give up my dreams." Indeed, he has done both with The Bridge; it is one of those rare albums that is both commercially appealing and artistically satisfying.

Announcements

Makeup class pictures will be taken Monday, December 8 in the CCM. There is no charge to have your picture taken for the yearbook, but if you wish, you may purchase packages of pictures from Graham's studio. If you fail to show up to have your picture taken on this date, your ID picture will be used in the 1987 edition of the Chilhowean.

Campus Events

Thursday, Dec. 4
11 am -- CIV. Elaine Vuyosevich on "Ethical Issues in Organ Transplantation." FAC Music Hall.
12:30 pm -- ACC meeting. PDR.

Friday, Dec. 5
7 pm -- Women's Basketball with Fisk University. Away.
7:30 pm -- Men's Basketball with Eastern Mennonite. At MC.

Saturday, Dec. 6
2 pm -- Men's JV Basketball with Roane State. At MC.
8:15 pm -- "Amahl and the Night Visitors." Wilson Chapel.
9 pm -- Dance: Royal Court of China. Lloyd Hall.

Sunday, Dec. 7
1 pm -- Men's JV Basketball with Centre College. Away.
3 pm -- Men's Basketball with Centre College. Away.
3 pm -- "Amahl and the Night Visitors." Wilson Chapel.
8 pm -- Movie: "Country." Issac's (Student Center).

Monday, Dec. 8
5:30 pm -- Christmas Dinner. Pearsons.

Tuesday, Dec. 9
10:20 am -- Weekly Worship. CCM.
11 am -- CIV. Charles A. Howell, Tennessee Commissioner of Conservation, "In Search of the Quality of Life." FAC Music Hall.
7 pm -- Student Recital. FAC Music Hall.
7:30 pm -- FCA meeting. CCM.

Wednesday, Dec. 10
Last day of regular class meetings.
7 pm -- Women's Basketball with Tennessee Wesleyan. At MC.
7:30 pm -- Men's Basketball with Emory and Henry. Away.
8 pm -- Movie: "Bounty." Issac's (Student Center).

Thursday, Dec. 11
Review Day. No classes.
12:30 pm -- Faculty meeting. PDR.
4 pm -- Humanities Discussion Circle. Dr. Charlotte Beck leading the discussion. Faculty Lounge, Fayerweather.
8:15 pm -- MC Concert Choir Christmas Concert, "Festival or Carols."

Friday, Dec. 12
9 am -- A-Hour Exams.
1:30 pm -- B-Hour Exams.
8:15 pm -- Senior Voice Recital.

Monday, Dec. 8
9 am C Hour Exams
1:30 pm D Hour Exams

Tuesday, Dec. 9
9 am E Hour Exams
1:30 pm F Hour Exams

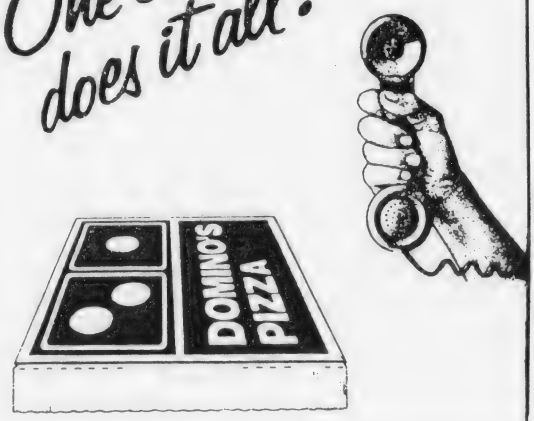
Wednesday, Dec. 10
9 am I Hour Exams
1:30 pm G Hour Exams

SIGN UP WITH US, AND WE'LL SIGN OFF ON YOUR LOAN.

Just because you graduated from college doesn't mean you have to graduate into debt. Erase your college debt with the Army's Loan Repayment Program.

Each year you serve as a soldier, the Army will reduce your college debt by 1/3 or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. So after serving just 3 years, your college loan will be completely paid off.

You're eligible for this program with a National Direct Student Loan, or a Guaranteed Student Loan, or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975. And the loan can't be in default.



And just because you've left college, don't think you'll stop learning in the Army. Our skill training offers a wealth of valuable high-tech, career-oriented skills. So sign up. And watch us sign off. Find out more by calling your local Army Recruiter.

Sgt. Findley

982-5515

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

One call does it all!™

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE!

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

Coke® 16oz.

$1

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 12-30-86

Fast, Free Delivery™
407 W. Broadway
983-0000

ENTERTAINMENT
Rehearsals for The Lark

NEWS
Carnegie is unsafe

SPORTS
Cager's season winds down

Highland Echo

Vol.72 No. 7 | Maryville College | Friday, February, 13, 1987

Should MC review smoking policy?

by Kristi Self

The issue of smokers and "second hand smoke" has been the target of much controversy since Surgeon General C. Everett Koop issued a warning declaring "second hand smoke" as hazardous as the smoke inhaled directly by the smoker.

What this amounts to is that a particular group (smokers) literally holds everyone's health in their hands. Each cigarette they light subjects non-smokers to lung pollution.

Suprisingly little has been done to protect the rights of non-smokers. Nationally, the General Services Administration (GSA), which regulates several buildings, banned smoking in those buildings in open office spaces, auditoriums, classrooms, conference rooms, elevators, lobbies, stairways, medical facilities, libraries, and where hazaradous material is stored. Those limitations apply to all employees, customers, and visitors. The world's largest office building, the Pentagon, only allows smoking in one designated restroom for each sex. These restrictions went into effect in December 1986.

The state of Tennessee has not been as effective in limiting smoking areas. Senator Steve Cohen from Memphis has tried to pass legislation dealing with smoking restrictions. Last year he proposed banning smoking in retail stores and health facilities. The bill was amended to apply only to hospitals, but still failed during voting.

Cohen said the bill failed because of the large tobacco lobby in Tennessee. Since Tennessee is a major producer of burley tobacco, the Tennessee Farm Bureau and tobacco company representatives are very influential with many senators. Cohen plans to introduce a bill this year restricting smoking in hospitals. He wants the bill to include other public places but feels that it stands a better chance of passing if the affected areas are limited.

Currently, 17 states have passed legislation restricting smoking areas. Tennessee and seven other states have proposed legislation this year to change their smoking regulations.

What does all of this mean to Maryville College students? Simple. Maryville College, like places all over the nation, is rethinking its smoking policies and non-smokers are expressing great concern over the issue of "second hand smoke."

scc pg. 6

Ash Jackson

Some MC commuters must face the Buck Karnes Bridge, which spans the Tennessee River at Knoxville. A local group wants to improve safety conditions on the bridge and on Alcoa Hwy.

Group seeks Alcoa Hwy. safety

by Kim Spargo

On Friday, January 30, 22 members of the MASH (Make Alcoa a Safe Highway) group lit over 3,000 candles along Alcoa Highway from the Buck Karnes Bridge to the airport. Fifty-six volunteers from MASH helped to place the candles. The candlelight vigil was part of MASH's "Slow Down and Live" campaign.

Truett Lindner, MASH chairman, said the group was started last April in an attempt to do something about the unsafe conditions of the highway, including travelers' speed, access ramps, and the Buck Karnes Bridge.

Lindner said the Metropolitan Planning Commission (MPC) heard some of the MASH proposals in May of '86. Lindner said that one of the key issues is "a functional design plan that everybody can agree on to negotiate the highway safely."

Futhermore, Lindner said that the state requires that MASH conduct two community meetings in Blount and Knox county during the '87 year. Lindner explained that the meetings will help to answer questions and concerns and listen to suggestions of members from the two communities. MASH is aware, Lindner continued, "that there are a lot of people to satisfy . . . commuters, property owners, and business people."

Some unsatisfied people emerged after the distribution of a bumper sticker reading "Alcoa Highway Kills." Lindner said that "there have been several people that jumped on me about that one [the sticker]."

So far, however,

scc pg. 6

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Give us fresh air on campus

Over the past two years, Maryville College has made the right step in regards to smoking on campus. Anderson Hall and Thaw Hall are both posted with no smoking signs. For non-smokers this has been a welcome breath of fresh air.

But why stop with only two buildings when the problem of smokers' versus non-smokers' rights continues in other buildings, especially in the Fayerweather student center? What is happening in Fayerweather is that the smokers, who constitute the minority, are asserting their rights to smoke at the expense of the majority, or the non-smokers.

Recently released studies have stated that second-hand tobacco smoke is as potentially harmful as first-hand smoke. Of course smokers are often quick to dispute such studies, but the simple fact is that smoking is a health hazard.

We cannot deny that every individual has rights and these rights include smoking, but rights are not without limits. When one individual's rights infringe upon or diminish another's rights, then it only makes sense that some parameters be set.

Maryville College has the power to set these parameters, in regards to smoking on campus, and we urge the administration excersize this power. Idealistically, the College should ban smoking in every building on campus. But for now, there can be no better place to begin than in the student center where, at the very least, the College should designate the television room as a non-smoking area. There can be no better time to begin than right now.

As far as smoking on campus goes, the smokers have infringed upon the rights of nonsmokers, mainly the right to breath semi-fresh air, for too long. It is time that non-smokers begin to assert their rights.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Entertainment Editor — Heidi Weiffenbach
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Layout Editor — Jes Kane
Typsetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers — Kristi Self
Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth, Matt Wayland, Jonathan Yarboro

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

Student finds attitudes toward science unfair

Yesterday I listened to a group of students discussing the validity of the general science component of the core curriculum. They felt the requirement was quite unfair. Science was of no importance in their daily lives and that indeed, the time could be better spent rounding out their knowledge of the humanities and arts. Therefore its study should be left to the one-dimensional scientists. I find this attitude unfair.

I do not debate the importance of a study of literature, philosophy, history, art, music and all the other branches of human creativity and endeavor which fall under the umbrella of the humanities. As we are products of our culture, the value of the study of the roots and development of our ethos is undeniable.

The examination of the works of great thinkers who have contributed to the stream of Western thought grants insight into our own personal beliefs. Our perception of our place in the universe is firmly rooted in the past. However, we must not seek to eliminate a powerful influence on our cultural ethos with a selective blindness just because it does not fit neatly into the paradigm of the humanities.

In the 18th century a trend toward the self-discovery of truth began. Out of this breaking away from the absolute truth dictated by the church, came the methodology of modern scientific inquiry. Ideas which have reconstructed our view of the universe were advanced. We are products of these new perceptions. We can no more deny the implications of modern cosmology than we can return to the Ptolemic model of nesting heavenly spheres.

The ideas and their implications are products of the methods of scientific inquiry. An understanding of the process of science is vital for a well-rounded person. Blindness to the scientific process, prevents the full understanding of our culture's current perception of the individual and his place in the universe.

I understand it is human nature to consider unimportant that which confuses one or is difficult. I, personally, would just as soon never study history; however, I can not deny it's importance. I may choose blindness, but I can not claim to see.

Meg Fraelich

Hoodlum action

Dear sir,

Last night my wife and I attended a basketball game at Maryville College when they played Bridgewater. The game was enjoyable and both teams displayed a high level of sportsmanship. I would like to call to your attention an incident that appeared to be a ritual at the ball games but in our opinion was one of the worst examples of poor sportsmanship that we have ever observed. Before the game, several benches were located near the sideline in front of the bleachers even though there was plenty of seating capacity in the bleachers. Apparently, the purpose of this bench placement was to provide a special cheering section for about 15 - 20 boys. Unfortunately, several in the group had a special mission to continously heckle the visiting team and coaches in a manner that did not represent Maryville College in a favorable manner. I was at a loss to understand how College officials would permit this type of conduct. Perhaps there was no one present with sufficient authority to prevent this type of hoodlum action.

Since I felt this was a reflection on the reputation of Maryville College, I wanted to bring it to your attention.

Sincerely,
JR Barkman

Carnegie: danger for intruders

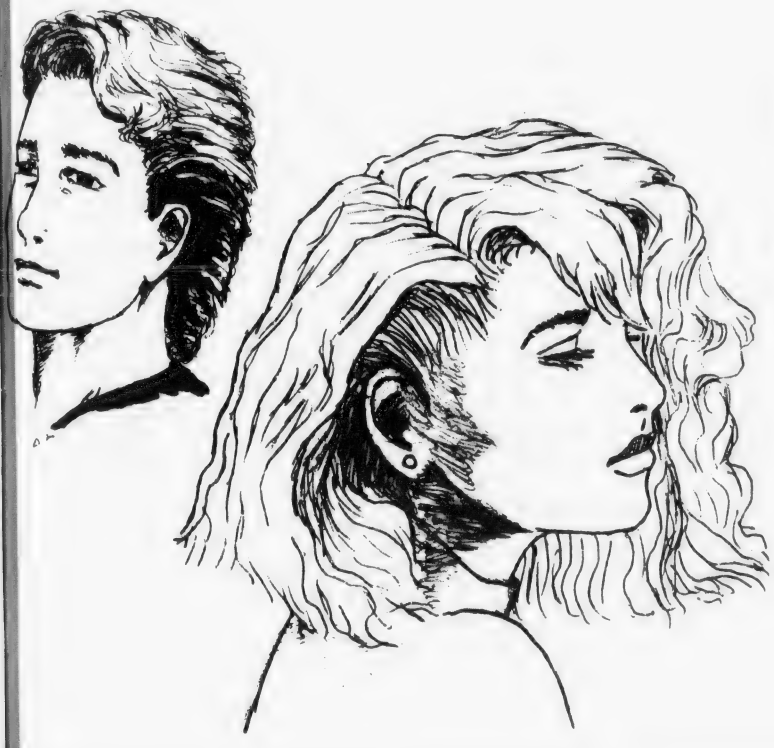
by Jennifer C. Worth

Carnegie Hall is unsafe. That's the have no alternative because of the safety factor. Anyone will be prosecuted no exemptions."

windows. Its location away from the center of campus activity makes it an enticing target for vandals, who according to Hurst, are "probably community people, maybe accompanied by students." Downey said that vandalism has decreased recently, possibly because off the windows being boarded and the stringent security measures.

What are these measures? All the doors are locked and marked with red and white warning signs. Furthermore, the security force checks the building every night to make sure that the doors and windows remain secured. These meausres are intended to keep potential trespassers away. Said Downey, "We feel good about the precautions we have taken."

Carnegie's condition may someday change, because a college task force, chaired by Downey, is investigating the situation. Hurst said, "I'm optimistic that something will be done." But for now, Carnegie is a hazard: trespassers will endanger their safety and risk acquiring a criminal record.



oblem

said, "The interior is in bad shape, but the exterior looks good."

Currently, Carnegie is the only building on campus not being used, but Dr. Ebersole expects a recommendation from the task force in the very near future. Downey said, "There's not a lot to say until we make a recommendation."

In the meantime, Carnegie will continue to sit on the corner of the campus, waiting to be a functional part of Maryville College once again.

Enter the Future with Style

Student Discount

983-5209

$2.00 off Haircut & Style

Ladies . . . . . reg. $16.00
Men . . . . . reg. $10.00

the HAIR DESIGNERS
Midland Shopping Center • Alcoa, Tennessee 37701 • 615/983-5209

Offer good with stylists: Andrea Buchanon
Melissa Mathis
Debbie Brimer

Bring this ad. Offer expires March 31, 1987.

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Give us fresh air on camp

Over the past two years, M
the right step in regards to smoki
Hall and Thaw Hall are both post
For non-smokers this has been a air.

But why stop with only problem of smokers' versus non-s other buildings, especially in center? What is happening in smokers, who constitute the mi rights to smoke at the expense of smokers.

Recently released studies hand tobacco smoke is as potent smoke. Of course smokers are studies, but the simple fact is hazard.

We cannot deny that ever these rights include smoking, b limits. When one individual's diminish another's rights, then some parameters be set.

Maryville College has parameters, in regards to smokin the administration excersize this College should ban smoking in But for now, there can be no be the student center where, at th should designate the television ro
There can be no better time to be
As far as smoking on have infringed upon the rights right to breath semi-fresh air, fo non-smokers begin to assert their

Highlan

Editor
Assistant Editor
Entertainment Editor
Photo Advisor
Layout Editor
Typsetter
Business Manager
Advisor

Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas
Jennifer Worth, Matt Wayland, Jonathan Y

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters news material is 8pm Sunday. Please add box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

Carnegie: danger for intruders

J. Worth

Carnegie shows a battered face after being empty for five years.

by Jennifer C. Worth

Carnegie Hall is unsafe. That's the message from MC officials, and they will prosecute those who disregard the warning.

If someone -- student or community member -- is found inside Carnegie, the College will press charges. In the past, several people have been prosecuted and convicted of trespassing or of the more serious charge of breaking and entering. Although "breaking and entering" involves a forced entry, trespassing is a criminal charge that includes mere presence on the premises. Anyone caught inside Carnegie, without the administration's express, special permission, faces arrest for trespassing -- even if he or she walked in through an open door. A conviction will follow an offender for life, remaining on his or her record.

The penalty may sound severe, but Security Chief Eldria Hurst stressed that these measures are "for the students' protection -- the building is unsafe." He said, "We would regret having to prosecute anyone we find in the building, but we have no alternative because of the safety factor. Anyone will be prosecuted -- no exemptions."

Carnegie's safety problems are caused partly by the elements and partly by vandals. Hurst pointed out that any empty building is subject to severe weathering. Carnegie's five years as a vacant building have caused such problems as loose plaster, which could fall from the ceiling. The building has not undergone a major renovation in almost ten years, and Hurst said that most of the work on Carnegie over the past few years has consisted of boarding up windows and tearing away the hazardous front porch.

The main problem, according to Administrative Vice President Sid Downey, is the fire hazard caused by the rubble inside and the general state of disrepair. Downey said, "I won't go in there myself." Hurst added that because the building's electricity is turned off and the boarded windows, Carnegie's interior is very dark, increasing the risk of getting injured inside.

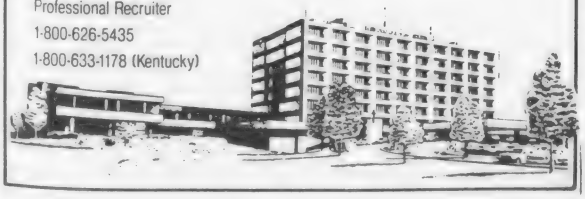
Vandalism to Carnegie has mainly been in the form of broken windows. Its location away from the center of campus activity makes it an enticing target for vandals, who according to Hurst, are "probably community people, maybe accompanied by students." Downey said that vandalism has decreased recently, possibly because off the windows being boarded and the stringent security measures.

What are these measures? All the doors are locked and marked with red and white warning signs. Furthermore, the security force checks the building every night to make sure that the doors and windows remain secured. These meausres are intended to keep potential trespassers away. Said Downey, "We feel good about the precautions we have taken."

Carnegie's condition may someday change, because a college task force, chaired by Downey, is investigating the situation. Hurst said, "I'm optimistic that something will be done." But for now, Carnegie is a hazard: trespassers will endanger their safety and risk acquiring a criminal record.

We care

- about our patients
- about the family
- about our employees
- about our community
- about providing progressive, conscientious health services



We are looking for

- Registered Nurses
- Occupational Therapists
- Physical Therapists

To be a member of Our Team and share Our Spirit, the Spirit of . . .

LOURDES HOSPITAL 1530 Lone Oak Road Paducah, KY 42001

For more information regarding positions available, contact:
George Booker
Professional Recruiter
1-800-626-5435
1-800-633-1178 (Kentucky)

Task force explores problem

by Kristi L. Self

Carnegie Hall has been closed since the summer of 1982, but Interim-President Mark Ebersole has formed a special task force to study the building and to submit a proposal for its future usage.

Built in 1910 as a men's dormitory, Carnegie has been an important part of many Maryville College students' lives. It was destroyed by fire in 1916, but through insurance and a city-wide fund raising drive, it was rebuilt -- twice its former size. The building's 40,000 square feet are spread over four stories and a basement. Currently, Carnegie is only being used as a storage facility.

Task force Chairman Sid Downey, said that no definite plans have been made yet. The task force is comprised of administrators, faculty, staff, and one student. Their job is to assess the building and make recommendations for its usage.

After three meetings, the task force has explored the building and "brain-stormed" ideas. Some ideas were a conference center, a dormitory, a retirement home, classroom space, and office space. Downey said, "The interior is in bad shape, but the exterior looks good."

Currently, Carnegie is the only building on campus not being used, but Dr. Ebersole expects a recommendation from the task force in the very near future. Downey said, "There's not a lot to say until we make a recommendation."

In the meantime, Carnegie will continue to sit on the corner of the campus, waiting to be a functional part of Maryville College once again.

Why celebrate Valentine's Day?

by Lynn Smith

St. Valentine's Day, which is referred to as the most romantic day of the year, will arrive this Saturday, February 14th. Loved ones exchange tokens of this day, which express their feelings towards one another. However, few people realize the true reasons for celebrating this custom.

There are several legends concerning the origin of St. Valentine's Day. Two of the more popular beliefs stem from stories of Christian martyrs. Two Saints named Valentine are mentioned in these histories. In the second half of the third century, both of these men suffered martyrdom.

One St. Valentine was supposedly a priest in Rome. He is described as being very faithful in his beliefs, even during the Claudian persecutions. Because of his strong beliefs, he was thrown in jail where he performed the miracle of enabling the jailkeeper's blind daughter to see. When the people learned of this miracle, the saint was beaten with clubs and then beheaded. His remains are preserved in the Church of St. Praredes in Rome. There a gate was named in his honor, Porta Valentine, or Valentine's gate. The gate is now known as Porta Del Popolo (gate of the people).

The other St. Valentine was the Bishop of Interamna, who healed Craton the Rhetorician's son, and was choked to death by a fish bone.

English literature has played an important part in keeping Valentine's Day a tradition. Shakespeare, Drayton, Gay, and Chaucer are among those who make references to February 14th as being sacred to lovers. Europeans during the Middle Ages believed that birds began to mate on February 14th.

Some believe that Valentine's Day derived from the similarity between the Norman Word, Galatin, meaning a lover of women, and the name of the saint. According to Norman linguistics, the letter "G" was pronounced as a "V," hence the modern day Valentine's Day.

An ancient practice at Roman feasts may be reason for celebrating February 14th. This feast known as "lupercalia," held the night before February 14th, involved placing names of young women in a box. These names were randomly drawn and an arrangement would be made with the young man who drew her name. The man became the woman's escourt for the next year, or at least for the festival.

Playhouse casts The Lark

by Jennifer C. Worth

"But every once in a while a lark does appear in your sky and then everything stupid and evil is wiped out by the shadow of the lark;" an Englishman, Warwick, thus describes Joan of Arc, the title character in the MC Playhouse's spring production of The Lark, written by Jean Anovilh and adapted, in English, by Lillian Hellman.

The Lark is a dramatic, yet fact-based account of Joan of Arc's long trial and subsequent condemnation in the early fifteenth century. Many of the characters are people from her short, eventful life, who appear in flashbacks throughout the play.

The stuff of myth and legend is found in The Lark, for the play is not another stale retelling of this familiar story of the young martyr. Nor is it a dry historical biography of a medieval saint. Instead, it is an exciting play with fascinating characters.

Heidi Weiffenbach will bring the Lark to life. The role of Joan is a meaty one, but demanding as well, since she appears in virtually every scene of the play.

Playing the officials at Joan's trial will be Dan Reynolds as Warwick, Joe Chamberlain as Cauchon, Jennifer C. Worth as the Mother Superior (an adaption from the promoter in the original script), Mike Howell as the Inquisitor, Joey Young as Ladveny, and Jeff Whitt as the Executioner.

Playing Joan's family will be Ed Neary as her callous father and Cindy Clayborn as the mother who cannot understand her daughter's conviction. Jeff Whitt will play Robert de Beaucdricourt, the garrison commander who helped to start Joan's military career.

Playing the members of the declining court of France will be Donna Sue Hadden as the Little Queen; Julie Marshall as Agnes, the king's mistress; Jeff Wallace as Charles the "Dauphin;" or future king, of France (later crowned as Charles VII); Laura Starkey as Yolande, the king's mother-in-law; Jonathan Yarboro as La Tremouille, the commander of Charles' weakened army; and Jeff Hollar as the archbishop. Jonathon Yarboro will also portray La Hire, Joan's faithful general.

The show will open on Friday, April 17.

J.Worth

Four students from Japan display their native dress, kimonos. MC exchange students shared their culture at the International Dinner, held on February 7, in Proffitt Dining Room.

Morningside Inn blossoms

by Kimberly D. Spargo

Soothing music and the spicy smell of carrot cake often welcome the visitor to Morningside Inn, the restaurant nestled in the Maryville College woods. Operated by MC graduates Tom and Nan Taylor, the restaurant opened in September of 1985, when it was leased to the Taylors by the College.

Pink and green wallpaper, with horns of plenty and strings of bouquets, adorns the archways that help to acceuntuate the airy atmosphere of the restaurant. Card tables are garnished with cheerfully colored note pads and bright green matchbooks. Numerous glass windows and doors invite the sunshine that spills onto kelly-green tablecloths and hard-wood floors.

Nan Taylor said that during August of 1985, the restaurant was opened on a trial-run basis. Taylor said, "We wanted to have a nice, relaxing restaurant in Blount County." The

see pg. 5

Foothills Cinema spoils movie fun

by Jennifer C. Worth

In the beginning, there were single-screen movie theatres, meticulously designed and decorated. Then came drive-ins, with neon and playgrounds. Then, slowly, a new breed of cinemas emerged: the multi-screen complexes that sprawl across the landscapes like shopping malls.

Maryville's contribution to the trend is the four-screen Foothills Cinema, located in the Foothills Plaza. The cinema obtains popular movies, some of them on their opening dates. However, there are drawbacks that detract from moviegoing pleasure.

Most noticeable, the decor fails to please. The lobby is crisply uninviting, no doubt in the interests of modern efficiency and economy.

But while the lobby is merely stark and bland, the cinemas themselves are the stuff of an interior decorator's nightmares. Brown and dark orange carpet view with bright orange floors. The real shock is on the walls, which are draped with fabric that looks as if it came from a factory reject salvage auction. Each cinema has its own curtains, eyesores all. The tackiest of the curtains are festooned with a pattern of green, brown, and orange trees. Luckily, the lights are off most of the time.

But when the lights go out, there is another problem: Foothills's copies of the movies are often overused, sprinkled with specks, blots, and faint lines. Also, the walls sometimes allow sounds to filter between neighboring cinemas.

The theatre does boast some special features, like the cupholders between alternate seats and "Movie Monday", when matinee admission is $1.04 and evening admission is $2.04 (but some Knoxville theatres, such as the Terrace Tap offer competitive prices all week long)..

Keith Moore

Al Hipkins, Brett Mize, and Nathan McIntyre enjoy the benefits of being seniors. The traditional Hundred Days Celebration was held February 7, in Willard House.

Black Ballet Jazz to perform

The Optimist Club of Mechanicsville-Lonsdale and the Carpetbag Theatre are having a benefit performance by the sensational Black Ballet Jazz of Los Angeles. Alex Haley and Lyn Overholt are honorary co-chairmen of the event. Knoxville is the first stop on their 1987 tour for this young vibrant dance group. They perform a history of black dance in America in their foot stomping, tap dancing revue of dance from New Orleans' Congo Square through the Cotton Club era to today's Broadway and Hollywood.

Black Ballet Jazz is the talk of the dance world and their artistic director, Chester Whitmore, is considered a tap dancing phenomenon. Whtimore has choreographed dances to the jazz classics of Scott Joplin, Jelly Roll Morton, Earl "Fatha" Hines and Duke Ellington. With dazzling display of fancy footwork, Whitmore's solo turns evoke the stylistic feats of Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, John Bubbles, the Choclateers and the unforgettable Nicholas Brothers.

On their most recent world tour, this fabulous dance troupe represented the United States in the Bulgarian Dance Festival at Sofia and Varna in Yougoslavia at Belgrade and Kjubljana. They have danced before thousands of cheering spectators in ten Italian cities from Milan to Reggio Calabria. In the Far East, they have performed in Kowloon and Hong Kong where tickets to the show were sold on the black market for $100.00 each.

This exciting dance company has been endorsed for excellence by the National Endowment for the Arts and have been appointed official goodwill cultural ambassadors by the Mayor of the City of Los Angeles.

In addition to tap dance star, Chester Whitmore, the multi-talented Trina Parks, world celebrated jazz singer, will be featured. She is a singer, dancer, choreographer and actress. Trina has appeared in films with such celebrities as Dan Ackroyd and John Belushi in the Blues Brothers. Other movie credits include the James Bond movie, Diamonds Are Forever, and Beyond the Valley of the Dolls. She has appeared at Lake Tahoe with Sammy Davis, Jr. and on television with Dean Martin, Dionne Warwick and Telly Savalas.

The performance will be held in the beautiful Tennessee Theatre on Friday, March 27 at 8:00 pm. Patron tickets are now on sale from members of the Optimist Club of Mechanicsville-Lonsdale and the Carpetbag Theatre. Reserved tickets are $15.00, $12.50 and $10.00. An additional $25.00 donation enables the individual to attend the Patron Cocktail Party in the upstairs lobby of the Tennessee Theatre immediately preceding the performance. Proceeds from this event will benefit the Optimist Adopt-a-Student program and the artistic endeavors of the Carpetbag Theatre. Advance tickets may be purchased or information obtained by writing the Optimist Club of Mechanicsville-Lonsdale, P O Box 6115, Knoxville, TN 37914.

INN from pg. 4

atmosphere, Taylor said, "is lovely. The food is original, no deep fat or fried dishes, and everything is hand prepared."

Taylor explained that their basic goal at the restaurant is to provide "good tasting, wholesome food that is attractively arranged on the plate." Some of the desserts include Chocolate Sin, Lemon Squares, Pumpkin Cheesecake and Carrot Cake.

Taylor said that most people have the idea that the restaurant is expensive. The highest priced meal at lunch, however, is $5.25 and dinner ranges from $8.95 to $13.95 for a cut of filet mignon, Taylor said. The entrees also include veal. Taylor said Morningside provides entrees that are not readily available in Blount County.

Taylor stressed that visitors to the restaurant are welcome to bring their own wine or liquor to add to their enjoyment of the meal.

Currently, MC graduate Trent Gilmore provides piano dinner music for the restaurant along with other members of the staff who occasionally play.

Currently, Morningside Inn is open for lunch from 11:00 - 2:00, Monday through Friday, and for dinner from 5:00 - 9:00, Thursday through Saturday evenings.

MC takes awards at model UN

by Lynn King

"We had a great time!"

"You make so many friends."

"It was so much fun; I loved it!"

Could this really be a school-sanctioned educational endeavor carrying college credit? Yes, if it's the Model United Nations experience.

From Dr. Young-Bae Kim's Model United Nations Interim to the Maryville College Model United Nations Security Council (MCMUNSC) to the Southeastern Invitational Model United Nations (SIMUN) at Auburn University, students agree that the UN adventure is one not to miss.

For the fourth year in a row, the Maryville College delegation returned from Auburn victorious. Competing against fourteen other colleges, MC delegates won two of three possible first place awards in both the Superpower and Third World Countries categories. Students representing China, Ethiopia, and Angola were Lori Bergwerk, Darrell Franklin, DeAnn Hargis, Joe Johnson, Steve Katz, Amy McLeod, Kristi Self, Rod Shore, Jeff Whitt, and Denise Wilson.

Why is winning at SIMUN an MC tradition? "We do well because we are prepared; everybody who goes is just so enthusiastic, so fired up about it!" said sophomore Kristi Self, who has gone to Auburn for one year. "We're more vocal than any other group. We know the material."

Self said that because of this enthusiasm, there is really little competition for MC at Auburn. "A real challenge would be to go to the Model UN in New York, but we're unable to because of funds."

"We're known down there as winners. We take it seriously," said junior DeAnn Hargis, who has competed at SIMUN for three years and was instrumental in the development of the MCMUNSC.

"Certainly the interim class helps," Dr. Kim explains, adding, "Commitment is quite important. We have to defend our championship," as MC has won at Auburn every year since 1984. Dr. Kim feels that the quality of students has a lot to do with MC's successful record. His final word on the subject: "I believe we have better students than other universities!"

The Maryville College Mountain Challenge Program will provide a rock climbing opportunity for both experienced and inexperienced climbers on Saturday, February 21, 1987. We will leave Maryville College at 8:30 a.m. for Wesley Woods Camp in Townsend and return before dinner that evening. The cost for this trip is a nominal fee of $15.00 which covers transportation, lunch, equipment, and all day on the rock.

The group will have to be limited to eight persons, so please sign up in the Office of Student Affairs as soon as possible if you are interested. Your $15.00 fee will have to be paid when you sign up.

If the weather is bad, we will not be able to go. Of course, if this happens, all fees will be fully refunded.

If you have questions, see Bruce Guillaume in the Institute for Lifestyle Development.

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

YOUNG LIFE
IS LOOKING FOR LEADERS

If interested, call 983-4150
between 5-9 p.m.

HIGHWAY from pg. 1

Lindner feels that "Blount County has done a much better job with zoning than Knox County."

As for current efforts in improvements of the highway, Alcoa mayor Don Mull said that "we in the city are getting two radar controlled cruisers to help monitor Alcoa Highway." Mull explained that the cruisers will be used city-wide, but that their primary concern will be the monitoring of the highway traffic.

Currently, Mull said that "there has been a lot more surveillance by Highway Patrol over the last several months."

Furthermore, Lindner said that "I understand the bridge [Buck Karnes] has been okayed and maybe even some construction work will begin before too long."

"When you get right down to the life-threatening aspects of the highway," Lindner said, "you're talking several million dollars." But Lindner said he has lived near the highway long enough to realize that something needs to be done.

SMOKING from pg. 1

current standards seem to be acceptable to them.

The area most affected by the smoking issue is Isaac's. It has become a haven for smokers, and many non-smokers are greatly disturbed by this.

Upon entering Isaac's, one immediately notices the smoke spreading across the small room. It not only directly irritates the non-smokers, it is all around the food.

Non-smokers are beginning to strongly voice their opinion. Jeff Liebert said, "Smokers shouldn't be around the food places; they need to be confined to a place where they can smoke and not bother others." He also said, "People who smoke in food establishments are endangering other people's lives." DeAnn Hargis said, "They are forcing their smoke on you; you can't get away from it."

The only way to escape the smoke is to leave, but why should non-smokers have to run off? Because of someone else's dangerous habit, they are unable to eat their meals, or even watch a movie without being affected by the smoke.

Other students, like Charlie Gumula, are concerned with the smoke as well as actual physical damage caused by cigaretts such as dirty ashtrays and burns in the tables, chairs, and carpet. Gumula said, "Smoking should be done in the privacy of one's room where no one else is affected." Smokers have their rooms and offices where they can exercise their smoking habits, or they can always go outside. "They should Business Manager Donna Davis said that the only places on campus where non-smoking is strickly enforced are Thaw Hall, Anderson Hall and the Margaret Ware Dining Room. Thaw and Anderson are historical buildings and made almost entirely of wood. Safety hazards dictate the need for non-smoking. There is not supposed to be smoking in classrooms either. Davis said that smoking in dormitory rooms and the lobbies is allowed. The residents set the standards and the keep their disgusting habits to themselves," said Liebert. The snack bar is not a sanctuary for smoke.

Smokers are now the minority of students. In the past the general concept of majority rules was praticed, but that is no longer the case. Now, a few smokers are making choices for the larger group of non-smokers.

Many people are opposed to smoking in the snack bar, but they realize the smoker's options are limited. Chris Herbert is strongly opposed to smoking. He said, "Smokers ought to be lined up against a wall and shot," but he sympathizes with them and said, "I would hate to see no smoking in the snack bar because its really the only place they have to go."

There are few measures that can be taken in Issac's to prevent smoke from reaching everyone. Fans could be installed, non-smoking sections could be formed, or a total lean on smoking could be inacted.

Nancy Phillips, a smoker, said banning smoking would be an "inconvenience, but understandable."

Scott Fletcher shines in this game with Warren-Wilson. Leigh Emery Scots prepare for post-season play

by Don Dove

With less than three weeks of the regular season remaining, the men's basketball team is preparing for what promises to be a difficult task, attempting to win a tournament in Roanoke's own Salem Civic Center, where Roanoke stands at 18 - 0 in post-season play.

The Scots have been struggling lately, losing a couple of very close games this last week to conference foes Emory & Henry and Bridgewater. Against Bridgewater last Friday night, Pat Heldman's last second shot was too long as the Scots fell by a single point.

On Tuesday, a phenomenal performance by E & H's Kevin Brown (30 points) was capped off with a last second tip-in which gave E & H a 79-77 victory.

Coach Randy Lambert remains optimistic, however, pointing out that despite the Scots' record (4-6 ODAC, 7-12 overall), they have shown that they "can play with anybody in the league."

Although it will be difficult, Coach Lambert is hoping to finish in the top four in the ODAC so that the Scots can play their first tournament game at home. The big problem Lambert foresees at this point of the season is the Scots' lack of experience, a problem which time undoubtedly will solve.

The pleasant surprise this season for Lambert has been the outstanding performance by Sophomore Scott Fletcher. After limited play last season, Fletcher has exploded averaging 16 points a game and shooting 64 percent from the field (eight in the country, Division III).

An All-ODAC honor should be in order for this Scot. Another player who Coach Lambert believes deserves recognition is Mike Reid, who has been playing well and seems to be improving as the season progresses.

With only a few games left, the Scots will seek to sharpen their skills in preparation for post-season play. This team could definitely be a contender with some solid performances from key players. But even if the Scots do not bring home the ODAC trophy this year, the future looks bright, as all of the starters from this year's squad will be returning next season.

Restrooms revived

by Jennifer C. Worth

Don't be misled by the new look of Anderson Hall's restrooms -- their beauty is more than skin-deep. Or is that paint-deep?

Most people will hardly recognize the sleek, chic walls and gleaming tile. David Hoffecker and his sixteen interim students rescued the facilities from some unsightly features, but the renovation was more than just a face-lift.

Why did Hoffecker put his team to work on such an unorthodox project? Carpentry has served him well, so he chose it as his interim subject. He wanted to teach the students a practical skill and let them experience hard physical work, while easing the Maintenance Department's workload.

He chose Anderson's restrooms because of their condition, particularly the ladies' room. In fact, said Hoffecker, the women in Anderson were starting to place bets on who would be the first to crash through the floor into the Registrar's Office.

So after several weeks of sawing and hammering, the restrooms stand ready, attractive, and, most importantly, operable. And if the denizens of Anderson had to endure some extra noise, a small price to pay for mankind's favorite facility, right?

"Absoultely," agreed Martha Hess, registrar, who spends most of the work day several yards beneath the ladies' room. She thought t. work benifited the students, but added, "We're the ones who profit."

And there's good news for restroom-users across the campus -- Hoffecker may lead a similar interim next year. Perhaps someday, everyone at MC will be able to powder their noses in safety and comfort.

SHORTS

(OCR) -- A survivor of a Nazi concentration camp, Livia Rothkirchin, teaches a positive view of the Holocaust in her class at the U. of Nebraska. She lectures on the tremendous will to survive and on "how people created music and poetry, while even on the threshold of death. That is what helped keep them alive."

(OCR) -- Students get better grades when they write papers using word processors, says a recent study by Rider College (NJ). A survey of 200 papers showed those written on a word processor received an average grade of B+, but typed papers received an average of B-. Researchers aren't sure whether the computer helps students do better work, or if better students are more likely to use computers.

(OCR) -- The "History of Hell" will be offered at the U. of Arizona next semester. The course will examine "hell's intellectual and philosophical origins." (College Press Service)

(OCR) -- Community Colleges draw smart students, according to several reports from Illinois schools. Transfer students from Prairie State College averaged better grades at Northern Illinois U., the U. of Illinois-Champaign, and Southern Illinois U. than did students who started out at those schools.

(OCR) -- Ten percent of new grads are fired or strongly encouraged to resign from their first job, says Business Week Careers magazine. The most common reasons are: not fitting in, a misunderstanding of the graduate's qualifications, not getting along with the boss, and office politics.

Help Soviet prisoner

Teovils Kuma is a 53-year-old man who was imprisoned for distributing religious leaflets in his hometown in Latvia. He spent four years in the Special Psychiatric Hospital in Lenningrad and was to be transferred to an ordinary psychiatric hospital two and one-half years ago. Such prisons are the most severe punishment in the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev's new policies offer hope for the release of such prisoners of conscience. Both cards, such as the Christmas cards that many students, faculty and staff sent in December, and letters help express public support for Kuma. Please send politely worded messages to: Soviet Ambassador to the United States, Y.V. Dubinin, 1125 Sixteenth St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036.

For more information, contact Marje Richardson at ext. 271 box 2868.

THE BACK PAGE

CPP Notes

Seniors:

CF AIR FREIGHT and VALLEY BANK will interview on Monday, February 23 in CPP. CF Air Freight will interview for sales trainees. You must submit your resume to CPP no later than Monday, February 16.

U.S. OFFICE OF PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT is recruiting seniors for Personnel Investigation for locations in Knoxville and Augusta, GA. Preference will be given to those in upper 10 percent of class.

FEDERAL POSITION: Applications are now being accepted for Air Traffic Controller, Bank Examiner, Customs Inspectors, and Treasury Agents.

SUMMER JOBS AND INTERNSHIPS

The State of Georgia sponsors an outstanding internship program for college students. Positions are located throughout Georgia and can be designed to fit your academic schedule and interests.

How to wipe out your student loans.

Let US do it! The Tennessee Army National Guard can repay up to $10,000 of your Government Guaranteed Student Loans when you qualify. PLUS, you get the new Guard GI Bill which pays directly to YOU $140 a month. PLUS you get a $2,000 cash bonus for entering.

All it costs YOU is a weekend a month and two weeks during the summer, and for that you get a nice, fat paycheck, too, plus a LOAD of fringe benefits! And veterans, ANY BRANCH, normally enter at their former rank.

For more information, with NO obligation, call

Sgt. Jimmy Lindsey -- 981-2347

YOU COULD PROBABLY THINK OF A LOT OF BORING WAYS TO SAVE $25,200 FOR YOUR EDUCATION.

We haven't seen many bored soldiers, though. We're used to seeing young men and women earn vocational/technical school money by learning about high-tech tanks or truck engines or radio communications. And by getting into rock-hard physical shape.

As soldiers, they can earn up to $25,200 for their vo/tech education, if they qualify. They save $1,200 from their first full 12 months' paychecks. The government chips in $9,600, and the Army, $14,400. On top of all that, they also receive a good salary, food, lodging, and medical coverage.

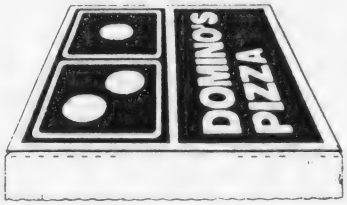
You could be one of them. Ask your local Army Recruiter about the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund. And how it can turn saving money for your education into a matter of interest.

Sgt. Findley -- 982-5515

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Now Accepting

The Echo is now accepting applications for various positions. We do not require a background in reporting, but we do require a desire to succeed, understanding of deadlines, and basic grammatical skills.



Positions include:

- Editor
- Assistant Editor
- Sports Editor
- Entertainment Editor
- Reporters
- Business Manager
- Ad Reps

If you would be interested in meeting this challenge, please send your requests for applications to P.O. Box 2820.

One call does it all!™

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE!

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

Coke® 16oz

$1

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 2-28-87

Fast, Free Delivery™
407 W. Broadway
983-0000

ENTERTAINMENT

Poetry club provides creative outlet

NEWS

Comuters or "whiners"?

SPORTS

Scots have many strengths

Highland Echo

Vol.72 No. 8 | Maryville College | Friday, February, 27, 1987

Leigh Emery

This aerobics class in the Alumni Gym is one of the activities presented by the ILD task force every Monday and Wednesday.

Task Force promotes wellness in several areas

by Jennifer C. Worth

The Institute for Lifestyle Development and the ILD task force are here to help. That's the message from Margot Eyring and the students who work with her.

What's the purpose of the ILD in general and the task force in particular? Eyring, an intern who is working towards her doctorate in educational psychology at UT, described her goal as the "personal health and wellness of students, faculty, and staff." That covers a "whole gamut" of health facets, not merely physical. Kati Tabor, a student on the task force, concurred, saying, "our purpose is to educate people on certain issues of wellness -- physical, mental, and emotional." Eyring pointed out that "wellness" is "not just the absence of disease, it's being the best you can be."

How does the task force implement these goals? The ILD as a whole, headed by Bruce Gillaume, sponsors a variety of programs, such as the Mountain Challenge, counseling, and the Portfolio project. But the task force itself, consisting of Eyring, Tabor, Jackie Osborne, and Susan Richards, also creates and sponsors many programs, most of which keep with a monthly theme.

February's theme has been "Dealing with Adversity." The task force has engineered assertiveness training and body-image workshops, as well as a seminar on managing difference based on communication between different personality types. Tabor has organized an AIDS awareness workshop, conducted by social worker Dee White.

Next month, the task force will concentrate on stress management, including such events as a "massage party." March

see pg. 8

Meisel stresses action during Feb. Meetings

by Lynn King

Wayne Meisel lives out of a knapsack, sleeping on friends' couches in whatever town he winds up. He has been called a "modern-day Johnny Appleseed" and a "roads scholar." In 1984, Meisel walked 1,500 miles to make a point.

Clearly, this 1982 Harvard graduate has a mission, and he is now at Maryville College to share his message as leader of the 1987 February Meetings program.

"Faith in Action" is the theme of this year's religious program, which began yesterday with a CIV presented by Meisel and ends Sunday with worship at New Providence Church. This theme could also be applied appropriately to Wayne Meisel's own life: action seems to be the name of the game for him.

At 27, Meisel is the founder and current director of the Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL), a nationwide effort to promote campus involvement in community service. The Washington, D.C.-based agency currently advises community service groups at 70 schools.

Meisel does not believe in the stereotype of today's college student as apathetic, materialistic and career-obsessed. Rather, he feels that students want to be involved but don't know how, and he is committed to helping provide the valuable link between college and community.

"I don't believe they all want to be on this fast track of preprofessionalism," Meisel is quoted as saying in the New York Times in the spring of 1986. "It's not apathy, it's frustration and lack of self-confidence, not knowing what to do. But they can get involved in the basic human needs of people around them: literacy, hunger, the homeless, the environment, working for day-care centers."

Meisel dramatically proved his point about student concern in a 1,500-mile walk from Maine to Washington, D.C. in 1984. While on the road, Meisel visited students on 70 campuses, sharing the spirit of volunteerism and strengthening his convictions about the attitudes of youth in this country. At the end of nine months, 1,500 miles and four pairs of walking shoes, Meisel had gathered enough support among volunteer-funding groups to start COOL.

Meisel originally became involved with community work while at

see pg. 8

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

MC needs more quality programming

By now we all know that Maryville College is once again without a director of residence life and cocurricular programs. Marty Redman, who held the position for barely five months has taken a more "attractive" job at his alma mater. Hooray for Marty! But where does that leave the social lives of MC students?

Well, since the social life of the MC campus was never a throbbing pulse anyway, it probably leaves us right where we were: at the hands of an apathetic Student Programming organization which commands over 20 percent of the total monies collected through student activity fees. In case you may have forgotten the controversy from the fall, that figure equals $10,150.

In my four years as a student at MC, I can honestly say that this has been the worst year for socially stimulating activities on campus. Of course, this is not to take away from the few quality events which we have had thus far and which were primarily sponsored by groups with no connection to Student Programming.

Student Programming has been entrusted with the duty, not to mention the money, to promote and present social activities on campus. So far, however, it has not done the job. If it is serious about its duty, then I urge it to take that duty in hand.

The mature life

So you're all grown up and now a member of a college community. I'll bet you couldn't wait to move away from home so you could have all that freedom with no parental intervention. Right? And you probably thought about how neat it would be to live in a dormitory. Right? The thought of becoming a real adult must have really excited you!

Well for those of you who feel that your expectations have been filled, please pause a moment for the women of Davis Hall. Actually the term "women" is perhaps an overstatement in this case, for if they were women would their resident directors really resort to room checks every night? Such must be the life of some "mature" adults.

But a word of consolation to the women of Davis -- things are not as bad as they seem. At least your resident directors have decided not to have mandatory bedtime stories every night -- at least not yet.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Typesetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Peggie Sackett
Ad Representative — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers — Don Dove
Kristi Self, Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth.

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

Student responds on smoking issue

In the February 13 issue of the Echo, there was an article and an editorial about smoking. As a reformed smoker, I have an interesting perspective on this subject, and feel that I must respond to this issue.

As a smoker, I felt that it was important not to irritate someone else with my habit; so I would ask any non-smokers present if they minded my smoke. As a non-smoker, I still do that. If someone's smoking is bothering me, I will ask them to stop. I respect other people's rights and expect the same in return. This is simple mutual respect and it solves many problems for me. It seems to me that it could solve many problems for other people as well. But a lack of mutual respect is not the issue here.

Why do you want smoking banned in public places? Is it because it is a hazard to the smoker's health? (You're not that humanitarian) Is it because you do not like to see the nasty stains left on the smokers teeth? (No) Is it because it is a hazard to your health? (Possibly, but not really) Is it because cigarette smoke upsets your lunch. (Yes, and you know it) Cigarette smoke is an irritant to the non-smoker and it makes him uncomfortable to breathe it. It smells bad!

But let's give you the benefit of the doubt and believe you want it banned because it is a health hazard. What about speeding? Or drug abuse? Or drunk driving? Let's try some legal things, like aerosal hair spray, car exhaust, artifical flavor and color, family farmers destroyed, chemical waste dumps . . . .

I know you are not in favor of any of these things, but you participate in some of them and condone them all by not doing something about them. Why? Because it does not upset your lunch!! That's why. So you bitch and moan and run to the powers that be and tell them to make him quit. This is the real issue -- running to the powers that be.

I am aware that 1984 came and went without George Orwell's nightmare coming to be. But he only anticipated 'Big Brother' by about 20 years. Yes, 'Big Brother' is real, and big, and getting bigger all the time. Everytime someone does something that someone else finds objectional, that someone goes to 'Big Brother' and says "Please make him stop."

Well, 'Big Brother' is only all too happy to tell him to stop because that is one more way that He can watch you and control you. Sure, you say that 'Big Brother' will never become as George Orwell predicted, because we can stop him whenever we want to.

The smoker thinks the same about his habit. And just like an alcoholic, he's only lying to himself. Even after you think you've stopped, just one slip and you're back in it stronger than ever.

cont. —

The safety that 'Big Brother' offers is just an illusion to keep us coming for more. The more He watches over us and the more He protects us, the less we can do. The less there is for us to do. Each new protection, each new law, each new rule makes it easier for Him to crush us down and stifle our creativity, to reduce our humanity to the point where it is meaningless. If we need protection every step of our way, the easiest way is to not take any steps.

Are we humans no more than little babies, expecting 'Big Brother' -- whoever he may be in your case -- to take care of all our woes? Are we as individuals so vulnerable that we cannot defend our rights ourselves? Aren't we big enough to ask the man not to smoke, so we can breathe freely? And is not the smoker big enough to acknowledge his intrusion on your air space and respect your wish?

I hope so. Because if it is not so, then we are no more than babies lying in our protected cribs, hoping we never grow up to face the reality and responsibility of a member of the human race and a citizen of a free country, hoping that 'Big Brother' will keep us safe and secure.

Al Hipkins

Corner gives welcome support

I would like to respond to Mr. J.R. Barkman's letter in the February 13th issue entitled "Hoodlum Action." This person made many derogatory remarks about the "corner's" behavior during a home basketball game, so I would like to speak on the student section's behalf, and hopefully enlighten Mr. Barkman on the situation.

As a former member of the basketball team, I know how much the team appreciates a loud and rowdy cheering section. In the games where there is no "corner", the team rarely feels support from the fans; at the most, there is muffled applause after a basket, followed by dead silence. To put it simply, the "corner" provides support that the fans in the stands do not give.

About sportsmanship, Mr.

see pg. 3

from pg. 2

Barkman, have you ever been to an away game? As a former bench warmer for the Scots, I can assure you that the student sections at other colleges are at least as nasty as ours, and many times I have witnessed much worse, so M.C.'s name is not being dragged through the mud by our "corner." Duke University is famous for its rowdy student section, and yet we are ridiculed for ours.

Finally, during this time of year, the basketball games are about the only form of entertainment provided for us, the students. Come on! Let us have our fun! We certainly don't mean any harm by it. I believe a rowdy cheering section gives the students something to look forward to and provides a lot of support for the team. During the game with Bridgewater our new President, Dr. Ferrin, came down and sat with us in the corner, and I saw no indication that he was upset or offended by our actions.

So I urge you, Mr. Barkman, and all those who feel similarly, to take these things into consideration before you judge us too harshly.

Kent Thomas

Lloyd residents defamed says student

One of the basic rights granted to us by the U.S. Constitution is the right to face our accusors. While I realize that the Office of Student Affairs is hardly a court of law, I do, however, feel that they should allow students who have been defamed the rights guaranteed to us by a court of law because, indeed, such organizations are designed to protect the interests of the students.

One resident of Lloyd Hall has accused the other residents of sexually promiscuous behavior and partaking of illegal substances. Such an action can only be considered slander. To say that the residents have sex indiscriminately is a slanderous statement. It is nearly impossible to prove. I can say with all confidence that promiscuous behavior is not commonplace in Lloyd Hall.

Lloyd residents were also accused of committing a federal offense. I have only one question. Where is the proof?

While I realize that there is need to protect the identity of the person who accused the Lloyd residents of such activities, I must ask, will Maryville College deny the overwhelming majority a right that our forefathers saw fit to guarantee us in the Constitution? Or will Maryville College allow its students to be slandered indiscriminately?

Will Maryville College allow the reputations of Lloyd residents to be defamed without allowing them a chance to respond? Or will they fall prey to what could possibly be an exaggeration -- a very dangerous exaggeration?

Will an entire dorm be made to conform to what one person considers to be proper behavior?

I certainly hope that no one in the Maryville College administration will say "yes" to these questions, for that will signal the failure not only of the students' trust in the college, but also in the college's ability to produce the type of people they are trying to produce.

Denise Wilson

Alcohol abuse upsets student

Being a freshman and not yet having gone to any of the Maryville College dances, I attended the Choc-Fest dance on February 14, and thought it was a rather spectacular event -- lots of food, punch, decorations, and music. I must admit, I enjoyed myself: well, until I had to start dodging the staggering intoxicated individuals who depended upon alcohol to enjoy such a simple event as a dance. I had realized that the dance was BYOB (Bring Your Own Beer), but never thought that many people actually would.

If those intoxicated individuals could only have been stable enough to have seen the way they looked, smelled, and acted, they would understand my disgust. It was saddening to see those individuals, Maryville College students, lowering themselves to drinking alcohol to have "fun."

I hope they had even more "fun" the next morning when they dragged their bodies out of the bed (floor, gutter, etc. . . wherever they crawled to). I must say though, there were a number of us who were sensible enough to actually know how to really enjoy a dance. Of course, we sensible people were burdened with taking some of those intoxicated individuals home. Alcohol is only a sign of weakness and that was evident at and after the dance.

I know I am very embarrassed of those individuals, and I am glad that none of the Maryville community saw the drunken state of those students. I was very upset to think that our church and academic oriented school contained that many individuals who depended upon alcohol for "fun" and strength. Intoxicated individuals you are in my prayers.

Name withheld on request.

The liberal arts education

by Scott Brunger

The opportunity to meet alumni/ae is a fringe benefit of teaching at Maryville College. During a meeting of the American Economic Association, I had a chance to enjoy dinner with five alums and their spouses in New Orleans. Mrs. Elizabeth Hutton of the Class of '56 arranged the dinner and then offered dessert and coffee at her home.

I was impressed with how the alums had used their liberal arts education in law, insurance, petroleum marketing, music, homemaking, philanthropy, and the church. Their education had prepared them for job changes and moves.

In addition, their broad educations enlivened our evening conversation. We touched on topics from organ music to oil tariffs, and hurricane precautions to Scottish culture.

The dinner was a good occasion to savor New Orleans seafood and good fellowship. It also demonstrated the value of an MC education.

FAC studios hazardous?

by Meg Fraelich

An increased awareness of the hazards presented by materials used by artists has prompted changes in art studios across the country. However, at Maryville an indifference to these changing needs has prevented long needed updating of studio facilities.

We are all aware of the dangers presented by extensive inhalation of solvent vapors. We would consider a worker who suffered daily from the effects of exposure to solvent fumes ill-used: however, when an artist is the victim, we just joke: "So that's why artists are so strange!"

In the poorly ventilated FAC studios, art students and instructors only give descriptions of the appropriate precautionary measures while actual studio practices, imposed by limited resources, negate their lectures.

Admittedly the extensive changes necessary for the FAC to provide better ventilation, lighting, and furnishings would be very expensive; but at the very least the improved facilities would serve to attract new art students. Additional fire extinguishers, safety glasses, gloves, dust respirators, first aid kits, and fire blankets are cheaper than litigation, and these things may someday save a student or instructor from needless suffering.

Campus Events

Friday, Feb. 27
February Meetings with Wayne W. Meisel
10:20 am Worship. CCM
12:00 noon Lunch with Student Volunteers in Action. Proffitt Dining Room.
7:30 pm Dorm Discussions

Saturday, Feb. 28
10:00 - 12:00 noon Workshop for Churches and Agencies. CCM.

Sunday, March 1
10:30 am Worship at New Providence Presbyterian Church.
8:00 pm Movie: "Howard the Duck." Isaac's.

Monday, March 2
12:30 pm ACC meeting. PDR.
7-9 pm Study Hall. Thaw 202/206

Tuesday, March 3
10:20 am Weekly Worship. Ron Longmire, pastor of First Cumberland Presbyterian Church: College Choir. CCM.
12:00 noon Great Decisions Program. Proffitt Dining Room.
8:15 pm Foothills Chorale Concert. Music Hall.

Wednesday, March 4
7-9 pm Study Hall. Thaw 202/206.
8:00 pm Movie: "Back to the Future." Isaac's.

Thursday, March 5
11:00 am CIV. Notre Dame Cello-Piano Duo. Music Hall.
12:45 - 1:45 pm Dr. Ferrin will meet with faculty. CCM.
7-9 pm Study Hall. Thaw 202/206.

Friday, March 6
8:15 pm Senior Recital. Cindy Claborn. Music Hall.

Tuesday, March 10
7:15 pm Student forum with Dr. Ferrin. CCM.

Thursday, March 12
8:15 pm Affiliate Artist Lisa Braden performs. Music Hall.

ENTERTAINMENT

Art Club celebrates chocolate

Ash Jackson

A student volunteer leads young people in a game during the Children's Carnival at MC, Saturday, Feb. 14. The carnival was part of MC's three day 'Choc Fest.'

by Lars Farmer

Everyone loves chocolate. That's why the Lascaux Art Club decided to have a chocolate festival. After weeks and weeks of planning and promoting, the art club finally pulled it off -- a weekend of fun with chocolate.

It officially began Thursday, Feb. 12 with the Tasting Party. The culinary artists of the American Legion Auxillary brought in everything from chocolate covered potato chips and pretzels to chocolate cakes and pies. After over 90 people enjoyed the tasting party, there was still plenty of chocolate which was frozen and served at the dance.

On Friday the 13th, the art club, in cooperation with the Sound o' Music, hosted the Battle of the Bands in the Wilson Chapel. Only five bands entered, but the competition was fierce as the bands rocked against one another for the three trophies and a $100 cash prize. The opening band, the Chozen, managed to win by playing a few top 40 tunes, including a fiery version of the Georgia Satellite's hit "Keep Your Hands to Yourself." The second prize trophy went to a local Christian rock group called Full Force, and third place to the only band to have an MC student in it, Paul Beasley's the Uninvited.

By early Saturday morning the art club was busy setting up for the children's carnival. Local Y-teens volunteered to work the game booths which included an MC version of the Wheel of Fortune. Also, in the alumni gym, there was a series of candy relay races, charades and even a children's dance contest in which youngsters danced to "Walk Like an Egyptian."

Bake sales were sponsored by the Welcome Wagon and the Chilhowee Club, the Playhouse sold chocolate candy, the Choir sold s'mores and the athletic dept. sold candy and soda. Saturday's activities in the student center included fortune and story tellers, face painting, and a few showings of the movie "Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory" in Isaac's. Special thanks goes to the Sunshine Clowns for Christ from the Springview Baptist Church for their participation. Despite the rain Saturday, 124 kids came to the carnival.

Many people think the biggest part of Choc Fest '87 was the Valentine's Dance Saturday night in the Alumni gynm. About 180 students came to the dance which featured the winner of the Battle of the Bands and the crowning of the Choc Fest King and Queen.

Will Delaney was crowned king in the chocolate coronation and Barb Moffat queen. Delaney even looked the part in his crown and toga sheet as he and a handful of other football players attended in toga-wear. The Chozen played a slow dance tune for the royal dance then upped their beat a bit for the remainder of the evening.

Lascaux Art Club member Julie Costner said "There was a good turn-out (for the events) but there should be more student participation in the future."

As of yet the Art Club has not calculated its earnings, but the money will go to an art scholarship fund. Said Thelma Bianco, advisor to the art club, "We met our two objectives, to do something with the community, and to have fun."

Lascaux would like to thank everyone who helped to make the Choc Fest a success, and special thanks to Jonathan Yarboro and Jon Allison for their time and cooperation in being the masters of ceremonies at the many events.

Poetry Club nourishes MC's creative impulses

by Jennifer C. Worth

"Any kind of creative process involves not only the creator, but also the people who appreciate the creation," so said Peggy Kilgore, one of the forces behind MC's newest addition, the Poetry Club, which will attempt to bring together both creators and lovers of poetry.

The club, sponsored by Dr. Charlotte Beck, has had two meetings so far, and there are plans to schedule meetings on the first Tuesday of every month. In addition, interested people may go as a group to hear poetry readings in Knoxville. One such event is scheduled for Friday, March 6, at the Laurel Theatre. Those wishing to attend may contact Kilgore at P.O. Box 2121.

The idea for the Poetry Club was born in Beck's interim course on contemporary poetry. Said Kilgore of the class, "We got really fired up." The interim held a poetry reading on January 22, which Kilgore described as "a really big success." Class members found that sharing their own work, listening to others' poems, and receiving constructive critiques and advice fueled the creative process. They decided to supply a forum for these activities on a continuing basis.

Although the Poetry Club is well on its way to official status, Kilgore stressed the group's informal nature. She called it "the kind of organization where a person can come and go." Members face neither dues nor required attendance at meetings; in fact, the only commitment is to "keep writing and encouraging each other."

Why is it important for MC to have a poetry club? Kilgore feels strongly that poetry, like other art forms, needs to be shared. The Poetry Club simply is, in Kilgore's words, to "provide a place for poetry . . . an atmosphere for poetry to be shared." This sharing creates inspiration, which helps ward off apathy and writer's block. Kilgore also called poetry "cathartic" -- a means of cleansing emotions.

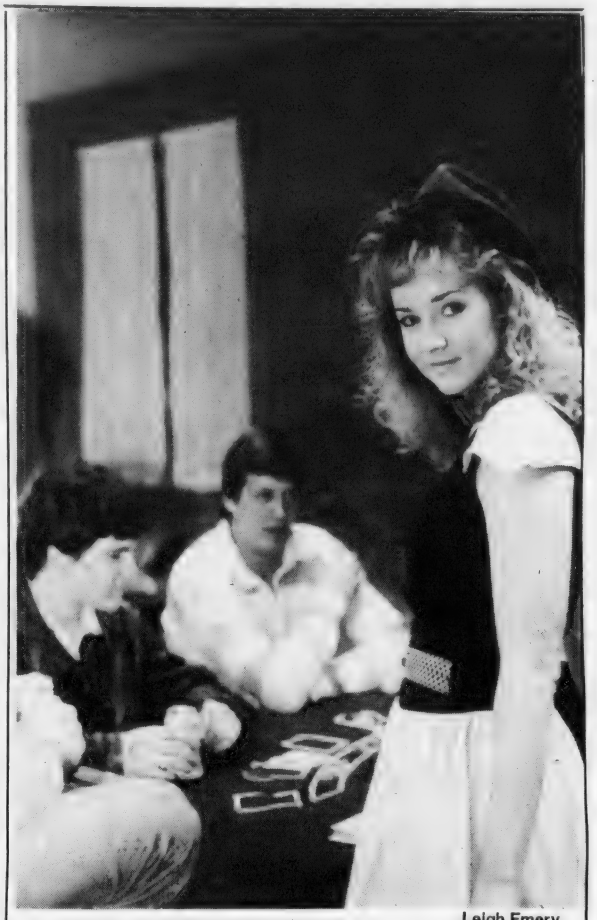
MC's poets finally have a place to go, a club of their own. Kilgore hopes that the club will nurture creativity on campus and provide that spark of inspiration that all poets seek.

Knoxville band echoes Southern sound

by Mike Howell

Not too long ago, the South was considered an artistic wasteland. Thus any native of "these-here parts" interested in the performing arts was forced to follow one rule of thumb -- get the hell out of Dodge. Leave. Depart. Flee. Fly the coop. Go to New York, Philadelphia, or L.A., anywhere -- but just go. Ah, but listen . . . the winds of change whisper. All those bumper-stickers on all those pick-ups are true: the South will rise again. Even now the South emerges as a rock and roll hotbed with a myriad of new bands and a new sound, exclusively southern in element and in personality.

Now one has only to look at newspapers in Atlanta or Nashville to find a bevy of talent playing the local clubs. A few Southern-spawned groups have already "made it" and have moved on to greater glories -- bands such as R.E.M., the Georgia Satellites, and Jason and the Scorchers. Several hungry young bands will inevitably follow in their footsteps. A watchful eye should definitely be kept on Nashville stalwarts Walk the West and The Royal Court of China.



Knoxville, too, has an up-and-coming band cut from the same mold: The Unitz. This band has at least one hard to find release out on cassette, simply titled "The Unitz." The tape contains ten original songs that let the listener know just what The Unitz are all about. Musical style is very much in the R.E.M. vein, so fans of R.E.M. should take note. However, to color The Unitz as pale R.E.M. reflections would be unfair to both the band and their music. The spectrum of their sound runs from infectious, danceable tunes, to more traditional southern rockers, to mellow ballad-like croons.

High points from the ten songs are: "Ghost Town," which conjures up images of miners and their quest for gold in boom-towns. Of course, most boom-towns ended up as skeletal husks on the dusty prairie, tumbleweeds blowing down deserted streets. "All Mixed Up" is a harder-edged, more traditional rock and roll tune, sure to please a beer-soaked crowd in a smoky, raucous bar somewhere off the beaten path.

"Stars" is a soft ballad with hauntingly melancholy lyrical content (also my personal favorite). Slow melodic guitars form the backdrop as the singer, full of conviction, states "stars shine bright on my fragile mind/And I get the feeling that I'm way behind/I wonder if you love me when I wake up far from home."

The tape's production is quite polished. However, the guiters, which are layered to produce that R.E.M.-esque sound, could be a little more up front. The tape showcases strong, solid drumming (no problem here with limp wrists).

The Unitz are, all-in-all, a good band. If you happen to come across their music in a Knoxville record store (which may be unlikely), why not forego the same old plastic-wrap sounds and give them a go? If you're a fan of the South's new sound, then I highly recommend The Unitz.

Leigh Emery

This blackjack table was one of the scenes of action at Casino Night, sponsored by the MC cheerleaders. The event was held in Hall I on Feb. 21.

Platoon brings war to life

by Jennifer C. Worth

Few movies have caught America's attention like Platoon has. From the cover of Time magazine to its eight Academy Award nominations (including Best Picture), Oliver Stone's autobiographical movie of the Vietnam War is in the midst of a whirlwind of media hype. Unlike many films, Platoon deserves the attention.

This movie succeeds on many levels. Some may most appreciate the plot; others, the characters; others, the picture of that war. These factors and others combine to create a whole that is greater than the sum of its parts.

Platoon is, if nothing else, an elegy of war. Not just the Vietnam War -- all wars. The movie's images bring its unpleasant theme to life, fulfilling the ancient principle of catharsis, or emotional cleansing.

And those images are unforgettable. One of the first things idealistic Chris Taylor (played by Charlie Sheen) sees as he disembarks onto Vietnamese soil is a pair of G.I.'s unloading corpses in black body bags. There are other powerful images: a soldier lighting his cigarette with the same lighter he is using to torch a hut; a bloody G.I. against a tree, with his throat cut; birds twittering as Taylor lurches among ravaged bodies the morning after a battle.

It would be impossible to list all of the praiseworthty elements of Platoon, but special distinction must go to Stone's direction, and to actors Sheen, Tom Berenger, and William Dafoe. In fact, all the actors deserve recognition, for there are no two-dimensional characters in this movie, right down to the tiniest roles.

Go see Platoon. Even if you don't like it, you won't forget it. It brings to vivid, unpleasant life William T. Sherman's axiom, first spoken a century before Platoon takes place: "War is hell."

We care

- about our patients
- about the family
- about our employees
- about our community
- about providing progressive, conscientious health services

We are looking for

- Registered Nurses
- Occupational Therapists
- Physical Therapists

To be a member of Our Team and share Our Spirit, the Spirit of . . .

LOURDES HOSPITAL 1530 Lone Oak Road Paducah, KY 42001

For more information regarding positions available, contact:
George Booker
Professional Recruiter
1-800-626-5435
1-800-633-1178 (Kentucky)

Study targeted at core curriculum

by Kristi L. Self

Are all those humanities classes worthwhile? Do we really need six hours of a natural science and two semesters of a foreign language? By 1990, we should know the answers to these questions, plus have a better understanding of the quality of a Maryville College education.

For the next three years, MC will be involved in a grant program sponsored by the Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FIPS). This grant, totaling $276,000, will be used in the assessment of educational outcomes. In other words, the core curriculum at MC will be studied and evaluated to determine if it is useful in the overall education of the students. The study is targeted at finding out how well a college is accomplishing its goals.

MC, along with Berea College in Kentucky, Mars Hill College in North Carolina, Emory and Henry College in Virginia, and Wheeling College in West Virginia, was chosen to participate in the program because FIPS was looking for schools with potential and with the need for a professional to do institutional research. Karen Carey, grant program director said that MC's strong faculty was a major reason that they were selected to represent Tennessee in the program.

Carey said that various methods will be used in the study: standardized instruments as well as in-depth interviews. Carey said, "We need ways other than standardized means to capture the uniqueness of the college." Carey has already had an informal meeting with several MC students in the dining hall.

At the end of the three years, Carey hopes to see trends and patterns in the students. She will be able to determine if the curriculum at MC enhances a student's overall education, and if it is an education distinctly from MC.

After all of the studies and tests are

see pg.8

YOUNG LIFE
IS LOOKING FOR LEADERS

If interested, call 983-4150
between 5-9 p.m.

Commuters hope to unite despite overlooked status

by Lynn King

Displaced persons or antisocial "whiners"? Discriminated against or excluded by choice?

Just what sector of the MC population are we talking about here? The group under consideration comprises over a quarter of the student body and is set apart by no more significant characteristic than that those included do not live on campus.

Yet many commuters feel that this makes a significant difference, often for the worse. Just who is at fault and what can be done about it are questions open to debate.

Plans for a commuter student association are in the works now, following a commuter meeting held recently with a turnout of about thirty students. This is a small portion of the total of over 100 commuters at MC but still promising considering the difficulty this group seems to have with organizing.

According to Vice President for Student Affairs Ron Pease, this meeting was a result of his ongoing efforts to meet with every student on campus. "I would like to see a commuter student association formed and become active," Pease said. "I believe very strongly in the statement that 'People tend to support what they helped to create.'"

Pease went on to explain that, in keeping with that philosophy, an association of commuting students should improve communication among commuters and help to get them more involved in campus life at MC. "Many times it's the commuter student who is overlooked," he said, adding that such an association might be a significant part of an effort to change that.

"I believe that this whole institution could be strengthened by the involvement of the whole population," Pease said.

Some of the efforts to improve the status of commuters at MC include a suggestion box in the snack bar and a list in the commuter lounge, a soon-to-arrive refrigerator promised to the lounge, and permission for commuters to use the microwave in the snack bar, until and unless one can be obtained for the lounge.

Are commuters really overlooked, and if so, why? "Because they're not here all the time, it's harder to get involved. Often the activities don't accommodate our schedules," sophomore Diane Eng said. Eng notes that resident students and commuter students sometimes appear to be two distinct groups which don't interact much. "It takes cooperation from both sides," Eng said. "Both groups have to try."

After having lived both on campus and off campus, Eng feels that "it's really harder for commuters to get involved."

"They're basically an overlooked population," said sophomore Kristi Self, one of the commuter representatives on the Student Senate. "Still", Self said, "I think commuters have basically

see pg. 8

Senate debates plus and minus

by Jennifer C. Worth

The Student Senate has passed some resolutions that will have noticeable affects on MC students.

At the Senate meeting on Feb. 12, one of the major issues was the "plus/minus" grading system. Kristi Self, a co-sponsor of the resolution which proposes a system that would give credit for "plus" and "minus" grades, said, "A change is needed in the grading scale in order for Maryville to keep up with other colleges." She added that the current system "doesn't accurately reflect the students' grades, the point spread is just too big." Senate President DeAnn Hargis agreed, saying "A 'plus/minus' system would better pinpoint exactly where students stand." Self and Brian Linkous, the resolution's other sponsor, conducted an informal survey of students. Sixty-nine percent of the students who were questioned were in favor of a "plus/minus" scale; only thirty-nine percent opposed it.

The Senate decided that further deliberation was necessary on such a vital issue, so a committee was formed to do a formal study on student opinions, compute results, and report findings by April 1. The committee consists of Darrell Franklin, Dr. Harry Howard, Charlie Gumula and Kristi Self. They have met once and determined the contents of the questionnaire.

In other action, the Senate approved a resolution, also sponsored by Senators Self and Linkous, abolishing the mandatory swimming test. The resolution's sponsors felt that the test imperfectly demonstrated swimming proficiency and that such proficiency should not be a requirement for graduation. Also, Kati Tabor introduced a bill calling for air-conditioning in Lloyd Hall; the Senate will consider this resolution at a later meeting.

Last fall, the Senate took action on the college calendar. Considering such factors as student morale and convenience, the Senate established a long weekend, nicknamed "Fall Break," on Oct. 23 - 25.

This change is a welcome one. Hargis said, "It's a thing that should have been in existence since we went to semesters." She expects the long weekend to "improve morale, academics, and all-around campus life." Self also favored the change, because "people tend to get tired and burned out in the fall."

The Senate is always willing to consider any other changes which students think are needed. Hargis said, "Students have come up with a lot of

see pg. 8

Scots have many strengths

by Don Dove

Spring is near and with the warmer weather comes a new Scots' baseball season. This year's squad has been conditioning since Jan. 7 and preparing for what promises to be a successful season. With five returning starters and several experienced pitchers, the Scots are looking to improve on last year's 13 win season (the most wins by a Scots' baseball team in the past several years).

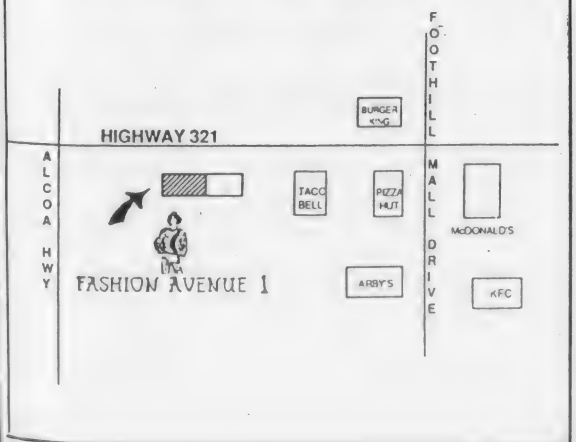
The strengths of this team are many. Probably its biggest strength is in the area of offensive production. Last year, the team as a whole batted over .320, and with the return of co-MVP's Eric Etchison, Jason Harbison, and Tony Murr, and newcomers Brian Dailey and Ken Barber, this average should increase. Defensively, the Scots also appear to be in good shape, particularly at the infield positions. Harbison, Murr, Dailey, and Jim Shook are all excellent fielders who will hopefully keep the Scots error free.

The real question again this year is in the pitching department. If the Scots' hurlers can stop the stronger ODAC opponents the team may have a shot at an ODAC title; a title which has eluded the Scots since entering the conference.

The Scots have also found a new coach in John Dunlap who replaces Joe Dodd. Assisting Dunlap this year will by Ronnie Ramsey and Bill Rankin.

Leigh Emery

Despite an increased cheering section in the "corner," the Scots were defeated by Washington and Lee.



FASHION AVENUE 1

70% OFF SALE

on Ladies' Fashions

Fashion Show March 6. 1987
12:00 noon at Pearsons' Hall.

Comuters from pg. 6

the same opportunities as everybody else."

One problem many commuters mention is lack of a place to spend spare hours between classes, at lunch, etc. Though it is used by relatively few commuters, there exists a commuter lounge on the second floor of Fayerweather. Some discovered it for the first time the day of the organizaional meeting; others know it is there and consciously avoid the place. Some, however, find the commuter lounge a useful place to spend "hanging around" hours, and see improvements that are badly needed.

"This is like my home away from home," freshman Tricia Hollman said. Hollman feels that the room could be improved by murals on the wall, a fan to stir the air. Other suggestions include installing a partition, painting the walls a more cheerful color, and putting in a TV. One commuter, seated in a glow-in-the-dark orange chair which clashes miserably with the green carpet, requested "colors that don't scream."

Disastrous color schemes are the least of some commuters' worries, though. Complaints range from feeling subtly pressured by faculty and administrators to live on campus to being overlooked or discriminated against by the same. Some report being incessantly informed that they are missing the "total college experience" by living off campus; whether they do so by choice or financial necessity, this recurrent phrase from well-mear faculty members is appreciated.

"It's like a ladder, and the faculty and resident students are at the top; commuters are at the bottom," freshman Lisa Linginfelter said.

Will the planned commuter association change anything? "I think it would show others that we want to get involved," Eng said.

"I hope that commuters get actively involved in the new organization so we can be a recognizable group on campus," Self said, adding that hopefully the association will enable commuters to "gain social ties to the campus as well as educational ones."

"Hopefully with the formation of this group, commuters will become more actively involved and feel that they have a place here," Self said.

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

THE BACK PAGE

Julio's
Hungary
Italian

WANTED

Delivery Service
Drivers Needed

Starting March 1. Must have own automobile and insurance.

Call 977-7197.

ILD from pg. 1

will also see a more energetic marketing of the ILD's relaxation room, which is equipped with a cozy chair and audio tapes teaching breathing techniques and mental relaxation.

April's theme will be "Transitions," since many people will then be preparing to make the often shocking transition from college to the "real world." Said Eyring, "We want to make the impact less, and make people more comfortable." The task force and she will seek to help people learn to make changes "as gracefully and healthfully as possible."

The task force maintains three ongoing programs: the relaxation room, located in the ILD offices in Fayerweather, which is open to anyone; "Fitstop," which is a collection of measuring devices for anyone who wishes to monitor such health statistics as blood pressure, weight, flexibility, grip strength, and body fat percentage; and the "point of decision" program, aimed at nutritional awareness. Eyring said this program's goal is "to try to help students be more aware of the nutritional contents of the foods they eat."

Osborne is currently involved in labeling the salad bar selections. The task force also sponsors an aerobics program and a weight management group.

Eyring is optimistic about the task force's success. She said of the programs, "The feedback is always positive." She feels that is is unimportant to evaluate the system in terms of numbers, adding, "We're really concerned about the individual . . . A program is successful if it meets the needs of only a few people."

She is also enthusiastic about the contributions of the three student members of the task force: "Kati , Jackie, and Susan have put in a lot of effort," adding that they are "personally concerned -- it's not just a job." She also said of her experience at MC, "I love it here. I enjoy working with the students."

The students reflect this optimism. Said Tabor of her work with the task force, "I really like it a lot." She added, "Bruce and Margot are two incredible people to work with." She described the ILD staff as having "enthusiasm unlimited."

For any students who would like to know more about any aspect of the ILD, Eyring stressed that she, Gillaume, and the task force members would be happy to help. She pointed out that, furthermore, there will be positions open next year in the task force, which is a work-study program.

The ILD office is geared to be a "retreat," as Eyring said. Students are welcome there to talk, relax, or work out their frustrations with a jigsaw puzzle or a game of "Go." So whether the ILD is actually sponsoring a workshop or just offering a few moments of relaxation, it is geared towards the well-being of everyone on campus. Eyring and the task force are doing their best to get that message out.

Meisel from pg. 1

Harvard majoring in government. In 1982 he graduated cum laude with a B. A. in government from Harvard, where he was a John Harvard Scholar for highest academic achievement.

Since 1982, Meisel has visited over 200 schools to promote student community involvement. According to a 1986 article in the Christian Science Monitor, he believes that colleges need students who are motivated to lead by a genuine belief in ideals: "Students with convictions -- who will overcome stage fright and stand up for what they believe."

Wayne Meisel will be on campus to share his beliefs for the duration of February Meetings. Activities planned include dorm discussions, lunches with campus groups, and a workshop tomorrow for area churches and agencies.

February Meetings have been an MC tradition since 1876. Past themes have been chosen to reflect the tone of the times: for example, "What is Pearl Harbor?" in 1944 and "Loss of Identity and New Styles of Life" in 1967.

The meetings are currently supported by an endowment of the John Vant Stephens, Jr. Memorial Lecture Fund, in honor of this former member of the Maryville College Board of Directors.

Study from pg. 6

complete, Carey said the participating schools could compare the results and see if changes or adjustments need to be made in their educational process. Carey said, "We can find out the strengths and share them between the colleges. Our ultimate goal is to improve the education at the schools."

Dean Bolden, who is working with Carey, said, "I think its great for the college. We can take a real look at our core courses as compared to other schools."

Carey said the aim of the FIPS program is for students to take an interest in the quality of their education. Carey said, "We are trying to capture the spirit of a liberal arts education. We want to show that Maryville College is worth the time and the effort."

Senate from pg. 6

ideas for improvements campus-wide. The Senate is in a position where we can take action on those ideas." She added, "There's always room for new ideas in the Senate's agenda." She pointed out that although the ideas must be written and in proposal form to enter Senate discussion, any Senator or class president can help a student draft his or her ideas into a formal resolution.

Hargis also wants students to know that they are welcome to attend Senate meetings, which are held on the second and fourth Thursday of each month at 12:30 in the Center for Campus Ministry. Students can not only listen to debate, but also make their voices heard. The Senate is eager to meet campus needs.

How to wipe out your student loans.

Let US do it! The Tennessee Army National Guard can repay up to $10,000 of your Government Guaranteed Student Loans when you qualify. PLUS, you get the new Guard GI Bill which pays directly to YOU $140 a month. PLUS you get a $2,000 cash bonus for entering.

All it costs YOU is a weekend a month and two weeks during the summer, and for that you get a nice, fat paycheck, too, plus a LOAD of fringe benefits! And veterans, ANY BRANCH, normally enter at their former rank.

For more information, with NO obligation, call

Sgt. Jimmy Lindsey -- 981-2347

ENTERTAINMENT

Julio's: college atmosphere

NEWS

MC Theft

SPORTS

Lady Scots on a high note

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 9 | Maryville College | Friday, March, 13, 1987

Austerity plan includes hike in tuition

by Kristi L. Self

On July 1, 1987, the beginning of the Maryville College fiscal year, various departments and organizations will feel the crunch of the new budget cuts planned by President Richard Ferrin and his cabinet.

Cabinet member and College Treasurer Sid Downey said, "The basic play is to try to cut expenditures and raise revenue." It is simply an economic demand that must be met, he said. Small, private, liberal arts colleges, like Maryville, face economic hardships. The costs for running these schools continue to escalate, so the institutions are forced to cut back in order to remain in operation.

Dr. Ferrin said, "We have to look at the budget from an economic and educational standpoint." One area that Dr. Ferrin is working on is the accumulated debt situation.

Maryville College pays $450,000 in interest and principle payments on loans. Ferrin plans to submit proposals to the lenders and attempt to save money by re-financing the loans. Ferrin said, "The budget is tight, we've had to use reserves and loans." After this year, Maryville College's reserve resources will be depleted. Where does Maryville College turn?

Ferrin said that the college will have to find ways to bring in revenue. He said, "We are going to have to push hard at fund-raisers and development, both operational and long-term." He plans on concentrating his energies on revenue producing ventures.

These cuts will affect all areas. Ferrin said that the reductions range from 9.5 percent in the academic areas to 15.5 percent in development. He said, "We just have to cut budgets."

In the academic realm, Ferrin plans to use fewer adjunct professors. There are no plans to hire new faculty or staff members. A salary freeze will be in effect for the 1987-88 year.

On financial aid, Ferrin said, "We plan to hold the line on college grant money." There will be an 8.5 percent increase in tuition for next year, and the school wants to remain committed to trying to meet 100 percent of the student need.

Ron Pease, v. p. for student affairs, said, "I'm confident a lot of budgets will be lean and mean, but I don't think that's a bad sign." Pease feels that the cuts are needed. He said, "Priorities have to be established in an institution in regard to what's important to that institution."

He feels that the programs will not suffer. He sees the cuts as reallocations of funds

See p. 8

Leigh Emery

These revelers were happy to hang loose at the Mardi Gras festivities in Lloyd Hall last Saturday evening The event was the final fling for MC students before next week's Spring Break.

Students "cut loose" on Spring Break

by Jennifer C. Worth

Spring is in the air! And Spring Break, that time-honored springtime rite.

Spring Break is the long-awaited nine-day vacation that breaks the long stretch of classes between January and May. One MC Student, when asked about his plans for this occasion, answered by whooping out a rebel yell, more eloquently summing up the prevalent attitude about Spring Break than any words could do.

If nothing else, the break is a time for escaping the day-to-day routine of school and for releasing pent-up emotions. Regrettably, those emotions sometimes take a violent turn, as they did during the imfamous Spring Break of 1986, when riots in California and Florida resulted in thousands of arrests. In addition, there were a record seven deaths in the Spring Break meccas of Florida.

But this yearly respite is more often a bright spot in the school calendar. The traditional spring vacation spots have been the beaches of Florida ever since the 1960 movie Where the Boys Are immortalized Fort Lauderdale, which, along with Daytona Beach and Miami, dominates the spring break scene. Time magazine reported last April that during the four-week spring break season of March and early April, over 800,000 college students flocked rowdily to these cities. The state of Florida earns an average of $300 million from these pilgrimages.

There are alternatives to the usual spring break bashes and

See p. 8

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Writing editorials

It seems to be a little known fact on campus that editorials are written by the editor. At least a few people have questioned why, then, doesn't the editor sign his name. The answer is simple. If it's in the left hand section of the commentary page then it has been written by the editor. Editorials are the opinion of the editor and do not necessarily represent the opinions of the entire newspaper staff. This may sound quite frank or arrogant, but it's actually just a benefit, if you will, of being editor. Things have always been this way and probably always will.

However, to those of you who have felt "chastised" by previous editorials perhaps the following will console you. In writing editorials the editor always strives to divorce his personal feelings from his opinions about campus-wide issues. That is not to say that the effort is always successful, but there is always the effort. Similarly, the editor's opinions are not off-the-wall whims. They are the result of at least some research and some reflection. Therefore, editorials are not personal feelings although the line does become very fine at times.

There is but little doubt that more people and more groups will be "chastised" in the future. To deny this would be to succumb to total perfecion which will obviously never happen. Likewise, however, there is little doubt that there will also be praise for advancements and achievements at MC.

Editorials, at least good ones, are aimed at reforming some wrong; they are not personal vendettas. So if, per chance, you find yourselves the subject of an editorial in the future, rest assured that there is a good reason for it: you are helping to promote needed changes.

Highland Echo

Editor — Brian C. Linkous
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Typesetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Peggie Sackett
Ad Representative — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers — Don Dove
Kristi Self, Lynn Smith, Kim Spargo, Kent Thomas, John Wright, Rethabile Masilo, Jennifer Worth.

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

Pease recaps concerns

by Ron Pease

I have asked your Echo editor for the opportunity to share information and thoughts with you on a regular basis in this space. It is my hope that this will serve as another point of communication as all of us attempt to improve student life at Maryville.

Several areas of concern were identified during my recent visits in all residence halls. A total of 157 resident students and 28 commuting students offered one or more ideas when asked to offer specific recommendations for improving campus life. A tabulation of responses is available for your review in the Student Affairs office. I have also given a copy to the Echo editors if they have space available in a future issue.

Your concerns in the area of Residence Life were centered on Cable T.V. (25 studeents mentioned a concern), more heat during late evening-early morning hours (27), and additional phone service - additional Knoxville lines (15), phones in student rooms (13), and more pay phones in halls (17). Cost estimates have been requested from the local Cable T.V. company regarding the possibility of getting service into all residence hall lobbies and the snack bar (Isaac's). Our physical plant office is requesting information regarding additional phones.

Fifteen persons requested extended visitation hours. I have suggested that the Student Senate might want to follow up with some research on this issue as well as the issue of a pub on campus (16). In the area of "activities" the number one category (27) was the request for more dances and parties. This issue is being fully reviewed by the Social Programming Committee and the Student Affairs staff (Ms. Joanne Lax-Farr is the staff advisor to that group of students).

Fraternities and sororities were suggested by ten students. New recreation equipment for residence halls (8) and more hall activities (6). have encouraged staff review of budgetary possibilities. Food service centered concerns of several resident and commuter students have been discussed with Dobbs House management. One immediate outcome is the initiation of a prepaid occasional meal ticket for commuting students. A follow-up meeting of commuting students will be scheduled in late March.

It is important for you to know that your responses and input are heard and receive attention. I'll give you the scoop when we find out what can be accomplished with limited funds available. As always, all of us in the Student Affairs area - Ron Pease, Jane Richardson, Bruce Guillaume, Jean Jones, Earl Rash, Randy Lambert, Laura Case, and Jean Webb want to work with you and help in any way possible.

Have a great Spring break! See you in the next Echo!

Editorial sparks student's comments

I would like to respond to the editorial that appeared in the February 27th issue of the Echo entitled "MC needs more quality programming." This editorial made many derogatory remarks about student programming, yet it offered no positive suggestions. Student Programming meets every Tuesday at 5:30 in Proffitt Dining Room, and the committee is always willing and wanting to hear new ideas and suggestions.

I didn't understand how the student programming committee could be considered "apathetic" when it is these students who are taking an active part in the college. They are the ones who are willing to spend many hours planning and implementing programs. I think that that was a contradiction in terms.

Also, if any person is interested in finding out how the $10,150 is spent, I urge him to become active in student programming. I have never seen this committee turn down new members in the four years that I have been at MC. Some of the events that Student Programming has either sponsored or co-sponsored include Homecoming, Casino Night, Mardi Gras, Coffee House, the movie series, and some upcoming events include campus-wide study breaks, "Moontanning Party" and May Madness.

It really saddens me to think that students will complain and be unsatisfied with something, and yet they refuse to act in a positive constructive way. To me, this is the definition of "apathetic," not the students who are trying to make MC a fun and enjoyable place. Have these students been waiting to be entertained and have remained unsatisfied for the last four years? If so, what an apathetic attitude.

Kati Tabor

Student Programming

This letter is in response to your editorial about the Student Programming committee. The current student activity fee for a year is $95. I agree that this is a lot of money. Think of the weekend you could have on $95. But that is the point. The $95 per student per year is divided up between many other organizations such as The Highland Echo, The Chilhowean, Impressions, MACCO, theatre preformances, and home sporting events (football games and basketball games). The Student Programming Committee gets only a fraction of the $95 per student per year.

The Student Programming budget is $10,150. that is a lot of money. Think of the weekend you could have on that. But that is the point. The Student Programming committee sponsors, and co-sponsors events and activities throughout the year. Homecoming activities, Mardi Gras, May Madness, Casino Night, Open "Mic" Night, movies in the snack bar, and dances on the weekends are just some of the activities that Student Programming puts on or helps to put on.

There seems to be a misconception about the membership in Student Programming. Student Programming is EVERYONE. There is no difference between the students reading this editorial and the students meeting in Pearsons every Tuesday night at 5:30, except that the students meeting are trying to improve the social life on campus.

I personally feel that money in the Student Programming budget is well spent, and I know the costs for some of the activities Student Programming has worked on. Perhaps the money would be better invested if more people were involved in the activities on campus.

Chris Lilley

Religious program upsets student

MC maintains a voluntary covenant with the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and a portion of that covenant includes having an ordained Presbyterian minister on campus. But what exactly does a campus chaplain do? This seems to be the question at hand.

For some of you who do not know, the chaplain at MC is Reverend Earl Rash. He has been the chaplain for approximately three years, but what has he developed for a religious life program in that time span? I venture to say, close to nothing (and I do not speak only for myself; I speak as a representative of a large portion of the student body.)

The current "official" religious program under Rash's office consists of Mid-Week Worship (where he rarely preaches), February Meetings (which takes place just one weekend every academic year), and a Peer Counseling Training Session required of the Church and College Scholarship recipients; anything more than that is unknown.

Like many people, I feel that the chaplain's job should consist largely of personal involvement with the whole campus community. However, when a number of individual students were asked about the religious life on campus, nothing under Rash's program was mentioned.

MC does have a small but active religious program done by volunteer students on their own initiative. I am speaking about the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Inter Varsity organizations, both of which Rash does not include in his program except for on a small monetary level.

But getting back to the "official" religious life, or lack thereof . . . . There is a group of students on campus (of which I am no longer allowed to be a part) who have been awarded scholarships for their previous religious involvement. These students have the Church and College Scholarships, with the requirements of being involved in the Religious Life Program. These students work for an hour or more a week as secretaries to Rash -- I must agree that this plays a vital role to the Religious Life Program.

I believe that as students, we have the right to ask for more out of the religious program on campus. And I request that the administration take note of the many complaints and suggestions previously voiced about this portion of the campus community.

DeAnn M. Hargis

Student upset over story

In a recent article by none other than our illustrious, honest edditor, the commuters (yes, that word does have two m's) of MC were headlined as "whiners."

Indeed, one would have thought be reading those headlines, that the article was one long paragraph of high-shrills and monotone moans of various dissatisified commuters (yes, that word still has two m's).

Instead that article was a fairly objective report of some commuters (well, I'll be -- it still has two m's) meetings on campus. As a non-whining commuter (what, can it be there are still two m's?) I do not care to attend the meetings, but I do care that we -- the commuter body of MC -- be represented by headlines in an accurate, unbaised, non-subjective manner. My, my, can it be that our subjective edditor who distorts headlines is indeed a satan worshiper?

Non-whiner commuter (two m's)

Kim Spargo

ENTERTAINMENT

MC theatre to face change

by Jennifer C. Worth

A new face is coming to the MC Theatre Department -- Frank Bradley, who will join the faculty next fall.

Dr. Carolyn Blair, [illegible] of the English Department, confirmed Bradley's acceptance, saying she approved both of his credentials and of his ability to work well with others. She called Bradley "a very human, very approachable type of person," and indicated that she has high hopes for his contributions to the theatre program.

The Theatre Department's popular current head is Don Thomas, who has been with MC since 1979. He has as yet made few concrete plans, but those plans probably won't include MC. He said of his expectations for next year, "I don't plan on being here." A key factor in the faculty changeover is Thomas' lack of a doctoral degree, a title which he does not wish to pursue.

Thomas is optimistic about Bradley's upcoming role at MC. He said that he not only likes Bradley personally, but also feels "confident that Frank will do a good job."

While MC's theatre students will regret Thomas' departure, many also share Thomas' enthusiasm about the future of the program. Last spring, Bradley visited the [illegible] and talked to students; his visit was very well-received. One student said of Bradley, "I think he'll be good for us and for the department."

Bradley is currently completing his doctoral dissertation for Cornell University. He has directed for college, repertory, and professional companies, and his credits include Noel Coward's Private Lives and Harold Pinter's The Collection, along with works by George Bernard Shaw, John Steinbeck, and Truman Capote. In addition, Bradley is no stranger to teaching or to technical theatre.

The change in personnel is bound to have significant effects on that department and on the campus community. There will be a new face in the Theatre Office and a new hand on the helm. This addition, along with the other faculty and administrative changes, such as the arrival of the new president, will alter the atmosphere at MC. In the words of one theatre student, "Next year will definitely be a change."

Leigh Emery

These MC women modeled the latest styles at a fashion show sponsored by Fashion Avenue last Friday.

Julio's: college atmosphere

by Brian C. Linkous

The pizza is undoubtedly the best served in Maryville. The beer is the coldest I've found. The restaurant lies within a five-minute walk from the MC campus. But strangely enough, I've yet to see more than a handful of customers in Julio's Hungary Italian Restaurant.

The first thing you will notice when entering Julio's is the spicy aroma of the sauces cooking in the kitchen. Next, you will likely be greeted by John Julies, the proprietor, who will take your order. At this point you may have trouble deciding exactly what to order since the menu includes lasagna, meatball sandwiches, a salad bar, and pizza.

If you are anything near the typical college student, you will not be able to pass up a Julio's pizza. By whatever method they use, Julio's has a pizza crust which is unlike any other. Now I know nobody likes to dwell on the subject of pizza crusts, but after you try one of these pizzas you will understand the concept a little better.

Julio's offers its customers a choice of eating environments. In the front, there is a big room with tables and lots of light. In the back, there is a bar and booths. However, the back section tends to be a little more private.

For any who haven't tried this restaurant, it is an enjoyable experience that doesn't cost too much. In fact, two people can easily share a Julio's pizza for under six dollars, depending on the number of toppings.

If nothing else, Julio's should be a college type of restaurant. It certainly has all the workings of such, including cold beer, delicious pizza, and a nice atmosphere. However, at this point it simply lacks the college crowd -- a point Julio's is eager to remedy.

According to Julies, potential plans might include a back room full of MC memorabilia and an outdoor patio with tables and umbrellas. But for now, Julio's will continue to do what it does best: serve beer and pizza at a reasonable price.

Applications for Student Programming Chairman

are available in the Student Affairs Office. Deadline: March 27.

Introducing a new program . . . The Living-Learning Series. This concept offers interesting, entertaining, and educational programs held each time in a residence hall lounge. This series is in addition to the ILD Task force and Hall Council programs. Faculty Development of the MC campus," "The Making of a Yeast Bread," " 1987 -- Role of Women," and "Political Affairs/Foreign Affairs -- Update."

For further information or if you have a program suggestion, call Jane Richardson, Office of Student Affairs, ext. 213.

and staff are welcome and encouraged to attend.

The Programs scheduled for March are: March 31, 9:00 p.m., Davis Hall -- "Peru Has Visitors from MC -- A Trip Through the Door of the Sun . . . and Back". Bob Ergenbright.

Leigh Emery

Peggie Sackett modeled this dressy ensemble at last Friday's fashion show.

Some Kind of Wonderful is some kind of wonderful

by Jennifer C. Worth

Most movies aimed at teen-agers are like cotton candy: pleasant wispy stuff with lots of empty air, that will make you sick if you consume too much. Fortunately, there are some exceptions, namely, the films of writer, director, producer John Hughes, the man behind the suburban satire of Sixteen Candles, the clever drama of The Breakfast Club, and the offbeat humor of Ferris Bueller's Day Off.

Hughes' latest effort is Some Kind of Wonderful. So what if it's about high school students? So what if the plot is basically predictable? Hughes, writer and producer this time around, has put together a movie that manages to be very engrossing for "kids of all ages" in spite of its superficial teeny-bopper appeal.

For starters, there's the cast: Eric Stoltz, who did a fine job playing the deformed boy in Mask; Lea Thompson, one of the stars of Back to the Future, and, unfortunately, of Howard the Duck; and Mary Stuart Masterson, who has appeared in several critically-acclaimed but low-grossing films. The critics already knew that Stoltz and Masterson have talent; now, here is a vehicle that can let the public in on the secret. Thompson gets the chance to prove she has talent, and she, like her co-stars, pulls through with flying colors.

These three, and various others who hilariously fill minor roles with names like "Skinhead," bring this movie to life. Hughes has an unerring knack for casting, which Some Kind of Wonderful reinforces. It's too bad that young faces often connotate "brat pack" to today's "mature" audiences. (By the way, these actors aren't as young as the characters they play--Thompson is twenty-five.)

The basic storyline is a variation on the age-old romantic triangle: boy loves girl who doesn't know he exists, girl number 2 loves boy; boy realizes he really loves girl number 2. Yes, it sounds familiar, but Hughes livens up this stock situation with a host of details that make Some Kind of Wonderful rise above average teen-romance flicks. For instance, Thompson plays a beautiful, popular girl, but this social butterfly is really from the wrong side of the tracks and is dirven by an obsessive need to "belong." She borrows diamond earrings from an upper-crust friend, and, tragically, uses her sexual allure to get and keep a popular boyfriend. When she realizes how he is callously using her, she makes a stand, finding that being yourself is a lonely business. And that's just the sub-plot!

The plot details, however intriguing, are less important than the emotions that arise from them. The story is a vehicle for those emotions, which the directing and acting enhance. Even the most hardened college cynic is a potential victim of the angst and charm so typical of Hughes' work.

If nothing else, the soundtrack makes the movie worthwhile. Once again Hughes has mingled classics with new-wave numbers, and he has done so successfully.

Some Kind of Wonderful aptly fits the title: it's wonderful but will probably only appeal to some people, not because of its quality but because of its image. I will be honest: this movie is aimed at teenagers, at depicting an idealized world with as many triumphs as frustrations, and at recapturing a stage of life and growth that probable lies behind members of the MC community. Those factors don't limit the film, but rather, they provide a basis for a very good movie.

John Hughes knows what he's doing, and nobody does it better. Don't let all those high schoolers in line at the theatre scare you away -- go see Some Kind of Wonderful and pretend it's R-rated, if it makes you feel better.

Announcements

Never fear! You don't have to be John Travolta or a Solid Gold dancer to help Maryville College's Student Programming raise money to help fight muscular distrophy. The Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) and Student Programming are sponsoring a Superdance.

The dance-a-thon will be held at the Foothills Mall on Saturday, April 4 from 10:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Those wishing to participate can pick-up pledge sheets at the Maryville College Office of Student Affairs or from any Student Programming member. The information table at the mall may also be a place to get your pledge sheets. There will be a $5 fee for walk-ins.

Door prizes and prizes for the top collectors will be awarded. If you or your group would like more information, please contact M.C. Student Programming or the local chapter of the MDA. Come dance with us and help fight muscular distrophy.

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

Rash: sign protects safety, privacy

by Kristi L. Self

What exactly do the words "private drive" imply? A "private drive" often indicates a desire to be alone, unbothered by anyone or anything. Then again, as some members of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Inter Varsity feel, perhaps "private drive" is a term which suggests detachment and inaccessibility. Rev. Earl Rash, feels that a "private drive" sign simply indicates a family's right to have peace and privacy and not be bothered by the outside community. "The sign is a basic warning of a private residence and a private drive," he said.

The words "private drive" appear on a sign in Rash's driveway and some concern has been expressed over it by students. Some students feel that as a chaplain and counselor, the sign is contradictory to Rash's role. Rash does keep regular office hours and said that his time on campus is adequate for the people who want to see him. He also added that his home phone number is in the directory.

Rash said, "I don't consider my home a place of work," but he added that there are exceptions. Rash said that any person in any profession needs time to themselves.

Rash feels that before the sign was erected his privacy was being violated. "We need privacy as a family," Rash said.

He has three small children and is very concerned over their safety as well. He said that one of his children was almost hit by a car before the sign uas put up.

Rash said, "Our main problem is the people from the community." He said that cars would come speeding through the circle in front of his house, and that joggers would run directly by his back yard where his children were playing. He saw both of these things as threats to their safety.

Rash said that people use the area almost like a public park. "I have no problem with the college use of the woods, but if people are coming to my house it needs to be by invitation only, as a courtesy to me and my family."

Rash said that home is a place where you entertain your family, not a place where you have to be concerned over their safety. He said, "We would prefer a house out in the community." He lives on the campus now because the college provides the residence.

"As a human being, a chaplain needs space and time like anyone else," Rash said.

This sign near Rev. Earl Rash's home in the College Woods has sparked some controversy on campus.

Campus Theft

by Rethabile Masilo

Thefts on campus--are your friends stealing from you? Several occurences have been reported; nobody has been ever caught; and authorities believe that no one but a friend or neighbor would be able to pull anything off.

Even though theft on campus may bee sporadic, occuring "once in a while," it is not anything to ignore. And anyone has ever been a victim may well attest to this. Jean Richarson, dean of students, mentioned money, cassettes, recorders, and "any good piece of equipment," as the things most likely to attract attention from thieves, and therefore as the things most often stolen on campus.

Richardson pointed out that at the time things are stolen, there is hardly ever a report of strangers being seen in the dorm involved. Besides, most things usually disappear within fifteen to thirty minutes, while the owner is in the shower or in the lobby. She added, "Therefo. , there must have been somebody in the dorm who knew about the paycheck [or whatever was stolen]."

Richardson also said, "The trusting nature of the college's age-group explains some of the thefts." Students do not lock their rooms, so their friends just come in and borrow what they need; but someone may "borrow" without returning and break the unwritten rule--this, then, is stealing, as Richardson said.

Hall I has been the hardest hit by thievery. Robyn Hosler, resident director for Hall I, said that money has been stolen from three different rooms, and on another occasion, a VCR was stolen.

Hosler also said that the problem is that people leave their rooms unlocked when they take a shower or go to the water fountain. "It is inconvenient to take keys to the shower," she pointed out, "But it's the only thing that can be done to reduce the thefts."

All the thefts were reported to the Office of Student Affairs and to the campus security department, and the victims were thoroughly questioned. But none of the stolen goods have been retrieved.

A worse kind of theft exists--stealing materials from the library. Joan Worley, head librarian, pointed out that

See p. 8

Series extends education

by Pam Mathews

Each weekday, students attend classes and then usually return to their rooms at the residence halls to study, sleep, or maybe watch television. The residence halls are obviously a "home away from home" for many students.

A new program has been instigated in hopes of altering the perception of a residence college, such as Maryville College, so that it is not merely considered a place to attend classes, study, or party. The program is called the Living and Learning series, which is in addition to the ILD Task Force and Student Programming. The concept of the Living-Learning series revolves around the extension of learning outside the classroom into a relaxed environment, such as the lounges of the residence halls. The series also involves providing entertaining and informative programs that will bring together faculty, administrators, and members of the community.

Jane Richardson, dean of students, stated that life is an ongoing learning experience and where better to learn than on a college compus. "This program provides an opportunity to learn something new. The residence halls are as convenient as any other location on campus and they also provide an informal and comfortable environment," she said.

See p. 8

Scots' coach displays high hopes for next fall

by Brian C. Linkous

If coach James Pavao's expectations are fulfilled, the Scots are on their way to a stronger season next year. Speaking last week in the absence of recruiting coordinator Ty Retkovich, Pavao expressed optimism about next year.

"Things are going pretty well. We are talking with about 320 kids of which around 80 have already visited," Pavao said.

Despite the large number of prospects Pavao conceded that the recruiting staff is less concerned with quanity than it was last year. The Scots hope to gain a group of 35-40 students for next year's squad.

"We can't bring in the kids if we can't put helmets on them," Pavao said. He added, however, that the Scots should have 90 - 100 players on next year's squad.

Next year's squad is potentially of a higher quality as 10-15 of the recruits are applying for Presidential Scholarships.

This year's recruiting effort has mainly been concentrateed in the Southeast with primary emphasis on Tennessee, Florida, and Kentucky.

In other areas Pavao believed the move to leave the Old Dominion Athletic Conference is a good one. "It's a good conference but we simply spend toomuch on travel."

However, the Scots are as of yet undecided about which conference to join if any. Coach Larry Stephens and Randy Lambert will ultimately make the decision.

The recently formed Scots' Booster Club is yet another area of optimism for Pavao and his fellow coaches. "The effects have already been positive, but I think it will be even more positive in the future. It [money from the boosters] can't be used to run the athletic program but it helps to add the little extras," Pavao said.

Lady Scots start season on a high note

by Kristi L. Self

With two big victories against Tennessee Wesleyan, the Lady Scots started their 1987 schedule on a high note and they plan to make the rest of the season sound as sweet.

In a double-header on March 5, the Scots pounced on Tennessee Wesleyan 11-1 and 10-0. The second game, pitched by Andrea Dye, was a no-hitter.

This year's team has many returning players and some very talented first-year members. The pitching team possesses both depth and experience. Donna Clancy and Andrea Dye are returning and a promising freshman, Missy Barker, will be joining them on the mound.

Those pitchers will be challenged not only by the batters, but by a new rule which increases the distance from the mound to the plate from 40 to 43 feet. The rest of the field is a combination of veterans and newcomers.

This year's team is once again led by Sharon Arrington and assistant coach Paul Mills.

This year is very challenging for the Lady Scots and will hopefully earn them a berth in NCAA post-season tournaments. MC is ranked NCAA, division III, which means that no scholarship money is given. Their competition includes many teams classified as division I and II schools, which means their players are receiving funds for playing softball. The MC players play for the simple love of the game and the competition.

Last year's season left the Lady Scots with a 21-7-1 record. This year there are 38 scheduled games, plus a tournament in Fayetville, NC on April 3-4. MC's only remaining home game is on March 30 against Austin Peay.

Spring Break for the Lady Scots will not entail sunbathing on a popular beach, or going straight home after F-hour on Friday; it will include six very important ballgames -- Wilmington College, NC Wesleyan, and Methodist College, in North Carolina. The team leaves on Friday morning to face their challengers. These games will have much bearing on post season play.

The Lady Scots are confident, but they know they must work together as a team and use a definite strategy in order to have a great season, and once again, be the winningest team on campus.

Banquet recognizes outstanding Scots' achievements

by Brian C. Linkous

The Scots' football team held their annual banquet on Feburary 28 at the Airport Hilton. The event showcased the achievements of various Scots' players both on and off the field.

Forty-two of the Scots' players received letters at the banquet. Of the 42 lettermen, 23 were freshmen. Other awards were the Scots Circle Award which went to the best player in a particular position. The winners were Scott Owens, Chris Johannsen, Darrel Lauderdale, Jeff Reichert, and John Speights.

The offensive and defensive captains were Jeff Seagle and Jeff Collins, respectively.

Academically the Scots were strong last semester as six players made the honor roll. Jeff Denton was awarded an excellence in academics award for achieving a 3.70 GPA during his college career.

THE BACK PAGE

Cuts from pg. 1

within a department. The cuts will just require department heads to make better use of their money, he said.

When asked about the cuts in student related programs, Pease said, "I don't anticipate cuts in these areas." But, Pease also said, "I don't think anyone in student affairs can state complete immunity from cuts."

Even though Admissions will face cuts in their department, Ferrin has a goal of doubling student enrollment. He said that the college ought to admit those students who have a likely chance for success at Maryville College. "We are obligated as an institution to work with, challenge, and support students all the way to their graduation," Ferrin said.

So far, there have been 17 percent more applicants for the next academic year as compared to this time last year. Another significant factor, consistent with Ferrin's objectives, is that one out of ten applicants have been turned away for various reasons that the Admissions Office feels would inhibit or diminish their ability to suceed at Maryville College

Another area that Ferrin feels needs work is better using the college's resources and facilities. The swimming pool is one area under consideration. The school is currently losing money on its operation so various options to remedy the problem have been looked at, they include: opening it to public use (with special reserved hours for MC students), changing pool hours, offering different programs and classes, or closing it completely.

Ferrin said the pool is just one example of how things are going to have to be changed. He said, about all aspects of the college, "We need to upgrade it, or not have it." He also said, "We are going to put priority on those things the students think are important."

Most agree that the budget cuts, however unpopular, are very necessary. Downey said, "We are trying to look into the future and make sure that things are sound down the road."

"We have to get the budget in as sound a position as possible as we try to build the college," said Ferrin.

Ferrin anticipates a bright future for Maryville College. He wants the students to have really strong academics, and really strong fun. His basic philosophy is "Whatever we do we ought to do well, if we can't do it well, I don't know if it should be done at all."

Break from p. 1

bacchanals. For instance, Walt Disney World is offering a discount two-day admission fee to college students during March. An interesting option is the brand-new "Penrod's Collegiate Beach Games" in Miami Beach. Penrod Brothers, Inc, is sponsoring the olympic-style competitions from March 1 to April 4, with winning teams to be selected for each week. The events include volleyball, "Ultimate Frisbee," five-kilometer run, weightlifting, Navy obstacle course, softball, flag football, and water polo; all events will take place on the beach.

In general, MC students seem to have few detailed plans for their week off, intending mainly to "kick back and cut loose." Many will no doubt opt for the often-hedonistic allure of Fort Lauderdale, Daytona, and Miami. Some, like Barbara Bolt, will indeed head for the Sunshine State, but to less-publicized retreats. A few share Heidi Weiffenbach's situation: she lives in Florida, so following the sun south is the same as returning home for her.

Many students will enjoy a less sensational break. Becky Walker is one of several who plan to visit relatives. Of course, some have job obligations, and some just won't be able to resist the temptation to catch up on or to get ahead on their studies; Kimberly Spargo, for instance, has resolved to work on her Independent Study.

The denizens of MC will be scattering in all directions as classes wrap up today. But wherever the students and faculty go, the classrooms will stand blessedly empty, and few people will regret to leave them for a week. As Joe Chamberlain said, "It's going to be wonderful to just get away froim everything for a while."

Series from p. 6

Ron Pease, vice president of student affairs, expressed that the Living-Learning series is complementary to the liberal arts philosophy. "It's an attempt to add another dimension to the residence college, such as Maryville College, by bringing in faculty and members of the community who have something to share that is of interest."

A future goal planned for the Living-Learning series is to invite people from outside the college community to share their knowledge and experience. This also includes the possibility of these guest staying overnight or for several days on campus, conducting seminars and informal talk groups in order to expand the scope of the series.

On March 31, Bob Ergenbright will present "A Trip through the Door of the Sun and Back."

How to wipe out your student loans.

Let US do it! The Tennessee Army National Guard can repay up to $10,000 of your Government Guaranteed Student Loans when you qualify. PLUS, you get the new Guard GI Bill which pays directly to YOU $140 a month. PLUS you get a $2,000 cash bonus for entering.

All it costs YOU is a weekend a month and two weeks during the summer, and for that you get a nice, fat paycheck, too, plus a LOAD of fringe benefits! And veterans, ANY BRANCH, normally enter at their former rank.

For more information, with NO obligation, call

Sgt. Jimmy Lindsey -- 981-2347

SHORTS

(OCR) -- Visiting hours in Notre Dame dormitories have been extended until 12:30 am on Sundays, but all "overnight parietal violations" will be considered a serious infraction of university rules, officials. Violators could be subject to dismissal, according to the new rules.

(OCR) -- The price of keeping cool. To offset a drop in dormitory occupancy and at the same time pay for air conditioning units in Indiana U. residence halls, the school will increase next year's housing rates by 7 percent. Students will pay $178 more a year for the standard double room, a plan some say will drive even more students away.

(OCR) -- Students should be able to drink, but they should do it responsibly, says the Oregon State U. student senate. The group proposed creating a social hour in which light alcoholic beverages, non-alcoholic beverages and food be served from 4 to 7 pm in the campus union. A 40-cent per-student fee would pay for the project.

Theft from p. 6

more things have disappeared from the library in the past than now.

"Before the renovation, we had no alarms on the doors and screens on the windows, and there were many missing items," Worley said.

Things stolen from the library range from magazines to records, "but we don't discover the loss until much later, when we do inventory," Worley said. "Library theft is a loss not to an individual but to the school...to the whole community," she concluded.

Something can be done about security in the library. Alarms have been installed, windows have been screened, and the practice of checking bags at the exit point has become more vigorous.

Not much more security can be applied to the dorms, so the residents themselves must be the ultimate security. They must always be on the lookout for any uncommon happenings, and they must always lock rooms, even when going away for only a short time.

ENTERTAINMENT: Carter displays stained glass pg. 4

SPORTS: Arrington resigns pg. 7

NEWS: Group offers glimpse of Nicaragua pg. 5

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 7 | Maryville College | Friday, April, 3, 1987

Classrooms, offices will close

by Kimberly D. Spargo

The proposed closing of Wilson Chapel has caused quite a stir among faculty and students alike. The closing of the building, which also houses the theatre and several offices and classrooms, would mean the shifting of current Chapel classes to the Fine Arts Building.

The move, supported by Dr. Richard Ferrin, would be intended to help cut building maintenance costs and aid in lowering the current college debt. Ferrin said, "We need to make some financial improvements."

Several of the professors and teachers currently teaching classes and holding rehearsals in the building would be affected by the move. Recently, a group of the Sign Language instructors requested shades for some of the glass on the upper floor in order to cut down on the amount of glare and heat that filters into the classrooms, making teaching conditions difficult. Some of the professors feel that moving to the FAC would help alleviate this problem and others, but that extensive improvements at the FAC also need to be made.

Several students whose activities regularly involve spending extensive time in the Chapel building have mixed feelings about the proposed closing.

Jonathan Yarboro, Playhouse and Playmaker member, said, "My initial response is negative. If it does happen, I hope it can foster creativity by encouraging the use of other facilities for the purpose of theatrical performances."

Yarboro said he felt that Isaac's, Thaw Hall, the CCM, and several campus amphitheaters including the one in the woods and the one built in between the FAC building could be utilized for performances.

Another student said he was trying to see both sides of the issue. Jon Allison, choir member, adjunct Playmaker member, and stage manager for some Playhouse performances, said he had two reservations: "I hate to see any more buildings closed on this campus . . . . I also fear that the lack of regular activity in that building [Wilson] will ultimately result in its

see pg. 6

Julio Pesiri

Dan Reynolds snatches a moment of solitude in the Wilson Chapel building. Next year, solitude will be more commonplace here.

Library enters computer age

by Brian C. Linkous

The Maryville College library has finally moved into the world of computer technology, and for those who have ever been through the process of comprehensive research, the news is indeed welcome.

The new computer retrieval service, known as After Dark, now links MC to 75 bibliograpic databases. In simpler terms, the service allows MC to access periodical indexes by computer.

Previously, a student researching a certain topic would face the task of leafing through endless pages of print indexes, such as the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. With the new computer service, a student can punch in the topic on the computer and have a list of all sources about the topic printed out. Obviously, the sources will be limited to the 75 databases.

According to Joan Worley, library director, the service will be especially helpful when dealing with some of the more complicated and inconvenient print indexes such as Psychological Abstracts.

"The service will primarily do three things: provide currency, convenience, and combine terms," Worley said.

At present, the MC library has 20-25 print indexes. After Dark's 75 databases will triple the scope of indexes available to the MC community.

Yet another advantage will be its access to newspaper indexes. At present there is a three-to-four-week lag between when a paper is printed and its appearance in an index. The After Dark

see pg. 6

Wage increase may strain budget

by Lynn King

Attention student workers:

One question: how would you like to make more money for working fewer hours? That's easy enough to answer; sounds great at first, doesn't it? The minimum wage increase now being discussed in Congress would have that effect, but for college students, there is inevitably a dark side to the proposal too.

Minimum wage, which is all student workers are ever paid, has been at $3.35 since 1981, and some legislators and labor leaders feel that it is time for an increase. According to a recent

see page 6

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Law tramples drivers' rights

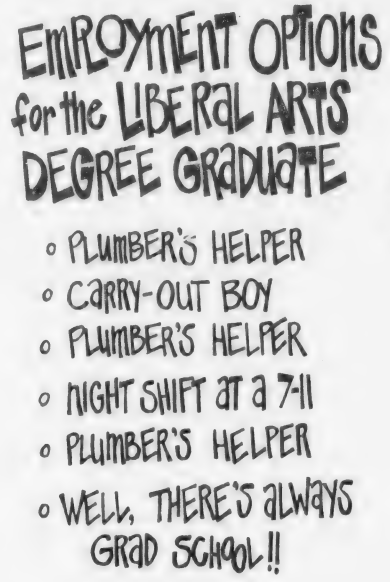
Drunk driving is one of the hottest topics for today's lawmakers, and rightly so. But existing Tennessee law can trample the innocent in its hurry to reprimand offenders. Drivers accused of DUI are not guaranteed the right to take a blood-alcohol test, even if they specifically request one. This situation is unjust and unfortunate.

Last summer, a Blount County resident, accused of DUI, passed the perfunctory roadside test but was refused a blood-alcohol test. On August 14, a judge convicted her of DUI; three months later, a jury did the same.

She received the lightest sentence, forty-eight hours in jail and a small fine, but might as easily have faced up to a $500 fine, a full year in jail, and a revoked license for six months, as prescribed by the Tennessee Code Annotated. If nothing else, a conviction permanently mars one's record. With all this at stake, shouldn't the verdict depend, if at all possible, on solid evidence? A blood-alcohol test would provide such evidence.

Under Tennessee law, if anyone who is suspected of DUI refuses a blood-alcohol test, that person's license will be temporarily revoked. The Code, however, should but does not make any provision for those who demand and are denied such a test.

The statute seems weighted in favor of the "guilty until proven innocent" assumption, then fails to guarantee defendants a means to prove that innocence.



We certainly need stiff penalties for the heinous crime of drunk driving, but the legal system should be careful not to sacrifice the principles of justice in its haste to assign the penalties.

Highland Echo

Editor — Jennifer C. Worth
Assistant Editor — Lynn King
Photo Advisor — Tillman Crane
Typesetter — Al Hipkins
Business Manager — Peggie Sackett
Ad Representative — Barbara Moffat
Advisor — Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers — Don Dove, Craig Canevit, Lynn King, Lisa Harvey Linginfelter, Brian C. Linkous, Rethabile Masilo, Lissa McCleod, Kristi Self, Kim Spargo, John Wright.

The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo*, box 2820, Maryville College. The* Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times*.*

Pease offers advice for the end of the term

by Ron Pease

It's that time of year! A lot of important decisions will be coming down in the next couple of months.

Seniors! How is your job or graduate school search progressing? The Career Planning and Placement office continues to publish pertinent information regarding companies and agencies conducting interviews on campus. Applications and resumes should be completed and interview techniques should be reviewed. Don't forget to request your references to send those letters of positive support out to the appropriate offices!

If a summer job search is on your "things to do list" -- now is the time to acquaint yourself with the two information sheets available in the CPP office -- "Summer Jobs: Clues for Success" and "Summer Jobs and Internships." A list of part-time jobs is also posted in CPP.

Regardles of your short or long-range plans, an important academic "window of opportunity" is on the immediate horizon. Resist the temptation to put the books and term paper aside as the weather warms and spring fever arrives on the scene. Give it your best shot for the next six weeks!

Decision-making continues in the weeks ahead as you involve yourself in course selection for the 1987-88 academic year. Have you maintained contact with your academic advisor?

Information will soon be forthcoming regarding residence hall room selection for next year. Single? Double? Roommate?

Student Senate and class officer selection will have been conducted by the time you head out for that eagerly anticipated summer vacation. How about it? Why not throw your hat into the ring? Your College will grow and prosper with additional student participation and leadership!

As always, faculty and staff members stand ready to assist you in the decision-making process. Hard work, common sense, and good judgement will carry the day!

See you next time!

Book banning outrages this student

In the March 25, 1987 edition of the Maryville-Alcoa Daily Times, an article was printed, reporting that 44 textbooks were banned from Alabama schools by District Judge W. Brevard Hand. An appeal has already been filed.

Hand was reported as saying that the textbooks have discriminated against "the very concept of religion . . . by omissions so serious that a student learning history from them would not be apprised of relevant facts about America's history." How in hell can one man determine what is and is not relevant in America's history.? Judge Hand fails to understand that his decision is relevant in America's history --. a gross mistake of stupidity.

Hand also said that the textbooks were

see pg. 3

Grad to students: Start preparing

Dear Students:

So you're thinking about a career or looking for a job. You should know right away that neither is easy -- nothing to give up on, but you have to be prepared.

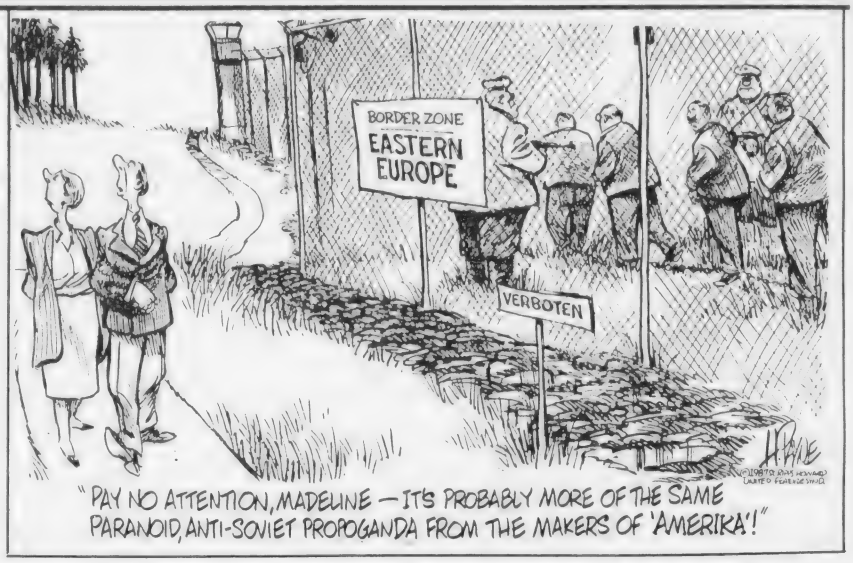
For starters, have you determined what you want to do? Is it compatible with your skills and interests? What are the number of openings in your field? (Your job area may be expanding, holding its own, or becoming obsolete.)

What experience do you have in your field? think of courses taken, jobs held (paid or unpaid), internships done, related extracurricular activities, even hobbies and special projects.

Where are the jobs in your field located? Are you willing to relocate?

Have you prepared a flawless resume? (It should include your job objective, education, experience, special skills and qualifications.) Do you have references? Can you write an effective cover letter?

Very important: have you made contacts in your field? Have you asked friends, relatives, teachers, counselors -- anyone and everyone -- who they know in the field that you could talk to for information and possible job interviews?



Are you ready for a job interview? Can you tell an employer why he should hire you? Why you want to work for him? Do you know the importance of proper attire and business etiquette? Can you write an effective thank-you note after the interview?

These are some of the questions you'll need to consider. It looks like a lot to remember, and perhaps it is. But competition for jobs is tough, and a little preparation will go a long way.

Two references you will find particularly helpful: Richard Bolles' What Color Is Your Parachute? and The Occupational Outlook handbook. Both are updated annually to include the latest information and are available at Career Planning and Placement.

Chin up. The job you want is out there if you know how to get it.

Peggy Millsaps

Books from p. 2

"promoting the religion of secular humanism." In this case I am a secular humanist, and I want and demand my rights!

The students of the high schools of Alabama want answers and they want their textbooks back. They can't understand why books like History of a Free People are banned -- neither can I! Apparently Judge Hand fails to realize the implications of "free people!"

To Judge Hand, I say, only tyrants and martyrs are remembered in history -- figure out which one you are. To everyone, I say -- the mind is like a parachute, it doesn't work unless it is open!!

Dan Fox

(OCR) -- Student leaders and student service professionals ranked human rights as the most serious issue facing the U.S. today, acording to an imformal poll by Ted Kennedy, Jr. Addressing the National Conference on Student Services in Boston he raised five issues. The audience rated their importance by a show of hands:

1. Human rights (50%); 2. Money for higher education (40%); 3. Nuclear war (10%); 4. The national debt (10%); 5. The overall economic health of the country.

NEWS/FEATURE

Impressions showcases students' talents

by Craig E. Canevit

As the end of the school year draws near, so does the release of the 1987 Impressions, Maryville College's creative writing magazine.

"Right now, I'm planning to get it out by the first of May," said Impressions editor Sherri Jones. "Like last year, it'll cost $1. And if you buy a new copy, you can get a copy from previous years for free."

"Last year we printed 250 copies; this year I'm printing less, but I'm making it bigger," Jones added.

The magazine is the semester-length product of a staff of basically three people -- Editor Jones, Assistant Editor Ellen Foreman and Business Manager Charlie Gumula -- under advisor Dr. Charlotte Beck.

Jones calls Impressions "an outlet for the writers on the campus. It gives them a place to get their works published and to get other people's criticism." Such works in the past have included short stories, poetry, haiku, sketches, pictures and, last year, even a play. Initially this year, Jones said, "I got less writing than last year and no sketches. I expected a lot more because of Dr. Beck's poetry interim [in which writers produced material intended for submission to the magazine], but the students gave me nothing. I went to Dr. Beck, and she gave me a lot of stuff they may be quite surprised to see in there."

Impressions will be sold in Fayerweather and Proffits. "Whoever wants to get a copy and read it has a chance," said Jones. "I know Leslie Neir puts several copies in the Admissions Office. And there's a copy put in the library. We even have our own card catalog number."

The magazine may have some changes in its future, Jones said. "I probably will not be editor of it next year." Jones added that Ellen Foreman will be her replacement.

'I'd like to see more people get involved in it," Jones said. But a price increase isn't likely. "We're not after a profit. People told me I should charge more but I wanted as many people as possible to see it and enjoy it."

Wanted: One public relations assistant, three box office attendants. And other theatre operations personnel, ie. ushers, concession workers, etc. Personal interviews Saturday April 11, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Smoky Mountain Passion Play office, 2nd floor of the Associated Dental Professionals Building, 366 Glascock Street, Alcoa, Tennessee. For public relations assistant and box office attendants only, applicants may call for appointments. 984-4111

ENTERTAINMENT

Stained glass comes to FAC

by Lissa McLeod

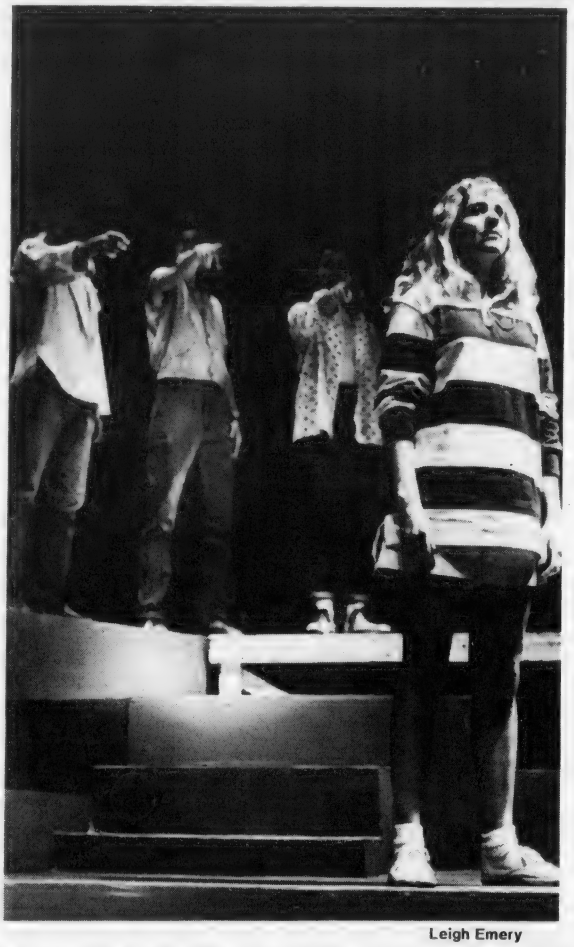
Catherine Carter is not your ordinary MC graduate -- or is she?

Carter, who graduated in 1981 with a degree in recreation, now works with stained glass for a living. Her art work will be featured in the art gallery at the Fine Arts Center during the month of April. Included in the exhibit will be small suncatchers, large windows, and photographs of some of her commissioned works.

Carter began working with stained glass four years ago, with no previous instruction in art. A friend asked her to take a class at the YMCA when there were not enough students signed up for the class to be offered. Once she completed the class, she was hooked.

Two years later, Carter took classes in stained glass at Arrowmont School in Gatlinburg and gained new ideas and techniques. Now she works in her home teaching beginning courses on stained glass and making a variety of pieces for craft shows and commissions.

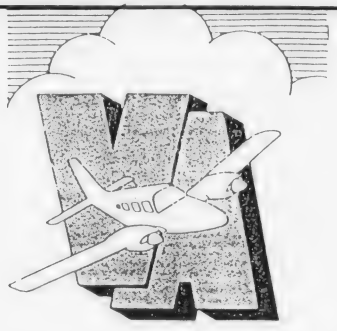
At her April exhibit on campus, Carter plans to display seven of her larger works. They will include a lighthouse scene, several windows designed according to a mathematical proportions formula she learned at Arrowmont, and some Victorian windows.



Also in the exhibit will be some smaller pieces in three dimensions, such as a nativity scene, and photographs of some of her commissioned work. Carter has done windows designed to match particular color shemes, lamps, transoms, and cabinet doors.

Much of her commission work is done in Nashville or Knoxville, although she says the market in the Maryville area is growing. Her local work includes the small stained glass windows at Highland Presbyterian Church.

Carter uses a variety of techniques in her work, depending on the desired affect. In the lighthouse scene on display at the art gallery, she used fused glass for the lighthouse (achieved by heating individual pieces of glass to a high temperature, thus allowing them to fuse together into one piece of glass), seashells set into glass for the beach, and double glazed glass to make waves in three diminsions that lap onto the beach. Other pieces also use sandblasting, acid etching, and beveled glass.



Carter is a member of several local associations, including the Blount County Arts and Crafts Guild, the Tennessee Artists and Craftsmen Association, and the Homebuilders's Association. She exhibits at ten to fifteen shows each year and will be in the Dogwood Arts Festival at the Foothills Mall on April 10 - 12.

This 1981 MC graduate never majored in art, but has used her liberal arts education to pursue a career in stained glass artistry. Her work will be on display in the art gallery at the Fine Arts Center throughout April. Come see the value of a liberal arts education.

Leigh Emery

The Judges (Joe Chamberlain, Mike Howell, and Jennifer C. Worth) acuse Joan of Arc (Heidi Weiffenbach) of heresy -- but what are their real reasons? find out when The Lark opens on April 17.

Sunday, April 5, 1 p.m. - 6 p.m.
Fifth Anniversary
OPEN HOUSE

prizes-- refreshments movies -- exhibits
entertainment -- displays

Fly for Charity!

VOLUNTEER AVIATION
Charter - Flight School - Cargo

Airplane rides over city at 5¢ per pound!
WEATHER AND TIME PERMITTING
PROCEEDS TO BE DONATED TO CANCER AID FOR TENNESSEE

Mannequin is frivolous fun, with moments of real humor

by Jennifer C. Worth

Mannequin is a sitcom at heart. A very long, occasionally amusing sitcom, but a sitcom nonetheless.

The premise is simple, but tried and true. A basically normal person with a few endearing hang-ups becomes involved with an alien of some sort. It was accoomplished with aplomb in Starman and Splash, but here it is less memorable.

Sure, Mannequin is entertaining enough. Andrew McCarthy (St. Elmo's Fire, Pretty in Pink) is engaging and likeable, and Kim Cattrall, who plays the "mannequin," is gorgeous. The baddies are thoroughly bad, either slimy or smarmy.

The plot drifts along from comic situation to comic situation, laced with a little romance and some hints of a real story, until the requisite happy ending. It's all very . . . well . . . pleasant.

The movie's only real hilarity results from a flamboyant window-dresser named Hollywood, who is prone to bouts of near-hysteria and who elevates effiminacy to an art form: the license plate on his purple Cadillac reads "Bad Girl." This character is a gem.

In a world where mindless Rambos struggle with depressing soul-searchers for box-office bucks, Mannequin is a welcome break. It is lighthearted. Light headed. Light.

Mannequin is not something you will want to purchase on videocassette to add to your film library. You shouldn't even pay the full evening price to see it, unless you are in a particularly frivolous mood, although it is worth matinee admission.

For relatively mindless entertainment and a bit of genuine comedy, Mannequin is the movie to see.

Franklins enrich program

by Lynn Smith

Kelly and Kumiko Franklin are both involved in the foreign student program at Maryville College. Kelly Franklin is the Intensive English Language Director; Kumiko Franklin is the Assistant Foreign Student Advisor and Japanese Instructor.

The Franklins met in Osaka, Japan, where they taught at the same school. Franklin had been a junior high teacher in America and was traveling a lot. He then worked at a restaurant in San Francisco, but it went out of business.

"I saw these advertisements for teaching in Japan and I wanted to teach," was one of his reasons for going to Japan. He said he did not have a difficult time adjusting to Japan. His wife said, "I think he adjusted very well."

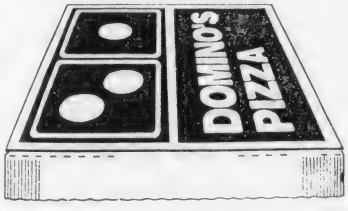
After they were married, the Franklins moved to the United States. Kumiko Franklin wanted to live in America because she said, "We like changes and there is a new life here."

Prior to meeting her husband, Kumiko Franklin had lived in Ohio where she worked at an elementary school as an exchange teacher. After they came to the United States together, they both enrolled at Ohio University where both recently received their master's degrees in Linguistics.

When Kumiko Franklin was asked how she felt about teaching Japanese to American students, she said, "Once the students learn the Japanese writing system, it is not too difficult for them to learn pronunciation and the rest of the language."

Kelly Franklin said that he has taken the emphasis off of foreign students learning so much grammar. Now he is making the students use the language more through writing papers and attending lectures.

When not involved with foreign program, the Franklins spend time with their young daughter, Millie, and their new son, born in February.



The Franklins like to cook and try to make a variety of dishes including Malaysian, Japanese, Italian, and Mexican. Kelly Franklin said, "I make the best enchiladas in East Tennessee, I am convinced!"

Kumiko and Kelly Franklin

One call does it all!™

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE!

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

Coke® 16oz.

$1
$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 4-19-87

Fast, Free Delivery™
407 W. Broadway
983-0000

Nicaragua is the "Real World"

by Charlie Parsons

Like many small colleges in "enviable" environments, Maryville is a great place to think and learn -- in peace. But for all the advantages of idyllic settings, students often yearn to know what is going on far from peaceful campuses. In fact, by the time that most students near the end of their college experience, they are talking almost daily about the "real world."

Fortunately for students of Maryville College, there will be a rare opportunity to get a glimpse of a very real world far from the peace of our campus. It is a world that we have heard much about on the news and read about in the papers, but have probably been left wondering -- just what is going on in Nicaragua?

Maryville College will host three individuals who have lived and worked in Nicaragua. Chantal Bianchi, a native of Switzerland, was a Catholic volunteer who did literacy training until her fiancee was killed in a contra ambush. Juana Moran Vasquez is a native Nicaraguan who spent her time organizing peasant communities before and after the revolution. Her areas of expertise are gardening and natural medicine. Peter Olsen was a member of Witness for Peace who spent three years in Nicaragua. Witness for Peace is an organization whose volunteers provide an ongoing effort to bring about peaceful change in Nicaragua.

By providing a distinctly American presence in Nicaragua, Witness for Peace delegates give a clear message to their government back home -- stop supporting the contras!

Juana, Peter, and Chantal will speak on Tuesday, April 7th at 7:30 in the FAC Lounge. They are sponsored by Witness for Peace and the East Tennessee Pledge of resistance. While on campus they will be hosted by the Maryville College Peace Education Task Force. Members of the Task Force encourage all students to attend this get together.

Not only will you find out much about the war in Nicaragua, you will have a chance to find out about the Task Force and meet many folks from our area who have been deeply involved in Nicaragua. If you pay taxes or can be drafted, you have a vested interest in finding out more about Nicaragua!

NEWS/FEATURE

Students mull over their books in a Study Hall session

Chapel from p. 1

decay. At the same time, I realize that we are in an incredible financial bind." Allison further remarked that "students will have to get used to this type of financial cutbacks."

Donald Thomas, theater director, had only one thing to say about the proposed closing: "Can we print words like that?"

The theatre itself will remain open for rehearsals and performances; the chapel will undergo some renovations to improve what Ferrin called the "aesthetic feel of the place." These improvements should be complete by commencement.

As to the building as a whole, Ferrin stressed, "[It] won't be a closed-up building like Carnegie." In any case, when the doors of MC open in the fall, the classrooms in the Chapel building will remain closed.

Computer from p. 1

service is capable of accessing newspaper indexes back to 48 hours.

But as with any piece of equipment, the new system will only be as helpful as its user's knowledge of how to use it. Therefore, the library is requiring that students and faculty sign up for a one-hour class to orient them on when, why, and how to use the computer service. However, librarian Rebecca Young will be in charge of the After Dark service and will be able to assist with any questions.

As with most such computer services, After Dark is not inexpensive. The costs will be passed on to the users. Worley said, "Users will be paying for convenience and access." According to Worley, a typical twenty minute search will cost around ten dollars.

"Right now we do not have a bench mark to measure exactly how much it will cost," Worley said. The different databases cost different amounts to access ranging from $6-31 an hour.

Aside from the obvious convenience of the new system, Worley also believes that it will compel students to make better use of their time while doing comprehensive studies such as Independent Study. "There will be more compulsion to plan the time a student has, because some materials will not be available in our library. Therefore interlibrary loans wil probably need to be used and that will require more time."

In addition to After Dark, MC can access the University of Tennessee Knoxville's extensive card catalog. Previously, MC librarians called UTK to have their librarians search for specific titles. The new system will eliminate this process by searching the catalog itself.

In addition to searching the UTK catalog by traditional means, the new system will be capable of finding authors, titles, and subjects by keyword. For example, Faulkner will pull up William Faulkner.

Does the computer service reflect a trend towards MC library automation? "I think inevitably there will be more automation," Worley said. Presently, a consultant is working with the library to help plan for future automations.

Student Affairs seeks to improve retention

by Lynn Smith

With the increase in the freshman class this year the Student Affairs Office is putting more emphasis on solutions to the retention problem at Maryville College.

When Ron Pease, Vice President for Student affairs, was asked about the retention problem he said, "Some people leave because they made the wrong choice." Pease said that the actual college experience is not what a lot of people anticipate.

According to Pease, Student Affairs is trying to reduce the retention problem by several procedures. "In a college of this size it is easy to assume that everyone receives the assistance he or she needs," says Pease. Plans are being put into action that can make sure this assistnace is received.

Informal meetings with each member of this year's freshman class is one effort that Student Affairs is using. This way students can come to someone with their concerns before they develop into problems. Pease said, "We are trying to bring more programs of interest into the residential halls." These kind of programs include aerobics, social guest speakers, learning CPR, and others. Study hall and tutoring programs are available to every student. Pease is also trying to improve communication through the Student Senate.

When a student has decided to withdraw from Maryville he or she first goes through an "exit interview." Pease said, "I it appears that we can come up with a solution to the problem we do." He also said, "If the decision is already made then we identify the reasons and make sure we provide the student with the correct procedure." The information is used from the "exit interview" to better the college, says Pease. "We identify what factors have contributed to the student's decision to withdraw and try to eliminate the factors so they won't cause other students to withdraw."

Wage from p. 1

article in the Christian Science Monitor, studies show that minimum wage would have to be raised to $4.61 to restore purchasing power of the dollar to the 1978 level.

Although this initially sounds wonderful to minimum wage earners, the end result could be a drastically reduced number of those reaping the benefits. Some employers argue that a federally mandated increase would raise their costs and force them to hire fewer workers; many feel that unemployment would inevitably rise.

What would such a move mean to the 200-plus student workers at MC? "I would personally think it's going to hurt college students more than anybody else," said Director of Financial Aid Dan Perkins.

The increase in available funds to pay student workers would result in one of two things: decreased productivity for the college (the same number of students working fewer hours), or a significant reduction in the number of students the college could employ. Obviously, this situation would have an impact on the financial aid situations of many students.

Whatever the outcome of the debate, Perkins does not feel that this is something MC will have to worry about in the very near future, in light of the fact that even momentous legislation is never dealt with quickly in Congress and that minimum wage increases are hardly a top priority.

Coach resigns

by Joe Johnson

Sharon Arrington, MC's women's basketball and softball coach, officially resigned last week from her positions. Arrington resigned after spending four years coaching women's athletics for Maryville College.

Why did Arrington resign from her position? "I am leaving for opportunies of greater advancement," Arrington said. "Maryville College women's athletics is at a stalling point which seems unlikely to move foward, because of impending restraints on the program."

She said that she is "leaving the position with a great attitude about the players who compose the women's athletics teams at Maryville College." Arrington also said, "I will miss them tremendously, they're a great group of girls!"

Arrington stated that she felt it is very important that her successor be a legitimate full-time coach, and that the coach should be here full-time and available for the needs of the players on and off the field. She added, "the players need a coach who they can take their problems to, preferrably female," and that "the players' need for a full-time coach should not be ignored."

Reflecting on her career at MC, Arrington said that she has gained valuable experiences at Maryville and that she has immensely enjoyed all her coaching positions since coming here.

Arrington's departure will be a loss to women's athletics and Maryville College. In the words of one of her former players, "you just can't replace a person like Coach Arrington!"

Julio Pesiri

Scott Hudgens makes a play for the MC Men's tennis team during the March 25 match against Roane State. Don Dove won singles, 6-2, 6-3, but the Scots lost the match.

Lady Scots tennis team shows skill on the court

by Lisa Harvey Linginfelter

This year's Lady Scots Tennis Team is "one of the best women's tennis teams at MC in a number of years," according to Coach Dr. David Cartlidge.

Four players are back from last year's second-place WIAC conference team, plus the addition of Jackie Osborne, who has not been able to play for the last two years, and freshman standout Becky Shackelford, along with the addition of Heather Farrar, Amy McCleod, and Keiko Okamoto, it's no wonder Cartlidge has high hopes. The returning players are Raina Boring, Margaret Callaway, Lisa Harvey Linginfelter, and Teresa Petitt.

Callaway agrees with Cartlidge that this year's team appears to be strong, and Farrar adds that the team spirit is really good.

The Lady Scots won their first two matches, beating Milligan College 7-2 at Milligan on March 7; Lincoln Memorial University went down 6-3 at MC on March 12. (A scheduled match against Sewanee on March 10 was postponed due to bad weather.)

For home matches, the Lady Scots play at the John Sevier tennis courts, just off Sevierville Road, near John Sevier school and swimming pool. The next home match will be Saturday, April 4, at 1:00 p.m. against Tusculum. The Lady Scots will also have home matches on Tuesday, April 14 (Milligan, 2:00 p.m.), Wednesday, April 15 (Centre, 1:30), Monday, April 20 (Tennessee Wesleyan, 1:00), and Tuesday, April 28 (Sewanee, 2:30).

Come on out and support your team, MC!

The moontanning party was a smash! Thanks go to the faculty for their wonderful homemade desserts, they were such a delight! "The Intervols," a steel band from K-town, was the main attraction. Could they jam!

This Friday, April 3rd, at 8:00 p.m., Hall I will be sponsoring their second annual "Wrestle Mania" in the Alumni Gym. Admittance is $2.00 per person. The "Coffee House" went over so well in March that this Saturday, April 4th, will be our second "Coffee House." Get your fingers in tune and your talents ready and come on over to Isaac's at 8:01 p.m.

With May Madness just around the corner, we are seeking student bands and students to help with all the events that weekend. If interested, come to student Programming meetings on Tuesdays at 5:30 p.m. in the Alcove in Pearsons.

(OCR) -- The redcoats are coming. Red M&M candies, banned 11 years ago due to concern about cancer-causing red food dyes, have returned. A few stores already have them in stock.

(OCR) -- The consequences of sex: Stanford U. is offering an undergraduate class on the social aspects of sexually transmitted diseases. Different experts -- including professors, physicians, and the co-director of a prostitutes' rights group -- will present lectures in the course, titled "Biosocial Aspects of Sexually Transmitted Diseases."

(OCR) -- A fake birth ceritficate scheme uncovered at U. of Wisconsin led to the arrest of a UW student on felony charges. The freshman allegedly made the fakes and sold them for $30 to underage students, who used them to get into campus bars. Officials discovered the ruse when two students used the doctored documents to apply for state ID cards.

$ CASH PAID FOR BLOOD PLASMA DONORS
Maryville Plasma Center
220 West Church Street
Maryville, TN 37801
984-2388

HOLIDAY INN
DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING
The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

THE BACK PAGE

CPP Notes

Please sign up for interview times as soon as visits are announced. You will need to submit either an application or a resume prior to interview date.

Summer

4/3 Georgia State Parks
4/7 Fontana Village, NC
4/9 Robby's Sports, West Town Mall
4/16 Southwestern Co.
4/30 Whittle Corp. (formerly 13-30)

Seniors

4/2 USAF Officer Recruiter
4/3 GA Dept. of Natural Resources
4/9 Robby's Sports
4/9 Boy Scouts of America
4/10 Miller's Inc.
4/15 1st. Investor's Corp.

New Publications now available in CPP:
1987 internships
1987 Directory of Overseas Summer Jobs
1987 Summer Employment Directory of the US
Peterson's Guide to Summer Camps:
Thousands of job opportunities for counselors in all areas of specialized interests. Examples include sports, science, computers, wilderness, arts, academics, special ed., dance, cheerleading, weight lifting, mathematics, music, and television production.

Barron's Guide to Graduate Business Schools
Barron's Guide to Medical and Dental Schools
Working your Way Around the World
1987 Summer Study Abroad

Mid-Week Worship Schedule
April
7 -- Baptist Student Union -- College Choir
14 -- Fellowship of Christian Athletes
21 -- Church and College Scholars -- Communion
Black Student Awareness Choir
28 -- Intervarsity Christian Fellowship

May
5 -- Peace Education Task Force

How to wipe out your student loans.

Let US do it! The Tennessee Army National Guard can repay up to $10,000 of your Government Guaranteed Student Loans when you qualify. PLUS, you get the new Guard GI Bill which pays directly to YOU $140 a month. PLUS you get a $2,000 cash bonus for entering.

All it costs YOU is a weekend a month and two weeks during the summer, and for that you get a nice, fat paycheck, too, plus a LOAD of fringe benefits! And veterans, ANY BRANCH, normally enter at their former rank.

For more information, with NO obligation, call

Sgt. Jimmy Lindsey -- 981-2347

Alpha Gamma Sigma chosen

Eight Maryville college seniors have been elected into the Alpha Gamma Sigma senior honor society.

For eligibility, a regularly enrolled student must be of good moral character; must have atained the standing of senior at the beginning of the spring semester; must have been in residence for at least three full semesters; must have a grade point average of at least 3.33 for all courses taken at Maryville or elsewhere; and must be earning a Bachelor of Arts degree. Not more than 10 percent of the graduating seniors may be elected to membership.

New members are: Bonnie Bouch, elementary education, N. Ft. Myers, FL; Jeff Denton, biology, Lilburn, GA; Elaine Ely, math/CS, Maryville, TN; Sherrie Farmer, biology, Hollywood, FL; Barbara Moffat, management, Chicago, IL; Kimberly Spargo, English, Knoxville, TN; Alicia Oller Waters, biology Maryville, TN; and Heid Weiffenbach, English Lake City, FL.

The new member will be honored at recognition ceremony in the Maryville College Fine ARts Center Music Hall on Wednesday, April 15 at 11 a.m. The program is part of the College's CIV program, and the speaker will be Professor Garland Allen of Washington University in St. Louis. Dr. Allen will speak on Eugenics.

Study examines terrorism

The Worship and Program Committee will present a video study of terrorism as it relates to the Christian Gospel. The study is a reflection of the meaning of the Garden of Gethsemane narrative in the Gospel of Mark.

Earlier this year, the Reverend Benjamin Weir had scheduled an appearance on campus, but was unable to come because of snow. He is currently Moderator of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).

Weir was taken hostage and chained almost constantly to a radiator in the small room in Lebanon where he was held captive for eighteen months. He used his imprisonment as a time of deep spiritual reflection and, in the Terrorism and the Gospel video tape, shares these reflections in a way which helps participants deal with the prisons in their own lives.

Carol Weir, his wife, also shares her reflections as she witnessed the kidnapping of her husband and worked for his release.

The study will be held every Wednesday in April, 12:00 noon to 1:00 p.m., beginning April 1 in the Alcove area of the dining hall.

We invite you to bring your tray to the alcove area and share in this study.

ST. GEORGE'S UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

GRENADA
ST. VINCENT

Affiliated Hospitals in
New York State
New Jersey
United Kingdom

- Approved February 4, 1987 by the New York State Education Department for the purpose of conducting a clinical clerkship program in New York teaching hospitals.
- St. George's received a similar approval in 1985 from the New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners; this establishes St. George's as the only foreign medical school with instruction in English that has state-approved campuses in both New York and New Jersey.
- Over 700 students have transferred to U.S. medical schools. St. George's has graduated over 1,000 physicians:
  They are licensed in 39 states;
  They hold faculty positions in 20 U.S. medical schools – 25% have been Chief Residents in 119 U.S. hospitals (according to a 1986 survey).
- St. George's is entering its second decade of medical education. In the first decade we were cited by The Journal of the American Medical Association (January 1985) as ranking number one of all major foreign medical schools in the initial pass rate on the ECFMG exam.
- St. George's is one of the few foreign medical schools whose students qualify for Guaranteed Student Loans. Our students also qualify for the PLUS/ALAS loans and, under certain conditions, VA loans. St. George's grants a limited number of loans and scholarships to entering students.

For information please contact the Office of Admissions

St. George's University School of Medicine /568
c/o The Foreign Medical School Services Corporation
One East Main Street • Bay Shore, New York 11706
(516) 665-8500

Julio's
Hungary Italian

Thursday's
$3.00 Pitcher Night
Special for Maryville College Students bring your MC ID for $3.00 pitchers.

Julio's $2 OFF
any large pizza
Coupon good for delivery or dining room
Expires: 4/16/87

Julio's $1 OFF
any small pizza
Coupon good for delivery or dining room
Expires: 4/16/87

For dine in, carryout, or FREE delivery
Phone: 977-7197

ENTERTAINMENT: The Lark readies for opening night p. 6

SPORTS: Changes for club sports p. 7

NEWS: ILD expresses concern on drinking at MC p. 4

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 11 | Maryville College | Friday, April 17, 1987

Varied opinions surround drinking at MC

by Craig E. Canevit

In recent weeks, controversy has surrounded drinking on campus.

A letter to the Echo showed one student's offense at the drunken behavior seen at a campus event. Student senator Don Dove proposed a bill to effect a dry campus. The Institute for Lifestyle Development Task Force presented a seminar on alcohol and drug abuse. The resulting debates reflect varied attitudes at MC.

"I think that the way the current policy is written makes it a good policy," said Sid Downey, administrative vice president and treasurer. "I have no problems with what we have now, if we enforce it. I think it needs to be enforced, if only from a liability perspective," he added, pointing out the College's legal responsibility to prevent underage drinking.

Ron Pease, vice president for student affairs, said that his "primary concern is the understanding of the importance of the responsible use of alcohol for those who are of legal age.

He went on to say, "We have a responsibility to the students to be realistic, but at the same time we have every right to expect from the students full compliance with federal, state, and college laws."

But there are others who see a more drastic situation. "There's definitely a drinking problem on campus. People drink to get drunk -- I consider that a problem," said Barbara Bolt, sophomore. Meg Fraelich, senior, added, "There's a drinking problem when there's vandalism and other violations of rules associated with public drunkenness."

Fraelich continued, "I feel that it is an infringement on my rights when on Sunday morning the bathroom is disgusting from people being sick the night before, when I get harassed by drunk people who are using their condition to get away with saying something abusive."

English professor Art Bushing said, "I think there's a distinction between what goes on in a private home or in a social environment and what prevails on campus." He also pointed out the potential problems of drinking: "I've seen very bright students become alcoholics during their college years."

Pease agreed saying, "It [alcohol] is being abused. But there are members of the community who are currently being counseled, who are being reported." Part of the problem, he said, was that "the judicial system is now working very unevenly in how it handles violations."

The people who recognize these problems also offered their opinions on how they have developed. Fraelich said, "I think it's clearly used as one of the few alternatives to finding something to do. It's an easy escape to going out and making your own fun. What you see is because there's nothing else to do that's as easy."

Bushing said that the lack of entertainment sources is not merely the cause of drinking, but also the result of it. Bushing, who has been teaching at MC since the days when "finding anyone drinking even a can of beer was sufficient cause for sending a student home," said that in that time people stayed on campus and provided their own entertainment, and they developed otherwise unhoned talents in doing so.

Reflecting on the situation, Bushing added, "as a result of drinking being widely accepted, we have lost a lot of the creative activities that used to be so prevalent. We had a sense of community and spirit that we've lost."

Bolt agreed that there are not enough activities, saying, "Student Programming, Student Affairs and ILD do a lot of things, but there's a minimum of student participation." She also added that "some people aren't happy with themselves unless they're in an altered state."

Pease said that he is "concerned that too many students believe they have to drink to enjoy themselves at events. One of the challenges here at Maryville is to provide students types of events they can enjoy on merits of the event itself."

When it comes to finding something to do, Pease added, "human ingenuity, initiative, and motivation come into play. And it doesn't take much ingenuity, initiative, and motivation to open a can of beer."

The consensus seems to be that the solutions are manifold and complex. "I don't think saying 'no alcohol on campus' is going to solve the problem. If we do that, it's just going to make the problem worse," said Fraelich.

Bolt concurred,

see p. 4

see related stories pp. 2, 3, 4, 5

Alumni take full advantage of the BYOB invitation to last fall's Homecoming Dance. The event is one of the few MC-sponsored activities at which a labeled bar is provided.

COMMENTARY

Highland Echo

Too many obsessed by "magic" 21

Many Americans have become resigned to a drinking age or 21; they have had to, lest Washington withhold five percent of the highway funds of states that refuse to comply.

Does the higher drinking age (which all but eight states have adopted) decrease alcoholism and drunk driving, as its proponents insist? Or is this yet another moral issue that has crept into our legal system?

The law considers Americans mature enough to drive at 16 and responsible enough to vote and enter binding contracts at 18. When, then, do these legal "adults" become mature enough to drink?

Twenty-one seems an arbitrary figure selected because by this age, many people are "real" adults as well as legal ones: members of the work force, heads of families, and part of the "real world." Judging, however, by the number of alcohol-related deaths and injuries, many people never become mature enough to drink. Responsible behavior towards alcohol is slowly acquired as a result of awareness and attitudes: it is not an instant birthday gift.

Governments should take care not to be obsessed bu that magic number, 21. A lower drinking age could, under the right circumstance, be advantageous.

Those circumstances are the tricky part. A society which uses alcohol responsibily starts with education about the nature and effects of alcohol. Publicity on this issue should stress moderation to replace the all (getting smashed, bombed, etc.) or nothing (teetotalling) that dominates our culture, especially in the South. Given that ultimatum, for too many people choose the "all" instead of seeking middle ground.

In the meantime, enforce the laws! A strictly enforced drinking age of 19 in a state with tough DUI laws is immeasurably more valuable than a drinking age of 21 that exists mainly to salve a lawmaker's moral conscience.

A number in a book, no matter how high a number it is, does not help anyone.

Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jennifer C. Worth
Typesetter ..... Al Hipkins
Business Manager ..... Peggie Sackett
Ad Representative ..... Barb Moffat
Photo Advisor ..... Tillman Crane
Advisor ..... Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers:

Don Dove, Joe Johnson, Lynn King, Lisa Harvey Linginfelter, Brian C. Linkous, Rethabile Masilo, Pam Mathews, Lissa McCleod, Kristi L. Self, Lynn Smith, Kimberly D. Spargo, Craig E. Canevit

To join the Echo staff, simply contact Jennifer C. Worth, box 2595. The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo*, box 2820, Maryville College. The* Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times*.*

STILL SMARTING FROM THEIR 1984 BOMB, THE DIRECTORS GIVE IT ANOTHER GO...

MC leaves no room for boredom

by Ron Pease

In the Echo of two weeks ago, I reminded you of several upcoming events and priority concerns regarding year-end planning. This time around, I want to call your attention to another type of "calendar event."

We ofter hear the comment on campus that "there isn't anything to do!" Believe me, staff and student committees have been involved in provideng the student body with leisure time program options.

I just took a look at the April and early May cmapus calendar. Given the fact that we're getting into some serious study time, it appears that there is something for everyone in events and programs already scheduled.

The range of activities extends from Spring Fling (May Madness) to a Christian Rock Concert to the First Annual Indoor Golf Championship to the Playhouse Production -- The Lark -- to a Spontaneous Dance to an "Open Mic" Coffeehouse to "Wrestlemania." Add a rafting trip, several student music recitals, a rock climbing expedition, a Pops Concert and "Moontanning."

Another dimension of programming includes twice-a-week movies in Isaac's, aerobics sessions, weekly topical sessions such as "Running Clinic," "Cooking for One or Two," "Your Rights," "Developing a Sense of Roots."

Now add baseball and softball games, several cookouts, picnics, banquets, and special events (planned by residence halls), and the schedule provides something for almost everyone.

The above list is not all-inclusive. In fact, approximately sixty programs of the type mentioned are on the April calendar.

However, several questions remain! If you can't find anything to do, what is it you want to do that currently you don't have the opportunity for? Have you given specific program suggestions to anyone? Have you offered to help in the planning, organization, and presentation of the event? You and every other member of the student community have the opportunity to participate in creating "more things to do!"

Contact a member of the Social Programming Committee, Student Affairs Staff, or Housing Staff if you have suggestions regarding the strengthening or program offerings . . . . Meanwhile, enjoy yourself! See you next time.

Student laments dusty room

Here I am sitting in Spanish class on the third floor of Anderson Hall. My eyes are watering, and my nasal passages are either flowing uncontrollably or plugged. I'm trying to pay attention to the professor.

Why am I in this condition? Is it because my body is sick? No! Is it because I'm bored? No! (well, maybe) It is because I am surrounded by conditions that are less than adequate for learning (not to mention for good health).

After following the chalk path leading away from this nasty room, I arrive at the entrance to this chalk mine. I can barely make my way to my desk without a shovel to dig through the dust.

When I finally arrive, I am afraid to put by book bag in the floor, because my independent

see p. 5

Faculty member recalls alcohol-free past

Once upon a time in the long ago and not so far away, a time so romote that only the Old Ones remember, an institution of higher learning was teeming with students.

The weekdays were filled with the customary problems of getting up and going to eight o'clock chapel, going to classes, complaining about the food, writing papers, and dreaming of the day when one had complete freedom.

Weekends, however, were different. Every Saturday night the campus had entertainment: a dance, a theater production, a sports event, perhaps a skit written and produced by students. Such activities gave students a chance to exercise their talents, to develop leadership, to organize, and especially to create.

The one thing lacking -- the one thing so common on ordinary American college campuses -- was that the college officials did not allow alcoholic beverages to be a part of the fun. In fact, the students were warned before they came and soon learned that anyone found drinking usually had twenty-four hours to pack for home.

Now, a few did not enjoy having their freedom thus restricted, and occasionally they tested the system. But when they lost, they knew to expect the inevitable.

Yes, in that time long ago when students were denied their Bacchus-given right to drink, they had to settle for a small, close-knit community where almost everyone enjoyed the entertainment and parties intended for everyone.

Tempus fugit, as the Romans used to say. Now, with freedom, liberation, etc., etc. . . . But once upon a time . . .

(name withheld at request)

"WE WILL NOT DWELL UPON THIS MONKEY ON MY BACK. SO LET US FACE THE REAL ISSUES OF THE DAY."

Two student opinions

Perhaps the most important lesson to be learned from college is responsibility. As college students we are expected to conduct ourselves in a mature fashion, and are held accountable for our actions. Why then is the question of drinking on campus such an issue?

Our R.D.'s don't tell us when to go to bed; why should we be told if we can or cannot drink alcoholic beverages on campus? Is it believed that MC students are not mature enough to handle what other students at simular institutions across the country take for granted?

Whether or not this action is taken, drinking on campus will continue. But will students be able to drink in the relative safety of the campus environment, or will they be travelling to and from Knoxville, off-campus parties, etc.? It would be much safer to keep intoxicated or potentially intoxicated students on the grounds.

Currently, alcohol is consumed at many campus functions. It is both a right and a priviledge, and it should not be discontinued.

Prohibition ended long ago, and a glance back at history shows that, while enforced, prohibition fostered the consumption and production of the very substance it sought to control.

The bottom line is that responsibility must lie with the individual.

Donna Sue Hadden

By failing to support dry campus legislation, the students at MC have sent a powerful, but disheartening message to the administration -- Alcohol consumption is far too high a priority in our lives for us to give it up.

Don Dove

Does MC recruit "party animals"?

There has been a great deal of discussion recently about alcohol and alcohol abuse on campus. But the discussion seems always toward the elimination of alcohol from campus events and from the campus entirely. I think this is the wrong tack.

The people who abuse alcohol are generally the same in each case. There is a crowd on this campus that think that it is "cool" to get smashed and make idiots of themselves.

A good example of this idiocy occured at Julio's Hungary/Italian Restaurant. John Julies, the owner, would like to encourage college students to frequent his restaurant. In an effort to get students there, he had a special "Senior Night" last Friday.

He moved a stereo for them, so they could have music, and when they moved to the front room, he moved furniture so they could have room to dance. The beer was $3.50 a pitcher, the food was hot and fresh, and the mess was not a problem. In return for his hospitality, several people attempted to appropriate glasses for their own collection (some did) and someone put their fist through the bathroom wall. So much for John's bright ideas.

Where do we get these people from? Recruitment comes to mind. I do not blame the recruiters themselves, but rather their student 'helpers'. When the high school prospective football players were at Maryville College, I heard no discussion of academics, location, or the football program. What I heard was one football player say to a prospective "the women situation here has greatly improved and there is at least one party here every weekend." And that is a quote.

If that is typical of what prospective students hear of Maryville College, the good ones go elswhere and we get the irresponsible party animals who care for no one and nothing. This was not the only example of the impression prospectives get of this college. High School students getting drunk in dorm parties has been a problem for some time now.

We can not blame the prospectives for this behavior; they are mere high schoolers among college students. They look up to those around

see p. 5

Interim's poets: they were overlooked

Several of us from Dr. Beck's poetry interim felt slighted by some comments made by Impressions editor, Sherri Hones, in a recent issue of your paper.

In the article written about Impressions, Jones stated that she had received disappointingly few submissions for publication in the literary magazine and that she had received "nothing" from any of the students in the poetry interim.

We know that at least three students from our interim group have submitted poetry to the magazine. We realize that this may not be much, but we feel that it is hardly insignificant enough to be refered to as "nothing."

We realize that the Echo cannot be held responsible for the comments it prints. Although the Echo tries to print only the truth, this is sometimes impossible to do when a source gives incorrect information.

We just want to set the facts straight.

Julie Mullaney
Peggy Lynn Kilgore
Mark Herndon

NEWS/FEATURE

ILD educates students on alcohol's effects

by Pam Mathews

Since 1978, Maryville College has been a "wet" campus. Sentiment towards this policy, however, may be changing, possibly due to the increased awareness of the porblems associated with alcohol use and also the fact that the majority of students at MC are below the legal drinking age of 21.

Several weeks ago, a proposal was presented to the Student Senate seeking to make Maryville a dry a dry campus, but was voted down. Some feel that having an alcohol-free campus will not alleviate the evils of alcohol abuse and addiction.

Bruce Guillaume, director of the Instutute for Lifestyle and Development (ILD) and the ILD Task Force, stated that one of the concerns of the ILD Task Force is to educate students who choose to drink alcoholic beverages to use alcohol in a responsible manner.

He said, "Alcohol is a chemical and a drug that is abused and can become addictive." Concerned about this addictive quality, he added, "The line between abuse and addiction can often become blurred. Someone can start out abusing alcohol and can gradually become addicted to it without realizing it."

Guillaume futher explained that alcohol addiction is more than just a social malady. "Current studies have shown that some people are predispositioned to become alcoholics due to a genetic factor." He added, "In this manner, alcoholism is a disease and, if untreated, it can be fatal."

"Alcoholism may not always be a character flaw, as society previously believed," he added.

Other studies, however, have shown that alcohol consumed in moderation can be benificial in relieving stress.

In 1984, a Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD) chapter was established at Maryville College. Since then, apparently little interest has been shown in this group and in some of the related programs sponsored by the ILD Task Force.

Observing this disinterest, Gillaume commented, "We've been very lucky that a student has not been in a traffic fatality since one of the nation's busiest highways [Alcoa Highway] is virtually at our front door." He went on to say, "Hopefully this trend of no MC student ending up as another fatality due to mixing drinking and driving will continue."

Kati Tabor, a member of the ILD Task Force, reiterated some of the concerns. "Social drinking, especially in the business world, is quite common. Many business deals are conducted at gatherings where alcoholic beverages are served," she said.

Tabor went on to stress, "We want to help students learn how to drink responsibly and to educate them about the consequences if they decide to abuse it. They can apply this knowledge throughout their lives."

According to Tabor, "Making this a dry campus won't solve the problems with alcohol."

MC drinking policy keeps evolving

by Brian C. Linkous

If you think that Maryville College has always allowed alcohol on campus, then think again. But current attitudes toward alcohol on campus tend to relate alcohol to one of those "inalienable rights" which students have alway had.

According to Jane Richardson, dean of students, the College first looked into revamping its alcohol policy during the 1977-78 school year when a member of the board of Directors proposed the idea to President Wayne Anderson. Prior to this time, the punishment for possessing alcohol was suspension from school.

However, the rules were often disregarded by students. Likewise, residence hall staff members were extremely reluctant to report violations because of the seriousness of the offense. In essence, the argument was that, "It happens anyway, so let's try to change it."

The idea of allowing alcohol on campus for students of legal age was taken up by the committee for Community Standards and REsidantial Life. The committee investigated the matter and found it to be feasible.

According to Richardson, a proposal was drawn up, with the help on an MC student and taken to the ACC for approval. After an arduous process of rewriting the proposal, the ACC passed it to the Board of Directors, where is was presented by a Student Affairs committee consisting mainly of students. The Board passed the proposal, thus allowing alcohol on the MC campus.

After passage of the proposal, things went well for the first few years, but as time passed the new policy was taken for granted. "For the first four or five years after the new policy, things worked beautifully. But once we got past those people who had worked to get the new policy, we lost the understanding of the hard work involved," Richardson said.

As the policy has evolved over the past years, alcohol has been allowed at more and more social functions. Initially, it was allowed only in the dormitory rooms.

"Today we see more of a need to have alcohol in order to have fun," Richardson said. "As a result, the abuse of alcohol has become more common."

Richardson also stated concern that a recent survey by Student Affairs revealed that students want alcohol at more social functions. Unfortunately for the students, the requests come at a time when many colleges and universities are seeking to wean their students from the alcoholic urge.

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

New bills aimed at changing statutes

by Jennifer C. Worth

Currently on the state legislature's roster are several bills aimed at changing the state's DUI laws.

Senate bill 46 and House bill 66 proposes confiscation of vehicles on third or subsequent offenses; it also calls for mandatory blood-alcohol tests of drivers involved in grave accidents.

S.B. 215/H.B. 627 would cause underage drivers guilty of DUI to lose their licenses. The youthful offenders would have to attend special "DUI school" before being allowed to regain their licenses.

S.B. 917/H.B. 839 calls for the option of inpatient hospital treatment, instead of a jail for second and subsequent DUI offenders. The hospitilization would be at the offender's expense.

S.B. 214/H.B. 626 and S.B. 845/H.B. 602 are aimed at improving reporting of DUI convictions across the state.

S.B. 941/H.B. 959 would raise the fee for blood-alcohol tests to $25 from its present $10.

S.B. 461/H.B. 1178 would forbid open containers of alcoholic beverages in the passenger areas of cars and trucks.

For a small fee, interested parties may order copies of these bills from Nashville legislative services. The number to call is (615) 741-3511.

from p. 1

saying, "Having a dry campus would make people have to deal with driving off campus to drink. And that involves drunk driving."

She added, "Going for a dry campus is wrong. It would just drive people into the closet or underground. We have a strong policy: we need someone to carry it out."

According to Pease, a dry campus would "certainly be easier in finding violations . . . but I have questions about how realistic that might be, as this community represents our society at large. I think we need to face the issue head-on. we have to be realistic but at the same time . . . immediately deal with violations as they occur."

Fraelich concluded, "I think that the solution is going to have to come from us, from the community making a decision for what is and isn't acceptable behavior and then enforcing it -- and from us making things to do, not us sitting waiting to be entertained."

This 1984 dance, held in Pearsons Hall, was once a common scene, but would now be a rarity. Alcohol is a major reason why dances are no longer held there.

Dances in Pearson's? Not with Alcohol

by Don Dove

In the Spring of 1986, dances ceased in Pearsons Hall. Starting this year, most dances have taken place in the Alumni Gym, behind Bartlett Hall. Why was this location switch made?

Junior Jody Carpenter is one student who enjoyed dances in Pearsons. Carpenter said, "We need a place like that to have a dance. The Alumni Gym is too large for the group of people we have. It makes it look like no one is there."

Andy Strickland, food service director at Dobb's House, offers an explanation for the move. He explained that technically, Dobb's is renting Pearson's hall from the College. Strickland said that this means Dobb's House could be considered co-defendant if a lawsuit were brought against the school as a result of damage done by someone coming from Pearson's after a dance.

Strickland said, "We would have no problem if the dances were non-alcoholic."

Kati Tabor, a senior and Student Programming Chairperson, verified Strickland's comments. She explained that she did not realize until recently that dances could still be held in Pearson's as long as no alcohol was permitted.

Tabor said the reason dances are no longer held in Pearson's is that "people have chosen not to [hold them there]."

Public may pay to use pool

by Lynn Smith

There is a possibility that people outside Maryville College may have to pay a fee for using the campus swimming pool, according to Athletic Director Randy Lambert.

The physical education facilities and the building itself are in need of repair and renovation.

Dr. Ferrin said that bringing in extra revenue this way would allow other things to be done with students' tuition.

Ferrin explained, "I want to make the college facilities available for public use, but I don't want to give them away."

Both Ferrin and Lambert made it clear that if this idea works out, MC students will not be affected by it. Lambert said that, if anything, it would be to the students' advantage, because the pool hours may be extended.

Ferrin said that the usage fee would be reasonable and the programs offered would be designed to benefit the public, while the fee would benefit the college's facilities.

from p. 3

them, follow their example, and do what they think they must to be sure they will fit in and not be an oddball.

I am not sure how this type of recrtuiting can be stopped, but if Maryville College is to become an alcohol-aware campus, we need people who are willing to be alcohol aware.

Al Hipkins

from p. 3

study might be engulfed by the filth and lost forever. After tying my bag to the leg of the desk, I look up to find the professor, but the stirred chalk dust prevents my eyes from being enlightened.

Ten minutes later, after the professor has already begun class and the Great Chalk Desert Storm has subsided, I see him/her. He/she is covered from head to toe with the dust. It is as if the chalk is attempting to cover every square millimeter of his/her body. You wonder if the professor is ever able to get all that grime from his/her clothes, not to mention his/her body.

He/she places his/her materials on the Great Chalk Mesa, being careful to not kick up a chalk whirlwind that could be fatal to the rest of the dust-covered bodies in the room. I know the professor cannot enjoy working in these conditions, because I know I despise trying to learn in them.

It takes all my deciphering capabilities to make heads or tails out of the notes he/she has placed on the GREEN board. Not only are the boards cracked, but the three years of chalk dust embedded in them has make them an abnoxious yellow-green color.

I am almost totally relieved after treading my way out of this dust bowl, but the dust which penetrated my pores is a constant reminder that I will have to return tomorrow.

How does anyone expect a professor to pass on knowledge in such deplorable circumstances? Better yet, if by some miracle the professor rises above the conditions, how can a student concentrate on the subject?

It is difficult enough for a healthy person to battle this environment, but imagine someone who is unfortunate to have allergies to dust and chalk. It seems as if this classroom has not been cleaned correctly, if at all, for at least twelve years (no exaggeration).

Does Housekeeping know that the language classroom is on the third floor of Anderson Hall across from Dr. Conner's Office, or is it doomed to become every student's nightmare?

Jeff Flickinger

We care

- about our patients
- about the family
- about our employees
- about our community
- about providing progressive, conscientious health services

We are looking for

- Registered Nurses
- Occupational Therapists
- Physical Therapists

To be a member of Our Team and share Our Spirit, the Spirit of . . .

LOURDES HOSPITAL 1530 Lone Oak Road Paducah, KY 42001

For more information regarding positions available, contact:
George Booker
Professional Recruiter
1-800-626-5435
1-800-633-1178 (Kentucky)

ENTERTAINMENT

The Lark cast gears up for opening night

by Jennifer C. Worth

Production Week. It's a phrase that can strike terror and exhilaration into the hearts ot theatre folk.

The MC Playhouse is facing this hectic week as the months-long work on The Lark reaches completion on Friday, April 17 -- Opening Night (another significant pair of words).

Why The Lark? Director Don Thomas made the decision to produce this play, which is a dramatizaiton of the trial and life of Joan of Arc, by French playwright Jean Annouilh, adapted in English by Lillian Helman, because "It is a play I thought I could cast particularly well from the pool of talent I had." Thomas felt that he could cast from "an unusually intelligent and articulate group of students -- this play requires them."

Noting that the play opens Easter weekend, Thomas added. "It's a wonderful play for the season." Although Joan died a horrible death in the fifteenth century, it was a martyr's death. The Lard stresses her dignity and, in the words of one character, "man's individual magnificence."

The cast members also seem excited about this play in particular and about theatre in general. Heidi Wieffenbach, who plays the title role -- warrior maiden, firghtened girl, and virgin martyr -- said she initially auditioned "because it's something that I enjoy doing; I like working on something and then seeing the end product."

She added that another reason acting in this show is so enjoyable for her is the opportunity of "getting to know people you might not otherwise get to meet, and getting closer to people you already know."

Jeff Wallace, veteran of many MC shows, plays Charles, the king for whom Joan fights. He also feels that cameraderie and espirit de corps: "There's nothing quite like doing an MC Playhouse production." He continued, "I just love the atmosphere."

This production marks the MC debut of several cast members. Among them is senior Joey Young, who caught the acting bug when he observed the backstage routine of last fall's The Dining Room. Young said he auditioned for The Lark because "it was something new; I'm always open for new experiences." Has he enjoyed his work with the show playing the softhearted cleric Ladvenu? "yes -- immensely!"

Michele Webber, who plays one of the seven black-clad "hags" that set the scene and tone for much of the show, had an interesting reason for getting involved. She said of her decision, "This is an exercise for me, because I'm very shy and introverted; it's an accomplishment for me just to be up there -- I feel like I've made progress." She pointed out with a laugh that throughout the play, the hags keep their faces covered.

Humor helps to relieve final week tension. When asked why he got involved in The Lark, Dan Fox, who puts his military experience to good use as a soldier, deadpanned, "Cause I want to run for President."

This stage of a play's production is not only frentic for the actors and actresses, whose work is nearing a climatic end. Most of the work for the backstage crews is only now beginning. Freshman Andi Bristol, who is the show's stage manager, responsible for backstage doings during performances, said of her participation, "I haven't worked [in theatre] for a while, and I wanted to get back into it." She found out about The Lark via her Fine Arts classes with Thomas and plans to stay active in the Playhouse. She said, "Now it's in my blood."

As opening night nears, how is the show progressing? Joe Chamberlain said, "It is coming together really well. I love the whole look of the show." John Wilson concurred, saying that he too was optimistic about the production's progress.

Thomas assessed the show's status by saying "I'm thrilled." He is particularly excited about the "enthusiasm and participation" of cast and crew.

Wallace also had good things to say, especially about Weiffenbach's work: "She does have that conviction." Chamberlain added, "Those clear eyes -- you just can't look into them onstage without seeing Joan."

Concerned that The Lark might be considered stodgy since it's based in history, Wallace stressed, "Everyone should stay away from the notion that this is a boring play. It's not -- it's fascinating."

Chamberlain, too, has advice for playgoers: "Listen to what's being said -- the power, the undercurrents of emotion, of politics -- it's all in the words." Annouilh would be proud.

Craig Hurst "tickled the ivories" at his junior recital, which was held Thursday, April 9 in the FAC Music Hall.

Strong cast pulls Burglar through

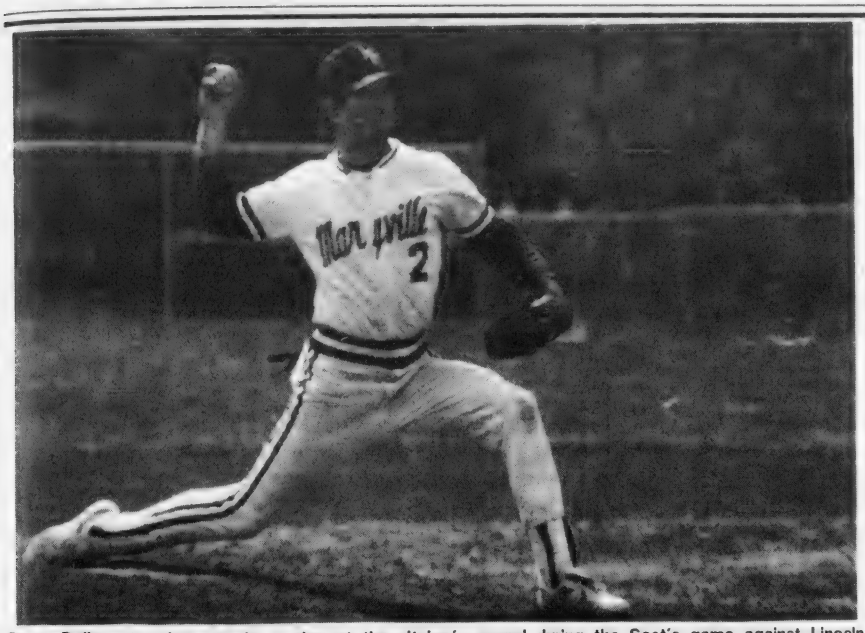
by Jennifer C. Worth

Burglar is not straight comedy. Nor is it straight action/suspense. Yet even though it is difficult to categorize, it is enjoyable.

This movie, Whoopi Goldberg's latest, is nominally a cop's-n-robbers vehicle. The plot is murky; one is left wondering, "What did conterfeiting really have to do with anything?"



There is almost no suspense, except for a slight dose near the end, and then no suprises. There is, however, an above-average car chase through the streets of San Francisco (the best setting for car chases), set to classical music and sprinkled with clever touches.

Fortunately, the plot brings together a talented cast. Leslie Ann Warren plays a harebrained pseudo-socialite. G.W. Bailey (one of today's most prolific character actors) crops up yet again. There is even a cameo by Michael Nesmith.

The movie's big surprise is Bob Goldthwait, as Goldberg's loony sidekick, who manages, for once, to maintain his characteristic spastic twitch without being annoying or incoherent. In fact, some of the film's funniest bits are his: his description of a nightclub at which he and Goldberg seek news of a murdered man is "Yuppies from Hell." (Maybe you had to be there.)

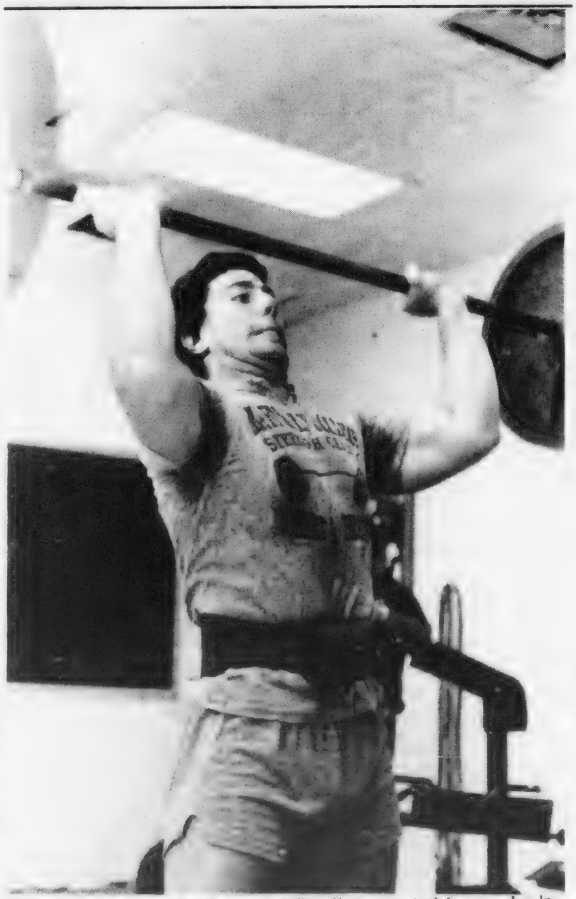
Burglar's real gem is Whoopi Goldberg, undoubtedly one of the film industry's most versatile stars. She proves again, as if it needed proving, that she is more than just a comedienne -- she's an actress who can be funny. Very funny. Burglar, however, does not give Goldberg many chances to demonstrate her prowess at outright comedy. But with a mug here and there and a share of good lines, she helps turn a lackluster whodunit into a worthwhile movie.

This is definitely not the best film out, but it isn't the worst, either. Goldberg and Goldthwait alone are worth an evening out.

Bryan Dailey stretches out for a play at the pitcher's mound during the Scot's game against Lincoln Memorial University on Wednesday, April 8.

Soccer continues to thrive

by Ret Masilo



The men's soccer team, even off-season, has been involved in several games and tournaments. The indoor record 17-7-1 includes one first-place and one third-place finish in two tournaments. The spring outdoor record stands at 5-0, and the Scots have already won a torunament: on April 11-12, the Scots won frist place in the Brevard College Invitational.

Neddo believes that "the defense is playing up to par. We have allowed only one goal in five games." He hopes that "the offense will gain confidence in the non-pressure scrimmages" played during the spring and winter. "I believe that the wins will infuse some spark into the attacking strategy of the team," he said.

Of eleven games lost last season, seven were by one goal. And these would have been won if the Scots had scored as many goals as their stingy defense has allowed. The goals-against average of only 1.6 goals per game was one of the lowest in NCAA Division Three nationwide.

Neddo said "recruiting is going very well. There are some fine student athletes considering MC for this fall. But most of all, the players that are already here are going through a metamorphosis."

He said that during this winter and spring those players "are acquiring a taste for winning and, of course, they like it.

James Sufrin gives his all at this daily off-season training session in the HPER weight room.

Changes planned for club sports

by Lisa Harvey Linginfelter

Do you enjoy running? If so, then MC may have the sport for you. A few students are participating in track events this spring, but the big news is for the fall, when cross-country will be added to the roster as a club sport.

Athletic Director Randy Lambert, who has been in consultation with both the Student Affairs Office and the Admissions Office, feels that cross-country will appeal both to current and to prospective students.

He hopes that a special fund will be set up, possibly out of the student activity money, to help finance all club sports, including women's soccer, cross-country, and any other club sports begun in the future.

Club sports would still be allowed to obtain outside assistance and coaches would still be volunteers; the money would help cover travel expenses and other needs.

According to Lambert, the Athletic Department will undergo a 15 percent budget reduction next year. He says that he hopes the Scots boosters will offset the reduction so that student athletes will not be affected by the cutback.

It is possible that there will be a third club sport next year, as men's tennis may be dropped from its current varsity status to club status. Part of the reason is the planned budget reduction for the athletic department next year.

Lambert says that the team's "recruiting potential is weak," due to a poor record and poor facilities.

Don Dove, who is in his third season with the tennis team, is outraged by the idea that the team may lose its varsity status. He feels that the drop would be an "unwise move because the tennis team does not require much of the budget anyway and because a few other sports could take a cutback [without damaging their programs]." He added that the tennis team's record is no worse than some other team records.

As to the money the team requires, Dove mentioned that this year's team does not even have any new tennis balls left for home matches. And as to the poor facilities, Dove pointed out that the poor condition of the courts is not the team's fault.

According to Lambert, the decision of whether or not to drop the tennis team's status will be made by the end of this semester.

- Students - Administration - Faculty - Students - YOU -

TEE PARTY

1st Annual Maryville College Indoor Miniature Golf Championship

Monday, April 20 7:00-10:00 p.m.
Championship Round -April 21 9:00-10:00 p.m.

Sign-up in Student Affairs Office
($1.00 deposit - refunded when you show up at your tee time)

Free Shuttle available - pick up in Pearson parking lot

19 Greens - 513 Morganton Road

Trophy awarded

Sponsored by Office of Student Affairs

- Staff - Administration - Students - Faculty - Staff -

Administration - Students - Staff - YOU -

- Administration - Students - Faculty -

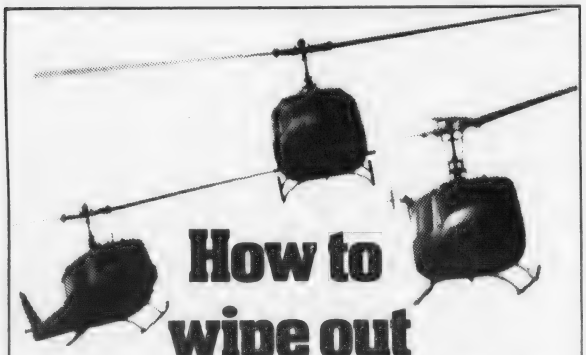
THE BACK PAGE

Student Programming

Student programming is sponsoring a race to raise money for Heifer Project International, a self-perpetuating program to alleviate world hunger. Registration will be April 24th from 12:30 - 2:30 in Fayerweather lobby. Pick up sponsor sheets anytime after Monday the 20th in Student Affairs Office. Unregistered walk-ins will be charged $5.00. For more information contact Joanne Backe, Box 2691.

On Friday, April 17, there will be an Eddie Murphy movie marathon in Hall I. It will start at 7:00 p.m. and run 'till the last movie is over. Domino's pizza said they would give students at the movie marathon a discount of $1.00 off a small pizza and $2.00 off a large.

CPP Notes



EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT APPLYING TO GRADUATE SCHOOL -- BUT DIDN'T KNOW WHO TO ASK . . . . Tilman Crane will be a guest speaker for CPP and will offer advice and suggestions, which are necessary to apply for graduate school. He will discuss ways to begin your search this summer and aviod the last minute rush during your senior year. This is an excellent opportunity for each of us. Please be there! CPP, Tuesday, April 28, 2:00 p.m.

BLOUNT COUNTY SCHOOLS will interview applicants for teaching positions Monday, April 27. Advance sign up and resume required.

WHITTLE CORPORATION (formerly 13-30) will interview for summer light assembly line jobs. Thursday, April 30. Applications available in CPP.

FIRST FEDERAL SAVINGS is accepting resumes for a summer position.

PUBLIC RELATIONS INTERNSHIP OPPORTUNITY; To publish a newsletter for a nursing home. Will learn news gathering, writing, layout, photography, etc. Contact Joanne Lax-Farr. Fayerweather Hall.

How to wipe out your student loans.

Let US do it! The Tennessee Army National Guard can repay up to $10,000 of your Government Guaranteed Student Loans when you qualify. PLUS, you get the new Guard GI Bill which pays directly to YOU $140 a month. PLUS you get a $2,000 cash bonus for entering.

All it costs YOU is a weekend a month and two weeks during the summer, and for that you get a nice, fat paycheck, too, plus a LOAD of fringe benefits! And veterans, ANY BRANCH, normally enter at their former rank.

For more information, with NO obligation, call

Sgt. Jimmy Lindsey -- 981-2347

Levine is slated as Forum's speaker

Irving R. Levine, NBC correspondent and unofficial "Dean" of economic reporters, will speak on "The Nation's Economy: Where Are We Headed?" Wednesday, April 29.

The luncheon meeting, a Baptist Hospital Foundation Executive Forum, will be held at the Hyatt Regency-Knoxville, beginning at noon.

Levine, who has been an NBC News coorespondent for more than 30 years, is one of broadcast journalism's most renowned and respected personalities.

He has reported and interpreted fast-breaking news events and major economic, political and social trends on television and radio on four continents. At present, he is chief economics corespondent based in Washington D.C.

Levine is the author of four books: Main Street, U.S.S.R., which was on the national non-fiction best-seller lists and has been used as a university textbook; Travel Guide to Russia, described in Life magazine as the one essential book for any traveler to the Soviet Union; The New Worker in Soviet Russia and Main Street, Italy.

He has also contributed to such national magazines as Atlantic and Reader's Digest. He is a frequent lecturer.

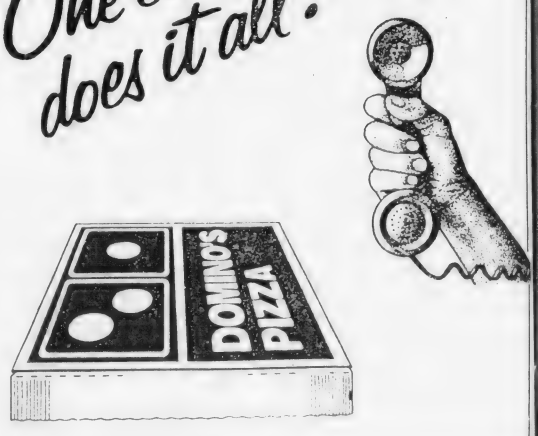
The tax-deductible cost of the luncheon is $50 per person. Tables for 10 can be purchased for $450. For more information or to make reservations, please call the Baptist Hospital Foundation at 632-5678.

The Executive Forum seeks to provide business people with usuful information, while at the same time enlightening them as to the work of the Baptist Hospital Foundation in support of The Baptist Health system of East Tennessee.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The 50th annual Easter Sunrise Service will be held on Sunday April 19, 1987 at 6:58 a.m. at the Amphitheater in the Maryville College Woods.

The worship will be led by The Reverend Earl M Rash, Chaplain of Maryville College, the Maryville College Choir under the direction of Mr. Robert Ergenbright, and the Brass Choir under the direction of Mr. David Hoffecker.



Those attending are asked to park at the Health and Physical Education Building and walk to the Amphitheater. In case if inclement weather, the service will be held in Wilson Chapel. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Robert M. Montgomery Jr., tenor and Maryville College voice student, will present a recital Tuesday, April 21, at 7 p.m. in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center on the college campus. The recital is free and the public is invited.

$ CASH PAID FOR BLOOD PLASMA DONORS

Maryville Plasma Center
220 West Church Street
Maryville, TN 37801
984-2388

One call does it all!™

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE!

Call Us!
Domino's Pizza
983-0000
407 W. Broadway
Serving the Maryville Area

Coke® 16oz.

$1

$1.00 off any pizza
One coupon per pizza
Expires: 4-30-87

Fast, Free Delivery™
407 W. Broadway
983-0000

NEWS:
"Enthusiastic" describes Ferrin p. 5

SPORTS:
Soccer thrives p. 6

FEATURE:
Photo review of '86-'87 p. 8

Highland Echo

Vol. 72 No. 12 | Maryville College | Friday, May 1, 1987

May Madness events planned

May Madness weekend is here again. The two-day event features various activities and competitions. The weekend's festivities will include:

Friday, May 1

5:30 p.m. Dinner on Pearsons Patio; make your own sundae, play volleyball, and listen to music.

7:00 p.m. "Interview" will be performed by Playmakers (Theatre).

Saturday, May 2

8:45 a.m. Heifer Project 2-mile foot race: register on Friday in the Student Affairs office, or at the race for $5 (in front of HPER building).

10:30 a.m. Opening of MC Frisbee Golf Course (meet in front of Student Center).

1:00 p.m. Battle of the Scots (meet in the HPER building): Wheelchair Relay race, Greased Watermelon Pass, Swim Relays, Pizza Eat, Egg Toss, Coke Chug, Jello Slurp, Three-legged Relay Race, Water Balloon Walk, Obstacle Course.

7:00 p.m. "Interview" will be performed by Playmakers (Theatre).

9:00 p.m. Spring Fling (Morningside Inn) with WTNZ radio DJ Gill Andrews; $3 per person or $5 per couple; labeled bar, ID required; Tillman Crane will be available to take photos at $1 for a 3 x 5. Shuttle bus will run between the dorms and Morningside.

Grads, faculty, family, and friends mill about after commencement exercises last spring. The class of 1987 will face this momentous transition on May 17.

Academic, service awards presented

MC's Academic and Service Awards Banquet was held on Monday, April 27, in the Margaret Ware Dining Room in Pearsons.

A brand-new award was presented: the Sharon Ann Murphy Crane Memorial Scholarship, with funds endowed by the family and friends of Sharon Crane. The award this year, which is credited to colleges fees, plus a certificate of recognition, went to Stephen Herbert.

Other awards were: Maryville College Alumni Association for the Outstanding Senior to Alicia E. Waters.

Religious Life Service Award: The Charles and Mary Ensign Award to Jacqueline Osborne and Jeffrey Denton.

Humanities: Alexander English Prize, Kimberly Spargo; Verton M. Queener Award in history, Tom Scott; David C. King Award in history, Marcia Kilby.

Biology and see Awards p. 6

Admissions readying for next year's freshmen

by Andi Bristol

With this year coming to a close, it is time to start looking ahead. The office of Admissions already has some idea of what next year's freshmen will bring the Maryville College.

The Admissions Office is busy trying to sort through the applications which are still arriving. So far, they have received 511 applications from incoming freshmen, 83 more than last year at this time. Out of the 511 applicants, 417 were accepted, and 50 have already sent in their deposits to secure a place in next year's freshman class.

"Our recruiting is mainly concentrated in Tennessee, Florida, Georgia, and Ohio," said Larry Stanley, an admissions counselor in his first year at Maryville College.

Stanley explained the admission process: "Each application is evaluated on an individual basis by a committee made up of faculty, staff, and the Director of Admissions." After applicants have been accepted, the admissions office still works hard to persuade them to come to Maryville College. "We wait awhile, then call them [the applicants], just to check on them." said Mary Beth Kay, also in her first year as an admissions councelor.

Even though they are still working on next year's freshmen, Stanley said that the Admissions Office is in a "transitionary period from talking to seniors to talking to juniors."

Meanwhile, a more accurate picture of next year's freshmen will develop over the summer.

COMMENTARY

Campus needs May Madness

"Spring Fever." It strikes without warning and can last for months. It afflicts almost everyone at one time or another. Its harmful effects include lack of concentration and motivation, poor classroom or workplace performance, and periods of idle boredom. The Webster Handy College Dictionary defines this malady as "a lazy feeling that comes with spring weather."

But spring fever isn't all bad. It may create idle hands, but it can provoke energetic minds. It heightens the senses: the air feels fresher than it is, and the grass looks greener than it is. At MC, nestled as it is "in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains," spring fever's allure is especially acute.

No wonder MC celebrates May Madness weekend. It serves as a channel for all that energy that gets dissipated under the spring sun. The activities and the atmosphere are a last energetic fling at fun in the midst of end-of-term chores.

There are events and activities. There are competitions. But more that that, there is a spirit of madness -- just enough for the healty release that helps keep us young at heart.

After all, we need go a little crazy every now and then -- it helps keep us from going insane.

Editor's notes:

To those who haven't realized it yet, this is the final Echo of 1986-87, and, for some of you, the last Echo of your college days. I hope that this newspaper, along with the other campus publications, has provided you with some information or entertainment.

The last issue was admittedly controversial, and concentrating on a single issue is a new step for the Echo. I was heartened by the responses -- positive and negative -- because they reveal that at least some of you are reading the Echo and, more importantly, thinking about what you read.

Again, I encourage still more of you to get involved. If there's anything at all that you feel strongly about, write a letter to the editor. If there's an issue that you feel should be covered, let us know. If you want to write an article, column, or review, more power to you. We are always looking for input from all quarters of the campus community, including faculty and staff.

Highland Echo

Editor ..... Jennifer C. Worth
Typesetter ..... Al Hipkins
Business Manager ..... Peggie Sackett
Ad Representative ..... Barb Moffat
Photo Advisor ..... Tillman Crane
Advisor ..... Ms. Lax-Farr
Staff Writers:

Andi Bristol, Craig E. Canevit, Dan Fox, Joe Johnson, Lynn King, Joe Johnson, Lisa Harvey Linginfelter, Lissa McCleod, Kristi Self, Lynn Smith

To join the Echo staff, simply contact Jennifer C. Worth, box 2595. The Highland Echo welcomes signed letters to the editor. The deadline for all news material is 8pm Sunday. Please address all correspondence to the Echo, box 2820, Maryville College. The Echo office is located on the second floor of Fayerweather Hall. The Echo is printed on alternate Thursdays during the academic year by the Maryville Daily Times.

Pease: farewells, congratulations

by Ron Pease

Congratulations to all of the students who were honored at the Academic and Service Awards Banquet on Monday night. We are again reminded that hard work, commitment to a goal, and the acceptance of responsibility within our community are all worthy objectives in our ongoing personal growth and development.

I believe a few words of commendation are in order as we move to the conclusion of yet another academic year at Maryville. Leadership in the classroom as well as campus life was acknowledged as fourteen seniors received certificates of election to Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities. Thanks to this group for the varied range of service, leadership, and caring invested by each individual.

The standing ovation accorded to Kati Tabor as she received the Student Affairs Special Service Award was highly deserved. Her long hours of devoted attention to the operation of the Social Programming Committee has been above and beyond the call of duty.

Congratulations to DeAnn Hargis on her recent re-election as President of the Student Senate. She was instrumental in breathing life into a new organization, and she guided it through its initial year of operation.

The senior class has been provided strong leadership by Chris Herbert as the members prepare to launch themselves into the greater community!

Perhaps unnoticed by many of you has been the great seasons turned in by members of the softball and baseball teams. Pre-season conditioning work-outs, vigorous practice sessions, and long, and sometimes highly adventurous road trips, were all a part of the effort put forth by these fine atheletes. A special word of recognition for the women's tennis team for establishing their all-time best record at Maryville! We're proud of you, ladies!

Obviously, the above list is incomplete. Many, many more individuals and groups have contributed to the life of Maryville during the 1986-87 academic year. We are now involved in the usual hectic end-of-year activities and responsibilities. To returning students -- good luck in final exams! Have a great summer vacation and return next September ready to make 1987-88 the best year in Maryville history.

To the departing seniors -- may you live well, learn much, and love wisely. Thanks for your current and future devotion to the ideals of your College. God bless you.

Reader offended by last issue

After reading the April 17, 1987 edition of the Highland Echo, I found myself in a very heated state of anger and disgust. 95% of the newspaper dealt with the so-called problem of alcohol on MC's campus.

To begin with, the headline of the paper reads: "Varied Opinions Surround Drinking at MC." I was surprised to discover that the definition of "varied" had changed. The entire paper with the exception of the sports page deals with the subject! There is no variation of any kind! In addition to this, I feel that if reporters are going to use the word "varied," then they ought to interview people who are going to give the different opinions -- not just those who are going to support the reporter's point of view.

Secondly, I

see Letter p.3

Corrections:

The photographic credits in the last edition of the Highland Echo (Vol. 72, No. 11) were inadvertently omitted. The pictures on pages 6 and 7 should have been credited to Leigh Emery. Our apologies.

Letter from p. 2

personally resent, after working closely with the Physical Education Department and MC's athletes, the title that reads "Does MC Recruit 'Party Animals'?" Maryville College is an extremely difficult institution as far as academics are concerned, and anyone who attends MC (athlete or not), does so because they are entirely capable of making the grade. Also, I was recruited by MC; does that make me a 'party animal'? I may be mistaken here, but I find that a generalization, and one that offends my friends and me.

After reading the paper, I held a brief discussion with one of the reporters, and he assured me that there was indeed a problem with alchohol on campus. Be that as it may, it is not the newspaper's responsibility to pass judgements on students and dictate to them how to live their lives. If some of these people that insist that there is such a big problem on campus would open their eyes to the big, real world, they would realize that there is virtually no drinking problem, and most certainly making the campus dry would only succeed in making matters worse.

Finally, this edition was plainly radically vindictive and one-sided. If the newspaper staff wishes to drop their readers to six, then publishing editions like this will definitely be the way to go. I know I won't be reading it.

M. Leigh Emery

Missing fiche lens prevents photocopies

We are sorry to report that library users will be unable to make copies from microfiche for the present. A Minolta optical lens (x24) has disappeared and is presumed stolen. Fiche can be read using other equipment, but it can no longer be photo-enlarged on paper. (The reader-printer lens that remains can be used on micro*film* but not on fiche.)

The missing lens is of little value without a reader-printer. We are hopeful it may reappear, as it is quite expensive to replace. In the meantime, we regret the inconvenience to library fiche-users.

Joan Worley
Library Director

Student explains letter

It seems that many people misunderstood the thrust of my last editorial letter. I was not saying that the athletic department was guilty of recruiting 'party animals.' My point was that quality prospective students are turned off by the atmosphere of Maryville College and the party animals are attracted.

Several people mentioned to me conditions at other colleges as an example of what college life is like. We can not judge what we want at Maryville College by what other colleges do.

Some people believe that, since Maryville College's drinking problem is not as severe as other institutions' problems, we do not have one. Once again, we must decide for ourselves what constitutes a drinking problem and what is acceptable social behavior.

Drinking is a privilege which, like all privileges, carries responsibility. I have attended Maryville College on and off since near the beginning of our current drinking policy (I arrived at MC in 1979). At that time drinking was considered a privilege and was treated responsibly. Yes, there were problems, and problem drinkers, but these people were not looked up to as the role models of Maryville College.

Now, drinking is considered a right, not a privilege and is not treated responsibly. Our hall judicial councils scoff at the problem and throw cases out of court. People attend non-alcoholic events and sneak in alcohol. When drunk, some people do damage to school and personal property, and they do not even care that they did it. People use alcohol as a means to party, not as part of a party.

Each of these symptoms is a symptom of alcohol abuse, and whether present at other colleges or not, I do not believe we want them at Maryville College. Certainly these symptoms are not accepted outside of the college community, so why should we accept them in our community? And why should we give that impression to prospective students, who will either join the fray or attend another college?

Al Hipkins

NEWS/FEATURE

Junior Classical League students to visit MC

by Lynn King

Maryville College will be host May 1 and 2 to about 1,000 Latin students and their teachers from across the State of Tennessee. The two-day convention of high school students is for members of the Tennessee Junior Classical League.

The 800 students and 200 teachers will be using facilities in Wilson Chapel, including classrooms, and classrooms in Anderson and Thaw halls, plus the Music Hall and lounge in the Fine Arts Center. They will also be using the playing fields and the facilities in the Physical Education Building.

Activities planned for the convention include a chariot race which will required blocking the paved street between Bartlett Hall and the Physical Education Building. There will be a dance for the League students in the Alumni Gym, and on Saturday morning, May 2, they will have breakfast in the Chapel Courtyard. A volleyball tournament is also planned.

Registration gets under way at 7:45 a.m. Friday, May 1. Program activities include general assemblies, an art contest, sports events, a costume contest, a bazaar, academic contests, English oratory, skits, a dance, dramatic Latin, and a movie.

The convention will end at noon Saturday, May, 2, with a general assembly in Wilson Chapel.

ENTERTAINMENT

Hoffecker, Ergenbright will seek doctorates

by Lissa McLeod

Spring is a time of year for change around a college campus. As May draws near, seniors anxiously await graduation, other students look foward to the summer and new classes in the fall, and high school seniors anticipate college life. It's a time of expectation.

However, students are not the only ones who are expectant. David Hoffecker and Robert Ergenbright are also excited about their summer and fall plans. The instructors will spend next year completing their doctorates at Cincinnati Conservatory and at Florida State University, respectively.

As bonds are broken and people move on to new experiences, there are always mixed emotions. While both Ergenbright and Hoffecker see mainly positive opportunities coming from their year's absence, they say they will miss Maryville. But they both have a full year ahead of them.

Ergenbright has finished his classwork at Florida State, but will be performing four recitals, performing with the opera department there, writing his dissertation (which is on the vocal works of Charles Griffiths), working with the Old Instrument Division of the music department, and teaching eight voice students each semester. According to his plan, Ergenbright "will have [his] doctorate by the end of the summer of 1988 or imminently upon [his] return in the fall."

Hoffecker wil be doing a slightly different type of work on his degree; he is completing a Doctorate of Musical Arts in Orchestral Conducting. Unlike Ergenbright, Hoffecker will not have to write a dissertation, but will have to conduct several concerts and give several lecture recitals, the content of which will be written out and turned in, much like a dissertation.

While these instructors are furthering their educations, what is in store for MC next year? Hopefully, a lot of positive experiences await music students.

Dr. Jim Bloy, chairperson of the Fine Arts Department, sees no reason why the choral or instrumental programs should suffer. Two people will be hired to take both instructors' places for a year. Their jobs will include the same responsibilities that Ergenbright and Hoffecker now have, and Dr. Bloy feels good about the new instructors. "There is no reason why the [music] program should suffer. New people equal new ideas."

Ergenbright also shares Bloy's anticipation for a positive experience. "It's exciting for the students I teach to work with someone different; maybe [the new teacher] will find an easier approach [to singing] -- one that works better for the student." He also feels that the choir will benefit from new ideas, methods, and techniques. Hoffecker added that perhaps the new director(s) will "bring some expertise that I don't have" to both the band and MACCO (the Maryville Alcoa College Community Orchestra).

While the professors are excited about the change, students have mixed feelings. Bobby Montgomery, who will be a senior vocal major in 1987-88, is a little apprehensive about changing voice teachers for his senior year. With a senior recital approaching, he wonders if another instructor's technique will work for him. "What Mr. Ergenbright is doing with me is working, and I'm not sure the other person will."

Other students, such as freshman Jon Allison, feel that a change for only a year can not do too much harm. A member of the band and choir, Allison feels that it will be "valuable for band and choir to experience some change -- a new methodology for a year."

Next year promises to be a rare opportunity for students at a school the size of Maryville to experience fresh musical perspective from instructors. It is a chance for students to assimilate new methods and techniques, some of which may work better for them than old ones did. As Dr. Bloy feels, education is a process of learning from many different people; "Students need to learn everything they can from whoever they can and then put it together in their own way, using whatever works best for them."

Next year will be an experience in learning from new instructors and directors for the choir, band, MACCO, and voice students. It will also be a time for learning and rejuvenation for Hoffecker and Ergenbright. The community will await their return as they bring back new expertise from their studies in the fall of 1988.

Leigh Emery

With comprehensives over at last, seniors had a chance to unwind at Senior Comps Picnic, April 24. Enjoying the revelry are (clockwise from top) Michelle Davis, Risa Stein, Barb Moffat, and Sherrie Farmer.

Project X: more than just cute

by Jennifer C. Worth

First there were cute kid movies. Then there were cute animal movies. And then there were cute alien movies. Now there's Project X, which combines the best elements of the three, and only a few of their worst elements. To top it off, there's a healthy dose of social conscience.

Although the title makes it sound like a sci-fi B-movie, this film is actually a comedy/drama about chimpanzees involved in a top secret Air Force project that involves blasting the animals with gamma rays to simulate the performance of pilots in a nuclear attack. The plot is well crafted with several moments of exquisite suspense.

Project X somehow manages to walk that fine line between melodrama, sentimentality, and sheer entertainment. Matthew Broderick is, as always, delightful; he can provoke a laugh or tug the old heartstrings with an expressive glance. And here he finally gets to play someone who's past puberty and closer to his own age.

The real stars are the chimps, who get top billing in the final credits. Sure, one is tempted to say, chimps -- cutesy little crosses between Benji and E.T. Not so, for these wizened, eerily wise-looking heroes have individual personalities and real appeal. The movie makers exploit this appeal without overdoing it.

Also important is the movie's message, subtly drawn and presented: we should no use animals lightly as subjects of experimentation. However, there's nothing worse than a preachy film. To its credit, Project X doesn't preach.

Project X is a uniquely human drama liberally sprinkled with lighthearted, laugh-aloud humor. It's a funny movie, it's even a cute movie (occasionally almost cutesy), but it's also a good movie.

HOLIDAY INN

DESK CLERK
WAITRESS
AUDITOR
HOUSEKEEPING

The Holiday Inn in Gatlinburg is currently seeking individuals to fill the above positions. To be considered, apply in person Monday thru Saturday, 9am till 5pm at 333 Airport Rd., Gatlinburg.

Ferrin enthusiastically becomes part of MC

by Lynn King

Ask anyone who has met Dr. Richard Ferrin to describe MC's semi-new president in a few words, and "enthusiasm" is bound to come near the top of the list.

Whether he's talking about his move to East Tennessee, future plans for the college, or life in general, his positive outlook is immediately contagious. Dr. Ferrin is obviously a man who believes in getting the most out of life and in helping others do the same.

It was his strong "belief in open communication" that prompted Dr. Ferrin to hold the first student forum. "Popcorn with the President" is another unique manifestation of Dr. Ferrin's hope for regular contact with students; it's a series of informal gatherings centered around popcorn and conversation.

Communication is only one of the top priorities Dr. Ferrin has already begun working on. His conviction that "whatever we do, we ought to try to really do well" extends into every facet of life at Maryville College, and he is eager to share his plans and the benefits he feels will result from them.

In regard to his goal of doubling the current enrollment, Dr. Ferrin believes that this will bring the college many educational, economic and social opportunities. "As enrollment grows, academic opportunities will grow," Dr. Ferrin said, referring to the inevitable increase in academic offerings. Also, in regard to social opportunities, "the quality of the program can be enhanced."

Will MC lose anything by increasing in size? "Not a bit!" Dr. Ferrin said emphatically. He believes that the college will still be small enough to retain the "college community" feeling, while offering more opportunities--"a best of both worlds" situation.

Striving for the best is nothing out of the ordinary for this president, though. Asked his general philosophy of life, Dr. Ferrin reflected a moment before answering: "To greet each day with enthusiasm and see the possibilities there are in people." Obviously, he is deeply committed to fulfilling the possibilities he finds at Maryville College as well. Dr. Ferrin is more than committed; he's positively enthusiastic about it.

COMING IN JUNE

IN VIETNAM
THE WIND DOESN'T BLOW
IT SUCKS

Stanley Kubrick's

FULL METAL JACKET

WARNER BROS PRESENTS STANLEY KUBRICK'S FULL METAL JACKET
STARRING
MATTHEW MODINE ADAM BALDWIN VINCENT D'ONOFRIO LEE ERMEY DORIAN HAREWOOD ARLISS HOWARD KEVYN MAJOR HOWARD ED O'ROSS
SCREENPLAY BY STANLEY KUBRICK MICHAEL HERR GUSTAV HASFORD BASED ON THE NOVEL THE SHORT-TIMERS BY GUSTAV HASFORD CO PRODUCER PHILIP HOBBS EXECUTIVE PRODUCER JAN HARLAN
PRODUCED AND DIRECTED BY STANLEY KUBRICK
WARNER BROS A WARNER COMMUNICATIONS COMPANY

SPORTS

Tennis season nears close

by Lisa Harvey Linginfelter

The 1987 Lady Scots tennis team ended regular season play with a record of 7-4. And, as third-year player Teresa Petitt notes, "If it hadn't been for the bad weather, we might have gone 10-4." (Three matches which were cancelled were against teams the Lady Scots defeated during the season.)

The Lady Scots will participate in the WIAC conference tournament on May 1-2. Although the Lady Scots will face tough competition, especially against the University of the South, Coach David Cartlidge has high hopes for the team.

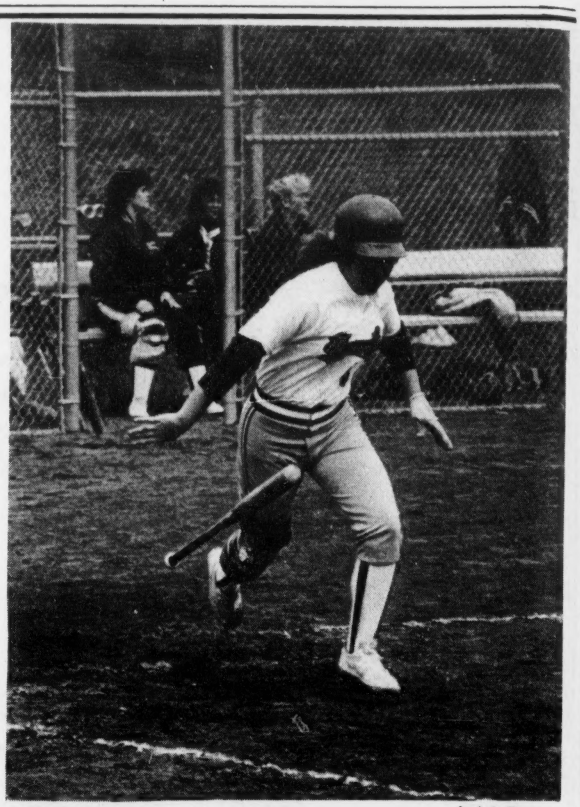
Last year, Maryville posted a second-place standing, and although the competition is stronger this year, Cartlidge feels that the tournament will be close, since the Lady Scots have improved along with the other teams. "The competition will be tough among Rhodes, Centre, and Maryville," says Cartlidge.

The coach also has high hopes for next season, although "it will be a rebuilding year" with the loss of seniors Margaret Callaway and Jackie Osborne. To sum it all up, Cartlidge adds, "We've had a very successful season!"

MC soccer: on the move

by Ret Masilo

Soccer is a sport that is growing the fastest in the country. It is a world-wide sport, so its growth is in popularity, not in maturity.



Maryville College, because of its commitments, and individuals at Marvville College, by virtue of their leadersnip now find themselves molding the change for the good of the school and of East Tennessee.

Greg Hosler of the East Tennessee Soccer Foundation, also resident director of Hall I and women's Scots soccer coach, foresees good years ahead for soccer in the area.

Starting and after the first two weeks of May, the Marine Corps Engineering Battalion of Knoxville "will come to MC and build two soccer fields near the College cemetery," Hosler said. The commander of the Corps is particularly interested because two of his daughters play soccer.

Hosler said, "they will be working on behalf of the East Tennessee Soccer Foundation."

On June 9 - 12 the Foundation will join hands with Coach Phil Neddo, the men's soccer coach, and the MC soccer program in sponsoring the first high-school team soccer program in Tennessee, Hosler said. "A portion of the proceeds of this camp will go toward developing the MC Women's Soccer Club," he said.

Leigh Emery

Andrea Dye lunges into action during the Lady Scots' softball game against Cumberland College on April 25.

Julio Pesiri

Julio Pesiri watches his golf ball pass through one of the obstacles on the 19 Greens course during the MC Indoor Miniature Golf Tournament, on April 20 and 21.

Awards fromp. 1

Chemistry: Distinguished Achievement in Chemistry, Margaret Fraelich and Cesar Zambrano; E izabeth Hillman Award, Meg Fraelich; Outstanding Performance in Inorganic Chemistry, Neal Atchley; Outstanding Performance in Structural Chemistry, Rebecca Walker.

Mathematics-Physics: Russell Edwards Award, Melodie Sedgwick; George A. Knapp Mathematics Award, Elaine Ely; George A. Knapp Physics Award, Walter Walsh.

Social Sciences: Blount National Bank Scholarship, Peggie Sackett; First Tennessee Bank Scholarship, Donald Dove; John W. Burgess Award, Pamela Mathews; Op Den Graef-Levering-In Den Hoeven Award, Darrell Franklin; Wall Street Journal Award, Jeff Catlett.

Behavioral Sciences and Human Services: David H. Briggs Award, Jackie Osborne; Dr. Donald Sahli Award, Melodie Sedgwick.

Fine Arts: Daview Fine Arts Award, Jeff Wallace; Fine Arts Art Competition Award, Jennifer Chastain; Honarine Cozart Furgerson Scholarship and Maryville College Fine Arts Scholarship, Craig Hurst, Carol Warren, Douglas Cooper; Lowell Bunge and Maryville College Fine Arts Scholarship in Music, Michael Bradam.

Barraclough Choir Award, Cindy Claborn; Bahret Music Scholarship, Maria Cole; William G. Hoffner Voice Scholarship and Maryville College Fine Arts Scholarship, Colleen Cook; Dan H. Kinsinger Voice Scholarship, Robert Montgomery; A. L. Alexander Memorial Scholarship and Maryville College Fine Arts Scholarship, Jeff Wallace.

Oscar Philip Steel Award in Music, Douglas Cooper; Fine Arts Competition Award, Julie Costner, Leigh Emery, Traci McDonnell; Fine Arts Competition Music Audition Awards, Laura STarkey, Lissa McLeod, Paul Beasley, Melissa Blough; Minibel S. Dean Scholarship and Maryville College Fine Arts Scholarship, Sayuri Yamaguchi; Anna Holland Breen Scholarship and Maryville College Fine Arts Scholarship, William Delaney.

International Student Academic Achievement Award: Mary Elizabeth Jackson Award, Wan Him Cheng.

General Academic Awards: Alpha Lambda Delta Award, Heidi Weiffenbach; Alpha Gamma Sigma Scholarship Award, Donna Clancy and Anne Marcum.

Outstanding Campus Leadership: Maryville College Student Affairs Award, Circle K; Special Award to the student who has devoted unbounded enthusiasm toward making Maryville College a more enjoyable campus, Kati Tabor.

SHORTS

CPP Notes

Interviews:
May 4 Maryville City Schools.
May 6 Blount County Schools.
May 6 Whittle Corp. (13-30).
summer job interviews
May 8 10 a.m. The State of Tennessee: Glenda Straiter, Director of Testing, Knoxville office, will be in CPP to discuss types of positions and application procedures for jobs in state government for new college graduates. She will bring application and job descriptions.
May 12 Oak Ridge Schools.
May 13 De Kalb County Schools.
May 14 Sevier County Schools.

The graduate survey for the Class of 1986 is now available in Career Planning and Placement. You are invited to stop by at your convenience to review the summary.

The 1986 graduates are living in ten different states, France, and Honduras. Sixty-six percent remained in Tennessee.

At present, about 15 percent are in graduate or professional school.

Graduates have entered many different career fields. About 20 percent are in business related jobs such as banking and retailing. Several are in public relations positions with Chambers of Commerce, Scouting and Hospitals.

Approximately 30 percent are now in education or social service jobs such as teaching, counseling, and interpreting.

Another 12 percent are in science and/or health care positions.

Pair will present a duet recital

Cindy Claborn and John Wright, senior vocal performance majors at Maryville College, will join together in a duet recital this Tuesday, May 5, at 8:15 p.m. in the Music Hall of the Fine Arts Center.

Claborn and Wright are students of Robert Ergenbright of the music faculty. Both are winners of the 1987 MACCO Concerto and Area Competition.

Wright, piano student of Robert Bonham, will play works by Chopin and Bloch. Claborn will perform works by Ward, Hely-Hutchison, and Ives. Claborn and Wright will combine their musical talents with Benjamin Britten's "Abraham and Isaac."

The recital is open to the public without charge.

ALD chosen

by Jennifer C. Worth

The new members of Alpha Lambda Delta have been chosen and will be initiated on May 4. The new members, who must have a GPA of 3.5 or higher, are Neal Atchley, Jonathan Allison, Rae Ann Hickman, Kevin Lynch, Traci McDonnel, John Roach, Becky Shakelford, Karen Schubert, and Jan Tomlin.

ALD honors scholastic achievement during the first year of college. Members gain lifetime membership in the organization; members remain active through their sophomore year.

The 63-year-old organization recognizes graduating seniors who have maintained ALD's scholastic standards. In addition, the national council annually awards ten $2000 fellowships for graduate study.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Notice to students who owe an Emergency Loan in the Financial Aid Office:

All Emergency Loans must be paid in full no later than May 8th, 1987 by 5:00 p.m. If the loans are presently overdue, a hold has already been placed on all grades and transcripts until the loan is paid off. No more emergency loans will be given out after May 8th, 1987. This is to ensure that all loans are paid in full be the end of the spring semester. Please come by the Financial Aid Office if you have any questions.

The Office of Financial Aid will be offering special sessions for students to seek financial counseling during the week of May 11-15. We are providing this special time to answer specific questions regarding your financial aid package for next year, our financing options, your cumulative loan indebtedness, an outstanding Rotating Loan, and/or other matters concerning financial planning for 1987-88.

To arrange for an appointment, please contact Annette Everett in the Financial Aid Office in Anderson Hall.

Be a part of the Maryville College football program. Travel with the Scots, no experience needed.

Work study positions are available for football managers and filmers. Responsibilities include all duties involved with everyday practice and weekly games.

Managers must be reliable. Male and females are encouraged to apply. If interested, contact Chris Johannson at the Maryville College Athletic Office.

"Tee party" ends in victory for Lynch

by Joe Johnson

The First Annual "Tee Party" ended Tuesday, April 21, after two evenings of fun-filled and exciting miniature golf. The championship trophy went to freshman Kevin Lynch, who shot an 11 under par 36.

On Monday, April 20, nearly 50 students and staff turned out at the 19 Greens Miniature Golf Course to display their skill in the first round. Junior Don Dove shot a 36, to lead the pack. Dove joined eleven others who moved on to the second, and championship, round on Tuesday.

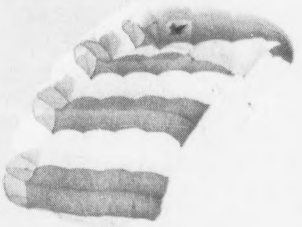
Lynch, who ended with a 42 the night before, was unbeatable Tuesday, gracefully putting his way to victory. Dove closed out one stoke behind Lynch to gain second place. Freshman Mark Hurst came in third with a 38.

Lynch, on his victory said, "As a friend of Dove, I've golfed with him many times before. There is no way he could have shot a 36 the first night. I suspected 'fowl' play." Lynch added goodnaturedly, "And even if his score was legit, I knew his luck would run out."

Lynch was right. And the trophy was his.

$ CASH PAID FOR BLOOD PLASMA DONORS

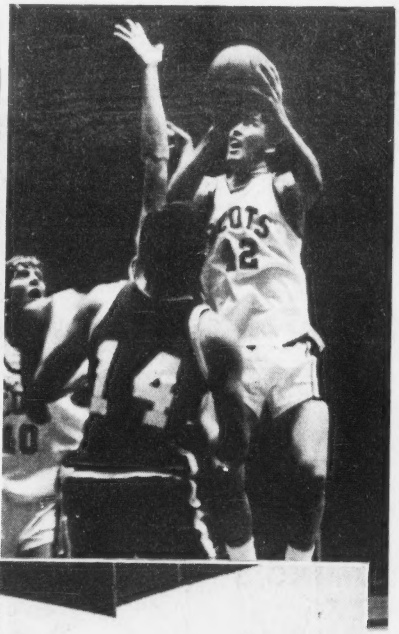
Maryville Plasma Center
220 West Church Street
Maryville, TN 37801
984-2388



THE BACK PAGE

Saluting 1986-87 in review

Change



Homecoming

Budget

Sports Events

Drinking

Arts

Parking

